Being therefore thus hardly thought of, the next enſuing year, 1386, he deſired leave of the king, as alſo of the lords and commons in parliament, to go into Spain for the recovery of his wife's inheritance; and ordained his ſon Henry earl of Derby his lieutenant of all he had in England; about whom he placed a ſage and judicious council. When he took his leave, the king gave him a coronet of gold, and the queen another for his wife; the king commanding that every one ſhould call him king of Spain. Shortly after which, he took ſhipping at Briſtol, with Conſtance his wife (ſir Thomas Percy being admiral of his fleet), with divers brave men; having of his train no leſs than a thouſand ſpears of knights, eſquires (good men at arms), two thouſand archers, and a thouſand tall yeomen; but, for lack of a fit wind, being ſo long detained that his proviſions were almoſt ſpent, at length, taking the advantage of a proſperous gale, he landed in Britanny near the caſtle of Breſt; where, being withſtood by two forts, in the aſſault whereof he loſt many of his men, he raiſed the ſiege of that caſtle, which the French had laid to it; and failed to the Groyne, with all his fleet, arriving there upon the eve of St. Lawrence. Being in thoſe parts, he ſtayed a month at Toulogne; and thence paſſed to St. James in Gallicia, which yielded to him; thence to Vyeclope, which he aſſaulted, and took by compoſition. After which, Bayone yielding to him, the marſhal of his hoſt entered the town. But, ſoon after, a great mortality happening in his army, he gave leave for all who had a mind to depart; himſelf alſo falling very ſick in the town of St. Jaques, whence he went to Bayone; whereupon, all that he had in Gallicia was again recovered by the French in fifteen days. After this, the king of Caſtile ſent to him to treat of a marriage betwixt his own ſon and his daughter; and, at the requeſt of the duke of Berry, a truce was made by him in the parts of Tholouſe and Avergne.

In 1388, he had commiſſion to treat of peace with the king of Spain; and the ſame year was conſtituted lieutenant of the dutchy of Aquitaine.

The diſputes which had long exiſted in Spain, concerning the right to the kingdom of Caſtile and Leon, Toledo, Galicia, Sicily, Corduba, Murcy, Guienne, Algarve, and Algaziers, with the ſeignories of Lace, Biſcay, and Moline, were at length amicably ſettled, by an agreement that Henry, eldeſt ſon of John king of Caſtile and Leon, and of Portugal, ſhould marry Catharine, the duke's only daughter by his wife Conſtance; and that the duke ſhould quit his claim to Spain, on condition of receiving for his own and daughter's life a yearly payment of 16,000 marks[2]; and in caſe his wife ſhould ſurvive him, that ſhe ſhould have annually 12,000 marks: and the duke came back into England, in November 1389, with much treaſure; for, it is ſaid, that he had forty-ſeven mules laden with cheſts full of gold for his ſecond payment; and divers great men of Spain, as pledges for his future annuity. In his return from theſe parts, he relieved Breſt, in Britanny, then beſieged by the French.

---

[1] Baker, in his Chronicle, p 144, ſays, the matter was put off, and a farther day appointed for trial; the night before which, the frier was killed. The circumſtances of the frier's death are alſo detailed by Kennet.

[2] The duke gave up his claim to the crown of Caſtile in conſideration of ten thouſand pounds (libres) yearly penſion to him, and the ſame to his dutcheſs Conſtance (Walſingham, p. 234) and 200,000 nobles in hand. Sandford, p. 252. Rapin (IV. 420) ſays, the king of Caſtile bound himſelf to pay down 600,000 livres, with a yearly penſion of 40,000 during the lives of the duke and dutcheſs. Carte (II. 575) ſays, the duke of Lancaſter was to be paid 200,000 crowns towards the charges of his expedition, and to receive 100,000 florins annually, and his wife Conſtance as much, for their reſpective lives. Of the contemporary hiſtorians quoted by the latter, Walſingham ſays nothing of the money in hand, but that the duke had from the king ſummam multam minis. The life of Richard II, printed by Hearne, leaves a blank for the ſum. Froiſſart III. c. 138. p 328. ſays, that on the marriage of the duke's eldeſt daughter with the king's ſon, the king gave him much land and territory in Caſtile, and a great number of florins, about 20,000 nobles. One of the duke's followers told Knighton, that the ſecond payment was ſent by the king of Spain in cheſts of gold, on forty-ſeven mules. He did not enquire about the firſt; but adds, that hoſtages wers given for an annual payment of 16,000 marks of the duke's life, and 12,000 per annum to the dutcheſs if ſhe ſurvived; p. 2667. The Abrégé Chron. de l'Hiſt. d'Eſpagne, p. 548, ſays, the king paid the expences of the war, and a conſiderable penſion to the dutcheſs. Such is the variation of hiſtorians, or the value of money in different nations. The inſtrument in Rymer, VII. 603. is only an order from the king to receive the ſixty hoſtages for the payment. Dated Weſtminſter, 26 Aug. 1388. The duke's will, however, expreſſly ſays the annuity was 40,000 franks for the life of himſelf and his dutcheſs, or the ſurvivor.

Being thus come home, by the conſent of the lords and commons then aſſembled in parliament (March 2, the ſame year), he was created duke of Aquitaine, by putting a cap upon his head, and giving him a rod of gold, to hold it of the king, as of the realm of France. He obtained alſo a farther confirmation of the privileges of his dutchy [1]; namely, for a chancery court there; and to have writs for that office under his own ſeal; as alſo juſtices for pleas of the crown as well as other pleas, with all royalties belonging to a county-palatine, in as ample manner as the earls of Cheſter ever had; likewiſe for an exchequer, with barons and other neceſſary officers, and power to make juſtices itinerant for pleas of the foreſt, &c.

In 1390, at the feaſt of St. Peter ad Vincula, the duke of Lancaſter made a royal entertainment for hunting in the foreſt and parks about Leiceſter; at which were preſent the king, queen, archbiſhop of York, the duke of York, Thomas of Woodſtock duke of Glouceſter, the earl of Arundel, John de Holland earl of Huntingdon, and many others, biſhops and nobles, to their great ſatisfaction.

In 1391, being conſtituted lieutenant of Picardy, he went thither for the defence of thoſe parts. In the ſame year alſo, being the chief of the commiſſioners appointed to treat of peace with the French, he concluded the ſame for one whole year. Early next year, he was again ſent to treat of peace with them; and, coming to the king of France at Amiens, ſettled a truce for the ſpace of two years; whereupon, after ſeventeen days there, he returned, accompanied by the biſhop of Durham, the earl of Rutland (ſon to the duke of York), and a thouſand horſe bravely appointed.

This great duke took great delight in, and lived much at, his caſtle of Leiceſter, finiſhing the collegiate church and hoſpital there, founded and begun by Henry earl, and Henry duke of Lancaſter, as before is ſaid; being alſo very gracious and bountiful to the town and burgeſſes of Leiceſter, to whom he granted ſeveral meſſuages, lands, and privileges, as by the grants and charters thereof, ſtill remaining with the mayor and burgeſſes of this town, it doth appear; to one of which, bearing date at his caſtle of Leiceſter, Sept. 26, 1392, 16 Richard II. his ſeal is affixed, which, for the curioſity thereof, is here exhibited [2].

In 1393, the duke of Lancaſter was again conſtituted the king's lieutenant of Picardy; as alſo joined in commiſſion with Edmund of York, to ratify the truce betwixt England and France; which was agreed on for four years, the Scots being alſo included therein. And in the ſame year, being again ſent into France, accompanied by the duke of Glouceſter, his ſon the earl of Derby, and ſeven other peers, to treat of peace with the dukes of Berry and Burgundy, uncles to the king of France; in the time of his abſence, Conſtance his wife, a lady of great innocence and devotion, died; and was very honourably interred, on the Sunday next after the feaſt of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the new collegiate church of our Lady at Leiceſter [3], where Leland ſaw, before the high altar, her tomb of marble, with an image of braſs like a queen on it [4].

On the very next day, Mary de Bohun, wife of Henry earl of Derby, was buried in the ſame church under a tomb of marble in the body of the choir [5].

In 1394, the duke obtained a charter for divers ſpecial privileges in his hundreds of Gallow and Brothercroſſe, co. Norfolk, ſuch as fines, amerciaments, and demptions of his own tenants; as alſo year, day, and waſte, felons' goods, returns of writs, &c.; and in autumn, the ſame year, went, with 500 men at arms, and 100 archers, to take poſſeſſion of his dutchy of Aquitaine; but, in 1395, after he had ſpent a vaſt ſum of money to gain the affections of the inhabitants of thoſe parts, the people repreſenting that their country was inſeparably united to the crown of England, and refuſing to ſubmit to the duke otherwiſe than as the king's lieutenant, the grant to him of that dutchy was revoked, and devolved to the demeſnes of the crown: whereupon, being recalled, he came back, and repaired to the king, then at Langley, where he kept his Chriſtmas; but, though in ſhew he had an honourable reception, not finding it cordial, he haſted to Lincoln, where his favourite Catharine Swinford[6] reſided, and married her on the octaves of the Epiphany; whereat there was no little admiration, in regard of her low birth [7].

---

[1] Appendix, p. 28.

[2] Staveley, MS. See the ſeal, on which he is ſtyled duke of Aquitaine, earl of Leiceſter and Derby, and ſteward of England, plate XIII. fig. 18. On another ſeal, in the ſame plate, fig. 16, he is called duke of Lancaſter, earl of Richmond, Derby, Lincoln, and Leiceſter, and ſteward of England. On a third, fig. 17, from Sandford, p. 238, he is called king of Caſtile and Leon; the ſtyle which he uſed 4 Richard II. in his grant, conſtituting a king of the minſtrels at Tutbury; "Johan, par le grace de Dieu, roy de Caſtelle & de Leon, duc de Lancaſtre, a toutz, &c. Don ſouz noſtre prive ſeale a noſtre chaſtel de Tuttebury, le 22 jour d'Août, l'an de regne noſtre tres dulce le roy Richard quart." Blount's Antient Tenures, p. 167.

[3] Carte, MS. from Knighton, fol. 2741.

[4] Itin. I. 17.

[5] Ibid. Mr. Wyrley, in 1563, noticed in this church "a very fair and ſtately monument of a lady, curiouſly wrought, but of no note or mark." Church Notes, MS. in the College of Arms. This is probably the figure now remaining in the North wall under the North window of the chapel of the Trinity hoſpital, founded by her huſband: a lady in a veil and mantle with a ſtanding cape, necklace, and jewel pendant, long ſleeves reaching down to her wriſts, garment folded over her feet, angels at her head, under which are two cuſhions, the undermoſt taſſelled. The tomb on which this figure lies has an embattled moulding, and four ſhields on the South front: but the whole has been much damaged by whitewaſh. Such, however, as it now is, it ſhall be faithfully repreſented under the Hiſtory of that Hoſpital.

[6] "This woman was born in Henault, daughter to a knight of that country, called Sir Paon de Ruet. She was brought up in her youth in the duke of Lancaſter's houſe, and attended on his firſt wife the ducheſs Blanche of Lancaſter, and in the days of his ſecond wife the ducheſs Conſtance he kept the foreſaid Catharine as his concubine, who afterwards was married to a knight of England, named Swinford, that was now deceaſed. Before ſhe was married the duke had by her three children, two ſons and a daughter. One of the ſons was named Thomas de Beaufort, and the other Henrie, who was brought up at Aken in Almaine, proved a good lawyer, and was afterward biſhop of Wincheſter. For the love that the duke had to theſe his children, he married their mother, the ſaid Catharine Swinford, being now a widow, whereof men marvelled much, conſidering her mean eſtate was far unmeet to match with his highneſs, and nothing comparable in honour to his other two former wives. And indeed the great ladies of England, as the ducheſs of Glouceſter, the counteſs of Derby, Arundel, and others, deſcended of the blood royal, greatly diſdained that ſhe ſhould be matched with the duke of Lancaſter, and by that means be accounted ſecond perſon in the realm, and preferred in room before them, and thereof they ſaid that they would not come in any place where ſhe ſhould be preſent, for it ſhould be a ſhame to them that a woman of ſo baſe a birth, and concubine to the duke in his other wife's days, ſhould go and have place before them. The duke of Glouceſter alſo, being a man of an high mind and ſtout ſtomach, miſliked his brother's matching ſo meanly; but the duke of York bare it well enough; and verily the lady herſelf was a woman of ſuch bringing up and honourable demeanour, that envy could not in the end but give place to well-deſerving." Holinſhed, p. 485.

[7] "Cunctis, ſays Walſingham, p. 352. admirantibus facti miraculum; quia fortuna talis fœminæ tantæ ſublimitatis error minime competebat. She had had the care of his two daughters, Philippa and Elizabeth, in their minority, or, as he calls her in the grant of the wardſhip of Bertram de Launcyſhire for her care of them, had been Maiſtreſſe de nos treſames filles, pour la bone et greable ſervice que noſtre treſcheer et bien amie dame a faite a nos dittes filles. (Sandford, p. 247, ex libro nigro in camerâ Ducatûs).—In the parliament, 1397, he procured his three children by her to be naturalized, by the name of Beaufort, and Thomas was created duke of Somerſet (Walſingham, Ib. 353.); and the year following the pope tranſlated John Buckingham from Lincoln, and nominated Henry Beaufort to that ſee, out of the reſpect and regard he bore to his father the duke; ob ducis reverentiam & amorem. The old biſhop of Lincoln did not allow this tranſlation; but retired to the abbey of Chriſt-church, Canterbury, and there ended his days among the monks, 1397. (Holinſhed, Ib. 356.) His poor remains were diſturbed in their ſtone repoſitory, on new paving the nave of the cathedral, March 1787; and his braſsleſs ſlab turned out, with others of the ſame ſort, to pave the cloyſters. Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 13.

In March, 1396-7, we find the duke at Leiceſter, mediating a diſpute between the abbot of St. Mary de Pratis and the maſter of the Newark hoſpital.

Early in 1397, in a parliament convened at London, he procured an act for the legitimation of the children which he had by Catharine Swinford; and in another parliament, held in September that ſame year, called the great parliament, the earl of Arundel was by the duke of Lancaſter, who ſat that day as high ſteward, condemned of high treaſon, and on Tower-hill beheaded.

During this parliament the earl of Derby was created duke of Hereford; and ſoon after the duke of Lancaſter attended king Richard into France, being with him at Guynes, upon the meeting then had with the king of that realm, Oct. 28, 1397, when peace was made by Richard's marrying Iſabel, daughter of the king of France, then eight years old.

In the ſame year the duke of Lancaſter had a renewal and amplification of the privileges of his dutchy [1]; obtained the hundreds of Southgrenhowe and Laundiſhe, co. Norfolk, which had come into the king's hands by the attainder of the earl of Arundel [2]; and had a commiſſion to raiſe three hundred men at arms and ſix hundred archers, before the next parliament, to be held at Weſtminſter, for the king's guard.

In 1398, after obtaining from the king an ample renunciation of all claim in any part of his inheritance; and a remiſſion of all debts, forfeitures, &c. that he or his agents might have incurred [3]; with a confirmation of the dower of the caſtles of Knareſburgh, Tykhill, &c. to Catharine his wife; and of a ſettlement of the manor of Bradford, Almandburg, &c. on his ſon John Beaufort, marquis of Dorſet [4]; he was conſtituted lieutenant in the marches towards Scotland, from the beginning of the truce betwixt both realms, for twenty-eight years.

In October, 1398, Henry of Bolingbroke, the duke's ſon, received ſentence of baniſhment; and from that period the duke probably continued chiefly at Leiceſter; for, there he died after a long and grievous illneſs, though what it was we do not know. According to Froiſſart, the baniſhment of his ſon and the king's bad government gave him the moſt pungent ſorrow; and in this ſituation of his mind he fell ill of the diſtemper which carried him off. His death was much lamented by his friends. The king was but little concerned at it; he conformed however with cuſtom in accompanying the corpſe of his uncle to St. Paul's; where it was interred with great funeral pomp near the body of Blanch his firſt wife; for whom and for himſelf he had ſoon after her deceaſe erected a ſumptuous monument, over which were the duke's arms, as in plate X. fig. 52; and, on a penſile tablet, this inſcription:

"Hic in Domino obdormivit Joannes Gandavenſis, vulgò de Gaunt, à Gandavo Flandriæ urbe, loco natali, ita denominatus; Edwardi Tertii regis Angliæ filius; à patre comitis Richmondiæ titulo ordinatus. Tres ſibi uxores in matrimonio duxit; primam Blancheam, filiam & hæredem Henrici ducis Lancaſtriæ, per quam ampliſſimam adiit hereditatem. Nec ſolùm dux Lancaſtriæ, ſed etiam Leiceſtriæ, Lincolniæ, & Derbeiæ comes effectus; è cujus ſobole imperatores, reges, principes, & proceres, propagati ſunt plurimi. Alteram habuit uxorem Conſtantiam (quæ hic contumulatur), filiam & hæredem Petri regis Caſtiliæ & Legionis; cujus jure optimo titulo regis Caſtiliæ & Legionis uſus eſt. Hæc unicam illi peperit filiam Catharinam, ex quâ ab Henrico reges Hiſpaniæ ſunt propagati. Tertiam verò uxorem Catharinam, ex equeſtri familiâ, & eximiâ pulchritudine fœminam; ex quâ numeroſam ſuſcepit prolem, unde genus ex matre duxit Henricus ſeptimus rex Angliæ prudentiſſimus; cujus feliciſſimo conjugio cum Elizabethâ, Edwardi quarti regis filiâ, è ſtirpe Eboracenſi, regiæ illæ Lancaſtrienſium & Eboracenſium familiæ ad exoptatiſſimam Angliæ pacem coaluerunt.

"Illuſtriſſimus hic princeps Johannes, cognomento Plantagenet, rex Gaſtiliæ & Legionis, dux Lancaſtriæ, comes Richmondiæ, Leiceſtriæ, Lincolniæ, & Derbiæ, locum tenens Aquitaniæ, magnus ſeneſchallus Angliæ, obiit anno XXII regni regis Ricardi Secundi, annoque Domini MCCCXCIX."

"John of Gaunt had a rich but heavy monument on the South ſide of the high altar in old St. Paul's [5], all the arch-work uſually open being herein cloſed up. On the front of the tomb, ſeven pairs of arches. On the table his figure, in poliſhed armour, his helmet round by Hollar's draught, his ſhoes plaited, a lion at his feet. The figure of his dutcheſs Blanch dreſſed in a ſtiff boddice like a ſurcote, petticoat, and ermine mantle. She wears the reticulated head-dreſs. Angels at their heads ſupport one common cuſhion. The upper part of the monument was defaced in the late ſacrilegious times, to make way for a gallery; and the whole deſtroyed by the fire, 1666 [6]."

The duke's laſt will, which is long, and made with great care, when he was in ſound memory, is dated February 3, 1397-8, from his chamber within the caſtle of Leiceſter. He nominates for his executors Richard Metford biſhop of Saliſbury; John Green biſhop of Worceſter; Thomas earl of Worceſter, ſteward of the king's houſehold; William earl of Wiltſhire, lord treaſurer; his ſon Ralph earl of Weſtmoreland; Walter Blount; John Dabruggecourt; William Par; Hugh War'ton; Thomas Skelton; John Cokeyn, his own chief ſteward; ſir Richard Qwytby, his attorney-general; Piers Melburn; William Keteryng; Robert Haytfield, comptroller of his houſehold; ſir John Leyburn, his receiver-general; and Thomas Langley, his clerk. He requeſts his nephew the king, in whom beyond all others he places confidence (en qui devant tous autres jeo me pluis affiee), to be ſupervisor of the will; jointly with his brother Edmond duke of York, his nephew Edward duke of Albemarle, Roger [7] Walden archbiſhop of Canterbury, Richard Scrope archbiſhop of York, and his ſon Henry Beaufort biſhop of Lincoln; ſtrictly enjoining them to attend to the performance of the truſt, come ils voillent reſpondre devant luy qui eſt Roy des touts roys, & ad le ſeurveue de toutz terreins faitz & penſez, pur quelx il rendra guerdon à cheſcun ſolon ſon deſert.

To the pariſh where he may chance to die he gives ſuch a mortuary as was due by law; directs his body to remain 40 days without cering, and that each day be given in alms to the poor people of the country 50 marks of ſilver, and on the day of burial 150 of the ſame; and that the firſt night his body was brought to London, it ſhould be lodged in the church of the White-friers, Fleet-ſtreet, and thence be carried to St. Paul's. He particularly directs that his body be buried cloſe to the principal altar, near his firſt dutcheſs Blanch. Round it were to burn, at firſt, ten large wax lights, in the name of the Ten Commandments of God, in compenſation for his offences againſt them; after them ſeven others, in memory of the ſeven works of charity, which he had neglected, and the ſeven deadly ſins; and after them, five more in honour of the five wounds of our Lord; and three more in honour of the Trinity; and, over and above theſe, as many mortars of wax as his executors pleaſed; and that his relations and friends be invited to pray for his ſoul. He directs that all his debts be paid, except thoſe contracted for the expedition which his brother Edmund duke of York made into Portugal to ſupport his claim to the crown; which debts he held himſelf not liable to. He bequeathed furniture to the altar of St. Paul's; and that land be purchaſed [8] to endow two chaplains for an obit for himſelf, and another for his wife Blanch, September 12, for ever, out of lands and tenements in London, ſubject to an annuity of 20 marks to dame Catharine del Staple for life, out of the manor of Bernoldſwyck in Yorkſhire, which was veſted in truſtees for the endowing of the chantry. He left to the altar of St. Edmundſbury a cheſible and other habits; to that of Lincoln-minſter, plate and habits. To the church of our Lady at Leiceſter, his red garment of velvet embroidered with gold ſuns, and all the apparel to the ſaid garment belonging, with the whole of his Miſſals, and ſuch books belonging to his chapel as were according to the uſe of the church of Saliſbury, and not otherwiſe ſpecifically deviſed. He gave habits alſo to the White-friers, London, and 15 marks of ſilver. To the three other orders in London, Preachers, Minorites, and Auguſtines, 10 marks of ſilver each; to the Minoreſſes £100. among them; to every poor hermit and recluſe in London, or within five leagues round, £5.; to each of the nuns in London and the ſuburbs, 5 marks; and to thoſe of Clerkenwell £5.; to each houſe of lepers within five leagues round London that had five ſick perſons, 5 nobles; and to thoſe that had fewer, 3 nobles; to every houſe of Carthuſians in England 51 ſhillings; to the priſons of Newgate and Ludgate 100 marks; to his wife Catharine his two beſt nouches[1], after that which he gives the king, and his biggeſt gold hanap[2], and all his diamonds and jewels, all the contents of his purſe at his death, his ſuit of cloth of gold, bed and furniture of his room, all his armour, ſwords, and daggers, 4 ſilver chargers, two dozen of eſcuilles[3], and ſix ſaucers, and an old gold claſp given him by his royal mother; to his daughter Philippa, queen of Portugal, his ſecond beſt gold hart and a gold cup; to his daughter Catharine, queen of Caſtile and Leon, another gold cup; to his daughter Elizabeth, dutcheſs of Exeter, his white bed and furniture, and a jewel; to his ſon John Beaufort, marquis of Dorſet, ſundry pieces of plate; to his ſon the biſhop of Lincoln[4], other pieces, a ſuit of yellow velvet, and a miſſal and portheus of the late prince of Wales[5]; to his ſon Thomas Beaufort[6], plate; to his daughter, the counteſs of Weſtmorland, and lady Neville, a bed and plate; to the two ſons of his ſon, the duke of Hereford, plate.

---

[1] Appendix, p. 28.

[2] Ibid.

[3] See this inſtrument at length in the Appendix, N° XVI.

[4] Ibid. p. 28.

[5] "John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaſter, with Blanch his firſt wife, lieth on the North ſide of the choir (on whoſe monument hung his proper helmet and ſpear; as alſo his target, covered with horn): from the loins of which duke the greateſt number of the kings of England, Spain, and Portugal, ſince his time, as alſo ſeveral other perſons of eminent dignity, are deſcended." Over againſt the duke's tomb, in the border of a South window, was painted, among many other arms of the firſt houſe of Lancaſter, his device, being, In a field Sable, three oſtrich feathers Ermine, the quills and ſcrolls Or, to diſtinguiſh them from his elder brother prince Edward. Dugdale, Hiſtory of St. Paul's, p. 49, where it is engraved; as it alſo is in Sandford, p. 249.

[6] Sepulchral Monuments, I. 170.

[7] Roger Walden, dean of York, and high treaſurer of England, held the ſee of Canterbury the two laſt years of the reign of Richard II.; and was afterwards biſhop of London one year till his death. Godwin, edit. Richardſon, pp. 123, 124. 187.

[8] Their houſe, called Lancaſter college, was in the pariſh of St. Gregory, near St. Paul's. Dugdale, pp. 37—39. Tanner, Notitia Monaſtica, p. 323.

The following legacies in money: to Bury abbey, £1000.; to his wife Catharine, £2000.; to the duke of Hereford, £1000.; to the marquis of Dorſet, £1000.; to Thomas Beaufort, 1000 marks; to his moſt dear bachelor, Thomas Swinford, 100 marks; to Walter Blount, ——— Chamberlayn, Hugh Shirley, each 100 marks; to Richard Aburbury, the ſon, 50; to William Par, 50.

He provides for a chantry, for his own and Conſtance's ſoul, and for her obit, on the 24th of March, in the new church of our Lady at Leiceſter.

Out of the arrears of the annual penſion due to him from his ſon the king of Caſtile and Leon, he leaves to the king a third part of as much as could be recovered.

Laſtly, he enjoins his executors to require payment of the annuity of 40,000 franks, for which he gave up his and his wife's claim to the crown of Caſtile[7].

The witneſſes to this will were, John de Bynbrok, preſbyter, a notary public; John Kynyngham, D. D.; John Newton, rector of Burbach; Walter Piers, rector of Wymondham; and William Harpedon and Robert Simeon, eſquires.

By a codicil, certain lands, &c. purchaſed by the duke before his marriage with Catharine Swinford, ſome of which he ſettled on her for her life, and others on his ſon John marquis of Dorſet, are confirmed to them; and the reverſion of all others in which ſhe was intereſted given to his ſon Thomas Beaufort, together with other reverſions. The manor of Bernoldſwick, after a ſufficient endowment was provided for the chantries in St. Paul's and at Leiceſter, was to go to his ſon the duke of Hereford, and his heirs; and, failing them, to the duke's right heirs. The wapentakes of Hangeſt, Hangweſt, and Halekeld, in Richmondſhire, which he had granted to his ſon-in-law, Ralph earl of Weſtmorland, and his wife Joan, his daughter, for life, to remain to them and their heirs male; and, in default thereof, to his ſon John and his heirs; remainder to Thomas and his heirs; remainder to Joan and her heirs; remainder to his own right heirs. And all reſidues of his eſtate, in truſt, to his ſon Thomas and his heirs; with remainders as before[8].

In 4 Hen. IV, the king, by his letters patent[9], reciting a licence already granted to Ralph earl of Weſtmorland, Thomas earl of Worceſter, and others, executors to John duke of Aquitaine and Lancaſter (his dear father), for their founding a chantry in a certain chapel, ſituate on the North ſide the choir of this church, and oppoſite to the tomb of the ſaid duke and the lady Blanch his wife, mother to the ſame king, which chapel was then newly built; as alſo another chantry in the collegiate church of our Lady at Leiceſter, called The New Work, for two prieſts to celebrate divine ſervice for the good eſtate of the ſaid king during his life in this world, and afterwards for the health of his ſoul, and the ſouls of his ſaid father and mother, and moreover for the ſoul of the lady Conſtance, former wife to the ſaid duke, whoſe body lieth interred in the ſame collegiate church; gave farther licence to the ſaid executors, that they might purchaſe lands to the value of £40. per annum, for the ſupport of the ſaid chantries, and to keep the anniverſaries of his ſaid father and mother.

About the ſame time Robert de Braybroke, then biſhop of London, granted unto the prieſts for the chantry in St. Paul's a certain piece of ground, part of his old palace, containing in length 36 feet, and in breadth 19, for their habitation[10]. And in 10 Hen. IV, the ſaid king gave to the dean and chapter of that cathedral, and their ſucceſſors for ever, divers meſſuages and lands lying within the city of London, for the anniverſary of the ſaid John duke of Lancaſter (his father) on the 4th of February; and of Blanch his mother, on the 12th of September, yearly, in that church, with Placebo and Dirige, 9 Antiphones, 9 pſalms, and 9 leſſons in the exequies of either of them; as alſo maſs of Requiem, with note, on the morrow, to be performed at the high altar for ever: and moreover to diſtribute unto the ſaid dean and chapter theſe ſeveral ſums; to the dean, as often as he ſhall be preſent, 3*s.* 4*d.*; to the principal canons 20*d.* (to the ſum of 16*s.* 8*d.*); to the petty-canons 10*s.*; to the chaplains 20*s.*; to the vicars 4*s.* 8*d.*; to the choriſters 2*s.* 6*d.*; to the vergers 12*d.*; to the bell-ringers 4*d.*; to the keeper of the lamps about the tomb of the ſaid duke and dutcheſs, at each of their ſaid anniverſaries, 6*d.*; to the mayor of London for the time being, in reſpect of his preſence at the ſaid anniverſaries, 3*s.* 4*d.*; to the ſheriffs of London, likewiſe preſent, 3*s.* 4*d.*; to the biſhop of London, for the rent of the houſe wherein the ſaid chantry prieſts did reſide, 10*s.*; and for to find eight great tapers to burn about that tomb on the day of the ſaid anniverſaries, at the exequies, and maſs on the morrow; and likewiſe at the proceſſions, maſſes, and veſpers, on every great feſtival; and upon Sundays, at the proceſſion, maſs, and ſecond veſpers, for ever; and laſtly, to provide for the prieſts belonging to that chapel on the North part of the ſaid tomb a certain chalice, Miſſal, and Portvoiſe, according to the Ordinale Sarum; as alſo veſtments, bread, wine, wax, and glaſſes, and other ornaments and neceſſaries for the ſame, and repair of their manſion[11].

In 13 Hen. IV, there was another chantry of two prieſts founded in that chapel, on the North ſide of the choir, by the executors to John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaſter, for the good eſtate of king Henry IV. during his life in this world, and for his ſoul after his departure hence[12].

---

[1] Jewels ſet in gold.
[2] Cup.
[3] Porringers.
[4] Afterwards of Wincheſter, and cardinal.
[5] The Black Prince.
[6] His youngeſt ſon by Catharine Swinford.
[7] See note 2. in p. 238.
[8] Collection of Royal and Noble Wills, p. 145—173.
[9] Pat. 4 Hen. IV. p. 2. m. 35.
[10] Pat. 4 Hen. IV. p. 2. m. 33.
[11] Pat. 10 Hen. IV. p. 1. m. 7.
[12] Pat. 11 Hen. IV. p. 1. m. 2.

Catharine Swinford, the duke's third wife, ſurviving him, departed this life May 10, 1403; and was buried in the cathedral church at Lincoln, where, on the South ſide of the choir is an altar tomb [1], with the braſsleſs figure of a lady, with a kind of coronet, and the head-dreſs probably reticulated, under a ſingle canopy, which had two ſhields in its ſpandrils; at the ſides five garters, alſo ſtript of their braſs.

When ſir William Dugdale ſurveyed this church, the following inſcription was on a fillet round the ſlab in old Engliſh characters, beginning on the South ſide from the head:

> "Icy giſt Dame Katerine, ducheſſe de > Lancaſtre, jadys feme de le tres noble > et tres gracious prince John, duc de Lancaſter, > fils a tres noble Roy Edward le tierce. La> quelle Katherine moreuſt le X jour de > May, l'an du grace mil CCCC tierz. De > quelle alme Dieu eyt mercy ⁊ pitee.
> Amen."

The arms are deſcribed in pale:

1. France and England quarterly, under a label of three points Ermine.

2. Gules, three Catharine wheels, Or [2].

At the feet four ſhields.

The canopy which covers both this tomb and that of her only daughter Joan, counteſs of Weſtmoreland, appears to have been replaced by one of the age of Charles I. ſurbaſt, and adorned with Grecian mouldings and ornaments. Yet Mr. Johnſon deſcribes it as one of the teſtoons or coverings with the ſtrait line or flat [3].

Joan Beaufort, only daughter of John of Gaunt, by Catharine Swinford, was firſt married to ſir Robert Ferrars, knt. ſon of Robert Ferrars lord of Wem and Overſley, by whom ſhe had iſſue two daughters; and, on his death, to Ralph Nevill firſt earl of Weſtmoreland, by whom ſhe had iſſue Richard earl of Saliſbury (father of Richard the great earl of Warwick and Saliſbury, called The King-maker), William lord Fauconberg, George lord Latimer, Edward lord Bergavenny, Robert biſhop of Durham, Cuthbert, Henry, and Thomas; Catharine ducheſs of Norfolk, remarried to ſir John Woodville; Eleanor lady Spencer, afterwards counteſs of Northumberland; Anne ducheſs of Buckingham, remarried to lord Mountjoy; Jane, a nun; and Cicely, wife of Richard Plantagenet duke of York, father of Edward IV. and Richard III. She died on the feaſt of St. Brice, Nov. 13, 1440; and was buried on the South ſide of the choir at Lincoln, at the feet of her mother, under a plain altar tomb, on the grey marble ſlab of which was her figure in braſs [4], plainer than her mother's, and the upper half of the head cut off; four ſhields under her feet, and a ledge, with this inſcription: now all gone:

> "Filia Lancaſtr' ducis inclita, ſponſa Johannis
> Weſtmerland primi ſubjacet hic comitis.
> Deſine, ſcriba, ſuas virtutes promere, nulla
> Vox valeat merita vix reboare ſua.
> Stirpe, decore, fide, tum fama, ſpe, prece, prole,
> Actibus et vita polluit ymmo ſua.
> Natio tota dolet pro morte. Deus tulit ipſam
> In Bricii feſto, C. quater M. quater X 5."

The arms on the ſhields were, Nevill impaling Beaufort: and the two tombs were incloſed in a grate of iron-work, 1641 [6].

By his firſt wife Blanch, the duke had iſſue:

1. Henry, duke of Hereford and Lancaſter, and earl of Derby, afterwards king of England.

2. Philippa, married to John I. king of Portugal 1386, died 1415; buried with her huſband at the abbey of Batalha. Their monument with their effigies cumbent are beautifully engraved in Mr. Murphy's deſcription of that building. The king in armour, with a ſurcoat of the arms of Portugal, which are alſo on his ſhoulder-piece, holds his ſword point downwards in his left hand; and by his right takes the right hand of his conſort, who is crowned and dreſſed in a mantle faſtened on her breaſt by a quatrefoil button, and holds in her left hand croſſed by the other a book.

3. Elizabeth, married firſt to John Holland earl of Exeter, beheaded at Cirenceſter 1 Hen. IV.; and ſecondly, to ſir John Cornwall lord Fanhope: ſhe died 1425-6, and was buried at Burford in Shropſhire [7].

By

---

[1] "In a vault, or in the earth, near this monument, was buried the celebrated Catharine Swinford. On opening the lid and ſides, July 11, 1783, in company with Mr. Eſſex, was found only rubbiſh, and the ſame in the baſement and the choir floor." Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 14.

[2] See plate X. fig. 23. Theſe remained in Sandford's time, p. 253. In a pane of glaſs, in Mr. Peck's poſſeſſion, 1734, the arms of John of Gaunt and Catharine Swinford are thus expreſſed: France and England quarterly; a label of three points Ermine; impaling, Argent, on a chevron Sable three boars' heads couped Or (ſee fig. 54.); under which was written,

John of Gaunt and Katharine Swinford his third wife had eſſew John of Beaford.

Theſe may have been her firſt huſband's arms; the wheels thoſe of her father, ſir Payne Roet. Sepulchral Monuments, II. 14.

[3] See a learned memoir on ſepulchral monuments, by Maurice Johnſon, eſq. founder of the Spalding Society, tranſcribed from their Minutes, in the firſt volume of Mr. Gough's Sepulchral Mouuments, Introd. p. lxxxv.

[4] Her figure is alſo on the tomb of her huſband at Staindrop. Hutchinſon, Hiſtory of Durham, vol. III. p. 261.

[5] Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 126. Sandford, 257. Dugdale, Bar. vol. I. p. 298.

[6] Biſhop Sanderſon's and ſir William Dugdale's Survey, in Peck's Deſiderata Curioſa, Book VIII.

[7] "Of the ſeveral monuments of the family of Cornwall in the chancel of the church of Burford, the oldeſt is an elegant little figure of Elizabeth of Lancaſter, ſecond daughter of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter and Blanch his firſt wife, having at the head a pointed flowered arch with finials, within which was formerly painted this inſcription, as given by Sandford, p. 259.

Here lyeth the bodie of the noble princeſs daughter of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, own ſiſter to king Henry IV. wife of John Holland earl of Huntingdon and duke of Exeter; after married to ſir John Cornewayll knight of the Garter and lord Fanhope. She died in the fourth year of Henry VI. A. D. MCCCCXXVI.

Thus reſtored from the evaneſcent original, by the care of the preſent reſident portioniſt, the Rev. Mr. Ingram, in 1791; and at the expence of the Rev. Foller Walker Cornwall, of Delbury in this county, canon of Windſor, and a deſcendant of this noble family; who alſo laudably ordered the inſcriptions on the other monuments of the Cornwalls in this church, which were obliterated, to be reſtored:

> "Here lyeth the body of the moſt noble Elizabeth > daughter of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, > own ſiſter to king Henry the Fourth, wife of > John Holland earl of Huntingdon and duke of Exeter, > after married to ſir John Cornwall, > knight of the Garter and lord Fanhope. She died > the fourth year of Henry the Sixth, anno Domini > MCCCCXXVI."

Her effigies, in long hair, is adorned with a coronet of oak leaves and pearls intermixed, a purple mantle guarded with Ermine, cloſe ſleeves buttoned and bordered, neck band, ſtudded belt of roſes and ſquares: under her head two cuſhions ſupported by angels: a dog at her right foot lifting up her robe. Above, Old France and England; on the left the arms of her father the duke of Lancaſter; Gules, in a bordure Azure, ſemée of fleurs de lis, three lions guardant crowned Or, impaling Old France and England.

Ermine, in a bordure engrailed.

Sable bezanté, a lion rampant Gules, Cornwall; impaling Old France and England.

Her firſt huſband, John Holland, earl of Huntingdon and duke of Exeter, and half-brother to Richard II. was attainted and beheaded 1 Henry IV. for plotting the death of that prince, and buried at Pleſhey.

Her ſecond huſband, ſir John Cornwall, was grandſon of Richard de Cornubia, a natural ſon of Richard earl of Cornwall, ſecond ſon of king John, and brother to Henry III. He was born at ſea in Mount's Bay, and baptized in the adjoining pariſh church

By Conſtance he had one only daughter Catharine, married to Henry prince of Aſturias, ſon and heir to Henry count of Traſtamare, baſe brother and ſucceſſor to Peter king of Caſtile and Leon, to whoſe kingdom her huſband ſucceeded by the name of Henry III. 1390; and their deſcendants were kings of Spain till Charles II. who died in 1700.

By Catharine Swinford he had, 1. John Beaufort, created earl of Somerſet 20 Ric. II. and next year marquis of Dorſet; he married Margaret Holland daughter of Thomas earl of Kent; and, dying 1410, was buried at Canterbury, where in St. Michael's chapel in the South tranſept is a moſt elegant monument for him, his lady, and her ſecond huſband Thomas duke of Clarence; the figures on which are of the moſt finiſhed and elegant workmanſhip [1]." Sandford's plate of this monument is ſo indifferent, and that in Dart's Canterbury ſo inadequate a repreſentation, that Mr. Gough had a new one taken by Mr. Schnebbelie, and engraved by Mr. Baſire, in the Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. plates XLII. XLIII.

2. Henry, cardinal of St. Euſebius, biſhop of Lincoln 1398, and of Wincheſter from 1404 to 1447, where he was buried behind the high altar, having been twice chancellor of England, and once at Jeruſalem [2]. This "riche cardinal gilded al the floures and knottes in the voulte of the church" of our Lady of Leiceſter [3]. 3. Thomas Beaufort duke of Exeter, admiral of England, earl of Dorſet; he married Margaret, daughter of ſir Thomas Neville, of Horneby, knt. died at Eaſt Greenwich 1426; and was buried at St. Edmundſbury, where his corpſe was diſcovered [4] in 1772. 4. Joan Beaufort, already noticed in p. 242.

---

church of Markenſhaw (Market Jew ?) At the battle of Agincourt he took Lewis de Bourbon count of Vendoſme priſoner; and was created by Henry VI. baron Fanhope and Milbrook. He died at Ampthill 1443, and was buried in the chapel of the Bleſſed Virgin, founded by himſelf, in the church-yard of the Black-Friers, London. His will, dated Feb. 10, 1443, was proved at Ampthill, before the archbiſhop, Jan. 6, 1443. Reg. Stafford & Kempe, fol. 119. Stow's London, p. 374. His portrait, in his ſurcoat of arms, Ermine, a lion rampant Gules, crowned Or, in a border engrailed Sable bezanté, with that of his wife in ermine mantle and ſurcoat, having on the former her arms quarterly, Old France and England, under a label of three points Ermine, were in a window of Ampthill church, engraved in Sandford, p. 259. A penon of her arms above in a bordure Argent and Azure; and below his arms radiated in a garter: all under a canopy, whoſe pillars are wreathed with ſcrolls, charged with leſtare ditie alternately." Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 78, 79.

[1] "The earl's figure, on the left hand of his lady, repreſents him in plated armour, and gorget, covered with a ſurcote, pinned on the breaſt, pointed helmet encircled with a fillet of precious ſtones, a collar of SS. the gauntlets open at the fingers, and that on the left hand has an additional plate on the back; the cuiſſes are buttoned within, and tied on the outſide of the thigh, and the greaves have two faſtenings within; his ſword is at his left ſide, and at his right a dagger and whittle united, and the points of both turned upwards. Under his head a double cuſhion ſupported by angels, and at her feet an eagle diſplayed, collared and chained, his creſt. The lady's figure in alabaſter repreſents her habited in a mantle, kirtle, and ſurcote, her ſleeves buttoned down to the wriſts, her mantle faſtened acroſs her breaſt by a double cordon paſſing over two cinquefoils; a kind of neckerchief covers her neck. On her head, which reſts on a double cuſhion, ſupported by angels flowing in a veil, the ſtudded head-dreſs, the hair plaited at the top and ſides, a coronet of jewels; and ſuch is the exact neatneſs of the artiſt, that he has expreſt the pins that faſten the back of her cap. At her feet, which are folded up in her robe, two collared dogs; on the third finger of each hand ſhe wears a ring. The tomb, which is of grey Suſſex marble, is adorned at the ſides with five beautiful double or ſtarred quatrefoils, which, in Weever's time, had ſhields of arms, on the left thoſe of Beaufort, on the right thoſe of Clarence; the baſement is charged with ten ſingle ones, in rondeaux. The braſs fillet round the upper ledge was gone in Weever's time, ſo that it cannot be known whether it contained the preciſe inſcription given by Weever, from a MS in the Cotton Library, for the duke of Clarence, or whether there was an epitaph for the three parties buried there." Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. 127.

[2] "The monument of Henry Beaufort, cardinal biſhop of Wincheſter, or, to ſpeak more properly, the ſepulchral chapel, in which his monument, or tomb, and probably his body, lies, in his church at Wincheſter, is one ſpecimen of that perfection to which Gothic architecture ſeems to have been brought about the reign of Henry IV. The Society of Antiquaries have engraved this chapel in plate XLV. of the ſecond volume of their Vetuſta Monumenta, from a drawing by Mr. Schnebbelie. The altar-tomb, of Purbeck marble, has at the ſides five ſhields, and two at the ends, all robbed of their eſcucheons. The figure is habited in the cardinal's red robe, the ſleeve of the tunic under it black tipt with white. On his head is a cardinal's hat, and at the ſides of his face appears a little lock of black hair. On his hands are gloves fringed with gold, an oval jewel at the back; rings on the middle and third fingers of both hands; under his head a cuſhion with gold taſſels, and divided or laced with a gold fringe; his ſhoes ſquare-toed. At his feet a modern cuſhion, into which his feet are let, with a ſhield of the arms of England on the face of it." A farther deſcription of the tomb and chapel, and ſome hiſtorical particulars of the cardinal, may be ſeen in the account which accompanies the plates and in the Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain, vol. II. p. 141.

[3] Leland, Itin. vol. II. p. 18.

[4] See Phil. Tranſ. vol. LXII. art. 33.; and Archæologia, vol. III. p. 311: and more eſpecially the Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain, vol. II. p. 74—77; where the whole tranſaction is candidly diſcuſſed. Some particulars of his will, which contains more judicious diſpoſitions than uſually occur in the wills of that time, ſhall here be given. He directs his body to be buried, with that of his wife Margaret, in the chapel of the Bleſſed Virgin annexed to the church of St. Edmund Bury, and that no ſumptuous nor pompous coſts ſhould be made, and only five wax tapers ſtanding on five candleſticks be placed about his corpſe, and the like at the ſeveral maſſes; that as many poor men and poor women as he was years of age ſhould bear a torch at his funeral, each in a gown and hood, and receive a penny apiece, and every poor perſon coming to his funeral to receive a penny; and, on his and his wife's anniverſary, the abbot, if preſent, 6*s.* 8*d.*; the prior 3*s.* 4*d.*; and every monk 20*d.*; for which he gave to the monaſtery 400 marks. To the Carthuſian abbey of Mountgrace, Yorkſhire, he bequeathed 40*l.* yearly, from and after the time of his deceaſe, ſo long as the ſaid houſe continued charged with a penſion from Joan queen of England to the priory of Hinckley; to the high altar of the church of the pariſh, where he ſhould happen to die, the accuſtomed mortuary; 100*s.* to the fabric or ornament of the ſaid church, and 6*s.* 8*d.* to each prieſt in the ſaid pariſh at the time of his death, and 3*s* 4*d.* to the pariſh clerk. To every houſe of Carthuſians in England, except that of Mountgrace, five marks; to certain recluſes of St. Peter's at Weſtminſter 10*l.*; to ſeveral women recluſe 20*s.* each; to every ſick perſon in the hoſpitals of St. Mary, St. Bartholomew, St. Thomas, and St. Giles, and Elſyng Spital, all in or near London, 12*d.* apiece; to the five priſons of Ludgate, Newgate, Fleet, King's-Bench, and Marſhalſea, 100*l.* for the diſcharge of priſoners; to the order of Franciſcans in England 40*l.*; to that of Friers-preachers 20*l.*; and to that of the Carmelites 20*l.*; to the collegiate church of Windſor, his croſs of ſilver gilt with his arms, two baſons of ſilver gilt enamelled with the Nativity and Annunciation, a pair of cenſers ſilver gilt, a complete ſuit of veſtments, a chalice and patten, and two cruets of ſilver; 500 marks or more, as a compenſation to religious houſes in France, to which the priory of Hinckley belonged, as a compenſation for the appropriation of certain houſes of the ſame order by Henry IV. to his new foundation at Shene, and for the appropriation of Hinckley priory to that of Mountgrace, to which laſt houſe he left a crucifix of ſilver gilt, with a beril in the foot; to Wormegay priory, Norfolk, a ſuit of veſtments, a pair of candleſticks, his principal holy-water ſtoppe and bruſh; to St. Mary's chapel at Bury, on the North ſide whereof he was to be buried (in cujus parte boreali diſpono tumulari), a ſuit of veſtments, a chalice and paten, two cruets, two candleſticks, all of ſilver gilt, and a miſſal; to Berking nunnery, a ſuit of veſtments; to his ſiſter Joan, counteſs of Weſtmoreland, a book called Triſtram (the romance of that name); to his brother Thomas Swynford (his mother's ſon by her firſt huſband, ſir Oates Swynford, who ſeems to have been one of his eſquires), a cup and cover of ſilver gilt; beſides legacies among his eſquires and ſervants, the dean, prieſts, clerks, and boys of his chapel, 100*l.* to be laid up as a cheſt for the uſe of the poor ſcholars of Queen's College, Oxford, as a loan; and the like ſum to Trinity College, Cambridge, for the like uſe. After payment of his debts, and before the receipt of the wages due to him from the king, and of his legacies, out of the ſurplus of his effects, amounting to five hundred marks, one hundred marks were to be equally divided between the priory of Wormegay, the abbey of Weſt Dereham, the nunnery of Crabhouſe (or Wigenhale), the priory of St. Denys by Southampton, the nunneries of Thetford, Maſham, and Blackborow; one hundred for maſſes; one hundred for the priſoners; one hundred for lepers; and one hundred to mend the roads in the counties of Suffolk and Eſſex. Remainder to the houſes of poor religious and mendicants, and to portion out poor maidens; and 11*l.* ſterling to each of his five executors; and to each of the ſupervifors of his will, a cup and cover of ſilver gilt. He directs that a tomb be made for himſelf and his wife in the aforeſaid place of their burial, for which he left 100*l.* ſterling, if neceſſary, to be expended in the beſt manner on this work; and orders five ſecular chaplains to be appointed for two years after his deceaſe, and to ſay maſs for them both. Then follows a kind of codicil, enumerating his ſeveral manſions, advowſons, reverſions, and other lands and tenements, in the counties of Suffolk, Hants, Norfolk, and Kent. Royal and Noble Wills, p. 250—264.

Review of the Life and Character of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster.

John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaſter, ſurpaſſed all the great men of his time in power and fortune; and was likewiſe highly diſtinguiſhed for wiſdom and parts[1]. His illuſtrious father king Edward III, having a very particular affection for him, took him with him in various expeditions, when John was only a boy. From his infancy he was trained in the knowledge of public affairs; and in the vigour of manhood he was placed at the head of the king's councils and armies.

In 1359, he married his couſin the lady Blanch; and about three years afterwards died Maud, counteſs of Holland and Leiceſter, his wife's elder ſiſter, without iſſue. John, being thereupon ſole heir by his wife to Henry late duke of Lancaſter, was advanced to that title in parliament. His dutcheſs Blanch died in September, 1369; and left him the father of one ſon and two daughters, who were probably conſigned to the care of the late dutcheſs's friend and domeſtic, Catharine Swinford. His regard for Catharine Swinford did not prevent him from gratifying his ambition by marrying, a year or two afterwards, Conſtance, the daughter and heir of Pedro the Cruel, the depoſed and proſcribed king of Spain. In right of his Spaniſh ſpouſe, he immediately impaled the arms of Caſtile and Leon, and with them the title of king of Spain.

John of Gaunt affected military proweſs, and ſpent a great part of his life in camps; yet he acquired, upon the whole, but little glory from his achievements in the field. This happened, perhaps, more for want of favourable opportunities, than of ſuitable qualifications in him, as it was the deliberate reſolution of the French court not to ſuffer the Engliſh to come to cloſe engagement with their armies after their defeats at Creſſy and Poitiers[2]. Edward III. was happy in having many ſons, who knew how to reſpect their father, and preſerve the knot of fraternal concord unbroken among themſelves[3]. The Black Prince and John of Gaunt ſeem to have lived together in friendſhip to the death of the former, who made the latter one of the executors of his will, and in his laſt moments recommended his only ſon Richard of Bourdeaux to his care and protection. John became the guide and tutor of young Richard, and proved himſelf from firſt to laſt a dutiful ſubject and an affectionate uncle to that ungrateful and worthleſs prince[4]. There is not the leaſt foundation for charging him with any deſign of ſupplanting Richard at the death of Edw. III. He reſented the imputation of ſuch a crime as an atrocious ſlander which equally diſgraced his head and his heart. While his authority and advice had any weight with Richard[5], affairs went on tolerably well; but, when that king was determined to be guided by his own mad will, and the counſels of favourites of no better capacity and diſpoſition than his own, confuſion enſued, and, in the end, deſtruction to himſelf. Throughout his life the duke of Lancaſter was a perſon of great weight in public affairs, and at the head of a large party; but he was not yet ſo univerſally reſpected as the Black Prince, the Good Duke of Lancaſter, or his own eldeſt ſon Henry of Bolingbroke, earl of Derby: All theſe were the idols of the kingdom. Some defects in the moral conduct of John[6], his haughtineſs upon certain occaſions, his public ſupport of Wickliffe; theſe things, added to the little ſucceſs of many of his enterpriſes and laborious and expenſive negotiations, contributed to ſink him in the minds of thoſe who were prejudiced againſt him, and choſe only to view him on the faulty ſide; yet no man ever took more pains to ſerve his country, for whoſe intereſt and honour he was ready at all times to ſacrifice his eaſe and fortune, as facts ſhew, and the various charters, granted by Edward and Richard, abundantly teſtify. This duke of Lancaſter made better matches for his daughters than any Engliſh ſubject, or even king, from the Conqueſt to the preſent time. His daughter Catharine was matched to the infant Don Henry, made, in imitation of the heir apparent of England, prince of Aſturias. He ſhewed his prudence in declining to go over to Spain to vindicate his wife's pretenſions, till a fit opportunity ſerved for an undertaking of ſo much magnitude. His expedition was crowned with as much ſucceſs as could be reaſonably expected. He obtained not only the heir apparent of Spain in marriage for his daughter[7]; but it was alſo ſtipulated, for the payment of ſix hundred thouſand marks, to indemnify him for the expences of the war; and moreover a penſion for himſelf of forty thouſand marks a year for life. A tax was raiſed throughout the Spaniſh dominions for raiſing the former ſum; and the whole of it was probably paid; for, he ſays nothing contrary in his will[8]; and Knyghton the Hiſtorian, canon of Leiceſter, where the duke uſed frequently to live, tells us, that a domeſtic of the duke's aſſured him, that his maſter brought with him into England, on his return from Spain, as much treaſure as made a load for forty-ſeven mules. Hoſtages were given for the regular diſcharge of his penſion; but it was nevertheleſs ſuffered to run greatly in arrear, of which he makes heavy complaint in his will; and at the ſame time directs his executors to recover thoſe arrears by all poſſible means; and bequeaths a third part of the ſums ſo recovered to the king, to induce him to lend his powerful aſſiſtance in that affair. He cheriſhed a grateful remembrance of his former wife[9], who brought him the better part of his titles and fortune, and was deſerving his heart; which however, it is to be feared, ſhe only divided with her domeſtic Catharine Swinford[10], a native of Henault, the widow of ſir Hugh Swinford, and daughter of ſir Payn Roet, Guien king at arms in the time of Edward III. Catharine's ſiſter was married to Geffrey Chaucer the Poet, by the management, as is ſaid, of the dutcheſs Blanch[11]. The duke was the friend of Chaucer and his wife; and penſioned them for their good ſervices to his dutcheſs. The duke entertained Catharine Swineford as his concubine in the life-time of both his wives[12]. She had been virtuouſly educated; and had no fault, that we know of, but conſenting to the duke's unlawful embraces. He felt occaſionally the keeneſt remorſe from this criminal intercourſe[13]; and more than once, if report be true, determined upon a final ſeparation. From the fruits and conſequences of this intimacy, it is plain that his pious reſolutions were not carried into full execution. Whether he did ever actually part with her, I am not informed. About three years before his death, he made Swinford dutcheſs of Lancaſter, for the ſake of the children he had by her[14]. This event took place on the 14th of January, 1396, 19 Ric. II, a little more than two years after the death of the Spaniſh dutcheſs; in whoſe time Catharine Swyneford was not only kept by the duke, but received public marks of favour even from the court[15]. Perhaps no man had ever two more virtuous wives than fell to the ſhare of this duke of Lancaſter[16]; and even his miſtreſs found a way of making herſelf reſpected.

The duke of Lancaſter was humane, magnificent, and courteous[17]; ready to forgive the greateſt injuries, and liberal of his money both to his friends and the publick. He ſpent 40,000 marks in an embaſſy to Bruges before the death of his father. The king of France, in an interview at Amiens, ſhewed him the ſame reſpect that he would have paid to an emperor; and the duke's daughter Philippa was once ſeriouſly thought of by the court of France to be their queen [1]. He was the friend of Wickliffe; and preſerved that Reformer, when he was convened by the biſhops before a ſynod at St. Paul's, and in danger of being illegally impriſoned or deſtroyed [2]. After that incident, the duke protected the followers of Wickliffe, whoſe party, but for him, had been utterly extinguiſhed. He was an advocate for an Engliſh tranſlation of the Bible, which ſhewed a liberal and diſcerning ſpirit, conſidering the ignorance and bigotry of the age. Wickliffe dedicated many of his pieces to him; that holy man's extraordinary learning and exemplary life were his only recommendations to the duke of Lancaſter, who never adopted the tenets of that Reformer, nor ſwerved from the doctrines in which he had been educated. His protection of Wickliffe againſt the bigotry and deſpotiſm of the church, at the ſame time that in our ideas it reflects the greateſt luſtre on the duke's juſtice, diſintereſtedneſs, moderation, and humanity, loſt him the hearts of the orthodox, and brought a load of ſcurrility upon him from the mouths and pens of the monks. To their abuſe we muſt attribute the unfavourable account which has been given of John of Gaunt, without any foundation of reaſon, by the generality of Engliſh authors; not one of whom, as far as I can diſcover, is much acquainted with the character of this extraordinary man; whence it happens, that they take the liberty of vilifying or praiſing him, according to their own ſuperficial conjectures, and as beſt ſuits the convenience of rounding their periods. A ſtriking part of this duke's hiſtorical portrait is caution and coolneſs in the proſecution of his affairs. His very critical ſituation on account of his vaſt eſtate and great connexions naturally inſpired him with circumſpection during the violent and arbitrary reign of his nephew Richard. If he had ſupported the duke of Glouceſter, whoſe virtuous ſoul glowed with the divine fire of patriotiſm, Richard's deſpotiſm would have been ſuppreſſed, and the conſtitution preſerved. The duke of Lancaſter had been accuſed of a deſign to ſupplant Richard; he declined to oppoſe him, even to ſave his country. Some modern authors have ſaid, but I think without the authority of any antient writer for it, that he had not the courage or capacity of his brother. In capacity he was certainly not inferior. All authors and records celebrate his wiſdom and parts. Theſe eulogies are not, as far as I have ſeen, ſo laviſhly beſtowed on the younger, Edward; who, though upon the whole a man of reſpectable abilities, and a brilliant and even amiable character, ſeems notwithſtanding to have had defects from which his brother was free. There is room for ſuſpecting that he was tinctured with obſtinacy, haughtineſs, raſhneſs, profuſion, vanity, and even cruelty. During his government of Aquitain, he gave no great ſatisfaction, treating the people with pride, oppreſſing them with taxes, and governing them by his Engliſh favourites. John was more popular abroad; Edward had the hearts of the Engliſh at home. Of the two, I ſhould think, John was the greater favourite of his father; though the king ſeems to have had great affection for them both, and indeed for all his children. The people of Aquitain were not in general great admirers of the prince's manner of governing them. The people of England could not tell how he would govern the people here, as he had hardly ever reſided in England till within five or ſix years of his death, when he was broken with ſickneſs and affliction. John of Gaunt was tried by a long courſe of difficult ſervices in times very unfavourable for the diſplay of popular virtue. The whole time of Richard's reign may be compared to thick and foggy weather, which darkens the hemiſphere, depreſſes the animal ſpirits, and threatens mankind with approaching diſeaſes; even a ſtorm or tempeſt, which revived the human ſenſations, might be more agreeable. The four children [3], whom John had by Catharine Swinford, he had intereſt enough to get legitimated, firſt by the pope, and then by the king and parliament [4]. It has been generally ſuppoſed, that the parliamentary act of legitimation contained an expreſs exception as to the crown of England; and in the common copies we find the words, exceptâ regali dignitate: but I am told, by a gentleman well acquainted with our records, that theſe words are an interlineation by a ſubſequent and different hand, and the inſtrument had originally no ſuch clauſe; accordingly it is omitted in the printed roll of the 20th of Richard II. This inſtrument is dated the 9th day of February. It is ſaid, that a large pall was thrown over the duke, Catharine Swinford, and their four children, in the parliament-houſe, during the buſineſs of this legitimation [5]. If this be true, probably the ſame ceremony had been uſed, according to an antient cuſtom, at the time of the duke's nuptials with Catharine. In the ſame parliament [6], John Beaufort, the duke's eldeſt ſon by Swinford, was made earl of Somerſet, in full parliament, with the uſual formalities; and £20. a year ſettled upon him out of the iſſues and profits of that county. There are ſeveral paſſages in the conduct of John of Gaunt for which one does not know how to make an apology. His connexion with Catharine Swinford was of this ſort; and his tame compliance with Richard the Second in the two laſt years of that king's reign reflects, I think, ſtill greater diſhonour upon him, becauſe of its more immediate tendency to ruin his country. It happened, however, very fortunately for the publick, that the duke's abject ſubmiſſion to the king, which gave the latter a momentary triumph, encouraged Richard to proceed to ſtill greater exceſſes; till at length, attempting to deſtroy the powerful heir of Lancaſter, he gave his incenſed ſubjects the only thing they wanted, a head that could draw together the ſcattered multitude, and by uniting them give vigour to their reſentment. The reader will excuſe my dwelling a little upon the preſent ſubject, becauſe it is one of the moſt curious and important that is to be met with in the annals of this country. About the ſpring of the year 1397, and 20 Richard II, the animoſity between the king and the duke of Glouceſter broke out afreſh, and became more violent than ever. The dukes of Lancaſter and York withdrew into the country to take their uſual paſtime of the chace, thinking it not prudent to remain at that time longer at court, where they had for a conſiderable time before chiefly reſided. The king took advantage of their abſence, in the ſummer, to circumvent Glouceſter, and ſend him to Calais. Having thus ſecured his uncle, he called a council at Shrewſbury on the 1ſt of September. It conſiſted of a few lords, among whom were the duke of Lancaſter's ſon; the earl of Somerſet; and his ſon-in-law John Holland, earl Huntingdon, uterine brother of the king. Theſe were tampered with ſeverally and privately by Richard; and at length prevailed with by threats and promiſes to appeal Glouceſter, Arundel, Warwick, and ſome others, at the enſuing parliament, ſummoned for this purpoſe or buſineſs, to be held at Weſtminſter on the 17th of September This aſſembly accordingly met; and the earls of Arundel and Warwick received ſentence of death for what they had done eleven years before, though the ſame had been ſolemnly pardoned both by the king and parliament. The earl of Arundel, one of the greateſt and moſt popular men in England, was executed on the day of his trial, and his eſtate confiſcated. Warwick, who had been the king's preceptor, by parliament had his judgement mitigated into perpetual baniſhment in the Iſle of Man, with the forfeiture of his eſtate. An order was made for the duke of Glouceſter's appearance, though he had been murdered privately at Calais ſome days before. On the 24th of that month a certificate of his death was returned to parliament, which made no enquiry into the cauſe of his death, ſhewed no ſurprize or reſentment at it, but proceeded to impeach him, though dead. He was appealed, declared a traitor, and all his fortune condemned to the king's uſe. The ſentence againſt him was pronounced, I preſume, by the duke of Lancaſter, who acted as high ſteward throughout this bloody and nefarious buſineſs. Theſe proceedings were carried into execution by a ſet of lords and commons packed for the purpoſe, and awed by the king's preſence and that of a ſurrounding army of Cheſhire banditti. Upon this extraordinary occaſion the duke of Lancaſter appeared with a retinue of three hundred lances[1], and his ſon the earl of Derby with a corps of two hundred men at arms and four hundred archers, for the king's guard, and, I ſuppoſe, to awe the people. Froiſſart ſays, that the duke of Lancaſter was highly enraged at the duke of Glouceſter's death, and determined to revenge it; till, cooling by degrees, he thought it better to bury what had happened in oblivion than excite a diſturbance; the event of which would be uncertain, and which could not bring his brother from the grave. The ſame writer aſſigns another reaſon for the duke's acquieſcence to what had happened, that the king promiſed to be guided in future entirely by the duke's counſel; but, from what has been related, it appears that he was not at all diſpoſed to vindicate the injured Glouceſter, or give the king the leaſt oppoſition in theſe cruel and arbitrary doings. He was not only aſſiſting and aſſenting to theſe proſcriptions, but was mean enough to accept as a boon from the king ſome of the earl of Arundel's lands which lay conveniently for him in the county of Norfolk, where they were interſperſed with his own[2]. At the ſame time his family received freſh honours, and obtained freſh grants out of the forfeited eſtates of the ruined lands from the hands of the king. The duke's tame compliance with Richard's perverſe will is the more diſgraceful, becauſe he was the only man in England who was able to check the king, and reſtore the expiring honour and rights of the nation. If any excuſe can be pleaded for his conduct, it muſt be founded on the timidity and indolence of old age, the love of his children, and a ſenſe of perſonal obligation to king Richard, who, it muſt be allowed, had conferred many great favours upon him and his family, more, I ſuſpect, from fear than love. Notwithſtanding theſe ſacrifices of his honour and conſcience, his life, which had been frequently threatened by the king, was at this very time hardly ſafe; for, we have it upon good authority, that it was Richard's intention to take or kill both the duke of Lancaſter and his eldeſt ſon, as they were going to him at Windſor, after the breaking up of this very parliament. After what we have ſeen the late parliament capable of doing, we ſhall not be ſurprized at any of their tranſactions. But one remarkable proceeding of that aſſembly was their application to the king, that he would be pleaſed to give full power to certain lords and others, that were agreeable to him, to act in the name, and to have the full power, of the parliament. Accordingly, the whole legiſlative authority was veſted in the hands of twelve lords and ſix commoners, and two delegates for the clergy; theſe were the earls of Wiltſhire and Worceſter. Six of theſe lords, three commoners, and one delegate, were empowered to act for the whole body[3]; and theſe called themſelves a parliament, and paſſed many acts in that capacity. This was done in the adjourned parliament of Shrewſbury in the beginning of the year 1398. In the number of the commiſſioners were the duke of Lancaſter; his ſon-in-law John Holland, duke of Exeter; and his ſon John Beaufort, marquis of Dorſet. It was a committee of this aſſembly, aſſuming the name of the parliament, that gave ſanction to the king's perfidious treatment of Bolingbroke, duke of Hereford, eldeſt ſon of John duke of Lancaſter. The quarrel, that commenced between Bolingbroke duke of Hereford, and the duke of Norfolk, towards the latter end of the year 1397, created infinite diſquietude in the mind of the duke of Lancaſter. He gave no public oppoſition to the duel that was ordered between his ſon and Thomas Mowbray the duke of Norfolk, becauſe he thought it was inconſiſtent with his honour to prevent the combat, and that Henry was a match for his antagoniſt; but he ſaid there was no cauſe for fighting, and blamed both the king and other lords in ſecret for making ſo great a commotion about a thing of the moſt trifling nature. He took notice by his friends, that the king was doing every thing he could to ruin both himſelf and his realm; and obſerved, with reſpect to the duel in agitation, that it was only calculated to excite general diſcord and animoſity; he ſaid, that, let the preſent diſpute end how it would, the two noble lords, who were to enter the liſts againſt each other, could never afterwards be fully reconciled. While this momentous affair was depending, and it continued ſo for nine or ten months, the duke never went near the king, and ſaw very little of his ſon. He followed this courſe with great wiſdom; for, he ſaw that his ſon was the favourite of all orders of people in the whole nation, particularly of the Londoners. The latter ſaid, that the king was only actuated by envy againſt the duke of Hereford, and ſeeking a pretence for driving him out of the kingdom; that they would ſtand by him, and ſee juſtice done him whether the king would or not. They carried their partiality ſo far as to maintain, that Henry of Bolingbroke, the duke of Hereford, had a better title to the crown than Richard of Bourdeaux; though his maternal grandfather had generouſly waved his pretenſions out of reſpect to Edward III. whom he loved and reverenced. They added, that, if the reigning king dared to uſe him ill, he ſhould pay dear for his temerity. In the month of October, 1398, Henry of Bolingbroke received ſentence of baniſhment for ten years. Froiſſart relates, that, upon his taking leave of the king at Eltham, he conducted himſelf with ſo much temper and humility, that his baniſhment was ſhortened to ſix years; but this is not probable, nor is it ſupported by any other authority. From the time of his ſon's baniſhment the duke reſided conſtantly at Leiceſter till his death, which is ſtated by Thomas Otterbourne to have happened on the morrow after the Purification.

---

[1] Ex Archiv. Ducatûs; Walſingham, & Froiſſart. [2] Speed. [3] MS. in Muſ. Brit. MS. in Coll. Wigorn. Oxon. Walſingham.

[4] MS. in Coll. Corp. Chr. Cant. Rot. Parl. 1 Ric. II. [5] Selden. [6] MS. in Muſ. Brit. Fox. Knyghton. Walſingham.

[7] Ferreras. [8] Ex Archiv. Eccleſ. Lincoln. [9] Ex Archiv. Ducatûs Lanc. [10] Sandford. Froiſſart.

[11] Regiſt. Johannis Ducis Lancaſtriæ in camerâ Ducatûs. [12] Froiſſart; and MSS. Harl. in Muſ. Brit.

[13] Knyghton; and Gentleman's Magazine. [14] Froiſſart. [15] Anſtis on the Garter.

[16] Froiſſart; and Hiſtory of England. [17] Cartæ Regum in camerâ Ducatûs; & Knyghton. Dugdale. Collins.

---

[1] Froiſſart.

[2] Fox; and Chron. in Muſ. Brit. Knyghton. Walſingham. Lewis's Life of Wickliffe. Argentré. Carte; and others.

[3] Rot. Parl.

[4] Rymer. Sandford.

[5] Du Cange, apud voc. Pallium; & Selden.

[6] Rot. Parl.

As ſoon as he was dead, Richard ſeized his poſſeſſions into his own hands, and began to be very laviſh of them, diſpoſing of parts of them to almoſt any one that would apply for them.

---

[1] Dugdale.

[2] Ex Archiv. Ducatûs Lancaſtr.

[3] Tyrrel.

A SHORT LIFE OF HENRY OF BOLINGBROKE, till his Acceſſion to the Crown.

Henry Plantagenet, ſurnamed of Bolingbroke from the place of his birth, was born about the year 1366, and was the only ſurviving ſon of John of Gaunt by Blanch of Lancaſter[1]. He loſt his excelleat mother on the 21ſt of September, 1369[2]; after which for ſome time he was probably under the care of Catharine Swinford, his mother's old friend, the governeſs of his two ſiſters, and his father's concubine[3]. On the 12th of May, 3 Richard II, the duke of Lancaſter made him an annual allowance of 250 marks a year out of his eſtate in Norfolk[4]. The next year he was betrothed, with conſent of the king[5], to Mary de Bohun, the younger daughter and coheireſs of Humphrey de Bohun, late earl of Eſſex, Hereford, and Northampton, and hereditary conſtable of England. Eleanor, the other daughter of Humphrey, was already married to Thomas of Woodſtock. Theſe two ladies ſhared between them their father's honours and large eſtates. Mary's purparty was afterwards annexed by her huſband and ſon to the dutchy of Lancaſter. In her right, Henry of Bolingbroke enjoyed the titles of Hereford and Northampton, and lord of Brecknock[6].

On the third of September, 5 Ric. II, John duke of Lancaſter iſſued his warrant to his receiver in the county of Lincoln to pay to dame Johanna Bohun, counteſs of Hereford, 100 marks a year for the wardſhips and coſts of his daughter-in-law Mary, counteſs of Derby, until ſhe ſhould arrive at the age of 14[7]. Eleanor muſt have been ſeveral years older than the counteſs of Derby; for, the former was of full age in the 3d or 4th year of Richard II[8]. On the 20th of February, 5 Ric. II, the duke made the counteſs dowager of Hereford a farther allowance of 100 marks more, on the ſame account, out of his lordſhips of Kidwelly. In 9 Ric. II. we find Henry ſummoned to parliament by the title of Henry earl of Derby. Leland ſays[9], he was made earl of Derby that year; but no patent of his creation, nor any account of it, is given in the Parliament-Rolls, nor in any record that I have diſcovered. Froiſſart relates, that in his early youth he promiſed to be a perſon of great worth and honour[10]. When his father went over to Spain, to claim that kingdom in right of his ſecond wife, about Eaſter, 1386, Henry of Bolingbroke accompanied him to the Land's end. Before the duke's departure, he placed about the perſon of his ſon a choſen and diſcreet council, to aſſiſt him in the management of his affairs. In the ſucceſsful oppoſition that was made againſt the king's favourites and miniſters by the duke of Glouceſter and his party in 1387, 11 Ric. II, Henry earl of Derby took an active part. He was one of thoſe lords that appealed Alexander Nevil, archbiſhop of York; Robert de Vere, duke of Ireland; Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk; and the others of their party. Upon that occaſion, he was one of thoſe whom the king meant to deſtroy. He engaged and routed Robert de Vere duke of Ireland, Richard's principal favourite, at Radcot-bridge, in Oxfordſhire. The king probably never ſincerely loved him after that affair; however, upon various occaſions, he affected the ſhew of perfect reconciliation and the moſt hearty good will. Upon the duke of Lancaſter's return from Spain, Richard confirmed all the grants that had been made by his grandfather and himſelf to the family of Lancaſter; and limited the county palatine, which had been given to John only for his life, to his heirs male. This was intended as a mark of the king's regard unto Henry of Bolingbroke, who was to have the benefit of theſe favours.

About two years afterwards he went into Pruſſia, where he ſignalized his proweſs by defeating the king of Lithuania, taking four generals, and killing three, beſides three hundred of the ſtouteſt men in the enemy's army. The king fled to the city of Skirgal; this the earl of Derby gained, and took and ſlew four thouſand of the common people: among the captives was a brother of the king of Poland.

He was among the Engliſh lords who went with twelve hundred horſe from Calais to Amiens, when the treaty was held between the French and Engliſh at the latter place, about the middle of Lent, 15 Ric. II. The next year we find him continued in the king's ſervice beyond ſea; after which, I do not find any mention made of him till he excited the compaſſion and attracted the veneration of all the people of England on account of the hard treatment he had received in the 21ſt year of the ſame king's reign. A little time before the meeting of the parliament which was convened at Weſtminſter on the 17th of September, to try the duke of Glouceſter and the earls of Arundel and Warwick, this earl of Derby had a ſpecial commiſſion to raiſe two hundred men at arms for the king's guard: other lords had ſimilar commiſſions, for fear of a general inſurrection of the people[11]. The earl of Derby made an ample confeſſion of his guilt in this parliament reſpecting his former behaviour in the 11th of Richard.—Kneeling before the king, he addreſſed him as follows: "My liege lord, I know that many riots, diſturbances, and evil deeds, have been committed and done within your kingdom, to the offence of you and your royal eſtate, in the which I myſelf was preſent amongſt others, not with an ill intent or purpoſe to offend you, as not knowing then that it was any fault or offence againſt you. But, ſire, ſince I now know well and confeſs my offences in ſo doing, I beg your mercy and pardon!" The commons alſo joined their entreaties in favour of the earl; and repreſented, that in as much as he had not offended through malice; as he had left the duke of Glouceſter and his party; as he had hindered them in their murderous purpoſes, and, with Thomas de Mowbray earl of Nottingham, had returned to the king; and farther they prayed, that, as it was for the honour of the king to cheriſh good and worthy perſons according to their merit; he would be pleaſed, in full parliament, as a ſpecial recommendation of theſe two earls of his blood, to declare their ſtate, name, fame, and loyalty. Whereupon, the king, ſitting in his royal dignity, anſwered, that this matter was better known to himſelf than to any other perſon whatever; and he teſtified and declared the good demeanor, loyalty, and fame, of the earls of Derby and Nottingham, who, he ſaid, had done their duty to their king, and went to him, like good and faithful lieges, from the ſociety of the duke of Glouceſter and the earls of Arundel and Warwick; that they afterwards abode with him, carried themſelves well and loyally, and as ſuch he held them to be. He therefore granted, that as well they, as thoſe of their company at the time that the duke of Glouceſter and the earls of Arundel and Warwick made their ride, ſhould be known and held for true and loyal ſubjects throughout this realm; that they ſhould never be blamed nor hurt for any thing done on that occaſion. Moreover, the king, with the advice and aſſent of all the lords of parliament, and at the requeſt of the commons, ordained and eſtabliſhed that this declaration and grant ſhould be, and carry the force and virtue of, a ſtatute. He likewiſe promiſed the two earls, that he would be very kind and gracious to them. On the laſt day of that ſeſſion, September 29, he ordered it to be ſhewed openly in parliament, that it was his will that certain honourable perſons ſhould be promoted to higher honour, becauſe ſuch promotions gave ſtrength and luſtre to the ſceptre. Whereupon, the king, ſitting in royal majeſty, and holding in his hand a rod, made his couſin ſir Henry of Lancaſter, earl of Derby, a duke, by the title of duke of Hereford; to have and to hold the ſame to him and his heirs male. The king then delivered to Henry his charter of creation, which was read in full parliament. In this inſtrument the king declares, that he raiſes the earl of Derby to be a duke, not ſo much from perſonal favour as to reward that earl's extraordinary merit and uniform good behaviour towards himſelf; that

[1] Sandford.

[2] Regiſt. Johannis ducis Lancaſtriæ, in camerâ Ducatûs.

[3] Froiſſart.

[4] Regiſt. Hen. IV. in camerâ Ducatûs.

[5] Regiſt. Johannis ducis.

[6] Sandford.

[7] Regiſt. Johannis ducis, &c.

[8] Dugdale.

[9] Leland, Collect.

[10] Froiſſart.

[11] Rot. Parl.

herein he acts with the greateſt deliberation, and the moſt nice attention to the earl's deſerts. As a farther mark of the king's particular affection and good opinion of his couſin, he ſettled by the ſame patent upon him and heirs for ever, towards the better ſupport of his high rank, the ſum of forty marks a year, to be received by half-yearly portions out of the exchequer.

But this harmony between the king and Henry of Bolingbroke was of no long continuance. The parliament which had ſat at Weſtminſter in the month of September, 21 Ric. II. was adjourned to Shrewſbury; at which place it met towards the middle of January following. There the duke of Hereford, coming before the king, and bearing a ſchedule in his hand, preſented it to the king; with a proteſtation to add to or diminiſh therefrom at all times, and when he pleaſed, as it ſhould be needful, ſaving always the ſubſtance of the preſent ſchedule; to this effect:

"That in the month of December, in the 21ſt year of your reign, the duke of Hereford, travelling between Brainford and London, met the duke of Norfolk with a great train, who diſcourſed with him on divers matters; amongſt which he told him, 'they were all ready to be undone;' that the duke of Hereford demanded, 'why? He anſwered, 'for the fact at Radcot Bridge.' The duke of Hereford ſaid, 'How can that be? for, the king has ſhewed us favour, and in full parliament declared us to have been good and loyal towards him.' The duke of Norfolk anſwered: 'Notwithſtanding that, it will be done to us as has been done to others before; for, he will cancel this record.' The duke of Hereford ſaid, 'it would be no great wonder, ſince the king had ſaid before all the people, that he ſhould afterwards make it void.' Farther the duke of Norfolk ſaid, 'this was a ſtrange and treacherous world; for, I know well,' ſaid he, 'that, if it had not been for ſome, my lord your father and you had been taken or killed when you came from Windſor, after the late parliament was up; but the dukes of Albemarle and Exeter, the earl of Worceſter, and myſelf, were agreed never to undo any lord without juſt and reaſonable cauſe;' and added, 'that the malice of this deſign was in the duke of Surrey, with the earls of Wiltſhire and Saliſbury, drawing to them the duke of Glouceſter, who had ſworn to undo ſix other lords, that is to ſay, the dukes of Lancaſter, Hereford, Albemarle, and Exeter, with the marquis of Dorſet and himſelf.' He alſo ſaid, 'they purpoſed to reverſe the judgement concerning Thomas earl of Lancaſter; and thereby they and many others would be diſinherited.' The duke of Hereford ſaid, 'God forbid! for, it would be a great wonder if the king ſhould aſſent to do this; for, it was with a chearful countenance that he promiſed to be a good lord unto them and others; and alſo that he knew he had ſworn it by St. Edward.' And the duke of Norfolk anſwered, 'He had done the ſame to him many times, and ſworn by the body of God; and that, for all this, he was never the more to be truſted;' and farther ſaid to the duke of Hereford, 'that the king was about to draw the earl of March and others to the ſame agreement and purpoſe of the ſaid four lords to deſtroy the perſons aforementioned.' The duke of Hereford replied: 'If it be ſo, we can never truſt them.' The duke of Norfolk returned: 'For certain, not; for, although they cannot accompliſh their deſigns at preſent, yet they will be contriving ten years from this time to deſtroy us and our houſes."

This ſchedule being read before the king and lords on Thurſday the 31ſt of January, and laſt day of the parliament; it was then ordained by him, with aſſent of all the eſtates in parliament [1], that the matters therein compriſed ſhould be determined by the good advice and diſcretion of the king, and the commiſſioners aſſigned by the late parliament to act in the name and with the full authority of the parliament; to wit, the dukes of Lancaſter, York, Albemarle, Surrey, and Exeter; the marquis of Dorſet; the earls of March, Sarum, Northumberland, and Glouceſter, or ſix of them; the earls of Worceſter and Wiltſhire, as procurators of the clergy, or one of them; John Buſſey, ſpeaker of the Houſe of Commons; Henry Green; and four other knights of parliament; or any four or three of them.

It appears from the above ſchedule, that Polydore Vergil and Froiſſart are in an error, in making the duke of Norfolk the accuſer of the duke of Hereford for uttering ſlanderous words of the king, when it was the direct contrary way. What gave riſe to ſuch an opinion probably was, that, this extraordinary converſation having tranſpired, and perhaps got to the king's ear, each duke, to ſave himſelf, accuſed the other; though the duke of Hereford might be the firſt of the two who impeached the other in form before the king. We have upon our records only the ſtate of the fact as given in by the duke of Hereford; and know not what defence was made by Norfolk. It is certain, however, that the latter had a very indifferent character as to truth and honour; in both which Hereford was inferior to none. It appears alſo from the Parliament Roll, that Norfolk prevaricated upon ſome of the points contained in the ſchedule. This was one, though not the only reaſon, that his ſentence was much ſeverer than Hereford's. Norfolk was the perſon employed by the king to effect the murder of the duke of Glouceſter, Hereford's brother-in-law and uncle, in the month of September preceding. If Henry concurred with the king in his bloody tranſactions of the late parliament, he was guided probably by fear, or filial duty; for, if we conſider his connexions and former conduct ten years before, and what a keen, though well-diſſembled reſentment Richard entertained for thoſe that were concerned in that buſineſs; and alſo how maliciouſly Richard treated the duke of Hereford on the preſent occaſion, we can hardly be brought to think, that the profeſſions he made in favour of him were the ſincere and genuine effuſion of an affectionate heart. Beſides, it appears from the ſchedule itſelf, that the king intended to murder the duke of Lancaſter and his ſon, as they were going to him at Windſor, immediately upon the breaking up of that parliament, wherein the king had juſtified and extolled the duke of Hereford, and experienced both the duke of Lancaſter's and his ſon's perfect acquieſcence to his vindictive and atrocious conduct. But to return.

After the parliament was ended, both the dukes appeared before the king at Oſwaldſtrie on the 22d of February, 1398, 21 Ric. II. A farther day was then aſſigned, and they were ordered to be at Windſor on Sunday, the 28th of April. In the mean while, it was agreed by the king and his council of delegates, held on the 19th of March at Briſtol, where the dukes again made their appearance, that, foraſmuch as the matter in debate touched the law of chivalry, it ſhould be determined by courſe of ſuch law; which would prove ſufficient for the deciſion, if ſome other way were not found. Accordingly, on Monday the 29th of April, both appearing again before the king, battle or duel was appointed between them, according to the advice and opinion of the dukes, earls, barons, bannerets, and a great aſſembly of knights, there met for this purpoſe; together with the commiſſioners of parliament. The parties were ordered to be at Coventry on the 16th of September following, to do their devoir.

The dukes of Lancaſter and York, with Henry Percy earl of Northumberland, were the duke of Hereford's ſecurity for his appearance [2]. He ſent to Galeas, duke of Milan, for harneſs; who ſent him over four of the beſt armourers in Lombardy to fit him. Thomas Mowbray employed his agents in Almaine and elſewhere for the like purpoſe.

At the time fixed, the king and all the lords being now arrived at Coventry, each of the lords who were to be the combatants, being attended with a ſplendid and numerous retinue, appeared on the day appointed. The duke of Albemarle was, pro tempore, made high conſtable, and the duke of Surrey lord marſhal, who came to the liſts moſt honourably waited on by many followers in rich liveries ſuitable to the greatneſs of their qualities, each of their ſervants carrying tipſtaves for clearing the field. Then the duke of Hereford, as challenger, firſt mounted on a white courſer in capariſons of green and blue velvet embroidered thick with ſwans and antelopes, armed cap à pie, with his ſword drawn, approached the liſts. Of whom the marſhal, demanding who he was, received this anſwer: "I am Henry of Lancaſter, duke of Hereford, that am come hither to do my devoir againſt Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk, as a falſe traitor to God, the king, the realm, and me;" and then, taking his oath that the quarrel was true and juſt, he deſired leave to enter the liſts; which being granted, he put up his ſword, pulled down his beaver, ſigned himſelf on the forehead with the croſs, took his ſpear, and, paſſing the barriers, diſmounted, and ſat down in a chair of green velvet, placed in a traverſe of green and blue velvet at one end of the liſts. Then king Richard entered the field with great pomp, accompanied with the earl of St. Paul, who came out of France on purpoſe to be a ſpectator of this combat, and attended with moſt of the nobles of England, and a guard of ten thouſand men in arms, to prevent any ſudden tumult or diſorder. The ſovereign being ſeated in a chair of ſtate, one of the kings at arms made proclamation that none but ſuch as were appointed to marſhal the field ſhould touch any part of the liſts, upon pain of death. Which being ended, another herald proclaimed: "Behold here Henry of Lancaſter, duke of Hereford, appellant, who is entered into the liſts royal, to do his devoir againſt Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk, upon pain of being counted falſe and recreant." Immediately upon this appeared the duke of Norfolk, bravely mounted, his horſe barbed with crimſon velvet embroidered with lions of ſilver and mulberry trees proper; and, having taken the like oath before the conſtable and marſhal that his quarrel was right and juſt, he entered the field, crying aloud, "God and him that hath the right!" And then, lighting from his horſe, placed himſelf in a chair of crimſon velvet oppoſite to his antagoniſt, at the other end of the liſts. The marſhal viewed their ſpears, to ſee if they were of equal length; and then he delivered one of them to the duke of Hereford, and ſent the other by a knight to the duke of Norfolk. This done, proclamation was made for them to prepare for the combat. Upon which, the dukes inſtantly mounted their horſes, and cloſed their beavers, caſting their ſpears into their reſts; and then, the trumpets ſounding, the duke of Hereford ſpurred his horſe forward; but, before he of Norfolk could advance, the king caſt down his warder, and the heralds cried, "Stay! ſtay!" Then the king cauſing their ſpears to be taken from them, they returned to their chairs, whilſt he retired to council to debate what was fit to be done in ſo weighty a cauſe. Where, after two hours' debate, their doom was agreed upon without fighting; and ſir John Buſſey, Speaker of the Commons, by the king's command, read the ſentence, which is thus recited at large in the Parliament Roll:

---

[1] Rot. Parl.

[2] Dugdale; and Froiſſart.

"That the king, willing," as was ſaid, "to ſhew more mercy and grace to the parties than they deſerved, inaſmuch as one of them at leaſt muſt have been very culpable, did, out of great tenderneſs towards perſons who bore his arms, and were ſo nearly allied to him in blood, and to prevent the diſhonour which muſt elſe fall upon one of them, by virtue of his ſovereign authority, take the battle into his own hands[1]." It was then ſaid to Henry of Lancaſter duke of Hereford, "that the king, by the full advice, aſſent, and authority of parliament, for the peace and tranquillity of him, his realm, and his ſubjects, and to eſchew debates and troubles between the dukes of Hereford and Norfolk and their friends and well-wiſhers, did will, ordain, and adjudge, that the ſaid Henry of Lancaſter ſhould void the kingdom for ten years; and that he ſhould be without the realm within eight days of the octaves of Saint Edward the Confeſſor next coming; and that, upon pain of incurring treaſon, by authority of parliament. And it was likewiſe ordained, by the authority and upon the penalty aforeſaid, that the duke of Hereford ſhould in no wiſe come into the company of Thomas duke of Norfolk, or Thomas Arundel[2], and have no communication whatever with either of them. And at the ſame time it was allowed that the duke of Hereford had not failed in any point touching his appeal, but had fully performed his devoir therein, until ſuch time as the battle was taken into the king's hands."

Sentence was then paſſed upon the duke of Norfolk much ſeverer than what had been inflicted on the duke of Hereford. He was baniſhed for life to Hungary, Bohemia, and Almaine. All the lands and ſeignories which the king had given him were now reſumed, and all his eſtates ſeized into the king's hands, except an annual penſion of a thouſand pounds; he was forbidden, upon pain of treaſon, to come into the company of the duke of Hereford, or hold any communication whatever with him, or with Thomas Arundel archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The reaſon aſſigned for this heavy judgement was, that in the late parliament he had not given his concurrence, as he ought to have done, with the other appellants, in revoking and annulling the proceedings of the parliament of 11 Ric. II. by which the king's authority was invaded and infringed; and ſupporting the meaſures of the parliament of 21 Ric. II. in which the royal power was vindicated and reſtored.

Beſides this, it was ordained, by authority of parliament, that, if either the dukes of Hereford or Norfolk, or any other perſon, purſue or procure in any manner what was contrary to any article ordained on the ſaid 16th day of September, they ſhould incur the penalty of treaſon, as well for the ſmalleſt points of this ordinance (ordonnance), as if they ſhould act againſt any ordinance made by the parliament lately commenced at Weſtminſter, and adjourned to Shrewſbury. Moreover, it was ordained, by the ſame authority, that, if the duke of Hereford or Norfolk, or any one in their name, or for them, ſhould proſecute to have in any manner pardon or licence to return into their country, or to go into any other part than what is ſpecified in this ordinance, he or they ſhould incur the penalty of treaſon.

But, notwithſtanding the prohibition contained in the latter part of this judgement, the duke of Hereford did ſome time after prefer his petition to the king; wherein, among other things, he deſired particularly, in caſe any ſucceſſion ſhould happen to deſcend or fall to him in his abſence, for which he ought to do homage, that then he might by his attorneys be permitted to proſecute and have livery of ſuch ſucceſſion or heritages, and that his homage and fealty might be reſpited; to which petition the king conſented, and confirmed it by his letters patent.

The nation was highly incenſed with the king's behaviour to the duke of Hereford, who was the darling of the principal peers, the city of London, and the community at large. They ſaid, he had committed no crime, and had been condemned without trial; that, by his baniſhment, they were deprived of their beſt protector; and thought themſelves by that event expoſed to all the malice and indignation of an incenſed and vindictive tyrant. As the duke paſſed through the city of London on horſeback on his leaving the kingdom, he was followed by more than 40,000 people, who cried after him, and bewailed his fate and their own in the moſt moving manner. He was accompanied on this occaſion with trumpets and inſtruments of muſic, but with the more melting ſounds of univerſal lamentation. The mayor of London and others of the principal citizens followed him to Deptford; ſome accompanied him as far as Dover in his way to Calais.

On the duke's arrival at Paris, he was very kindly received by the court of France; where he was preſently offered in marriage to the only daughter of the duke of Berry, uncle of Charles VI. King Richard ſent the earl of Saliſbury his ambaſſador to the court of France, to put a ſtop to that affair. The earl repreſented the duke of Hereford as a perſon guilty of traiterous deſigns againſt his prince; upon which the treaty of marriage proceeded no farther.

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 21 Ric. II. n. 22.

[2] Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Being thus departed, he received letters from his father, adviſing him rather to go into Caſtile than into Hungary; but, his father growing ſick here in England, he removed not from Paris; where, within a ſhort time, he had advertiſement of his death[1]. Soon after which, it ſo happened, that, king Richard being neceſſitated to go into Ireland for ſuppreſſing the Iriſh then in arms, this country grew into great diſtraction; whereupon the Londoners ſent for this duke, promiſing him their aſſiſtance, in caſe he would accept of the government[2].

Having therefore ſuch encouragement, as alſo conſiderable aid from the duke of Britanny, he took ſhipping at le Port Blanc, and landed at Ravenſpur, upon the mouth of Humber, in Yorkſhire: whereupon divers of the Northern lords repaired to him; ſo that, when he came to Doncaſter, he had a conſiderable army; the commons in all places inclining to him. Whence marching to Eveſham, in Worceſterſhire; and ſo to Berkeley, co. Glouceſter; he came to Briſtol; all the caſtles in thoſe parts yielding to him. Of which king Richard having advertiſement, he haſted back into England, and landed in Wales; where finding that he was almoſt totally forſaken, he went to Conway-caſtle, co. Caernarvon. This duke, therefore, underſtanding where he was, bent his courſe to Cheſter; and thence ſent for a ſafe-conduct, that he might ſpeak with him. Which being granted, he employed the earl of Northumberland upon that affair; who propoſed, that a parliament might be called, wherein juſtice might be had againſt thoſe enemies of the commonwealth, who had been procurers of the duke of Glouceſter's death, and the death of other noblemen; as alſo pardon for this duke for what he had done. Soon after which, he came himſelf thither alſo; and, having muſtered his army in the ſight of the caſtle, walked into the outer ward; where, ſeeing the king come out, he made a reverend obeiſance towards him; and, going on, did ſo a ſecond and third time; the king then taking him by the hand, and bidding him welcome. Whereupon, humbly thanking him, he ſaid, that "the cauſe of his coming was to have reſtitution of his inheritance." Unto which the king readily aſſented; and called for wine. After which, mounting on horſeback, they rode to Flint; and ſo to Cheſter: thence to Nantwich; and ſo, by the common road, to London; where he was received with all expreſſions of joy[3].

But, the king being ſent to the Tower, though a parliament was called in his name, divers articles were exhibited there againſt him, whereby he was thought worthy to be depoſed; with intimation how fit it might be for him to reſign his right in the government to this duke[4]. Seeing, therefore, no remedy but to aſſent, an inſtrument was drawn to that purpoſe; as alſo an open claim to the crown made by this duke; whereupon he was ſolemnly placed on the royal throne[5].

The particular formalities at that time uſed in this buſineſs, and what elſe is memorable of him, after he became king by the name of Henry the Fourth, I leave to the relation of our Hiſtorians; and ſhall revert to the early parts of the more particular Hiſtory and Antiquities of the famous Town of Leiceſter, which the intereſting ſeries of its noble Earls has too long interrupted.

---

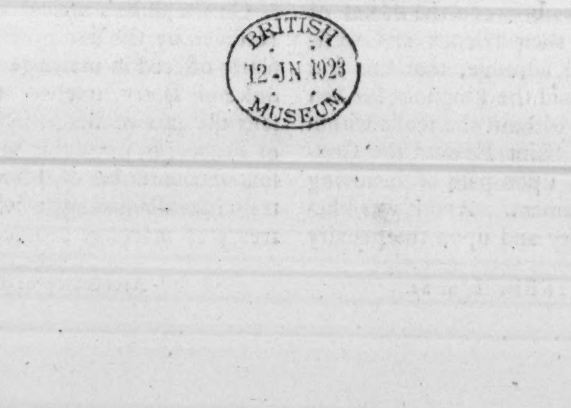
[1] Froiſſart.

[2] Holinſhed.

[3] Ibid.

[4] Froiſſart ſays, that king Richard, fearing for his own life, ſent for this duke to the Tower; and, bewailing his condition, offered a reſignation of the crown to him; and that this duke then told him of the rumour which had been ſpread amongſt the people throughout England, that he was not ſon to the prince of Wales, but rather to a prieſt or chanon: "for," ſaid he, "I have heard of certain knights who were in the prince's houſe (mine uncle), how that he knew well that his wife had not truly kept her marriage. Your mother," quoth he, "was couſin-german to king Edward; and the king began to hate her, becauſe ſhe could have no generation. Alſo ſhe was the king's goſſip of two children at the font; and ſhe that could well keep the prince in her bandon, by craft and ſubtilty ſhe made the Prince to be her huſband. And, becauſe ſhe could have no child, and doubting that the prince ſhould be divorced from her, ſhe did ſo much that ſhe was with child with you, and with another before you. As of the firſt, I cannot tell what to judge; but, as for you, your conditions have been ſeen contrary from all nobleneſs and proweſs of the prince: therefore it is ſaid, that ye be rather ſon to a prieſt, or chanon; for, when you were gotten and borne at Bourdeaux, there were many young men, prieſts, in the prince's houſe. This is the bruit in this country; and your works have well followed the ſame; for, ye be always inclined to the pleaſures of the Frenchmen, and to take with them peace, to the confuſion and diſhonour of the realm of England; and, becauſe mine uncle of Glouceſter and the earl of Arundel did counſel you truly and faithfully to keep the honour of the realm, and to follow the ſteps of your anceſtors, ye have traiterouſly cauſed them to die. As for me, I have taken upon me to defend your life, ſo long as I may, for pity; and I ſhall pray the Londoners, and the heritors of them that you have ſlain and baniſhed, to do the ſame."—"Couſin, I thank you," quoth the king; "I truſt more in you than in any other."—"It is but right that you ſhould do ſo," quoth this duke; "for, if I had not been, ye had been taken by the people, and depoſed with great confuſion, and ſlain by reaſon of your evil deeds."

[5] Holinſhed.



BRITISH 12 JN 1923 MUSEUM

APPENDIX

TO THE

HISTORY OF LEICESTER.

N° I. A Conjecture concerning the Site of the ancient SIDNACESTER.

By the Rev. SAMUEL PEGGE, M. A. F. S. A.

PAULINUS [1], biſhop of the Northumbers, in the reign of king Edwin, and ſome time between the years 627 and 631 [2], croſſed over from the kingdom of Northumberland into the parts of Lindſey next adjoining, in order to preach the Goſpel to the inhabitants of that province, which was then part of the Pagan kingdom of Mercia [3]. The biſhop was ſo ſucceſsful in his labours, that in the preſence of king Edwin, who either accompanied him in this laudable excurſion, or followed him, he baptized great numbers in the river Trent, at a place called Tiovulfingacæſtir [4].

Lincoln, or Lindum [5] Colonia, from whence, no doubt, Lindſey was denominated, was the ſouthern limit of this diſtrict; and Paulinus actually converted Blaecca [6], prefect thereof [7], and his whole family, by whoſe countenance and encouragement he afterwards erected there a church of ſtone, of an exquiſite ſtructure [8]. It is even ſaid by Matthew of Weſtminſter, that he conſecrated a biſhop to preſide over this new acquiſition; the words are, "Quod autem ibi, id eſt, in Lindiſſa regione, quæ inter Lincolniam & flumen Humbri ſita eſt, plures fuiſſent epiſcopi, certum habemus, quorum primum, ut Beda venerabilis in Hiſtoria teſtatur Anglorum, Paulinus primus Ebor. Antiſtes, ibidem epiſcopum ordinavit [9]." But there is a miſtake in this, for Bede mentions nothing of a conſecration of a biſhop of Lindſey, only that Paulinus afterwards met Honorius, elect of Canterbury, at Lincoln, and there conſecrated him [10]. I would read therefore in this place, Honoriumque, inſtead of quorum primum, agreable to what Bede delivers, and to the author himſelf, p. 113.

It is ſuppoſed, and I think with reaſon, that the Chriſtian religion did not long ſubſiſt here, in conſequence of this converſion; but, ſharing the fate of the church of Northumberland, gave place again to the idolatrous worſhip of the Saxons; for Bede teſtifies, that in his time the roof of the church erected by Paulinus, "vel longa incuria, vel hoſtili manu," was thrown down, and only the walls left ſtanding. Now Bede wrote his Hiſtory, A. D. 731, not above 100 years after the erection of the building; ſo that, as Dr. Inett obſerves, the decay in all probability was occaſioned by the relapſe of the people into idolatry, and was not the effect of time. The mere lapſe of time was ſcarcely ſufficient to bring on the total ruin of this fabric, which one muſt ſuppoſe the natives of the place would have taken care to repair, had they continued in the profeſſion of the faith.

I would raiſe a query here, whether that old wall at Lincoln, in the Roman ſtyle of building, uſually called the Mint, be not the ruin here intended. It ſtands eaſt and weſt, and, no doubt, once had a roof; and though the fabric is apparently after the manner, and in the taſte of the Romans; yet that will be thought no great objection, if it be conſidered how natural it would be for the Saxons, in their erections of ſtone [11], to imitate ſuch works of that kind as they found here, that is the Roman ones. It is ſuppoſed, that the Saxons, in their ſettling, generally ſeated themſelves in the ſtations of the Romans, ſo that Blecca, the prefect, was probably living in this upper part of Lincoln, where the ſtation was fixed: inſomuch that every thing here at the Mint wall ſeems to anſwer perfectly to the deſcription given by

---

[1] Bede, p. 97.

[2] Inett, vol. I. p. 44. M. Weſtm. p. 113. ſays, A. D. 628. Chron. Sax. A. D. 627.

[3] Higden, p. 197.

[4] Suppoſed to be Southwell. Camden, col. 580. Smith ad Bedam; but query: this being, in appearance, out of the territory here ſpoken of.

[5] Lindus, or Lindum, I take to be the ancient name of the river Witham, ſo called becauſe it comes from the village of that name.

[6] Blecca, Chron. Sax.

[7] Rice man. Ibid.

[8] Bede, l. c. It is ſuppoſed to have ſtood where St. Paul's church is. Smith and Inett.

[9] M. Weſtm. p. 142.

[10] Bede, pp. 97. 99. See alſo Chron. Sax. A. D. 627.

[11] The Saxons, I take it for granted, uſually built with timber.

Bede. If this were the caſe, Paulinus's church did not ſtand where St. Paul's church now does, as conjectured by the Doctors Smith and Inett[1]; but this I offer merely as a ſurmiſe[2], and ſhall proceed.

After the ill ſucceſs of this firſt attempt of king Edwin, and his biſhop Paulinus, Ecgfrid, king of Northumberland, upon defeating Wulfhere, king of Mercia, in battle, over-ran and took poſſeſſion of this north-eaſt part of the kingdom of Mercia, A. D. 678, and ſeparating it from the ſee of Lichfield, of which it was parcel, erected it into a biſhoprick, cauſing Eadhaed[3], who had been a prieſt of Alchfrid's, king of Northumberland[4], as now he was his, to be conſecrated biſhop of it[5]. Saxwulf was at this time Wulfhere's biſhop, who by this means was deprived of Lindſey, but ſtill continued biſhop of Mercia and Middle England. Ralph Higden, ſpeaking of Lindſey, ſays, "de qua (i. e. Lindeſeia) dicit Beda quod Sexwlfus erat ibidem primus epiſcopus[6];" but certainly he muſt be miſtaken in this, for Lindſey being a part of the kingdom of Mercia, Sexuulf was far from being the firſt biſhop of it. But this by the way.

Ethelred, king of Mercia, recovered Lindſey in a ſhort time from the Northumbrians; and then Eadhaed left his new-erected ſee, and was placed over the monaſtery of Rippon by archbiſhop Theodore, where he continued till he died[7]. This revolution was about the year 679[8], when biſhop Saxuulf did not regain, as might reaſonably be expected, this part of his dioceſe; for, in the next or following year, a ſee was confirmed by the authority of king Ethelred in Lindſey, and Edilwine was made biſhop thereof[9], and had for his ſucceſſors the following prelates:

701 Eadgar.
720 Cyniberctus.
733 Alwigus.
751 Eadulfus.
764 Ceolulfus.
787 Eadulfus.

Theſe are all the prelates Dr. Drake takes notice of[10]; but Malmeſbury, Florence Vigorn. and the Textus Roffenſis add Brihtredus, or Byrhtred, who ſat in the time of Burhred, king of Mercia, and Ælfred, king of Weſſex. He is omitted by biſhop Gibſon, who ſays, "after Eadulf's death, when it [this ſee] had been vacant about 80 years, it was by Leofwin united to Dorcheſter[11]," but ſtill the authorities here cited, together with the evidence adduced by Dr. Willis[12], are ſufficient to perſuade us of the preſidency of Brihtred; conſequently the vacancy of the ſee of Lindſey, ſpoken of by the biſhop as previous to the union of it with that of Dorcheſter, about A. D. 955, muſt commence from the time of his death, which is thought to have happened A. D. 873, by the cruelty of the Danes, whoſe invaſion and occupation of this part of the country is ſuppoſed to be the cauſe of the deſertion of this ſee, and its coalition with Dorcheſter[13].

It is agreed, I think, on all hands, that this ſee was in Lindſey, "cum quibus [Boſa ſcil. & Eata, A. D. 678, Eboraci] & Eadhaed[14] in provincia Lindisfarorum, quam nuperrimè rex Ecgfrid, ſuperato in bello & fugato Uulfhere, obtinuerat, ordinatur epiſcopus." So Bede, who afterwards terms it Lindiſſi[15]. "Conſecratus eſt etiam Lindiſwaris in epiſcopum Eadhedus, qui fuit primus epiſcoporum in Lindiſſi[16]." The bounds of this tract that was called Lindſey are deſcribed with ſufficient accuracy by Bede; "Lindiſſi, quæ eſt prima ad meridianam Humbræ fluminis ripam." So alſo Matthew of Weſtminſter, "inter Lincolniam & flumen Humbri[17];" and again, "Provinciam Lindiſſe regionis, quæ eſt ad meridianam plagam Humbri fluminis[18];" and Higden, "Provincia Lindisfarum eſt idem quod Lindiſeia, quæ jacet ad orientem Lincolniæ, cujus ipſa caput eſt[19]. I think it plain that this country was much the ſame with that part of Lincolnſhire, which is now called Lindſey, the city of Lincoln being its capital[20], and the ſouthern boundary[21]. There is an objection, however, to this; for in the Lives of the Biſhops of Lincoln written by Giraldus Cambrenſis, it is ſaid that Remigius, removing his ſee to Lincoln, procured all Lindſey to be taken from the juriſdiction of the archbiſhop of York, and added to that of Canterbury. And if all Lindſey belonged to the archbiſhop of York till Remigius's time (who lived ſince the Conqueſt), this ſee, united afterwards to Dorcheſter, cannot perhaps be reaſonably placed within that diviſion[22]. But there is little weight in this obſervation; for the archbiſhops of York did not claim juriſdiction here till archbiſhop Alfric's or Alfrid's time, who acceded A. D. 1023, and died A. D. 1050, which was after this ſee was united to Dorcheſter.

---

[1] And by Dr. Stukeley, who conceived that the old church above hill in the centre of the Roman city, called St. Paul's, was the church built by Paulinus, when he converted Blecca to the Chriſtian faith. He ſaw in many parts of it there had been more than one re-building of the church on the old foundation, and he fancied he diſcerned the very church built by Paulinus, which Bede ſaw in ruins, particularly of the north door where you deſcend into the church by ſix ſteps on the outſide: the capitals and nail-work without are of the ſtyle of thoſe times. Above it the nail-work was originally continued round the arch, now a more modern one, yet ſtill very antient, and this ſeems to have been the door by which Paulinus and Blecca uſed to enter the church: for oppoſite to it is that famous fragment of a very great Roman building, called the Mint wall, before deſcribed, probably the remains of the palace where Blecca reſided. Tradition ſays that it was a mint, and probably it has been uſed for that purpoſe ſince Blecca's time. This door is of the ſame kind of fabric as the north door of St. Peter's church, Stamford, now in being at a neighbouring houſe which was built in St. Wilfrid's time. Within the church were many very antient inſcriptions on tomb-ſtones of black marble in Roman characters. The Doctor obſerved that the older part of the walls on the outſide was made of very old cut ſtones, and of an old ſort of ſtones moſt likely the ruins of the firſt church. At the ſouth-eaſt corner on the outſide he ſaw a ſpring of an arch low in the ground, perhaps one of the original church. It is eaſy to conceive how the church came in later times to be called St. Paul's corruptly for Paulinus. This church is at preſent much dilapidated. The arch here mentioned remains, but none of the inſcriptions; nor does the idea ſeem well founded as to the preſent church.

[2] If this conjecture does not pleaſe, I would then ſubmit it to conſideration, whether this noble ruin, called the Mint wall, a draught of which by Buck may be ſeen in Camden, ed. 1789, vol. II. pl. III. fig. 15. p. 254. may not be the remains of ſome Britiſh or Roman church here.

[3] So Bede. Eathedus, Flor. Eadhed. Chron. Sax. p. 44. Eadheah. Text. Roff. in my copy. Hedda. Willis, vol. II. p. 41.

[4] Bede, p. 137.

[5] Id. IV. c. 12. Flor. Vig. p. 656.

[6] Higden, p. 199. Eadhed, in Chron. Sax. p. 44. is ſaid to be the firſt Biſhop.

[7] Inett. Some think he preſided at Rippon as biſhop. Johnſon, on Councils, 679. Willis, II. 42.

[8] Bede, IV. c. 12. and p. 137. Flor. Vig.

[9] Inett. Wharton, Ang. Sac. I. 424.

[10] Dr. Drake's tables at the end of his edition of M. Parker, from whom, and Dr. Willis, the dates are taken.

[11] Gibſon, in Camden, col. 572. The Annals of Dunſtaple ſay, p. 15. that Lewinus united Lincoln and Leiceſter, and not Lincoln and Sidnaceſter; but this is a miſtake. It is there alſo ſaid, that this was A. D. 964. whereas Leofwine was then dead. See Willis, II. 44.

[12] Willis, II. 42.

[13] Ibid. According to biſhop Godwin a vacancy enſued on the death of Ealdulf, and Brightred was not made biſhop till 872. But ſee Dr. Willis, l. c.

[14] Called alſo Edulf, Adulf, and by ſome Eadulf.

[15] Bede, IV. c. 12. See alſo his preface, and p. 97.

[16] Chron. Sax. p. 44. See alſo M. Weſtm. pp. 142. 148. The eulogium in Lambarde's Top. Dict. p. 348. Higden, V. c. 19. In the Textus Roff. they are called 'Epiſcopi Lindisfarorum."

[17] M. Weſtm. p. 142.

[18] Idem, p. 113.

[19] Higden, p. 199.

[20] This might be, though the ſee was not there; our prelates at this time being often ſeated in villages.

[21] Jeffr. Monmouth, p. 280. Higden, p. 198. Giraldus, in Ang. Sac. II. pp. 411. 415.

[22] See Gibſon in Camden, col. 572. cited below.

It is as clear again, that the ſee was placed at Sidnaceſter[1]: for Edulfus, Malmeſbury ſays, was biſhop of Sidnaceſter; and ſo the Polychronicon, “ quarta in Lindeſia apud Sidneſiam.” See alſo Florence of Worceſter, p. 686, and others.

But now the queſtion is, where and at what place this Sidnaceſter was? It is certainly a matter of ſome difficulty to determine this; for Matthew of Weſtminſter, many ages ago declared, ſpeaking of Ealdulfus and Ceolulfus, “ Hi autem epiſcopi ubi ſedem haberent cathedralem penitus ignoramus[2];” and Mr. Wharton accordingly ſays, “ Certus Sidneiæ ſitus hactenus eſt ignotus[3];” and ſo Mr. Camden, “ This is now ſo entirely gone, that neither ruins nor name are now in being.” And from hence, both Mr. Wharton, and ſome other antiquaries, have declined offering any conjectures about it, Dr. Smith contenting himſelf with ſaying, it was near Gainſborough[4]; Dr. Inett, in Lincolnſhire, near the Humber[5]; and Mr. Camden, in this part of the county[6]. Dr. Wilkins[7] and others are quite ſilent.

Some of our antiquaries, nevertheleſs, have pronounced deciſively concerning the ſituation of this place, as Dr. Willis and Dr. Stukeley, the former of whom queſtions not but it was at Stow, and the latter pretends to ſhew it was at Newark upon Trent. Both theſe opinions cannot be true, and perhaps neither of them. Certainty, however, is not to be arrived at in this caſe; and all that I propoſe to do in the ſequel is to recite the opinions hitherto delivered, with my objections; and, after that, to advance a conjecture, for I call it no more, of my own.

Mr. Johnſon thought it might be Hatfield; his words are, “ Sidnacheſter, or Hatfield, in Lincolnſhire (I think);” and below, “ Eadulf, biſhop of Hatfield, above called Syddenſis Ep.[8]” By Hatfield this learned man means not the place of that name in Hertfordſhire, but that in Yorkſhire, about 18 miles more northward than Stow, and nearer to York[9]. But the place we are ſeeking could never be Hatfield; for this is in Yorkſhire, and quite out of the limits of Lindſey. Mr. Johnſon, you obſerve, was himſelf ſenſible, though he names this place, that the ſite of Sidnaceſter muſt have been in Lincolnſhire.

Dr. Stukeley contends, as was ſaid, for Newark upon Trent. “ I have a diſcourſe by me,” ſays he, “ which I wrote three years ago [ſo ſaid, 1735], “ wherein I ſhew that Newark was a Roman town. “ That it is in reality the famous Sidnaceſter, the “ ancient epiſcopal ſee of the Saxons, ſo much ſought “ after by Antiquaries. I ſhew that its Roman name “ was Eltabona, that good part of the caſtle there “ is the remains of a Roman granary made for the “ reception of corn, for the very purpoſe we are “ upon[10].” The Doctor is here proſecuting a very wild notion, to wit, that the Carſdike was made for the conveyance of corn from the midland counties of Leiceſterſhire, Northamptonſhire, Huntingdonſhire, Bedfordſhire, Cambridgeſhire, Suffolk, Norfolk, Rutland, and Nottinghamſhire, to ſupply a few thouſand men that guarded the Prætentures, and cauſed the foundation of the city of York, in the place where it appears; as if the neighbourhood of the Prætenturæ was not ſufficient, in its produce of corn, to the ſupport of thoſe garriſons.

The objections I make to the Doctor's conjecture, in which he ſeems ſo peremptory, are theſe:

Firſt, that Newark is not, or ever was, in Lindſey. The bounds of that diſtrict have been noted above, and Newark is not at preſent either in the county or dioceſe of Lincoln.

Secondly, one would expect that Sidnaceſter, wherever it was, ſhould antiently have appertained to the biſhops of Lincoln. But it is plain theſe prelates had nothing to do at Newark till Robert Bloet's time[11]. Newark belonged till then to the foundation at Stow, to which it was given by earl Leofric and his counteſs Godiva[12]. The rectory belonged to the priory of St. Catharine near Lincoln[13].

Thirdly, the name Sidnaceſter ſhews evidently it is ſome place that was once a conſiderable Roman ſtation; for I preſume it is a general rule, that wherever a place is called Cheſter, or has thoſe ſyllables in the compoſition of its name, it was a Roman fort. Newark therefore cannot be the place in queſtion. Dr. Stukeley, indeed, pretends that Newark was a Roman town, which is very eaſy to aſſert, but difficult to prove; for though the Foſſe road lay here, as I ſuppoſe it might, to wit, from Leiceſter to Lincoln[14], yet Newark does not fall in with any of the ſtations as the Doctor has diſtributed them[15]. The Doctor thinks it was Eltabona, which is exceeding arbitrary and groundleſs; for as there is no ſuch name in Richard of Cirenceſter, nor in the Itinerary of Antoninus, it occurs no where but in the Geographer of Ravenna, in whom the names of places are ſo put down, that there is no appropriating this, and many others, with any tolerable certainty. Beſides, Eltabo is by that author placed in Britannia prima, whereas Newark is in Flavia, wherefore Newark and Eltabo, or Eltabona, as the doctor writes it, can never be the ſame place. Mr. Baxter interprets Eltabo of Padſtow[16]. But perhaps the Doctor had his Eltabona from Mr. Baxter, p. 122. who thus corrects Ravennas for Eltanori, or Eltavori, as it is in the Vatican MS. But to omit the boldneſs and uncertainty of this emendation of Mr. Baxter, the Doctor will ſtill be preſſed with the ſame difficulty, to wit, want of evidence that Eltabona is rightly placed at Newark. But it may be alledged, that this muſt be an antient place; for Newerch is a relative term, reſpecting ſome older work, and yet it had this name before the Norman Conqueſt, when Leofric and his counteſs made their donation to the houſe at Stow. All this is admitted; and it may be as ſafely admitted, that there are ſtill viſible veſtiges remaining of ſome former building where the preſent caſtle of Newark ſtands, as the Doctor aſſures us there is. This, I ſay, may be likewiſe very freely admitted; for there is certainly a reſpect in the name of Newark to ſome former work or caſtle; but then it will not follow that the more antient edifice was of Roman conſtruction, or that it had the nature of a granary, as the Doctor, to ſerve his hypotheſis, alledges. In ſhort, there is nothing that argues the remains at Newark to be Roman, but the Doctor's aſſertion; but allowing them to be ſuch, ſince it lies upon the Foſſe, yet theſe remains, or any thing elſe that is alledged, will not prove Newark to have been Sidnaceſter, becauſe, as I take it, Sidnaceſter was really a ſtation, and of conſequence.

The next opinion to be canvaſſed is of thoſe who are for ſettling Sidnaceſter at Stow. Browne Willis writes, “ Biſhop Alexander, as he was careful, anno 1140, to found an abbey at Dorcheſter, where an epiſcopal ſee had been, ſo he might, probably, in memory of Sidnaceſter biſhoprick (which I queſtion not but was at Stow), eſtabliſh and ſettle an archdeacon here about the aforeſaid year 1140[17].” But the moſt excellent Dr. Gibſon, biſhop of Lincoln, and for that reaſon, as well as others, a competent judge, has deduced the reaſons in favour of Stow ſo fully in his edition of Camden, that from thence it may be worth while to tranſcribe them. “ They who have been “ for ſettling it [Sidnaceſter] at Stow, have argued “ thus: it was by Leofwin united to Dorcheſter, as that “ of Leiceſter had been before. The ſixth from Leofwin was Eadnoth—this was that Eadnoth who built “ the church of Our Lady in Stow, and died anno “ 1050. Now, where can we imagine a biſhop of “ Sidnaceſter ſhould ſo probably build a church as at “ Sidnaceſter? or whence would he ſooner take his “ pattern or platform, than from his own cathedral “ of Dorcheſter? between which, and that of Stow, “ there is a very near reſemblance; and if they have “ been ſince re-built, we may probably conclude, “ that the ſame form notwithſtanding was ſtill “ kept. The ſee of Legeceſter, or Leiceſter, is “ concluded to have been where St. Margaret's now “ ſtands; and as that is a peculiar, a prebend, “ and an archdeaconry, ſo is Stow too. Beſides, “ the preſent privileges of this place are greater than “ any hereabouts, except Lincoln; and they have “ formerly exceeded even that. For that it was famous before Lincoln was a biſhop's ſee, is beyond “ diſpute; and it is a common notion in thoſe parts, “ both of learned and unlearned, that Stow was the “ mother church to Lincoln. The ſteeple of the “ church (though large) has been much greater than it “ is. And Alfrid Puttock [Putta], archbiſhop of York, “ anno 1023, when he gave two great bells to Beverley ſteeple, which he had built, and two others “ of the ſame mould to Southwell, beſtowed two “ upon this Stow. Here is likewiſe a place as yet “ called Gallow Dale, ſuppoſed to have been the “ place of execution for malefactors; which (among “ other marks of antiquity) though it has no relation “ to the affairs of the church[1], is yet a teſtimony of “ the eminence of the place. But, they own, there “ is one thing that lies in their way; for, in the “ Lives of the Biſhops of Lincoln[2] written by Giraldus, it is ſaid, that Remigius, removing his ſee “ to Lincoln, procured all Lindeſie to be taken from “ the juriſdiction of the archbiſhop of York, and “ added to that of Canterbury. And if all Lindſey “ belonged to the archbiſhop of York till Remigius's “ time (who lived ſince the Conqueſt), the old Sidnaceſter, united afterwards to Dorcheſter, perhaps “ cannot be placed ſo reaſonably within that diviſion[3].”

---

[1] This name is variouſly written, but all comes to the ſame. Sydney, Eulogium; Sidnaceſtrenſis. Malmſb. p. 198. Mr. Lambarde is miſtaken in ſaying Malmeſbury does not mention it. Sitnaceſtrenſis, Monaſticon, III. 217. Siddenſis civitas. Johnſon's Canons, a. 803. from Sir H. Spelman. Sideneia. Higden, V. c. 19. Sindatenſis. Chron. Petr. p. 9. by a tranſpoſition of the letters.

[2] M. Weſtm. p. 142.

[3] Wharton, Ang. Sac. I. 424.

[4] Smith, ad Bedam, p. 155.

[5] Inett, I. 90.

[6] Brit. col. 571.

[7] Wilkins, Concil. I. 51.

[8] Johnſon's Canons, p. 803.

[9] Willis, II. 42.

[10] Dr. Stukeley, in Mr. Drake's Eboracum, p. 39.

[11] Tanner's Notitia, p. 150.

[12] Ibid. Dugd. Baron. I. 10. Thoroton. Willis, II. 45.

[13] Thoroton, p. 197.

[14] See the XIVth Iter in Richard of Cirenceſter.

[15] Ibid.

[16] Baxter's Gloſſ. p. 121.

[17] Willis's Cathedrals, I. pp. 383. 384. and II. pp. 41. 42. 45.

Firſt, as to Willis; all he offers in ſupport of his conjecture, though expreſſed with a degree of confidence, is, that Stow gives name to an archdeaconry, probably, not certainly, erected by Alexander biſhop of Lincoln, the founder of a religious houſe at Dorcheſter, where the ſee of Lincoln once was. I ſay, not certainly, for Willis acknowledges he hears nothing of any archdeacon at Stow till 70 years after. But let the archdeaconry be erected by Alexander, if you pleaſe, it will not follow from thence that Stow was Sidnaceſter, becauſe the archdeaconry might be placed here for other reaſons; namely, becauſe there had been a religious houſe[4] here formerly, &c.[5]

I conſider next what is urged by biſhop Gibſon. 1ſt, Eadnoth biſhop of Dorcheſter built here. There might be various reaſons for his chuſing to build at Stow: he might be born there, for what we know. However, it does not at all follow, that Sidnaceſter was the ſame place as Stow. The reſemblance of the churches of Dorcheſter and Stow proves nothing more but that Eadnoth built at the latter place, which is admitted; it was very natural for the biſhop to follow the pattern of his own church in building a new one: but we may depend upon it, the fabric of the old church at Sidnaceſter was but a ſmall and mean one, like the firſt church at Lichfield, which is deſcribed by William Malmeſbury to be “ Eccleſia anguſto ſitu, antiquorum virorum mediocritatem & abſtinentiam præferens[6].” The preſent church of Stow is a large building, in the form of a croſs, and was built by Remigius[7].

2. Leiceſter is a peculiar, prebend, and archdeaconry; and ſo is Stow. But this pre-eminence of Stow might entirely be owing to biſhop Eadnoth's taking ſo much notice of the place, whatever was the motive for his ſo doing. The ſame may be ſaid as to the ſingular privileges of the place, ſome of which too might be owing to the religious houſe here, and afterwards to the biſhop's palace.

3. It was famous before Lincoln was a biſhop's ſee. There is little in this, Stow being a religious foundation in the Saxon times, Eadnoth chuſing to build there, and Lincoln not becoming the ſeat of the dioceſe till after the Norman Conqueſt.

4. The common notion is, that Stow was the mother church to Lincoln. Vulgar notions are ſeldom to be relied on, and in the preſent caſe there is no reaſon in the world for thinking that Lincoln ever depended upon Stow.

5. The largeneſs of the ſteeple is urged. No doubt it was proportioned to the church, which, being built by the biſhop of the dioceſe, would, in all probability, be large. The Normans excelled in architecture[8].

6. Alfrid Putta, archbiſhop of York, gave two bells to this place at the ſame time that he gave two to Beverley, and the ſame number to Southwell. This prelate claimed Lindſey; and Stow at this time was probably the largeſt church in Lindſey, as Southwell was in Nottinghamſhire. The church at Sidnaceſter was long before demoliſhed.

Biſhop Gibſon, though in ſome place he ſeems to declare for Stow[9], is here very far from being deciſive; but, as a prudent man would do, contents himſelf with offering the reaſons urged by others in favour of that opinion. He is ſo candid as to report an objection againſt that notion, without attempting a reply to it; nay, he even names, afterwards, ſome other places that ſeemed to him to have a claim. The arguments he has produced are all here replied to; and I ſhall now proceed to mention the objections that lie againſt the pretenſions formed in favour of Stow.

Firſt, it was ſo obvious to fix on Stow, according to the favourable pretences above mentioned, that, if it had been the place, Matthew of Weſtminſter, and others, could never have been ſo much at a loſs about it. This, I think, highly material. The preeminence, and the various privileges of Stow, were at leaſt as well known in Matthew's time as they are now, and yet the true ſite of Sidnaceſter was then certainly unknown.

2. This place by no means anſwers to the idea we have of a Cheſter, or Caſtra; for though in the pariſh of Stow there is a place called Stretton, from the old cauſey running that way, as if one ſhould ſay the ſtreet-town[10], and though the road from Lincoln to Agelocum lay through this place[11], yet this does not amount to a ſtation. Biſhop Gibſon ſeems to be ſo thoroughly aware of the force of this objection, that he (ſo far is he from declaring himſelf in favour of Stow) proceeds to mention ſome places poſſeſſed of this mark, whoſe pretenſions we muſt now examine.

He obſerves, “ there is alſo another place that “ may probably enough be thought of; namely, the “ hills above Ley and Gainſborough, where have “ been taken up many Roman urns, and many coins “ of thoſe emperors; for the addition of Cheſter to “ the name makes it highly probable, that Sidnaceſter, wherever it may have been, was originally

---

[1] Q. this: for I think the biſhops of Norwich had a gallows and jus patibuli.

[2] Wharton, Ang. Sac. II. 411. 415. 417.

[3] Gibſon, in Camden, col. 572. This obj. though is of no weight, for ſee it removed above.

[4] Tanner's Notitia, p. 150.

[5] See the quotation from biſhop Gibſon above.

[6] W. Malmeſb. p. 288.

[7] Camden, col. 571.

[8] This church, as was noted above, was built by Remigius.

[9] Camden, col. 571.

[10] Gibſon, in Camden, col. 571. They pronounce it now Sturton.

[11] Idem, Ibid.

“ a ſtation of the Romans. The Caſtle-hill, eaſtward from Gainſborough church, is ſurrounded with entrenchments, containing (as is ſaid) more than an hundred acres[1].”

It is obſervable, that Dr. Smith, as mentioned above, thought Sidnaceſter might be near Gainſborough; and the biſhop, as it appears, inclines here to this place, and is certainly in the right in looking out for ſome conſpicuous Roman ſtation. Certainly, this place has ſome inviting circumſtances; it is not only in Lindſey, but has the appearance of a ſtation; but then, as it is not certainly known to be ſuch, as having no name in the books, it may be adviſeable to look elſewhere. And upon this bottom I would propoſe it to conſideration, whether Kirton may not rather be the place.

In medium is in the heart of Lindſey, properly ſo called, and it was an undoubted Roman ſtation of eminence, being nearly in the mid-way between Lincoln and Ad Abum, for which reaſon it was termed In medium[2]. Now, Dr. Stukeley himſelf agrees to fix the ſtation of In medium at Kirkton[3]. The name has a manifeſt reference to a church, which is uſually pronounced Kirk in the names of places in the northern parts, and particularly in Lincolnſhire, where this word enters the compoſition of a large number of names[4]. This now is wanting to the other marks at Gainſborough, and yet ſeems to be a very eſſential one. It is extremely natural to ſuppoſe, that when Sidnaceſter, which I preſume might be the firſt Saxon name given to this ſtation, was made a ſee, and a church was built there, it would by degrees acquire the name of Kirkton, or the church-town. It is not neceſſary in this caſe to ſuppoſe the church was of a grand or extraordinary ſtructure, ſince this being at the firſt the only church in thoſe parts, the place would of courſe obtain a name from it. This particular of the preſent name of this place is of conſequence, for Ad Abum[5], being in Lindſey, and poſſeſſed alſo of the other circumſtance of being a Roman ſtation, as appears from Richard of Cirenceſter, might otherwiſe, in the opinion of ſome, bid fair for being the place in queſtion. And the ſame might be alledged in favour of Horncaſtle, and thoſe other places mentioned by biſhop Gibſon above[6]; but there being ſo plain a reference to a principal church, in the name of Kirkton, this ſeems to give it the preference to all the reſt. Wherefore I go on to obſerve, that the ſee being united, or rather ſwallowed up in Dorcheſter, and biſhop Eadnoth afterwards building at Stow; Remigius alſo acquiring the poſſeſſion of that place, re-building the church, and his ſucceſſors at Lincoln having a palace there; all theſe things conſpired to eclipſe, and to deface the memory of Kirkton, and its once flouriſhing ſtate, which affords us a very plauſible account, how it came to paſs, that the ſituation of Sidnaceſter came to be loſt ſo early, and to be ſo totally unknown when Matthew of Weſtminſter wrote, and conſequently why the ſite of it at this day is ſo extremely uncertain. The obſcurity of Kirkton in the later ages, no doubt, has been the reaſon why certain modern authors have been ſo prone, in inveſtigating the poſition of this place, to caſt their eyes upon Stow; and yet they ought, had they duly conſidered it, to have diſregarded Stow on account of its conſpicuouſneſs in the Poſt-Normannic times, this being a weighty argument, if well attended to, why that could not be the place[7].

Upon the removal, or the union of this ſee with that of Dorcheſter in Leofwin's time, Sidnaceſter, no doubt, began to decline, and the obſcurity of it after that, which was probably the caſe with it long before the æra of the Norman Conqueſt, I conceive to be the true reaſon that the place was ſo difficult to be diſcovered. The preſent church at Kirkton, no doubt, has been re-built ſince the tranſmigration of the ſee, and I ſuppoſe ſince the Conqueſt; ſo that the later writers even wanted the appearance of antiquity, or any venerable veſtiges of the old church, to ſerve them as a guide[8]. However, the preſent obſcurity of Kirkton, veiled, as it were, by its modern name, I look upon to be a good argument, when ſo rationally accounted for, for its being the place in queſtion. Wherefore, to cloſe the matter, and to ſum up all in one word, this place ſeems to have all the properties neceſſary, and I accordingly ſubmit its claim to the candid deciſion of the reader.

N° II. The Office of High Steward of England[9]. (See p. 16.)

“ THE ſeneſchaleye, or high ſtewardſhip of England, belongeth unto the earldom of Leiceſter, and of old tyme did thereunto appertayne; and it is to be underſtood that it is his office, under and immediately after the king, to overſee and govern the whole kingdom of England, and all the officers of juſtice within the ſaid kingdome, in tymes boeth of peace and war, in manner following:

“ The manner how and when the lord high ſteward ought to exerciſe his office by duty and the oath of fealty is ſuch: whenever man or woman ſhall come into the king's court, whatſoever court it be, and poſſibly unto the king himſelf, to ſeek for redreſs againſt injury done unto them, and he or ſhe not being able in due ſeaſon to obteyne remedy, then the high ſteward of England ought, and is bound to receive their petitions and complaynts, and to keepe them until the next parliament thereafter to be holden, and to aſſign unto ſuch complaynants, if he think fit, a day wherein they may exhibit and proſecute their petitions; and in full parliament, in the preſence of the king, to reprehend or blame that officer, or thoſe officers, whoever they bee, that ſoe have fayled in doing of juſtice, and thoſe thereof to call to account, unto whom in ſuch caſes every one throughout the kingdome is bound to anſwer, the king only except. If the chancellour of England have fayled of making original remedy and amends, and the juſtices, treaſurers, barons, and chamberlaines of the exchequer, ſteward of the king's houſe, eſcheatours, coroners, ſheriffes, clearkes, bayliffes, and other officers, of what place or records ſoever they be, in their proceſſes, judgments, executions of judgments, and juſtice to be made to the favour of one, and loſs of the other party, for gifts, bribes, or other procurement, ſhall fayle or give over at the leaſt ways; if any juſticiar, when as both parties pleading before them ſhall ſtand in judgment, ſhall by ſuch falſe procurements deferr judgment, contrary to juſtice, and the laws and cuſtomes of the land; if then the chancellour of England, or any other of the king's officers, in ſuch caſe, ſhall alleadge in parliament, and ſay for their excuſe, that in that caſe ſuch hardneſs and doubtfullneſs of the law and right did ariſe when the ſame was heard and proponed before them, that neither he nor the court of chancery, or any other courts wherein he is an officer, were able or knew how to attaine unto the ſafe determination of the right; then ſhall he declare and open the ſame ambiguity and doubt in parliament; if then it be found that the law was doubtful in that caſe, the chancellour or other officers ſhall be held accuſed; and then ſhall the high ſteward of England, togeather with the conſtable of England, in the preſence of the king, and other of the parliament, make choice of five and twenty perſons more, more or leſſe, according as the caſe ſhall require, togeather with ſuch other caſes in the parliament rehearſed; amongſt whom ſhall be earles, barons, knights of the ſhire, citizens, and burgeſſes, who there ſhall ordaine, agree upon, and eſtabliſh a remedye by law in all ſuch caſes, for ever after to endure. And thoſe laws ſhall be recited, written and allowed in full parliament, and ſealed with the great ſeal, and delivered forth to all places of law and juſtice from thenceforward to be holden for laws, and in public places where it ſhall be thought expedient they ſhall be proclaimed and divulged, whereas all other common laws, and chiefly ſtatute laws, throughout the whole kingdom, ought to be publickly proclaymed.

---

[1] Idem. col. 572.

[2] Richard of Cirenceſter, p. 61.

[3] Some, perhaps, from what they read in Mr. Horſeley, p. 406. about Hebberſtow, may incline to think the ſtation called In medium might rather be there; but this is out of diſtance, as being near 20 Roman miles, inſtead of 15, from Lincoln.

[4] There is a wapentake of the name of Kirton in Holland, and in that wapentake a village called Kirton, as alſo another called Kirton-Holme. There is alſo in this county, Kirkſeeke, Kirkeſteed, Kirmington, Kirmond, and ſeveral Kirkbys. See Sir H. Spelman's Villare.

[5] This is the other ſtation mentioned by Richard as being in Lindſey at the Humber on the South ſide of it, and is eſteemed by Dr. Stukeley to be Wintringham. Dr. Gale, in his map, ſeems to agree with him; as alſo Mr. Horſeley, and Mr. de la Pryme. See Horſeley, p. 405.

[6] Caſtor, and Horncaſtle, and Gainſborough, are alſo places too conſpicuous to be thought of; and ſo is Newark.

[7] When Matthew of Weſtminſter wrote, Stow was a place of note and eminence; and yet he overlooked it, declaring, he knew not where the biſhops of Lindſey had their ſee. From whence it is very plain he thought it was not at Stow, but elſewhere, and in ſome more obſcure place.

[8] Kirton, however, belonged to the church of Lincoln from the firſt, and was appropriated to the ſubdean, who is patron of that vicarage.

[9] From a paper concerning it by an anonymous writer, printed in Hearne's Curious Diſcourſes, vol. II. p. 54—57. 2d edit. where are eſſays on the ſame ſubject by Sir Robert Cotton, Meſſrs Townſend, Holland, Thynne, Tate, Davis, Camden, and Agarde. In the Britiſh Muſeum, Cott. MSS. Nero D. VIII. is a Latin copy of this eſſay; which ſeems to have been written about the time of Henry VI. and is much damaged and imperfect.

"If it ſo happen that there was in ſuch like caſe either common law or ſtatute law, ſoe that the king's ſteward and others of the parliament may underſtand and perceive that ſuch defaults and delays in proceſſes and judgments do happen by ſuch officers, when as the deceit and malice of ſuch officers hath openly and often before been apparent, then ſhall he be removed out of his office, and ſome other officer fit ſhall be put in his place. If they ſhall preſume againſt the juſtices and officers, or by excuſing themſelves ſhall ſay that they have not heretofore known themſelves, and the courts whereby they are in ſuch caſes to be deliberate and take adviſement, then ſhall they be admoniſhed by the ſteward on the behalf of the king and parliament, to ſtudy and ſearch better the common laws, that noe ſuch ignorance nor negligence be found in them in the like caſes afterwards. If they ſhall happen to offend in the like againe, they then ſhall be put out of their offices, and other diſcreter and more diligent perſons ſhall, by the king and his council, be appointed in their roomes.

"Likewiſe it is the ſteward's office (if the king have evil councellours about him that adviſe him to doe things tending openly and publickly to his diſhonour, or to the diſinheriting, and public hurt of his people) for the ſteward of England, taking with him the conſtable and other great eſtates, and others of the commonalty, to ſend to ſuch a counſellour, forbidding him in ſuch ſort to leade and counſel the king, and of ſuch his evil counſel he ſhall make rehearſall, enjoyning him to depart from the king's preſence, and longer not to abide with him to his diſhonour, and the public hurt as is aforeſaid; which if he ſhall not doe, they ſhall ſend unto the king to remove him from him, and to give no more ear unto his councell, for that amongſt the people he is eſteemed to be an evill councellour between the king and his ſubjects. If hereupon the king do not put him away, againe and often ſhall they ſend, as well unto the king as unto him: if at the laſt neither the king nor ſuch councellours of his have regard unto the meſſages and requeſts made unto them, but ſhall refuſe to doe thereafter, then, for the weale publick, it is lawfull for the ſteward, conſtable of England, noblemen, and others of the communaltye of the realme, with banner in the king's name diſplayed, to apprehend ſuch councellour, as a common enemy to the king and the realme, to commit his body to ward until the next parliament, and in the mean time to ſeyze on all goods, lands, and poſſeſſions, till judgment be pronounced of him by advice of the whole kingdom in parliament, as it happened unto Godwyn the earle of Kent, in the days of king Edward the Confeſſour, next predeceſſour to William duke of Normandy, conqueror of England, who, for ſuch evil acts and councells of his, was deprived of his earldome, which eſcheated to the aforeſaid king: notwithſtanding, at the king's ſuite, and by the noblemen's permiſſion, Godwin came again to England, and did after forfeit as before. And it has happened likewiſe to Hubert de Burgh, earle of Kent, in the tyme of kinge Henry III. that was ſon of king John, who for his evill deeds and bad counceil was apprehended, and by the high ſeneſchall and other peers deprived of his earldome by the allowance and conſent of the whole parliament. So likewiſe did it befall unto Pierce of Gaveſton, who in the days of king Edward, the ſon of king Henry, for ſuch his evil acts and councells, was baniſhed out of all the king of England's dominions, as well on this ſide as beyond the ſeas, which Pierce afterwards by the king's means, and the permiſſion of the nobility, returned to England and had of the king's guift the earldome of Cornwall; but was after that, for his evil deeds and councell, baniſhed the realme againe by the nobles and commons, and had his ſaid earledome eſcheated unto the king: but he returned afterwards without the noblemen's conſent and leave, and did reſort and aſſociate himſelf to the king, as before tyme he had done; which when the high ſteward, conſtable, and other of the nobility underſtood, hee was by them apprehended and beheaded att Blacklow in Warwickſhire, as a public enemy to the king and the realme. Soe have you as much as in the ſayd old booke is to be ſeene touching the office of high ſteward [1]."

High Stewards of England, from the Time of Edward the Confeſſor to the preſent Reign.

1. Haraldus, high ſteward in 1060.
2. Houelin.
3. Wiliam Fitz Oſbern, earl of Hereford, 1067.
4. Henry Beauclerc, ſon to the Conqueror, afterward king Henry I. 1072.
5. Hugh de Grentemaiſnell, baron of Hinckley, 1072.
6. Yvo de Grentemaiſnell, baron of Hinckley.
7. Hugh de Grentemaiſnell, baron of Hinckley.
8. Robert Blanchmains, earl of Leiceſter and lord of Hinckley, 1168.
9. Robert Fitz-Parnell, earl of Leiceſter, 1191.
10. Simon de Montfort, earl of Leiceſter, &c. 1206.
11. Simon II, jun. earl of Leiceſter, &c. 1237.
12. Edmund Crouchback, earl of Lancaſter, Leiceſter, and Derby, and lord of Hinckley, 1267.
13. Thomas earl of Lancaſter, &c. 1296.
14. Henry duke of Lancaſter, &c. 1345.
15. William of Bavaria, earl of Leiceſter, 1345.
16. John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaſter, earl of Leiceſter, Lincoln, and Derby, conſtable of France, and lord of Hinckley, 1361.

---

[1] Lord Chief Juſtice Coke's account of this high office, eſſentially differing from that here quoted, is given at large, and freely controverted, in a tract on "The Lord High Steward of England," printed in 8vo, 1776. "Great writers," ſays the ingenious author of this pamphlet, "frequently betray the dulneſs of common minds, in works looked up to by the world with admiration and awe."

17. Henry duke of Lancaſter, &c. afterwards king of England by the title of Henry IV. 1399.

18. Henry duke of Lancaſter, &c. (afterwards king Henry V.) was appointed lord high ſteward; till, falling into diſgrace for ſtriking the chief juſtice, the office was conferred on his next brother.

19. Thomas Plantagenet, duke of Clarence, who was ſlain at the battle of Bangy in France, 1421.

From this period the kings of England, as ſucceſſive lords of Hinckley, have granted this important office of lord high ſteward to particular noblemen only pro hac vice.

High Stewards of England, who have been appointed by Royal Commiſſion for the Trial of Peers, with the Names of the Peers tried by them, and their Crimes and Sentences.

Note. Thoſe Peers to whoſe Names this Mark [†] is prefixed, ſuffered Death; thoſe that have this Mark [*] were condemned, but pardoned.

HIGH STEWARDS.	PEERS TRIED.
Edward Courtney, earl of Devonſhire.	† John Holland, earl of Huntingdon, for high treaſon, 1 Henry IV.
Humphrey duke of Glouceſter.	Thomas Courtney, earl of Devon, for high treaſon, 37 Hen. VI. Acquitted.
John Vere, earl of Oxford.	† John Tiptoft, earl of Worceſter, for high treaſon, 10 Edw. IV. † Edw. Plantagenet, e. of Warwick, for high treaſon, 15 Nov. 15 H. VII.
Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk.	† Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, for high treaſon, 13 Henry VIII. 1521. Lord Dacres, for high treaſon, 9 July, 26 Henry VIII. Acquitted.
Thomas lord Audley, chancellor of England.	† Edward Courtney, marquis of Exeter, and * Gertrude his wife, for high treaſon, 30 Hen. VIII.
William Paulett, marquis of Wincheſter, high treaſurer of England.	† Edward Seymour, duke of Somerſet, for high treaſon and felony, 1 Dec. 5 Edw. VI.
Henry Fitz Alan, earl of Arundel.	† Henry Grey, duke of Suffolk, for high treaſon, 17 Feb. 1 Mary.
Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk.	† John Dudley, duke of Northumberland, for high treaſon, 18 Aug. 1 Mary. † William Parr, marquis of Northampton, for high treaſon. † John Dudley, earl of Warwick, ſon of the duke, for high treaſon, 18 Aug. 1 Mary.
George Talbot, earl of Shrewſbury.	† Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk, for high treaſon, 16 Jan. 14 Eliz.
Henry Stanley, earl of Derby.	Philip Howard, earl of Arundel, for high treaſon, 18 April, 32 Elizab. Guilty, but died in priſon.
Thomas lord Buckhurſt, high treaſurer.	† Rober Devereux, earl of Eſſex; and * Hen. Wriotheſley, e. of Southampton, for high treaſon, 19 Feb. 43 Eliz.
Thomas Egerton, lord Elleſmere, chancellor of England.	* Lady Frances Carr, counteſs of Somerſet, 24 May, 14 James I. 1616. * Robert Carr, earl of Somerſet, 25 May, 14 Ja. I. 1616; both for murder
Lord Coventry, keeper of the great ſeal.	† Mervin lord Audley, earl of Caſtlehaven, for aiding in a rape on his own wife, and other heinous crimes, 27 April, 7 Charles I. 1631.
Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel.	† Thomas Wentworth, earl of Strafford, for high treaſon, 24 March, 16 Charles I. 1641.
Edward Hyde, earl of Clarendon, chancellor of England.	Thomas Lord Morley, for murder, 30 April, 18 Charles II. 1666. Manſlaughter.
Heneage lord Finch, chancellor of England.	Philip Herbert, earl of Pembroke, for murder, 4 April, 30 Charles II. 1678. Manſlaughter. Charles lord Cornwallis, for murder, 31 Charles II. 1679. Not guilty. † William viſcount Stafford, for high treaſon, 30 Nov. 32 Charles II. 1680.
Lord chancellor Jefferies.	† Henry lord Delamere, for high treaſon, 1 James II. 1685. Not guilty.
Thomas D'Anvers, marquis of Carmarthen, preſident of the council. The great ſeal was in commiſſion.	Charles lord Mohun, for murder, 31 Jan. 4 Will. and Mary, 1692. Not guilty.
John lord Somers, chancellor of England.	Edward earl of Warwick, for murder, 28 March, 11 William and Mary, 1699. Manſlaughter. Charles lord Mohun, for murder, 29 March, 11 William and Mary, 1699. Not guilty.
William lord Cowper, chancellor of Great Britain.	† James earl of Derwentwater: * William lord Widdrington: † William earl of Nithiſdale: * Robert earl of Carnſath: † William viſcount Kenmure: * William lord Nairn; all for high treaſon, 9 Feb. 2 George I. 1715-6. George earl of Wintoun; for high treaſon, 15 March, 2 George I. 1715-16. Guilty; but made his eſcape.
Philip earl of Hardwicke, lord chancellor of Great Britain.	† William earl of Kilmarnock: * George earl of Cromartie. † Arthur lord Balmerino: all for high treaſon, 9 March, 21 George II. † Simon lord Lovat, for high treaſon, 9 March, 21 George II.
Robert lord Henley, lord chancellor of Great Britain.	† Lawrence earl Ferrers, for murder, 16 April, 33 George II.
Robert earl of Northington, ld chancellor of Gr. Britain.	William lord Byron, 16 April, 5 George III. for murder. Manſlaughter.
Henry earl of Bathurſt, lord chancellor of Great Britain.	Elizabeth dutcheſs of Kingſton, for bigamy, 15 April, 1776. Guilty; but claimed, and was allowed, the benefit of clergy.

High Stewards at Coronations.

Thomas of Lancaſter, aſſiſted by Thomas earl of Worceſter.	Henry IV. 13 October, 1399.
Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick.	Henry V. 9 April, 1413.
Thomas duke of Clarence.	Catharine his queen, 14 Feb. 1421.
Humphrey duke of Glouceſter.	Henry VI. 6 November, 1429.
Richard earl of Warwick.	Edward IV. 28 June, 1461.
(Nothing appears on the ſubject.)	Edward V. 1483.
John duke of Norfolk.	Richard III. 5 July, 1483,
Peter Courtney, biſhop of Exeter. Jaſper earl of Pembroke. John Earl of Oxford. John earl of Nottingham. Thomas lord Stanley. John lord Fitzwater, ſteward of the houſhold. Robert Morton, keeper of the rolls. Thomas Brian, knight, chief juſtice of the King's Bench. Humphry Starkey, chief baron of the Exchequer. Richard Croft, knight, treaſurer of the houſhold.	Commiſſioners at the Coronation of Henry VII. 30 October, 1485.
Jaſper duke of Bedford. John earl of Oxford, great chamberlain of England. Thomas earl of Derby. William earl of Nottingham. John Radcliff, knight. John Sulyard, knight, juſtice of the Common Pleas. John Haugh, juſtice of the King's Bench.	Commiſſioners at the coronation of Elizabeth, wife of Henry VII. 25 November, 3 Henry VII.
Thomas Earl of Surrey, treaſurer of England. John Earl of Oxford. Sir John Fineux, chief juſtice of the Common Pleas. Sir Thomas Englefield, knight, &c.	Commiſſioners at the coronation of Henry VIII. 24 June, 1509.
John lord Ruſſel.	Edward VI. 20 February, 1547.
Edward earl of Derby.	Mary, 1 October, 1553.
Henry earl of Arundel.	Elizabeth, 15 January, 1559.
Charles earl of Nottingham.	James I. 24 July, 1605.
Sir Thomas Coventry, lord keeper. James lord Ley, high treaſurer. Edward earl of Worceſter, keeper of the privy ſeal. Thomas earl of Arundel and Surrey, earl marſhal of England. William earl of Pembroke, lord chamberlain of the houſhold. Edward earl of Dorſet. Sir Randolph Crew, chief juſtice of the Common Pleas.	Commiſſioners at the coronation of Charles I. 2 February, 1625.
James duke of Ormond.	Charles II. 23 April, 1661. James II. 23 April, 1685.
William duke of Devonſhire.	William and Mary, 11 April, 1689. Anne, 23 April, 1702.
Charles duke of Grafton.	George I. 20 October, 1714.
Lionel duke of Dorſet.	George II. 11 October, 1727.
William earl of Talbot.	George III. 22 September, 1762.

N° III. The Abbey of LIRA, and its Poſſeſſions in this Kingdom. See p. 16.

LIRA, or LYRA, is a Benedictine abbey, in a town of the ſame name, in the dioceſe of Evreux, on the river Rille in Normandy, founded about the year 1045, and taxed on the apoſtolical chamber at 300 florins of gold for annates. Its annual income is 20090 livres, with a right of preſenting to 30 churches. William Fitz Oſbern, kinſman to duke William, afterwards king of England, a powerful man, and commendable for his endowments both of body and mind, founded two monaſteries in honour of the bleſſed Virgin Mary; the one at Lira, in which he afterwards buried Adelina, the daughter of Roger de Toene, his wife; and the other at Cormeille, where he was himſelf interred. This William was alſo earl of Hereford, allied to the dukes of Normandy both by father and mother; for his father Oſbern was ſon to Herfaſt, brother to the counteſs Gunnora, wife to Richard the firſt duke of Normandy; and his mother was the daughter of Rodolph earl of Ivroi, which Rodolph was brother, by the mother's ſide, to the above-named duke Richard.

Thomas Becket, archbiſhop of Canterbury, reſided at Lira for ſome time.

This abbey was poſſeſſed of ſix churches (among the reſt that of Cariſbrooke), and ſome manors and lands in the Iſle of Wight[1].

Abbatia S̄ MARIÆ de Lire hт̄ in inſula de Wit . VI . æccłas.
quibꝫ ꝑtin̄ . II . hidæ 7 II . virḡ t̄ræ 7 dim̄ . 7 in pluribꝫ ꝯ̄ hn̄t
. v . uiłłos qui ten̄ . I . hiđ 7 dim̄ . q̄rtā parť uni v̄ min Decimas hn̄t de omibꝫ redditionibꝫ regis . Toť qđ hť aꝑpciať xx . lib̄ . Geld redd de . II . hiđ 7 dim̄ v̄ t̄ræ.

---

[1] Tanner, p. 159. Domeſday, HANTESCHIRE.

A grant or releaſe from the abbey at Lira, to the abbey of Quarere in the Iſle of Wight, of tithes there, in Arreton, Haſeley, Luvecomb, Tidlingdham, and Scaldecumb, is printed in Madox[1].

The priories of Hinckley and Minting in Leiceſterſhire were cells to this abbey. The author of Neuſtria Pia, beſides theſe two, names the monaſtery of Lankywan in Wales; but this is a miſtake; for the Monaſticon has no ſuch monaſtery; but takes notice[2] that the manor and pariſh church of Languian in Monmouthſhire (where, according to Tanner[3], was a cell of black monks) belonged to the abbey of Lira.

The manor of Ocley, or Lyre Ocle, in Herefordſhire, belonged to this abbey[4].

After the Conqueſt, one or more of the churches in the town of Wareham in Dorſetſhire, with ſome lands in the neighbourhood, being given by Robert Bellomont earl of Leiceſter, temp. Henry I. to the abbat and convent of Lira in Normandy, they ſent over and ſettled here a cell of their own Benedictine monks, which was dedicated to the Virgin Mary[5].

Henry II. by charter ſans date, confirmed to this abbey the churches of Wareham, and one hide of land in Wareham of the gift of William de Warmuta, and one ounce of gold in præpoſiturâ de Warham[6]. They had alſo the churches of St. Martin, St. Michael, St. Peter, and St. Mary there[7].

Abbots of Lira;

from Neuſtria Pia, pp. 538—540.

1. Robert, a monk of that place; ſaid to have been an anchoret in the vale of Chalet, a mile from thence, and to have been admoniſhed from Heaven, as he was hunting a ſtag, to procure the founding of a monaſtery there.

2. Erfaſt, or Herphaſt,
3. Berno,
4. Enard,
5. Hildebert,

} monks of St. Evroul.

6. Giſlebert, Guillebert, or Gilbert, monk of the ſame place; governed almoſt ten years, much improved the monaſtery, and died about 1100.

7. William, monk of the ſame place.

8. Ralph, monk of Bec, reformed the order.

9. Helder, Hilder, or Hildier, monk of St. Evroul. He obtained from the archbiſhop of Rouen, 1145, a confirmation of all their poſſeſſions.

10. William the ſecond, monk of the ſame place.

11. Oſbert, or Oſbern, brother to the former, had all the poſſeſſions of the abbey confirmed by pope Alexander III. in 1171. He died in 1177.

12. Walter, brother to the laſt mentioned; a thing ſcarcely ever known, that three brothers ſhould ſucceed each other in the government of the ſame church, as theſe did. In his time, in 1188, the monaſtery was burnt.

13. William III. whoſe name occurs in deeds of 1206 and 1214.

14. Geffry, choſen in 1221, when, his predeceſſor being dead, the monks immediately ſent to Philip Auguſtus III, king of France, for his licence to chooſe an abbat, which he graciouſly granted, and Geffry was accordingly elected.

15. John de Almeneſchis occurs in 1237, 1238, and 1241.

16. Gilbert II. lived in 1247.

17. Robert II. died between 1269 and 1274.

18. Ralph II. who, growing ſickly, reſigned the charge of this abbey to Nicholas biſhop of Evreux, in 1288, when he had governed the ſame very commendably.

19. Geffry II. in whoſe time, 1293, pope Celeſtine IV. confirmed all the poſſeſſions of this monaſtery.

20. William IV. of whom mention is made in deeds from 1301 to 1326.

21. Aſtorgius, or Euſtorgius. He earneſtly ſolicited the apoſtolical ſee that the monks of this monaſtery might lay aſide the white habit they wore, and uſe black, and quite baniſh this relaxation from the order of St. Benedict, and obtained the following indulgence:

Bulla Clementis IV. papæ, ſtatuens quod monachi Lirenſes habitu nigro utantur, et non albo.

"Clemens epiſcopus, ſervus ſervorum Dei, ad perpetuam rei memoriam. Ad ea libenter dirigimus ſtudia mentis noſtræ, quod eccleſiarum & monaſteriorum, ac aliorum locorum eccleſiaſticorum, & perſonarum in eis degentium, præſertim ſub regulari habitu Domino famulantium, ſtatum, in eo maximè, ut tam in capite, quàm in membris, habitu ſe conforment, reſpicere, dinoſcimur. Exhibita ſiquidem nobis, pro parte dilecti filii Aſtorgii, abbatis B. Mariæ de Lira, ordinis S. Benedicti, Ebroicenſ. diœceſ. petitio continebat, quòd in dicto monaſterio, à fundatione ipſus, temporibus plurium abbatum ejuſdem monaſterii, qui fuerunt pro tempore abbates, ipſi, ac monachi dicti monaſterii, veſtes et habitus nigri coloris monachales geſtaverunt; et quod priores & monachi prioratuum ac membrorum, à dicto monaſterio dependentium, in Anglia exiſtentium, veſtes & habitus nigri coloris prædicti ex tunc geſtaverunt, prout geſtant de præſenti: quodque omnium eorundem abbas dicti monaſterii, qui de monaſterio de Becco Helloini, dicti ordinis, Rothomagenſ. diœceſ. (in quo, per abbatem & monachos ipſius monaſterii de Becco Heloini, veſtes & habitus albi coloris geruntur & habentur) in abbatem dicti monaſterii B. Mariæ aſſumptus fuit, veſtes & habitus nigri coloris, qui in dicto monaſterio B. Mariæ, ut præmittitur, gerebantur, in veſtes & habitus albi coloris, commutavit: & ex tunc in dicto monaſterio B. Mariæ abbates & monachi ipſius, exceptis prioribus, & monachi prioratuum, ac membrorum prædictorum duntaxat, album habitum geſtaverunt, & ſimiliter veſtes albas: et quod de præmiſſis, dicto monaſterio B. Mariæ eſt publica vox & fama. Quare, pro parte dicti Aſtorgii abbatis nobis extitit ſupplicatum, ut quod de cætero veſtes & habitus nigri coloris in dicto monaſterio B. Mariæ de Lira gerantur, ſtatuere & ordinare de benignitate apoſtolica dignaremur. Nos, hujuſmodi diviſionem amputare, ac veſtes & habitum monachorum monaſterii B. Mariæ prædictorum ad priſtinum colorem reducere cupientes; hujuſmodi ſupplicationibus inclinati, authoritate apoſtolicâ ſtatuimus, & etiam ordinamus, quod abbas qui nunc eſt, & ſucceſſores ſui abbates, priores, & monachi prædicti monaſterii B. Mariæ, tam in capite, quàm in membris, habitu, & veſtibus albi coloris penitus rejectis, habitum & veſtes nigri coloris portare perpetuo teneantur: quemadmodum per monachos ipſius monaſterii eſt fieri conſuetum. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam noſtræ conſtitutionis & ordinationis infringere, vel ei auſu temerario contraire: ſi quis autem hæc attentare præſumpſerit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei, & BB. Petri & Pauli apoſtolorum ejus, ſe noverit incurſurum. Datum Avenioni, calendis Julii, pontificatus noſtri ann. 10."

22. Thomas.

23. Richard.

24. Simon.

25. Edward.

26. William V. who flouriſhed in 1450, 1453, and 1457, performed much in the monaſtery, and was at length biſhop of Avallon.

27 Lewis de Harcourt, patriarch of Jeruſalem and biſhop of Bayeux, about 1460, died 19 cal. Jan. 1479.

28. Benedict, lived in 1483.

29. John II de Cadillat, 1506.

30. Renée de Prye, cardinal, biſhop of Bayeux, died in 1516.

31. Ambroſe le Veneur, biſhop of Evreux, died 7 id. Aug. 1543.

32. George.

33. Hippolyte d'Eſte, cardinal of Ferrara, occurs 1556, and 1559.

34. Stephen.

---

[1] Formulare, N° ccccxcvii.

[2] Vol. II. p. 989.

[3] Not. Mon. p. 330.

[4] Tanner, p. 175.

[5] Ib. p. 102.

[6] Dugd. Mon. II. 906. inter addit. ex regiſtro abb. de Lira, Hutchins's Dorſet, I. p. 20.

[7] Hutchins, Ib. p. 29—38.

35. James Davy du Perron, born Nov. 5, 1556. In 1587 he pronounced the funeral oration on Mary Queen of Scots, as he had in 1586 that of the poet Ronſard. After the murder of Henry IV. of France, Perron laboured ſtrenuouſly in the converſion of the Reformed, and his labours were crowned with that of Henry IV. who nominated him to the biſhoprick of Evreux, and afterwards made him grand almoner of France, and archbiſhop of Sens, and obtained for him in 1604 the dignity of cardinal. After the murder of Henry IV. Perron devoted himſelf entirely to the court and ſee of Rome. In 1615 he was one of the preſidents of the aſſembly at Roan; ſoon after which he retired to his houſe at Rognolet, where he employed himſelf wholly in reviſing his literary works, and eſtabliſhed a printing-office, that they might be printed under his own inſpection. He died at Rouen Sept. 5, 1618; and his works were publiſhed, in three volumes folio, 1620—1622.

36. James le Noel du Perron, nephew to his predeceſſor, abbat of Lira and of St. Taurinus at Evreux, counſellor of ſtate to the king of France, and high almoner to the queen of England, ſiſter to Lewis XIII.

37. Lewis le Barbier de la Riviere, biſhop and duke of Langres, made abbat in 1650.

Carta Roberti comitis Leiceſtriæ donationem Amiciæ uxoris ſuæ de una uncia auri confirmans [1].

(Ex vetuſto Lirenſis cœnobii regiſtro, penes Franciſcum Du Cheſne, illuſtriſſ. Galliar. regis hiſtoriographum, ann. 1648. n. 23.)

R. Comes Legerceſtriæ Ernaldo de Boſco conſtabulario ſuo, et omnibus baronibus et hominibus ſuis de honore Britolii et Pontis Sancti Petri, ſalutem. Sciatis quia benevole et optime concedo, quod Amicia comitiſſa Legeceſtriæ uxor mea dedit in elemoſinam perpetuam Deo et beatæ Mariæ de Lira et conventui ejuſdem loci unam unciam auri, quam habebat in ponte Sancti Petri, quare volo, &c. Teſtibus Simone comite, Iſabella uxore ſuo, Radulfo pincerna, Reginaldo de Bordigu, Ricardo Mall, Ricardo clerico, Godefrido nepote Ernaldi.

Carta Roberti comitis de Leiceſtria [2].

Robertus comes Legerceſtriæ omnibus hominibus, &c. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe, &c. pro ſalute animæ meæ et Petronellæ comitiſſæ uxoris meæ, et Roberti comitis Legerceſtriæ patris mei et Amiciæ comitiſſæ matris meæ, &c. omnes donationes quas Willielmus filius Oſberti et Robertus comes Legerceſtriæ pater meus et alii predeceſſores mei dederunt Deo et eccleſiæ beatæ Mariæ de Lira, &c. Teſtibus Petronella comitiſſa uxore mea, Willielmo et Roberto filiis meis, &c.

Carta Roberti comitis Leiceſtriæ [3].

Univerſis, &c. Robertus comes Legerceſtriæ ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me conceſſiſſe et hac mea carta confirmaſſe Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ de Lira, et monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, omnes donationes quas Robertus pater meus fecit eis; videlicet, eccleſiam de Hinkelai, cum capellis de Stoke et Dadlintone, eccleſiam de Ettona cum capella de Aſhleburge et aliis pertinentiis ſuis, eccleſiam de Sibeſdeſdune cum capellis de Widredeſley et de Atreton, et de Huptone, et de Draitone, eccleſiam de Heccham cum capella de Linclay. Concedo et confirmo quoque prædictis monachis decimam denariorum meorum de ſoka de Hinkeley, et plenariam decimam de dominicis carucis meis de Hinkeley, et de Etona, et de Sebedeſdune, et in porcis et in ovibus, et in omnibus illis unde decimæ debent exire. Confirmo quoque eis duas uncias auri, ſcilicet duas marcas argenti quas comitiſſa Amicia mater mea habebat in villa de Hinkeley, et XVI ſol. et VIII denar' de unciis, quas habebat in Wikeingeſton, in ſcambium pro decimis nummorum de Etona, et pro decimis pecud' totius dominii, et omnium aliarum rerum, exceptis garbis. Confirmo etiam prædictis monachis unum hoſpitium liberum in Leigr', et XX ſolidat' terræ, quas Rog' de Canford dedit eis in Watona. Teſt' Petronilla com' Legerc', Rog' electo Sancti Andreæ et Rob' fratre ejus, Ernaldo de Boſco, Hug' de Alneto, Rog' de Hum, Gilberto de Charneles, Euſtachio de Herlemvilier, magiſtro Hugone, &c.

Carta Petronillæ comitiſſæ Leiceſtriæ, de XL s̄. annui redditus pro anniverſario filii ſui [4].

Univerſis, &c. Petronella comitiſſa Legerceſtræ ſalutem, &c. Noverit, &c. me dediſſe, &c. Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ de Lira, &c. XL s̄. in molendinis meis de Britolio annuatim perſolvendos, &c. ad faciendum anniverſarium Willielmi de Britolio filii mei, &c. Teſtibus Willielmo Buffaio, &c.

Carta Amiciæ dominæ Montis fortis de XV s̄. ſterlingorum annuatim [5].

Sciatis, &c. quod ego Amicia domina Montis fortis dedi, &c. Deo, beatæ Mariæ, et monachis Lirenſibus, ſexaginta ſolidos Andegavenſes, vel quindecim ſterlingorum annuatim de maritagio meo, pro anima patris mei Willielmi de Bertolio, in liberum et perpetuam elemoſinam, &c. Hiis teſtibus; fratre meo Rogero Sancti Andreæ electo, Willielmo ſacerdote de Bertolio, &c.

Confirmatio Regis Henrici Secundi, &c. [6]

Henricus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dux Normanniæ et Aquitaniæ, comes Andegaviæ, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, et omnibus miniſtris et fidelibus ſuis, Francis et Anglis, totius Angliæ, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe et præſenti carta mea confirmaſſe eccleſiæ Sanctæ Mariæ de Lira, et monachis ibi Deo ſervientibus, donationem quam Robertus comes Leyceſtriæ eis rationabiliter fecerat ſuper iis quæ ſubſequens litera declarat; ſcilicet, de eccleſia de Hinchelai, cum eccleſiis eidem eccleſiæ adjacentibus, et cum capellis omnibus, et cum decima denariorum de ſoka de Hinckelai, et cum plenaria decima de dominicis carucis ſuis de Hinckelai, et de Eattune, et de Sibedeſtune, et in porcis, et in ovibus, et in omnibus illis unde decimæ exire debent. Præterea de omnibus decimis dominico ſuo de Suptwica et de Kingeſtune, et de bladis, et fœnis, de lanis, et de agnis, et caſeis, et de porcellis, et de omni inſtauramento ſuo. Quare volo et firmiter præcipio quod præfata eccleſia, et monachi ejuſdem eccleſiæ, habeant et teneant omnia hæc prædicta, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, ita bene, et in pace, libere, et quiete, et plenarie, et integre, et honorifice, ſicut cartæ Roberti comes Leyceſtriæ quas inde habent teſtantur. Teſtibus; Gaufrido archidiacono, Johanne decano Sarum, Reginaldo [7] archidiacono Sarum, comite Willielmo de Mandevilla, Reginaldo de Curteney, Reginaldo filio Urſi. Apud Chinon.

Carta Regis Henrici Secundi, donatorum conceſſionem recitans et confirmans [8].

Henricus rex Angliæ, &c. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe et in perpetuam elemoſinam confirmaſſe eccleſiæ Lirenſi et monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus quicquid eis rationabiliter datum eſt, et tenementa ſua, et quicquid juſte et rationabiliter poſſiderunt tempore regis Henrici avi mei, et tempore avi mei.

In epiſcopatu Ebroicenſi, in loco qui Vetus Lira dicitur, ex dono Will' comitis, terram de eadem villa quam tenebat in dominico, et duo molendina in eadem villa, et quartam partem Novæ Liræ, &c.

In Anglia, in epiſcopatu Wigorniæ, &c.

In epiſcopatu Herefordiæ, &c.

In epiſcopatu de Landaff, &c.

In epiſcopatu Wigorniæ, &c.

In epiſcopatu Saleſburiæ, &c.

In epiſcopatu Lincolniæ eccleſiam de Hinkelai, cum pertinentiis ſuis, &c.

Teſtibus Philippo Bajocenſe Epiſcopo, et Ernulfo Lexovienſi Epiſcopo, et Roberto comite Legerceſtriæ, et aliis.

---

[1] Dugd. Mon. Angl. I. 986.

[2] Reg. Lyrenſ. n. 8.

[3] Dugd. Mon. Angl. I. 603. ex eod. regiſtro.

[4] Dugd. II. 985. ex eod. regiſtro, n. 7.

[5] Ex eod. regiſtro, n. 29.

[6] Chartæ Antiquæ, n. 39. Mon. Angl. I. 604.

[7] Made biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry in 1173.

[8] Ex vet. regiſtro Lirenſe ſupra citato, n. 3.

De

De prioratibus alienigenis de Hinkley, Warham, et Careſbroke, huic domui [Mount-gracenſi cœnobio in agro Eboracenſi] conceſſis [1].

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quod de gratia noſtra ſpeciali, et ad ſupplicationem cariſſimi nepotis noſtri Thomæ ducis Surriæ, conceſſimus dilecto nobis Edmundo priori domûs de Mountgrace ordinis Cartuſien. per præfatum ducem de novo fundatæ, et commonachis ejuſdem loci et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, prioratum de Hinkele in comitatu Leyc' alienigenam, prioratum de Warham in com' Dorſet alienigenam, et prioratum de Careſbrok in comitatu Sutht' alienigenam, ac omnia alia terras, tenementa, et poſſeſſiones ad abbatiam beatæ Mariæ de Lira in Normannia alienigenam pertinentia, cum omnibus maneriis, cum ſuis pertinentiis, ac cum aliis terris, tenementis, redditibus, poſſeſſionibus, advocationibus eccleſiarum, vicariarum, et cantiariarum, portiones, penſiones, parvas porciones aliarum eccleſiarum, elemoſinas, et eccleſias appropriatas, cum quibuſcunque poſſeſſionibus, &c. ad prædictos prioratum de Hynkele, &c. pertinentibus, &c. Qui quidem prioratus de Hynkele, &c. ad manus noſtras occaſione guerræ inter nos et illos de Francia noſtra devenerunt, &c. Habendum, &c. præfato Edmundo priori, &c. et ſucceſſoribus ſuis, a feſto Sancto Michaelis abhinc præterito quamdiu prædicta guerra duraverit, &c. T. Rege apud Haverford in Wallia xx Maii.

Ratificatio fundationis per Regem Henricum VI. [2]

Nº IV. Charters of Brackley Hospital.

Carta Fundationis Hoſpitalis de Brackley, in agro Northamtonienſi, per Robertum comitis Leiceſtriæ [3].

Robertus comes Legerceſtriæ omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis et Anglicis, tam futuris quam præſentibus, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe et conceſſiſſe, pro amore Dei, et pro ſalute animæ meæ, et animæ comitiſſæ uxoris meæ, et Roberti filii noſtri, et cæterorum liberorum noſtrorum, et pro ſalute ſucceſſorum noſtrorum et anteceſſorum noſtrorum, Salomoni clerico et ſucceſſoribus ſuis unam acram terræ in Brakele in perpetuam et liberam elemoſinam, ad domum conſtruendam, et ad ædificia paranda, in quibus, pro amore Dei et ſalute animarum noſtrarum, pauperes recipiantur et hoſpitentur. Volo etiam ut in prædictâ elemoſinâ, in honore S. Johannis apoſtoli et evangeliſtæ, edificetur capella cum cemiterio libera ut mea dominica capella, et quieta ab omni ſubjectione, ut Salomon prædictus et ſucceſſores ſui, pauperibus et hoſpitibus ſupervenientibus, pro ſalute animæ meæ et anteceſſorum meorum, et hæredum meorum, divina in ipſâ capellâ celebrent officia. Quare volo et firmiter præcipio, ut hæc mea elemoſina ab omnibus terrenis ſerviciis, quod ad hæredes meos pertinent, libera ſit et quieta. Præcipio etiam ne aliquis meorum prædictæ elemoſinæ aliquam inferat moleſtiam. Rogo etiam in Domino hæredes et ſucceſſores meos, ut ipſi prædictam meam elemoſinam, pro amore Dei et ſalute animæ meæ, et ſalute animarum ſuarum, diligant et manuteneant, ut pauperum Chriſti receptio ibi jugiter obſervetur, et divina officia in eodem loco pro nobis in perpetuum celebrentur. Hiis teſtibus; Alexandro abbate de Butleſden, Ricardo abbate in Legreceſtre, Anchitillo priore de Leiceſt', Gaufrido monacho fratre abbatis de Lira, Roberto capellano, Arnoldo de Boſco, Gaufrido le abbe, Willielmo Burdeth, Ivone de Harwecurt, Rogero Craneford, Herveio Mareſchallo, Roberto filio Oſberti, Ricardo Maldreth, Willielmo filio Amfridi, Hugone de Dunam.

Carta Roberti comitis Leiceſtriæ, filii præfati comitis.

Robertus comes Legreceſtre omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis et Anglis, tam præſentibus quam futuris, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe, et hâc chartâ meâ confirmâſſe, pro amore Dei, et pro animâ patris mei Roberti, et matris meæ Amiciæ, et pro ſalute animæ meæ, et Petronillæ comitiſſæ uxoris meæ, et liberorum noſtrorum, donationem quam Robertus pater meus fecit Salomoni clerico de unâ acrâ terræ in Brakele, quam dedit prædicto Salomoni in puram et liberam et perpetuam elemoſinam ad hoſpitale conſtruendum, et ad ædificia paranda ad ſuſceptionem et ſolamen pauperum Chriſti. Confirmo etiam prædicto Salomoni et fratribus ejuſdem hoſpitalis eccleſiam quam pater meus in honore S. Johannis apoſtoli et evangeliſtæ in nominatâ terrâ levari juſſit. Et volo ut ſit libera et quieta ab omni ſubjectione quâ mea dominica capella eſt, et ſub manu meâ et protectione ipſum conſervandum recepi.

Volo autem ut prædictus Salomon, et ſucceſſores ſui, cum cæteris capellanis in prædicto hoſpitali commorantibus, ad honorem Dei, et pro ſalute meâ, et uxoris meæ, et anteceſſorum et ſucceſſorum meorum, divina in ipſâ eccleſiâ celebrent officia. Et præcipio et prohibeo, ut aliquis meorum predicto Salomoni, vel ſucceſſoribus ſuis, moleſtiam aliquam vel laborem in aliquo inferat, quo minus in ipſâ eccleſiâ divinum pro nobis celebretur officium. Prædictum vero hoſpitale, et omnia quæ prædicti fratres ex donatione patris mei habent, vel ex meâ donatione habituri ſunt, ab omnibus terrenis ſerviciis et ſecularibus exactionibus quæ ad me et ad hæredes meos pertinent, vel a nobis exigantur, libera et quieta eſſe concedo et confirmo.

Ex donatione vero meâ contuli eis de creis juxta domum hoſpitalis duas acras et dimidiam, et ſubtus curiam illorum dedi eis de creis terram de gravâ meâ, unde pars quædam extenditur uſque ad foſſatum quod includit gravam, et illa pars habet in latitudine decem et novem perticas et octo pedes. Reliqua vero pars habet in longitudine a muro qui includit curiam illorum verſus gravam perticas treſdecem.

Præterea dedi eis duas virgatas terræ; unam ſcilicet quæ eſt de terrâ de Halſow, cum meſſuagio quod pertinet ad prædictam virgatam quæ eſt in Brakele ad caput fontis de Goldewell; et unam aliam virgatam quæ pertinet ad Brakele, cum meſſuagio ſuo quod eſt ſubtus caput fontis juxta rivulum ejuſdem fontis, quam virgatam Swerman pater magiſtri Salomonis tenuit. Quare volo et præcipio, ut prædicti fratres habeant et teneant omnia prædicta in puram et liberam et perpetuam elemoſinam, bene et in pace et quiete, in boſco et plano, in pratis et paſturis et paſcuis, et omnibus aliis pertinentiis et aiſiamentis, integre, plenarie, et honorifice, ſicut elemoſina melius et liberius teneri poterit. Volo etiam ut prædicti fratres et homines ſui, qui de prædictâ elemoſinâ tenuerint, ſunt quieti per totam terram meam de theloneo et paſſagio de omnibus operationibus, de tallagiis et auxiliis, et omnibus aliis conſuetudinibus, quæ ad me et hæredes meos pertinent. Præcipio etiam et prohibeo, ut aliquis meorum prædictos fratres circa præſcriptas libertates in aliquo moleſtare præſumat. Hiis teſtibus; Hawiſiâ comitiſſâ Glouceſtriæ, Petronillâ comitiſſâ Legreceſtriæ, Radulfo de Martiwaſt tunc ſeneſcallo meo, Magiſtro Hugone, Radulfo Fridai, Rogero de Hinne, Hamundo de Hoſtel, Gilberto de Charnels, Roberto Mallore, Henrico Mallore, Oſberto de Hareford, Marc de Brackele, Ernaldo capellano de Brakele, Gaufrido tunc capellano meo.

---

[1] Dugd. I. 968. Pat. 22 R. II. part 3. m. 11.

[2] See Dugd. I. 964. Cart. 19 H. VI. m. 22.

[3] Ex Regiſtro Hoſpitalis de Brackley penes præpoſitum et ſocios Collegii beatæ Mariæ Magdalenæ Oxon. fol. 8. b. Dugd. Mon. Ang. III. 83.

N° V. Grant of ROBERT, Earl of MELLENT and LEICESTER, to the Priory of PREAUX. (See p. 23.)

UNIVERSIS ſanctæ matris eccleſiæ filiis Anglicis, Francis, & Normannis, Robertus comes de Mellento & Leyceſtriæ ſalutem in vero ſalutari domino Jheſu Chriſto. Noverit univerſitas veſtra quod ego pro ſalute animæ meæ & dilecti mei domini regis Willielmi & anteceſſorum meorum, dedi & conceſſi & præſenti carta mea confirmavi Deo & eccleſiæ ſanctorum apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli de Pratellis, & monachis ibidem domino ſervientibus, manerium de Thoftes cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, videlicet, terris, nemoribus, mariſcis, pratis, turbariis, hominibus, redditibus, paſturis, communis, & aliis quibuſcunque dicto manerio ſpectantibus, ita liberè ſicut kariſſimus dominus meus illuſtris rex Willielmus illud michi dedit, qui ante me illud aliquantulum poſſedit. Tenendum & poſſidendum dictis monachis & eorum ſucceſſoribus in liberam puram & perpetuam elemoſinam bene, in pace, honorificè, & juſte, ſolutum & quietum de ſiris & ſectis, de hundredis, placitis, quærelis, conſuetudinibus & regalibus demandis univerſis, cum ſacch, ſocc, thol, thif, infongenethef, & hutfongenethef, & cum libera warenna in parochiis de Thoftes & de Haddeſcho & de Thorp, cum omnibus aliis libertatibus. Addidi etiam huic dono jus patronatûs eccleſiæ beatæ Margaretæ predictæ villæ, jus patronatûs eccleſiæ beatæ Mariæ de Hadeſcho, jus patronatûs eccleſiæ beati Michaelis de Eſtone, jus patronatûs eccleſiæ ſancti Leonardi de Wyleya, jus patronatûs eccleſiæ beati Michaelis de Cherlintone, jus patronatûs eccleſiæ ſancti Nicholai de Neuburi, cum decimis, fundis, obventionibus, penſionibus ad dictas eccleſias pertinentibus. Item in villa de Neuburi, decimam totius redditus vel exitus villæ, id eſt de molendinis, de theloneo, & de omni re quæ decimari poteſt vel poterit in futuro, cum una hida terræ libera ab omni cenſu & conſuetudine, ſecta curiæ, & univerſo ſervicio ſeculari, quæ omnia Arnulphus de Heſdinck comes del Perche dominus de Neuburi michi donavit ad uſus elemoſinæ monachorum prædictorum. Dedi inſuper monachis meis prædictis villulam quæ vocatur Orlaveſchote, & quinque hidas terræ ad eam pertinentes liberam & abſolutam de ſiris, de hundredis, placitis, quærelis, auxiliis, conſuetudinibus, ſerviciis ſecularibus, univerſis demandis, & omnibus exactionibus quas mens humana ſcit vel ſciet, poteſt vel poterit impoſterum cogitare. Dedi nichilominus monachis præfatis aliud manerium nomine Specteburi, cum tota villa, terris, nemoribus, pratis, paſturis, ripariis, molendinis, hominibus, eorum ſervitiis, capitagiis, redditibus, & omnibus dicto manerio & villæ ſpectantibus, liberum & abſolutum de ſiris, de ſectis, de hundredis, placitis, quærelis, auxiliis, conſuetudinibus, ſervitiis ſecularibus, & omni angaria regali, cum ſoch, ſacc, thol, thif, infongenethif, cum omnibus aliis libertatibus. Iſta omnia præſcripta ego Robertus comes prædictus dedi Deo & eccleſiæ & monachis prædictis, tenenda, poſſidenda, & habenda, ſicut liberiùs, tranquilliùs & honorificentiùs aliqua elemoſina in regno Angliæ dari poteſt vel teneri. Et ne aliquis in poſterum donationibus meis, caritatis intuitu factis, auſu temerario audeat contraire, præſentem cartam prædictis monachis tradidi ſigilli mei impreſſione munitam. Preſentibus domino Cantuar. archiepiſcopo, domino Eborum archiepiſcopo, dominis Sareſbur. Norwyc. Coventren. epiſcopis, dominis Gloverniæ, Sareſbur. del Perche, de Moritone, de Warwyk comitibus, & aliis baronibus, militibus, clericis, nobilibus, & liberis hominibus quam pluribus.

N° VI. Agreement between the Earls of CHESTER and LEICESTER. (See p. 24.)

HÆC eſt conventio inter Ranulfum comitem Ceſtriæ, & Robertum comitem Legreceſtriæ; & finalis pax & concordia quæ fuit conceſſa & diviſa ab eis, coràm ſecundo Roberto epiſcopo Lincolniæ, & hominibus eorum; ex parte comitis Ceſtriæ, Ricardo de Lovetot, Willielmo filio Nigelli, Ranulfo vicecomite: ex parte comitis Legreceſtriæ, Ernaldo de Boſco, Gaufrido abbate, Reginaldo de Bordineio: ſcilicèt, quòd comes Ranulfus dedit & conceſſit Roberto comiti Legreceſtriæ caſtrum de Mountſorell, ſibi & hæredibus ſuis: Tenendum de eo & hæredibus ſuis hæreditariè & ſicùt charta ipſius comitis Ranulfi teſtatur: et ità quòd comes Leyceſtriæ receptare debet ipſum comitem Ranulfum & familiam ſuam in burgo & balliis de Mountſorell, ad guerrandum quemcunque voluerit ut de feodo ſuo: et ità quòd comes Leyceſtriæ non poteſt indè forisfacere comiti Ranulfo pro aliquo: et ſi neceſſe ſit comiti Ranulfo, corpus ipſius receptabitur in dominico caſtro de Mountſorell: et ita quòd comes Leyceſtriæ portabit ei fidem, ſalvâ fide ligei domini ſui: et ſi oportuerit comitem Leyceſtriæ ire ſuper comitem Ceſtriæ cùm ligeo domino ſuo, non poteſt ducere ſecum plus quàm viginti milites: et ſi comes Leyceſtriæ, vel iſti viginti milites aliquid ceperint de rebus comitis Ceſtriæ, totum reddetur. Nec ligius dominus, comes Leyceſtriæ, nec aliquis alius poteſt forisfacere comiti Ceſtriæ, nec ſuis, de caſtris ipſius comitis Leyceſtriæ nec de terrâ ſuâ: et ita quòd comes Leyceſtriæ nec poteſt propter aliquam cauſam, vel propter aliquem caſum, impedire corpus comitis Ceſtriæ, niſi eum defidaverit quindecem dies anteà: et comes Lyceſtriæ debet juvare comitem Ceſtriæ contrà omnes homines, præter ligium dominum ipſius comitis Leyceſtriæ, & comitem Simonem: comitem Simonem poteſt juvare hoc modo, quod ſi comes Ranulfus forisfecerit comiti Simoni, & ipſe comes Ránulfus noluerit corrigere forisfactum proptèr comitem Leyceſtriæ, tunc poteſt eum juvare: et ſi comes Simon forisfecerit comiti Ceſtriæ, & noluerit corrigere ſe propter comitem Leyceſtriæ, non juvabit eum comes Leyceſtriæ: et comes Leyceſtriæ debet cuſtodire terras & res comitis Ceſtriæ, quæ in poteſtate ipſius comitis Leyceſtriæ ſunt, ſine malo ingenio. Et comes Leyceſtriæ pepigit comiti Ranulfo, quòd caſtrum de Ravenſtona cadet, niſi conceſſu comitis Ranulfi remanſerit: et ità quòd ſi aliquis vellet illud caſtrum tenere contrà comitem Leyceſtriæ, comes Ranulfus auxiliabitur abſquè malo ingenio ad diruendum caſtrum illud: et ſi comes Ranulfus fecerit clamorem de Willielmo de Alneto, comes Leyceſtriæ in ſuâ curiâ habebit eum ad rectum quamdiu ipſe Willielmus manſerit homo comitis Leyceſtriæ & terram tenebit de eo: et ita quod ſi Willielmus vel ſui receſſerint a fidelitate comitis Leyceſtriæ proptèr caſtrum proſtratum, vel quia rectum noluerit facere in curiâ comitis Leyceſtriæ, non receptabuntur in poteſtate comitis Ceſtriæ, neque Willielmus neque ſui, ad malum faciendum comiti Leyceſtriæ: in hâc conventione remanet comiti Leyceſtriæ caſtrum de Witewic firmatum cum cæteris caſtris ſuis.

Et e converſo, comes Ranulfus portabit fidem comiti Leyceſtriæ, ſalvâ fide ligii domini ſui: et ſi oportuerit comitem Ceſtriæ ire ſuper comitem Leyceſtriæ, cum ligio domino ſuo, non poteſt ducere ſecum plus quàm viginti milites: et ſi comes Ceſtriæ, vel iſti viginti milites, aliquid ceperint de rebus comitis Leyceſtriæ, totum reddetur: nec Ligius Dominus, comes Ceſtriæ, aut aliquis alius poteſt, forisfacere comiti Leyceſtriæ nec ſuis, de caſtris ipſius comitis Ceſtriæ, nec de terrâ ſuâ: et ità quod comes Ceſtriæ non poteſt propter aliquam cauſam, vel aliquem caſum, impedire corpus comitis Leyceſtriæ, niſi eum defidaverit quindecem dies antè. Et comes Ceſtriæ debet juvare comitem Leyceſtriæ contrà omnes homines, prætèr Ligium Dominum ipſius comitis Ceſtriæ, & comitem Robertum de Ferrariis. Comitem Robertum poteſt juvare hoc modo, ſi comes Leyceſtriæ forisfecerit comiti de Ferrariis, & ipſe comes Leyceſtriæ noluerit corrigere forisfactum proptèr comitem Ceſtriæ, tunc poteſt eum juvare comes Ceſtriæ: Et ſi comes Robertus de Ferrariis forisfecit comiti Leyceſtriæ, & noluerit ſe corrigere propter comitem Ceſtriæ, non juvabit eum comes Ceſtriæ. Et comes Ceſtriæ debet cuſtodire terras & res comitis Leyceſtriæ, quæ in poteſtate ipſius comitis Ceſtriæ ſunt, ſinè malo ingenio. Et comes Ceſtriæ pepigit comiti Leyceſtriæ, quòd ſi aliquis vellet caſtrum de Raveſtonâ tenere contrà comitem Leyceſtriæ, comes Ranulfus auxiliabitur ſinè malo ingenio ad diruendum caſtrum illud: nec comes Ceſtriæ nec comes Leyceſtriæ debent firmare caſtrum aliquod novum inter Hinckley & Coventrey, nec inter Hinckley & Hardredeſhellam, nec intèr Coventrey & Donintonam: nec inter Donintonam & Leyceſtriam, nec ad Grataham, nec ad Cheneldeſtam & Belvier, nec inter Belveer & Hocham, nec inter Hocham & Rockingham, nec priùs, niſi communi aſſenſu utriuſque: Et ſi aliquis in prædictis locis, vel infrâ prædictos terminos, firmaret caſtrum, uterque alteri erit auxilio ſinè malo ingenio donec caſtrum diruatur. Et hanc conventionem, ſicut in hâc chartâ continetur, affidavit uterque comes, videlicèt, Ceſtrenſis & Leyceſtrenſis, in manu Roberti ſecundi, Lincolnienſis epiſcopi, tenendam: et poſuerunt eundem epiſcopum obſidem hujus conventionis ſupèr Chriſtianitatem ſuam: Ità quòd ſi aliquis exiret ab hâc conventione, & nollet ſe corrigere infra 15 dies poſtquàm inde requiſitus fuerit ſinè malo ingenio, tùnc epiſcopus Lincolnienſis & epiſcopus Ceſtrenſis facient juſtitiam de eo tanquàm de fide mentitâ. Et epiſcopus Lincolniæ & epiſcopus Ceſtriæ tradent obſides uterque duos, quos receperunt proptèr conventiones iſtas tenendas, ille videlicèt qui conventiones iſtas prædictas tenebit.

N° VII. Abbey of St. Ebrulf, otherwiſe called Utica, in Normandy. (See p. 20.)

⁂ This famous Benedictine abbey, ſituated in a town called St. Evrau, in the dioceſe of Liſieux, was firſt founded by St. Ebrulf in the year 575; but, being afterwards deſtroyed, was reſtored by William de Geroiis and his nephews Hugh and Robert de Grenteſmenill. They had poſſeſſions in various parts of this kingdom; and the annual income of the abbey amounted to 30,000 livres, excluſive of the patronage of many churches[1]. Their charters, as far as they are connected with this hiſtory, are here preſerved:

1. Carta Regis Willielmi Conqueſtoris de terris quamplurimis, in Angliâ, dicto monaſterio conceſſis[2].

GULIELMUS, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglorum, & dux Normannorum, atque princeps Cenomannorum, omnibus fidei Catholice fautoribus, pacemque in eccleſiâ ſervantibus, ſummum & inexplebile gaudii munus. Quoniam brevis eſt mortalis vita, & de generatione in generatione tranſeunt omnia, volumus litterarum teſtimonio temporis noſtri decreto confirmare; ut que nos rectè facimus ex noſtro jure, & ex datâ à Deo poteſtate, nemo ſucceſſorum noſtrorum audeat violare, ne ſcilicet ei contradicat, qui omnia regna ſuo arbitrio diſpenſat. Ego itaque Willielmus, Dei gratiâ, rex, in regno mihi divinitùs commiſſo, eleemoſynam, que mihi perenniter proſit, cœnobio B. Ebrulfi tradere diſpono, & ea que fideles noſtri pro commune omnium ſalute de poſſeſſionibus, quas eis dedi legitimè . . . . Deo, concedo, preſentique cirographo confirmationem noſtram preſentibus & futuris omnibus Dei fidelibus notifico.

Inprimis igitur Uticenſi monaſterio, quod beatus Chriſti confeſſor Ebrulfus conſtruxit in heremo, de dominio meo, pro amore Dei, dono in Glouceſtreſcirâ villam, que Ravella, id eſt Capree fons, dicitur; in Nicholeſcirâ, quandam eccleſiam, & quicquid ad eam pertinet in villâ que Nethleham vocatur. Preterea optimates noſtri de rebus ſuis S. Ebrulfo hec largiti ſunt; atque ut in chartâ regie auctoritatis contra omnium infeſtationes inſerantur, popoſcerunt: Rogerius comes Scrobeſburie dedit omne quod habebat in Melleburnâ, in Cranteburge-ſcirâ: Othnam quoque & Mereſtonam in Eſtaforde-ſcirâ, & unam hidam terre in Craphan, & terram Vulfuini aurifrabi in Ciceſtrâ, decimamque caſeorum & lanarum de Pultonâ, & decimam de Senegai in Cranteburge-ſcirâ. Mabilia verò, ejuſdem comitis filia, de redditibus ſuis in Angliâ LX ſolidos ſterilenſium, pro decimis ſuis, dedit S. Ebrulfo per ſingulos annos ad luminaria eccleſie. Guarinus vicecomes de Scrobeſburiâ dedit S. Ebrulfo Neutonam, & eccleſiam de Halis, cum decimâ, decimamque de Gueſtonâ in Eſtafordeſcirâ; & hec dominus ejus Rogerius comes conceſſit. Porrò Hugo de Grentemaiſnil (qui cum Roberto fratre ſuo, & avunculis ſuis, Gulielmo & Roberto; filiis Geroii, Uticenſe reſtaurarat cœnobium) hec idem dedit in Angliâ in perpetuam hereditatem; totam terram, quam habuit in Parvâ Pilardentonâ, in Guarevicheſcirâ, omniumque duas partes decimarum totius terre ſue dedit; & XVI ruſticos ad ipſas decimas cuſtodiendas, atque novem eccleſias. Dedit enim tres villanos Sceltonis; tres Guaris; duos Bellegravie, unum Scotone, unum Chirchebie, unum Merſitone, unum Oſteſilve, unum Cherletone, & alium in aliâ Cherlentunâ. Dedit etiam eccleſiam de Guaris, & totam decimam que ad illam pertinebat, terramque duarum carucarum; eccleſiam de Turthilleſtonâ, decimamque ad illam pertinentem, & duas virgatas terre. Eccleſiam de Clenefeld, cum decimâ totâ, & duabus virgatis terre; eccleſiam de Charlentonâ, cum decimâ & quinque virgatis terre; eccleſiam de Noveſlay, cum decimâ, & duabus virgatis terre; eccleſiam de Merthegravâ, que nunc alio nomine Belegrava dicitur, cum totâ decimâ, & XI virgatas terre; & Guillecotam, & quicquid Hugo clericus de Sappo in Angliâ de ipſo tenebat; eccleſiam de Merſitonâ, cum totâ decimâ & terrâ ad eccleſiam pertinente; eccleſiam verò de Coteford, cum decimâ, & unâ hidâ terre; eccleſiam de Sellingis, cum toto quod Leofricus ibidem de ipſo tenebat. Hec ſunt que Hugo de Grentemaiſnill Sancto Ebrulfo, me concedente, dedit in Angliâ.

Radulfus quoque de Conchis eidem Sancto dedit duos manerios Aluumtonam in Enigherceſtre-ſcirâ, & Caldicotam in Nortfuch. Et Hugo filius Conſtantii dedit eccleſiam Gafrâ & unam hidam terre. Hugo autem Ceſtrenſis comes filium ſuum nomine Rodbertum in Uticenſi eccleſiâ ad monachatum Deo obtulit, & eidem eccleſie dedit unam hidam terre in Parvâ Pilardentonâ, & decimam, ac unum ruſticum in villâ que dicitur Brichella, decimamque de Sanleiâ in Buccringehamſcirâ. Robertus verò de Rodelento (prefato Hugone Ceſtrenſi comite, domino ſuo, concedente) dedit S. Ebrulfo Chirchebiam cum duabus eccleſiis; una ſcilicet que in ipſâ villâ eſt, & alia propè illud manerium in Inſulâ Maris, & eccleſiam S. Petri apoſtoli, & quicquid ad eam pertinebat in Ceſtrenſi urbe. Et in Mereſtonâ, que eſt in Northamtoneſcirâ, eccleſiam Sc̄i Laurentii, & quicquid ad eam pertinet: & in eadem Provinciâ eccleſiam de Bivivellâ, cum duabus terre carucatis. Alii quoque homines Hugonis comitis Uticenſi eccleſie decimas ſuas dederunt. In Nicholeſcirâ, Rozſcelinus de Eſtentonâ, Oſbernus Tezſonis filius, de Neubelâ, Baldricus de Farefort, decimam cum uno ruſtico. Rogerius de Willai & Briſard, & Robertus Pultret, in Legreceſtreſcirâ. Omnes hi decimas ſuas Sancto Ebrulfo dederunt, & prædictus comes gratanter conceſſit. Hec itaque que de noſtro dominio ſepè memorate eccleſie dedi, & omnia que à baronibus noſtris eidem data ſunt conceſſi, anno ab Incarnatione Domini MLXXXI, Indictionis IV, preſenti cirographo in urbe Guentâ corroboro, & proceribus meis, qui eleemoſynas ſuas dederunt, vel aſtipulatores earum ſunt. Hoc teſtamentum ſigno Sancte Crucis dedicandum trado: ut in eternum regali auctoritate rata ſit hec donatio, & ſacrilegos ſacrarum violatores rerum irremediabilis, niſi à reatu reſipuerint, feriat maledictio.

---

[1] Some account of the Alien Priories, &c. vol. I. p. 81.

[2] Dugd. Mon. Aug. II. 966; Orderic. Vital. Hiſt. Eccleſ. p. 602.

2. Carta Roberti comitis Leiceſtrie, de diverſis eccleſiis, terris, & decimis, infra comitatum Leiceſtrie [1].

ROBERTUS comes Leyceſtrie, comitis Melentini filius, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra, me pro ſalute anime mee, & patris mei, & matris mee, & omnium aliorum anteceſſorum meorum, & ſucceſſorum, donâſſe & conceſſiſſe, & preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe monaſterio S. Ebrulfi, & abbati & monachis ejuſdem loci, quicquid habent in totâ terrâ meâ in liberam &, abſque omni terreno ſervicio & conſuetudine & exactione, quietam eleemoſynam; ita quod nulli aliquod terrenum ſervicium inde facere teneantur; neque homines in terrâ ipſorum, manentes apud Leyceſtriam, plenam decimam de omni dominio meo de prepoſiturâ; videlicet, de pontibus de Holegate, de molendinis, & piſcationibus, atque virgultis, que modò in eadem villâ ſunt, vel de novo fient in totâ foreſtâ ejuſdem ville; in defenſis videlicet, & in altâ foreſtâ, & alibi per totam foreſtam Leyceſtrie, plenam decimam de omnibus paunagiis & herbagiis, & venationibus, & venditionibus, & araciis equorum & equarum, & de omnibus fructibus & eſſartis & agriculturis, & molendinis, & furnis & piſcationibus, & cenſibus, & eccleſiis, & villis, & capellis, & obventionibus, que ex eâ & in propreſturis ejus, preſentibus & futuris operibus, etiamſi ad agriculturam redacta fuerit, poterunt pervenire; & quietanciam herbagii, & pannagii ad centum porcos conventûs S. Ebrulfi per annum; videlicet, in fenſis, & in altâ foreſtâ, & alibi per totam ipſam foreſtam, cum meis propriis porcis. Infra muros civitatis Leiceſtrie novem burgenſes; extra verò quinque. Decimam quoque dominicarum terrarum mearum in eadem villâ, eccleſiam de Belegrave, &c. In Clenefend eccleſiam, cum duabus virgatis terre, & capellam de Branteſton, & de Rereby, cum decimis, & aliis pertinentiis ejus in Yrkynfeld, &c. In Rotheby duas partes decimarum totius dominii mei, de omnibus de quibus decima datur & accipitur, & ita habet monaſterium S. Ebrulfi in omnibus dominiis de feodo Leyceſtrie. In Groby, &c. In Boſceby duas partes omnium decimarum de duabus aulis; & in Humbirſton ſimiliter decimam de duabus aulis, & unam virgatam terre. In Stocton decimam de dominio, & unam virgatam terre. In Evington decimam de dominio. In Ygwarby decimam de dominio. In Syleby decimam de dominio. In Torp-Ernaud decimam de dominio. In Brantingeſby decimam de dominio. In Waltham, &c. In Wykyngeſton decimam de dominio. In Houtheby, &c. Volo itaque & firmiter precipio ut hujus mee donationis, conceſſionis, & confirmationis carta ab omnibus heredibus meis & ballivis illibata conſervetur & integra; & ut ea que in eâ ſcripta ſunt & nominata, tam in eccleſiis quàm decimis, & eſſartis & terris, aliiſque pertinentiis ſuis & poſſeſſionibus, abbati & monachis plenariè & abſque malivolâ dilatione perſolvantur; & ut ipſi ſuper hiis omnibus, que donavi, conceſſi, & confirmavi, nullam de cetero moleſtiam patiantur, nec homines in terris ipſorum manentes, ſed cum omni integritate, & abſque omni exactione, conſuetudine, & diſtrictione terreni ſervicii, ea pacificè & quietè in puram, liberam, perpetuam, & quietam eleemoſynam poſſideant, preſentem paginam ſigilli mei munimine confirmavi & roboravi, ipſis contra omnem calumpniam perpetuo valituram. Hanc autem donationem, confirmationem, & conceſſionem, ego & omnes heredes dictis abbati & monachis tenemur contra omnes homines warentizare & defendere. Si quis verò heredum, ballivorum vel hominum meorum hanc mee donationis, conceſſionis, & confirmationis cartam, ſciens infregerit, vel contra eam aliquo modo venire temptaverit, indignationem Dei omnipotentis, meamque maledictionem, ſe noverit incurſurum. Hiis teſtibus, O. Ebor' epiſcopo, & Hugone de Raceto, & Ricardo de Bellomonte magiſtro, & capellano meo, & Tomheto de Moravillâ, & aliis.

3. Carta Roberti comitis Leiceſtrie, filii prefati comitis.

IN nomine ſancte & individue Trinitatis, ego Robertus comes Leyceſtrie, omnibus hominibus & baronibus, & amicis, & fidelibus meis, ballivis atque miniſtris, ſalutem & pacem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me, ad preces & ad monitionem kariſſime uxoris mee Petronille comitiſſe Leyceſtrie, & filiorum, Willielmi, videlicet, Roberti atque Rogeri, & Amicie comitiſſe Rocefortis, filie mee, donâſſe, conceſſiſſe, & preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe monaſterio beati Ebrulfi, & abbati & monachis ejuſdem loci, quicquid habent in totâ terrâ meâ in liberam, & ab omni terreno ſervicio & conſuetudine puram & quietam eleemoſynam; ita quod nemini preter dominum terrenum in ſervicium aliquod facere teneantur; vel auxilium ſeu etiam talliam vel relevamentum, vel gardam; nec homines in terris ipſorum manentes, in Normanniâ, videlicet, & in Angliâ, tam de donis illuſtris viri Hugonis de Grantemenyl proavi memorate comitiſſe, & jamdicti monaſterii fundatoris, & meis & fidelium ſuorum atque meorum, quam de donis Willielmi filii Oſberni atavi mei, & meis, aliorumque anteceſſorum meorum, & fidelium ſuorum atque meorum, in quibus hec propriis neceſſariam duxi exprimenda vocabulis; eccleſiam videlicet de Miceto, &c. In Angliâ verò apud Leyceſtriam plenam decimam de omni dominio meo, de propoſiturâ, videlicet, de pontibus de Holegate, &c. Decimam quoque dominicarum terrarum mearum in eadem villâ. Eccleſiam S. Sepulchri, que eſt extra civitatem, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Eccleſiam de Belegrave, &c. Teſtibus, Petronillâ comitiſſâ Leyceſtrie, uxore meâ, & Willielmo, & Roberto, & Rogero, filiis meis, & Amiciâ filiâ meâ comitiſſâ Rochefortis, Simone de Grammenil, & aliis.

4. Carta regis Henrici Secundi, donationem manerii de Cherlton, per Adelinam de Juri factam, confirmans [2].

H. rex Anglie archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, & baronibus, & vicecomitibus, & fidelibus ſuis, Francis & Anglis totius Anglie ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & reddidiſſe Deo & Sancto Ebrulfo, & monachis ſuis, manerium de Ceorlotonâ, quod Adelina de Juri eis dedit. Et volo & concedo, & firmiter precipio, ut benè & quietè, & honorificè teneant. Teſtibus Nigello de Albiniaco, & Fulcone de Alnou, & Rad' de Ponte Erchenfr. apud Rothomagum.

5. Carta ejuſdem regis Henrici Secundi, de libertatibus [3].

H. rex Anglie, & dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, omnibus vicecomitibus & miniſtris ſuis tocius Anglie, & Normannie, & nominatim portuum maris, ſalutem. Precipio, quod omnes victus & veſtitus & omnes res monachorum de Sancto Ebrulpho, & quicquid homines eorum affidare poterunt eſſe proprium abbatis & monachorum Sancti Ebrulphi, ſit quietum ad omni theloneo, & paſſagio, & conſuetudine. Et prohibeo quod nullus eos vel res eorum injuſtè diſturbet ſuper xl. forisfacturâ. Teſte Rotrodo epiſcopo Ebroicenſi, apud Leons.

---

[1] Dugd. Mon. Ang. II. 967; ex vetuſto rotulo in Bibl. Cotton.

[3] Ibid. p. 967; ex Carte, 12 Edw. II. m. 18. n. 92. per Inſpex.

[2] Ibid. p. 967; ex Pat. 12 Edw. III. p. 3. m. 13. per Inſpex.

Nº VIII. Extracted from the book called Remigius's Regiſter, p. 37. in the Regiſtry of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. (See p. 23).

A. Decē Burgenſib̄z in Legeiceſtr'.

R. Comes Leg^{r} Rad' vicecomiti, & omnib̄z baronib̄z & hominib̄z ſuis Francis & Anglis ſalt'. Sciatis me, ꝓ ſatisfactione ac dāpnor' ꝑ me ſeu ꝑ meos Eccłiæ Linc' Ep̄o illator' reſtitutione, dediſſe in elemoſinam firmam ac ꝑpetuam p̄ſate Eccłie Linc', & A.[1] Ep̄o & omnib̄z ſucceſſorib̄z ej' Ep̄is, decem Burgenſes infra muros Leg^{r}, cum domib̄z & tex̄is ac manſionib̄z ſuis, lib̄os atq̄ a gablis ſive adjutoriis atq̄ oib̄z exactionib̄z reliquis om̄o quietos, cū ſochâ & ſache, & tol & theā, & infangentheof, & oib̄z lib̄tatib̄z & dignitatib̄z reliquis. Unde & volo ac firmit^{r} p̄cipio q̄tin' Eccła Linc' & Ep̄s predictos burgenſes, cū domib̄z & t̄ris ac manſionib̄z ſuis, ita bene & in pace & lib̄è & honorificè & quietè teneat, ſicut ꝑ m̄s vel ego vel aliquis p̄deceſſor' n̄ror' eos meliꝰ & lib̄iꝰ & honorificentꝰ & quiet' tenuit. Burgenſiū autē quos Ecc' Linc' & Ep̄o dedi iſta ſunt nōīa; Sueinꝰ filius Thedrici, Stori fil' Sache, Walraven, Rob̄tꝰ fine, Will' fil' Raven; Daired ad Portā & Erners vicin' ſuus, Oſmundꝰ fil' Sym̄, Bruning, Rob̄tꝰ Schlene. Teſtiū q̄q̄ qui donationi huic int̄fuer̄t iſta ſunt nōīa; Symon Comes Norhamptun, Robꝰ abbas de Geredonâ, Gervaſius abbas de Ludâ, Bernardus prior de Chenildewrdâ; & de hōīb̄z Ep̄i, Rogerus de Amert, Hugh Conſtibilariꝰ, Rad' de Alvers, Malgerius de Houtunâ; de hōīb̄z q̄q̄ comitis Legrec' Ernaldꝰ de Boſco, Willꝰ Burdet, Gaufridꝰ Abbas, Fulco Truſſellus, Gault' Ab̄bas, Wills de novo M^{r}cato, Rad' fil' Gilleb̄ti.

Nº IX. Foundation Charters of NUNEATON, Warwickſhire. (See p. 48.)

1. Carta fundationis Abbatiæ de Eton[2].

ROBERTUS comes Legreceſtrie omnibus fidelibus ſancte eccleſie, & omnibus hominibus ſuis, Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe Abbacie quam feci & fundavi apud Etonam, de ordine monialium de Fonte-Ebraudi, ipſam Etonam cum pertinentiis ſuis, ſicut ipſam tenui die quo primus rex Henricus fuit vivus & mortuus, exceptâ terrâ illâ quam canonici S. Marie Legreceſtrie de Prato tenent in Stoccingford; & exceptâ terrâ illâ quam moniales de Caſâ Dei tenent in Atlebergâ, & in Etona. Preterea dedi & conceſſi prefate abbatie in Keneteberiâ illam terram que reddebat mihi xxv l. & in Welles dedi illis totum tenementum, & redditum quem ibi habebam in terris, & piſcariis, & in omnibus rebus, exceptâ decimâ anguillarum quam pater meus comes Robertus de Mellento dedit eccleſie ſancte Marie Legrec' de Prato. Intereà confirmo illam donationem quam filia mea Iſabella, & filius ſuus comes Simon, fecerunt predicte abbatie aſſenſu meo; videlicet, duas carucatas terre in Waltham, cum paſturâ trecentarum ovium. Ex dono Richardi Mallorie in Suneford duas virgatas terre & dimidiam, quas tenuit de feodo meo. Et in Legreceſtriâ duos ſolidos in manſurâ quam tenet Wido Breadleas de ipſo Richardo. Totam terram quam ipſe Richardus habuit in ſupradictâ Etonâ in boſco & plano, & terram illam, quam Robertus filius Jocelini donavit predicte abbatie, ſcilicet, totam terram illam quam habuit in Etonâ inter aquam & nemus; et ex aliâ parte aque in Etonâ duas virgatas terræ, & vi s̄. terre quas Williel' de Novo Mercato tenuit de Jocelino patre ſuo, cum toto nemore ſuo, ſalvis aiſiamentis ſuis & hominum ſuorum de Hidâ, ſine waſto & venditione; et quia Robertus filius Jocelini hanc donationem fecit eccleſie de Etonâ conceſſu meo & aſſenſu, clamavi eccleſiam illam, & moniales ejuſdem eccleſie, & ipſum Robertum, quietos de ſervicio quod pertinebat ad prædictum tenementum, ſcilicet de ſervitio none partis feodi unius militis. Hanc verò donationem feci pro Dei amore, & pro ſalute anime mee, & uxoris mee, & heredum meorum, & pro animâ regis Henrici, & pro animabus anteceſſorum meorum, aſſenſu & conceſſione regis Henrici ſecundi, & Roberti filii mei. Quare volo & firmiter precipio quod eadem abbatia & moniales de Fontis Ebraudi ordine, ibidem Deo ſervientes, habeant & teneant in perpetuam elemoſinam, omnia hec predicta, cum pertinentiis ſuis, & cum libertatibus, & cum omnibus liberis conſuetudinibus ſuis, ſoluta & quieta de omni ſeculari ſervitio & exactione, & in perpetuum ſint quiete de telonio, & paſſagio, & omni conſuetudine, per totam terram meam, tam per terram quàm per aquam, de omnibus rebus ſuis quas homines earum affidare poterint ſuas eſſe proprias; ita quod nullus de hominibus meis eas vel homines earum inde diſturbet. Teſtibus, Turſtino abbate Geroldonie, Rich. abbate Legr. Roberto priore Keniliworde, Hugone Barre, Willielmo, Roberto capellano noſtro, Willielmo comite Glouceſtr. Willielmo Baſſet, Willielmo Burdet, Radulpho de Turnvill, Rogero de Graunt. Euſtachio filio Reginaldi, Petronilla uxore Roberti filii noſtri; Iſabellâ comitiſſâ de Norhampton, Hathawiſâ comitiſſâ Glouceſtr', & multis aliis.

2. Carta confirmationis.

Robertus filius Roberti comitis Legreceſtrie, omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglicis, & omnibus fidelibus ſancte eccleſie, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe abbatie quam Robertus comes Legrec', pater meus, fecit & fundavit apud Etonam, de ordine monialium de Fonte-Ebraudi, ipſam Eatonam cum pertinentiis ſuis, ſicut ipſam tenuit die quo primus rex Henricus fuit vivus & mortuus, exceptâ terrâ illam quam canonici ſancte Marie Legrec' de Prato tenent in Stocchiford, & exceptâ terrâ illâ quam moniales de Caſâ Dei tenent in Catleburg & in Eaton. Et in Keneteberiâ xxv libr' terre. Et in Welles xx millia anguilla, & mille & quinquies centum groſſas anguillas, & lx eſterlings, exceptis duobus millibus de xx, que ſunt de decimâ eccleſie S. Marie de Prato Legrec'. Preterea confirmo illam donationem quam ſoror mea Iſabel & filius ſuus comes Simon fecerunt predicte abbatie, videlicet, duas carucatas terre in Waltham, una cum paſturâ trecentarum ovium. Et de dono Ricardi Mallore in Suneford duas virgatas terre & dimidiam quas tenuit de feodo meo, & in Legr' duos ſolidos in manſurâ quam tenuit Wido Breadleas de ipſo Ricardo; & totam terram quam ipſe Ricardus habuit in ſupradictâ Eatonâ in boſco & in plano; & terram illam quam Robertus filius Jocelini donavit predicte abbatie, ſcilicet totam terram illam quam habuit in Eatonâ inter aquam & nemus, & ex aliâ parte in Eatonâ duas virgatas terre, & ſex ſolidatas terre quas Willielmus de Novo Mercato tenebat de Jocelino patre ſuo, cum toto nemore ſuo, ſalvis aiſiamentis ſuis & hominum ſuorum de Hidâ, ſine waſto & venditione. Quare volo & firmiter precipio quod eadem abbatia, & moniales de ordine de Fonte Ebraudi ibidem Deo ſervientes, habeant & teneant in perpetuam eleemoſinam omnia hec predicta, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, & cum libertatibus, & cum omnibus liberis conſuetudinibus ſuis, ſoluta & quieta ab omni ſeculari ſervitio & exactione. Teſtibus, Waltero epiſcopo Coventrie, Roberto epiſcopo Lincolnie, Mauricio epiſcopo de Bangor, Turſtino abbate de Gerewedon, Ricardo abbate de Legreceſtriâ, Willielmo abbate de Redemorâ, Ricardo archidiacono Coventrie, Hugone archidiacono Legr', Roberto capellano, Matheo capellano, Willielmo comite Glouceſtrie, Hugone comite Ceſtrie, Willielmo comite Warwici, comite Simone, Ivone de Harwecurt, Willielmo Burdet, Ernaldo de Boſco, Roberto Pincernâ, Gaufrido l'Abbe, Rogero de Cranford, Rogero Walenſi, Radulfo Fridei, Ricardo l'Abbe, Hugone Burdet, Aſcetello Malore, Radulfo de Turvill, Herveio Mareſcallo [1].

---

[1] This benefaction has been aſcribed, in p. 23, to the firſt earl Robert of the name of Bellomont, from a ſuppoſition that, as it occurred in the regiſter of biſhop Remigius, it muſt have been made before the year 1092, when that prelate died. But, on a further examination, it appears that this regiſter, which bears the name of Remigius from its beginning with the acts of that biſhop, extends beyond his period; and the deed, being addreſſed 'A. ep'o,' can only mean biſhop Alexander, who preſided from 1123 to 1147, and by whoſe permiſſion the ſecond Bellomont, earl Robert Boſſu, founded the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis in 1144, as related in p. 26. To this earl, therefore, and not to his father, the benefaction to the church of Lincoln muſt be aſcribed; and the date may be fixed to about the year 1144, when he made a ſimilar reſtitution to the canons of St. Mary at Leiceſter, and gave fourteen other burgeſſes at Leiceſter to the monks of St. Ebrulf, as mentioned in p. 48.

[2] Mon. Angl. I. 518; ex membrana quadam penes decan. & capitul. eccleſ. Lichfelden. an. 1638.

3. De terris ex dono Johannis Huwett & Willielmi Witherle in Eton Monialium & Roteby, com' Leic', 1392.

JURATORES dicunt quod non eſt ad dampnum d̄ni regis nec aliorum, ſi d̄us rex concedat Johanni Huwett & Willielmo Witherle, capellanis, quod ipſi quatuor meſſuagia, cum pertinentiis, in Eton Monialium & Roteby, in com' Leic', dare poſſint & aſſignare prioriſſe de Eton Monialium. Et quod predicta meſſuagia tenentiis de predictâ prioriſſâ per ſervicium 4s. & ſectam curie de tribus in tres. Et ipſa prioriſſa de d̄no duce Lancaſtr', ut de honore Lancaſtrie; per quod ſervicium ignorant [2].

N° X. LUFFELD Monaſtery in NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, a Cell to WESTMINSTER. (See p. 48.)

Fundatio monaſterii beate Marie de Luffeld, in comitatu Northampton, infra foreſtam in Whittelwode [3].

ROBERTUS, comes Legreceſtrie, Radulpho Pincerne, & omnibus baronibus & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe ſervo Dei Malgerio monacho in eleemoſinam parvam landam que eſt inter Lumbreodam & Cepeleiam, ad manſiones & oratorium ibidem faciendum, & de aliâ terrâ de Cerneleiâ tantum ad edificandum quantum ego convenienter conſiderabo per conſilium amicorum meorum. Et hoc feci pro animâ regis Anglorum Willielmi, & Matilde regine, & Rogeri de Bello-monte, & Adeline uxoris ſue, & pro anima patris mei Roberti & anteceſſorum meorum, & pro ſalute anime mee & fratris mei Gualerani. Teſtibus, Gualerano comite de Mellent, & Oſberto capellano, & Ricardo magiſtro, & Cuthberto capellano, & Warino de Puni, & Roberto filio Erchemberti, & Galfrido de Turvill, & Radulpho Pincernâ, & Radulpho Parvo, & Willielmo de Divâ, & Goſſelino mareſcallo, & Oſulfo foreſtario. Et hoc etiam feci per conſilium & laudem comitis de Guarennâ, & Nigelli de Albineio, & Gualerani fratris mei comitis de Mellent.

N° XI. Foundation Charters of ALCESTER Priory, in Warwickſhire. (See p. 48.)

1. Carta fundationis [4].

ANNO ab incarnatione Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti MCXL. Ego R. Pincerna, divino inſtinctu ſancte religionis amore ſuccenſus, frequentique inſtigatione domini Simonis epiſcopi, & G. prioris qui tunc temporis regimini ſancte Wigornenſis eccleſie pariter preſidebant, in ampliorem Dei dilectionem elevatus; eo inquam anno fundavi eccleſiam ſancte Marie de Inſulâ, & à fundamentis edificavi in honore ſancte individueque Trinitatis, & in laude glorioſe Dei genetricis Marie, & beate Anne matris ejus, ſanctique Joſep nutricii Salvatoris noſtri, & Sancti Johannis Baptiſte, & Johannis Evangeliſte, Omniumque Sanctorum, pro animabus Willielmi ſenioris & Mathildis regine, & Willielmi junioris regum Anglorum, & Henrici regis, & Mathildis regine, Stephani regis, & Mathildis regine, Rogeri de Bellomonte & Atheline uxoris ſue, Roberti comitis de Mellent & Iſabel comitiſſe, Roberti comitis de Legrec', & Avicie comitiſſe, filiorumque eorum, Galeranni comitis de Mellento, & pro animabus patris & matris mee, & pro remedio anime mee, pro animâ Avicie uxoris mee, & pro animabus filiorum parentumque, omniumque anteceſſorum ſucceſſorumque meorum, ſperans in futurâ mihi profuturum ſi quid in preſenti Deo placiter peregiſſem, illud quoque ſemper in mente revolvens, "In quâ menſurâ menſi fueritis remetietur vobis;" & illud quod ad Deum dicitur, "Tu reddes unicuique opera ſua." Ut autem prefata eccleſia & Deo acceptior & hominibus eſſet gratior, quoniamque me, ex illo Salomonis proverbio, "Omnia fac cum conſilio & poſt factum non penitebis," nihil abſque aliorum conſilio ſatis providè facturum animadverti, tam etiam laicorum prudentiam quam ordinatarum perſonarum diſcretionem & ſapientiam ſuper hâc re conſului, totum in animo habens pro poſſe meo facere, quicquid ipſi piè vellent diſponere. Conſilio ergo & conſenſu dominorum meorum, Stephani regis Anglie, Roberti comitis de Legrec': Galeranni comitis de Mellent, filiorumque meorum Roberti & Galfridi favore fretus, auctoritatem quoque Thebaldi Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopi, Simonis Wigornenſis epiſcopi, & aliorum epiſcoporum, abbatum, baronum totius Anglie ſecutus, in ipſâ eccleſiâ monaſtice religionis viros poſui, eiſque Robertum, Wigornenſis eccleſie monachum profeſſum, quem in fundando predictam eccleſiam à primi lapidis poſitione, ſocium & cooperatorem habui, virum in rei familiaris diſpenſatione providum, & in ordinis tractatione diſcretum, primum abbatem prefeci, communi electione Simonis epiſcopi & totius congregationis Sancte Marie de Wireceſtriâ, ipſo Simone epiſcopo eam benedicente primo anno fundationis ejuſdem eccleſie, in die Sancti Martini, paſtoralemque baculum cum animarum curâ ei committente, me verò terrene dignitatis honorem ei largiente. Nolo autem latere poſteros conventionem factam inter eccleſiam Sancte Marie de Wireceſtriâ & eccleſiam S. Marie de Inſulâ, ne fortè in futurum ex ignorantiâ quelibet inter eas oriretur diſſenſio ſi non eſſet rei veritas huic inſerta privilegio. Inprimis itaque proviſum conventioneque ſtatutum eſt, ut prior Wigornenſis, & abbas de Inſulâ, fratres quoque utriuſque congregationis, in caritate ſincerâ ſeſe diligant, & ſint cor una & via una, ut utrimque exaltetur & honorificetur Deus. Deinde ut uterque conventus ſit unus & idem in omnibus, dante utrobique diſcretione prelatorum, juxta regulam Sancti Benedicti, & auctoritate Wigornenſis epiſcopi, hinc & inde vigente, ad quas actiones utriuſque domus epiſcopaliter canoniceque reſpicere habent. Cum autem abbatem de Inſulâ de medeo fecerit Deus, alius eligetur abbas in capitulo Wigorn' communi convenientiâ utriuſque conventûs, vel de fratribus ejuſdem eccleſie, vel ſi conſultiùs videbitur de fratribus Wigorn' eccleſie, epiſcopo Wigornenſe (ut ſupra dictum eſt) curam animarum cum paſtorali baculo tradente. Jam dicta eſt conventio inter utramque eccleſiam, nunc autem ſubjungam donaria que contuli eidem eccleſie. Donavi in perpetuum eccleſie S. Marie de Inſulâ, ad victum & ad uſum monachorum ibidem Deo ſervientium, ipſam Inſulam & totum dominium meum de Cokenmeuſâ, & quicquid habeo in Pecbuurdâ, ſcilicet IV hydas & dimidium, ita liberè & quietè ſicut liberiùs & meliùs eas priùs tenueram de domino meo Roberto comite de Legrec'; totamque terram de Waltford, & de Cunbruge, & totam terram meam de Blinchesfeld, cum omnibus appenticiis & conſuetudinibus ſuis, exceptis lx ſolidis quos abbas de Inſulâ dabit ſingulis annis Sancte Marie le Bec. Et Gaufridus filius meus dedit in perpetuum eidem loco xx ſolidos in Impingeham. Adjeci quoque eidem monaſterio capellam de caſtello meo de Overeſleiâ, & eccleſiam de Alenceſter, eccleſiam de Glen, & eccleſiam de Teingwrdâ, eccleſiam de Merſtonâ, cum omnibus ad eas pertinentibus. Dedi etiam eidem loco totam decimam de dominio meo de Overeſleiâ, in virgultis, in agris, in vineis, in nemoribus, in parchis, in pratis, in piſcariis; & medietatem decime de dominio meo de Pebbewrdâ, & medietatem decime de dominio meo de Cherletunâ, & duas garbas de dominio meo de Raggaleiâ, & totam decimam de dominio meo de Dorſintonâ, & de Malecote, de Bromâ, de Wihtlacesford, & molendinum de Grobi, & medietatem trium molendinorum de Overeſleiâ. Statuimus ut, decedente abbate de Inſulâ, omnis poſſeſſio monaſterii ubicunque fuerit remaneat integra & libera, cum omni jure & conſuetudine ſuâ, in manu & diſpoſitione prioris & monachorum capituli ſancte Marie de Inſulâ. Hoc autem perpetuò ſervandum firmavimus, quia abbas de Inſulâ non habet proprios redditus, ſed communes cum fratribus. Qui verò, Deo annuente, canonicâ electione ſubſtitutus fuerit, non cum ſuis ſecularibus conſanguineis, ſeu quibuſlibet aliis, elemoſinas monaſterii malè utendo deſperdat, ſed pauperibus & peregrinis & hoſpitibus ſuſcipiendis curam gerat. Terras cenſuales non ad feudum donet; nec faciat milites niſi in ſacrâ veſte Chriſti, in quâ parvulos ſuſcipere modeſtè caveat, maturos autem ſeu diſcretos tam clericos quam laicos providè ſuſcipiat. Nemo de poſſeſſione monaſterii aliquid feudaliter teneat abſolutum, ſed ad cenſum annuum. In abbatis & monachorum domo & poſſeſſione nullus per hereditatem teneat officium; ſed in arbitrio abbatis & monachorum de tranſmutandis prepoſitis ſeu aliis officiariis cauſa conſiſtat. Si quis autem hoc noſtre ſtabilitionis & donationis decretum infringere ſeu minuere vel tranſmutare ſcienter preſumpſerit, ſummus Judex eum contrahat & eradicet cum ſuâ poteſtate, ut permaneat ſine omni hereditate in clade & fame. Si quis verò prefatam eccleſiam cum prefatâ libertate & poſſeſſione ſervaverit, Deus omnium bonis omnibus ſtabiliat eum & ſervet in evum.

---

[1] See a confirmation of theſe grants by king Hen. II, Dugd. Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 529; and a bull of pope Alexander, p. 520.

[2] Peck, MS. 4936; ex Inq. ad quod dampn. 16 Ric. II. 2. n. 20.

[3] Dugd. Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 521; ex regiſtro de Luffeld, penes decanum & capitulum Weſtmonaſterii, an. 1640, fol. 1, 2.

[4] Dugd. ibid. vol. I. p. 470; ex antiquo codice MS. in bibl. Bodleianâ, 1640. Vide etiam Cart. 14 Edw. III. N° 12.

2. Confirmatio fundationis [1].

ROBERTUS comes Leiceſtrie, univerſis ſancte Dei eccleſie filiis, in Chriſto, ſalutem. Notum ſit omnibus vobis, tam Francis quam Anglis, quod ego Robertus comes Legeceſtrie, pro ſalute anime mee, & pro redemptione peccatorum meorum, divino admonitus inſtinctu, conſilio & rogatu Radulfi Pincerne & Amicie uxoris ejus, & filiorum ſuorum, fundavi eccleſiam de Inſulâ, in honore Beate Dei genitricis Marie, & Beati Johannis Baptiſte; & eidem eccleſie, & monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, conceſſi omnes res & poſſeſſiones, in terris, in eccleſiis, & aliis redditibus, cum omnibus libertatibus & conſuetudinibus ad eas pertinentibus, quas Radulfus Pincerna, in manu meâ ponens, ab omni jure ſuo abſolutas, & ab omni ſervitio terreno, & ſeculari exactione, liberas & quietas clamavit, ad predictam eccleſiam fundandam, pro ſalute anime ſue, & uxoris ejus Amicie. Quare rerum ſeriem ut preſentis pagine teſtimonio poſteris omnibus in perpetuum confirmetur, certis exprimere vocabulis neceſſarium duximus. Inſulam itaque in quâ monaſterium ipſum ſitum eſt, cum totâ terrâ dominicâ de Cokemerſâ, inprimis conceſſimus, & totam terram meam de Waltesford, cum virgatâ terre quam ipſe incrementum dedit, & totam terram de Chelbruge, quam predictus Radulfus Pincerna de me tenuit, cum libertatibus & conſuetudinibus quas ei conceſſi cum predictis terris; & preter hoc concedo totam terram meam de Blingesfeld, monachis in predictâ eccleſiâ degentibus, cum eccleſiâ Sancti Jacobi que de eodem feodo eſt, & cum omnibus libertatibus & conſuetudinibus ad eandem terram pertinentibus, preter ſexaginta ſolidos quos ego dedi eccleſie Sancti Nichaſii de Mellent annuatim perſolvendos. Inſuper concedo eidem eccleſie in manerio de Pebewrdâ tres hidas terre & dimidiam, & molendinum de Groubiry, & medietatem molendinorum de Overeſley, et capellam de caſtello de Overſley, & eccleſiam de Merſetonâ, & eccleſiam de Glen, & eccleſiam de Thengurdâ, cum omnibus earum pertinentiis. Ad hoc autem concedo prefate eccleſie decimam de dominio de Overſley, in agris, in virgultis, in vineis, in nemoribus, in piſcariis, in pratis, in parchis, & medietatem decime de dominio de Pebwrdâ, & pratum Sancti Johannis de Parco. Inſuper concedo, & firmiter ſtatuo, ut ſupra memorata eccleſia, & monachi in eadem Deo ſervientes, ſuam curiam, & omnes conſuetudines & libertates ſuas habeant, in ſocâ & ſacâ, in tol & theam, & infangentheof, & in omnibus querelis, ita liberè, & quietè, & integrè, ſicut ego predictas libertates & conſuetudines habeo. Quare volo & firmiter precipio, quatinus prefata eccleſia & monachi in eadem Deo famulantes hec omnia, que eis conceſſi, liberè & quietè, & ſine omni ſervitio terreno, & exactione ſeculari, ad me pertinente, teneant & poſſideant. Hiis teſtibus; Bernardo priore de Kenillewrth, Ernaldo de Boſco, Willielmo de Bellocampo, Rogero de Waterville, Gaufrido Labbe [2].

3. Carta regis Stephani de confirmatione donationum.

REX archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus cartam celebris memorie domini S. dudum regis Anglie, progenitoris noſtri, in hec verba: "S. rex Anglie archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe in perpetuam elemoſinam Deo & eccleſie ſancte Marie de Inſulâ omnes terras illas quas Radulfus Pincerna eis dedit & conceſſit, videlicet, inſulam & totam terram ſuam dominicam de Cochemerſâ, & capellam de Uverliâ cum appendiciis ſuis, & manerium ſuum de Pebbewurdâ, & eccleſiam de Merſtonâ cum appendiciis ſuis, & eccleſiam de Glen cum appendiciis ſuis, & eccleſiam de Taingwurdâ; & in Eupingham 20 s̄. & molendinum de Groberi, & decimam de Uverliâ totam, de dominico ſuo, & dimidium molendini. Et terram ſuam totam de Walteford & de Chelebrugâ, & terram ſuam de Blinchesfeld totam, 60 s̄. quas inde dedit predictus Radulfus eccleſie ſancti Nicaſii de Mell', & tertiam partem de Pebbewurdâ de decimâ ſuâ de dominico ſuo, & medietatem decime ſue de Cherltonâ, & duas partes decime de Rageleiâ. Quare volo & firmiter precipio quod bene & in pace, & liberè & quietè, & honorificè & plenariè teneant monachi in predictâ eccleſiâ Deo & ſancte Marie ſervientes, cum ſocâ & ſacâ, & toll & theam, & infangetheof, & cum omnibus conſuetudinibus in boſco & plano, & pratis & paſturis, & in omnibus libertatibus cum quibus terre ille erant tempore Roberti comitis de Mellento. Et preter hec concedo predicte eccleſie illud privilegium, & illam dignitatem, quam habet eccleſia Heboracenſis, vel eccleſia ſancte Marie de Wirceſtre, quod comes de Legr' per cartam ſuam confirmavit. Teſtibus; Gualtero comite de Mellento, & Rob' comite Legr', &

---

[1] Dugd. Mon. Ang. I. 471; ex autographo in Bibliothecâ Hattonianâ.

[2] Dugd. ib. 472; ex Cart. de an. 14 E. III. n. 12.

Willielmo comite de Warennâ, & H. comite de Wilteſ', & Willielmo comite Ebor', & comite Simone, & Roberto de Oilli, & Willielmo de Iprâ, & Ernaldo de Boſco, & Roberto Pincernâ, & Willielmo de Pinu. Apud Dreneford.

4. Carta regis Henrici ſecundi [1].

INSPEXIMUS cartam domine H. quondam regis Anglie, progenitoris noſtri, in hec verba: "H. Dei gratiâ rex Anglie, & dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, archiepiſc', &c. ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe in perpetuam elemoſinam Deo & eccleſie S. Marie & S. Johannis Baptiſte de Inſulâ, & monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, terras & tenuras, eccleſias & decimas, & molendina, & omnes redditus eis datos & conceſſos, ubicunque ſint in Angliâ, & omnes res quas Robertus comes Legreceſtrie, & Radulfus Pincerna Overſleie fundator ejuſdem eccleſie, eis adquiſierunt & dederunt, &c. Teſtibus; Theobaldo Cantuar' archiepiſcopo, Johanne Wigorn' epiſc', Roberto comite Legr', Ricardo de Luci, apud Weſtm'.

5. Alia carta ejuſdem regis Henrici [2].

INSPEXIMUS etiam cartam ejuſdem progenitoris noſtri in hec verba: Henricus, &c. Sciatis nos, &c. conceſſiſſe, & hac cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, abbati & monachis de Alenceſtre omnes donationes ſubſcriptas; videlicet, ex dono Willielmi de Botereus totum tenementum quod eſt de feodo ſuo, cum pertinentiis, quod ipſi monachi prius tenuerunt, &c. &c. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Wudeſtoke, 28 die Febr', anno regni noſtri 25.

6. Carti regis Edwardi primi [3].

INSPEXIMUS etiam literas patentes domini E. quondam regis Anglie, avi noſtri, in hec verba: Edwardus, &c. licentiam dedimus, &c. Willielmo le Botiller de Wemme, quod ipſe 60 acras bruere, cum pertinentiis, in Hinſtok, et advocationem eccleſie ejuſdem ville, dare poſſit, &c. prefatis abbati et conventui. Habendum, &c. imperpetuum, &c. Teſt' meipſo, apud Lanrecoſt, 22 Nov', anno regni noſtri 35. Nos autem donationes, &c. confirmamus. Dat' per manum Edwardi ducis Cornubie et comitis Ceſtrie, filii noſtri kariſſimi, cuſtodis Anglie, apud Turrem London', 26 Octobris.

7. Finalis concordia inter Johannem abbatem de Oſolveſton, & Walterum abbatem de Alenceſter, de advocatione capelle S. Egidii de Stretton Magna, in com' Leic'; Feb. 3, 1282-3 [4].

HEC eſt finalis concordia facta in curiâ D. regis apud Salop', in craſtino Purificationis B. Marie, anno regni R. Edwardi filii R. Henricis II°, coram Thomâ de Welond, Johanne de Lovetot, Rogero de Leiceſter, & Willielmo de Burnton, juſtitiariis, & aliis D. R. fidelibus tunc ibi preſentibus; inter Johannem abbatem de Olſelveſton petentem, per Robertum de Bellegravo poſito loco ſuo ad lucrandum vel perdendum; & Walterum abbatem de Alenceſter tenentem; de advocatione capelle S. Egidii de Magnâ Stretton, unde placitum fuit inter eos in eâdem curiâ; ſcilicet, quod predictus abbas de Oſolveſton recognovit predictam advocationem ejuſdem capelle eſſe jus ipſius abbatis de Alenceſter & eccleſie ſue, S. Johannis Baptiſte de Alenceſter; & illam remiſit & quietam clamavit, de ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſiâ ſuâ de Oſolveſton, predicto abbati de Alenceſter & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſie ſue, in perpetuum. Et pro hâc recognitione, remiſſione, quietâ clamantiâ, fine, & concordiâ, idem abbas de Alenceſter conceſſit, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſiâ ſuâ predictâ, quod ipſi de cetero reddent ſingulis annis predicto abbati de Oſolveſton, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſie ſue de Oſolveſton, xlª ſolidos ſterlingorum, ad duos terminos; ſcilicet, medietatem ad Paſcha, & aliam medietatem ad feſtum S. Michaelis; ita quod ſi idem abbas de Alenceſter, vel ſucceſſores ſui, in ſolutione predictorum ſolidorum ad aliquem terminum defecerint, bene licebit eidem abbati de Oſolveſton & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, diſtringere eos per catella ſua in tenementis que idem abbas de Alenceſter tenet in Alenceſter die quâ hec concordia facta fuit, uſque ad plenam ſolutionem denariorum qui eis a retro fuerit de ullo termino.

8. De terris abbatis & conventûs in Glen Magnâ, in com' Leic', e dono Willielmo Gilmeyn, 1294 [5].

JURATORES dicunt quod non eſt ad dampnum D. regis nec aliorum, licet dominus rex concedat Willielmo Gilmeyn de Magnâ Glen, quod ipſe unum meſſuagium & duas virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Magnâ Glen, in com' Leic', dare poſſit abbati de Alenceſter; & quod meſſuagium illud & terra teneantur de Willielmo de Ireis, per ſervicium v s. per annum reddendorum eidem Willielmo. Et quod idem Willielmus reddit x d. per annum manerio de Newton Harecourt in com' predicto.

9. Exemplificatio finalis concordie per Inſpeximus R. Edwardi Tertii, 1343-4 [6].

REX omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus tranſcriptum pedis cujuſdem finis levati in curiâ D. Edwardi nuper regis Anglie avi noſtri, quod coram nobis in cancellariâ noſtrâ conceſſimus in hec verba [Tum recitat prout ſupra, de verbo in verbum]. Nos tranſcriptum illud, ad requiſitionem dilecti nobis in Chriſti Rogeri nunc abbatis de Oſolveſton, tenore preſentium, duximus exemplificandum. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege apud Weſtm', 2° die Martii.

N° XII. Grant of LORETTA Counteſs of Leiceſter to BOCLAND Hoſpital, Somerſetſhire [7].

NOTUM ſit omnibus Chriſti fidelibus, tam preſentibus quàm futuris, hoc ſcriptum viſuris vel audituris, quod ego Loretta comitiſſa Leyceſtrie dedi & conceſſi Deo & Beate Marie & Sancti Johanni Baptiſte, & beatis pauperibus domûs hoſpitalis Jeroſolimitani, ad ſuſtentationem ſororum de Boclaund Deo ſervientium, & ad inveniendum quendam capellanum, fratrem, in eadem domo, qui cotidiè & perpetuò miſſam in honore Beate Virginis Marie in majori eccleſiâ apud Bokland ad altare Beate Virginis celebret, pro ſalute anime mee, & domini Roberti viri mei, comitis quondam Leiceſtrie; & pro ſalute animarum patris & matris mee, & omnium anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum meorum, totam terram meam de Noteſton, & totam terram meam de Yneſſord, citra aquam & ultra aquam, & lxiiii acras de dominico meo ſuper Ruwedone; & totam terram meam de Rudeſcoke, & de Hele, & de Chorlecote, & de Tunecote, & de Boteburne; & totam terram quam tenet Philippus ad viam, cum hominibus predictas terras tenentibus. Et preterea centum acras de dominico meo in Bremmeſmore, & boſcum meum qui vocatur Ancrewde, & unum ferlingum ad Roicheye, cum omnibus pertinentiis ejus, in manerio de Touſtoke, cum paſturis & omnibus aliis ad predictas terras pertinentibus. Et preterea omnimodam communam inter gentem meam ubique liberè & quietè; habendum & poſſidendum in perpetuam & puram eleemoſinam, ſicut ulla eleemoſina liberiùs & quietiùs dari poteſt. Et ut hec mea donatio futuris temporibus perpetuè firmitatis robur optineat, eam preſentis ſcripti munimine cum ſigilli mei appoſitione dignum duxi roborare. Hiis teſtibus; magiſtro Lamberto ſubdecano Walenſi, domino Philippo de Albeni, domino Rogero de la Zuche, Adâ filio Hondobrandi; magiſtro Umfrido canonico Cyceſtrie, magiſtro Reginaldo de Mereſtone, Willielmo capellano de Bukingeham, Waltero clerico de Langeham, Thomâ clerico Glouceſtrie, Nicholao de Wileyâ, & aliis.

---

[1] Cart. de an. 14 E. III. n. 12.

[2] Ibid.

[3] Ibid.

[4] Peck, MS. 4936.

[5] Ad quod dampn. 22 Edw. I. N° 124. Leic.

[6] Pat. 18 Edw. III. pars I. n. p. 32.

[7] Dugd. Mon. Ang. vol. II. p. 438; ex Cart. 11 Hen. III. p. 2. m. 6. per Inſpex.

Nº XIII. Ducatus Comitatuſque Palatini Lancaſtr', necnon Poſſeſſionum Privilegiorumque ab antiquo pertinentium, Illuſtratio; ex Archivis Regiis in Turri London' repoſitis petita & deprompta. Additæ ſunt etiam tabule genealogice Ducum Comitumque predictorum, aliarumque Familiarum magis illuſtrium, unde ipſi non ſolum genus duxerunt ſuum, ſed etiam patrimonia & latifundia ſua variè auxerunt & locupletarunt.

(From a beautiful MS. communicated by the Rev. ROGERS RUDING, B. D. of Merton College, Oxford.)

Cartarum diplomatum indultorumque regiorum ac aliorum in hoc libro fucius deſcriptorum ſummaria & ſuccincta complecio[*].

51 Hen. III.

Rex conceſſit Edmundo filio ſuo caſtrum de Kenilleworth. Habend' ſibi & heredibus de corpore. Et quod liberam chaceam & liberam warrennam in omnibus dnicis terris & boſcis pertin' ad caſtrum.

Rex conceſſit prefato Edmundo honorem, caſtrum, & manerium de Monemuth, cum pertin'. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpor'.

Rex conceſſit prefato Edmundo caſtra de Groſſemunde, Skenefrithe, & Blaunchaſtell. Habend' ut ſupra.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitanie, archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe Edmundo filio noſtro cariſſimo, honorem, com', caſtrum, & villam de Lancaſtr', cum vaccariis & foreſtis de Wireſdel & Lonnedſdall, & Novum caſtrum ſubtus Lynam. Et manerium, caſtrum, & foreſtam de Pykering. Et villam noſtram de Gounemeceſtr'. Et redditum noſtrum villate de Huntindon, cum omnibus pertin' ſuis. Habenda & tenenda eidem Edmundo, & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreat', de nobis & heredibus noſtris, cum feodis militum, advocaconibus eccleſiarum, chartis, libertatibus, conſuetudinibus, & aliis omnibus ad honorem, com', caſtra, villas, dominica, vaccaria, foreſtas, & redditum predictum pertinentibus. Faciendo nobis & hered' noſtris ſervicia inde debita & conſueta. Ita quod prefatum Edmundum vel heredes ſuos predictos inde non diſſeiſiemus, nec diſſeiſiri permittimus; donec ſibi excambium rationabile fecerimus in aliis terris noſtris ad valorem honoris, comitat', caſtrorum, villarum, dominicorum, vaccar', foreſtarum, & reddituum predictorum. Ita eciam quod ſi prefatus Edmundus ſine heredibus de corpore ſuo legitimè procreat' deceſſerit, honor, com', caſtra, ville, dominica, vaccarie, foreſte, & redditus predict', cum pertin', ad nos vel heredes noſtros integrè rev̄tantur. Quare volumus & firmiter precepimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quod dictus Edmundus & heredes ſui predicti imperpetuum habeant & teneant honorem, com', caſtra, maner', villas, dominica, vaccar', foreſtas, & redditus predict', cum feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, chartis, libertatibus, conſuetudinibus, & omnibus aliis ad eadem pertin', faciendo nobis & heredibus noſtris ſervicia inde debita & conſueta. Ita quod prefatum Edmundum vel heredes ſuos predictos inde non diſſeiſiemus, nec diſſeiſiri permittemus, donec eſcambium rationabile ſibi fecerimus in aliis terris noſtris ad valenciam henoris, comitatus, caſtr', maneriorum, villarum, dominicorum, vaccar', foreſtar', & reddituum predictorum. Ita eciam, quod ſi prefatus Edmundus ſine heredibus de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis deceſſerit, honor, comitat', caſtra, maneria, ville, dominica, vaccarie, foreſte, & redditus predict', cum pertinen', ad nos & heredes noſtros integrè revertantur, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; Johanne de Warennâ comite Surr', Humfr' de Bohun comite Hereford & Eſſex, Philippo Baſſet, Rogeto de Somery, Alano la Ruſche, Stephano de Eddeworthe, Bartholomeo le Bigod, & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Sanctum Paulum, London', triceſimo die Junii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo primo.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitaine, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quod conceſſimus Edmundo filio noſtro comiti Leyc', quod ipſe & heredes ſui habeant & teneant de nobis & heredibus noſtris omnes terras ſuas & feoda ſua, cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis conſuetudinis ſuis, bene et in pace, et honorificè, libera et quieta de ſectis ſhirarum et hundredorum, et auxilio vicecomitum, ſive capiatur per hidatas terre, ſive per carucatas. Et de pecuniâ dandâ pro murdro et latrocinio, et de denariis ad francum plegium pertinentibus, et toll, et theam, et infangenethef, et utfangenethef, et ſok et ſak, et quietanciam de dominicis ſuis per dominica noſtra de pontagio, et paſſagio, theoloneo, pedagio, ſtallagio, cornagio, et tallagio, geldis, et danegeldis, blodwyte, fictwyte, operacionibus caſtellorum, murorum, poncium, parcorum, foſſatorum, calcearum, et domorum; et quod habeant liberam chaceam ſuam de Wiſſelay et Wymburcholte, et captionem venationis in boſcis illis que dudum fuit adjurata per legales milites in curiâ noſtrâ apud Weſtm'. Et quod predicti boſci ſint quieti de vaſto et regardo. Et quod ipſe et heredes ſui eiſdem libertatibus et conſuetudinibus ſine impedimento noſtri vel heredum noſtrorum utantur imperpetuum. Quare volumus et firmiter precipimus, pro nobis et heredibus noſtris, quod predictus Edmundus et heredes ſui habeant et teneant de nobis et hered' noſtris omnes terras ſuas et feoda ſua, cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis conſuetud' ſuis, bene et in pace, et honorificè, libera et quieta de ſectis ſhirarum et hundredorum et auxilio vicecom', ſive capiatur per hidatas, ſive per carucatas terre. Et de pecuniâ dandâ pro murdro et latrocinio. Et de denariis ad francum plegium pertin', et toll et theam, et infangenethef et utfangenthef, et ſok et ſak, et quietanciam de dominicis ſuis per dominica noſtra de pontagio, et paſſagio, theolonio, pedagio, panagio, ſtallag', cornagio, et tallagio, geldis et danegeldis, blodewyte, fictwyte, operacionibus caſtellorum, murorum, poncium, parcorum, foſſatorum, calcearum, et domorum. Et quod habeant liberam chaceam ſuam de Wiſſelay et Wymburneholte, et capcionem venacionis in boſcis illis, que dudum fuit adjurata per legales milites in curiâ noſtrâ apud Weſtm'. Et quod predicti boſci ſint quieti de vaſto et regardo. Et quod ipſe et heredes ſui eiſdem libertatibus et conſuetudinibus ſine impedimento noſtri vel heredum noſtrorum utantur imperpetuum, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto Waleraund, Roberto Aguyllon, Nicholao de Leukenore, Willielmo de Aete, Johanne de la Lynde, Johanne de Turberville, Galfrido de Perry, Gilberto filio Hugonis, Bartholomeo le Bigod, et aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Weſtm', duodecimo die Januarii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo primo.

---

[*] In this epitome, the articles which relate to Leiceſterſhire are copied at large.

52 Hen.

52 Hen. III.

Mandatum eſt priori de Trentham, quod ſit intendens Edmundo filio regis ratione honoris Novi Caſtri ſubtus Lymam.

Pat. 52 Hen. III. m. 28.

Rex militibus, liberis hominibus, et omnibus aliis ten' de honore Lancaſtr', ſalutem. Cum dudum dederimus Edmundo filio noſtro honorem predictum, cum wardis, releviis, eſcaetis, et omnibus aliis rebus pertinent', ad ipſum honorem ſpectantibus; habend' ſibi et heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreand' imperpetuum. Vobis mandamus quod eidem Edmundo et heredibus ſuis, ſicut predictum eſt, in omnibus que ad dictum honorem pertinent de cetero ſitis intendentes et reſpondentes. Teſte rege apud Weſtm', octavo die Februarii, anno regni ſui quinquageſimo ſecundo.

Pat. 52 Hen. III. m. 5.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Cum nuper commiſerimus dilecto et fideli noſtro Rogero de Lancaſtr' comitat' ñrm Lancaſtr', cum pertinentiis, cuſtod' quoad vixerit; ita quod reddet nobis inde per ann' centum marcas ad Sc̄c̄m noſtrum. Et poſtmodum com' illum cum pertin' Edmundo filio noſtro ĩmo ad ſuſtentacionem ſuam conceſſerimus. Nos volentes eidem Rogero in hâc parte noſtram facere ſpecialem promittimus ei bonâ fide, quod ipſum in premiſſis conſervabimus indempnis temporibus oportunis. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege apud Ebor', decimo quinto die Septembris, anno regni ſui lijdo.

Cart. 52 Hen. III. n. 9.

Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Quia accepimus per inquiſitionem quam per dilectum clericum noſtrum magiſtrum Willielmum de Clifford, eſcaetorem noſtrum citra Trentam, fieri fecimus, quod manerium de Aſſeby, cum pertin', quod ad manum noſtram devenit occaſione felonie quam Willielmus de Aſſeby fecit interficiendo quendam hominem malicioſè in prioratu de Cateſby, eſt eſcaeta noſtra; ita quod illud dare poſſumus cui voluimus ſine injuria alicui facienda. Dedimus et conceſſimus, et hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmavimus Edmundo filio noſtro regino manerium predictum, cum feodis militum, dotibus cum acciderint, eſcaetis, et omnibus aliis ad dictum manerium pertinentibus; habend' et tenend' de nobis et heredibus noſtris eidem Edmundo, et heredibus vel aſſignatis ſuis imperpetuum; faciendo ſervicia inde debita et conſueta. Quare volumus, &c. Dat' per manum regis apud Ebor', decimo die Septembr', anno regni ſui quinquageſimo ſecundo.

53 Hen. III.

Quod predictus Edmundus habeat in terris de Kermerdin, Kardigan, Skenefrithe, Groſemonde, et Blaunchaſtell, regale regis, ſicut alii marchiones habent in terris ſuis in Marchwalliâ.

Pat. 53 Hen. III. m. 15.

Rex omnibus ballivis, &c. ſalutem. Cum per cartam noſtram dederimus et conceſſerimus Edmundo filio noſtro honorem, villam, caſtrum Leyc', et omnes terras et ten' ejuſdem honoris, cum feodis militum et aliis pertinentibus ſuis, quocumque nomine cenſeri poſſint, que fuerunt quondam Simonis de Monteforti comitis Leyc', inimici noſtri, et que ſecundum legem et conſuetudinem regni noſtri, per guerram quam contra nos, ad coheredac̄oem ñram, in regno ñro excitavit, et bellaque contra nos, in quorum altero apud Eveſham tanquam inimicus noſter interfectus fuerat, commiſit, ad nos tanquam eſcaeta ñra per p̄dc̄m foriſfactum devenerunt; habend' et tenend' eidem Edmundo et heredibus ſuis de corpore legitimè procreatis imperpetuum. Nos, eidem filio gratiam facere volentes uberiorem, conceſſimus ei ſeneſcalciam Anglie, quam idem Simon quondam habuit, habend' et tenend' ad totam vitam ipſius Edmundi, cum omnibus ad ſeneſcalciam illam pertinentibus, de gratiâ ñrâ ſpeciali. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Windſ', nono die Maii, anno regni ſui 53°.

Maritagium Anelme filie et heredis Willielmi de Fortibus comitis Albemarlie emptum pro predicto Edmundo.

Cart. 53 Hen. III.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, et dux Aquitanie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, et omnibus ballivis et fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, et hâc cartâ ñrâ confirmâſſe Edmundo filio ñro cariſſimo honorem, villam, et caſtrum Leyceſtr', et omnes terras et tenementa ejuſdem honoris, cum feodis militum, et aliis omnibus pertin' ſuis, quocunque nomine cenſeri poſſint, que fuerunt quondam Symonis de Monteforti, comit' Leyc', inimici ñri, et que sc̄dm legem et conſuetudinem regni ñri per guerram quam contra nos, ad exheredacionem ñram, in regno ñro excitavit, et bella que contra nos, in quorum altero apud Eveſham, quo tanquam inimicus ñr interfectus fuerat commiſit, ad nos tanquam eſcaeta ñra per predictam forisfc̄uram ſuam devenerunt, habend' et tenend' eidem Edmundo et heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis, de nobis et heredibus ñris, bene et in pace, cum omnibus ad dictum honorem, villam, et caſtrum ſpectantibus, quocunque jure vel nomine cenſeri poſſint, ſicut idem Symon ea quondam tenuit et habuit; faciendo inde nobis et heredibus ñris ſervicia inde debita et conſueta. Et omnes alias terras et ten' que idem Symon tenuit de aliis capitalibus d̄nis ſuis, et que per predictam forisfc̄uram ſuam, de communi conſenſu et conſilio magnatum ac fidelium regni ñri, ad ñram ordinacionem et diſpoſicionem, ſicut et terre aliorum rebellium ñrorum qui nobiſcum in bellis ſupradictis congreſſi fuerant; ſalvis capitalibus d̄nis homagiis et ſerviciis ſuis hâc vice pertinentibus, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre N. Winton' ep̄o, Edwardo primogenito filio ñro, Johanne de Warennâ comite Surr', Willielmo de Valenc' fratre ñro, Roberto Waleraund, Nicholao de Yatingden, Petro de Chaumpnent, Waltero de Perry, Willielmo Belet, Willielmo de Faukham, et aliis. Dat' per manum ñram apud Windeſore, viceſimo ſecundo die Aprilis, anno regni ñri quinquageſimo tercio.

Pat. 53 Hen. III. m. 8.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Cum Edmundus filius ñr cariſſimus in brevi profecturus ſit in Terram Sanctam, in ſubſidium ejuſdem terre, ob quod neceſſe habet terras ſuas in Angl' dimittere ad firmam, vel aliter obligare. Nos attendentes minus ſecur' fore illis qui terras illas ad firmam recipient ſi forte de eodem Edmundo humanitus contingeret, quod abſit, preſertim cum quedam de terris ſuis ad nos rev̄ti debeant ſi ſine herede de corpore ſuo decederet; conceſſimus eidem filio ñro, pro nobis et heredibus ñris, quod omnes terras et ten' ſua in Angl', exceptis caſtris ſuis et forcellettis, dimittere poſſit ad firmam cuicumque vel quibuſcumque voluerit, ad terminum ſeptem annorum, prout ſibi magis viderit expedire; ita quod liceat firmariis predictis terras et ten' predicta, cum pertin', in omni eventu tenere, et exitus earum percipere, uſque ad finem predicti ſeptenn', ſine contradiccione vel impedimento ñri vel heredum ñrorum. Et nos dimiſſiones ſeu affirmaciones hujuſmodi confirmabimus per cartas ñras in formâ predictâ illis quibus fuerint confirmand' ſicut predictum eſt. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 25° die Julii, anno predicto.

Pat. 53 Hen. III. m. 8.

Rex omnibus, &c. ſalutem. Cum Edmundus filius ñr cariſſimus in b̃ri profecturus ſit in Terram Sanctam in ſubſidium ejuſdem terre, ac multis ſit debitis oña-tus: Nos, attendentes periculoſum eſſe anime ſue ſi, eo taliter recedente, debita ſua, que non niſi de exitibus terrarum ſuarum poſſent exſolvi, remaneant in incertis, cum major pars terrar' ſuarum ad nos devolvi debeat ſi eum ſine herede de corpore ſuo decedere contingeret, quod abſit; conceſſimus eidem Edmundo, pro nobis et heredibus ñris, quod ſi forte de ip̄o citra lapſum ſeptennii a die confeccionis preſentium computandi humanitus contingat, quod abſit, predictis debitis et aliis que ad exemtionem voti crucis contrahet non ſolutis, executores vel creditores ipſius Edmundi terras et ten' ſua predicta, cum pertin', teneant liberè et quietè, et exitus earundem in acquietanciam debitorum ipſius Edmundi convertant, uſque ad finem predicti ſeptenn', ſive contradictione vel impedimento ñri vel ñrorum, ſc̄dm q̄d idem Edmundus in teſtamento ſuo duxerit ordinand'. Ita tamen quod in fine predicti ſeptenn' terre & ten' predicta ad nos vel heredes ñros liberè revertantur. In cujus, &c. Teſte ut ſupra.

Cart. 54 Hen. III. n. 1.

Rex conceſſit Edmundo filio ſuo cariſſimo quod ipſe & heredes ſui imperpetuum habeant unum mercatum apud manerium ſuum de Baggeworth, in comitatu Leiceſtr', ſingulis ſeptimanis, per diem Veneris, & unam feriam ibidem ſingulis annis, per tres dies duratur', videlicet, in vigiliâ, in die, et in craſtino exaltationis ſancte Crucis, niſi mercatum illud & feria ſint ad nocumentum vicinorum mercatorum et vicinarum feriarum. Dat' per manum regis, 18° die Octobris, anno predicto.

55 Hen. III.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo maneria de Meleburne, Kingeſlawe, Dylum, Lugwardyn, Mawardin, Beere, Rodley, Minſtreworthe, & Eſingwolde, cum membro ſuo de Hoby; habend' ſibi & heredibus de corpor'.

Placea terre infra Judaiſmum, London'.

Pro domo in vico de Milke-ſtrete, in civitate London'.

Pat. 56 Hen. III. m. 6.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Inſpeximus l̄ras patentes Edmundi filii ñri cariſſimi, in hec verba: "Univerſis preſentes literas inſpecturis, Edmundus illuſtris regis Anglie filius ſalutem. Noveritis nos, profecturi verſus terr' ſc̄am in ſervicio Jħu Chriſti, dimiſimus & com̄iſimus Domine A. Dei gratiâ regine Anglie, matri ñre, locum ñrm & poteſtatem ñram in Angliâ; ita quod ſuper omnes ſeneſcallos, attornatos, ballivos, conſtabularios, receptores, ceteroſque miniſtros & fideles ñros in Angl', ſit ſuperior atque major, & quod ipſos poſſit ſtatuere, amovere, & mutare, quando ſibi placuerit & viderit expedire. Habeat etiam liberam poteſtatem, loco ñri, preſentandi ad eccleſias vacantes quarum advocationes ad nos pertinent, & conferendi, vendendi, obligandi, aſſignandi, ad firmam ponendi, terras ñras in Angl', cum eſcaetis, wardis, maritagiis, & omnibus aliis que nob' r̄one dictarum terrarum quocunque jure accidere poſſunt. Poſſit eciam dare vel vendere de boſcis ñris & venacione ñra ubi & quando viderit expedire. Habeat inſuper poteſtatem ſubſtituendi ſibi quem vel quos, & quandocunque voluerit, ad predicta omnia vel ad aliqua predictorum exequenda, qui eandem in predictos optineant poteſtatem. Habeat eciam poteſtatem contrahendi mutuum ad opus ñrm, & obligandi nos, heredes & aſſignatos ñros, & omnia bona ñra mobilia & immobilia, & faciendi omnia que nos facere poſſemus vel debemus ſi preſentes eſſemus, ratum & firmum perpetuo habituri quicquid per predictam matrem ñram, vel ſubſtitutum ſeu ſubſtitutos ab ipſâ, factum fuerit in premiſſis. Promittimus eciam, pro nobis & heredibus ñris, quod conceſſiones, donaciones, aſſignaciones, obligaciones, permutaciones, ſi quas, per dictam dominam reginam vel ſubſtitutum ab eâ fieri contigerit, citra reditum ñrm in Angl', ratas & gratas habebimus imperpetuum & acceptas. In cujus rei teſtimonium preſentibus l̄ris ſigillum ñrm fecimus apponi. Dat' London', decimo tercio die Februarii, anno regni đni regis patris ñri quinquageſimo quinto." Inſpeximus eciam l̄ras patentes quas prefata Alianora regina Angl' conſors ñra fecit cariſſimo nepoti ñro Edmundo filio Ricardi quondam regis Alemann', fr̄is ñri, in hec verba. "A. Dei gratiâ regina Anglie, đna Hib̄nie, & duciſſa Acquitann', omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Cum Edmundus filius ñr plenam nobis dederit, per l̄ras ſuas patentes, poteſtatem vendendi, alienandi, obligandi ad firmam, ſeu ad terminum tradendi, omnes terras & ten' ſua cum pertin' in Angl', et ad ordinand' inde omnia que idem Edmundus facere poſſet ſi preſens eſſet, quamdiu fuerit in partibus tranſmarinis: Nos, pro tribus milibus & quingentis marcis ſterlingorum, quas cariſſimus nepos ñr Edmundus de Alemann' nob' tradidit, ad opus predicti Edmundi filii noſtri, tunc in partibus Jerl̄m in ſervic' Dei agentis, conceſſimus, dimiſimus, & tradidimus prefato Edmundo nepoti noſtro maneria Leyceſtr', cum burgo & foreſtâ, preter pannagium, venationem, & venditionem boſci de Hinkeleye, cum firmâ burgi, Shulton, Deresford, Thorenton, & Baggeworth, cum redditu quem dñs Petrus de Montefort debet in Gunthorp, ſimul cum magnâ cur', viſu francplegii, & aliis que pertinent ad honorem Leyceſtr', in com' Leyc', Northt', Warr', Nott', & Rott', & ſimiliter firmas Gomeceſtr' & Huntingdon, cum cellariis & nundinis Sancte Ivonis, cum omnibus pertin' ſuis, exceptis advocat' eccleſiarum, cuſtodiis feodorum militum, & eſcaetis. Habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo nepoti ñro, executoribus & aſſignatis ſuis, lib̄e & quietè, a feſto Sancti Petri quod dicitur ad vinc̄la, anno regni đni ñri regis quinquageſimo ſexto, uſque ad terminum quatuor annorum proximè ſequentium plenarie completorum; reddendo inde annuas elemoſinas debitas & conſuetas de predicto honore, exceptâ elemoſinâ que quondam reddi conſuevit monialibus de Pratell', & reddendo domino Ricardo Syward viginti marcas per annum. Ita quod predictus Edmundus nepos, executores vel aſſignati ſui, omnes p̄dict' terras & ten', cum ꝑtin', p̄dicto Edmundo filio ñro, vel heredibus ſuis, in fine predicti termini reſtituant, in eodem ſtatu in quo idem Edmundus eas recep', ſimul cum imbladaturâ & inſtauro in predictis terris inventis, vel eorum pretium. Et ſi contingat quod predictus Edmundus, executores vel aſſignati ſui, per guerram, inimicitiam, vel incurſum hoſtium, ſeu per reglaptatem, infra predictum terminum, dampnum vel jacturam in predictis terris & tenementis incurrant, idem Edmundus nepos ñr, executores & aſſign' ſui, habeant & teneant omnia predicta, cum pertin', quouſque de exitibus ejuſdem integrè levaverint ad valenciam ejuſdem dampni & jacture. Conceſſimus etiam, nomine prefati Edmundi filii ñri, quod ipſe & heredes ſui omnes predictas terras, ten', firmas, & alia, cum pertin', predicto Edmundo nepoti ñro, executor' & aſſignatis ſuis, uſque ad finem predicti termini, contra omnes gentes warantizabunt. In cujus rei teſtimonium preſenti ſcripto ſigillum ñrm fecimus apponi. Dat' London', 28° die Julii, anno, &c. đni ñri regis, quinquageſimo ſexto." Nos autem conceſſionem, dimiſſionem, & redditionem predictas ratas habentes & gratas, eas pro nobis & heredibus ñris, quantum in nobis eſt, prefato nepoti ñro, & executoribus vel aſſignatis ſuis, concedimus & confirmamus, ſicut l̄re patent' predicte rationabiliter teſtantur. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', viceſimo octavo die Julii, anno regni ſui quinquageſimo ſexto.

Cart. 6 Edw. I. n. 15.

Rex conceſſit dilecto & fideli ſuo Henrico de Laſcy, comiti Lincoln', & conſtabular' Ceſtr', quod ipſe & heredes ſui imperpetuum habeant unum mercatum ſingulis ſeptimanis, per diem Mercurii, apud manerium ſuum de Donington, in comitatu Leiceſtr', & unam feriam ibidem ſingulis annis, per tres dies duraturam, videlicet, in vigiliâ, & in die, & in craſtino Sancti Edwardi regis: Niſi mercatum illud & feria illa ſint ad nocumentum vicinorum mercatorum & vicinarum feriarum. Dat' per manum regis, apud Weſtm', viceſimo ſexto die Maii, anno regni ſui ſexto.

Mandatum regis de terris G. de Frauncis defuncti, in Haddon, Buſbinghull, & Rouliſleghe, liberand' predicto Edmundo, de cujus feodo terr' & ten' illa exiſtunt.

Quod terr', tenement', &c. predicti Edmundi, parcell' baron' olim Joh̃is le Veſcunt, in Northumbr', ſint quieti erga regem, de omnibus finibus & amerciamentis, &c.

Conſimule pro honor', &c. de Monemuth, Tuttebury, &c.; et de caſtro, villâ, et honore Leyc', et de terris et ten' ejuſdem honoris, cum omnibus pertin' ſuis, que fuerunt Simonis de Monteforti quondam com' Leic', et de omnibus terris et ten' que idem Simon tenuit de quibuſcunque đnicis ſuis.

7 Edw. I.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo & heredibus manerium de Werkeſworth cum wapentach', & manerium de Eſſeburne, in com' Derb', in eſcambium pro comitatibus & caſtris Kermerdyn & Cardygan, que predict' Edmundus regi prius reddidit & relaxavit.

8 Edw. I.

Matlak, Underwode, & Bredlawe, cum aliis đnicis & hamelett', mineris plumbi, ferri, &c. que ſunt de pertinen' predicti maner' de Wirkeſworthe, &c. conceſſ', &c. predicto Edmundo, licet in cartâ predictâ non ſpecificentur.

9 Edw. I.

De mille marcis liberand' dicto Edmundo, in ſatisfact' terr' honoris de Monemuthe, per regem alienat', &c. Et de ſervic' & homag' Reginaldi de Graye, Rogeri de Clifford, & Ric̃i Talbot, pertinen' honori de Monemouthe, in Landmegate, & Langehope, conceſſ' predicto Edmundo, &c.

13 Edw. I.

Domus ſive manerium olim Petri de Sabaudiâ, ſitum extra civitatem London', in parochiâ Sanctorum Innocencium de Albo monaſter', & una placea terre jacent' in vico Weſtm', prope eccleſiam vocat' Whitchurche, conceſſ' & confirm' predicto Edmundo.

Confirmatio & exemplificatio ampla cartarum precedentium, de annis 51 & 53 regis Henrici tertii, de honoribus, &c. de Lancaſtr' & Leiceſtrie, & de caſtro de Kenelworthe.

Rex confirmavit cartam regis Henrici tertii, de anno regni ſui 50, per quam idem rex conceſſit prefato Edmundo caſtra, & omnes terras & ten', cum pertin', que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrariis, quondam com' Derby.

Rex confirmavit predicto Edmundo donationem ſibi factam per Thomam Wolfe de Dover, capellan', de terris & domibus ſuperedific' infra libertatem Doverr', in wardâ vocat' Balleſward.

Conſimile de honor', &c. de Monemouthe, caſtr' de Groſſemund, Skenefr', & Blaunchaſtell, & liberâ chaceâ de Wiſſelay.

13 Edw. I. m. 16.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus literas quas celebris memorie dominus Henricus pater ſĩr fecit cariſſimo fratri ñro Edmundo comiti Lanc', in hec verba: "Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, đnus Hibernie, & dux Aquitan', vicecomitibus Norff', Suff', Lincoln', Noting', Leyc', Derb', Eborũ, Rotel', & Staff', & omnibus aliis vicecom' & ſeneſcall' in quorum ballivis honor Lancaſtr' conſiſtit, ſalutem. Sciatis quod per cartam ñram conceſſimus & dedimus Edmundo filio noſtro cariſſimo honorem predictum, cum omnibus homagiis, wardis, releviis, eſcaetis, redditibus, & omnibus aliis ad honorem illum pertin'; habend' ſibi & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreand' imperpetuum. Et ideo vobis precipimus, firmiter injungentes, quod de honore illo, aut hominibus illius honoris, ſeu aliquibus aliis ad illum honorem ſpectantibus, in nullo vos intromittatis, aut ballivos ṽros intromittere permittatis, ſicut vultis vos ipſos indempnes conſervare, niſi de ballivis prefati filii ñri fueritis requiſiti. Et ſi aliqui ṽrm vel ballivorum ṽrorum aliquid de hiis que ad ipſam honorem ſpectant reperitis, id ſine dilatione predicto filio ñro vel ballivis reddi faciatis. Diſtringatis etiam tenentes de predicto honore, quotiens a ballivis predictis fueritis requiſiti, quod eiſdem ballivis de cetero ſint intendentes & reſpondentes in omnibus predictum honorem tangentibus in formâ predictâ. Ita quod non oporteat nos pro defectu veſtri ſuper negotio predicto ſollicitari. In cujus rei teſtimonium has literas ñras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo apud Lincoln', decimo octavo die Auguſti, anno regni ñri quinquageſimo ſecundo." Nos autem l̄ras illas acceptamus pro nobis & heredibus ñris in formâ predictâ. In cujus, &c. Teſte, ut ſupra.

Quod predictus Edmundus & heredes ſui ħeant juſtic' per l̄ras reg' in cancellar' ad pl̄ita foreſtarum ſecundum aſſiſam foreſt' tenend'. Et ad tranſgr' in chaceis & parcis ſuis fact' audiend' & terminand'.

15 Edw. I.

Rex conſtituit Rogerum Brabazun juſtic' ad itinerand' hâc vice ad pl̄ita foreſt', & ad inquirendum de tranſgreſſ' factis in parcis & chaceis dicti Edmundi, in com' Lanc' & Warr'.

18 Edw. I.

De cantariâ faciend' in caſtro de Tuttebury, & c̃s. terre & redditus concedend' per predictum Edmundum.

19 Edw. I.

Homagia Willielmi de Huntingfelde, Theobaldi le Botteler, Margar' de Nevill, & Ingelram de Guines, qui tenuerunt de honore de Lanc'. conceſſ' predicto Edmundo.

De inquirendo ſi medietas manerii de Moneghedon, que eſt de feodo de Lanc', ſit eſcaeta dicti Edmundi per feloniam Thome de Weyland.

20 Edw. I.

Rex pardonavit predict' Edmundo omnia arreragia ſervicii ſui quod ſibi debet ſingulis annis de uno Auſturco Soro inter Ribbel & Merſe, in com' Lancaſtr'.

Caſtr', honor', & vill' de Munemuthe, Groſſemont, Skenefrithe, & de Albo monaſter', & maneria de Redleye & Menſtreworthe, &c. que predictus Edmundus dudum reddidit in manus regis, reconceſſa ſunt predicto Edmundo ad vitam; remanere Henrico filio juniori ipſius Edmundi & hered' de corpor', &c.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo maritagium Matildis filie & heredis Patricii de Cadurcis defuncti, ad opus Henrici filii ſui.

Pat. 20 Edw. I. m. 25.

Rex omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus l̄ras patentes quas bone memorie đns Henricus quondam rex Angl' pater ſĩr fecit Edmundo fratri ñro cariſſimo in hec verba: "Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, đus Hibernie, & dux Aquit', vicecom' Norfolc', Suffolc', Lincoln', Nott', Derb', Eborũ, Staff', Oxon', Buck', Bed', Hertf', Kant', Eſſex, Suſſex, & Midd', & omnibus aliis vic' & ſeneſcall' in quorum ballivis honor Leyc' conſiſtit, ſaſalutem. Sciatis quod per cartam n̄ram conceſſimus & dedimus Edmundo filio n̄ro cariſſimo honorem predictum, cum omnibus homagiis, wardis, releviis, eſcaetis, reddit', & omnibus aliis ad honorem illum pertin', habend' ſibi & heredibus ſuis, ſicut in cartâ n̄râ, quam eidem filio n̄ro inde fieri fecimus, plenius continetur. Et ideo vobis precipimus, firmiter injungentes, quod de honore illo aut hominibus illius honoris, ſeu aliquibus aliis ad illum honorem ſpectantibus, in nullo vos intromittatis, aut ballivos v̄ros intromittere permittatis, ſicut vultis vos ipſos indempnes conſervari; niſi de ballivis prefati filii n̄ri fueritis requiſiti. In cujus rei teſtimonium h̄as l̄ras n̄ras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo apud Weſtm', 17° die Junii, anno regni n̄ri quinquageſimo quinto." Et ideo vobis mandamus quod de honore illo, aut hominibus illius honoris, ſeu aliquibus aliis ad illum honorem ſpectant', in nullo vos intromittatis, aut ballivos v̄ros intromittere permittatis, contra tenorem l̄rar' ejuſdem patris n̄ri patentium predictarum. In cujus rei teſtimonium, &c. Teſte rege apud Weſtm', 19° Januar', anno regni ſui viceſimo.

Quod predictus Edmundus teneat honor', caſtr', & com' Lancaſtr', caſtr' de Groſſemont, Skenefrithe, Album caſtrum, caſtr' & foreſt de Pikeringe, maner' de Scalleby, villam de Gomeceſtr', &c. per ſervicium trium feodorum militum.

21 Edw. I.

Rex conceſſit Henrico de Lacy comiti Lincoln' caſtr', vill', & honor' de Pontefract', cum pertin'. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpor'; remaner' inde Edmundo fratri regis & heredibus ſuis de ſe procreatis.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo, quod ipſe poſſit firmare muro de petrâ, &c. manerium ſuum vocat' Sauvei, in parochiâ Sancti Clementis Dacorum, in com' Midd'.

22 Edw. I.

Rex conceſſit predicto Henrico de Lacy & Margar' uxori ejus manerium de Sutton, in comitatu Lincoln' Habend' ad vitam, &c.; remaner' inde Thome filio Edmundi fratris regis, & Alic' ux' ejus, filie predictorum Henrici & Margar', & hered' de corpor' ip̄orum.

Rex conceſſit predicto Henrico de Lacy comiti Lincoln' omnia caſtra, terr', & ten', que idem comes prius habuit in comitatibus Lancaſtr' & Ceſtrie; ac etiam maner' de Kingeſton, in com' Dorſet'; maner' de Slakeborne, in Bouland, cum totâ foreſtâ & chaceâ; & maner' de Snaythe, cum ſokâ, in com' Ebor', &c. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpor', remaner' inde predicto Edmundo fratri regis & hered'.

Rex conceſſit prefato Henrico de Lacy com' Lincoln' maneria de Thoreſby, Wathe, Ingoldmells, Wrangell, Stepinge, & Waynflete, in comitatu Lincoln'. Habend' ad vitam; remanere inde Thome filio Edmundi fratris regis & Alicie ux' dicti Thome filie predicti comitis Lincoln', & hered' de corpor' ipſorum.

23 Edw. I.

Quod nullus miniſtrorum regis ſe intromittat ad capiend' ad opus regis blada, ſeu alia victualia, hominum ſeu tenentium dicti Edmundi.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo homagium & ſervicium Ricardi de Waleton de 14 bovatis terre in Waleton, Wayertre, & Nenſom, in com' Lanc'.

Rex conceſſit predicto Edmundo fratri ſuo turnum vic' in Furneis, wreccum maris in Lythum, wreccum maris & wayf in Kertmell, in Furneis, & wreccum maris in maner' Nicholai Blundell de Aymulnedale, que idem rex nuper recuperavit verſus abbatem de Furneis, priorem Dunolm', priorem de Kertmell, & predict' Nich̄m de Blundell.

25 Edw. I.

Rex conceſſit Blanchie uxori ipſius Edmundi defuncti exitus omnium terrarum & ten' que fuerunt predicti Edmundi die obitus ſui uſque ad legitimam etatem heredis ſui.

Mandatum eſt tenentibus terrarum que fuerunt dicti Edmundi, quod faciant homagia ſua Thome filio & heredi ſuo, licet ſit infra etatem & in cuſtodiâ regis.

26 Edw. I.

De dote Blanche regine Navarr', uxore predicti Edmundi; inter alia, manerium Leiceſtr', cum maneriis de Hinkele, Shelton, et Dersford, et Tolawe, cum pertin', in com' Leic', que ad centum quinquaginta et octo libr', quatuordecim ſolidos, decem denar', unum obolum, et unum quadran', extenduntur per ann'.

30 Edw. I.

De inquirendo de malefactoribus in parco Henrici de Lancaſtr', conſanguinei regis, apud Weſton Patrik juxta Odiham, in com' Southt̄'.

32 Edw. I.

Rex pardonavit Henr' de Lancaſtr', nepoti ſuo, & Matild' ux' ſue, relevia ſibi debita per mortem Hawiſie de London', avie, & Pagani de Cadurcis avunculi ipſius Matild', quorum heres ipſa eſt.

35 Edw. I.

Rex conceſſit Thome comiti Lancaſtr', nepoti ſuo, quod ipſe & heredes ſui de corpore habeant retornia omnium brevium, & omnia p̄lita de vetito namio in terris & feodis, & omnes fines & amerciamenta hominum & tenentium ſuorum ubicumque, &c. Et omnia catalla hominum & tenentium ſuorum, felonum & fugitivorum, &c.

Rex mandavit Thome de Grelle, quod faciat homagium ſuum Thome comiti Lancaſtr' de terris & ten' que tenet de honore Lancaſtr'.

Pat. 1 Edw. II. m. 13.

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitan', omnibus ad quos preſentes l̄re pervenerint, ſalutem. Sciatis quod cum celebris memorie dominus Henricus, quondam rex Anglie, avus n̄r, per cartam ſuam, dederit & conceſſerit Edmundo filio ſuo, avunculo n̄ro, comitatum Leyceſtr', cum omnibus ad com' illum ſpectantibus, habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo, & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis, de ipſo avo n̄ro & heredibus ſuis imperpetuum, per certa ſervicia inde dicto avo n̄ro & heredibus ſuis facienda: Nos, volentes dilecto conſanguineo & fideli n̄ro Thome comiti Lancaſtr', filio & heredi predicti Edmundi, gratiam in hâc parte facere ſp̄alem, dedimus ei & conceſſimus, pro nobis & hered' n̄ris, ſeneſcalciam Anglie, ad predictum com' Leiceſtr' ut dicitur pertinentem; habend' & tenend' eidem comiti, & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis, de nobis & heredibus n̄ris, cum omnibus ad ſeneſcalciam illam ſpectantibus imperpetuum, ſicut Simon de Monteforti quondam comes Leyceſtr', & ceteri comites com' ejuſdem loci, antea ſeneſcalciam predictam habuerunt & tenuerunt. In cujus rei teſtimonium has l̄ras n̄ras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo apud Weſtm', nono die Maii, anno regni n̄ri primo.

Thomas comes Lancaſtr' conceſſit domino regi & heredibus totum manerium de Melleburne, cum hamelettis de Neuton, Oſmundeſton, Swerkeſton, Chelardeſton, Normanton, & Wyneleſton.

Cart. 1 Edw. II. n. 26.

Rex conceſſit dilecto conſanguineo & fideli ſuo Thome comiti Lancaſtr', quod ipſe & heredes ſui imperpetuum habeant unam feriam ſingulis annis apud manerium ſuum de Leyceſtr', in comitatu Leyceſtr', per quindecim dies duratur, videlicet, in craſtino Sancte Trinitatis, & per quatuordecim dies ſequentes. Niſi, &c. Dat' per manum regis apud Weſtm', octavo die Novembris, anno regni ſui primo.

2 Edw. II.

Rex confirmavit cartam factam anno 51 H. III. quod predictus comes habeat omnes terras & feoda ſua libera & quieta de ſectis ſhirarum, hundredorum, auxiliis vicecom', &c. Exceptâ liberâ chaceâ de Wiſſelaye & Wimburneholte, &c.

Chart. 2 Edw. II. n. 39.

Rex conceſſit dilecto conſanguineo et fideli ſuo Thome com' Lancaſtr', quod ipſe et heredes ſui imperpetuum habeant unum mercatum ſingulis ſeptimanis, per diem Mercurii, apud manerium ſuum de Uttoxhautr', in comitatu Stafford'; & unam feriam ibidem ſingulis annis, per tres dies duratur', videlicet, in vigiliâ, et in die, et in cr̃o Beate Marie Magdalene. Et quod habeant unum mercatum ſingulis ſeptimanis, per diem Veneris, apud manerium ſuum de Stapleforde, in com' Leyceſtr'; & unam feriam ibidem ſingulis annis, per tres dies duratur', videlicet, in vigiliâ, in die, et in craſtino Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiſte. Niſi, &c. Dat' per manum regis, apud Weſtm', primo die Decembris, anno regni ſuo ſecundo.

Pat. 7 Edw. II. m. 8. in dorſo.

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitann', dilectis & fidelibus ſuis Hugoni de Louther, Johanni de Cave, & Thome de Fiſheburne, ſalutem. Sciatis quod cum dominus Edwardus, quondam rex Anglie, pater ñr, per l̃ras ſuas patentes, conceſſerit pro ſe & heredibus ſuis Edmundo fratri ſuo, quod ipſe & heredes ſui imperpetuum habeant certos juſtic', per l̃ras ipſius patris ñri & heredum ſuorum, quotiens opus fuerit, ad tranſgreſſiones ſibi factas in chaceis vel parcis ſuis audiend' & terminand', ſcd̃m legem & conſuetudinem regni ñri, ita quod idem Edmundus & heredes ſui habeant redemptiones, fines, amerciamenta, & omnia alia de predictis tranſgreſſionibus provenientia, eodem modo quo dictus pater ñr & heredes ſui ea haberent ſi chacee & parci predicti eſſent in manu ſuâ, prout in l̃ris predictis plenius continetur. Et jam, ex querelâ dilecti conſanguinei & fidelis ñri Thome comitis Lancaſtr', filii & heredis predicti Edmundi, accepimus quod plures malefactores & pacis ñre perturbatores liberam chaceam ipſius comitis apud Duffeld & parcos ſuos ibidem, apud Meleburne, in comitatu Derb', & liberam chaceam ſuam de Redwode, & parcos ſuos ibidem, & apud Yeyhale, Barton, Rolleſton, Hambury, Adgareſlegh, & Uttokeſhather, in com' Stafford, & etiam liberas chaceas ſuas de Penhull, Tronden, Acrinton, Roſſindale, Hoddeſdon, Romeſgrene, & Todinton, & parcos ſuos apud Penhull & Todington, in com' Lancaſtr', & liberas chaceas ſuas de Boweland, Marcheden, & Almanbury, & parcos ſuos apud Rowelle, Roundehaye, Scales, Cowike, Altoftes, Crideling, & Raddon, in com' Ebor', & parcum ſuum apud Kenilleworthe, in com' Warr', ac liberam chaceam ſuam apud Leyceſtr', & parcos ſuos ibidem, & apud Desforde, in com' Leyceſtr', vi & armis intraverint, & in eis ſine licentiâ & voluntate ſuâ fugaverunt, feras ceperunt & aſportaverunt, & alia enormia ei intulerunt, ad grave dampnum ipſius comitis, & contra pacem ñram. Nos, volentes eidem comiti ſuper tranſgreſſionibus predictis, juxta tenorem conceſſionis predicte, de remedio congruo providere, aſſignavimus vos, vel duos vr̄m quotiens vos omnes vacare non poſſitis, juſtic' ñros, ad inquirendum per ſacramentum proborum & legalium hominum de comitatibus predictis, per quos rei veritas melius ſciri poterit, nōibus malefactorum predictorum, & de tranſgreſſionibus predictis plenius veritatem, & ad tranſgreſſiones illas audiend' & terminand' ſcd̃m legem & conſuetudinem regni ñri. Et ideo vobis mandamus quod ad certos dies & loca, quos vos vel duo vr̄m ad hoc provideritis, inquiſitionem illam fac', & tranſgreſſiones predictas audiatis & terminetis in formâ predictâ; facturi inde quod ad juſtic' pertinet ſcd̃m legem & conſuetudinem regni ñri; ſalvis nobis amerciamentis & aliis ad nos inde ſpectant'. Mandamus enim vicecom' ñris com' predictorum, quod ad certos dies & loca, quos vos vel duo vr̄m eis ſcire facietis, venire faciant coram vobis vel duobus vr̄m tot & tales probos & legales homines de ballivis ſuis, per quos rei veritas in premiſſis melius ſciri poterit & inquiri. In cujus rei teſtimonium has l̃ras ñras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo apud Weſtm', tertio die Novembris, anno regni noſtri ſeptimo.

8 Edw. II.

Rex confirmavit, &c. remiſſionem & quietam clamantiam quam Adomarus de Valenciâ comes Pembr' fecit Thome comiti Lancaſtr', de caſtro & manerio de Thorpwatervile, & de maneriis de Aldewincle & Achurche, in com' Northt̄', & de manerio de Novo Templo, London', & de omnibus terris & ten' que quondam fuerunt Templar' in ſuburb' London' & in com' Midd'.

9 Edw. II.

Rex dedit licentiam prefat' Thome comiti Lanc', quod ipſe dare poſſit, &c. Waltero epiſcopo Wigorn', unum meſſuag' cum pertin' in parochiâ beate Marie atte Stronde, extra Barram Novi Templi, London', pro animabus Edmundi quondam comitis Leiceſtr', & Blanchie uxoris ejus.

10 Edw. II.

Rex conceſſit Henrico de Lancaſtr' & Matild' ux' ejus, conſanguin' & uni hered' Willielmi de Brewer, liberam warrennam in omnibus đnicis terris ſuis de Sumburne, Langſtoke, Stokebrige, & Weſton Patricke, in com' Southt̄, que ſunt de proparte predict' Matild'.

Quod reverſio maneriorum de Sutton, Potton, Holme, & Stratton, reman' Thome comiti Lancaſtr' & heredibus.

Pat. 12 Edw. II. m. 2. n. 11.

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitanie, &c. Inſpeximus ſcriptum indentatum dilecti conſanguinei & fidelis noſtri Thome comitis Lancaſtrie, in hec verba: " Sachent totes gentz q̃ ſount & qe ſount avenir, q̃ nous Thomas counte de Lancaſtr' & de Leyceſtr', ſeneſchal d'Engleterre, avons done & graunte, & par ceſte preſente charter conferme, a noſtre cher & bien ame vadlet Rogier Beler, pur le bon & loial ſerviſe q'il nous ad fait & fra, la baillie & la ſeneſchaucie de la ville de Stapleford, en le counte de Leiceſtr', & de toute la fraunchiſe en totes les villes & hamletz parcelles des villes a la dite baillie en nule manere regardauntz, & une bovee de terre en les villes de Wymondham & de Thorp, & vint ſoncheez de rente dedenz la dite baillie, avoir & tenir lavandite baillie & la ſeneſchalcie de la dite ville de Stapleford, & de la franchiſe avandite, a lavantdit Rogier, & as les heires de ſon corps engendretz, de nous & de noz heirs, ove toutes maneres des profitz, auxib̄n fins & amercimentz des veuwes, come totes autres profitz des courtz de tres ſiſmaignes en tres ſiſmaignes, oveſqz totes mañes des com̃oditez & profitz q̃ a nous p̱ la reſon de la dite baille & franchiſe en nule manere purrount eſcheir; ſauve a nous & a noz heirs avoweſons degliſes, feez des chivalers, gardes, mariages, & relefs, dedenz la dite baillie, q̃nt ul eſcherrount; rendaunt a nous & noz heirs per an un dener a la feſte Seint Michel l'Archaungle pour touz mañes des profitz q̃ a nous per la reſoun de la baillie & ſeneſchaucie avantdite purrount avenir ou appendre. Et voloins & grantoins, pur nous & pur noz heirs, q̃ l'avauntdit Rogier & les heirs de ſon corps engendretz, ou celui ou ceaux q'il aſſigneront en lour noun, tiegnent les veuwes & les courtz dedenz la dite baillie, et facent cheſqune manere d'execucion, auxi bien de touz les comandementz le roi q̃ appendent dedenz la dite baillie eſtre faites, come de toutes autres choſes touchantes la baillie & la franchiſe avauntdite, au profit le dit Roger & de ſes heirs de ſon corps engendres. Et s'il aveigne q̃ le dit Rogier denye ſaunz heir de ſon corps engendre, meiſme la baillie & ſeneſchaucie a nous & a noz heirs retournent. Et nous l'avantdit Thomas & noz heirs la baillie & la ſeneſchaucie, & la garde de la fraunchiſe avantditz, ove touz mañes des profitz come deſus eſt dit, au dit Roger & a les heirs de ſon corps engendrez countre totes gentz garanterοins & defenderoins. En teſmoignauce de quieu choſe, a ceſte preſente chartre endentee auxi bien nous Thomas come le dit Rogier entrechangeablement avoins mis noz ſeals, per iceaux teſmoignes; Monſ. Robert de Holand, Monſ. Nichol de Segrave, Monſ. Stepħn de Seg̃e, Monſ. John Beck, Monſ. William Truſſell, Sire Johan de Kynardeſeye, Sire Michel de Meledon, Sire Elis de Stapleton, & autres. Don a Erdwyke, le xviii de Maii, l'an du regne ñre Seignour le Edward, fiz au roi Edward, duzzime." Nos autem donac̃oem, conceſſionem, & confirmac̃oem predictas ratas habentes & g̃tas, eas pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, concedimus & confirmamus, ſicut ſcriptum predictum r̃onabilr teſtatur. In cujus rei teſtimonium ħas l̄ras ñras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meip̃o, apud Ebor', viceſimo quinto die Maii, anno regni ñri duodecimo.

Rex conceſſit licentiam Joħi de Warrennâ, comiti Surr', quod ipſe de maneriis ſuis de Cuningham, Weſton, Thefford, & Methewald, hundredis de Galhowe & Brothercroſs, & 39 feodis milit', cum pertinen', in Canefeld. Eyſton ad montem, &c. in com' Norff', &c. feoffare poſſit Thomam comitem Lanc'. Habend' ſibi & hered'.

Rex conceſſit prefato Thome comiti Lancaſtr', quod ipſe habeat caſtr', villas, & maneria de Coningeſburgh & Sandale, & maneria de Wakefelde, Thorne, &c. ad totam vitam Johannis de Warennâ com' Surr'.

13 Edw. II.

Thomas comes Lancaſtr' conceſſit & confirmavit Roberto de Holland & Matild' uxori ejus manerium de Yoxhale, Tingetwiſell, & Mottrom en Longendale. Et etiam maner' de Broughton, in com' Buck', maner' de Weſterby juxta Lyverpole, &c. maner' de Triſholme & Kellet, ſimul cum ballivâ ſerjantie de Loneſdale, Furneis, & Kertmell. Et cuſtod' foreſtar' totius com' Lancaſtr', &c. Et terrarum & ten' in le Hope, juxta Manceſtr', ſimul cum ballivâ ſerjantie de Saldforthrie. Habend' ſibi & heredibus de corpore. Et ulterius predict' Thomas relaxavit dicto Roberto Holland & heredibus totum jus ſuum, &c. qnod habuit, &c. in maneriis de Thorpewatervile, Aldwincle, & Achchurche, in comitatu Norħt'.

Pat. 15 Edw. II. m. 3.

Le roy a toutz ceux qi ces preſentes l̄res verront ou orront, ſalus. Saches q̃ come Aleiſe q̃ fu la feme Thomas jadis comite de Lancaſtr', file & heir Henri de Lacy jadis counte de Nicole, nous eit recoun en ñre chauncellerie 20,000 l. a paier a la Goul d'Augſt p̃chein avenir. Nous voloms & grauntoms, pur nous & nos heirs, q̃ ſi la dite Aleiſe les terres & les teñtes q̃ele ad ou av̄a retiegne ſauntz alienatioun de ceo faire de toute ou de partie ſil ne ſoit per ñre conge eſpeciale, q̃ adonques la dite reconiſance de 20,000 l. ſoit de nule force & pur nule tenue; & ſil aveigne q̃ la dite Aleiſe des dites terres & tenementz aliene tut ou partie ſauntz ñre cunge, adonqes la dite reconiſance de 20,000 l. demorge en ſa force, & ſoit miſe a due & pleniere execution. En teſmoignance de queux choſes, nous avoins fait faire ceſtes nos l̄res overtes. Don a Eṽwyk, le 27 jour de Juyn, l'an du ñre regne quinziſme.

Aleſia, que fuit uxor Thome quondam com' Lanc', remiſit & relaxavit domino regi & hered' totum jus ſuum & clameum quod habuit in caſtr', vill, man', & honor' de Pontefracto, cum pertin'; & in omnibus aliis villis, maneriis, hamelettis, &c. ad predict' caſtr', &c. pertin', in com' Ebor'.

Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit. Aleſia, que fuit uxor Thome quondam comitis Lancaſtr', & filia & heres Henrici de Lacy quondam comitis Lincoln', ſalutem in Domino. Noveritis me conceſſiſſe, remiſiſſe, relaxaſſe, & omnino de me & heredibus meis imperpetuum quietum clamaſſe, excellentiſſimo principi & dño meo reverendo domino Edwardo, Dei gratiâ, regi Anglie, domino Hibernie, & duci Aquitann', totum jus & clamium, quod habeo, habui, vel in futur' aliquo modo habere potero, in caſtris, villis, maneriis, & honoribus de Donyngton, cum pertin', in comitatu Leiceſtr'.

Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos, &c. ut ſupra, ſalutem in Domino. Noveritis me, pro me & hered' meis, conceſſiſſe, & hoc ſcripto meo confirmaſſe, excellentiſſimo principi & domino meo reverendo domino Edwardo, Dei gratiâ, regi Angl', domino Hibernie, & duci Aquit', quod omnia maneria, ville, hameletta, terre, tenementa, hundreda, wapent', trithinga, & feoda militum, cum pertin', & advoc' eccleſiarum, capellarum, domorum religioſarum, & hoſpitalium, ad caſtra, villas, honores, & maneria de Dunnyngton, cum pertin', in com' Leiceſtr'.

Conſimile de aliis caſtris, maneriis, terris, & ten' predict' Alicie, in com' Ceſtr', Midd', Lincoln, Oxon', Norħt', Cantabr', Wallie, & in civitate London' & ſuburb', Lancaſtr', Wilteſ', Dorſet, Somerſet.

Pat. 16 Edw. II. m. 25.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Volentes veritati teſtimonium perhibere univerſis & ſingulis quorum intereſt vel intereſſe poterit, innoteſcimus per preſentes quod Thomas nuper comes Lanc', die Lune prox' ante feſtum Annunciationis beate Marie, Virginis anno regni noſtri quintodecimo, propter ſeditiones diverſas nobis factas & felonias, in regno ñro, contra pacem ñram perpetratas, per conſiderationem cur' ñre, apud villam de Pontefracto, capite fuit truncatus; & quod advocatio eccleſie de Bradford, Ebor' dioc', per forisfacturam prefati Thome, ut de jure Aleſie tunc uxoris ſue, fil' & heredis Henrici de Lacy quondam com' Lincoln', ad man' ñras devenit, & ſemper hactenus in manu ñra extitit, & nunc ut jus ñrm, per remiſſionem & quietam clamantiam quas eadem Aleſia pro ſe & heredibus ſuis fecit nobis & heredibus ſuis fecit nobis & heredibus ñris, de advocatione eccleſie predicte, & de quibuſdam aliis terris & ten', in manu ñra exiſtit. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Felton, octavo die Auguſti, anno regni ſui decimo ſexto.

Pat. 16 Edw. II. m. 2.

Rex venerabili in Chriſto patri Stephano eadem gratiâ epiſcopo London', ſalutem. Auribus ñris intonuit, quod moleſtè gerimus, quod plerique de populo Dei ṽro commiſſo regimini, diabolicâ fraude decepti, ad quandam tabulam in eccleſiâ ṽrâ Sancti Pauli London' exiſtentem, in qua ſtatue, ſculpture, ſeu ymagines diverſorum, & inter cetera effigies Thome quondam comitis Lancaſtr', inimici & rebellis ñri, ſunt depicte, fatuè accedentes, eam, abſque auctoritate eccleſie Romane, tanquam rem ſanctificatam colunt & adorant, aſſerentes ibi fieri miracula, in opprobrium totius eccleſie, ñri & ṽri dedecus, & animarum populi predicti periculum maniſeſtum, ac perencioſum exemplum aliorum, quodque vos, ſcientes abuſiones ħmôi in populo vobis credito vigere, eas non modo fieri permiſiſtis, quin potius cauſâ queſtûs ſeu turpis lucri fieri diſſimulâſtis, de quo non mediocriter conturbamur. Vobis igitur mandamus, firmiter injungentes, quatenus premiſſis deliberatione providâ penſatis. Advertenteſque quod dicta eccleſia de noſtro patronatu exiſtit, quodque vos r̃one fidelitatis nobis preſtite tenemini honor' ñrm velle ſalvare & ñrm dedecus declinare, dictum populum, ne ad tabulam predictam accedere, orationes, oblationes, ſeu alia ad cultum divinum tendentia, abſque auctoritate eccleſie Romane, ibidem facere preſumant, modis omnibus cohibeatis, prout ex officii v̄ri debito ad vos juxta canonicas ſanctiones noveritis pertinere; taliter vos habentes in hâc parte, quod Dei & ñram indignationem evitare poſſitis, & populus ꝑdictus, per v̄re doctrine prudentiam ſalubrit' inſtructus, a predictis abuſionibus penitus deſiſtat, & v̄re laudis preconium in eodem populo dilatetur, ac conceptam erga vos & eccleſiam v̄ram predictam benevolentiam meritò continuare debeamus. Et quid ſuper hiis facere decreveritis nobis per v̄ras l̃ras abſque more diſpendio reſcribatis. Teſte rege, apud Ebor', 28° die Junii, anno regni ſui decimo ſexto.

4 Edw. III.

Quia coram rege, &c. in parliamento ſuo conteſtatum eſt quod predicta Alicia, quondam uxor prefati Thome comitis Lancaſtr', & modo nupta Ebuloni Leſtraung, minis & formidine coacta, relaxavit Edwardo regi Anglie, patri regis nunc, totum jus ſuum, &c. ut ſupra. De aſſenſu parliamenti predict' ordinatum eſt, quod rex nunc concedat predictis Ebuloni & Alicie, & heredibus ꝑdicti Ebulonis & Alicie, terr' & tenement', de hereditate predicte Alicie, annui valoris 1200 marcarum: Ita quod predict' Ebulo & Alicia relaxabunt domino regi, &c. totum jus ſuum quod habeant in reliquis terris, &c. (inter alia, Caſtle Donyngton, in comitatu Leic').

Exemplificatio carte precedentis, de anno 21° regis Edwardi primi, de honore de Pontefracto, &c. conceſſ' Thome tunc comiti Lancaſtr'.

Rex conceſſit Henrico comiti Lancaſtr' & heredibus omnia terr' & ten' Johannis Middleton, proditoris, in Newland & Wardeham.

Rex, pro remiſſione & quietâ clamanc' que Ebulo le Straunge & Alicia uxor ejus ſibi fecerunt, de toto jure, &c. que habuerunt in caſtr', vill, maner', terris, & ten', que tenēt de hereditate predict' Alicie, &c. conceſſit predict' Ebuloni & Alicie, & hered' predict' Ebulonis, maneria de Colham, Eggewere, Middelington, Burmeſtr', Halton, Hubling, &c. juxta ordinationem parliamenti ſupradicti.

Rex varias cartas regis Henrici tertii, conceſſas olim Simoni de Monteforti com' Leyc', & Willielmo de Ferrariis comiti Derby, pro baroniâ de Emeldon, maner' de Gunthorp, & plurimis aliis terris & ten', in com' Northumbr', Lanc', Nott', Derb', & Staff', duxit exemplificand', ad requiſitionem Henrici comitis Lancaſtr', qui baroniam, terr', & ten' predict', modo tenet.

11 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit Henrico de Lanc', quem de conſilio parliamenti ſui comitem Derby conſtituit, mille marcas annuas, de exit' cuſtum' ſuarum in portubus de London, Kingſton, &c. ad totam vitam Henr' com' Lanc', patris predict' com' Derby.

16 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit Henrico comiti Lancaſtr', quod ipſe & heredes ſui de corpore, &c. ſint quieti de panagio, paſſagio, &c. & quod ipſe & heredes ſui predicti habeant retorna brevium regis, &c. & catalla felonum, fines & amerciamenta pro tranſgr', &c. & fines pro licentiâ concordand', &c. de omnibus hominibus & tenentibus de terris & feodis ſuis. Et poſtmodum predicta carta, per aſſenſum Henrici comitis Lancaſtr', filii predicti Henrici, renovata eſt & cancellata, quia videbatur conſilio regis dictam cartam factam eſſe in maximum dampnum & exheredac' regis.

21 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit Henrico comiti Lancaſtr' caſtrum de Horſton, cum viſu franciplegii, &c. pertin', & etiam 40 l. ſingulis annis de firmâ ville Derby. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpor' maſculis.

25 Edw. III.

Rex, de aſſenſu parliamenti, creavit Henricum com' Lanc' ducem Lancaſtr'; & conceſſit prefato duci, ad totam vitam ſuam, quod habeat infra eundem com' cancellariam ſuam, & b̃ria ſua ſub ſigillo ſuo pro officio cancellar' deputand', conſignand' juſticiar' ſuos tam ad placita corone quam alia cõem legem tangent', ac cognitiones eorundem quaſcunque executiones per b̃ria ſua & miniſtros ſuos ibidem fac', & quaſcunque alia lib̃tates & jura regalia ad comitem palatinum pertin', adeo integrè, &c. ſicut comes Ceſtr' infra com' Ceſtr' dinoſcitur optinere; decimis & aliis quotis conceſſis per clerum, pardonationibus vite & membrorum, poteſtate corrigendi ea que in cur' ſuis ibidem erronicè facta ſunt, &c. ſemper ſalvis. Et quod ad mandatum regis mittat ad parliamentum duos milites & burgenſes, &c.

28 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit Henrico duci Lancaſtr' illam firmam quatuor marcarum & decem ſolidorum, quam idem dux reddere tenebatur pro ballivâ de Scalleby, infra foreſt' de Pickeringe.

Rex conceſſit prefato duci, quod ipſe & heredes ſui habeant liberam chaceam, cum omnibus ad lib̃am chaceam pertinent', in boſco ſuo de Perneholte, foreſt' de Bere contiguo.

31 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit Johanni comiti Richemond, filio ſuo, poſtea duci Lanc', caſtrum, terram, & dominium de Lydell, cum pertin', tam in Angl', quam in Scotiâ. Habend' ſibi & heredibus de corpor' maſculis.

33 Edw. III.

Henricus dux Lancaſtr', &c. conceſſit Johanni Barett et heredibus de corpor' villam de Everton, cum turber', &c. pertinen', & unum meſſuagium et ſex ſeliones terre in villâ de Leverpole. Reddendo per annum pro dictâ villâ 4 l̄. & pro meſſuag' et ſelion' terre 6 s̄. 8 d̄. Et etiam 20 acr' bruere infra parcum ſuum de Toxtarche, juxta bruer' de Leverpole. Reddendo per annum 10 s̄. Et etiam unum meſſuagium et 60 acr' terre in Weſtderby, cum turbar' ibidem. Reddendo per ann' 20 s̄.

Cart. 33 Edw. III. n. 18.

Rex archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Supplicavit nobis dilectus et fidelis conſanguineus ñr Henricus dux Lancaſtr' et comes Leyceſtr', quod cum ipſe habeat, & ipſi & anteceſſores ſui, ac alii qui comites Leyceſtr' pro tempore fuerunt a tempore quo memoria non exiſtit ſingulis annis habuerint, unam feriam apud villam Leyc', que de nobis tenetur in capite ut dicitur, in feſto Inventionis Sancte Crucis, et per quindecim dies prox' ſequen' duratur': Velimus ei concedere, quod ipſe et heredes ſui, loco ferie predicte, habere poſſint unam aliam feriam, apud villam predictam et ſuburbium ejuſdem, ſingulis annis, per ſeptem dies, videlicet, tribus diebus prox' ante feſtum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, et in eodem feſto, ac tribus diebus prox' ſequen', imperpetuum duratur'. Ita quod quilibet indigena ſive alienigena ad villam et ſuburbium predict' cauſâ ferie predicte veniens, ibidem moram faciens, et exinde recedens, tam ante dictam feriam quam poſt, imperpetuum ſit quietus de theolonio, ſtallag', picag', ac aliis cuſtumis et preſtationibus quibuſcunque, eidem duci ſeu dictis heredibus ſuis, r̃one dicte ferie qualicunque ſpectant' ſolvend'. Nos, optentu laudabilis et fructuoſi obſequii ipſius ducis nobis adiu impenſi, volentes ſupplicationi ſue annuere in hac parte, de gratiâ ñra ſpeciali, conceſſimus, ꝓ nobis et heredibus ñris, eidem duci, quod ipſe et heredes ſui, loco dicte antique ferie, exnunc habeant unam aliam feriam apud villam et ſuburbium predict', ſingulis annis, per ſeptem dies, viz. tribus diebus ante feſtum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, et in eodem feſto, et tribus diebus prox' ſequen', quen', imperpetuum duratur'. Niſi, &c. Dat' per manum regis apud Weſtm', ſecundo die Julii, anno regni ſui triceſimo quarto.

35 Edw. III.

Caſtr', maner', villa, & ſoka de Bollingbroke, manerium de Thoreſby, &c. conceſſ' epiſc' Lincoln' & aliis.

Rex mandavit executoribus prefati ducis, quod omnia record' & proceſſ', ac rotuli & memorand' juſtic' predicti ducis, in ducatu Lanc', de toto tempore quo dicti juſtic' ſeſſiones ſuas tenuerunt virtute libertatum eidem duci prius conceſſarum, habeant ad recept' ſc̄cii.

Rex conceſſit Johanni comiti Richmund, filio ſuo, qui duxit in uxorem Blanchiam, unam filiarum & hered' Henrici nuper ducis Lancaſtr', &c. quod ipſe & heredes ſui de corpore dict' Blanchie procreati habeant retorna brevium, &c. placita de vetito navio, in terris & feodis ſuis, de hereditate predicti ducis; & omnes fines & amerciamenta hominum & tenentium ſuorum ubicumque, &c. catalla felonum & fugitivorum, &c.

36 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit prefatis Johanni & Blanchie ux' ſue omnes libertates ſupradictas, in omnibus terris & ten' que per mortem Matildis jam defuncte, alter' filiarum & hered' predicti ducis, ad prefatam Blancheam ſororem ſuam, jure hereditar', &c. devenerint. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpore prefate Blanchee.

Cart. 36 Edw. III. n. 9.

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie & Aquit', archiepiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſtic', vice comitibus prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis nos, conſiderantes ſtrenuitatem excreſcentem & geſtum laudabilem quos in cariſſimo filio ñro Johanne comite Lancaſtrie vigere conſpicimus, ac volentes providè perſonam ſuam juxta claritatem generis ſui ac morum ſuorum merita, ut per ipſius potentiam & prudentiam regale ſceptrum fulceatur, ad exaltationem & detentiam ſtatus ſui honorare; eidem comiti nomen & honorem ducis dedimus, & ipſum in ducem Lancaſtr' prefecimus, ac de eiſdem nomine & honore per cincturam gladii & appoſitionem cappe ſuo capiti inveſtimus; habend' & tenend' eadem nomen & honorem ducis Lancaſtrie ſibi & heredibus ſuis maſculis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis imperpetuum: Quare volumus & firmiter precipimus, pro nobis & heredibus ñris, quod predictus filius ñr nomen & honorem ducis Lancaſtrie habeat & teneat ſibi & heredibus ſuis maſculis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis imperpetuum, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; venerabilibus prioribus Simone archiepiſcopo Cantuar', totius Anglie primate; W. Wynton' cancellar', S. Elien' theſ' ñris, epiſcopis; Ricardo comite Arundell, Roberto Suff', Thomâ de Veer Oxon' camerario ñro, comitibus; Edwardo le Deſpenſer, Radulfo de Nevill, Johanne de Nevill, Johanne atte Lee ſeneſcallo hoſpitii ñri; & aliis. Dat' per manum ñram, in pleno parliamento apud Weſtm', decimo tertio die Novembris, anno regni ñri triceſimo ſexto.

Quarta pars ballive de Blakeborneſhire perquiſit' de Henrico duce Lancaſtr' per Ricardum de Tomby.

Mercat' & feria apud Theverſo, in com' Lincoln', conceſſ' Joh̃i comiti Lancaſtr' & Richemund'.

38 Edw. III.

Cum rex nuper, ſeptimo die Maii, anno regni ſui 16°, per cartam ſuam, conceſſerit Henrico tunc comiti Lancaſtr', quod ipſe & heredes ſui de corpore eſſent quieti de panagio, paſſagio, &c. Quam cartam, poſt mortem predicti comitis, Henricus filius & heres ejus certis de cauſis regi reddidit cancelland'. Rex advertens ea que ſic in feodo talliato conceſſ' fuer', per redditionem carte predicte, aut per quodcunque aliud factum in prejudicium heredum, &c. ſc̄dum conſuetudinem regni cancellari non poſſe, ſed in ſuo robore permanere debere, ac volens ea conſideratione gratiam facere Johanni filio ſuo, nunc duci Lancaſtr', qui Blanchiam filiam & heredem predicti Henrici duxit in uxorem, dictam conceſſionem ſuam, prefato Henrico comiti factam anno 16°, prefatis Johanni nunc duci & Blanch' duxit renovand'; habend' ſibi & heredibus de corpore.

40 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit licentiam prefat' Johanni duci Lancaſtr' & Blanchie uxori ejus, quod ipſi de plurimis caſtris, dominiis, & commotis, maneriis, terris, & ten', &c. in Walliâ, Suth̃t', Wiltes, Berk', Glouc', North̃t', & Norff', feoffare poſſint Willielmum Burghbrigge & alios in feodo. Ita quod ipſi predict' caſtr', &c. dare poſſint prefatis duci & Blanchie. Habend' ſibi & hered' de corpor' eorundem exeunt'. (Inter alia, manerium de Stapleford.)

Rex conceſſit licentiam prefato Johanni duci Lancaſtr' & Blanchie uxori ejus quod ipſi caſtra, honor', maner', terr', ten', &c. comitatus Richemund concedere poſſint Willielmo de Wikham & aliis in feodo, &c. quouſque de certis pecuniarum ſum̃is, pro quibus ipſi pro eodem duce obligati ſunt, ipſis fuerit ſatisfactum, &c.

46 Edw. III.

Prefatus Johannes dux Lancaſtr' conceſſit, quod comitatus, honor, caſtra, maneria, terr', ten', &c. ad comitatum Richemunde pertinentia, domino Edwardo regi Anglie, patri ſuo, traderentur, &c.; unde predictus rex, volens prefato Johanni duci Lancaſtr' retributionem facere, conceſſit ſibi & hered' de corpore caſtr', maner', & honor' de Alto Pecco, & plura alia caſtra, maner', terr', ten', &c. in aliis com' Anglie.

50 Edw. III.

Rex conceſſit prefato Johanni duci Lancaſtr', et hered' de corpore maſculis, villam et honorem de Hertford, et villas de Beyforde, Eſendon, et Hertingfordingbury.

51 Edw. III.

Rex, 28 die Februarii, de aſſenſu parliamenti, conceſſit Johanni filio ſuo duci Lancaſtr', quod ipſe ad totam vitam ſuam habeat infra comitatum Lancaſtr' cancellariam ſuam, &c. et quecumque alia libertates et jura regalia ad com' palatinum pertin', &c. ut in anno 35°.

Rex conceſſit, &c. quod omnia brevia originalia, &c. ante dictum 28 diem Februar' impetrata, liberum tenementum, &c. infra dictum com' Lancaſtr' tangentia, &c. in curiis ſuis pendentia, una cum recordis et proceſſibus inde habitis, in ſtatu quo nunc ſunt, prefato filio ſuo duci Lancaſtr' tranſmittantur, coram juſticiariis ſuis in com' Lanc' terminand', &c.

Rex conceſſit prefato Johanni duci Lancaſtr', quod ipſe habeat maneria de Greneſted, Seford, & Laghton, una cum nonnullis libertatibus & privilegiis in eiſdem, & in caſtro & honor de Tikhill, Alto Pecco, &c. ſibi preconceſſis, ut ſupra, anno 46°.

1 Ric. II.

Exemplificatio & confirmatio ampla cartarum precedentium, viz. de annis 46 & 51 regis Edwardi tertii, pro honor' & caſtro de Tikhill, & Peck, &c. cum libertatibus. Et de anno 31, pro caſtro de Lydell. Et de anno 50, pro caſtro de Hert'. Et de anno 51, pro libertatibus comitatus palatini Lancaſtr'. Et de anno 38 de libertatibus renovatis.

Rex, auctoritate parliamenti, confirm' prefato Johanni duci Lanc' cartam indentatam, de excamb' com

Richmond, & omnes articulos ejuſdem; except' articulo uno de reſtitutione hinc indè faciend' in caſu quo dictus com' Richmond ad manus regis decvit, &c.

Proceſſus factus ad coronationem domini regis Anglie Ricardi ſecundi poſt conqueſtum, anno regni ſui primo.

Decedente, de nutu ſummi Preceptoris, feliciſſimo, ſtrenuo, & potenti rege Anglie & Franc', domino Edwardo tertio poſt conqueſtum viceſimo primo, die menſis Junii, anno Dom' milleſimo treſcenteſimo ſeptuageſimo ſeptimo, & anno regni ſui quinquageſimo primo; ſucceſſit ei rex Ricardus ſecundus, filius Edwardi nuper principis Wallie, primogeniti dicti regis Edwardi. Et cum tractaretur & proviſum fuiſſet de ſolempniis coronationis ipſius regis Ricardi die Jovis in craſtino tranſlationis bi Swithini tunc prox' ſequen' celebrand'; Johannes rex Caſtelle & Leyonis, dux Lancaſtr', coram dicto domino rege Ricardo & conſilio ſuo comparens, clamavit ut comes Leyceſtr' officium ſeneſcalcie Anglie, & ut dux Lancaſtr' ad gerend' principem gladium domini regis vocatum Curtana die coronationis ejuſdem regis, & ut comes Lincoln' ad ſcindend' & ad ſecand' coram ipſo dno rege ſedente ad menſam dicto die coronationis. Et quia, factâ diligenti examinatione coram peritis de conſilio regis de premiſſis, ſatis conſtabat eidem conſilio quod ad ipſum ducem, tanquam tenentem per legem Anglie poſt mortem Blanchie quondam uxoris ſue, pertinuit officia predicta, prout ſuperius clamabat, exercere; conſideratum fuit per ipſum regem & conſilium ſuum predictum quod idem dux officia predicta, per ſe & ſufficientes deputatos ſuos, faceret & excerceret, & feoda ſibi debita in hâc parte optineret: Qui quidem dux officium ſeneſcalcie predicte perſonaliter adimplevit, & etiam dictum gladium coram prefato domino rege quouſque alta miſſa poſt coronationem ipſius domini regis celebrata fuit in manibus ſuis propriis gerebat; & extunc, occupatus circa officium ſeneſcalcie predicte, gladium illum Henrico comiti Derb', filio & heredi ejuſdem ducis, coram ipſo rege deferend', commiſit; & ſic idem comes Derb' eundem gladium, ex aſſignatione dicti patris ſui, durantibus ſolempniis coronationis predicte, coram ipſo rege honorificè & decenter gerebat. Et ſimiliter Hugo comes Staff', ex aſſignatione & in jure ejuſdem ducis, coram prefato Domini rege ſedente ad menſam, dicto die coronationis ſue, in magnâ aulâ Weſtm', panem & cibaria ejuſdem domini regis coram eo ſcindebat.

Et memorandum quod prefatus dux, die Jovis prox' ante coronationem predictam, ſedebat, de precepto regis, tanquam ſeneſcallus Anglie, in albâ aulâ regii palacii Weſtm', prope capellam regalem; & inquirebat diligenter que & qualia officia ſeu feoda dicto die per quoſcumque faciend' vel optinend' fuerant; & cum hoc eodem die Jovis publicè proclamari fecit, quod tam magnates quam alii qui alia officia ad coronationem predictam facere, ſeu feoda aliqua optinere clamare vellent, billas & petitiones ſuas clavica ſua continentes coram ipſo ſeneſcallo vel ejus in hac parte locum tenentibus proferri facerent indilatè. Super quo, diverſa officia & feoda, tam per petitiones quam ore tenus, coram ipſo ſeneſcallo exacta & vendicata extiterunt in forma que ſequitur. Inprimis, &c.

Johannes, rex Caſtelle & Leyionis, dux Lancaſtr', &c. coram domino rege & conſilio ſuo clamavit ut comes Leyceſtr' officium ſeneſcalcie Anglie, & ut dux Lancaſtr' ad gerendum principale gladium domini regis vocat' Curtana, & ut comes Lincoln ad ſcindend' & ſecandum coram domino rege die coronationis ſue, &c. Et conſideratum fuit per ipm regem & conſilium predict', quod idem dux offic' predicta per ſe & ſufficientes deputatos ſuos faceret & excerceret, & feoda ſibi debita in hâc parte obtineret.

2 Ric. II.

Rex, auctoritate parliamenti, declaravit & conceſſit prefato Johanni duci Lancaſtr', quod habeat infra com' Lancaſtr' sccm ſuum, ac barones & alios miniſtros in eodem sccio neceſſarios, necnon juriſdictiones, executiones, & conſuetudines quaſcunque, in sccio regis Anglie uſitatas, & poteſtatem faciendi & conſtituendi juſtitiar' ad plita foreſt' infra dict' com' Lancaſtr', durante vitâ predicti ducis.

13 Ric. II.

Rex, de aſſenſu parliamenti, conceſſit prefato avunculo ſuo Johanni duci Lancaſtr', quod ipſe & heredes ſui maſculi de corpore ſuo procreati habeant infra com' Lancaſtr' cancellariam ſuam, &c. & quecunque alia libertates & jura regalia ad com' palatinum pertin', & sccm ſuum, &c. ut in annis precedentibus, ſicut ea ad preſens habuit, pro termino vite ſue.

20 Ric. II.

Exemplificatio & confirmatio ampla cartarum precedentium, ſicut in anno primo. Et rex, volens eidem duci gratiam facere ubiorem, conceſſit prefato duci, quod de cetero predictis conceſſionibus, libertatibus, &c. plene gaudeat, &c. licet ipſe aliquibus earum hactenus uſus non fuerit. Et ulterius, pro majori ſecuritate ipſius ducis, rex declaravit & conceſſit prefato duci, quod ipſe ad totam vitam habeat omnes fines pro tranſgr', &c. pro licentiâ concordandi, & omnes exitus & forisfactos de omnibus hominibus & tenentibus & reſidentibus in terris & feodis ſuis; & quaſcunque forisſactur', annum, diem, & vaſtum, in quibuſcunque curiis regis, &c. & quod per manus miniſtrorum ſuorum poſſit levare fines & amerciamenta predict'. Et quod habeat in terris & feodis predictis aſſaiam panis, vini, & cerviſie, &c. & aliorum ad officium clerici mercati pertin', & fines, &c. inde provenientia; ita quod clericus mercati regis non ingrediatur. Et quod habeat catalla felonum & fugitivorum. Et quod habeat retorna omnium brevium, ſummonitionum, preceptorum regis, &c. & executionem eorundem; ita quod nullus miniſter regis ingrediatur. Et quod ſi contigerit miniſtros dicti ducis in curiis regis propter negligentiâ amerciari, &c. hujuſmodi fines & amerciamenti ſint prefati ducis. Et quod habeat catalla vocat' wayfe & ſtraye, deodand', theſaurum inventum, & catalla vocat' manuopera, &c.

21 Ric. II.

Rex conceſſit prefato avunculo ſuo Johanni duci Lancaſtr', &c. hundreda de Southgrenhowe, & Laundiſhe, in com' Norff', in manu rege per forisfactur' Ricardis comitis Arundell attincti.

Henricus comes Derb', filius primogenitus prefati Johannis ducis Lancaſtr', creatus dux Hereford, ſibi & heredibus maſculis de corpore.

22 Ric. II.

Rex pardonavit Johanni duci Lancaſtr', ac quibuſcunque miniſtris & offic' ſuis, &c. omnimoda debita, compota, firmas, arrerag' firmarum, preſtita, demandas, & impetitiones, &c.

Confirmatio dotis Katerine uxoris prefate ducis defunct' de caſtr' & honor' de Knareſburgh, Tykhill, &c.

Confirmatio regis de maneriis de Bradford & Almondbury, &c. conceſſis per prefatum ducem Johanni Beaufort, marchioni Dorſet, filio ſuo, ad vitam.

Confirmatio regis plurimarum cartarum, &c. per prefatum ducem & anteceſſores ſuos prius conceſſarum diverſis perſonis.

1 Hen. IV.

Item ſire dit ſeignour le roi, conſiderant coment luy Dieu tout puiſſant de ſa grande grace luy ad mys en honourable eſtat du roy, & per tant il ne poet meſme pur certeine cauſe porter le noun de duc de Lancaſtr' en ſon eſtile: Et auxi meſme ſire ſeignour le roi, conſiderent coment cet honourable noun & eſtat de duc ad eſte meſnez & governez moelt honourablement en honourable perſone de ſon pier pier qi Dieu aſſoile & des pleuſours ſes honourables aunceſtres. Et veullant ſur ceo q̃ le dit nom de duc Lancaſtre ſoit continuez en honur come affiert; de ladvis & aſſent des toutz les ſegnours eſpirituelx & temporelx & de les cões avauntditz ad ordeignes, q̃ Henry ſon eiſnez fitz ait & porte le noun de duc de Lancaſtr', & qil ſoit nomez Prince de Gales, duc d'Aquitaine, de Lancaſtr', & de Cornewaill, & count de Ceſtr'. Et outre ceo meſme ñre ſeign' le roy, conſiderant coment diverſes lib̃tees & franchiſes aient eſte g̃ntes devant ces heures, ſib̃n a ſon dit pier come as autres ſes aunceſtres ducs & countz de Lanc'. voet & g̃nte, de ladvys & aſſent avauntditz, q̃ meſme les lib̃tees & franchiſes ſoient & demorgent a ſon dit eiſnez fitz & ſes heires ducs de Lanc', diſſev̄ez de la corone d'Engleterre, qui teinent & entierment ſolonc leſſect & purport de les g̃ntes avaundites; & ſur ceo monſtra una chartre en parlement ent fait, & la bailla a ſon eiſnez fitz avauntdit.

Poſt ampliſſimam cartarum precedentium repetitionem & exemplificationem. Rex, nolens hereditatem ſuam ducatus ſui Lancaſtr' aut libertates ejuſdem, occaſione aſſumptionis regalis ſtatus, in aliquo mutari, transferri, ſeu diminui; ſed eandem hereditatem, cum juribus & libertatibus ſuis preconceſſis, eiſdem modo, forma, conditione, & ſtatu, quibus ſibi deſcenderant & evenerunt, ac cum omnibus & ſingulis talibus libertatibus & francheſiis, &c. quibus Johannes dux Lancaſtr', pater regis, dum vixit, eam ad terminum vite ſue habuit & tenuit, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, in cartis predictis nominatis, plenariè & integrè conſervari & continuari; voluit & ordinavit, de aſſenſu parliamenti, quod tam ducatus ſuus Lancaſtr', quam univerſa alia comitat', honor', caſtr', maner', feoda, advocationes, poſſeſſiones, &c. quecunque, ſibi ante adoptionem dignitatis regis qualitercunque deſcenſa, &c. ſibi & dictis hered' ſuis, &c. remaneant; & tali modo, & per tales officiarios deducantur & gubernentur, &c. ſicut remanere & gubernari deberent ſi ad culmen dignitatis regie aſſumptus non eſſet; & quod talia & hujuſmodi libertates, jura regalia, &c. in eiſdem in omnibus habeantur & continuentur, &c. qualia & cujuſmodi uti & haberi conſueverunt temporibus dictorum patris ſui & aliorum anteceſſorum ſuorum. Volens ulterius quod ſinguli tenentes de ducat', com', honor', &c. predict' adeo libere & illeſe conditionis ſint, tam in ingreſſibus poſt mortem anteceſſorum ſuorum quam in tenuris ſuis, &c. ſicut eſſe deberent ſi dicta dignitas regia non acceſſiſſet. Proviſo ſemper quod tenentes infra com' palatin' Lanc' hereditates ſuas, &c. extra manum regis proſequantur per liberationem in cancellar' regalitatis ibidem, ut eſt moris, &c. Voluit inſuper rex, &c. quod ſingula beneficia eccleſiaſtica ad hereditatem predict' ſpectant' per ipſum & heredes ſuos predict' conferantur; ita quod cancellar' vel theſ' Anglie, vel alius officiarius regius, de collatione vel preſentatione, ſeu etiam de viſitatione, beneficiorum hujuſmodi ratione officiorum ſuorum non intromittant. Voluit inſuper quod omnes receptores, firmarii, ballivi, & quicunque alii miniſtri ſui predictorum ducatus, honorum, caſtrorum, maneriorum, &c. de ſingulis denariis & proficuis, &c. de eiſdem ducat', honor', &c. provenient', coram certis ſpecialibus auditor' & miniſtris, & non coram theſ' & baron' de ſc̄c̄io regis, computent aut reſpondeant; ita quod theſ' & barones predict' in aliquo premiſſorum ſe non intromittant.

8 Hen. IV.

Quia rex voluerit, & de aſſenſu parliamenti anno primo declaraverit, quod univerſi tenentes ſui de ducatu Lancaſtr', & de poſſeſſionibus ad eundem pertinent', adeo liberi ſint, tam in ingreſſibus quam in tenuris ſuis, &c. ſicut eſſe deberent, ſi dignitas regia dicto regi nuſquam accidiſſet: Mandatum eſt eſcaetor' in com' Nott', quod manum ſuum amoveat de terrâ Johannis Boughton defuncti, qui tenuit diverſa terras in Boughton & Clareburgh de rege ut de predict' ducatu Lanc'.

Auctoritate parliamenti ſtatutum & ordinatum eſt, quod jus ſucceſſionis, poſt mortem regis, in coronâ & regnis Anglie & Francie, &c. ad Henricum principem Wallie, filium regis primogenitum, & heredes ſuos de corpore ſuo pertineret; & pro defectu hered' predict', ad Thomam ſecundogenitum, &c.; per quod tamen ſtatutum, quoad ducat' Lancaſtr', ejuſque jura, poſſeſſiones, &c. ac ſucceſſionem & modum ſuccedendi, &c. nihil mutari vel minuari voluit rex; ſed in omnibus modis & formis quibus antehac regi & gubernari ſolebat, antiqua jura, ſtatuta, & conſuetudines ejuſdem ducatus, teneri & obſervari voluit & decrevit.

10 Hen. IV.

Rex conceſſit, ordinavit, & decrevit, quod maner' de Brotilby, ac feodum de la Haye, in com' Lincoln', cum cuſtodiâ caſtri de Lincoln', &c que nuper fuerunt Thome com' Lanc' anteceſſoris ſui, & que modo in manibus regis per forisfacturam Thome fil' Thome comitis Kantie exiſtunt, hereditati ſue Lanc', ut parcell' ejuſdem, de cetero adjungantur, annectentur, & incorporentur, ac heredibus ſuis ejuſdem hereditatis deſcendant, &c. & quod omnes tenentes eorund' eodem modo & per tales officiarios gubernentur, &c. ſicut alia dominia, maner', terr', &c. hereditatis predicte extra com' palatinum Lanc', virtute carte regis in hac parte confecte, exiſtunt. Et quod tales libertates in eiſdem maner', feodo, &c. habeantur, &c. quales in aliis dominiis, maneriis, &c. ejuſdem hereditatis habentur, &c.

2 Hen. V.

Rex, factâ repetitione ampliſſimâ cartarum & libertatum precedentium, voluit, & auctoritate parliamenti conceſſit, quod libertates & franchesie predict', &c. in omnibus imperpetuum habeantur, excercentur, &c. juxta tenorem cartarum predictarum; & quod ſigillum ducatu predicto hactenus uſitatum, & omnia & ſingula que ſub ſigillo illo antehac data, conceſſa, acta, ſive geſta fuerunt aut emanarunt, locum habeant & vigorem, &c. abſque reclamatione regis, aut juſtic', ſuorum, baronum de ſc̄c̄io, vel aliorum officiorum ſuorum, &c. corone quorumcunque. Quodque hujuſmodi ſigillum exnunc in ducatu illo, pro negotiis, &c. ejuſdem faciendis & exequendis, habeatur & exerceatur imperpetuum.

Preterea, cum diverſa honor', caſtra, hundred', maner', terr', ten', &c. que fuerunt de hereditate Marie, unius filiarum & heredum Humfridi de Bohun, nuper com' Heref', Eſſex, & Nortħt, &c. matris regis, cujus heres ipſe eſt, &c. ſibi jure hereditar' deſcenderint; idem rex, de auctoritate parliamenti predicti, omnia & ſingula honor', caſtr', hundr', maner', &c. predicta dicte hereditatis ſue com' Heref', Eſſex, & Nortħt, cum ſuis juribus, &c. a coronâ ſuâ Anglie ſeparavit; & ea predict' ducat' ſuo Lancaſtr' adjunxit, univit, & incorporavit, &c.; volens ulterius quod in univerſis honor', caſtris, hundredis, &c. predicte hereditatis ſue omnia libertates, conſuetudines, &c. & jura regalia predicta, que ſibi & heredibus ſuis remanere voluit in omnibus & per omnia; & per miniſtros & officiarios ſuos ducatus Lancaſtr' extunc habeantur, excerceantur, &c. ac ſub ſigillo predicto, prout honor', caſtr', &c. in ducatu predict' extra com' palatinum Lanc' haberi, excerceri, &c. conſueverunt; quodque omnia dictam hereditatem concerventia, que ſub ſigillo predicto data, conceſſa, acta, ſive facta fuerunt, &c. locum habeant imperpetuum & vigorem; & quod omnes homines & tenentes ejuſdem hereditatis, ac reſidentes infra eandem, libertatibus, &c. predictis plenè gaudeant, &c.; quodque univerſa beneficia eccleſiaſtica ad dictam hereditatem ſpectant', &c. ſub ſigillo predicto conferantur, ita quod cancellar' vel theſ' Anglie, &c. non intromittant. Volens inſuper quod omnia & ſingula caſtr', honor', terr', ten', &c. que ad manus patris ſui regis Henrici quarti, aut ſuas, poſt conceſſionem ipſius patris, de aſſenſu parliamenti, anno regni ſui primo fact', ut de jure ducatus predicti, occaſione eſcaet', forisfactur', recuperationis, &c. ſeu alias qualitercunque devenerunt, predict' ducatui adjungantur & incorporentur; ac etiam quod quandocunque aliqua alia honor', caſtr', maner', terr', ten', &c. tanquam ad dictas tas hereditates ſuas pertinentia, ad manus ſuas vel heredum ſuorum, ratione juris ſui, aut occaſione hujuſmodi eſcaete, forisfacture, &c. ſeu alias qualitercunque devenerint, eo ipſo & quamcitius honor', caſtr', &c. illa in manibus ſuis vel heredum ſuorum ſic fuer', uni vel alteri hereditatum ſuarum predict', ad quam dinoſcitur pertinere, ſimiliter adjungatur, &c.; & quod ea omnia, &c. per hujuſmodi officiar' & miniſtros modo & forma ſupradict', ac ſub ſigillo predicto, regantur & gubernentur; quodque predict' libertates, &c. in eiſdem excerceantur, &c.

3 Hen. V.

Auctoritate parliamenti, premiſſa omnia confirmantur & approbantur; &, de aſſenſu parliamenti predicti, rex voluit inſuper, &c. quod uterque capitalium ſeneſcallorum hereditatum ſuarum predictarum pro tempore exiſtent', in ſingulis com' regni ſui in quibus officium ſuum ſeneſcalcie excerceret ſeu excercere debeat, in ſingulis commiſſionibus cuſtodum pacis, &c. extunc faciend' de tempore in tempus aſſignetur, ultra numerum hujuſmodi cuſtodum prius limitatorum per formam ſtatuti inde editi; quodque nulle donationes, pardonationes, vel relaxationes, que dictas hereditates ſuas, aut honor', caſtr', terr', ten', &c. ad eaſdem pertinentia, aut wardas, cuſtod', maritagia, relevia, exitus, amerciamenta, & proficua, aut officiar' hereditatum predictarum, &c. concernunt, aut quoviſmodo concernere poterunt, ſub aliquo alio ſigillo ſuo, magno vel parvo, preterquam ſub ſigillo ſuo pro ducatu predicto, ordinat' vel ordinand', &c. aliqualiter emanentia, valida ſint aut effectualia ullo modo.

9 Hen. V.

Particio facta & renovata eſt, auctoritate parliamenti, inter dominum regem, filium & hered' Marie, unius filiarum & heredum Humfridi de Bohun, comitis Heref', Eſſex, & Northt', &c. & Annam filiam & hered' Alienore, alterius filiarum & heredum ejuſdem comitis, de omnibus caſtris, maneriis, hundredis, terris, ten', &c. de quibus predictus comes fuit ſeiſitus, &c. preterquam de feodis militum & advocat' eccleſiarum in groſſo. Et idem rex, auctoritate parliamenti predicti, vult & concederit, quod acta & ordinationes fact' in parliamento anno ſecundo regis nunc, pro annectione, incorporatione, regimine, &c. caſtrorum, honorum, &c. hereditatis ducat' predict', annullentur & caſſentur; & quod omnia caſtr', maner', terr', ten', &c. hereditatis predicte, que in propartem regis nunc virtute partitionis predict' ceſſerunt, a coronâ Anglie ſeparentur, & ducatui predict' ſicut prius annectantur & incorporentur, regenda & gubernanda juxta formam ordinationis parliamenti antedicti de anno ſecundo.

1 Hen. VI.

Ad petitionem Anne comitiſſe Stafford, poteſtas conceſſa eſt dominis de conſilio regis, ſtatuendi & ordinandi de partitione fac' inter dictam comitiſſam & dominum regem, de feodis militum & advocat' eccleſiarum in groſſo, quondam Humfridi de Bohun comitis Heref'.

18 Hen. VI.

Item, for ſo muche as the king oure ſoverayn lord, havyng knowliche of greate murmour and clamour that ſhold be in his roialme of England, for non-paiment of the diſpenſis of his houſhold; willing of his good grace paiement to his liege people to be made for the diſpenſes of the ſame houſhold, granteth and ordeineth, bi thaſſent of the lords ſpirituell and temporell, and the commones of this roialme, in this preſent parliament aſſembled, and bi auctorite of the ſame parlement, that all the profits, iſſues, revennues, cuſtomes, and commodites, comynge or for to come, of all the caſtles, honours, maners, lordſhips, landes, tenementes, rents, reverſions, ſervices, fraunchiſes, libertees, viewes of francpleg, hundredis, letis, courtis, and all other inheritances and poſſeſſions of the duchie of Lancaſter remayning in his hande, and of the duchie of Cornewaille while the ſame duchie ſhall be in his hande, from the feſt of Seint Michell the Archangell laſt paſſed, except all fees, wages, annuytees, reparations, and other charges neceſſary goinge out of the ſame, be ordeined, applied, and emploied, to the diſpenſis of his ſaid houſhold, and delyvered by the receyvours generall of the ſaid duchies for the tyme being to the treſourer of his ſaid houſhold for the tyme being by indenturs thereof betwene thaym to be made; and that the receyvours generall of the ſaid duchies, upon theire accompte, allewayes ſhall have allowance and diſcharge of theire payementz, made by ſuche endentures; and yf the ſame receyvours make payement in any other wiſe than in forme aforeſaid, that then therof they be diſalowed upon theire accompt. Savinge to all the kinge's lieges their title, right, and intereſſe that they have in the ſaid duchees, or in any parcelle therof, this acte notwithſtandinge; and that this ordinance endure to the ende of five yere next enſuinge.

23 Hen. VI.

Rex, auctoritate parliamenti, ordinavit, quod lre patentes, tam ſub magno ſigillo, quam ſub ſigillo ducatus ſui Lanc', fiant Johanni archiepiſcopo Ebor', Johanni archiepiſcopo Cantuar', & aliis, de maner' & hundred' de Heigham Ferrers, maneriis ſuis de Raundes, Ruſsheden, Caldecote, & aliis quamplurimis caſtris, dominiis, ducat' predict', in multis com' Anglie & Wallie; inter al', caſtrum, dominium, & manerium de Caſtle Donington, cum membris & pertin' ſuis, in com' Leyc'; habend' ſibi & heredibus ſuis, ad perficiend' & perimplend' ultimam voluntatem regis ſuper diſpoſitione eorundem.

39 Hen. VI.

A reſitall is made in parliament of all the principall and auncient officers of the landes perteyninge to the duchie; viz. one chiefe ſtewarde and one auditor in the Northe partes, and one other chief ſtewarde and one auditor in the Southe partes. Item, one chancellor, one generall receyver, and one generall attorne, in and of all the duchie. Item, one chancellor, one chief ſtewarde, and one generall attorney, in the county palatyne of Lancaſter. And that all other officers newly made and appoynted, by reaſon of the landes putt in feoffement for performance of the kinge's will ut ſupra, be voyde and diſcharged, as burdenoſe in fees, and unneceſſarye for uſe.

Item, that all the revenues growinge of the ſaid lands ſo putt in feoffement, or otherwiſe, be paide to the lord threſorer of Englande for certaine yeares; and that other grauntes and aſſignements therof made be reſpited and reſtrayned.

Cum rex, per literas patentes ſub ſigillo ducatus ſui Lancaſtr', &c. conceſſer', &c. Thome Bathon & Wellen', Johanni Wigorn', epiſcopis, & aliis, caſtr', maner', & hundr', de Heyham Ferrers, maneria de Raundes, Ruſshedon, &c. ut ſupra; habend' ſibi & heredibus ad perficienda & perimplend' voluntatem regis, &c.; quodque feoffati predicti, necnon tenentes & reſidentes in omnibus premiſſis, excercerent talia & hujuſmodi libertates, &c. ſicut rex aut anteceſſores ſui duces Lancaſtr' ea unquam habuerunt, &c. Jamque, pro eo quod quamplures feoffatorum predictorum ab hac luce migraverint; idem rex, auctoritate parliamenti, ordinavit & conceſſit quod predictus ſtatus predictorum feoffatorum ſuperſtitium a modo ceſſet; quodque Thomas Cantuar', Willielmus Eboracen', archiepiſcopi, & quamplures alii, habeant ſtatum in omnibus caſtris, maneriis, dominiis, poſſeſſionibus, premiſſis, &c. (inter al', in caſtro, dominio, & manerio de Caſtle Donington, cum membris & pertin' ſuis, in com' Leyc'); & quod ea omnia teneant ſibi & heredibus ſuis ad perficiend' & perimplend' inde voluntatem regis, &c. Et quod omnes tenentes & reſidentes habeant libertates, &c. ſupradict'. Et quod per officiar' & miniſtr', & per ſigillum ducatus predicti, & non aliter, gubernentur, &c.

39 Hen. VI. Clauſ. m. 7.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Fraunciе, & dominus Hibernie, cancellario ñro ducatus ñri Lancaſtr', ſalutem. Cum ex parte dilectorum nobis in Chriſto prioris & conventus eccleſie & prioratus Sancti Bartholomei in Weſt Smythefeld, London, qui de fundatione nobilium progenitorum ñrorum & ñro patronatu exiſtit, nobis humiliter ſit ſupplicatum, ut cum eccleſia ſua predicta cum diverſis magnis ciſtis, libros de ducatu ñro predicto continentibus, multum occupata & incumbrata exiſtat in divina inibi miniſtrantium colore ſive occaſione ſcrutinei librorum predictorum temporibus incongruis ibidem fact', dictique conventûs tam in religione ſuâ quam in eundo in proceſſione ſuâ & aliter diſturbationem, nocumentum, & impedimentum non modica, necnon eccleſie ſue predicte ac capellarum in eadem difformitatem manifeſtam, variaque pericula incognita, contra voluntatem & aſſenſu ipſorum prioris & conventus & predeceſſorum ſuorum; volumus ipſos priorem & conventum, & ſucceſſores ſuos, a cuſtodiâ ciſtarum & librorum predictorum exonerare: Nos, ſupplicationi predicte annuentes, vobis diſtrictè mandamus, ſicut diſplicentiam ñram evitare, nobiſque de premiſſis reſpondere volueritis, ad periculum v̄r̄m, omni dilectione poſtpoſitâ, ciſtas & libros predictos extra prioratum predictum amoveatis, uſque Turrim ñram London', vel alium locum ubi eos ponere conveniens fuerit. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtm', nono die Februar', anno regni ñri triceſimo nono.

1 Edw. IV.

Exemplificatio & repetitio ampliſſima cartarum & libertatum precedentium. Et ulterius, cum, de aſſenſu parliamenti, ordinatum ſit quod rex Henricus Sextus omnia caſtra, maneria, dominia, &c. que habuit de ducatu Lancaſtr', &c. regi & corone Anglie foriſfaciat; rex, de auctoritate parliamenti predicti, ordinavit quod eadem maneria, caſtra, dominia, &c. in Angliâ, Walliâ, &c. & Caleſ', fiant & ſint ducatus Lanc' corporat', & ducatus Lancaſtr' nominentur; & quod eadem per nomen predictum, ab omnibus aliis ſuis hereditamentis ſeparata, ſibi & heredibus ſuis regibus Anglie habeat, &c. imperpetuum; & quod comitatus Lancaſtr' ſit com' palatinus; & quod rex habeat ut parcell' dicti ducatus eundem com' Lancaſtr' com' palatinum, ac ſigillum cancellar', juſtic', & officiar' ibidem pro eodem, ac omnimoda libertates, jura regalia, &c. ibidem legitimè uſitat'; & ulterius aliud ſigillum vocat' ſigillum ducatus Lancaſtr', ac cancellarium pro cuſtodiâ ejuſdem, officiarios & conſiliarios pro regimine, &c, ejuſdem, prout Henricus Quintus in eodem habebat; & quod dicti officiarii, &c. ac etiam tenentes & inhabitantes in eodem ducatu, habeant hujuſmodi libertates, &c. qualia habebant tempore regis Henr' Quinti. Et etiam quod in eodem ducatu omnia talia libertates, francheſ', conſuetud', privilegia, & juriſdictiones excerceantur, habeantur, &c. qualia in eodem antehac uſitata fuer'. Et quod officiarii, miniſtri, tenentes, & inhabitantes de eodem ducatu juxta eadem libertates, &c. tractentur, &c. incontrariumque non diſtringantur vel arctentur.

13 Edw. IV.

Poſſeſſiones ducatus predict' conceſſ' archiepiſcopo Cantuarien', & aliis, ad uſum ultime voluntatis regis; inter al', "the honour, caſtle, and manor of Leiceſter, with the members and appurtenances, and all other manors, &c. with their appurtenances, rents, and ſervices, as parcel of the duchy of Lancaſter, in the counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, and Northampton."

17 Edw. IV.

Maneria de Dadington & Aſcote conceſſ' Johanni duci Suff', in eſcamb' pro maner' de Eſtworldham, &c.

22 Edw. IV.

It is inacted by parliament, that recoveries, fynes, feoffementes, &c. had or made, &c. to uſe, and of truſte of landes holden of the duchie by knighte ſervice, ſhall not deſtraud the kinge of the wardes. Item, that upon an information put into any of the kinge's courtes by the attorney generall of his duchie, ſhewinge any wronge done to the kinge in any thinge tochinge the duchie, the juſtices have power therupon to award proceſſe by capias and otherwiſe, as apperteynethe, for eny matter belonginge to the kinge in the right of his crowne.

Inquiſitiones poſt mortem.

11 Edw. I. Poſt mortem Patricii de Cadurcis. Juratores dicunt quod predictus Patricius tenuit, die quo obiit, manerium de Kynemersforde, in comitatu Glouceſtr', de domino rege in capite, per ſervicium feodi unius militis; in quo habuit in ſuo dominico 670 acr' terre arrabil', que valent 11l. 3s. 4d. prec' acr' 4d.; & 500 acr' prati, que valent 52l. precium acre 2s. &c.; & dicunt quod Matild' filia dicti Patricii de Cadurcis etatis unius anni & dimid' proxim' heres eſt.

Conſimile in aliis comitatibus de terris & tenementis predicti Patricii.

25 Edw. I. Poſt mortem Edmundi fratris regis com' Lancaſtr'. Juratores dicunt quod predictus Edmundus tenuit die quo obiit manerium de Browton Parvâ juxta Ayleſbury, cum pertin', in comitatu Bucks, de domino rege in capite de comitat' Leiceſtr'.

Conſimile in aliis comitatibus de terris & tenementis predicti Edmundi, &c. ſubſcriptis; inter al', Warw'. Kenleworth, caſtr', cum profic', extent', viſ' francipl', in eodem com' teñt', pertin' honor' Leic'.

Leiceſtr'. Villa m̃ ibidem ext' ñ p̃litis cur' tam ejuſd' m̃, quam magne cur' Leic' de forinſecis.

Hinkeley m̃ extent'.

Sculton m̃ ext' cum parco de Tolowe.

Desford m̃ ext' cum parco.

Leiceſtr' foreſta.

Robertus Tiptop ten' in Thorp dimid' feod'.

Ricardus Caſterton ten' ibidem decimam partem.

Joħes Hamline ten' in Wimundeham di' feod'; idem Joħes & alii ten' ibidem di' feod' & dec' part'.

Henricus Franceis & alii ten' in Thorp dec' part'.

Clemen' Veſcy ten' in Stapleford di' feod'.

Willielmus Gany ten' cum al' ibidem unum feod'.

Radulfus filius Mathei ten' ibidem dec' part' feod'.

Johannes Hamline & alii ten' in Saxby dec' part' feod'.

Thom' Berkeley ten' in Coſton un' feod'.

Abbas Croxton ten' in Brouċton un' feod'.

Her' Ric̃i Grey ten' Hareſton & Gnipton.

Robertus Wyvill ten' in Staunton Wivill, Shangeton, & Herdewike, un' feod' & dimid'.

Gilbertus Baſevill ten' in Higham 4 part' feod'.

Rad̃us Davers ten' in Froleworthe 3 part' un' feod'.

Robertus Champaine ten' in Wiginſton, Thurleſton, Normanton, Crafts, Sutton, Stoke, & Upton, duo feod'.

Walter Hillinge ten' in Halu 4 part' feod'.

Heres Will̃i de Euer ten' in Walton dimid' feod'.

Rogerus Mallore ten' in Thorpe juxta Lilburn dimid' feod'.

Robertus filius Simonis ten' in Southekenelingworthe 4 part' feod'.

Ric̃us dominus de Southkenelingworthe ten' ibidem dimid' feod'.

Martinus de Ryperes ten' in Wyluby & in molendino aquatico de Hendredeby dec' partem feod'.

Abbas Leyc', Ric̃us de Stilton, & Petrus de Uppingham, ten' in Burniſwell, dimid' feod'.

Mag̃r hoſpital' Jeruſalem in Angl' ten' ibidem 8 part' feod'.

Rogerus de Martyvaus ten' in Noueſle & Humberſton un' feod'.

Johannes de Segrave ten' in Syleby & Thirneby un' feod', in Walton 5 part' feod', in Cateby 6 part' feod'.

Willielmus le Butiller ten' in Wymundwolde un' feod', & in Raveneſtone 4 part'.

Hered' Rogeri de Merley ten' in Knaptoft & Muſele unum feod'.

Hered' Walteri de Belegrave ten' ibidem 4 part'.

Radus Baſſet de Drayton ten' in Glorefton, Stockfaſton, & Cravenhow, 2 feod'.

Liberi tenentes de Hinkele ten' in eadem 5 part' feod', Radus Baſſet de Sapcote ten' in Sapcote, Stoke, & Upton, un' feod'.

Johannes Wake ten' in Attirton & Witherdele un' feod'.

Hugo le Deſpencer ten' in Hauthirn 20 part' feod'.

Georgius de Charnells ten' in Hinkele di' feod'.

Thomas de Chaworthe ten' in Wymundwolde, Hoton, & Preſtewolde, un' feod'.

Willielmus Moton ten' in Petlinge & Stapilton unum feod'.

Saerus de Thorpe ten' in eadem 10 part' feod'.

Radus Turvyle ten' in Normanton, Thurleſton, & Craft, Walton, Onelep, Sywoldeby, Smetheton, & Saxilby, 4 feod' di'.

Andr' de Elve ten' in Brocton, Lanegeton, & aliâ Langeton, & Hyam, 3 feoda & 4 part'.

Willielmus de Beuchamp, comes Warr', ten' in Cuntaſthorp & Blaby unum feod'.

Abbas Leyc' ten' in Thedingworthe 8 part'.

Radus de Aueta ten' in Brentyngthorp & Weſton dimid' feod'.

Thomas Mallore ten' in Kirkby Mallore di' feod'.

Willielmus de Ferrar' ten' in Belegrave & Clenefeld unum feod'.

Abbas de Gerudon ten' in Wymundewold 8 part' feod'.

Simon de Senevile ten' in Lokington di' feod'.

Hugo de Herdebeane ten' in Weleſberwe di' feod'.

Iſabella de Turs ten' in Thedingworthe 8 part' feod'.

Henr' de Greye ten' in Evynton & Humberſton un' feod' & dimid'.

Leiceſtr' advoc'. Abbatie Gerndon, advoc' abbatie.

Torp & Wymundham, una virgata terre ibidem in campis.

Stapilford ſoka, 2 part' bovat' terre, & 18s. 9d. reddit' cum cur' ibidem.

Dominus Robertus Tibtot tenet in Torp Edm' dimid' feod'.

Ricardus Caſterton di' feod' ib'.

Dominus Willielmus Hamelyn in Wymundham di' feod'.

Dominus Thomas de Berkele in Coſton un' feod'.

Hered' Johannis Mareſcall in Stapilford di. feod'.

Willielmus Gangy le Rous dimid' feod'.

Decima pars feodi de terrâ de Abelawe in Saxby.

M. Sewſterne, 20 pars feodi.

Dominus Willielmus Veſcy ten' in Stapilford & Saxby 2 carucat' terre, 9 virgat' terre, 4 cottag', & 4 part' feod'.

Stapilford eccleſia, Torp Edm' eccleſia, Wymundham eccleſia.

Porciones de Coſton, Stapilford, & Wymundham, val' 4l. per ann'.

4 Edw. III. Poſt mortem Henrici de Lacy, nuper comitis Lincolnie. Juratores dicunt, quod predictus Henricus tenuit, die quo obiit, per legem Anglie, de hereditate Margarete de Lungeſpeye, quondam uxoris ſue, defunct', conſtabulariam caſtri Lincoln', &c. de rege in capite, per ſervicium faciendi cuſtod' priſon' ejuſdem caſtri, ſimul cum wardis & aliis exitibus pertinent'; & 100s. redditus de quibuſdam liber' tenent' in ballio caſtri predicti. Et ſunt quidam forinſeci tenentes in Keſteven, & reddunt per annum ad wardam caſtri predicti 4l. 5s.; & alii tenentes forinſeci in Lindeſeye, qui redd' per annum ut ſupra 56s. 10d. Et dicunt, quod Aleſia, filia predictorum Henrici & Margar' quondam uxoris ſue, eſt heres eorundem Henrici & Margar' propinquior, & etatis 27° annorum; & nupta eſt Thome comiti Lancaſtr'.

Conſimiliter in aliis comitatibus de terris & teñtis predict' Henrici, &c. ſubſcriptis; inter al', Leiceſtr' & Notr'.

Donington, caſtr', villa, ext'.
Swannington, di' feod'.
Leyc', di' virgat' terre.
Tyckenhale, 3 virgat'.
Willington, un' bovat' terr'.
Plumptre, m̃, wapent'.
Riſelegh, wapent'.
Repingdon, dec' part' feod'.
Hicklinge, villa.

1 Edw. III. Poſt mortem Thome nuper comitis Lancaſtr'. Juratores dicunt quod predictus comes tenuit de domino Edwardo nuper rege Anglie in capite in dominico ſuo ut de feodo, die quo obiit, in partibus de Keſteven, in com' Lincoln', quartam partem manerii de Wadington, cum pertin', que valet per annum 26 marcas. Et tenuit quatuor feoda, quartam partem & decimam partem unius feodi militis, in Bultham, Somerton, Botheby, Wellinghoure, Bloxham, & Kirkeby, unde quodlibet feodum reddit per annum dicto domino comiti 10s. ad wardam caſtri ſui Lancaſtr' faciend', & ſcutag' quando currit, una cum curiâ ſuâ & returno brevium tenend' apud Lincoln', que vocatur le rere countee, & duobus viſibus per annum tenend' apud Wellinghoure; que quidem cur', cum retorno brevium & viſibus predictis, valent per annum 40s. in omnibus perquiſit'. Et dicunt quod Henricus comes Lancaſtr' eſt frater & heres dicti Thome propinquior, & plene etatis.

Conſimiliter in aliis comitatibus de terris & ten' predicti Thome, &c. ſubſcriptas; inter al', Leyceſtr', honor, caſtr', extent'.

Hynkele, m̃, ext'.
Shulton, m̃, ext'.
Dersford, m̃, ext'.
Swanington & Ravenſton, 30s. 10d. redditus.

20 Edw. III. Poſt mortem Henrici comitis Lancaſtr'. Juratores dicunt quod predictus Henricus tenuit de domino rege in capite in dominico ſuo ut de feodo in comitatu Wilteſ', die quo obiit, maneria de Everle, Upcolingburne, & Hanyndon, cum pertinentiis, per ſervicium militare; in quo quidem manerio de Everle predict' eſt unum meſſuagium, cum curtilag' & gardium, que valent per annum 6s. 8d. &c. Et dicunt quod Henricus comes Derb', filius predicti comitis, eſt heres ejus propinquior, & plene etat'.

De reliquis inquiſitionibus poſt mortem predicti Henrici comitis non conſtat.

35 Edw. III. Poſt mortem Henr' nuper ducis Lanc'. Juratores dicunt quod predictus Henricus tenuit de domino rege in capite, die quo obiit, caſtrum, manerium, & honorem Leic', in comitatu Leyceſtr', quod quidem caſtrum nichil valet per annum ultra repriſ'. Et ſunt in eodem manerio viginti & novem libr' & 17s. & 10d. ob. de redditu aſſiſ', & octo libr' ſterlingorum de perquiſit' de Portmonneſmote, &c. Et dicunt quod predictus dux obiit die Martis prox' ante feſtum Annunciationis beate Marie ultimo preterito; & quod Matill filia ejuſdem ducis etatis 26 annorum & amplius; quam Willielmus dux Holand & Seland duxit in uxorem; & Blaunch filia ejuſdem ducis, ac ſororis predicte Matill, etatis 21 annorum & amplius, quam dominus Johannes comes Richemunde duxit in uxorem; ſunt ejuſdem Henrici ducis heredes propinquiores, &c.

Conſimiliter de aliis terris & tenementis; inter al',
Frithe, boſcus.
Hinkeleye, m̃, ext'.
Schelton, m̃, ext'.
Dersford, m̃, ext'.
Selby, balliva, 4 viſus francpleg'.
Carleton, 4 viſus.
Shulton, 2 viſus.
Dersford, 2 viſus.
Hinkeley, 2 viſus.

Conſimiliter de feodis militum Roberti de Inſulâ, per ipſum conceſſ' domino regi, anno 42 Edwardi Tertii; & per dictum regem poſtea, anno 46, conceſſ' Johanni duci Lancaſtr'.

Fœdera Conjugalia CESTRIÆ, LINCOLNIÆ, & SARISBURIÆ, Comitum, in Familiam LANCASTRENSEM deſcendentia.

From Mr. RUDING's MS. enlarged by Rot. Parl. vol. IV. p. 263—266.)

Hugo dictus Keveliac, comes Ceſtrie, ob. 22 H. II.

Hawicia [1], una ſororum & hered' Ranulphi comitis Ceſtrie & Lincolnie, nupta Roberto de Quincy.

Ranulphus comes Ceſtrie ob. 16 H. III.

Willielmus de Longſpee [2], fil' nothus H. II. regis, comes Sariſb' uxoris jure, ob. 10 H. III.

Margareta comitiſſa Lincolnie, nupta Johanni Lacy, conſtab' Ceſtrie & com' Lincoln'.

Willielmus de Longſpee, ob. 34 H. III.

Edmundus de Lacy, coneſtab' Ceſtrie, ob. 42 H. III. ante matrem.

Willielmus de Longaſpata duxit Matildem filiam Walteri Clifford, ejuſque heredem.

Henricus de Lacy comes de Lincolne [3], ob. 4 E. II.=Margareta, unica filia & heres.

Alicia, unica heres, nupta Thome [4] com' Lanc', uxoriſque jure Lincoln' & Sar' comiti, & coneſtab' Ceſtrie; poſtea renupta Ebuloni L'Eſtrange; obiit ſine exitu 22 E. III.

[1] See her arms, Plate X. fig. 31.

[2] Ib. fig. 32.

[3] Ib. fig. 33.

[4] Ib. fig. 34.

Familiarum Nobiliſſimarum de BREWER, CADURCIS, & de LONDON, in LANCASTRENSEM deſcenſus.

Willielmus Brewer [5], ſenior.

Margareta de la Ferte, alias Feritate, una filiar' heredum dicti Willielmi.

Willielmus de London.

Gundreda nupta Pagano de Cadurcis.

. . . . . de London.

Patricius de Cadurcis [6]=Hauiſia de London.

Paganus de Cadurcis.

Patricius de Cadurcis duxit Iſabellam filiam Gulielmi de Bellocampo, com' Warr'.

Matildis nupta Henrico [7] comiti Lancaſtrie & domino de Monmouth.

[5] Arms, Plate X. fig 35.

[6] Ib. fig. 36.

[7] Ib. fig. 37.

Comitum HEREFORDIÆ, ESSEXIÆ, & NORTHAMPTONIÆ, in Familiarum LANCASTRIÆ deſcenſus.

Humfredus de Bohun, com' Hereford & Eſſex, ob. 15 E. II.=Elizabetha filia regis E. I.

Johannes comes Heref' & Eſſex, duxit Margaretam, filiam L. Baſſet, ob. 10 E. III. ſine exitu.

Humfredus de Bohun, com' Heref' & Eſſex, ob. 35 E. III. ſine exitu.

Willielmus de Bohun [8], com' Northampt', ob. 34 E. III.=Elizabetha una ſoror' hered' Egidii Badeliſmer, ob. 30 E. III.

Humfredus comes Herefordie, Eſſex, & Northampton [9], conſtabul' Anglie, ob. 46 E. III.=Johanna filia Ricardi comitis Arondel, ob. 7 H. V.

Maria nupta Henrico IV. regi Anglie [10], filio primogenito Johannis ducis Lancaſtrie.

Aleonora nupta Thome Woodſtock [11], duci Glouceſtrie, ob. 1 H. IV.

Henricus V. rex Anglie, ob. 1422.

Henricus VI. rex Anglie, depoſitus 1461.

Edmundus com' Staffordie, ob. 4 Hen. IV.=Anna comitiſſa Staffordie, ob. 17 H. VI.=Willielmus Burghcher, comes de Ewe.

Johanna nupta Gilberto domino Talbott, ob. ſine exitu 1 H. IV.

Iſabella profeſſa monialis.

Humfredus Stafford dux Buckinghamie, ob. 38 H. VI.

Henricus comes Eſſexie, ob. 1 R. III.

Johannes dominus Berners.

Willielmus dominus Fitzwarin, a quo comites Bathonie hodierni.

[8] Arms, Plate X. fig. 38.

[9] Ib. fig. 39.

[10] Ib. fig. 40.

[11] Ib. fig. 41.

Declaratio propinquitatis ſanguinis inter Regem ANGLIE & Comitem MARESCALLUM ANGLIE, linealiter computando ab HENRICO Tertio, & filio ejus EDWARDO & duabus Reginis Uxoribus ſuis ſubſcriptis.

Henricus tertius, rex Anglie, ob. 1272. = Aleonora filia Raymundi comitis Provincie, ob. 1292.

1. Alienora regina Anglie, filia regis Hiſpanie, uxor prima. = Edwardus primus, rex Anglie, ob. 1307. = 2. Margareta regina Anglie, filia Philippi regis Francie, ſecunda uxor, de quibus Thomas comes Norff', & Mareſcallus Anglie.

Edwardus ſecundus, rex Anglie, depoſitus 1327.

Edwardus tertius, rex Anglie, ob. 1377. = Philippa filia Gulielmi comitis Hannoniæ, ob. 43 E. III.

Edwardus princeps Wallie, ob. 50 E. III.

Ricardus ſecundus, rex Anglie, depoſitus 1399.

Declaratio propinquitatis ſanguinis inter Regem ANGLIE & Comitem MARESCALLUM, ex Lineâ & Parte Ducis LANCASTRIE.

Avelina filia Gul' de Fortibus[12], comitis Albemarlie, ob. ſine exitu. = Edmondus comes Lancaſtrie[13], ob. 4 Junii, 25 E. I. = Blanchia[14], vel Aleanora, regina Navarre, Campanie comitiſſa, filia Roberti com' Arteſie.

Thomas com' Lanc', Linc', Leyc', & Derbie, attinct', ob. 15 E. II. = Alicia filia & heres Henr' de Lacy, renupta Ebuloni le Strange, ob. ſine exitu, 22 E. III.

Henricus[15] com' Lanc', dominus de Monmouth, ob. 20 E. III. = Matildis filia & heres Patricii de Cadurcis.

Johannes, ſine exitu.

Henricus dux Lanc', com' Leyc', Linc', & Derbie, ob. 35 E. III. = Iſabella filia Henrici[16] de Bellomonte domini de Folkengham.

Johanna filia 3. = Johannes dominus de Mowbray de Axholme.

Johannes dominus de Moubray.

Johannes de Gandavo[17], dux Lancaſtr', obiit 22 R. II. = Blanchia filia Henrici ob. 1369, 43 E. III.

Willielmus dux Bavarie, comes Zelandie, Hollandie, &c. & comes Leyceſtrie. = Matildis filia Henrici ducis Lanc', ob. 36 E. III. ſine exitu.

Thomas dux Norff', Mareſcallus Anglie.

Johannes comes Mareſcallus.

Henricus quartus, rex Anglie, ob. 1413. = Maria, fil' & una heredum Humfrid' de Bohun, com' Heref', Eſſex, North't', & coneſtab' Anglie.

Henricus quintus, rex Anglie, ob. 1422.

Henricus ſextus, rex Anglie, depoſitus 1461.

Declaratio propinquitatis ſanguinis inter Regem ANGLIE & Comitem MARESCALLUM ex Lineâ & Parte Comitis ARUNDELLIE.

Ricardus comes Arundell[18].

Johanna comitiſſa Hereford. — Ricardus comes Arundelie.

Maria duciſſa Hereford. — Eliſabetha duciſſa Norff'.

Henricus quintus, rex Anglie. — Johannes comes Mareſcallus Anglie[19].

[12] Arms, Plate X. fig. 42.
[13] Ib. fig. 43.
[14] Ib. fig. 44.
[15] Ib. fig. 45.
[16] Ib. fig. 46.
[17] Ib. fig. 47.
[18] Ib. fig. 48.
[19] Ib. fig. 49.

Nº XIV. An Inquiſition taken by command of king Henry III. ſoon after the Battle of Eveſham, which happened in 1265; wherein the Names of the moſt conſiderable Perſons in the County of LEICESTER, adhering to SIMON MONTFORT earl of Leiceſter in his rebellion, are particularly expreſſed, and alſo the value of their lands which were then ſeized by the King.

(From a MS. in the CHETWYND Library, intituled, "Exemplar pervetuſti rotuli pergamenacii penes JOHANNEM VINCENT, de Uffington, in com. Linc', generoſum, filium AUGUSTINI VINCENT, WINDSOR Fecialis, 1652.") LEICESTR'.

Hundr' de GUTLASTON.

Hec eſt inquiſitio facta coram đnis Wilło Bagod et Rob̄to de Grendon, inquiratoribus đni regis apud Leiceſtr', per 12 liberos homines et fideles, ſc', Hen' de Templo, Rob̄ de Owereton, Wilł de Leyre, &c. qui dicunt per ſacramentum eorum quod Tho' de Croneſley fuit interfectus apud Eveſham in bello, et habuit 7 virgatas terre, et quoddam molendinū, in villâ de Witerdeleye, unde dicte virgate terre cum molendino extente ſunt ad 100 ſolidos per ann̄; et dom' H. extraneus recepit firmam S^ti^ Michael', ſc' duas marcas et dimid' predicti redditûs ad nativitatem S^te^ Marie Virginis.

Item dicunt quod Nic' de Setgrave[1] captus fuit apud Eveſham in bello, & habuit 19 virgatas terre et dimid' in villâ de Wyterdeleye, et valent per ann̄ 7 lib' et 12 ſoł; et dictus H. extraneus recepit firmam feſti S^ti^ Mich', ſc' 52s̄. ſoł ad feſtum exaltationis Sancte Crucis.

Dicunt etiam quod Hen' Haſtings capt' fuit in bello apud Eveſham, et habuit 10 virgat' terre in villa de Nayleſton, et valent per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus 5 marc' & 3 ſoł.

Item, dicunt quod Rob̄ Motun de Peyclinton fuit interfectus apud Eveſham in bello; et terra ſua in Peyclinton valet per an̄ cū ōibus exitibus 9 lib'; et Wilłus Bagod recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich', ſc' 23 ſoł, 4đ.

Dicunt etiam quod Ric̄us de Vernun fuit in caſtro de Peck pro Henr' de Monteforti, et habet terram in villâ de Appleby, que valet per an̄ cū ōibus exitibus 100 ſoł; et comes de Ferrar' recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich̄', ſc' 2 marc & dimid'.

Dicunt etiam quod Tho' de Eſtleyâ fuit interfectus apud Eveſham, et habuit terram in villâ de Higham, que valet per an̄ in ōibus exitibus 5 lib' 11s̄.; et dictus Henr' extraneus recepit firmam ante feſtum Sc̄i Mich', ſc' 37 ſoł.

Dicunt etiam quod dom' Henr' de Haſtings captus fuit apud Eveſham in bello, et habet villam de Borbache, que valet per ann̄, cū ōibus exitibus & pertinent' ad dictam villā ſpectantibus, 15 lib'; et uxor predict' Henr' Haſtings ponitur in ſeiſinam predicte ville per dom̄ regem; et illa recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich', ſc' 100 ſoł. Item, dicunt quod Henr' de Haſtings habet villam de Barwell, que valet per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus 13 lib', 18 ſoł, & 10 den'; et dicunt quod H. extraneus recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich'; et uxor pred' H. de Haſtings ponitur in ſeiſinam predict' ville per dom' regem.

Item dicunt quod Hugo[2] Deſpenſar fuit interfectus apud Eveſham, et habuit Hucleſcote et Donnington, que valent per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus . . . . . lib'; et uxor predict' H. Deſpenſarii ponitur in ſeiſinam per dom' regem.

Dicunt etiam quod Thomas de Eſtleyâ interfectus apud Eveſham, et habuit terram in villâ Wylvueby, que valet per ann̄ in ōibus exitibus 13 lib', ſex ſoł; et Wilł Bagod recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich', ſc' 3 marcas.

Item dicunt quod Rob̄ de Hardreſhull interfectus fuit apud Eveſham, et habuit terram in Pultuneyâ, que valet per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus 9 lib' 16 ſoł, unde Petrus de Arderne recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich̄', ſc' . . . . . . ſoł.

Dicunt etiam quod Tho' de Eſtleyâ interfectus fuit apud Eveſham, et habuit terram in Browton, que valet per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus 13 lib', 16 ſoł; et Wilłus Bagod recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich̄s.

Item dicunt quod Joh̄es Deſpenſarius capt' fuit apud Kenilworth, et habet terram in villâ de Herdeſby, que valet per ann̄ cū ōibus exitibus 7 lib' et dimid', et adhuc firma S^ti^ Mich' retinetur in manibus hominum dicte ville.

Dicunt etiam quod dom' Hugo Deſpenſarius interfectus fuit apud Eveſham, et habuit 4 virgat' terre in villâ de Leyre; et Wilłus Bagod recepit firmam Sc̄i Mich', ſc' 2 marc.

Item dicunt quod Simon comes de Leiceſtriâ interfectus fuit apud Eveſham, et tenuit burgam Leiceſtriæ, que valet in dominicis redditibus, cū ōibus exitibus, per ann', 154 lib' et 4 den'; et predict' burgus in manibus dn̄i Edwardi, cujus ballivi receperunt redditum termini Sc̄i Mich'.

Item, idem Simon tenuit villatam de Hinkeley, que valet per ann', in domibus, certis redditibus, et aliis terræ exitibus, 29 lib'.

Item, idem Simon tenuit maneriū de Sywaltone, quod valet per ann̄ cū oīb̄us exitibus 20 lib'.

Item, idem Simon tenuit Bagworth & Torington, que valent per ann' 20 lib', 8 ſoł, & 9 den'.

Item, idem Simon tenuit Dersford, que valet per ann̄ cū oīb̄us exitibus 19 lib', 10 ſoł; que terre et tenementa fuerunt in manibus dn̄i Edwardi progeniti dn̄i regis, cujus ballivi receperunt firmam S^ti^ Mich', plac' libertatis cur' Leyc'; nec feoda poſſint extendi per pred' juratores quia in diverſis comitatibus.

Nomina collectorum, { JOHANNES DE BUSSEBY, &
RAđUS DE LUDINGTON.

GARTRE.

Inquiſitio facta in hundredo de Gartre, per Joh̄em de Burneby, Rob̄ de Noveray, &c. qui dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſūū quod Ric̄us de Grey, capt' apud Kenilworth, tenuit manerium de Evington, cum pertinent', quod valet per ann̄ in ōibus exitibus 30 lib', de quibus in redditu de termino Sc̄i Mich' 9 ſoł, qui ſunt in manu prepoſiti loci.

Item dicunt quod Rob̄ de Wyvile, captus in bello de Eveſham, tenuit maner' de Staunton, quod valet per ann̄ in ōibus exitibus 20 lib', de quibus de termino Sc̄i Mich̄s in redditu 37 ſoł, 4 den'.

Item, dicunt quod Saerus de Harcourt, capt' apud Kenilworth, tenuit villam de Neuton cū pertinent', que valet per ann̄ in ōibus exitibus 9 lib', 11 ſoł, 8 denar', de quibus de redditu in termino Sc̄i Mich' 29 ſoł, 4 den', quos Johannes Giffard recepit.

Item dicunt quod idem Saerus tenuit in Kibworth 8 virgat' terre in dominico, cum capitali meſſuagio, et uno molendino ad ventum, et 15 virgat' terre in villenagio, que valent per ann̄ in ōibus exitibus 16 lib', de quibus de redditu in termino Sc̄i Mich' 57 ſoł 4 den', quos Joh̄es Giffard recepit.

Item, dicunt quod idem Saerus habuit in dominico unam carucatam terre in Tyrlington, de libero

---

[1] Sic in MS. Chetwynd.

[2] Sic in MS. Chetwynd.

maritagio uxoris ſue, que valet per anñ 40 ſol in õibus exitibus.

Item dicunt quod Wilſus de Preſton habuit unam carucatam terre cum pertinent' in Gouteby, in dominico, que valet per anñ in õibus exitibus 40 ſol; et 2 virgatas terre in villenagio in eadem, que valent per anñ unam marcam.

Item dicunt quod Joh̃es de Reygate habuit quandam cuſtodiam, de dono archiep̃i Ebor', apud Tyrlyngton, ſeiſitam per dom̃ Rogerũ de Mortuomari, qui totum jus et clameam ſuam inde dedit Joh̃i le Moyne, in quâ cuſtodiâ ſunt 8 virgat' terre in dominico, que valent per anñ 8 marcas, et 7 virgat' terre in villenagio, que valent per anñ 7 marcas, et unum molendinum ad ventum, et capitale meſſuagium cum ſpineto, que valent per anñ 16 ſol 8 den'.

Item dicunt quod Brianus de Gorvâ habuit 8 virgatas terre cum pertinent' in villâ de Lauton, in dominico, que valent per anñ in õibus exitibus 4 lib'; et 12 virgat' in villenagio, que valent per anñ 6 lib'; de quibus in redditu de termino Sc̃i Mich' 57 ſol 8 denar' ob̃; quos Rog' de Moels recepit.

Item dicunt quod Galfridus de Skeffington, captus in munitione caſtri Ceſtrie, ubi fuerat per diſtrictionem comit' Leiceſtr', habuit in villâ de Lauchton 6 virgat' terre in villenagio, de libero maritagio uxoris ejus, que valent per anñ in õibus exitibus 60 ſol, et unum molendinum ad ventum ſimiliter de libero maritagio, que valet per anñ 1 marc', de quibus in redditu de termino S^ti^ Mich̃s 24 ſol 5 den'.

Item, dicunt quod Wilſus Martell habuit 7 virgat' terre in villâ de Glen in dominico, que valent per anñ 7 marc' in õibus exitibus, et 14 virgat' terre in villenagio, et unum molendinum aquat', quæ valent per anñ 15 marc'; de quibus in redditu termini Sc̃i Mich' 2 marc', quas Eudo de la Zouch recepit.

Et ſunt nomina collectorum, { Hugo de Nevile de Blacheston, Tho. Baſſett de Welleham.

FRAMLAND.

Inquiſitio et extenta facta per 12 juratores, ſc', Walt' Bellard, Will' de Charnell, &c. qui dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſuũ quod Hugo Deſpenſar' tenuit maner' de Fredeby in dominico, et fuit interfectus apud Eveſham in bello, et valet per anñ in õibus exitibus 10 lib'; et Rob' de Tibetouft habuit ſeyſinam poſt bellum, et cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſc' 7 marc'; et modo eſt in manibus uxoris quondam dicti Hugoni Deſpenſar' per breve d̃ni regis.

Item dicunt quod Nich' de Segrave tenuit manerium de Overton de dominico, qui captus fuit ad bellum de Eveſham; et dictum maneriũ valet per anñ 20 lib' in õibus exitibus, et Rog' de Mortuomari cepit ſeyſinam poſt bellum, et cepit redditũ termini Sc̃i Mich', ſc' 10 marc', et modo eſt in manibus uxoris Nich̃i de Segrave per breve d̃ni regis.

Item dicunt quod manerium de Kettleby et Holewell fuit in manibus Rad̃i Baſſet, qui fuit interfectus ad bellum de Eveſham; et valet per anñ in õibus exitibus 20 lib'.

Item, dicunt quod idem Rad̃us Baſſet habuit in manu ſuã Somerdeby, et medietat' Parve Dauby; et valet per anñ in oibus exitibus 10 lib'; ſed Rob' de Tatteſhale, jun^r^, ſeiſivit Kettleby, Holewell, Somerdeby, et medietat' Parve Dauby, in manu ſuâ, et cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſc' de Kettleby et Holewell 10 marc', et de Somerdeby et medietat' Parve Dauby 3 marc' et 10 ſol.

Item dicunt quod medietat' maner' de Gouteby fuit in cuſtodiâ ejuſdem Rad̃i Baſſet, quæ valet per anñ in oib̃us exitibus 18 marc', et Joh̃es Tybetoſt cepit ſeiſinã et firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſc' 4 marc' et dimid.

Item dicunt quod maner' de Garthop fuit in manu Petri de Montiforti, qui fuit interfectus ad bellũ, et valet per anñ in oib̃us exitibus 40 lib', ſed uxor quondam Will̃i Gaugi habet dotem ſuam illius manerii; et Wilſus de London', ſerviens d̃ni Edwardi, cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſc' 10 libr'; et modo eſt in ſeiſinâ Rob' de Walraund per breve d̃ni regis.

Nomina collectorum, { Will'us Hamelyn, mil.
Will' fil' Fafe de Knipton.

GOSCOTE.

Inquiſitio facta in hundredo de Goſcote, per Wilſum de Eveneby, Rob' de Shayckon, &c. qui dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſuũ quod Nich' de Setgrave captus fuit ad bellum de Eveſham, et habuit duas partes de Segrave, quæ valent in õibus exitibus per anñ 15 lib', unde comes Gloc^r^ habuit ſeyſinam; et Petrus Pycot, attornatus dicti comitis, cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich' ante terminũ, ſc' 100 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod idem Nich' habuit terram in Dycheſworth, que valent in õibus exitibus 17 libr', unde d̃nus Petrus Pycote, nomine comitis Gloverine, cepit firmã de termino Sc̃i Mich' ante terminum, ſc' 52 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod idem Nich' habuit 4 lib', 8 den', annui reddit' in Hawethorne, unde d̃nus Petrus Pycot cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich' ante terminum, nomine dicti comitis, ſc' 21 ſol 8 den'.

Dicunt etiam quod idem Nich' habuit 30 ſol annui redditûs in Keggeworth, unde Petrus Pycote cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich' ante terminum, ſc' 10 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod d̃nus Hugo Deſpenſar' occiſus fuit apud Eveſham, et habuit maner' de Lutteborwe, quod valet per anñ, cum membris, 60 lib'; et quod integrè traditum eſt uxori dicti Hugonis, ad ſuſtentationem ſuam, per preceptum d̃ni regis; et comes Gloceſtr' habuit ſeyſinam.

Dicunt etiam quod idem Hugo habuit quandam partem terre in Swth Croxton, que valet per anñ 4 lib', 17 ſol, 4d̃.; et quod d̃nus Joh̃es de Ardern cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſc' 5 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod d̃nus Radus Baſſet de Drayton habuit quandam partem terre in Watton, et valet per anñ 6 lib', 13 ſol, 4 den'; et comes Gloceſtr' habuit ſeyſinam.

Dicunt etiam quod dictus Joh̃es Deſpenſar', qui captus fuit apud Kenilworth, habuit quandam manſionem que vocatur Bewmaner, que valet cum pertinent' 10 lib'; unde d̃nus Rogerus de Clifford habuit ſeyſinam, et ballivi ſui ceperunt de firmâ termini Sc̃i Mich' 10 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod d̃nus Ric̃us de Grey capt' fuit apud Kenilworth, et habuit unam virgatam terre et domum in Humberſton, quæ valet per anñ 14 ſol; unde d̃nus Joh̃n de Grey habuit ſeyſinam, et cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich' 3 ſol 6 den'.

Dicunt etiam quod Rob' Burdett ſtetit in ſervicio cum com' Leyc' apud Eveſham, et habuit 6 virgat' terre in Louſby, que valent per anñ 60 ſol; et idem Rob' cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich̃s, ſc' 15 ſol.

Dicunt etiam quod d̃nus Rad̃us Baſſet de Drayton habuit maner' de Bredon die belli de Eveſham, et valet in õibus exitibus per ann' 40 lib', 4 ſol, 5 den', et habuit illud maner' de dono comitis de Ferrar; et Rob' de Tatteſhall cepit firmam de termino Sc̃i Mich', ſcil' 50 ſol, 1 den', ob'.

Dicunt etiam quod Galfridus de Skeftington habuit quandam partem in Skeftington, que valet per anñ 60 ſol, 8 den'; et uxor ejuſdem G. habet illam partem; et idem Galfridus captus fuit apud Ceſtriam, et eſt in priſonâ.

Collectores, { Will' . . . . Outte de Roleya,
Hen' de Nottingham.

XV. CHARTERS and GRANTS of the early EARLS of LEICESTER, &c.

1. Reverentiſſimo patri & domino S. Dei gratiâ venerabili epiſcopo Wigornie, & omnibus filiis ſancte eccleſie tam preſentibus quam futuris, G[ualeranus][1] comes de Mell'[2] ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe Deo & abbatie Sancte Marie de Bordeſleiâ, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, totam terram Bordeſl', & totum dominicatum Budefordie, ſcilicet, quinque carucatas terre, & totam terram de Holowei preter terram parcarii, & totum dominicatum de Nortoniâ, in boſco & in plano, in pratis & paſturis, in aquis & molendinis, & in omnibus aliis pertinentiis, & omnia aiſiamenta ſua in foreſtâ de Fechaam, & peſcariam de Herneliâ cum terrâ que ad eam pertinet, & novum puteum de Wich de proprio labore, ad eorum ſuſtinatum qui predicte abbatie deſervierint[2]. Hec vero facio pro animâ Henrici regis, & parentum meorum & amicorum, & pro ſalute meâ, & heredum meorum & amicorum, & pro incolumitate tocius regni Anglie. Teſtibus; Willielmo capellano, & Willielmo de Bello Campo, & Gileberto de Laci, & Willielmo de Pinu, & Johanne de la Laund, & Ignard Leparler, & Humfrido camerario.

2. Robertus comes Mellenti[3] baillivis ſuis de Mellent, & omnibus ſuis preſentibus & futuris, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe, & in eleemoſinam confirmâſſe, monachis Sancte Trinitatis Cantuarie, pro amore Dei, & beati Thome Martyris[4], & pro animâ patris mei, & anteceſſorum meorum & meâ, apud Mellent, tranſitum vini quietum, quod ducent ad proprium uſum ſuum; & preter hec conſuetudinem, in totâ terrâ meâ, de omnibus que emerint ad uſus ipſorum, que poterint facere aſſecurari ſua propria eſſe. Teſtibus; Willielmo Pipart, Ricardo abbate de Tornai, Rannulfo de Bigart, Radulfo de Botemont, Rogerio Harpin, Peregrino & Hugone, capellanis meis.

3. Gualeranus[5] comes Mellent, bailivis ſuis de Mellent, & omnibus ſuis preſentibus & futuris, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe, & in perpetuam eleemoſinam confirmâſſe, monachis Sancte Trinitatis Cantuarie, pro amore Dei & beati Thome Martiris, & pro animâ patris mei & anteceſſorum meorum & meâ, apud Mellent, tranſitum Vini, quietum, quod ducent ad proprium uſum ſuum; & preter hec conſuetudinem, in totâ terrâ meâ, de omnibus que emerint ad uſus ipſorum, que poterint juſtè facere aſſecurari ſua propria eſſe, ſicut pater meus eis prius conceſſit & ſuâ cartâ confirmavit. Teſtibus; Johanne de Boſco Bernardi, Gualterio de Florentcurt; Ricardo del Val, Ricardo de Barduuile, Baldwino clerico.

4. Robertus comes Mellent[6], omnibus hominibus ſuis de Eſtrumeniſtre, & de Morcis, & de Redeleſtun, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & cartâ confirmaſſe Mabelle filie mee, comitiſſe Devonie, tenendum & habendum, de me & heredibus meis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, liberè & quietè, jure hereditario, donationem & conceſſionem & confirmationem quam feci Henrico & Petro, filiis meis, de totâ terrâ meâ de Eſturmy, & de Morcis, & de Rideleſtun, cum omnibus predictarum terrarum pertinentiis, poſt deceſſum Matildis uxoris mee, ſicut carte eorum teſtantur. Quapropter volo, & firmiter vobis mando atque precipio, quatenus predicte Mabelle filie mee, poſt deceſſum Matildis uxoris mee, ſicut recte heredi filiorum meorum Henrici & Petri, ſitis intendentes, & heredibus ſuis, & ei & heredibus ſuis homagium faciatis, & fidem portetis, ſicut recte domine veſtre. Valete[7].

5. Robertus comes Legr'[8] omnibus ſancte eccleſie fidelibus, &c. ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra

---

[1] Of this Waleran (eldeſt ſon of the great earl of Mellent, to which title he ſucceeded on the death of his father in 1118, and died in 1164) ſee before, in the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 23, 24. That the preſent grant muſt have been after the year 1141, when he was created earl of Worceſter, appears by the ſeal, Plate XI. fig. 1. The original deed is in the Britiſh Muſeum, Cart. Ant. Harl. 45. I. 30. Another deed of this earl, being alſo a benefaction to the monks of Bordeſley, with the ſame ſeals, is in Mr. Anſtis's Aſpilogia, N° 331, now in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Aſtle, eſq. F. R. and A. SS. a Curator of the Britiſh Muſeum, and Keeper of the Records in the Tower, to whoſe liberality of communication I gladly take this opportunity of bearing teſtimony.

[2] See a charter of the empreſs Maud, to the ſame purpoſe, Dugd. Mon. Angl. I. 804.

[3] This deed has been attributed by Mr. Anſtis to Robert Bellomont, the relation and favourite of the Conqueror, who created him earl of Leiceſter in 1103 (ſee the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 22). But, for the reaſon aſſigned in a ſubſequent note, the grant may with much probability be transferred to his grandſon Robert, ſon of Waleran; who ſucceeded to the earldom of Mellent in 1164, but never obtained that of Worceſter; and uſed, as Mr. Anſtis admits, the ſeal of Robert earl of Mellent his grandfather. He was excommunicated by the pope; and was living in 1203. See the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 26. The original of this curious deed is in Mr. Aſtle's Aſpilogia, N° 10. See the ſeal, Plate XI. fig. 2.

[4] The title of "St. Thomas the Martyr" having been, it is believed, excluſively appropriated to Becket, the date of this grant may certainly be ſuppoſed poſterior to 1170, the year in which he ſuffered; and no trace of a like appellation at an earlier period can be found, after diligent inveſtigation, among the deeds of the monaſtery at Canterbury. The ſuppoſition may be illuſtrated, if it were neceſſary, by a church in Knight-rider-ſtreet, London, which was dedicated to St. Thomas, and written and ſpoken of without any adjunct explanatory, till after the inſtitution of St. Thomas of Acon, founded in honour of Becket, when it became expedient to diſtinguiſh the Apoſtle from the Martyr; and St. Thomas the Apoſtle is the denomination to this day of the abovementioned church. The monks of Canterbury appear alſo to have profited in other inſtances by the canonization of Becket. Lord Lyttelton, in his Hiſtory of king Henry II, under the year 1179, has the following paſſage relative to the pilgrimage of Louis le Jeune, king of France, to the archbiſhop's tomb: "He likewiſe gave to the monks of Chriſt-church, Canterbury, a perpetual yearly payment of a hundred tons of French wine, beſides exemption from all duties on whatever ſhould be purchaſed in his realm for their uſe, both which grants he declared and confirmed by a charter."—Authorities: Decem Scriptores. Diceto, 605. 9. "Centum autem vini modios a rege (Ludovico) vel heredibus ſuis annuatim ſolvendos Pariſiis imperpetuum, ob Martyris reverentiam & in uſus Cantuarienſis collegii convertendos, memoriæ commendemus."—Ibid. Bromton, c. 1140. 24. "Præfatus rex Francorum, factâ ſuper tumulum Martyris oratione, unam cuppam auream ei optulit, & centum modios vini imperpetuum ſingulis annis ad certum locum in Franciâ ad omnimodam expenſam regis Franciæ recipiendos monachis ſanctæ Trinitatis Cantuariæ dedit & conceſſit."—Ibid. Chron. Gervaſii, 1457, 12. "Ubi rex Franciæ, factâ oratione, cuppam ſuam auream optulit, & redditum centum modiorum vini ſingulis annis in obſequium martyris & eccleſiæ Chriſti." See alſo Cantuaria Sacra, p. 18.—Conſidering the pitiful ſolicitude of our king Henry II. to ingratiate himſelf with the jovial and ſly monks of Chriſt-church, it is probable that he might permit them to receive the French wine free of impoſt. He certainly accompanied Louis to the ſhrine of the rebellious primate. In Rymer's Fœdera, vol. XII. p. 166. is a grant from king Edward IV, in 1482, confirming to the monks the privilege, granted to their predeceſſors by the king of France, of importing annually thirty-one dolia of wine, free from duty; and this for the honour of the glorious Martyr St. Thomas.

[5] The ſame difficulty occurs in this as in the preceding deed, as the Waleran of whom we have juſt above been ſpeaking died in 1164; and can only be ſolved by ſuppoſing the granter in the preſent deed to have been a ſubſequent earl of Mellent. This ſuppoſition will at leaſt preſerve the credit of the monks. The ſeal (Plate XI. fig. 5), which is of a duſky white, or cera fuſca, and has no reverſe, repreſents the earl on horſeback as earl of Mellent only. The original deed is in Mr. Aſtle's Aſpilogia, N 585.

[6] This is undoubtedly a grant of the younger Robert earl of Mellent, whoſe daughter Mabell was wife of William earl of Devon, 1184—1216. This earl Robert had three ſons, all of whom he outlived; but there was a Hugh Mellent, a younger brother of his father, whoſe children were probably earls of Mellent.

[7] Cart. Ant. Harl. 45. I. 29.

[8] Robert Boſſu, ſecond ſon of Robert earl of Mellent, and brother to Waleran, ſucceeded to his father's title of earl of Leiceſter in 1118; and died in 1168-9. See the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, pp. 24—47.

me conceſſiſſe, &c. eccleſie de Bordeſle donationem illam quam Willielmus de Paci in perpetuam eleemoſinam dedit, viz. dimidiam peſcariam que pertinet manerio de Kederminſter, &c. Teſtibus; Ernaldo de Boſco, Gaufrido abbate, Rogero de Bordinn', Willielmo de Haiâ, Richardo de Barrâ, Rogero de Crank, Rogero Wall', Henrico Mareſcallo [1].

6. Robertus comes Legr' [2] omnibus, &c. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe monialibus de Wrokeſhall, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, 10 ſolidatos redditûs quas eis dedit pater meus, pro animâ patris ſui, &c. & pro ſalute ſuâ propriâ, & Amicie comitiſſe matris mee, & heredum ſuorum, &c. Teſtibus; Petronillâ comitiſſâ, Hugone de Camp', Willielmo de Chir', Gilberto de Charnel, Roberto & Willielmo capellanis.

7. Robertus comes Leigr' [3] omnibus, &c. Noveritis me conceſſiſſe Deo, & eccleſie Sancti Dionyſii juxta Suthamtonã, &c. in perpetuam eleemoſinam, medietatem terre quam Galfridus Hoſatus eis dedit in Edboldinton, &c. Teſtibus; Paulo abbate Leigr', Willo de Aubeni, Gilberto de Mineriis, Roberto de Harecurt, Hugone de Novâ Villâ, Thomâ de Eſtleiâ, Gilleb' de Segrave, Rado Friday, Alano filio Roberti, Simone Malhore, Rado de Martinwaſt, Robto de Langeton, Gunfrido & Willo capellanis, & aliis multis.

8. Johannes, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, comes Andegavie, juſtitiariis, vicecomitibus, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, in London & extra, & per totam terram noſtram conſtitutis, ſalutem. Sciatis quod conceſſimus dilecto & fideli noſtro Rob' comiti Leic' terram Ricardi filii Edwardi de Sanctâ Mariâ le Strand; . . . . [4] quod ſint libere & quiete de omnibus tallagiis, querelis, conſuetudinibus, & de omnibus rebus in London' & extra, & per totam terram . . . . [4] predicto Ricardo & heredibus ſuis petitione fidelis noſtri comitis Leic'. Teſtibus; H. Cant' archiepiſcopo, & S. prepoſito Beverlac', & archid' de Welles. Apud Weſtm', 26 die Martii [5].

9. Comes Leiceſtrie debet 1 tonellam vini Auxerr, [wine of Auxerre] pro apponendo ſigillo concordie facte inter ipſum & Guillielmum epiſcopum Lincoln' [6].

10. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Simon de Monteforti [7], comes Leyceſtrie, dedi & conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Ricardo Suard, pro homagio ſuo ligio & dominico, ſalvâ regiâ fidelitate, viginti marcatas redditûs, in prepoſiturâ mea de Leyceſtriâ, ad tres terminos anni percipiendos, &c. quouſque in loco competenti eidem viginti marcatas redditûs aſſignavero; habendum & tenendum, de me & heredibus meis, ipſe & heredes ſui, ad feſtum Beati Petri ad Vincula, unum eſperverium ſore. Ut autem hec mea donatio & conceſſio rata & ſtabilis permaneat, preſentem cartam ſigilli mei appoſitione roboravi. Hiis teſtibus; Thomâ de Menil tunc ſen', magiſtro Johanne de Rac, Nicholao de Marnham, Simone Lunel, Ricardo clerico, & aliis [8].

11. Simon de Montfort, by an indenture, quits claim to, and remits, " omnes illos denarios qui nomine pontagii ad pontes noſtros Leyceſtr' exiſti ſolebant, qui vocabantur Brigge-ſilver [9], & omnes illos denarios qui vocabantur Gavil-pennis. Et pro hâc remiſſione noſtrâ major & burgenſes noſtri de communitate Leyceſtrie dederunt & quietè clamaverunt, de ſe & heredibus ſuis, nobis & heredibus noſtris vel aſſignatis noſtris, 56 ſolidos quos Simon de la Manu aliquando ſolebat percipere annuatim de predictâ terrâ, & in villâ noſtrâ Leyceſtr' & in ſuburb' ejuſdem 16*s.* 8*d.* ſcil', &c. Et, ut hec omnia predicta firmitatis perpetue robur obtineant, nos & major & burgenſes noſtri Leyceſtr' preſentem cartam in modum cyrographi confecimus, & hanc partem ejuſdem carte appoſitione ſigilli noſtri corroboravimus. Hiis teſtibus; domino Ernaldo de Boſco, domino Rad' Baſſett, domino Ric' de Huvering, domino Tho' de Eſleyâ, Willo Burdett, domino Rob' de Folevile, domino Rad' camerario, domino Rob' Motun, Henr' Mallore, & aliis [10].

12. A charter of " Simon Montfort, dominus Leyceſtr', filius comitis Simonis," remits, &c. the pence due to him from the men of Leiceſter, " pro meſſurâ ſegetum de domino de Leyceſtr', & denarios qui cepi ſolebant de ſingulis pecoribus & averiis in defenſo Leyceſtr' pro eſcapurâ. Et pro hâc relaxatione dederunt mihi 15 marcas. Teſtibus; domino Stephano de Segrave, domino Tho' de Menill, domino Gilberto de Segrave, domino Nicholao de Leſtres, domino Will' de Sancto Edmundo [11]."

13. Simon de Montefort, filius comitis Simonis de Montefort, dominus Leiceſtrie, omnibus Chriſti fidelibus preſentem paginam viſuris et audituris, ſalutem in Domino. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me, pro ſalute anime mee, & anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum meorum, conceſſiſſe, & preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, de me & heredibus meis imperpetuum, burgenſibus meis Leiceſtrie & heredibus, quod nullus Judeus neque Judea, in tempore meo, ſive in tempore alicujus heredum meorum uſque in finem mundi, infra libertatem ville Leiceſtrie, habitabit neque manebit, nec reſidentiam obtinebit. Volo etiam & precipio, quod heredes mei poſt me iſtam libertatem integram & illeſam burgenſibus prenominatis obſervent & imperpetuum warrentizent. Et in hujus rei teſtimonium preſentem cartam ſigillo munivi meo. Hiis teſtibus; domino Almarico de Mittun, domino Waltero de Aquilâ, domino Rogero Blundo capellano, Willo Baſſet, Willo de Miravall, & aliis [12].

14. Henricus de Montforti, omnibus hominibus ſuis, & omnibus tam futuris quam preſentibus, ſalutem. Sciatis, &c. me dediſſe Waltero filio Turſtani de Charlecote, & heredibus ſuis, totam villam de Charlecote, tam de feodo comitis Warr', quam de feodo Coventr' eccleſie, per ſervicium 10 librarum argenti Alicie de Harecourt in villâ ſuâ annuatim reddend', ſicut Robertus de Montefort, frater meus predictus, Alicie predicte firmam in dote aſſignavit, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Petro de Stotleg', Roberto Witeleg', Roberto filio Willielmi, & Petro de Monteforti, qui hanc cartam fecit [13].

---

[1] Cotton MSS. Plut. IV. F. p. 62. The ſeal (in white wax), a man on horſeback, a lance on his ſhoulder, and his ſhield tranſverſe; counter-ſeal, an angel ſitting on a rock, holding a bird in his hands. No inſcription on either. See Plate XI. fig. 6

[2] Robert Blanchmaines, earl of Leiceſter 1169—1190. The deed is from the Cotton MSS. ubi ſupra, and has no ſeal. Another of his grants will be given under the Hoſpital of Burton Lazars.

[3] Cotton MSS. ubi ſupra. This is a deed of Robert Fitzparnell, earl of Leiceſter 1190—1205; and is from the Cotton MSS. ubi ſupra. The ſeal is broken; but two of his ſeals may be ſeen in Plate XI. fig. 3, 4. This Robert earl of Leiceſter owed ſeveral debts to Aaron the Jew of Lincoln, ſecured by mortgages of ſome of the earl's lands; and when Aaron's eſtate was ſeized, theſe debts were put in rotulo for the king's profit: " De debitis Aaron, Robertus comes Legerceſtrie debet 452*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* (ſee the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 97.)—The earl was diſcharged of 240*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* of the ſaid debt, upon ſhewing ſix ſtarrs (a word of Hebraic original for charter or chirographa) of acquittance for that ſum: " Robertus comes Leirceſtrie r. c. de 452*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* de debitis Aaron: in theſauro nichil; & in quietantiis quas habet per ſex ſtarra de ſigillo ipſius Aaron 240*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Mag. Rot. 3 John, rot. 17. b.—It appears that the family of Aaron were the great money-lenders of that age. In a deed of Iſabella de Albiniaco (Appendix to Framland Hundred, p. 105), ſhe aſſigns certain lands to Henry de Ceſtreſham, on conſideration of his acquitting her " de LX marcis ſterlingorum in Judaiſmo, erga Aaron de Eboraco Judeum." See, in Madox's Hiſtory of the Exchequer, a complete Chapter " on the Exchequer of the Jews," pp. 150—178.

[4] Sic.

[5] Harl. MSS. 84. fol. 89. Q. 7. in Arce Lond.

[6] Madox, Hiſtory of Exchequer, p. 351; Pat. 6 John. Rot. 176. Warr. & Leic.

[7] Earl of Leiceſter, 1205—1218.

[8] Harl. MSS. 83. G. 45. See the ſeal, Pl. XII. fig. 1.

[9] See the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 23.

[10] Carte, MS. from a box (in the charter cheſt at Leiceſter), intituled, " Several charters of pardon, &c."

[11] Carte, ibid. See another of this earl under the Hoſpital of Burton Lazars.

[12] See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 2.

[13] From Vincent's MSS. in the College of Arms, n. 88. p. 22. b. Concerning this Henry, ſee Dugdale's Warwickſhire, pp. 501, 575. And ſee the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 3.

15. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Wellyſborne filius com*es* Symonis de Monteforte, unus filiorum domin*a* Alianor*a* fili*a* regis Johann*es* regis Anglie, dedi, conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ, & conceſſione Mari*a* ux' mee, Ricardo de la Roſthulles, unum meſſuagium cum gardino & curtilag', & cum aliis pertin', ſuper Kingſhull, in parochiâ de Hugenden. Hiis teſtibus; Simone de Hugenden, Galfrido Tykfer, Ricardo Teſe, Willielmo Brand, & aliis [1].

16. Ricardus dominus de Welleſburne, miles, nuper de villâ de Welleſburne Montforte, in com' Warwyke. Dat' apud Welleſburne Montfort, in com' War', anno I Edw. II.[2]

17. Hugo [3] comes Ceſtrie, omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglicis, clericis & laicis, tam preſentibus quam futuris, ſalutem. Notum ſit vobis me conceſſiſſe & reddidiſſe, ac cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, Liulfo de Brincolao, & ſuis heredibus, totam terram & tenuram quam comes Ranulfus pater meus eis dedit & conceſſit in feudo & hereditate infra villam de Coventreiâ & extra. Et, ad incrementum feudi ſui, concedo eis & confirmo villam de Biſſeleiâ, quam pater meus predictus eis dedit & conceſſit, & molendinum quod ibi eſt, cum omnibus ejuſdem ville pertinentiis, in terris & in aquis, pratis & paſcuis, in viis & ſemitis, in boſco & plano, ita quietè & liberè, ſicut pater meus melius & liberius eis dedit & conceſſit & cartâ ſuâ confirmavit. Hanc totam terram & tenuram predictus Liulfus & ſui heredes meâ confirmatione & conceſſu teneant & habeant, & imperpetuum poſſideant, de me & meis heredibus, in libero burgagio; reddendo ſingulis annis pro omnibus ſervitiis quatuordecim ſolidos & ſex denarios. Inſuper dedi ei & heredibus ſuis quietationem de pannagio de ducentis porcis. Et pro hâc meâ conceſſione & donatione & confirmatione ipſe Liulfus dedit mihi quadraginta & ſeptem marcas. Hiis teſtibus; Matildâ comitiſſâ Ceſtrie matre meâ, Willielmo Patrico, Willielmo de Solers, Ricardo de Luvetot, Willielmo de Ruelent, Ricardo de B[illegible]meis, Jurdano Raſur, Radulpho capellano, Willielmo filio ejus, Bertramo Thorol', Willielmo Savenn', Aſket' Loc', Willielmo de Aulâ, Nigello de Coventriâ, Gerardo Vinet', Willielmo filio Sunnul', Ricardo filio ſuo, Petro filio Ade de Northant', Adâ le Blunt, &c.[4]

18. Roberto, Dei gratiâ, Lincolnienſi epiſcopo, & capitulo S. Marie Lincoln', omnique clero ſui epiſcopatûs, Hugo comes Ceſtrie ſalutem; necnon & baronibus, conſtabulariis, & ballivis, miniſtris, & famulis, omnibuſque ſuis hominibus Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Notum vobis facio, me, ex bono corde, pro Domini amore, & ſalute anime patris mei Ranulfi comitis Ceſtrie & mee, conceſſiſſe ſanctemonialibus de Grenefeld illam terram de Thoreſbir, ſcil', XXXII acras .... [5] quam Willielmus filius Othver eis in perpetuam elemoſinam dedit, cum aliâ quam eiſdem in augmento incepte elemoſine daturus eſt. Eapropter volo & precipio, & meâ cartâ confirmo, ſicut pater meus conceſſit & ſuâ cartâ confirmavit, quatenus prefatis ſanctemonialibus, illa terra ſtabilis & rata permaneat, & perhenniter eam benè & quietè & liberè habeânt & poſſideant. Teſtibus; Matildâ matre meâ, Symone filio Willielmi, Rogero filio Hugonis de Roſpeſl', & multis aliis, apud Beldſord. Valete[6].

19. Ranulfus comes Ceſtrie & Lincoln', omnibus ſeneſcallis ſuis, ballivis, & miniſtris ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis me, divine caritatis intuitu, & pro ſalute anime mee & animarum anteceſſorum & heredum meorum, remiſiſſe, & imperpetuum quietè clamâſſe, de me & heredibus meis, domui de Grenefeld, & monialibus ibidem Deo ſervientibus, ſectas omnes de curiâ mea de Graham, de tenementis omnibus ſubſcriptis que de feodo meo tenent de honore de Graham; ſcilicet, de quinquaginta quinque acris terre arabilis, & de quinque acris prati, in Hag', de dono Amfridi de Hag', &c. Quare vobis mando, & fimiter precipio, quatenus propter hujuſmodi occaſionem vel gracertionem, dictam domum, vel dictas moniales, non moleſtetis nex vexetis in aliquo. In hujus rei teſtimonium, preſens ſcriptum ſigillo meo munitum eis feci. Hiis teſtibus; Alexandro de Poington, Radulpho filio Simonis, Eudone de Caletoft, Johanne de Atie, Alveredo de Suleny, Roberto de Campaniâ, Gilb' Cuſin, Simone Clerico, &c.[7]

20. Ranulfus comes Ceſtrie & Lincolnie, omnibus preſentibus & futuris preſentem cartam inſpecturis vel audituris, ſalutem in Domino. Ad univerſitatis veſtre notitiam volo pervenire me dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, domine Hawiſe de Quency, ſorori mee kariſſime, comitatum Lincoln', ſcilicet quantum ad me pertinet, ut inde comitiſſa exiſtat; habend' & tenend', de domino meo rege Anglie & heredibus ſuis, liberè, quietè, plenè, pacificè, & integrè, jure hereditario, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, & cum omnibus libertatibus ad predictum comitatum pertinentibus. Et ut preſens ſcriptum perpetuitatis robur optineat, illud ſigilli mei appoſitione roborare dignum duxi. Hiis teſtibus; venerabilibus patribus W. Wint' & Alex' Coventrie & Lichfield epiſcopis; Ric̃o Mar' com' Pembr', W. de Ferr' comite Derb', Stephano de Segrave juſticiario Anglie, Simone de Monteforti, Willielmo de Ferr', Philippo de Albiniaco, Henrico de Aldith, Willielmo de Cantelupo, & aliis [8].

21. Rex[9], ad inſtantiam Hawiſie de Quency, dedit & conceſſit Johanni de Laſcy, conſtabulario Ceſtrie, illas 20 libras quas Ranulfus quondam comes Ceſtrie & Lincoln' recepit pro tertio derario comitatûs Lincoln', nomine comitis Lincoln', & quas predictus comes in vitâ ſuâ dedit predicte Hawiſie ſorori ſue[10]; habendas & tenendas, nomine comitis de Lincoln, de rege & heredibus ſuis, ipſi Johanni & heredibus ſuis qui extant de Margaretâ uxore ſuâ, filie Hawiſie, imperpetuum. Teſte rege, &c. 22 die Novembris, anno regni 17.

22. Rex[11] conc' & confirm' partitionem factam per Simonem de Monteforti, com' Leic', & Saiher de Quenci, com' Winton', de omnibus terris & tenementis que fuerunt comitis Roberti de Leiceſtr', &c.; ita quòd tota medietas, &c. integrè remaneat uni illorum comitum, & altera medietas alteri; ſalvo predicto co-

---

[1] Vincent's MSS. p. 40. b. There are two ſeals of the granter appendent to this deed; the firſt is curious, and worthy of attention: legend, "S. Welliſburne Bellator', fil' Simonis de Monteforte." See Plate XII. fig. 4. The other, fig. 5, has a lion rampant on a ſhield, &c. legend, "Welleſburne de la Monteforti." A copy of the ſame deed occurs in Cotton MSS. Julius, c. VII. f. 25, with a remark ſigned "W. Camden, Clar." that "it is thought to be a forged deed, by reaſon of the falſe Latin, and the character new, and the ſtyle abſurd both in deed and ſeal."

[2] Vincent, ubi ſupra. Legend, "S. Richardi de Welleſburne, militis." See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 6.

[3] This Hugh was ſurnamed Cyveliok from the place of his birth. He ſucceeded to the earldom of Cheſter in 1153, on the death of his father Ranulph II; whoſe agreement with the earl of Leiceſter may be ſeen in the Hiſtory of that Town, p. 26; and his ſeal. Plate XII. fig. 7. In 1172, earl Hugh was in arms againſt king Henry II. on the part of his ſons; and, paſſing over into France, was taken priſoner in the caſtle of Dole in Bretagne, but was releaſed by the convention made between Henry and his ſons in 1174. In 1177, at a parliament at Northampton, he was reſtored to all his lands by the king. He married Bertred, daughter of Simon earl of Evreux in Normandy; died at Leke in Staffordſhire, anno 1181; and was buried at Cheſter. In ſir Joſeph Ayloffe's Calendars of the Antient Charters is engraved a ſeal of this earl Hugh affixed to a deed in Mr. Aſtle's poſſeſſion, being a licence to Matilda his mother to grant ten librates of land in Great Granſden to the prior and convent of Repton.

[4] Cart. Harl. Ant. 83. F. 32. See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 8.

[5] Sic.

[6] Cart. Harl. Ant. 52. A. 13. Seal the ſame as fig. 8.

[7] Cart. Harl. Ant. 52. A. 16. See the the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 9.

[8] Cotton MSS. Julius, C. VII. p. 108. See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 9.

[9] Pat. 17 Hen. III.

[10] See the grant immediately preceding, which was made about 1232. It is obſervable, that this Hawiſia lived till 1258; yet the earldom was, during her life, in her ſon-in-law; and that there had been two tranſlations of it, the firſt to, and then by, Hawiſia. That ſhe was ſtyled counteſs, ſee the Roll cited by Selden, Titles of Honour, p. 667; and M. Paris, 1232, p. 380.

[11] 8 John; Cart. Ant. V. Nº 17.

miti Simoni tertium denarium comitatûs Leic', unde ipſe comes eſt, & capitali meſſuagio Leic', & ſeneſcalciâ noſtrâ, &c. 10 Martii, anno regni 8°.

23. Sayherus de Quency, earle of Wincheſter, confirmed unto Robert Quency his ſon, and to his heirs, to give in free dowry to Hawiſe ſiſter to the earl of Cheſter, wife to the ſaid Robert, Buckenham, Granchiſter, Bradenham, and Herdwick, and all their appurtenances, for 100*l.* lands; and if theſe lands aforeſayd be not yerely worth one hundreth pounds, I will make up to him ſo much of my own proper inheritance in England, that he may fully have 100*l.* land, by the advice and conſideration of lawful knights, to wit, men of the earl of Cheſter's and of myne, &c. Hiis teſtibus; David . . . . [1] William earl Ferrers, Walter Dayvil, cum multis aliis [2].

24. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Margareta de Quincy, comitiſſa Wintonie, dedi, &c. Ricõ Criſpe, de Monte Scrello, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, unam virgatam terre in Northawe, &c. Teſtibus; domino Willielmo de Crapwell, domino Willielmo de Sancto Georgio tunc ſeneſcallo, Willielmo Falconario, Henrico de Mardefelt tunc clerico commune, Roberto Fitz de Monte Sorello, & aliis [3].

25. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Margareta de Quency, comitiſſa Winton', dedi, conceſſi, & hâc meâ cartâ confirmavi Hugoni de Ver, in liberum maritagium cum Hawiſiâ filiâ meâ, quatuor libratas & octo ſolidatas redditûs, viz. viginti ſol' redditûs quas Rogerus de Belegrave mihi debuit, cum homagio & ſervicio quod mihi debuit, & ſeptendecim ſolidos & ſex denarios redditûs in Leicton, quas Galfridus de Cranford mihi debuit, cum homagio & ſervicio quod mihi debuit, & quinquaginta ſolidos & ſex denarios redditûs in Thurmodeſtorp, quas Alexander de Witeby mihi debuit, cum homagio & ſervicio quod mihi debuit; tenend' & habend', de me & heredibus meis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis qui de predicta Hawiſiâ exibunt, benè & in pace, liberè & quietè, in liberum maritagium. Et ſi ita contingat, quod Deus avertat, quod prefata Hawiſia ſine herede quod habeat de predicto Hugone moriatur, totum prefatum redditum, cum homagio & ſervicio, in manum meam, vel heredum meorum, quietum revertetur. Et ſciendum eſt, quod ſi ego Margareta vel heredes mei perquirere & deliberare poſſimus dicto Hugoni illas ſex virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis ſuis, quas prior de Brakele & Henricus de Faſſinton tenuerunt in Wikingeſton; vel, ſi facerimus eſcambium ad valentiam illarum predictarum ſex virgatarum, in eodem comitatu, antequam Hawiſiam uxorem ſuam ducat ad domum ſuam, tunc prenominate quatuor librate & octo ſolidi redditûs ad me vel ad heredes quietè revertantur. Et ego Margareta & heredes mei predicto Hugoni & Hawiſie uxori ſue, & heredibus ſuis qui de predicta Hawiſia exibunt, totum predictum redditum ſicut predictum eſt contra omnes gentes warantizabimus. Quod ut ratum ſit, preſenti ſcripto ſigillum meum appoſui. Hiis teſtibus; Johanne de Bello Campo, Ernaldo de Boſco, &c. [4]

26. Rogerus de Quincy, comes Winton', conſtabularius Scotie, confirmavit chartam Margarete comitiſſe Winton' matris ſue, pro conceſſu per eam factam eccleſie de Chaucombe & canonicis ibidem, &c. pro 8 virgatis terre cum pertin' in villâ de Sewſby, quas habuit ex dono Hugonis de Chaucombe, una cum nativis dictam terram tenentibus, et eorum ſequelis, & quietum clamant, &c. de ſcutagiis, wardis, releviis, &c. reddendo annuatim 10*s.* & pro viſu franciplegii 12*d.* &c. Teſtibus; Gilberto de Segrave, cum multis aliis [5].

27. The following articles are noticed in Carte's Catalogue des Rolles Gaſcognes & François:

Litera de credentiâ pro Simone de Monteforti comite Leiceſtrie, de Secretis Regi Scotie referendis. Teſte Rege, apud Burdegalam, 26 die Auguſti 1253.

Litera de credentiâ, miſſa Regi Francie per comitem de Leiceſtre & alios. Teſte Rege, apud Weſtminſter, 28 die Julii.

Litera Regis de miſſâ factâ inter ipſum & comitem & comitiſſam de Leiceſtre.

Litere domini Edwardi de eodem facto.

Litere conciliariorum regis ſuper eodem negotio.

De terrâ aſſidendâ comiti & comitiſſe de Leiceſtre.

Litere regis pro comitibus de Hereford & Norfolk, & Philippo Baſſet, indempnitate ſuâ conſervanda pro miſſâ inter regem et comitem de Leiceſtre.

De conventione factâ inter regem & comitem de Leiceſtre pro rege habendo comitatum de Bigorre.

28. Sciant preſentes et futuri, quod ego Thomas de Outheby de Leyceſtriâ dedi, conceſſi, et hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Roberto de Gringeley et Emme Laurence uxori ejus, pro unâ marcâ argenti quam mihi dederunt plenariè pre manibus, quandam quartrenam terre et quinque pedes jacentem in ſuburbio Orientali Leyceſtrie, in Lacchepelcroftis, inter terram Henrici de Louwyſby et terram Ricardi de Berliſton, et ſe extendit ab unâ ſemitâ uſque ad aliam ſemitam; habend' et tenend' de domino comite Leyceſtrie et ejuſdem heredibus ſuis et aſſignatis ſuis, ſcilicet quibuſcumque, quancumque, et ubicunque, in ſanitate vel in egritudine, dare, legare, vendere, vel aliquo modo aſſignare voluerint, liberè, quietè, benè, et in pace, et hereditariè, imperpetuum; reddendo inde annuatim dicto domino comiti, et heredibus ſuis vel aſſignatis ſuis, tres denarios ad tres anni terminos in Leyceſtriâ uſitatos, pro omnibus ſervitiis et demandis ſecularibus. Et ego predictus Thomas, et heredes mei vel aſſignati mei, predictam placeam terre, cum pertinentiis, predictis Roberto et Emme, et heredibus ſuis vel aſſignatis ſuis, ut predictum eſt, contra omnes gentes warantizabimus. Hiis teſtibus; Thomâ Gumfrey, tunc majore Leyc'; Rob' de Dauby et Rob' de Wyluby, tunc ballivis; Ricardo ſub Muro, Johanne Glide, David de Kantiâ, Hugone de Gaddeſby, Willielmo Ace, Willielmo Tulbe, Johanne de Melton, Simone clerico, et aliis. Dat' die Mercurii, in feſto Sancti Bartholomei Apoſtoli, 1295 [6].

29. Hoc ſcriptum indentatum teſtatur, quod cum controverſia fuerat mota inter illuſtrem virum dominum Henricum de Bello Monte, comitem Boughame, ex parte unâ, & abbatem & conventum de Kyrkeſtede ex alterâ, pro terris & tenementis que Johannes Knyght quondam tenuit in villâ & in territorio de Scampton, de feodo domi Gilberti de Gaunt, videlicet, de uno meſſuagio, tribus bovatis terre & dimidiâ, & quatuor acris patri, in Scamptone, cum pertinentiis; tandem inter eos conquievit in hunc modum; videlicet, quod predictus dominus Henricus conceſſit, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, eiſdem abbati et conventui, et eorum ſucceſſoribus, quod ipſi habeant et teneant omnes terras et tenementa predicta in villâ de Scampton predictâ, eidem abbati et conventui et eorum ſucceſſoribus, de predicto domino Henrico et heredibus ſuis, per ſervitium unius libre cumini ad feſtum S. Michaelis Archangeli annuatim reddend'; ita quod nec ipſe nec heredes ſui, nec aliquis nomine ſuo, in predictis tenementis, quicquid petere poterunt, ſalvo antiquo ſervitio unius libre cumini predicti ſolvend' ad terminum predictum, in formâ predictâ, tantùm pro tenementis predictis. In cujus rei teſtimonium, preſentibus indenturis ſigilla partium alternatim ſunt appenſa. Hiis teſtibus; domino Johanne de Bello Monte, domino Guydone de Ferrariis, domino . . . . Barde, et aliis. Data apud Thoreſway, viceſimo quinto die menſis Aprilis, anno Domini 1336 [7].

---

[1] Sic; probably for "David earl of Huntington," 1199—1219.

[2] Cotton MSS. Julius, C. VII. p. 131. See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 10.

[3] Roper, MS. See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 11.

[4] Cart. Harl. Antiq. 55. B. 5. The ſame ſeal as the laſt.

[5] Cotton MSS. Jul. C. VII. pp. 134. 144. See the ſeal, Plate XII. fig. 12.

[6] Cart. Harl. Ant. 49. B. 44. See the ſeal, Pl. XII. fig. 13.

[7] Cart. Ant. Harl. 45. I. 35. See the ſeal, Pl. XII. fig. 14.

APPENDIX, Nº XVI. EARLS OF LEICESTER, &c.

1. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quòd ego Amauricius, comes Montisfortis [1], conſtabularius Francie, in preſentiâ Henrici illuſtris regis Anglorum, filii regis Johannis, apud Weſtm', die Lune proximè poſt quindenam Paſche, anno regni ipſius Henrici regis 23°, recognovi, & quietum clamavi, de me & heredibus meis, dilecto fratri meo Simoni de Monteforti, comiti Leiceſtrie, totam partem honoris Leiceſtrie, cum omnibus pertinentiis in regno Anglie, adeò plenè & integrè ſicut comes Simon pater noſter, vel comes Robertus [Fitzparnel] Leiceſtrie, illam unquam meliùs, pleniùs, & liberiùs tenuerunt; habendam & tenendam eidem Simoni fratri meo & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo procreatis, de predicto domino Henrico rege & heredibus ſuis, liberè & quietè imperpetuum, cum omnibus eſcaetis & aliis que mihi accedere poſſint de eo honore; faciendo inde eis debitum ſervicium ad illam partem pertinens, tam in ſeneſcalciâ domini regis Henrici predicti quàm in aliis ſerviciis: ſalvo tamen jure meo & heredum meorum, ſi fortè contigerit quòd idem Simon, frater meus, ſine herede de corpore ſuo procreato obierit, vel heredes ſui de corpore ſuo procreati fortè obierint ſine heredibus de corporibus ipſorum procreatis. Et, ut hec mea recognitio, conceſſio, & quieta clamatio ſtabilis & firma, ſecundùm quod predictum eſt, permaneat imperpetuum, huic ſcripto ſigillum meum appoſui. Hiis teſtibus; Ricardo comite Cornubie, fratre domini regis; J. de Lacy, comite Lincoln', & conſtabulario Ceſtrie; H. de Bohun, comite Hereford' & Eſſex'; W. de Ralegh, theſaurario Exon'; Johanne, de Monem'; Henrico de Aldithele; Petro de Malo Lacu; H. de Trubleville; Roberto de Quincy; Johanne, filio Galfridi; Ricardo de Gray; Stephano de Segrave; Herberto, filio Matthei; G. vice-domino Pinton'; Guidone & Harveo de Capſin, fratribus; Amauricio de S. Amando; G. Diſpenſatore. Actum apud Weſtm', in preſentiâ dicti domini regis, & preſente venerabili patre domino G. Dei gratiâ S. Nicholai in carcere Tull' dioceſ' cardinale, & Apoſtolice ſedis legato, anno & die prenominatis.

2. Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus cartam Amauricii, comitis Montisfortis, in hec verba [Then recites the ſame as above, and proceeds]: Nos igitur, predictas recognitionem, conceſſionem, & quietam clamationem, ratas & gratas habentes, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, concedimus, & ſigillo noſtro confirmavimus, ſicut predicta carta, quam idem comes Simon de Monteforti habet, rationabilitèr teſtatur. Hiis teſtibus; E. Cant' archiepiſcopo; J. Bathon', W. Exon', H. Elienſ', R. Lincoln', W. Wigorn', & N. Karliol', epiſcopis; R. com' Cornub', fratre noſtro; J. com' Linc', & conſtab' Ceſtrie; W. comite Warenne; W. comite de Ferrariis; H. com' Hereford' & Eſſex'; W. Longeſpe; W. de Veſcye; Hugone le Wake; S. de Setgrave; Johanne, filio Galfridi; Bert' de Cryoil; Amaurico de S. Amando; G. Diſpenſatore; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram, apud Weſtm', 17° Aprilis.

3. Æ. Dei gratiâ, regina Anglie, domina Hibernie, & duciſſa Aquitanie, & Edwardus ejus primogenitus, univerſis preſentes literas inſpecturis ſalutem in Domino. Licet in quodam inſtrumento, per quod, unà cum religioſo viro abbate de Burgo S. Petri, domini noſtri regis theſaurario, dominis J. Manſell theſaurario Ebor', Philippo Baſſett, juſticiariis Anglie, & Roberto Waleram, quilibet in ſolidum, Spinello Symonetti, Januſio Beaumodi, & Renucio Ardingi, ac eorum ſociis, mercatoribus Florentie, in mille & ſeptagintis marcis ſterlingorum, nomen domini Walteri de Merton, cancellarii predicti domini noſtri regis, ſit inſertum, non tamen ſigillum ejus in ipſo inſtrumento appenſum: Nos, volentes indempnitatem dictorum mercatorum perſpicere, & ipſos conſervare omninò indempnes, volumus quòd, propter deſtructionem ſigilli cancellarii, mercatoribus in aliquo prejudicium generetur quominùs, nos duo ſeparalitèr, uterque in ſolidum, predictis mercatoribus in dictâ ſummâ pecunie teneamur; denunciantes expreſsè nove conſtitutioni de duobus vel pluribus debend' juri de principali & omni alii juri. In cujus rei teſtimonium, fecimus has literas ſigillorum noſtrorum munimine roborari. Dat' apud Weſtmonaſterium, 7 idus Julii, 1262 [2].

4. Carta de terris & tenementis que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrers [3], comitis Derbeye.

Henricus, Dei graciâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Acquitannie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, Edmundo filio noſtro cariſſimo, caſtra, & omnes terras & tenementa, cum pertinenciis, que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrariis, quondam comitis Derbeye, qui Simoni de Monteforti, quondam comiti Leyceſtrie, inimico & feloni noſtro, & impriſis ſuis adheſit tempore guerre, que nuper in regno noſtro mota fuit per ipſum Simonem & dictos impriſos ſuos, ad exheredationem noſtram & deſtructionem corone noſtre, uſque ad bellum inter nos & dictos inimicos & rebelles noſtros commiſſum; & quorum inimicorum & rebellium terre & tenementa per forisfacturam eorum, de communi conſenſu & conſilio magnatûm ac fidelium regni noſtri, ad noſtram ordinationem & diſpoſitionem, ſalvis capitalibus dominis homagiis & ſerviciis ſuis, hâc vice pertinent; habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo & heredibus ſuis de capitalibus dominis feodi illius, ſive nobis vel aliis, cum feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, dotibus cùm acciderint, & omnibus aliis ad caſtra, terras, & tenementa predicta ſpectantibus (dumtamen caſtra, terre, & tenementa predicta, non ſint de dominico corone noſtre), faciendo indè omnia ſervicia debita & conſueta; ita quòd occaſione hujus donationis noſtre nichil capitalibus dominis predictis, in wardis, releviis, aut rebus aliis ad nos pertinentibus, depereat imperpetuum. Et volumus & precipimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quòd nullus, ratione juris quod ſibi per predictum Robertum jure hereditario competere poſſet, actionem vel clameum ullis temporibus habeat de cetero in caſtris, terris, & tenementis predictis, ſed ab omni jure, actione, & clamio, penitùs excludatur in perpetuum. Et nos & heredes noſtri hanc noſtram donationem conſervare & defendere tenebimus, ſicut nos & anteceſſores noſtri alias donationes & feoffamenta conſervare & defendere conſuevimus. Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre W. Bath' & Well' epiſcopo, Roberto Walerand, Rob̄to Aguyllon, Nich̄o de Leukenore, Will̄o de Aete, Will̄o Belet, Walt̄o de Burges, Rad̄o de Bakepuz, Barth̄o le Bigod, & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Kenilworth, viceſimo-octavo die Junii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo.

5. Carta de honore Derbeie & Leyceſtrie, conceſſa Edmundo comiti Lancaſtrie, &c.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitanie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, Edmundo filio noſtro cariſſimo, honorem Derebeie, caſtra, maneria, & omnes terras & tenementa que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrariis; & honorem Leyceſtrie; & omnes terras & tenementa, cum pertinenciis, que fuerunt Simonis de Monteforti, quondam comitis Leyceſtrie, inimicorum noſtrorum, & que per forisfacturam eorundem ad manum noſtram tanquam eſcaeta noſtra devenerunt; habenda & tenenda eidem Edmundo, & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis, de nobis & heredibus noſtris imperpetuum, unà cum feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, dotibus cùm acciderint, & omnibus aliis ad honores, caſtra, maneria, terras, & tenementa pertinentibus, faciendo ſervicia indè debita & conſueta; ita quòd prefatum Edmundum vel heredes ſuos predictos indè non diſſeiſiemus, nec diſſeiſiri permittemus, donec indè ſibi eſcambium rationabile fecerimus in aliis terris noſtris ad valorem & honorem caſtrorum, maneriorum, & terrarum & tenementorum predictorum. Quare volumus & firmitèr precipimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quòd predictus Edmundus & heredes ſui predicti imperpetuum habeant & teneant honores, caſtra, maneria, terras, & tenementa predicta, cum feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, dotibus cùm acciderint, & omnibus aliis ad eadem pertinentibus, faciendo ſervicia indè debita & conſueta; ita quòd prefatum Edmundum vel heredes ſuos predictos indè non diſſeiſiemus, nec diſſeiſiri permittemus, donec indè ſibi eſcambium rationabile fecerimus in aliis terris noſtris ad valorem & honorem caſtrorum, maneriorum, & terrarum & tenementorum predictorum, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre W. Bathon' & Wellen' epiſcopo, Rogero de Mortuo Mari, Rogero de Clifford, Rogero de Leyburn, Roberto Aguyllon, Willielmo de Aett, Rađo de Bakepuz, Stephano de Eddeworth, Bartholomeo de Bygod, & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Kenilworth, duodecimo die Julii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo.

---

[1] See p. 105.

[2] Cart. Harl. Ant. 4; C. 42. See the ſeals, plate XIII. fig. 1, 2.

[3] The earl of Derby, however, did not acquieſce to this ſettlement.

6. Ex Magno Regiſtro, in camerâ ducatûs Lancaſtrie; tangens tenementa que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrariis.

Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitannie, abbatibus, prioribus, baronibus, militibus, liberis hominibus, & omnibus aliis tenentibus de terris & tenementis que fuerunt Roberti de Ferrariis, quondam comitis Derbeie, ſalutem. Quia dedimus & conceſſimus Edmundo, filio noſtro cariſſimo, caſtra, & omnes terras & tenementa, cum wardis, releviis, eſcaetis, homagiis, dominicis, feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, & omnibus aliis pertinenciis ſuis que fuerunt predicti Roberti, vobis mandamus, quòd eidem Edmundo, tanquam domino veſtro, in omnibus que ad premiſſa pertinent de cetero intendentes ſitis & reſpondentes. In cujus rei teſtimonium has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Windeſ', tertio die Januarii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo-primo.

7. Carta de honore Leyceſtrie, &c.

Henricus, &c. [ut ſupra, p. 20], comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, Edmundo filio noſtro cariſſimo honorem, villam, & caſtrum Leiceſtrie, & omnes terras & tenementa ejuſdem honoris, cum feodis militum, & aliis omnibus pertinenciis ſuis, quocunque nomine cenſeri poſſint, que fuerunt quondam Simonis de Monteforti, comitis Leiceſtrie, inimici noſtri, & que, ſecundùm legem & conſuetudinem regni noſtri, per guerram quam contra nos ad exheredacionem noſtram in regno noſtro excitavit, & bella que contra nos in quodam alto apud Eveſham, quo tanquam inimicus noſter interfectus fuerat, domitus ſit, ad nos tanquam eſcaeta noſtra per predictam forisfacturam ſuam devenerunt; habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo, & heredibus ſuis de corpore ſuo legitimè procreatis, de nobis & heredibus noſtris, bene. Dedimus etiam & conceſſimus eidem Edmundo, filiò noſtro, omnes terras & tenementa que idem Simon tenuit de baroniâ quondam Johannis le Viſcounte in Northumbr', & alibi; & omnes alias terras & tenementa que idem Simon hereditariè de nobis tenuit, & que per ſupradictam forisfacturam ipſius Simonis ad nos ſimilitèr tamquam eſchaeta noſtra devenerunt; habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo filio noſtro & heredibus ſuis predictis, cum advocationibus eccleſiarum, feodis militum, ſerviciis liberorum hominum, & omnibus aliis ad predictas terras & tenementa ſpectantibus, faciendo indè nobis & heredibus noſtris ſervicia indè debita & conſueta. Dedimus etiam & conceſſimus prefato Edmundo, filio noſtro, omnes alias terras & tenementa que idem Simon tenuit de aliis capitalibus dominis ſuis, & que per predictam forisfacturam ſuam, de communi conſenſu & conſilio magnatûm ac fidelium regni noſtri, ad noſtram ordinationem & diſpoſitionem, ſicut & terre aliorum rebellium noſtrorum, qui nobiſcum in bellis ſupradictis congreſſi fuerant, ſalvis capitalibus dominis homagiis & ſerviciis ſuis, hâc vice pertinebant; habend' & tenend' eidem Edmundo filio noſtro & heredibus ſuis ſupradictis, cum omnibus ad dictas terras & tenementa ſpectantibus, de capitalibus dominis feodorum illorum, faciendo eis indè omnia ſervicia debita & conſueta imperpetuum. Quare volumus & firmitèr precipimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quòd predictus Edmundus filius noſter, & heredes ſui de corpore ſuo legitimè procreati, habeant & teneant predicta honorem, villam, caſtrum, & omnes terras & tenementa ejuſdem honoris, cum feodis militum, & aliis omnibus pertinenciis ſuis, quocunque nomine cenſeri poſſint, de nobis & heredibus noſtris, benè & in pace, cum omnibus ad dictum honorem, villam, & caſtrum, ſpectantibus, ſicut predictus Simon ea quondam tenuit & habuit, faciendo indè nobis & heredibus noſtris ſervicia indè debita & conſueta; & omnes terras & tenementa que idem Simon tenuit de baroniâ, quondam Johannis le Viſcounte, in Northumbr', & alibi; & omnes terras & tenementa que idem Simon hereditariè de nobis tenuit, & que, per ſupradictam forisfacturam ipſius Simonis, ad nos ſimilitèr tamquam eſchaeta noſtra devenerunt; cum advocationibus eccleſiarum, feodis militum, ſerviciis liberorum hominum, & omnibus aliis ad predictas terras & tenementa ſpectantibus, & faciendo indè nobis & heredibus noſtris ſervicia indè debita & conſueta; & omnes alias terras & tenementa que idem Simon tenuit de aliis capitalibus dominis ſuis, & que, per predictam forisfacturam ſuam, de communi conſenſu & conſilio magnatûm ac fidelium regni noſtri, ad noſtram ordinationem & diſpoſitionem, ſicut & terras aliorum rebellium noſtrorum qui nobiſcum in bellis ſupradictis congreſſi fuerant, ſalvis capitalibus dominis homagiis & ſerviciis ſuis, hâc vice pertinebant, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; venerabili patre N. Winton', epiſcopo; &c. [ut ſuprà, p. 20], 22° die Aprilis, anno regni ñri 53°.

8. Rex, &c. militibus, liberis hominibus, & omnibus aliis tenentibus de comitatu [1] & honore Leyceſtrie, ſeneſcalciâ Anglie, & de omnibus terris & tenementis que fuerunt Simonis de Monteforti quondam comitis Leyceſt', ſalutem. Sciatis quòd dedimus & conceſſimus Edmundo, filio noſtro predicto, comitatum, honorem, ſeneſcalciam, terras & tenementa que fuerunt prefati Simonis inimici noſtri, exceptis dominicis noſtris, habendum & tenendum de nobis & heredibus noſtris eidem Edmundo & heredibus ſuis imperpetuum, faciendo ſervicium indè debitum & conſuetum. Et ideò vobis mandamus, quòd eidem Edmundo, tanquam domino veſtro, in omnibus que ad predictum comitatum, honorem, ſeneſcalciam, terras, & tenementa, pertinent, de cetero intendentes ſitis, ſicut predictum eſt. In cujus, &c. Teſt' rege, &c. anno 53°.

9. Edwardus, illuſtriſſimi regis Anglie primogenitus, dilectis ſuis venerabili in Chriſto patri đno W. Dei gratiâ, Eboracenſis archiepiſcopo, Anglie primati;

---

[1] From the words "comitatu Leyceſtrie," ſays Selden, the dignity of earl is there comprehended; and the high ſtewardſhip of England, here mentioned, was taken to be afterward as a parcel of this earldom, or annexed to it in thoſe antient earls. "Rex Henricus," ſays Henry of Knighton, canon of Leiceſter, in MS. ſpeaking of this creation, "dedit comitatum Leyceſtrie, cum honore de Hincley, & ſeneſcatu Anglie, Edmundo filio ſuo." But, on this ſubject, ſee what has been ſaid in p. 221.

d̄nis Philippo Baſſett, Rogero de Mortuo-mari, & Roberto Burnell, ſalutem. Ad expenſarum noſtrarum ſuſtentationem & ſtatum noſtrum obſervandum, cùm noſtra facultas propria non ſuppetebat, de diverſis creditoribus & mercatoribus quinque mille marcas per fidejuſſionem magiſtri & conventûs hoſpitalis S. Joĥnis Jeroſolomit' Acton' recipimus, de quibus ſolvemus ibidem tres mille marcas infra menſem Octobris proximum, ſine quâlibet dilatione, & duas mille marcas Pariſiis infra dictum menſem, quarum ſolutionem fieri deſideramus ultra modum, ut fama noſtra non depereat, nec aditus credentie penès alios, cùm caſus conſimilis nobis emineat & incumbat, precludatur. Quapropter vobis mandamus, rogantes quatenùs, aliis negotiis noſtris pretermiſſis, circa predictarum quinque mille marcarum adquiſitionem inſiſtentes aſſiduè, de eiſdem tres mille marcas fratribus hoſpitalis predicte domûs quos ad proximum paſſagium tranſire noveritis, adeò ſecurè quô poteritis tradatis Acton' deferend'. Duas verò mille marcas reſiduas perquiratis modis omnibus ſolutas illis predictis loco & tempore qui ſuper hoc noſtras literas tulerunt patentes. Per quarum omnium ſolutionem termini noſtri prefixi cuſtodiantur, & noſtra permiſſio futuris temporibus conſtantiam habeat versùs alios creditores beneficium mutuum poſtulandi. Ut autem premiſſa ſecuriùs exequamini, preſentes noſtras literas in teſtimonium predicte ſolutionis faciende vobis patentes deſtinamus; volentes quòd predicta pecunia ſuper compoto noſtro vobis allocetur. Dat' apud Acton', 6 die Aprilis, anno regni domini regis, patris noſtri, 56° [1].

10. Dominus rex [Edwardus] reſtituit Elienore comitiſſe Leiceſtrie terras ſuas in Angliâ, que ei nomine dotis competebant ratione Willielmi Mareſchalli primi mariti ſui. Iſta, poſt occiſionem ſecundi viri ſui, caſtrum de Dover' reddidit regi, & in partibus Francie morabatur; & cum eâ filia ſua Alienora moram traxit. Uno anno habuit terras ſuas, & obiit [2].

A. D. 1276, comitiſſa Leiceſtrie, que, occiſo Simone marito ſuo, in Galliam fugerat, & in domo ſororum ordinis Predicatorum apud Montargis à ſorore viri fundatâ morabatur, filiam ſuam miſit in Walliam principi Levelino [3].

11. Edmundus, filius inclite recordationis Henrici regis Anglie, Durando, ballivo ſuo de Monemouth, ſalutem. Cùm remiſerimus & quietum clamavimus, pro nobis, heredibus & aſſignatis meis, domino Waltero de Helyon', heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, pro fidelitate & ſervitio ſuo, decem ſolidatas redditûs, quas idem Walterus nobis reddere debuit & conſuevit, pro omnibus terris & tenementis que idem Walterus de nobis tenuit in Redleye, Dunye, & Menſtreworth, & que terre & tenementa quondam fuerunt Henrici de Dunye, & anteceſſorum ſuorum; & etiam ſectam curie de Redleye, quam idem Walterus pro terris & tenementis infra manerium de Redleye exiſtentibns nobis facere conſuevit; ita tamen quòd dictus Walterus, heredes & aſſignati ſui, predictas terras & tenementa de nobis, heredibus & aſſignatis noſtris, de cetero teneant per ſervitium unius denarii, ad feſtum ſancti Michaelis reddendi, pro omnibus, prout in cartâ noſtrâ ſibi confectâ pleniùs continetur: Vobis mandamus, quatinùs nec redditum neque ſectam predictam à dictis domino Waltero, heredibus vel aſſignatis ſuis, de cetero exigatis pro predictis, ſed tantummodò unum denarium ad feſtum antedictum. Dat' apud Weſtmonaſterium, ſedecimo die Junii, anno regni domini Edwardi regis, germani mei, tertio [4].

12. Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, & dux Aquitanie, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint ſalutem. Sciatis quòd dedimus & conceſſimus, quantum in nobis eſt, dilecto & fideli noſtro Henrico de Lancaſtr', conſanguineo n̄ro, omnia tenementa, cum pertin', que fuerunt Petri de Kymeringham in villâ de Berewico ſuper Twedam, & que tenementa per foriſfacturam ipſius Petri ad manum noſtram devenerint; habend' & tenend' predicto Henrico & heredibus ſuis, de nobis & heredibus noſtris, liberè & quietè, abſque aliquo nobis aut heredibus noſtris inde reddendo, in perpetuum. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Novum Caſtrum ſuper Tynam, viceſimo die Februarii, anno regni noſtri nono. Per breve de privato ſigillo [5].

13. Edmundus illuſtris regis Anglie filius adquiet' Rad̄o, &c. terras, que fuerunt Rad̄i de Limeſey militis, in com. North', 18 Edw. I. [6].

14. A touz ceaux qui ceſt eſcrit verront ou orront, Thomas conte de Lancaſtre ſalutz en Dieu. Sachez nous avoir graunte a noſtre bien ame Robert le Venour totes les terres & les tenementz que divindrent en noſtre mein par le nonage Thomas fil & heir Thomas de Ferrers, jaditz noſtre tenaunt en le manoier de Lockeſlegh, en le conte de Stafford, & aillors, jeſques au plein age del dit Thomas, enſement ove le mariage de meiſme celui, e ove les douwaires que hors ſunt du dit manoir, qaunt e quiele heure qu'il eſcherront, e ove totes autres maneres de profites e commoditez que nous porront eſcheyr par la garde du dit manoir e le nonage de meiſme celui Thomas. Et, s'il aviegne que lavauntdit Thomas moerge avaunt ſon age, voloms & grauntoms, por nous e por noz heirs, que lavantdit Robert tiegne les terres & les tenementz avauntditz, ſi come eſt avant nome, jeſques a tel temps quil poeyt eſtre de plein age; avoir e tenir au dit Robert & a ſes heirs, ou a ſes aſſignes, les terres & les tenementz avauntdits, ove le mariage du dit Thomas, e ove les douwaires e totes autres maneres de profitz e commoditez, en la forme avauntdite, fraunchement quitement, bien, e en pes, feſaunt, a nous e a noz heirs, durant le terme des ſervices des avauntditz tenementz dues & cuſtumes. Et nous l'avaundit Thomas & nos heirs tous les avauntditz tenementz a lavauntdit Robert e a ſes heirs e a ſes aſſignez en la forme avauntdite garantiroms ver totes gentz. En teſmòing de queu choſe a ceſt eſcrit avons mis noſtre ſeal par hi ces teſmoings; monſieur Robert de Holand, monſ. Willame de Stafford, monſ. Philippe de Barenton, Adam Banaſtre, chevaliers; Johan de Bromſchulf, Robert de Caneresfwall, Henri Oweyn, e autres. Done a Meleborne, Mardi en la veille de la Nativite noſtre Dame, en l'an du regne noſtre treſchier ſigneur le roi Edward trentiſme tiers [7].

15. Come choſe ſoit a totes gentz, que nous Thomas counte de Lancaſtr' & de Leyceſtr', feneſchal d'Engleterre, avons receu du bail' noſtre cher couſin monſ' Aymar de Valence count de Pembroke, un eſcrit endente des covenauntz entre noſtre ſeigneur le roi & ſire Wautre Eveſque de Ceſtr', touchant le chaſtel & le manoir de Thorp-Watervill, & des maners de Aldewyncle & de Achirche, & enſement un inſtrument ſuz main de Tabellion ſur meiſme la choſe. En teſmoign de quell choſe avous fait faire ceſtez mez lettres overtes. Done a Everwyk le ſeptiſme jour d'Octöber, l'an de noſtre regne ottiſme [8].

16. Sanctiſſimo in Chriſto patri, & domino ſuo, domino C. divinâ providentiâ, ſacroſancte Romane eccleſie ac univerſitatis ſummo pontifici, ſuus devotus filius Thomas, comes Lancaſtrie, Lincolnie, Leyceſtrie, & ſeneſcallus Anglie, devota pedum oſcula beatorum. Negotia que cariſſimi nobis in Chriſto abbas & conventus de Barling, Lincolnie dioceſis, habent in hiis diebus, pro utilitate monaſterii ſui (quod de

---

[1] Cart. Ant. in Muſeo Britannico, 43 C. 48. The ſame double ſeal as in Plate XIII. fig. 2.

[2] Annales de Dunſtable.

[3] Leland, Collectan. I. 306; from a book concerning Malmeſbury abbey. And ſee the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, p. 209.

[4] Cart. Ant. in Muſeo Britannico, 43 C. 44. See the ſeal, Plate XIII. fig. 3.

[5] Cart. Antiq. in Muſ. Brit. 43 D. 32. See the two ſeals, Plate XIII. fig. 5, 6.

[6] Cotton MSS. Julius, C. VII. p. 155. See the ſeal, Plate XIII. fig. 7.

[7] Cart. Ant. in Muſ. Brit. 43 C. 45. See the ſeal, Plate XIII. fig. 8.

[8] Cart. Ant. in Muſ. Brit. 43 C. 46. The ſeal is the ſame as that to the preceding deed. The ſeal of the ſame earl, fig. 9, from the Cotton MSS. Julius C. 7.

anteceſſorum & progenitorum noſtrorum eleemoſinis eſt fundatum) in veſtre ſanctitatis preſentiâ expedire; ad exauditionis optate gratiam admitti corditèr affectantes: ea veſtre beatitudini pleno recommendamus affectu; ſupplicantes attentè, quatenùs petitiones dictorum & conventûs ſuper negotiis ſuis predictis veſtre clementie prorigendas, eò benigniùs exaudire & gratioſiùs expedire dignemini, quod noſtros rogatus ſibi ſentiant fructuoſos. Conſervet vos Altiſſimus ad regimen eccleſie ſue ſancte per tempora felicitèr longiora [1].

17. Ordinationes & precepta Willielmi Baſſett & Roberti de Hungerford, juſtic' ad itinerand' ad placita foreſte domini Henrici comitis Lancaſtr', foreſte de Lancaſtr', aſſign', die Lune prox' poſt feſtum Sancti Matthei Apoſtoli, quo die iter predictum ſine die remanſit & clauſit; facta cuſtodi, viridariis, & aliis miniſtris ejuſdem foreſte, ſecđm aſs̃m ejuſdem foreſte, & publicè proclamata, ſequuntur in hec verba, &c.

"Imprimis preceptum eſt eiſdem, quòd venacio domini comitis bene cuſtodiatur, nec quòd permittantur aliqui ad intrandum foreſtam predictam ad venacionem domini comitis minandam, berſand', ſive capiend', canibus, laqueis, ſive ingeniis; quod ſi aliqui fecerint, ſtatim levet ſuper eos clam' & hũtes de villatâ in villatam, & de wardâ in wardam, quouſque vigore hõim manentium infra limites ejuſdem foreſte, qui ad pacem dicte venacionis ſcđm aſs̃iam foreſte jurentur, capiantur, & impriſonentur: Et quòd ſepes, foſſata, vel domus, que facta ſunt ad nocumentum foreſte & ferarum domini comitis poſt ultimum iter ejuſdem p̃ſternentur per aſs̃iam predictam; & quòd nullus capiat cablicia ſeu perficiend' eorundem in dominicis boſcis vel haiis dicti domini comitis, nec quercus ſive alias arbores in eiſdem locis expeditare ut cadant; & quòd nulli foreſtarii aliquid capiant ut permittant aliquod genus animalium intrare foreſtam dñi in laundis vetitis menſe defenſo; & quòd nullus habens communam in foreſtâ ſupoñet paſturam aliis averiis q̃m ſuis averiis propriis per attractionem animalium extraneorum; quod ſi quis fecerit, preſentetur ad attach': & quòd nullus habeat capras depaſcentes in dominicis boſcis domini; & quòd nullus habens boſcos ſuos infra foreſtam agiſtet eos quouſque đnus comes boſcos ſuos agiſtet; & quòd predicti miniſtri bene ſe habeant in officiis ſuis, ita quòd non occaſionent in ullo erga dominum comitem vel heredes ſuos ad proximam aſs̃m in adventu juſtic' prox' itinerantium in iſtâ foreſtâ, &c."

18. Carta Edwardi III. de Brageriaco concedendo; complectens laudes Henrici comitis Lancaſtrie.

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Francie, & dominus Hibernie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, ſeneſchallis, conſtabulariis, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Sciatis quòd nos, placido rumore de factis victorioſis que conſanguineus noſter & fidelis cariſſimus Henricus, comes Lancaſtrie, agens ſuper expeditione guerre noſtre quam pro nobis in ducatu noſtro Aquitanie & partibus adjacentibus gratantèr aſſumpſit, divinâ ſibi favente clementiâ, ibi fecit, inimicos noſtros in bellis campeſtribus expugnando, civitates, caſtra, villas, & loca fortia in manum noſtram in copioſâ multitudine capiendo, & agendo noſtra ſapientèr, & magnanimitèr dirigendo; nos, tanta conſanguinei noſtri magnalia meritò contemplantes, & ad ea ut de aliis nobis impenſis per eum multiplicitèr fructuoſis obſequiis taceamus, gratam conſiderationem habentes, videntes per eum nedum profectum noſtrum ſet honorem noſtri nominis ineſtimabilitèr adaugeri, mero motu noſtro ac gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, auctoritate noſtrâ regiâ, & ex certâ ſcientiâ, dedimus & conceſſimus eidem comiti caſtrum, villam, & locum de Brageriaco, dioceſis petragoricenſ', que dictus comes, nuper noſter locumtenens in ducatu noſtro Aquitanie & linguâ occitanâ, vi armorum & per inſultum fortiſſimum nuper cepit; habendum & tenendum eidem comiti & heredibus maſculis de corpore ſuo procreatis, cum caſtellaniâ, & omni juſticiatu alto & baſſo, mero ac mixto imperio, parochiis & homagiis, reſorti, caſtorum & locorum tam baronum quàm aliorum quorumcunque, ac quibuſcunque officiis, pedagiis, piſcariis, molendinis, & aliis quibuſcunque juribus, juriſdictionibus, redditibus, deveriis, libertatibus, privilegiis, conſuetudinibus, & ſuis pertinentiis univerſis; ita plenè ſicut domini quondam dicte ville Brageriaci, dum extra manum regiam, extunc habebant & tenebant antiquitùs temporibus retroactis, abſque diminutione alicujus juris, juriſdictionis, aut deverii, ad dictum caſtrum, villam, & locum dudum quomodolibet pertinentibus, de nobis & heredibus noſtris ducibus Aquitanie imperpetuum; &, ſi alique juriſdictiones, jura, reſorta, redditus, ac deveria, antiquitùs & ab antiquo ad dictum caſtrum, villam, & locum pertinentia, ſubtracta fuerint vel occultata, ſeu per aliquos tacitè appropriata, ſeu aliquibus aliis per dictum comitem aut alium quemcunque data ſeu conceſſa imperpetuum vel ad tempus, ea redintegrari volumus, & ad jus & proprietatem dicti caſtri, loci, & ville Brageriaci omninò reduci & reverti, & per detentores eorum quoſcunque indilatè dimitti; quas quidem donationes, ſi que fuerint ex causâ predictâ, tenore preſentium duximus revocandas & penitùs adnullandas. Conceſſimus inſuper, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, auctoritate noſtrâ regiâ, & ex certâ ſcientiâ, dicto comiti & heredibus maſculis de corpore ſuo, ut predicitur, procreatis, cuſionem monete in dicto loco Brageriaci; ſic quòd ipſi in eodem loco monetam cudere poſſint, ſeu cudi facere, prout ſibi viſum fuerit faciendum, emolumentumque cuſionis ipſius monete ſuum remaneat, & ad ipſorum utilitatem omnimodè committatur; ita tamen quòd moneta illa ibidem ſic cudenda ſit ita fortis aut fortior monetâ noſtrâ partium predictarum. Salvâ & retentâ in premiſſis omnibus nobis & heredibus noſtris fidelitate & homagio, cavalcatâ, & reſorto, nobis pertinentibus in hâc parte. Volumus etiam, quòd, ſi prefatum comitem obire contingat abſque herede maſculo de corpore ſuo, ut premittitur, procreato, tunc caſtrum, villa, & locus predicta, unà cum caſtellaniâ, & omnibus aliis juribus & pertinentiis ſuis predictis, necnon cuſio dicte monete, & emolumentum indè proveniens, ſtatim poſt mortem ejuſdem comitis ad nos & heredes noſtros integrè revertantur. His teſtibus; Will̃o de Bohun comite Northamptonie, Ricõ comite Arundel, conſanguineis noſtris; Thomâ de Bello-campo, comite Warr'; Joh̃e de Veer, comite Oxon'; Robt̃o de Ufford, comite Suff'; Barth̃o de Burgerſh'; Ricõ Talbot, ſeneſchallo; & aliis. Datum per noſtram manum, juxta Caleſiam, primo die Junii, anno regni nr̃i Anglie 21°, regni verò noſtri Francie 8° [2].

19. A touz ceux que ceſtes letteres verront ou orront, Henri de Lanc', counte de Derby, ſaluz en Dieu. Sachez nous avoyr graunte, & per ceſtes noz lettres conferme, a noſtre cher bacheler monſ' Roger de Chetwynd, & dame Johane ſa femme, a terme de lour vies, une annel rente de vint livres, a reſcevire de noſtre manoyr de Shenſton, per les mayns de noz provots & baillets, quilloſq' ſerrount, as deux termes del an, per oweles portions, a les feſtes de Paſque & de Seynt Michel, quel anuel rente nous avions du grant noſtre bien ame Robert de Grendon, a terme des vies les ſuditz monſ' Roger & dame Johane, comme piert par les chartres a nous ent faites; a avoyr & tenir la dit anuel rente de vint livres a ditz monſ' Roger & dame Johane a terme de lour vies, ſaunz enpeſchement ou countredit de nous, noz executours, ou de nul autre en noſtre nom. Et nous Henri de Lanc' counte de Derby avauntdit, noz heirs, & noz executours, la dite anuel rente de vint livres as ditz monſ' Roger & dame Johane, a terme de lour vies, countre toutes gentz warantizoms & defendroms. Et ſi aviegne que le dit monſ' Roger ou dame Johane ſoient ariere en partie ou en tout a nul terme ſus dit, bien liſe as ſuſdit monſ' Roger & dame Johane en noſtre dit manoir deſtreindre, & la deſtreſce retenir, taunque perpaiement lui ſoit fait de ceo que ariere ſerra. En teſmoignaunce de quell choſe a ceſt eſcrits endente avons mys noſtre ſeal. Don a Londres, le vj jour de Fevrier, l'an du regne noſtre ſeigneur le roi Edward

---

[1] Peck, MSS. ex Regiſt. Premonſtr. fol. 82. b.

[2] Ex Regiſtro Magno Ducatûs Lancaſtriæ, fol. 417.

Tiertz depuis le Conqueſt dys & occiſme, per yces teſmoignes; monſ' Ric' de Wilughby, & monſ' Piers de la Mare, chivaliers; ſire John Gywell, ſire Piers de Wotton, clercs; & autres [1].

20. A tous ceaux que ceſt featz verrount ou orrount, Henri counte de Lancaſtre, de Derby, & de Leiceſtre, ſeneſchal d'Engleterre, ſalutz en Dieu. Come noſtre treſchier ſeigneur roi piere eyt graunte & done por ſon featz a noſtre treſchiere ſoere Mahaud de Lancaſtre, counteſſe d'Ulveſter, a terme de ſa vie, le chaſtel & le manoier de Melbourn, ove tous ſes appourtenances, a avoier & tener de luy & de ſes heirs, rendaunt per an a noſtre treſchere ſeigneur & piere, a la Nativite de Seint Johan le Baptiſte, une roſe, & feſaunt as chiefs ſeigneurs del fie les ſervices dues & cuſtumes del dit manoir: Nous eauntz ferme & eſtable le graunt & le duen noſtre ditz treſchier ſeigneur & piere, volons & grauntons, & per ceo feat confermons, pur nous & nos heirs, a noſtre dite treſchier ſoere Mahaud de Lancaſtre, counteſſe d'Ulveſtor, que ſi dedeans .... les diz anns procheins apres le date du ceſt feat, que ſes executours ou ſes aſſignees puſſent avoier & tenier le dits chaſtel & manoier, ove tous ſes appourtenances, tauntque a fin de diz anns procheyne enſuantz & pleynement accomplis apres le jour de la feſaunte des ceſtes. Et nos le dit Henri counte de Lancaſtre de Derby & de Leiceſtre, & nos heirs, le chaſtel & manoir, ove tous ſes appourtenaunces, a notre dite treſchiere ſoere & a ſes executours, ou a ſes aſſignes, garanterons countre totes gentz pour tout le terme avauntditz. En teſmoignaunte de quele choſe, a la partie de ceſte endenture demouraunts devers noſtre dite ſoer la counteſſe, nous avoms mys noſtre ſeal. Et noſtre dite ſoer la counteſſe, a la partie de ceſte endenture demoraunt devers nous, ad mys ſon ſeal. Don a noſtre chaſtel de Kenilworthe, le 18 jour de Martz, l'an du regne de roi Edward Tiers puis le Conqueſte d'Engleterre 27, & de France 7 [2].

21. Henri, duc de Lancaſtre, count de Derby & de Nicol [3].

22. Edwardus, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie & Aquitanie, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Conſtat nobis, per inſpectionem rotulorum cancellarii domini Henrici, quondam regis Anglie, proavi noſtri, quòd idem proavus noſter literas ſuas patentes fieri fecit in hec verba:

"Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Sciatis nos conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, Johanni comiti Ceſtrie & Hunt', quòd ipſe & heredes ſui habeant omnes libertates ſuperſcriptas, quas predeceſſores ſui comites Huntingdon' habuerunt temporibus predeceſſorum noſtrorum regum Anglie; videlicet, quòd ipſe & heredes ſui, & homines ſui qui tenent de honore Huntingdon', in quibuſcunque comitatibus vel ballivis fuerint, habeant & teneant terras ſuas, in ſokâ & ſakâ, & thol & theam, & infangenethef & utfangenethef, in boſco & plano, in viis & ſemitis, pratis & paſcuis, in aquis & molendinis, in vivariis & ſtagnis, in piſcariis, & in omnibus aliis locis & rebus ad terras ſuas pertinentibus, ſolutas & liberas & quietas de theolonio, & pontagio, & paſſagio, & pedagio, & paagio, & ſtallagio, & tallagio, & de ſyris, hundredis, & de ſectis ſhirarum & hundred', & de auxiliis vicecom' & ſervient', & de geldis & danegeldis, & hidagiis & blodewit, & de ferdwit, & de fichewit, & de murdro, & denar' ad murdrum pertinentibus, & de vaſto foreſte, & aſſarto, & guardo, & reguardo, & de operationibus caſtellorum, & murorum, & foſſatorum, & parcorum, & pontium, & calcearum, & de omni conſuetudine & exactione ſeculari, & opere ſervili; & capiant ſiccum & viride, ubicunque fuerint & voluerint, in boſcis ſuis, ſine viſu & liberatione foreſtariorum noſtrorum; & ſint boſci eorum in eorum propriâ cuſtodiâ; & quòd predictus comes & heredes ſui habeant hayam ſuam de Gerdeleyâ, & bruſcam ſuam de Barthon & Dudington, quietas & liberas ad vendendum & dandum cuicunque voluerint, & ad faciendum de eis quod de eis placuerit; & quòd habeant venationem & warrenam ſuam in eis, & bene warrantizent cuicunque voluerint viam ubicunque de honore de Huntingdon'. Quare volumus & concedimus, & firmitèr precipimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quòd predictus Johannes comes Ceſtrie & Huntingdon', & heredes ſui, & homines ſui qui tenent de honore de Huntingdon', in quibuſcunque comitatibus vel ballivis fuerint, habeant & teneant terras ſuas, cum omnibus libertatibus & quietanciis predictis, bene & in pace, ſicut predictum eſt. Hiis teſtibus; P. Wynton', epiſcopo; W. de War', comite Surr'; W. de Ferr', comite Dereb'; H. comite Heref'; S. de Segrave, juſticiario Anglie; Waltero de Laſcy; Johanne de Monem'; Radulpho de Mortuo Mari; Rogero de Quenci; Radulpho, filio Nicholai; Johanne, filio Philippi; Galfrido Deſpencer; Willo de Pichef'; Bartholomeo Pech; & aliis. Dat' per manum venerabilis patris R. Ciceſtrie epiſcopi, cancellarii noſtri, apud Hereford', ſeptimo die Novembris, anno regni noſtri decimo-octavo."

Nos autem tenorem literarum predictarum, ad requiſitionem cariſſimi primogeniti noſtri Edwardi, principis Aquitanie & Wallie, ducis Cornubie, & comitis Ceſtrie, duximus exemplificand' per preſentes. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has literas noſtras fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtmonaſterium, quinto die Decembris, anno regni noſtri triceſimo-octavo [4].

23. Henricus, dux Lancaſtrie, inter plurima in diverſis comitatibus, tenuit die quo obiit duos viſus per annum apud Lilburn, que ſunt de honore de Leiceſtriâ; & valent, cum curiis, &c. ſeptem libras per annum, &c. [5].

24. Pardonatio facta Johanni duci Lancaſtrie, & Henrico filio ſuo, duci Hereford', de tranſgreſſionibus omnibus factis per Thomam nuper comitem Lanc'.

Ricardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Francie, & dominus Hibernie, omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, ex certâ ſcientiâ noſtrâ, ac de pleno aſſenſu & maturâ deliberatione conſilii noſtri, pardonavimus, remiſimus, ac omninò in perpetuum, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantùm in nobis eſt, quietum clamavimus, cariſſimo avunculo noſtro Johanni duci Aquitanie & Lancaſtrie, ac cariſſimo conſanguineo noſtro Henrico, filio ejus, duci Hereford', tenentibus terrarum & tenementorum que fuerunt Thome nuper comitis Lancaſtrie, ac eorum heredibus, totum jus noſtrum, forisfacturam, actionem, querelam, demandam, titulum, & clameum; noſtra quecunque que in aliquibus caſtris, honoribus, dominiis, maneriis, hundredis, wapentaciis, commotis, cantredis, chaceis, parcis, warrenis, terris, tenementis, redditibus, & ſerviciis; feodis militum, advocationibus eccleſiarum, abbatiarum, prioratuum, hoſpitalium, capellarum, cantariarum ac aliorum beneficiorum eccleſiaſticorum quorumcunque, aut aliquibus aliis poſſeſſionibus que fuerunt predicti Thome nuper comitis; ratione ſeu occaſione aliquarum proditionum, ſeditionum, inſurrectionum, forisfacture, guerre, adherentiarum inimicis Scotie, ſeu aliis inimicis quibuſcunque; aut confederationum, alligationum, ſeu interliganciarum cum eiſdem, aut aliorum favorum vel auxiliorum eiſdem preſtitorum; incendiorum, depredationum, equitationum, itinerum modo guerrino & bellicoſo cum vexillis explicatis, ſeu alio modo forti vel violenti quocunque; feloniarum, murdrorum, deſpectuum, contemptuum, rebellionum, offenſarum, uſurpationum, extortionum, manutenentiarum, meſpriſionum, ac aliarum proditionum & falſitatum quarumcunque, & quorumcunque nomine cenſeantur, per ipſum Thomam, nuper comitem, tempore domini Edwardi, quondam regis Anglie proavi noſtri, contra ligeanciam ſuam, in derogationem corone, ſeu leſionem regie majeſtatis ipſius proavi noſtri, qualitercunque factorum & perpetratorum, habemus, habuimus, ſeu quovis modo habere poterimus in futurum ratione regalie ſeu prerogative noſtre, aut alia hujuſmodi de cauſâ quâcunque, unde prefati duces vel heredes eorum per nos vel heredes noſtros quoſcunque impetiri, calumpniari, accuſari, vel inquietari poſſint in futurum. Et inſuper, de uberiori gratiâ noſtrâ, ex certâ ſcientiâ noſtrâ, & de aſſenſu predicto, ſtatum & poſſeſſionem quos predicti duces habent in dominiis & poſſeſſionibus predictis, & eorum quolibet, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, tenore preſentium acceptamus, approbamus, & ratificamus, ac prefatis ducibus & eorum heredibus concedimus & confirmamus in perpetuum; nolentes, quòd predicti duces vel eorum heredes inde, ratione aliquorum premiſſorum, ſeu aliarum aliquarum proditionum vel forisfacturarum per prefatum Thomam nuper comitem, ſeu aliquem alium predeceſſorum predictorum, ante hec tempora aliquibus progenitoribus noſtris factarum, per nos vel heredes noſtros quoſcunque futuris temporibus impetantur, occonentur, moleſtentur in aliquo, ſeu graventur; ſalvâ ſemper & reſervatâ nobis & heredibus noſtris reverſione, ſi qua nobis competat pro defectu exitûs predictorum ducum & heredum ſuorum, in dominiis & poſſeſſionibus ſupradictis; ac etiam quibuſcunque juribus antiquitùs debitis, ac pertinentibus bundis comitatûs, ſive principatûs noſtri Ceſtrie, nobis & heredibus noſtris in omnibus ſemper ſalvis. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtmonaſterium, 20° Februarii, anno regni 21°[1].

---

[1] Cart. Ant. in Muſeo Britannico, XXV. 11. See the ſeal, Plate XIII. fig. 8.

[2] Ib. 43 C. 47. See the ſeal, fig. 9.

[3] Cotton MSS. Julius, C. VII. See the ſeal, Plate XIII. fig. 12; and in fig. 13, another ſeal of the ſame duke from Sandford; which appears to have been the ſame with that of earl Edmund in fig. 7; with the alteration only of the legend. Fig. 14, is the relick noticed in p. 219.

[4] Cotton MSS. Claudius, A. XIII. p. 196. b.

[5] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. N° 122; from the Northamptonſhire MSS. of Mr. Bridges, vol. C. f. 215. It appears by the ſame MSS. vol. A. f. 36. 37. & 442. that divers lands in Eaſt Haddon, co. Northampton, were held of the honour of Leiceſter.

25. Carta . . . Edw. IV. libertatum & privilegiorum[2].

Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Frauncie, dominus Hibernie, univerſis & ſingulis juſtitiariis, vicecomitibus, eſcaetoribus, ſeneſcallis, majoribus, ballivis, miniſtris, & omnibus fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Cùm dominus Edwardus, nuper rex Anglie, progenitor noſter, conceſſerit, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, Johanni nuper duci Aquitanie & Lancaſtrie, per nomen ducis Lancaſtrie, & Blauncie nuper uxori ejus; quòd ipſi, & heredes ſui de corporibus ipſorum ducis & Blauncie procreati, & omnes homines de terris & feodis que fuerunt Henrici comitis Lancaſtrie, patris Henrici nuper ducis Lancaſtrie, ſeptimo die Maii, anno regni ejuſdem progenitoris noſtri ſexto decimo, imperpetuum ſint quieti de panagio, paſſagio, paagio, laſtagio, ſtallagio, tallagio, cariagio, peſagio, picagio, & terragio, per totum regnum & poteſtatem ſuam. Ac poſtmodum dominus Ricardus nuper rex Anglie ſecundus poſt Conqueſtum, per cartam ſuam, conceſſerit prefato Johanni nuper duci Aquitanie & Lancaſtrie, quòd ipſe ad totam vitam ſuam haberet omnes fines pro tranſgreſſionibus & aliis maleficiis quibuſcunque; ac etiam fines pro licentiâ concordandâ; & omnes alios fines, redemptiones, & amerciamenta, ex quâcunque cauſâ & per quamcunque cauſam provenientes; necnon exitus forisfactos de omnibus hominibus & tenentibus de & in terris & feodis predicti ducis, & de omnibus infra eaſdem terras & feoda reſidentibus, quôcunque iidem homines, tenentes, ſeu reſidentes, miniſtri ipſius nuper regis Ricardi, vel heredum ſuorum, exiſterent; & quòd ipſe dux ad totam vitam ſuam haberet totum & quicquid ad ipſum nuper regem Ricardum & heredes ſuos pertinere poſſit, de anno, die, & vaſto, & eſtrepamento, forisfacturis, & murdris, infra terras & feoda predicta, in quibuſcunque curiis ſuis & heredum ſuorum, ſive in quâcunque curiâ alterius contigerit, quòd predicti homines, tenentes ſeu reſidentes, facerent fines, vel eſſent amerciati, vel exitus forisfacerent; ſeu quòd predicta dies, annus, vaſtus, & eſtrepamentum, forisfactura, vel murdra adjudicata eſſent, tam in preſentiâ ipſius nuper regis Ricardi & heredum ſuorum, quàm in abſentiâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum; & tam coram ipſo & heredibus ſuis in cancellariâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum; ac coram theſaurario & baronibus de ſcaccario ſuo & heredum ſuorum; & coram juſticiariis ſuis & heredum ſuorum de communi banco; necnon coram ſeneſcallo & mareſcallo, ſeu coronatore hoſpitii ſui & heredum ſuorum, vel clerico mercati, qui pro tempore eſſent; & in aliis curiis ſuis & heredum ſuorum; quàm coram juſtititiariis ſuis itinerantibus ad eorum placita, & ad placita foreſte, juſtitiariorum ad aſſiſſas capiendum & gaolas deliberandum; ac coram aliis quibuſcunque juſtitiariis & miniſtris ſuis & heredum ſuorum, tam in preſentiâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum quàm in abſentiâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum; adeò plenè & integrè ſicut idem nuper rex Ricardus ea haberet, ſi illa prefato duci non conceſſiſſet; ita quòd dux predictus, per manus ballivorum & aliorum miniſtrorum ſuorum, levare, percipere, & habere poſſet, fines, redemptiones, & amerciamenta ipſorum hominum, tenentium, & reſidentium, de & in terris & feodis predictis exeuntia & forisfacta, & quicquid ad ipſum nuper regem Ricardum vel heredes ſuos pertinere poſſet, de anno, die, & vaſto, & eſtrepamento, forisfacturis & murdris, de & in terris & feodis predictis, que coram dictis juſtitiariis itinerantibus, ad eorum placita & placita foreſte, ac coram predictis ſeneſcallo & mareſcallo, coronatore, vel clerico mercati, fieri ſeu adjudicari contigerit, per extenta eorundem juſtitiariorum itinerantium in itineribus ſuis, ac predictorum ſeneſcalli, mareſcalli, coronatoris, & clerici mercati, in ſeſſionibus ſuis, ballivis & miniſtris predicti ducis inde liberandum; ac etiam fines, redemptiones, & amerciamenta de hominibus, tenentibus, & reſidentibus predictis; ac exitus, forisfactos, & omnia que ad ipſum nuper regem Ricardum vel heredes ſuos pertinere poſſent, de anno, die, & vaſto, & eſtrepamento, forisfacturis, & murdris, de & in terris & feodis predictis, que coram ipſo vel heredibus ſuis, vel in cancellariâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum, ſeu coram theſaurario & baronibus ſuis de ſcaccario ſuo & heredum ſuorum, vel coram juſtitiariis ſuis & heredum ſuorum de communi banco, ſive coram juſtitiariis ad aſſiſſas capiendum & gaolas deliberandum, aut juſtitiariis ad tranſgreſſiones & felonias audiendum & determinandum aſſignatis, ſeu coram aliis juſtitiariis vel miniſtris ſuis quibuſcunque & heredum ſuorum, fieri vel adjudicari contigerit, per extentas de ſcaccario ſuo & heredum ſuorum, ballivis & miniſtris prefati ducis, per manus vicecomitis in quorum ballivis dicta terre & feoda exiſterent indè liberandum, ſine occaſione vel impedimento ipſius nuper regis Ricardi, vel heredum ſuorum, juſtitiariorum, vicecomitum, eſcaetorum, aut aliorum miniſtrorum ſuorum & heredum ſuorum quorumcunque; & quòd predictus dux, ad totam vitam ſuam, per ſe & miniſtros ſuos, in omnibus terris & feodis predictis, tam in preſentiâ ipſius regis Ricardi & heredum ſuorum, quàm in abſentiâ ſuâ & heredum ſuorum, faceret & haberet aſſaiam & aſſiſſam panis, vini, & cerviſie, & omnimodorum aliorum victualium quorumcunque, ac aliorum ad officium clerici de mercato & heredum ſuorum pertinentium, cum permiſſione eorundem, quotieſcunque & quando expediens foret & neceſſe; ac etiam haberet & perciperet fines, amerciamenta, & redemptiones, ac omnia proficua indè provenientia; ita quòd clericus mercati ipſius nuper regis Ricardi & heredum ſuorum non ingredietur dictas terras vel feoda pro aliquibus ad officium faciendum & exercendum; & quòd idem dux ad totam vitam ſuam haberet catalla felonum & fugitivorum, tam felonum de ſe quàm aliorum quorumcunque, ac utlagatorum ex quâcunque cauſâ, omnium hominum & tenentium de & in terris & feodis predictis, necnon omnium tenentium infra eaſdem terras & feoda quôcunque iidem homines tenent aut reſident, miniſtris ipſius nuper regis Ricardi vel heredum ſuorum extenta; ita quòd, ſi aliquis hominum & tenentium de & in terris & feodis predictis, ſeu aliquis reſidentium in dictis terris & feodis, aut aliquis alius in eiſdem terris & feodis, pro aliquo ſuo maleficio quocunque, debeat vitam vel membrum amittere, vel fugere, & in judicio ſtare nollet, aut aliquam aliam tranſgreſſionem faceret, pro quâ ipſe deberet perdere catalla ſua, in que loca juſtitia de eo fieri deberet, ſive in curiâ ipſius nuper regis Ricardi & heredum ſuorum, vel in aliis curiis, catalla ſua eſſent predicti ducis; & liceret ei ſeu miniſtris ſuis ponere in ſeiſinam dictorum catalla, & eadem catalla ad opus predicti ducis reti-

---

[1] Ex Magno Regiſtro in camerâ Ducatûs, folio ultimo.

[2] Peck, MS. ex ant. cod. MS. penès Nevile King, arm. 1730.

nere, ſine occaſione vel impedimento ipſius nuper regis Ricardi vel heredum ſuorum, ac extentarum & preceptorum juſtitiariorum ſuorum, ſeu miniſtrorum ſuorum, & heredum ſuorum quorumcunque; & quòd predictus dux ad totam vitam ſuam haberet retorna omnium brevium ipſius nuper regis Ricardi & heredum ſuorum; necnon ſummonitionem extentarum & preceptorum de ſcaccario ſuo & heredum ſuorum; ac extentarum & preceptorum juſtitiariorum ſuorum & heredum ſuorum itinerantium, tam ad placita foreſte quàm ad communia placita; ac aliorum juſtitiariorum quorumcunque; necnon attachiamenta, tam de placitis corone quàm aliorum, in omnibus terris & feodis predictis; & quòd predictus dux, ad totam vitam ſuam, per ſe & ballivos ſuos, haberet in eiſdem terris & feodis executionem eorundem brevium, ſummonitionum, extentarum, & preceptorum; ita quòd nullus vicecomes, ballivus, aut alius miniſter ipſius nuper regis Ricardi vel heredum ſuorum predicta terras & feoda ingrederetur, pro aliquo officio, vel pro aliquâ re officium ſuum tangente faciendâ, niſi indè ſecta ipſius ducis vel miniſtrorum ſuorum. Ac inſuper idem nuper rex Ricardus, per eandem cartam ſuam, conceſſerit, pro ſe & dictis heredibus ſuis, quòd, ſi vicecomes vel ballivus libertatum, hundredorum, ſeu wapentachiorum, in aliquibus executionibus pro predicto ducatu per brevia ſua, ſeu mandata ſua vel heredum ſuorum, ſeu in aliquo alio modo faciendis, negligentes eſſent vel remiſſi, propter quod contigerit ipſos amerciari aut fines facere in ſcaccario, vel in aliis curiis ſuis & heredum ſuorum, hujuſmodi fines & amerciamenta eſſent prefati ducis, & quòd levarentur ad opus ipſius ducis per miniſtros ſuos ſupradictos, durante vitâ ſuâ; & quòd predictus dux ad totam vitam ſuam haberet, infra omnes dictas terras & feoda, omnimoda catalla vocata wayſe & ſtraye, deodanda, theſaurum inventum, ac alia, res vel catalla inventa; & quòd ipſe, per ſe & miniſtros ſuos ſeiſire, & capere poſſet, ad voluntatem ſuam, ad opus predicti ducis, wayſes & ſtrayes, deodanda, & theſaurum inventum, ac alia inventa ſupradicta; & quòd predictus dux ad totam vitam ſuam haberet quecunque bona & catalla vocata manu-opera, capta vel capienda de quâcunque perſonâ infra terras & feoda predicta ac per eandem perſonam coram quocunque judice deadvocatâ. Ac cùm Henricus Quartus, nuper de facto non de jure, rex Anglie, ex certâ ſcientiâ ſuâ, & aſſenſu parliamenti ſui, per cartam ſuam conceſſerit, declaravit, & ordinavit, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis in ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie, quàm in univerſis & ſingulis aliis comitatibus, honoribus, maneriis, feodis, poſſeſſionibus, & dominiis eidem nuper, ut premittitur, regi, ante uſurpationem dignitatis ſue regie, qualitèrcunque & ubicunque, jure hereditario in dominico, ſervitio, vel proviſione, ſeu aliàs qualitèrcunque diſcenſis, quòd talia & hujuſmodi libertates, jura regalia, conſuetudines, & francheſie, in omnibus & per omnia imperpetuum habeantur, exerceantur, continuentur, fruantur, & utantur, & per tales officiarios & miniſtros gubernentur & exequentur, que & qualia & per quales officiarios & miniſtros ipſe & progenitores & anteceſſores ſui, in eiſdem ducatu, comitatibus, honoribus, caſtris, maneriis, feodis, & aliis poſſeſſionibus & dominiis predictis, uti & haberi, ac regi & gubernari conſueverint, virtute cartarum indè confectarum; [Cætera deſunt.]

26. The Honour of Leiceſter; extracted by the Rev. Samuel Carte out of a Court Roll of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, 3 Eliz.; in cuſtody of T. P.

Deſford. Viſus franciplegii dñe regine honoris Leiceſtrie, parcell' ducatûs ſui Lancaſtrie, ib̄m tent' 9 Apr', 3 Eliz', coram Franciſco Sanders, generoſo, deputato pernobilis Henrici comitis Huntingdon', capitalis ſeneſcalli dicte dñe regine. The places mentioned as belonging to his court are, Deſford, Kyrbye, Stapleton, Cadebye, Kyrkeby Malory, Peckleton, Raunſton, Oſbaſton.

Manerium de Deſford; ſcil', Cur' Halmot' dñe regine honoris Leiceſtr', parcell' ducatûs ſui Lancaſtr' ib̄m, eodem die & anno. The like courts were held the ſame year, Oct. 4, at the ſame place.

Courts were held 10 Apr. and 7 Oct. the ſame year at Sbulton. In the Viſus franciplegii are mentioned, Sbulton, Sapcott, Crofte, Thurleſton, Enderbye, Froleſworth, Blabye, Normanton Turvile, Counteſthorpe, Wheſton.

Viſus franciplegii, with like title as at Deſford, was held at Foxton Oct. 2, the ſame year; but no other town is mentioned in it.

Viſus franciplegii was held April 13, the ſame year, at Smeton; and on Oct. 3, at Mowſeley, where are mentioned, Mowſeley, Catthorpe, South Kylworth, Byteſwell, Knaptoſt, Walton juxta Kylmecott, Laughton, Willoughby Waterleſs, Thedingworth.

Another court was held about this time at Noſeley; where are mentioned, Noſeley, Humberſton, Stokerſton, Cranoe, Gloreſton, Weſt Langton, Eaſt Langton, Thorpe Langton, Thurneby, Staunton Wyvile, Shankton, Smeton, Ilſton, Carleton Curlew, and Wychingston.

Viſus franciplegii was held the ſame year, April 11, and Oct. 8, at Hinckley; in which are mentioned, Hinckley Borough, Hinckley Bond, Shenton, Wylmecott, Wytherley, Atterton, Upton, Higham, Wyken, Stoke, and Welleſborough.

At the ſame time and place was held Cur' Halmot'.

In what follows, the hand-writing is changed; as alſo the title of the county, this not being intituled "honoris Leiceſtrie," &c.; but by a roll 25 Hen. VIII. they are called "honoris Leyceſtrie."

Belgrave; viſus franciplegii in cur' dñe regine tent' ib̄m, Apr. 15, 3 Eliz. and 7 Oct. The names of the places are, Evington, Caym, Thurnby, Buſheby, Houghton, Onlip, Belgrave, Humberſton, Burſtall, Thurcaſton, Ingarſby.

Syleby; viſus franciplegii in cur' dñe regine 6 Oct. 3 Eliz', honoris Leyceſtr'. The names of the places are, Thorpe Hanker, Walton, Sylebye, Sholby, Burton, Preſtwold, Cotes, Wymeſwold, Hathern, Long Whatton, and Saxulby.

. . . . .thlee, in Foreſt' Leyc'. Cur' Wodomot' dñe regine, ten't' ib̄m 10 Oct. 3 Eliz. Places named; Deſford, Peculton, Enderby, Shilton, Norborough, Thurleſton, Huncote, Normanton Turvile, Braunſton, Brunkynſthorp, Glenfield, Kyrby, Baſſet Houſes, ...derycbe, Tolowe-park, Bardon-park, ...oſthorp, . . .all-park, ...tage, &c.

Foreſtarii de Deſford; Georgius Vincent, arm'; Joh̄es Turvile, arm'.

Cuſtodes Foreſte Leyceſtrie; Tho' Johns, gen', cuſtos de Baron-park; Will' Lobb, cuſtos de Hethlee-ward; Ric̄us Catõ, cuſtos de Hoore-lodge; Adrianus Smyth, cuſtos de Enderby walk; Walt' Dowdeſwell, deput' Georgii Vincent, arm', in Tolowe-park.

Bryntyngeſthorp, aliàs Bruntingsthorp. Viſus franciplegii, cum cur' dñe regine, tent' ib̄m 3 Nov. 3 Eliz. in Halſtern-gate. Places named, Braunſton-gate and Glenfield-ward.

Villa Leiceſtrie. Viſus franciplegii, cum cur' dñe regine ib̄m, tent' Oct. 25, Dec. 10, Dec. 12, Jan. 12, &c. 3 Eliz'.

Caſtr' Leic'; curia dñe regine honoris Leyceſtrie, parcell' ducatûs Lancaſtr', tent' ib̄m 11 Nov. 3 Eliz. coram Henrico comite Huntingdon', capitali ſeneſcallo honoris predicti, de tribus ſeptimanis ad tres ſeptimanas. Ric̄us Barker amotus eſt ab officio majoratûs villæ predictæ; in cujus loco Thomas Hallam electus eſt, & ſacramentum ſuum preſtitit, &c.

Nomina ballivorum ward'; Carleton, Belgrave, Shilton, Hinkley, Deſford, Glenfield; janitor caſtri.

I afterwards met with another roll, which was of 25 Hen. VIII; by which I mended what was defective in the former.

Sam. Carte.

27. Feoda Rogeri de Quincy, de Honore Leyceſtrie.

Willus de Farendon tenet quartam partem unius feodi in Farendon, co. Northampton.

Johannes Manſe tenet unam partem feodi in Hazelbeech; Euſtachia de Andon un' part' feodi in Spretton.

Henricus de Alneto tenet feodum unius militis in Maydford, cum duabus virgatis terre in Atteneſton.

Robertus de Plumpton tenet quartam partem unius feodi in Blaculfeleſleg [quod Blakeſley hodie.]

Radulphus de Sancto Amand', Galfridus de Faringho, Willus abbas & monachi Sancti Dionis, tenent unum feodum in Faringho.

Ric̄us Baſſe tenet in Wodeford unum feodum[1].

---

[1] Sir T. Cave, MS; from Bridges's MSS. vol. P. f. 99. 100; è libro vocato "Nomina Villarum, Feod' Militum in Scaccario."

28. Nomina Villarum omnium in Comitatu Leiceſtrie, infra Lancaſtrie Ducatûs Juriſdictionem, exiſtentium [1].

Anlep.
Appleby Magna & Parva.
Aſhby Magna.
Atterton.
Bagworth.
Barkby.
Belgrave.
Bildeſton, aliàs Bilſton.
Bitmeſwell.
Blaby.
Bramſton.
Braylesford.
Bredon.
Broughton.
Bruntingthorpe.
Burſtall.
Burton Overy.
Carleton.
Cateby.
Congeſton.
Coſſington.
Coſton.
Cotes.
Counteſthorp.
Cranhowe.
Croft.
Dalby Parva.
Desford.
Diſeworth.
Caſtle Donington.
Doniſthorp.
Edmondthorp.
Enderby.
Eſtwell.
Evington.
Foxton.
Froleſworth.
Glenfield.
Gloreſton.
Gunthorp.
Hallaton.
Harby.
Hardwick.
Hareſton.
Hathern.
Hedredby.
Hethley.
Higham.
Hinkley, cum dom' & hon'.
Hogs-norton.
Hoton.
Houghton.
Humberſton.
Ingwardby.
Kenelingworth South.
Kirkby Malory.
Knaptoft.
Langton Eaſt & Weſt; cum membris.
Laughton.
Leiceſtrie vill' & hon'; cum membris.
Leire.
Lillebourne.
Lockington.
Melbourne.
Mowſley.
Naylſton.
Newbold.
Newhall.
Newton ſuper Trent.
Normanton Overy.
Norton.
Nowſeley.
Onley.
Orleſton.
Orton ſuper Montem.
Overton Sauſey.
Peckleton & Pightilton.
Pinſton.
Preſtwold.
Quenborow.
Quinton.
Ravenſton.
Rereſby.
Sapcote.
Saxby.
Saxilby.
Segrave.
Seile Magna & Parva.
Shankton.
Shepey.
Shulton & Sheynton.
Sileby.
Smeton & Smetheton.
Snarkſton.
Somerby.
Stapleford.
Stapleton.
Staunton Harold; Wyvile.
Stoke by Aſton.
Sutton Langton.
Swanington.
Swebſton.
Sywoldby.
Thedingworth.
Thorneton.
Thorpe Edmere; juxta Lilbourne; Serlo.
Thurleſton.
Thurneby.
Tunge.
Twycroſs.
Upton.
Walton.
Weleby.
Welleſburgh, Wenleſberg.
Weſterby.
Wetherdley.
Whatton.
Wheſton.
Whitwick.
Wikinſton.
Willowby.
Winleſton.
Wither & Witherdale.
Worthington.
Wykyn.
Wymondeſwold.
Wymondham.

XVII. ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

P. 13. l. 59. r. "about 662."

P. 15. l. 28. r. "Te;" l. 54. "and the reliques."

P. 17. l. 15. r. "ſuburbs of Leiceſter."

P. 23. The records of the College of Arms ſupply this grant: "R. com' Mellenti omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglis ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam Deo & Sancte Marie Becci, & monachis, quoddam manerium in Angliâ, cum pertinentiis, quod vocatur Parva Meleburn. Et volo quòd monachi & tenentes ſui ſint quieti in perpetuum de omnibus ſectis & rebus aliis que mihi vel heredibus meis pertinent vel pertinere poſſunt. Prettereà dedi eis caſtellum meum de Cuttan, cum omnibus pertinentiis, qui eſt in Wilktellũ. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto, Waleranno, & Hugone, filiis meis; Gilberto de Eſmalevill, Odone Dapifero, Will' de Mlen', &c. [2]

Matilda counteſs of Mellent (wife to earl Robert the grandſon) gave to her couſin Alienora three acres and a furlong of land at Riedlatton in Cornwall [3].

P. 23. col. 2. The benefaction to the church of Lincoln, aſcribed to the firſt earl Robert, was the act of his ſon Robert Boſſu [4].

P. 39. Note, l. 1. r. "Statu*t*es of Clarendon."

P. 96. l. 66. r. "in the ſummer of 1205."

P. 97. Note 2. See more of this Aaron the Jew, in the Appendix, p. 38.

P. 219. Note, l. 4. r. "in recompenſationem."

P. 226. Note 5. The ſeals intended to have been given from the inquiſition taken at Syreſham are ſo far periſhed, that no trace of any figure remains.

P. 227, Note 1. Richard, the firſt of our kings who uſed lions in their arms, uſed two lions. King John, in right of Aquitaine, added a third. Edw. III. anno 13, quartered France, and took upon him the title of king thereof. Litt. Inſt. l. 1. § 1. part 7. a.

Appendix, p. 36. col. 4. l. 4. r. "Ga*n*gi."

P. 37. l. 12. r. "pi*ſ*cariam."

P. 39. col. 1. l. 47. r. "de*n*ario."

---

[1] Peck, MS; ex ſchedis quibuſdam MS. penès Robertum Norton, de Leiceſtriâ, generoſum.

[2] See the ſeal, Plate XIV, fig. 1. [3] See fig. 2. [4] See Appendix, p. 15; and other gifts of his, in Appendix, N° XIV. —"Robert Boſſu appointed one Malgerus, a religious monk, firſt prior of Luffield, co. Bucks, upon his founding that convent, which was founded in William Rufus's time, as Dr. Tanner mentions; for, our earl Robert's father did not die before 18 Hen I. and ſo could not ſucceed ſo ſoon to the title, but about the latter end of the reign of Henry I. 'But Regiſtrum de Duffield penès Decan. & Capit. Weſtm. fol. 1. a. ſays a William was firſt prior." Dugdale, Monaſt. I. 520; Willis, Mitred Abbeys, v. II p. 24.

Pl. XIV. p. 48.

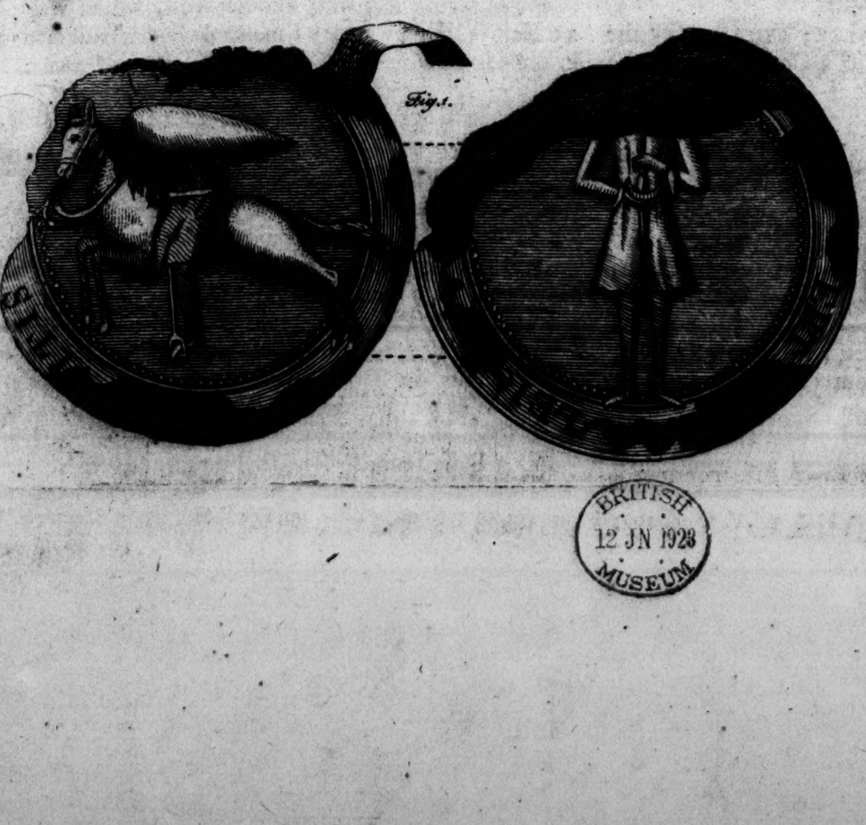

Fig. 1.

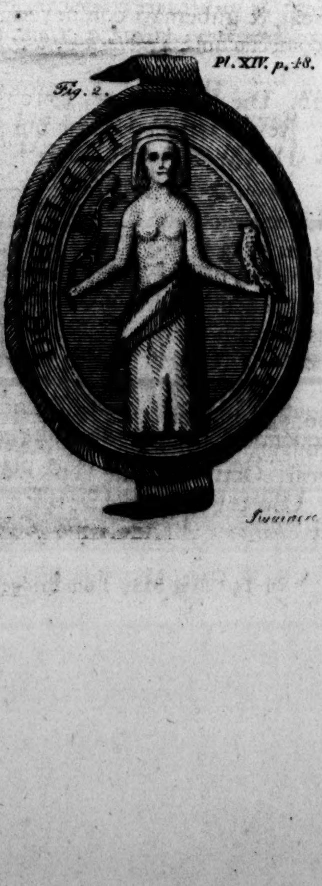

Fig. 2.

Swaine

BRITISH 12 JN 1928 MUSEUM

A BRIEF INDEX to the INTRODUCTORY VOLUME; to be canceled and enlarged hereafter.

Adeliza, lady of Brokeſborne, liii. 21.
Abrincis, Hugo de, liii.
Æthelfleda, her hiſtory, 14.
Aid explained, 215.
Albini, Nigel de, liii.
Albion the Great, 1.
Alceſter priory, App. 16.
Alderman of London, his office illuſtrated, 154.
Alfred's ſurvey, xxxiii.
Allodial tenure, 88.
Alſelin, Geoffrey, lii.
Alveva, counteſs, li.
Amicia, ſiſter and coheir to Fitz-parnell, 98, 99.
Ancillæ, xliii.
Anſtey, poſſeſſions there of Leiceſter abbey, cxl.
Antient demeſne, xxxiii. xxxviii. xli. l.
Aquila, Gilbert de, 97.
Armies of requiſition, agreeable to the Anglo-Saxon conſtitution, 193.
Arpenna, xlviii.
Arundel, Wm. de Albini earl of, 50.
Aſhby, George, on the Roman milliary, clv. 5.
Aſhmole, Elias, on Watling-ſtreet road, cli.
Aſtle, Thomas, *5; and ſee Preface.
Aubrey, earl, li.
Bacon, whence, xliii.
Badneighbour, William, 65.
Bale, John, 1.
Baronets of Leiceſterſhire, xlvi.
Barons, their original rank, 41.
Baths, Roman, 9.
Becket, Thomas, abp. of Canterbury, his hiſtory at large, 45—47. 48—68—his trial, 45—his foul murder, 68.
Bedford, Hugh Pauper earl of, 24.
Bellomonts, earls of Leiceſter, their pedigree, 98.
Bells in Goſcote hundred, cxxxix.
Beivoir priory, their poſſeſſions, cxl.
Bennet, bp. on Roman roads, cxlix.
Bevrere, Drogo de, liii.
Bickerſtaffe, William, *4, 5. 8.
Biſhops of Leiceſter, 12; App. p. 1.
——— in the early ages, frequently military men, 134.
Black Friers, Leiceſter, 11.
Blackſtone, ſir William, xxxv.
Blanchmaines, Robert. See Leiceſter.
Bocland hoſpital, App. 18.
Bohun, Engelger de, 65.
Bordarii, xliv.
Borlaſe, Dr. 2.
Boſſu, Robert de. See Leiceſter.
Bovate, xlviii.
Boughan, Henry earl of, App. 40.
Brackley hoſpital, App. 11.
Bradgate, ſuppoſed ſubterraneous paſſage to, 8.
Bray, William, on the Roman milliary, p. *5.
Brigg ſilver, eſtabliſhed, 23—aboliſhed, App. 38.
Britain, origin of, 2.
Broce, xliii.
Buci, Robert de, lii.
Buenvaleth, William, lii.
Burdett family, its antiquity, xlvi.
Burghs and cities illuſtrated, xxxvii. 112.
——— the queſtion when firſt repreſented examined, 198.
Buſli, Roger de, lii.
Cadurcis, Patrick de, App. 31.
Cair Lerion, 3. *5. 8.
Cambrai, Geoffrey de, lii.
Camden, William, 2, 3.
Camerarius, Humphrey, liii.
Camit, Ralph, xlvi.
Canterbury, archbiſhop of; ſee Becket.
Carte, Samuel, vicar of St. Martin's, 9.
——————— the ſolicitor, 8.
Caruca, xlvii.
Carucage, 217.
Carucata, xlvii.
Cateſby nunnery, cxlii. cxliii.
Catharine, queen dowager, her dowry-lands, &c. in Leiceſterſhire, cxlv.
Cave, ſir Charles. See Preface.
—— ſir Thomas. See Preface.
Chamberlain, Humphrey, xlvi.
Charitable benefactions, 1—134.
Cherry Orchard, Leiceſter, a Roman pavement found there, 12.
Cheſter, Norman earls of, 18.
——— other earls of, 219.
——— Hugh earl of, charters from, App. 39.
——— Ranulf earl of, his agreement with the earl of Leiceſter, 26; App. 12—charter by, 39.
Chicheſter, biſhop of, 49.
Coickſand nunnery, cxlii.
Cities; ſee Burghs.
Cioches, Guntrid de, lii.
Clarendon, great council there, how compoſed, 41.
Clergy, which of them, and why, ſummoned to the great council of the nation, 41.
Coins, Roman, found at Leiceſter, *5. 11.
——— Saxon, minted there, xlii.
Coliberti, xliii.
Colſins, Richard, 9.
Commune, commons of England; an aſſembly under that name exiſted in the reigns of William I. and Henry III. 149.
Communitates bacheleriæ Angliæ, 163.
Complaint of the commons, liv.
Comprovincials explained, 170.
Conſtitution of the realm violated, 143.
Conſuetudo, xxxvii.
Coſton, lands there ſurrendered to the king, cxli.
Coventry abbey, li.
Council, the king's, illuſtrated, 103.
Counties, each formerly a diſtinct principality, 173.
Coutance, Geoffey biſhop of, li.
Crabbe, George; ſee Preface.
Credun, Wido de, lii.
Cromwell, Oliver, his ſurvey, l.
Croyland abbey, li.
Cunſton, tenure of, xli.
Cypariſſus, ſtory of, 10.
Danegeld, xxxiv. 15.
Danes, their ravages, 15.
De L'Iſle, William, ſhire-reeve of Northampton, his extortions, 136.
Derby, Robert de Ferrers, earl of, fined an enormous ſum, 211.
——— honour of, granted to Edmund earl of Lancaſter, App. 41.
Diana, ſtory of, 9.
Diſpenſer, Robert, lii.
Dome-books, formerly frequent, xxxiii.
Domesday-book, with a Tranſlation, i—xxx—Diſſertation on, xxxi—lii—complaint in parliament relative to, xxxiii. liv.
Ducarel, Dr. 8.
Dyxley grange, inventory of goods, cxxxix.
Ecclſia, xl.
Earls, their original rank, 41.
Edmund Crouchback, earl of Lancaſter and Leiceſter, his hiſtory, 221.
Edric, earl of Leiceſter, 17.
Edward the Confeſſor's ſurvey, xxxiv.
——— I, king, character of in his youth, 141—his grant to Alceſter, App. 18.
——— II. directed a ſurvey, xlix.
——— III, exemplification, App. 18.
———— grants by, 44, 45.
——— IV, king, grant by, App. 46.
Eleemoſinarii Regis, xl. li.
Engliſh Hiſtory, a remarkable epoch in, 143.
Erneſbie manor, cxli.
Eſquires, what originally, 65.
Ethelbert's ſurvey, xxxiii.
Eveſham, inquiſitions taken after the battle of, App. 35.
Exeter, John Beaufort, duke of, 243—his will, ib.
———, Bartholomew biſhop of, 50.
Extenta manerii, 4 Edw. I. xlix.
Farmer, Dr. *5; and ſee Preface.
Fee-farm rents, 1673, cxlv—in the honour of Leiceſter, 1705, cxlvi.
~~Ferrariis, Henry~~ de, lii.
Feudal law, its inveſtigation a grand deſideratum in literature, 88.
——— tenures, 88.
Fitz Hubert, Ralph, lii.
Fitz Parnell, Robert. See Leiceſter.
Framen, Ralph, xlvi.
Francigenæ, xlvi.
Freeholders, an honourable appellation, 170.
Gale, Roger, on Roman roads, cl.
Garland, Benjamin, 9.
Gavel-pence eſtabliſhed, 22—aboliſhed, App. 38.
Gaufridus Faber, 97.
Gaunt, Gilbert de. liii.
Geoffrey of Monmouth, 2. 8.
Geldum, xxxv.
Gerendon abbey, inventory of goods, cxxxviii.
Gilpin, Mr. a remark by, 10.
Girbert, liii.
Glen Magna, App. 18.
Godiva, counteſs. See Leiceſter.
Gough, Richard. See Preface.
Graceaieu, ſale of, cxxxix.
Grenteſmainell, Hugo de, lii; his property at Leiceſter, 17—his hiſtory, 20—pedigree, 21.
——————— Yvo de, hiſtory of, 21.
Groſſeteſte, Robert, bp. of Lincoln, his character, 172.
Harding's Chronicle, 2.
Harwold nunnery, cxlii.
Henry II, king, hiſtory of his reign, 30, & ſeqq.—motives for raiſing Becket to the primacy, 34—cauſes of their differing, 37—coronation of his ſon, 59—his penance, 75—his death and character, 86, 87—his grant to Lira, App. 10—to Alceſter, 18.
——— III. king, a tract of his diſpoſition, 115—his character, 143, 144.
——— IV, king, memoirs of, 247.
——— VIII. ſurvey in his reign, xlix.
Hereford, earls of, 25, 26.
Hidage, 41. 46.
Hide, xlvi. xlvii.
High juſtice, the office not hereditary, 31.
High ſtewards of England, 16. 20. App. 5—liſt of, App. 7.
Hokeday, 129.
Hely Bones, 5.
Homines, xlii.
Homines comitis de Mellent, liv.
Horngelt, 130.

Hoſtiarius, Robert, lii.
Humberſtone-gate, *5.
Hume, his opinion of king Henry II. 86—of lord Lyttelton's Hiſtory, 87.
Huncote, a banditti of robbers condemned there, 25.
Hundreds, xliii.
Huntingdon, Henry, earl of, *4
Iveri, Roger de, a Norman ſoldier, 21.
James, St. chapel, 4.
Janus's Temple, 7.
Jewry-wall, 5—whence the name, 7.
Jews, their frequent oppreſſion, 129—not permitted to continue in Leiceſter, App. 38.
Inhabitants, number of in Leiceſterſhire at the Conqueſt and ſince, xlviii.
John, king, his charters to the town of Leiceſter, 97—his grant to Gilbert de Aquila, ib.—reſided at Leiceſter before he became king, 104——his character, 144.
John of Gaunt. See Lancaſter.
Judith the counteſs, liii.
Kirkby Beler priory, inventory of goods, cxxxviii—poſſeſſions, cxl.
Kiſſing, a faſhion at receiving maſs, and in acts of homage, 57—not lawful to kiſs an excommunicated perſon, 16.
Knights, what originally, 65.
——— of Leiceſterſhire, temp. Edw. I. & II. xliii—xlv.
——— of the Garter, xlv.
——— intended, of Royal Oak, *xlvii.
Knights' fees in Leiceſterſhire, ciii——cxxvii—of the honour of Winton, cxxxv—of the honour of Leiceſter, 234.
Lacy, Richard de, an auxiliary high juſtice, 54.
Lancaſter, earldom and dutchy, illuſtration of their hiſtory, App. 19 & ſeqq.
Lancaſter, Edmund earl of, his hiſtory, 221; various grants to, App. 19 & ſeqq.
——— Thomas earl of [" cheif de conſeil le Roy"], 222—expences of his houſehold, 223—earl alſo of Leiceſter, ibid.; grants by, App. 43.
——— Henry earl of, 225. App. 32.
——— Henry duke of, 227. App. 32.
——— John of Gaunt duke of, hiſtory of, 235—will, 240—review of his life and character, 244—246.
Langley nunnery, inventory of goods, cxxxix.
Langton, William de, 97.
Lee, William, 4.
LEICESTER, coins minted at, xli—when firſt peopled, 1—its original name, 2—fabulous ſtory of king Leir, 2—its ſtate under the Romans, 4—veſtiges of their reſidence. 4—tradition of a ſubterraneous paſſage to Bradgate, 8—Roman pavements, 9, 10—coins, ſewers, &c. *5. 11—hiſtory of Leiceſter under the Saxons, 12. 15—under the Danes, 15——Saxon earls of, 16. 18—trial by battle aboliſhed there, and a jury introduced, ib.—Gavel-pence, when and why paid, ib.—burgeſſes permitted to purchaſe wood from the earl's foreſt at an eaſy rate on paying brigg-ſilver, 23—relieved by Robert earl Fitz Parnell from ſeveral tolls, 97—the firſt alderman that occurs among their records, ib.—two charters granted them by king John, ib.—William de Langton had a carucate of land in the ſuburb, and Richard le Burges a meſſuage there, ib.—grants to the town to the two Montforts, 38.
——— Honour of, grants relative to it, App. 20. 42. 47.
——— Leofric, earl of, 16.
——— Godiva, counteſs of, li. 17.
——— Edric, earl of, 17.
Leiceſter, Robert de Bellomont earl of, 1107—1118, 22, 23. See Mellent.
——— Robert le Boſſu earl of, 1118—1169, his hiſtory at large, 24—48. 68—created earl of Hereford, 25—his agreement with Ranulf earl of Cheſter, 26; App. 12—high juſticiary of England under Henry II. 30—his religious foundations and charitable benefactions, 47——his ſpeech to the king concerning Becket, 65—his grant to Lira, App. 10—to Brackley, 11.
——— Robert Blanchmaines, earl of, 1169—1190, his hiſtory at large, 67—90—his death, 89—grants to Lira, App. 10—to Brackley, 11—his grant to Nuneaton, App. 15—to St. Dennis near Southhampton, 58.
——— William, earl of, 232.
——— Petronell, counteſs of 89——her fine for obtaining the honour of Grenteſmainell, 90—her death and character, 86—her grant to Lira, App. 10.
——— Robert, Fitz Parnell, earl of 1190—1214, his hiſtory at large, 91—98—his releaſe of ſeveral tolls to the burgeſſes of Leiceſter, 97—his grants to William de Langton and to Geffrey the Smith, ib.
——— Loretta, counteſs of, 98—grant to Bocland, App. 18.
——— Simon de Montfort I, earl of, 1204—1218, his hiſtory at large, 99—103—killed in battle, 104—his character, 105—his grant to the town of Leiceſter, App. 38.
——— Simon de Montfort II, earl of, 1226—1265, his hiſtory at large, 105—212—his death and epitaph, 208—his grants to the town of Leiceſter, App. 38.
——— Edmund, earl of, and his ſucceſſors. See Lancaſter.
Leiceſter abbey, ſome part of their poſſeſſions, cxl—ſtate of, cxlii. cxliii.
Leiceſter foreſt, Hereſwode, large and full of wood, 22.
LEICESTERSHIRE churches, roll of, 1344, lxiii—taxation of, lxx——abbeys and priories poſſeſſing them, lxxvii—which of them, and how, appropriated, lxxviii—their value in 1534, lxxix—ſtate of in 1564, lxxxv—exempt juriſdictions, lxxxviii—rectors that ought to pay penſions to the biſhops, ib.—endowments of vicarages, xcix—towns within its juriſdiction, 48.
LEICESTERSHIRE knights, xliii—baronets, xlvi—lord mayors, ib.—ſurvey of in 1650, xcvi.—taxation of, 1445, lxxxix—freeholders, xcii——knights' fees, ciii—military tenures, cxxvii—tenants in capite, cxxxi—collection for Proteſtants in Piedmont, 1655, cxliv—fee-farm rents, 1673, cxlv—rivers and navigations, clix—clxxii—plants, clxxiii—cxc—charitable benefactions in the whole county, 1—134.
Leiceſtria ſubterranea, 11.
Leir, king, his fabulous hiſtory, 2.
Leman, Thomas, on Roman roads, cxlvii.
Leofric, earl. See Leiceſter.
Leuca, xlviii.
Lhuyd, Humphrey, 2.
Liberi & legales homines, 77.
Libra, xxxix.
Libres homes, 88.
Lincoln, biſhop of, Leiceſter originally his ſee, App. p. 1; his poſſeſſions in Leiceſterſhire at the Conqueſt, 19, 20—in 1138, 23.
——— Remigius, biſhop of, li.—Hugh biſhop of, lv—Hugh Wells, biſhop of, ib.
——— Henry de Lacy earl of, App. 32.
Lira, abbey of, its hiſtory, and poſſeſſions in theſe kingdoms, App. 8; liſts of abbots, 9.
London, citizens of, formerly ſtyled Barons, 128—an antient manor of the king, 154—paid a large annual rent for the privilege of chooſing their own ſheriff and portreeve, 174—two citizens incloſed in an iron cage, 189—the lord mayor repreſented the city in the grand council of the realm, 191—his name ſtands at the head of the baronage of England in the Magna Charta, ib.
Lord Mayors of London, natives of Leiceſterſhire, xlvi.
Lord's Place at Leiceſter, *4.
Loretta, counteſs. See Leiceſter.
Loveth, William, lii.
Luffeld, App. 16.
Lyttelton, lord, his Hiſtory examined, 30—characterized, 87.
Maino the Briton, liii.
Malet, Durandus, liii.
Manors, tenures of ſeveral, cxxxiv.
——— of the crown, their alienation guarded againſt, 158.
Manſio, xliv. xlvi.
Margaret, ſiſter and coheir to Fitz-Parnell, 98.
Matriculus of the Archdeaconry of Leiceſter in 1220, lv.
Matilda, queen, li.
Maud, the empreſs, her grant of the earldom of Hereford to Milo earl of Glouceſter, 26.
Mellent, Waleran earl of, 23, 24; App. 37.
——— Robert de Bellomont, earl of, lii. 22—earl alſo of Leiceſter, ib.—his hiſtory and character, 22, 23—rebuilt and endowed the church of St. Mary de Caſtro, 22—inſtituted a trial by jury at Leiceſter in lieu of trial by battle, ib.—eſtabliſhed gavelpence, ibid.—granted liberty to the burgeſſes to fetch wood from his foreſt, ib.—the origin of briggſilver, 23—his deſcendants, 98—grants by, App. 37. 48.
——— Robert the younger, earl of, 24; App. 37.
——— Matilda counteſs of, a grant by, App. 48.
Mercia, kings of, 12—dukes or earls of, 14.
Milice, 79.
Military tenures, cxxvii.
Milliary, Roman, cliv. clv. 5.
Mills, xlviii.
Montfort, houſe of, one of the moſt illuſtrious in France, 99—the pedigree of the family, 212.
——— Simon I. and II. See Leiceſter.
——— Amauri de, count of Tholouſe, claimed the earldom of Leiceſter, 1218—1226, 105—his elegant addreſs to king Henry III. ib.—relinquiſhes the earldom, ib. App. 41.
——— Alienora counteſs of, her character, 209.
——— Henry de, grant of, App. 38.
——— Amicia de, her grant to Lira, App. 10.
Mortemer, Ralph de, lii.
Morton, Dr. xlviii.
Mounſey, William; ſee Preface.
Mountſorell caſtle, 26.
Muſard, Hugo, xlvi.
Nativi, xlv.
Navigations in Leiceſterſhire, clix.
Neifes, xlv.
Nennius, 2. *5.
Newark college at Leiceſter, cxlii. cxlvii.
Nobility explained, 110. 213.
Normans, value of their lands, ci.
Nuneaton abbey, App. 15.
Oger the Briton, liii.
Old Work, 5.

Ora, xxxix.
Ouſton abbey, inventory of goods, cxxxvii—their poſſeſſions, cxl—an agreement of an abbot, 18.
Outheby, Thomas de, App. 40.
Oxgang, xlviii.
Parliaments, early, how compoſed, 135 145. 149. 172, 173. 198.
Pavement, Roman, near All Saints church, 9—in the Black Friers, 11—in the Cherry Orchard, 12.
Pboceſtan, Adam, xlvi.
Peck, Francis, 9; and ſee Preface.
Pecunia, xxxix.
Pegge, Dr. on the Foſs road, cli—his diſſertation on the biſhops of Leiceſter, App. 1; and ſee Preface.
Perron, James Davy du, App. 10.
Pertica, xlviii.
Peterborough abbey, li.
Peverel, William, lii.
Phipps, alderman, *4.
Piedmont Proteſtants, money collected for, cxliv.
Pincerna, R. de, founded Alceſter priory, App. 16.
Pipin, Ralph, xlvi.
Plants, liſt of thoſe growing near Leiceſter, clxxiii—cxc.
Plungar, Richard de, 97.
Population, progreſs of, xlviii.
Preaux priory, App. 12.
Pridden, John; ſee Preface.
Pulteney, Dr. his liſt of plants, clxxiii; and ſee Preface.
Quarentena, xlviii.
Radcheniſtres, xxxvii. xlvi.
Radmanni, xliv.
Raſpe, Mr. xlviii.
Ratæ Coritanorum, 4. *5.
Ratby, camp, 4. *4. (See Plate VI.)
Ravenſton caſtle, 26.
Rawdikes, meaſurement of, 4.
Reed, John Watſon, 223.
Reed, Iſaac; ſee Preface.
Renbudcurt, Wido de, lii.
Reynolds, Thomas, on the Foſs and Gartre roads, cliv—on the Roman milliary, ib. 5.
Reynolds, William, *4.
Richard Cœur de Lion, his valour, 84.
Richard I, king, his character, 144.
——— II, king, grant by, App. 46.
Rivers in Leiceſterſhire, clix.
Robert of Glouceſter, xxxiv.
Roberts, Thomas, 4.
Roman roads and ſtations in Leiceſterſhire, cxlvii—cliv.
Roſs, John-Dawes, *4.
Ruſſell, N. Sambrook; ſee Preface.
Sac, xlvi.
Saliſbury, Roger biſhop of, 30.
Sauvey-gate, *5.
Scoteney, Walter de, 161.
Semivirgatarii, xlviii.
Sens, William archbiſhop of, 58.
Servi, xliii.
Servientes Regis, liii.
Shire-reeves, their origin, 42. 88——their dignity, 173—antiently elected in the county-court, a privilege ſtill preſerved in London, 174.
Sidnaceſter, ſee of, 13; App. p. 1.
Soc, xlvi.
Socmanni, xlvi.
Somerſet, John Beaufort earl of, 243.
Southgate, Richard, on Saxon coins, xli; and ſee the Preface.
St. Andrew's, Roger abp. of, 90.
———— priory, Northampton, cxlii.
St. Ebrulf's abbey, App. 13.
St. Mary de Caſtro, a church before the Conqueſt, 19—rebuilt, or materially repaired, by Robert de Bellomont, 22—its endowments, ib.
Staveley, Thomas, 3; and ſee the Preface.
Staunton ſubtùs Bardon, lands ſold, cxli.
Stephen, king, his grant of the earldom of Hereford to Robert le Boſſu, 25—his character, 29—grant to Alceſter priory, App. 17.
Stretton Magna, chantry, App. 18.
Stukeley, Dr. *5; App. 3.
Surnames at the Conqueſt, xlvi.
Swinford, Catharine, her hiſtory, 239—epitaph, 242.
Tenements, 81.
TESTA DE NEVILL, xlvii.
Tenants in capite, cxxxi.
Teini, xlii.
Thanes, xlii.
The Pingle, 8.
Throſby, John, on the Foſs road, clii on the Rawdykes, *4—on the Jewry Wall, 7.
Tithes, at the Norman ſurvey, xl.
Todeni, Robert de, lii.
Tournaments, a favourite ſport with the early Engliſh nobility, 163.
Tutbury priory, cxli.
Vaſſals explained, 77.
Veci, Robert de, lii.
Villæ and Villatæ, what, xliv. xlv.
Villani, xlv.
Virgatarii, xlviii.
Virgate, xlviii.
Ulveſcroft abbey, cxli—recommended to the king's protection, cxliii.
Uncia, xxxix.
Uſher, Robert, xlvi.
Wapentakes, xliii.
Welford, a carved date there, lii.
Wery Wall, 5.
Whitaker, John, 2.
William the Firſt, his character, l. 144—his grant to St. Ebrulf, App. 13.
Wincheſter, Sayer de Quenci, earl of, his fine to the king for the whole honour of Grenteſmainell, 97. 212—grant by, App. 39, 40.
————, Margaret de Quenci, counteſs of, grants by, App. 40.
———— Roger de Quenci, knight, earl of, grant by, App. 40—his fees, 47.
———— Henry Beaufort cardinal of, 240.
Wirce, Geoffrey de, lii.
Witewyke caſtle, 26.
Worceſter, Waleran earl of, 24; App. p. 37.
York, abp. of, l. 49.

P. 94. b. l. 9. r. " Flemings."
P. 98. notes, l. 15. r. " probably nearly of the ſame age."
P. 105. l. 29. r. " hoſtis."
Ib. l. 45. r. " comes."

BRITISH
12 JN 1928
MUSEUM

~~LR 53 d 1.~~

~~655. h. 6~~

~~N.L. 25. d.~~
2065. e.

THE

HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

COUNTY OF LEICESTER.

By JOHN NICHOLS, F.S.A.

VOLUME I. PART II.

CONTAINING A CONTINUATION OF

THE HISTORY OF THE TOWN OF LEICESTER:

INCLUDING AN ACCOUNT OF ITS RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS, PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS, AND PAROCHIAL HISTORY.

WITH

ANNALS OF THAT ANTIENT BOROUGH;

CONSISTING OF ORIGINAL CHARTERS, AUTHENTIC CORPORATION RECORDS, AND MISCELLANEOUS EVENTS, DIGESTED ACCORDING TO THE SERIES OF TIME.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

GENERAL INDEXES TO THE WHOLE WORK;

WITH

AN APPENDIX OF ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY AND FOR NICHOLS, SON, AND BENTLEY, RED LION PASSAGE, FLEET STREET.
1815.

PREFATORY ADVERTISEMENT.

I HAVE now the pleasure of presenting to the Publick my last labours on the "History and Antiquities of Leicestershire."

Having nearly worn out my eyes in the service of the County, I was under the absolute necessity of seeking for aid in compiling the General Indexes; and I consider myself fortunate in having met with such able Assistants.

Well knowing the Abilities and Industry of my Friend and late Apprentice Mr. JOSEPH STRUTT, I had great satisfaction in confiding the Index to his care; but more important engagements compelled him to relinquish it after COMPLETING THE FIRST VOLUME. I cannot communicate his ideas on the plan he adopted more appropriately, than in a Letter which he wrote to me on the subject:

"WORTHY SIR, December 22, 1813.

"I have at length the satisfaction to announce to you, that my labour in compiling the Index to your First Volume has been crowned with the former part of that issue which I had hardly the hope to look forward to, namely, that of being spared to put the finishing stroke to the task, and that, too, as you have kindly declared to me, unto your satisfaction: And herewith I transmit once more to you the last portion of manuscript, having revised it, and made such amendments therein as you were pleased to indicate as requiring correction. The latter period of my labour is still in reversion; I mean, the confirmatory approbation of your candid Readers; this I anxiously look forward to, humbly trusting that my endeavours will not pass altogether unacknowledged.

"Perhaps, Sir, it may be expedient to offer some apology or explanation to yourself and to your readers as to the voluminous extent which my Index has attained. It is observable, that (except in the two hundred pages comprising the histories of the Earls of Leicester) far the larger portion of this First Volume, in the Town-annals especially, is occupied with minor notices relative to numerous personages and matters, classed chronologically where the series is continuous, as in the said Annals; and here alone might have been found materials sufficient for a chronological index; but oftentimes these notices are widely dispersed, and introduced incidentally: so that the personal and alphabetical arrangement cannot be much less copious as to quantity and wording, than the original passages referred to: indeed, in this transfer of order from chronological to alphabetical, the latter will require considerably more language to express particulars than the former, where the matters following each other in one paragraph, or at one view, one general head or wording serves for the whole: which will require to be repeated to each, when disorganized and renewed alphabetically. And in order, in some measure, to atone for this necessary length of repetition, it seemed that the introduction of some new memoranda, besides the additions and corrections which might occur, would be no unpleasing relief to the reader: I have therefore, where opportunity served, given explanations of ambiguous terms and antiquated usages, when the passage of text referred to had no note of illustration subjoined (for many of which explanations I am indebted to that useful work, Cowel's Interpreter); and these appeared to me the more desirable, as I look upon this Introductory Volume as the clavis, by which the portal into the subsequent portions of this Work is to be opened, and also as the grand depôt where prolegomena of every denomination, as well as explications of antient usages, should be largely collected, and the rather, for the reader's convenience, that, these explanations being given once for all, he may not be troubled to turn over page after page of successive Volumes in quest of desired information, and, after all, perhaps, meet with little to gratify his wishes:—I mean that, in the parochial collections for this County, each particular place (with a few restrictions) has its tenures, usages, customs, &c. mutatis mutandis, in conformity with its neighbour-place: under which, then, of these places should these explanatory notices be placed so conveniently, to avoid repetition (not easy to be avoided in a Work of such magnitude as the present), as in an introductory volume, in a common-place order?

"If any real apology on my part be requisite, it is, Sir, that, in two or three instances, I have given a turn of badinage to a pleasant occurrence,—but never at the expence of truth; again, in requital, on a few subjects I have launched into digressions with the gravity of a philosopher or a preacher (saving the lack of eloquence;) and, once in particular, I have forced a reference, or rather an article of references, in order to exhibit fairly the (much controverted) character of the great EARL OF LEICESTER*. As to my observations under the word Ruled Bible, I trust, Sir, to you, as a Father and Patron of Literature, they will not be found altogether unacceptable; and that your readers will be pleased not to consider them as too intrusive.

"As to the plan of the Index, and an explication of the abridged terms and characters employed therein, I inclose a schedule of remarks thereon; and will be obliged to you, if you will subjoin it to your prefatory observations.

"I cannot but repeat what I mentioned at the commencement of this Letter, that it is one source of great satisfaction to myself, that what I have been enabled and spared to execute and finish, has attained your approbation. Believe me, Sir, since first I entered upon the task, I have enjoyed but few moments free from bodily pain. Often, in the midst of my labours, have I looked forward with an almost desponding glance, at the portion of the Volume which still remained unexamined; then would I revert to the piles of rough-draught manuscript already travelled through, and scarcely a transitory hope

---

* See the article Hero, in the General Index.

whispered in my ear, that it would be my task to fit them for the public inspection: but a good and beneficent Providence has been pleased to guide me to the end of this toilsome journey, and still I can look up to Heaven with gratitude for sparing mercies to myself and my numerous family. A recollection, too, of my obligations to you, Sir, which so many years have been increasing, inspirited me with much energy towards accomplishing my task:—and in presenting it in the whole to you, I feel it a duty incumbent on me, as well as a mark of becoming gratitude, to acknowledge myself,

Worthy Sir,
Your ever dutiful, greatly obliged, and grateful Servant,
Joseph Strutt."

Explanatory Hints relative to some peculiarities of method adopted in compiling the double Index to the First Volume.

By way of previous remark, it will not be amiss to examine cursorily with the reader the principal heads or grand divisions under which the subject-matter of this Volume is comprehended; because each of these divisions has its distinct mode of paging, and will be found so distinguished in the Indexes.

The parts, then, of the Work, are chiefly four: viz. 1. The prolegomena: 2. The Tables of Benefactions: 3. The Subject-matter of the Volume; i. e. The History of the Town of Leicester, including Memoirs of its Earls: and, 4. An Appendix, preserving the Charters and other documents which could not with propriety have broken a continuous narrative in the body of the work.

The pages of the prolegomena are marked by the numerical letters, i, ii, iii, iv, &c.; so are they in the Index: now, these run on uninterruptedly till p. liv, where the Dissertation on the Domesday-book closes; and then follows a series of 24 (unpaged) pages, Conspectus Tabellaris Leicestriæ. The paging then takes a retrograde course to xli; so that there is a double series from xli. to liv: and, in order to distinguish the latter from the former, the interposed pages are included in [ ] brackets: this too is complied with, in the Index. Again; the Tables of Benefactions are indicated by arithmetical figures; as is the whole of the subject-matter of the Volume; only, as the series of paging is renewed in each of these parts of the Work, the pages of the former are, for distinction-sake, included in brackets, both in the body of the Work, and in the Index. The pages of the Appendix have the abridged word App. prefixed to them.

One other peculiarity of paging, common both to the Work and the Index, is that of marking the pages with an asterisk; as xlvii*, 5*, &c.; signifying their interposition, and the places where they are to be inserted.

The pages of reference inclosed within ( ) the parenthetical character, relate solely to the method of the Index, independently of any correspondent distinction in the body of the Work: and it may be necessary to explain this peculiarity somewhat at large to the reader, and to adduce an example by way of illustration.—It is obvious, that, in a work of the miscellaneous kind as is the present, many incidental matters present themselves in such a way, that, were they to be analysed in the progressive order of the pages, and so laid before the reader, it would indeed seem an assemblage of anachronisms, an incongruous jumble; as, oftentimes, the first notice we have of a person is by means of an occurrence which, in an Index, should claim the last place. The second Simon de Montfort, for instance, whose memoir occupies upwards of a hundred pages in this Volume, is first introduced to the reader's notice by his having banished the Jews from Leicester: this is told incidentally: that is, the subject under consideration is the Jewry-wall; and this, again, occurs nearly a hundred pages before the memoir of the said Simon commences, and in the course of the memoir is again noticed, as also in the Appendix.—Farther, this Earl's funeral is spoken of, p. 107, at the very outset of his memoir: whereas p. 208, his death, the incidents previous thereto, and the consequences thereof, are stated at large; and thither I have deferred the anticipated notice, inclosing it in a parenthesis, and subjoining it to its proper place of connexion.

In a word, the parenthetically-included pages of reference may with propriety be denominated retrospective references; which term, and the above and subsequent example, may perhaps suffice to give the reader a clear insight into the method of analysis proposed and adopted by the compiler throughout: it has been his aim to trace events regularly, though the order of pages be not progressive: yet that, probably, is of small moment, if the notice sought be shewn by a correct reference.

So, Peter (Aigleblanche) is mentioned as dead, p. 127: he appears on the stage of action, pp. 130, 132, &c. &c. The notice of his death, inhumation, &c. is reserved for the end of the article in a parenthesis.——On a like account, the three references are subjoined to the article William Earl of Ferrers.

Sometimes, but rarely, the parenthesis looks forward; as may be seen in the article of Leicester Town. The grand idea suggested for the employment of this distinctive character, whether prospective or retrograde, is to concentrate in the most suitable and concinnous place all discrepant as well as (for an analytical assemblage) disorganized particulars.

The figures, then, included in a parenthesis, will be found to be smaller numbers following larger ones: and suitable harmony of matters in progressive dependence on each other is the result.

Now, as the parenthesis serves as a retrospective guide, the reader may be conducted progressively to repeated matters by a series of figures separated from each other by a semicolon: the substance of each article is compressed into one head, and any essential differences of statement are brought under one view; the figures following the whole, as just noticed.

Sometimes expletive words, various readings of the same name, corrective exceptions, illustrative comparisons, parallel passages diversely stated, and supplementary memoranda, all, however, amended or deducible from the Work itself, will be found comprehended under the parenthesis.—The articles included in brackets, and, where of any length, marked by the antient useful character ¶, are such, for the most part, as the Compiler has been enabled to supply without reference to the Volume itself.

In the Index of Names, the word sir printed in italicks, as after Pexale, Pycsale, Raynes, &c. shews those gentlemen to have been of the Clergy; as is mentioned under the article Sir, in the General Index.

Where the reader is referred from one passage to another for information, the precise word for his consultation is shewn in the italic type, or, if it be an article of larger importance, in the small-capital character: for it does happen that, in referring to a person for instance, there may be others of a similar surname, so that the distinguishing Christian-name is requisite to be set down also. Thus, under "Burton, John de;" this direction is given: "see John de Knighton;" and, in the next line, after William Burton, it is said, "see Richard Elvet." The particular words Elvet and Knighton, are those to which the reader must look. Again; under Otho, the reference stands thus; "see Henry Grismond, duke of Lancaster;" where Grismond determines the reference.

Concerning the unavoidable bulk of this Compilation, an apology has been offered, or at least an explanation of the reason and necessity thereof has been adduced, in the letter inclosing this schedule of remarks. To surmount this inconvenience as far as possible, it has been contrived to bring each article within the compass of a single paragraph;—not, as is usual in indexes, to make each reference a distinct paragraph, or break-line, subordinate to its leading word. That each reference may stand clear without discontinuance of the line, a small dash closes the sentence, and fresh matter of reference is immediately annexed; and, when greater distinction is requisite, a somewhat larger or double dash is used. By this contrivance, and that of the prospective semicolon and retrospective parenthetical reference spoken of above, (if the Reader will be pleased to consult one of the longer articles of this Index, he will readily perceive that,) great acquisition of space has been retrieved.

It is trusted that the interchanged classification of names and titles, and of titles and names, which vice versâ will be found in this double Index, is an arrangement not entirely without its advantage. For instance; in the Index of Names, we have Bellomont, the first Norman earl of Leicester, noticed by his family-name; whence the Reader is directed to the word LEICESTER, where, under the earls of that title, all the references where the said earl Bellomont occurs, are shewn. So of Le Bossu his son, and of Blanchmaines his grandson; each of whom is, in like manner, under his several name, referred to the same titular appellation in this Index. That is, in one word; in the Index of Names, under the several titles of nobility, every personage will be found ranged by his patronymic appellation according to the order of his succession to the title and dignity set above his name. But, in the General Index, this method is reversed: for, under the patronymicks, the titles also being annexed, the several matters of reference are collected. It is obvious that, if all the Earls of Leicester had been set down, in the General Index, under the word Leicester, it would have incumbered the word too much; there being perhaps no fewer than thirty of the said Earls, besides the accumulation of local matters which fall under that word. By consulting the Index of Names, all the Earls of Leicester will be found at one view, and the order of seniority determines the arrangement of their names. So of the other noble persons mentioned in this History.

Another remark.—It has been already suggested, that the notices selected for the compilation of the analysis do not lie in the Volume accommodated for that purpose. A person's epitaph may first occur perhaps; then we find him elected mayor probably; then we find him a benefactor to some charitable institution, &c. &c. To preserve greater harmony, it has been my endeavour to get a good starting-place for each article, so as to lead the Reader forward in due method. With the mayors of Leicester, for instance, and other town-officers, I begin with their election; and the vicars are commenced with their induction: for it must be observed, that these gentlemen are afterwards frequently styled from their respective offices, as their actions spring from the execution of the same. An epitaph may declare a man to have been twice mayor of Leicester; but it is my wish to exhibit the time of his election, &c. By thus conducting the Reader as it were to the fountain-head, one grand desideratum is acquired; namely, a date, (of which, in many places of this History, there is a great dearth;) by knowing whenabout such a one flourished, the subsequent notices respecting him are more usefully applicable; and many persons of exactly similar names are kept distinct: (and to preserve this distinction has been the greatest source of labour in the compilation of this Index.)

To say a word or two respecting the title Rev. following a name, in the General Index. Where, after the name the first mention is, that he was the incumbent of such a place, the Rev. is needless; therefore omitted: thus of Mr. Angell, I say: "Angell, John, vicar of St. Nicholas's," &c.—Now the case is different with Mr. Bickerstaffe: he was no vicar, nor perhaps have I found occasion in my references to point out his being a clergyman, at least without too much circumlocution: all which information the Reader has at the outset in one word, viz. "Bickerstaffe, Rev. William, usher," &c.

But, in the Index of Names, the reverend gentlemen are always mentioned as such: thus; Angel, rev. John; Bickerstaffe, rev. William; &c. (Thus accommodating one Index to another; as throughout it has been attempted to render each subservient in illustration to the other by exhibiting the names as well as titles of the more dignified characters, as already largely noticed.)

I have not, as a gentleman once said to me, squired the squires; nor, except in some instances, could I have done it, being an entire stranger to all the gentlemen mentioned:—neither are the M. D. s and D. D. s discriminated; which also to do I had not competent information.—Under these disadvantages, I have been obliged to leave more for the Reader's developement than I could have wished.

The Reader will be pleased farther to remark, that when any king's name is mentioned; if he be of England, it is not expressed so in the Index. Thus Isabel, "daughter of king John, marries," &c.; not the "daughter of John king of England," &c.

It will be expected that general terms, such, for instance, as instrument, award, deed, charter, &c. should not find leading places in this Index; except in some few particulars, the insertion of these has been carefully guarded against: but the following is one of the instances where a general term is employed, and the reason assigned. An article concerning Thos. de Cantelupe is thus worded: "Cantelupe, Thos. de, sent by and on the part of the Earl of Lei- "cester to Amiens, to await the award of the king of France, 148."—What king of France?—What award? and on what occasion? and betwixt what parties? (may the Reader say.) Turn to the word award, (is the reply;) and there it is said, that "it was of St. Lewis of France; and betwixt Henry III. of England and the barons."—To have said all this under Cantelupe (many others besides him being concerned) would have too much dilated the article.

Again; epistolary writing is oft-times peculiarly instructive, and highly pleasing to many readers: and as this Volume comprises transcripts of many curious original letters, they are indicated at one view, under that word.

Monumental inscriptions, too, are perused with pleasure; they afford not only general instruction, but also particular information. These (or at least the detached ones) are severally referred to under the above head. When I say that the detached epitaphs are collected and indicated, I mean all that do not occur in the parochial histories, but lie here and there dispersed through the book: for, under each parish described, the epitaphs are given together after the account of each church.

Thus much respecting the occasional use of general terms. Other reasons might have been assigned for employing them; but a more enlarged specification would be a labour of needless assumption.

To conclude; I most fervently hope the candid Reader will forgive one thing which I have proposed to myself as an invariable rule from which I never mean to recede; I mean that of retaining our true English orthography; the Work itself too, in this respect, formed my exemplar. The modern system of pruning (too lenient a term, by-the-by, because then some good might be expected), of maiming our native language, is really unpardonable.—Well for our discontented mal-orthographical innovators, that Dr. Johnson is far removed from witnessing their temerity. —Can an Englishman bear to see such words as labor, armor, endeavor, rumor, &c. obtruded upon him as English terms? No surely.——In what has our k final * offended, that it must be discarded without a particle of regard to its use in strengthening the pronunciation† ?——Why, too, must our lordly z be converted into the simpering s? And this is even extended to words of pure Greek original. But I do not believe our innovators have quite the effrontery to destroy the distinction in every particular: seise for seize I am unconscious of having seen, nor does it seem to have found its way into those receptacles of modern miscalled improvements,—spelling-books. But I must not here enlarge on this subject. J. S.

The Reader having an opportunity of judging for himself, I scarcely need add, that this Index was compiled to my entire satisfaction. A more complete Analysis of any Work, than that which is included in the GENERAL INDEX TO THE FIRST VOLUME, has seldom been presented to the Publick. For the truth of this assertion, it is only necessary to refer to any of the more prominent articles—Simon de MONTFORT (II. or the younger) Earl of Leicester, for instance; where all the leading particulars of this gallant

---

* To such a pitch of upstart temerity has this system of lopping prevailed, that even in family-names, where long prescriptive usage might have pleaded an irrefragable claim, exclusive of the general arbitrary orthography of patronymicks allowed by hereditary hypercritical decision, for retaining the complement of letters constituting such names,—even in these appellations, I say, transmitted from father to son in uniform semblance, our modern refining correctors cannot withhold the exercise of their sharp talents, but impertinently slash away what they are pleased to style unnecessary letters. But there is one consolation: these dogmatic correctors constitute an abject minority, in advocating the disfigurement of our language.—J. S.

† It may be conveniently spared in an Adjective to distinguish it from a Substantive. Thus, in the present Work, I write "a pnblic man;" but should say "the good of the publick."

Warrior and eminent Nobleman, mentioned in the Volume, are shown at one view, with the advantage of being digested into a better arrangement than was practicable in compiling the History, as additional information was continually arising, after the previous matter had been printed off; a circumstance wholly unavoidable in so extended a Work.

Not content, however, with giving the Reader all the particulars comprised in the Volume, Mr. STRUTT has frequently introduced Additional Information, chiefly illustrative of the Manners and Customs of former times; as well as noticed such Corrections as his accurate eye discovered in the perusal of the Volume.

I have great pleasure in paying this well-deserved attestation to modest merit; and have no doubt the Reader will find this Index (what few Indexes can boast) at the same time instructive and amusing.

Desireable, however, as such an extended Analytical Index may be, I was aware that the plan could not be carried into execution with all the Volumes; nor, perhaps, from the different nature of their contents, did the same necessity exist. I therefore engaged the assistance of another literary friend, Mr. JAMES PELLER MALCOLM, F. S. A. the Modern Historian of London; who, with great expedition, performed the laborious task, on a plan which I suggested to him.

The "Personal Index to the Second, Third, and Fourth Volumes," embraces every individual of consequence mentioned in those portions of the Work. The names of all the Landholders are given, under this restriction, that when Lands or Manors remained for a century or more in a Family bearing the same name, that name is seldom mentioned more than once in the same page, in the Index, though there may be ten or more members of the family noticed as succeeding to the property. The names of the Patrons and Incumbents, and the principal Epitaphs, are also given.

Previously to the Reformation, the word Priest points out the Clergy; and, subsequently to that event, Rev. is used. To distinguish individuals of the same Christian and Sur Names, the years in which they lived are commonly given. This plan, it is hoped, by facilitating research, will be found useful.

The "Local and Miscellaneous Index to the Second, Third, and Fourth Volumes," speaks for itself.

When I consider the great bodily sufferings of Mr. MALCOLM while compiling this Index, I am astonished at his fortitude and perseverance. "The Almighty," says my afflicted Friend, "has been so merciful to me, as to enable me to complete your Index; and thus have been fulfilled your benevolent intentions towards myself and family. Surely, never before was an Index compiled under an equal continuance of pain: but it was a kind of refuge and solace against affliction; and often has it turned aside the severest pangs."

To the late Mr. BARAK LONGMATE I paid a willing tribute of regard early in the Work. (See Vol. II. p. 182.)—To his SON (the worthy Successor of a worthy Father), I am indebted for Indexes to the Arms and Pedigrees in the whole Work, as well as for much useful heraldic information, and professional assistance, in the course of my labours.

By the kindness of the Rev. MATTHEW DRAKE BABINGTON, I am enabled to enrich my Appendix with an ample Pedigree of his antient and respectable Family*.

The Rev. HENRY WOODCOCK, Vicar of Barkby, has also very obligingly favoured me with a Plate of very curious Sepulchral Relicks.

In conclusion, after again sincerely thanking all the Friends who have in any manner assisted in bringing these Volumes before the Publick; I trust I shall not be accused either of querulousness or ingratitude, when I observe, that, in a pecuniary point of view, not only the labour of more than thirty years has been in a great measure frustrated; but I have actually suffered an immense loss—arising, at first, from the tardy patronage received at the commencement of the publication, and the very confined sale of a Work which now cannot be obtained under at least three times its original very cheap price—and, secondly, from the melancholy destruction of by far the greater part of the impression.

I trust, however, that I may be allowed to indulge a hope, that the few existing copies of the Work will secure to its Author an honourable and a lasting reputation: And am truly thankful to a gracious Providence, for being permitted to say, that, on the day of an Anniversary which with me completes the allotted age of man, I am enabled to put a finishing hand to "The History and Antiquities of the County of Leicester."

Highbury Place, [Feb. 2, O. S.] Feb. 14, N. S. 1815. J. NICHOLS, Septuagenarius.

---

* To be placed between p. 954 and p. 955, of Vol. III.

* To gratify the wishes of a dutiful Son, the following article is here introduced, extracted from the Eighteenth Number of a very elegant Work, intituled, " British Gallery of Contemporary Portraits."*

BRIEF MEMOIRS OF THE AUTHOR.

“JOHN NICHOLS, the son of Edward and Anne Nichols, was born at Islington, February 2, 1744-5; and received his education in that village, at the academy of Mr. John Shield. In 1757, he was placed under the care of the learned Printer, Mr. William Bowyer, who, in a short time, received him into his confidence, and entrusted to him the management of his Printing-office.

“ In 1766, having previously become a Freeman of London, and a Liveryman of the Company of Stationers, he entered into partnership with his Master; with whom, in 1767, he removed from White Friars into Red Lion Passage, Fleet-street. This union continued till the death of Mr. Bowyer, in 1777.

“ In August 1778, he became associated with Mr. David Henry in the management of the Gentleman's Magazine; to which he has ever since been an extensive contributor, and for many years sole Editor.

“ In 1781, he was elected an honorary member of the Society of Antiquaries of Edinburgh; in 1785, received the same distinction from the Society of Antiquaries of Perth; and, in 1810, was elected a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London.

“ In December 1784, he obtained a seat in the Common Council of London, for the Ward of Farringdon Without, of which he was also Deputy from 1787 to 1797; and finally resigned his seat in December 1811.

“ On January 8, 1807, by an accidental fall, he fractured one of his thighs; and on February 8, 1808, experienced a far greater calamity, by a fire, which occasioned the total destruction of his Printing-office and warehouses, with the whole of their valuable contents.

“ Under these accumulated misfortunes he experienced the sympathy and aid of extensive friendship; his mind gradually recovered its vigour; and his first efforts were exerted to complete his great literary undertaking, “The History of Leicestershire,” which alone seems to demand the labour of a whole life.

“ In 1800, he associated with himself in partnership John-Bowyer Nichols, his son; and, in 1812, Mr. Samuel Bentley, his nephew.

“ The publications, of which Mr. Nichols has been either Author or Editor, are very numerous. The following more particularly may be attributed to him:

“ The Origin of Printing,” 1774, 8vo.; a joint production of Mr. Bowyer and himself; reprinted in 1776; and a Supplement added in 1781.

“ Three Supplemental Volumes to the ‘Works of Dean Swift,’ with Notes, 1775, 1776, 1779; and, in 1801, a complete edition of ‘Swift's Works,’ 19 vols. 8vo.; reprinted in 1803, 24 vols. 18mo.; and again in 1808, in 19 vols. 8vo.

“ The Original Works, in Prose and Verse, of William King, LL.D. with Historical Notes,” 1776, 3 vols. small 8vo.

“ Brief Memoirs of Mr. Bowyer,” 1778, 8vo. distributed, as a tribute of respect, amongst a few select friends. Subsequent communications, and an extension of the plan, produced, in 1782, ‘Biographical and Literary Anecdotes of William Bowyer, Printer, F. S. A. and of many of his learned Friends,’ 4to. This was again reprinted in 1812, with a vast accession of biography and correspondence, under the title of ‘Literary Anecdotes of the Eighteenth Century.’ Of this, eight large Volumes, 8vo. have appeared, and a ninth is very far advanced in the press.

“ A Collection of Royal and Noble Wills.” 1780, 4to.

“ A Select Collection of Miscellaneous Poems, with Historical and Biographical Notes,” 8 vols. small 8vo. 1780—1782.

“ Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica,” a series of articles of British topography, begun in 1780, and completed in 1790, in fifty-two numbers, or parts, forming eight vols. 4to.

“ Biographical Anecdotes of William Hogarth.” 1781, 8vo. Republished in 1782 and 1785; and again in 1810, in two quarto volumes, with 160 plates, accurately copied in that size from the originals.

“ Biographical Memoirs of William Ged.” 1781, 8vo.

“ History and Antiquities of Hinckley, in Leicestershire,” 1782, 4to; and a new edition, in folio, in 1813; to which is added, a “ History of Witherley,” &c.

“ Bishop Atterbury's Epistolary Correspondence, with Notes.” 4 vols. 8vo. 1783—1787; reprinted in 1799 with Memoirs of the Bishop, and a fifth volume of additional Correspondence, &c.

“ A Collection of Miscellaneous Tracts, by Mr. Bowyer and some of his learned Friends.” 1785, 4to.

“ History and Antiquities of Lambeth Parish.” 1786, 4to.

“ The Works, in Verse and Prose, of Leonard Welsted, Esq. with Notes, and Memoirs of the Author.” 1787, 8vo.

“ The History and Antiquities of Aston Flamvile and Burbach, in Leicestershire,” 1787, 4to.

“ Sir Richard Steele's Epistolary Correspondence, with Biographical and Historical Notes,” 1788, 2 vols. small 8vo. Reprinted, with large additions, in 1809.

“ The Progresses and Royal Processions of Queen Elizabeth.” 3 vols. 4to. 1788—1804.

“ The History and Antiquities of Canonbury, with some Account of the Parish of Islington.” 1788, 4to.

“ The Lover and Reader,” by Sir Richard Steele. 1789, 8vo. And in 1790 and 1791, Sir Richard's “ Town Talk,” and other Miscellanies. 2 vols. 8vo.

“ Collections towards the History and Antiquities of the Town and County of Leicester,” 1790, 2 vols. 4to.

“ Miscellaneous Antiquities, in continuation of the Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica.” Six numbers, 4to. 1792—1798.

“ The History and Antiquities of the Town and County of Leicester,” begun in 1795, and concluded in 1815; in eight parts, forming four very large volumes, folio.

“ Illustrations of the Manners and Expences of Ancient Times in England.” 1797, 4to.

“ Letters on various Subjects, to and from Archbishop Nicolson.” 1809, 2 vols. 8vo.

“ A new Edition of “ Fuller's Worthies,” with brief Notes. 2 vols. 4to, 1811.—&c. &c. &c.

“ Mr. Nichols, in 1766, married Anne, daughter of Mr. William Cradock, of Leicester, by whom, who died in 1776, he has two daughters[*]; and again, in 1778, Martha, daughter of Mr. William Green, of Hinckley, who died in 1788, and by whom he has one son and four daughters[†].”

---

[*] See Vol. III. p. 1149.

[†] See Vol. IV. p. 709.

CON-

CONTENTS.

Prefatory Advertisement - - - - iii
Brief Memoirs of the Author - - - - vii

History of the Town of Leicester continued :

Religious Foundations :

Leicester Abbey, - - - - - 251
Dominican, or Black Friers - - - - 295
Franciscans, or Grey Friers - - - 297
Friers Eremites of St. Augustine - - 300
Friers de Pœnitentia Jesu Christi - - 302
Collegiate Church of St. Mary de Castro - 303
Hospital and Church of St. Leonard - - 321
The Spital - - - - - - 323
St. John's Hospital - - - - - 324
St. Michael's Church - - - - 327
St. Peter's Church - - - - ibid.
Other demolished Churches and Chapels - 328
Newark Hospital and College - - 329
Town Hall - - - - - - 353
Annals of Leicester, consisting of Original Charters, authentic Corporation Records, and Miscellaneous Events - - - - - 355
Bailiffs of Leicester - - - - - 451
Recorders - - - - - - 452
Town Clerks - - - - - 454
Members of Parliament for the County - - 455
Members of Parliament for the Borough - - 457
Sheriffs of Leicestershire and Warwickshire - 459
Sheriffs of Leicestershire, from 9 Elizabeth - 461
Archdeacons of Leicester - - - 463
Book of Directions to the Mayor of Leicester, 1758 467
Nobility in Leicestershire, &c. 1681 - - 470
Wigston's Hospital - - - - - 471
Town Library - - - - - 505
Free Grammar School - - - - 511
Charity Schools - - - - - 513
Antient Painted Glass - - - - - 514
Leicester Infirmary - - - - - 515
Consanguinitarium - - - - - 528
Leicester Humane Society - - - - 529
Prisons in Leicester - - - - ibid.
Streets, Lanes, &c. - - 531, 532, 533
Exchange, Assembly Rooms, Hotel, &c. - 533
Population - - - - - - 534
Earls of Leicester ; continued from Part I. p. 250. 535
Chancellors of the Duchy of Lancaster - 546
Dissenting Places of Worship - - - 547

Parochial History continued :

All Saints - - - - - - 549
St. Margaret's - - - - - 555
The Bishop's Fee - - - - - 567
St. Martin's - - - - - - 568
St. Nicholas - - - - - - 608
Roman Antiquities - - - - - 617
Of the Origin, Progress, and present State of Frame-worked Stockings - - - 620
Honour of Leicester - - - - 622
Honour of Winton - - - - - 624
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction - - - - ibid.
Canal from Leicester to Market Harborough - ibid.
Domesday Book, notice of articles not appropriated 625
Additions and Corrections 624, and App. p. 114
Brief Index to Vol. I. Part II. - - - 626

Appendix, continued from Part I. :

No. XVII. Leicester Abbey - - 53
Catalogue of the Library of Leicester Abbey 101
No. XVIII. Newark Hospital and College - 109
No. XIX. Extracts from Charyte's Rentale relative to divers Churches in Leicester - 112

An Appendix of Additions and Corrections :

Vol. I. - - - - - - 117
Vol. II. - - - - - - 127
Vol. III. - - - - - - 134
Vol. IV. - - - - - - 142
Abstract of Returns to the Population Act 1811 1—6
Abstract of Population Returns 1800 and 1811—Registers - - - - - - 7—10

Index to the Names in the first Volume. By Mr. Joseph Strutt - - - - - 1—28
General Index to the First Volume, analytical, critical, and self-corrective : comprehending some recent matters which have occurred since the publication. By Mr. Strutt - - 1—131
Index to the Arms in the Four Volumes - 1—8
Index to the Pedigrees in the Four Volumes 9—11
Personal Index to the Second, Third, and Fourth Volumes, &c. by J. P. Malcolm, F.S.A. - 13—86
Local and Miscellaneous Index to the Second, Third, and Fourth Volumes, by Mr. Malcolm 1—16
Supplementary Index to the Additions and Corrections, Domesday, &c. by J. B. N. 17

LIST OF PLATES.

Portrait of Mr. Nichols, to face the Title.
17. Cardinal Wolsey, Monk and Seals of Leicester Abbey, &c. - - - - - 272
18. Four Views of Leicester Abbey - - 293
19. Three Views of Leicester, from the Abbey - 294
20. Dominican and Franciscan Friers of Leicester 295
21. Augustine Eremite—Frier and Nun de Saccâ 300
22. Schnebbelie's Perspective View of Bow Bridge 301
23. Bow Bridge, St. John's and St. Leonard's, &c. 302
24. All Saints and St. Mary's Churches, &c. - 303
25. St. Mary's Church, old Chancel, &c. - 304
26. Monument of John Ruding, 1543 - - 316
27. ———— Richard Ruding, 1592 - 317
28. Castle, Gaols, School, Exchange, and Infirmary 326
29. Newark Gate, Trinity Hospital, &c. - 329
30. Monument of Bishop Dudley - - 335
31. Leicester Cross ; and Painted Glass, &c. - 353
32. Blue Boar Inn, and King Richard's Bedstead 380
33. Traders' Tokens of Leicester, Seals, &c. - 428
34. Wigston's Hospital, Monuments, &c. - 495
35. Hotel and Assembly Rooms, Mr. Johnson's Four Houses, and the Consanguinitarium - 528
36. } Painted Glass at Mr. Stephens's [by mistake
37. } these Plates are numbered 26 and 27 - 514
38. Inscription at All Saints, North Bridge, &c. 549
39. St. Margaret's Church, South-east - - 558
40. Another View, South-west - - ibid.
41. Figures in the Chancel, Official Seals, &c. - ibid.
42. Monument of Stephens, and Eastington Church 588
43. St Martin's Church - - - 590
44. Mr. Johnson's Monument in St. Martin's - 604
45. St. Nicholas Church, with Roman Wall - 610
46. Fragments of Roman Antiquity - - 618
47. St. Mary's Church, struck by Lightning - 619
48. Plan of the Reservoir of the Union Canal - 624
49. Seals of Leicestershire Canals ; Ecclesiastical Seals ; and Trinity Hospital - - ibid.

ADDITIONAL PLATES.

50. Sepulchral Relicks, found at Queneborow, &c. - - - - - App. p. 136
51. Portrait of Mr. John Ward, of Hinckley - 149
52. Chapel in Charnwood Forest, &c. &c. ibid.
53. Plan of Lea Grange - - - 151
54. Plan of Manduessedum - - - 15[illegible]

FRONTISPIECES TO THE EIGHT PARTS.

Portrait of Mr. Burton, (from Vol. IV. p. 651.) to face Title to Vol. I. Part I.
Portrait of Mr. Nichols, Vol. I. Part II.
General Map of the County, Vol. II. Part I.
Miscellaneous Design by Mr. Malcolm, Vol. II. Part II.
Miscellaneous Design by Mr. Longmate, Vol. III. Part I.
Portrait of Francis Earl of Moira, Vol. III. Part II.
Portrait of Rev. Richard Farmer, D.D. Vol. IV. Part I.
Portrait of George-Harry Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Vol. IV. Part II.

THE HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS IN LEICESTER.

RES ANTIQVAE LAVDIS ET ARTIS
INGREDIOR, SANCTOS AVSVS RECLVDERE FONTES. VIRGIL.

VETERA MAIESTAS QVAEDAM, ET, VT SIC DIXERIM, RELIGIO COMMENDAT.
QVINTIL.

In reſuming the Local Hiſtory of LEICESTER, it is our intention firſt to deſcribe the ſeveral religious foundations; then to give briefly, in the way of annals, ſuch general particulars of the town of Leiceſter as occurred previous to the diſſolution; and, finally, the ſeparate deſcription of each pariſh.

MONASTERIES, COLLEGES, RELIGIOUS HOUSES, AND HOSPITALS.

UNDER this head, I find ſo valuable an Introduction prepared by Mr. STAVELEY, that it would be injuſtice to his memory if I were not to give it as nearly as poſſible in his own words.

"Being now," ſays this learned Lawyer, "come to ſpeak of the Monaſteries, Colleges, Frieries, and Religious Houſes, ſituate in and about Leiceſter, it will not, I hope, be impertinent to premiſe ſomething touching the original of a monaſtic life and profeſſion. For, the name, or word, monachus, a monk, it is well known to be derived from the Greek word μόνος, ſolus, ſignifying ſuch a one as lives ſolely and alone; for when, in the infancy of Chriſtianity, great perſecutions were raiſed againſt the profeſſors thereof, many of the Chriſtians retreated into the woods and deſerts for protection and ſhelter againſt theſe ſtorms[1]; therein following, as ſome ſay, Samuel the prophet, Helyſeus, and Helyas, who lived in poor cottages and deſert places near the river Jordan; as St. John the Baptiſt long time after did in the wilderneſs; imitated, as ſome alſo ſay, by St. Mark; and after theſe, we hear much of Paul the Hermit, St. Anthony, St. Hilarion, St. Baſil, St. Hierom, and others. But of theſe Paul the Hermit was of greateſt note for his retired living, who, to avoid the perſecution raiſed under Decius, betook himſelf to the wilderneſs, where he is ſaid to have lived ninety-three years unknown to any one[2]; and frequent it alſo was, towards the primitive times, and when there was no imminent perſecution, for ſeveral perſons, out of devotion, melancholy, or other regards, to leave the world, and betake themſelves to ſuch a ſequeſtrated courſe of life. But, at the firſt, theſe men had no certain rule or order; for, every one, being free, regulated himſelf as he ſaw beſt for his ſpiritual advantage, exerciſing devout prayers, frequent faſtings, hard ſtudies, with mean and ſlender diet, which they acquired by labour of their hands, thereby giving great examples of pious living to all poſterity.

"St. Anthony is the firſt unto whom ſome do chiefly refer the original of this monaſtic profeſſion, in regard he ſo greatly raiſed up the deſires of men to lead this kind of life, and firſt inſtituted ſome rules for monks, as St. Baſil did afterwards in Greece, and St. Hilarion in Syria. This Anthony lived in the deſert of Thebes, in Egypt, and there built a monaſtery; where, with his diſciples, Sarmatus, Amatues, and Macharius, wholly exerciſing himſelf in devotion, he fed upon nothing but bread and water; and ſo famous was he for holineſs, that Helena, the mother of Conſtantine, commended herſelf and ſon to him by letters. He died in the wilderneſs in the year 360, aged 105 years.

"After him, as is ſaid, Baſil, the biſhop of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, about the year 370, being very famous for his learning and piety, preſcribed ſome orders alſo to monks; and obliged ſuch as ſhould enter into thoſe holy orders to obſerve poverty, chaſtity, and obedience to their ſuperiors.

"Then, about 166 years after the death of Anthony, one Benedictus Nurſinus[3], born in Umbria, a territory in Italy, having lived long in ſolitude, came at length to Sublacum[4], a place diſtant from Rome about 40 miles, now called Sollago, according to Leander; but, to avoid great company, in regard many for his great ſanctity reſorted to him, he not long after betook himſelf to Caſſinum, an antient place in that country; and, there ſettling, he ſet himſelf to gather together many diſperſed and wandering monks into one monaſtery, inſtituting certain rules and forms for their obſervance, and aſſigning them a ſpecial kind of habit, forms of prayers, and rules of diet[5].

"But, touching the beginning of a monaſtic life here in England, if we look after particular perſons that, in times of perſecution, fled unto woods, caves, and deſerts, for preſervation, it will be hard to point out the firſt that did ſo retire themſelves.

---

[1] Polydore Vergil, de Invent. lib. vii. cap, 1.

[2] Catal. Sanct. Pet. Natal. lib ii. cap. 60.

[3] Nurſi in the dukedom of Spoletti in Italy. R. F.

[4] A deſert called Sublacum [Subiaco]; Deering, p. 53. R. F.

[5] Vid. Reiner. Apoſtolat. Benedict.

"If we conſider their firſt being gathered into any convent or monaſtery, then certainly thoſe of Glaſtonbury in Somerſetſhire, and Bangor in Cheſhire, in the times of the Britains, will appear to be the firſt [1]; in the latter whereof, as Bede relates, there was ſo great a number, that, being divided into ſeven parts, each having a ſeveral ruler, every part was no leſs in number than 300, all living by the labour of their hands [2]. And yet theſe cannot be ſaid to have lived under any other rule than the Eſſeans in Paleſtine, as Polydore obſerves.

"The firſt monks tranſplanted hither were the Benedictines, who were brought over by Auſtin the Monk about the year 595, the converſion of the Saxons being alſo about this time wrought. By this Auſtin, and his followers, epiſcopacy was eſtabliſhed in ſeveral places, and monaſteries by degrees built for monks obſerving the rules of Benedict; ſo that for a long time after there was none in England but of that order, even to the time of the Norman Conqueſt. Nay, all the Mitred or Parliamentary Abbeys in England, except the priors of the Hoſpitallers, were of this order, as ſome have obſerved.

"Theſe Benedictines, and ſeveral other orders, increaſing much in the world, and at ſeveral times and by degrees coming into England, the devotion of the middle and darker times running chiefly in that channel, there became ſuch a breed and ſuperfetation of monks and friers (of the diſtinction of which denomination we ſhall ſay ſomething preſently) that it is as difficult as unneceſſary for our purpoſe to have their deſcent and pedigrees, through all the commixtures, coalitions, and refinements, that have been made amongſt them; and that will ſufficiently appear by giving only their names; as Auguſtinians, Benedictines, Cluniacks, Ciſtercians, Celeſtines, Cumalduenſes, Umbrenſes, Montolivitenſes, Grandimontenſes, Bernardines, Premonſtratenſes, Silveſtrenſes, Heremites of St. Hierom, Carthuſians, Gilbertines, Dominicans, Crouched Friers, Carmelites, White, Black, and Grey, Friers, Cordeliers, Capuchins, Minorites (Obſervantes), Minimes, Recollects, Theatines, Robertines, Trinitarians, Bons-homes de Pœnitentiâ Jeſu (Fratres de Saccâ), Bethlemites, Franciſcans, Jeſuits, Jeſuats, Oratorians, with many more, differing both ſpecifically and gradually from one another, and amongſt themſelves; beſides thoſe of the female ſex, as the She-Benedictines, Nuns of St. Clere, She-Auguſtinians, Gilbertines, Brigetteans, and ſeveral others, almoſt as numerous in England as monks and friers; as having, although not ſo many orders, yet many more of the ſame order, that ſex being experienced more zealous and eager than the males in any thing, as might ſufficiently appear in Gilbertines, that hermophroditical order, admitting both men and women under the ſame roof; for, during the life of Gilbert, their firſt founder, for 700 brethren, there were 1100 ſiſters entered into that order [3].

"Of the people which enliſted themſelves in a religious profeſſion, under the denominations above, ſome of them were eſteemed and called monks, and ſome friers; which ſometimes and with ſome are undiſtinguiſhedly confounded together, and in ſome reſpects they might all be called by either name [4]; but the differences between them conſiſted chiefly of theſe particulars, according to the different ſentiments of ſome; as ſome make monks the genus, and friers but the ſpecies, ſo that all friers were monks, but, è converſo, all monks were not friers. Others ſay, that monks were confined to their cloiſters, whilſt more liberty was allowed to the friers to go about, preach, and beg in the country; others, that monks were properly in thoſe convents where they had a biſhop over them, as Canterbury, Norwich, Durham, &c. but never any friers, or at leaſtwiſe ſo called, were. The biſhop was the ſupreme; and they had ſome hand in this election. But the moſt eſſential difference was, that monks had nothing in propriety, but all in common; friers had nothing either in propriety or in common; but, being mendicants, had all their ſubſiſtence from the continued current charity of others. They had indeed ſome houſes, cells, or ſites, to dwell in, but no endowments, properties, or poſſeſſions; and when it hath ſometimes been debated, whether a frier may be ſaid to be the owner of his cloaths that he weareth, it hath been for the moſt part concluded in the negative. But yet, notwithſtanding this, certain it is, that ſome convents of friers had large and ample revenues, as may appear by the catalogues and accounts given of our religious houſes [5]; but then we muſt know, that from the beginning it was not ſo; the firſt inſtitution of the friers was otherwiſe; and the addition of lands and poſſeſſions to ſome of them was of a late date, by the bounty of ſome extraordinary benefactors: for, as is ſaid before, they generally had no endowments, but went their walks and circuits, up and down the country, with boys or valets at their heels, to collect the charity of others, who knew the preciſe time of their coming, againſt which their charity was made ready. But then this rural excurſion of the friers proved very prejudicial to the pariſh-prieſt, who dully repeating maſs, were very ignorant and lazy; but the friers were far more nimble fellows, ſlipping upon every occaſion into all pulpits, which, by virtue of ſome papal privileges, they might do at their pleaſure without reſtraint; and ſo, by their frequent preaching, they inſinuated much into the good will and affections of the people, whilſt the dull, idle prieſts became contemned as unprofitable and uſeleſs: and then, when any perſon of quality ſtood in need of confeſſion on his deathbed, a frier muſt always be ſent for to do that office, who ſeldom or never failed to obtain the party's ſepulture in his convent; and then the corpſe was always accompanied with ſome good legacy and gifts; the great ſcuffling between the friers and prieſts about theſe perquiſites being ſet forth to life by the moſt witty Eraſmus, in his Dialogue Funus [6]. And little leſs were the animoſities between the monks and friers, in regard the activity and pragmaticalneſs of theſe expoſed the other as idle and inſignificant fellows; and hence it is that we find Thomas Walſingham, Matthew Paris, and other monks, always ſnarling and girding at the poor friers; particularly Matthew Paris, upon the coming of the Fratres de Saccâ into England, and the Bethlemites, ſaith that they brought confuſion along with them [7]; and Walſingham, when the friers minors had got the heart of queen Eleanor to be buried in their convent, ſays they were like a company of greedy dogs, always flocking about a dead corpſe, every one ſnatching for a bit [8].

"To give ſome diſtinction to theſe monks and friers, the ſeveral orders had their peculiar habits [9] for colour and faſhion, of which it is not worth the while to make farther enquiry or deſcription here; yet in this they agreed, to have their crowns ſhaven; and in that uſage they conceive ſome weighty myſteries are contained. For the original of this cuſtom there have been ſeveral conjectures. An old author [10] relates it thus: that, whilſt St. Peter preached at Antioch, the Gentiles there, by way of contumely towards the name of Chriſtians, ſhaved the top of his head, which was afterwards practiſed by the monks and prieſts, as a teſtification of their glorying and honour in conforming to that which the ſaints ſuffered for Chriſt's ſake [11]; and hence probably it was, that that part of the head which was ſhaved became to be called corona, the crown. Theſe votaries alſo generally have the hair of their beards ſhaven; and this is done, they ſay, by thoſe whoſe office it is to celebrate the maſs, that no part of the ſacramental wine, the blood of Chriſt, might hang upon or ſtick to their hairs; and then to the myſteries of ſhaving;

---

[1] Camden's Britannia, fol. 227.
[2] Eccl. Hiſt. lib. ii. cap. 2.
[3] Weever's Funeral Monuments, fol. 148.
[4] Hoſpinian, de origine & progreſſu monachatûs; Zechias de Republ. Eccleſiæ.
[5] See Speed's Catalogue, and Dugdale's Mon. Angl.
[6] Eraſmus, Coll. Funus.
[7] Matth. Paris, fol. 949.
[8] Walſingham, in Edw. III.
[9] Vid. Monaſt. Angl.
[10] Johan. Tinemuthenſis.
[11] Vide Stellart. de coronis et tonſuris, lib. iii. cap. 1.

whereas the Abantes, an antient people of Thrace[1], and the Curetes, ſo called à tonſurâ, both warlike people, uſed to ſhave themſelves, that their enemies in fight might not catch or entangle them by the hair[2]; ſo, theſe votaries being enliſted to fight againſt a multitude of ſpiritual enemies, they ſhould not afford them the leaſt advantage; no, not ſo much as a hair. Plutarch, in the Life of Theſeus, relates this occaſion and cuſtom of the ſhaving of the Abantes; and alſo that Alexander the Great commanded his captains to cauſe all the Macedonian ſoldiers to be ſhaven, that their enemies might not have the advantage of their hairs. He alſo tells, that it was a cuſtom in Greece, for the young men, when they came to man's eſtate, to offer their hair to Apollo in his temple at Delphi, and that Theſeus did ſo; as our profeſſed Romaniſts initiate themſelves in their reſpective orders by the tonſure of their heads. Farther, as hairs are accounted but ſuperfluous excrements; by the ſhaving them off is ſignified, that a religious devotee ſhould lay aſide all ſuperfluous things, and retain only what is neceſſary. Beſides, as at their admiſſion theſe Romiſh profeſſors loſe their hairs, ſo thereby they teſtify that they ſhall be ready to loſe their heads alſo in that cauſe wherein they have thus enrolled themſelves. But, upon the trial of ſome of the conſpirators in the late plot diſcovered by Dr. Oates, moſt of whom were prieſts, Jeſuits, and Benedictines, it was averred, that this ceremony of ſhaving is omitted or diſpenſed withal to ſuch Engliſh prieſts as take orders beyond the ſeas, and come into England to promote the Catholic cauſe, to prevent diſcovery, they having made themſelves liable to the penal laws by taking ſuch orders.

"And here, I know not whether it be worthy of remembrance, a conceit of the Jews, going traditionally amongſt them, who, though they acknowledge our Saviour Chriſt to have been an extraordinary perſon, yet, amongſt their fables of him, this is one: that, after he was dead, the Jews buried him in a ſecret place, leſt his body ſhould be found and worſhiped by his followers; when a noble woman that adhered to his doctrine ſo prevailed with the Roman governor, that he threatened to kill the Jews unleſs they produced the body; which they, digging up, found uncorrupted, retaining the amiable favour that he had when alive; only the hair was fallen from his crown, imitated, as they ſay, by the Romiſh friers[3].

"Certain it is, that this uſage of ſhaving the crowns of prieſts was very antient; for, after the converſion of the Saxons here by Auſtin the monk and his followers, who endeavoured to bring the Britiſh Chriſtians to an entire conformity to the Roman rites, there were differences a long time agitated between them, touching the time of the celebration of Eaſter and the tonſure of prieſts; the Britains therein following the Eaſtern uſage, differing from that of the Romans; concerning which there is a notable epiſtle (exemplified by Bede[4]) of Cleolfrid, a Northern abbot, to Naitanus king of the Picts, by which he endeavours to ſet him right in thoſe matters; and intimating, that tonſure aroſe firſt from the imitation of St. Peter, but upon an account different from that of John Tinemuthenſis remembered before. In regard, as he ſays, St. Peter was ſhaven in memorial of Chriſt's ſuffering, ſo it did become his followers to bear the ſigns of his paſſion even on the crowns of their heads, as their chiefeſt glory and crown, where Chriſt had worn a crown of thorns, as all churches on their ſummits bore the ſign of this croſs: all which, he ſays, do teach, that for his ſake we ſhould crucify the fleſh, and offer ourſelves to deriſion for his ſake, as he was content to be mocked for us; and by that means hope at laſt to obtain the crown of glory. He hinteth alſo, that Simon Magus was alſo ſhaven, but in a different manner from St. Peter; and that he expoſtulated with one Adamnanus, a foreign abbot, for following therein the faſhion of Simeon, perſuading him to conform to the other. But for their ſhaving thus much.

"I ſhall not here, as I ſaid before, undertake to give a perfect account of all religious profeſſed votaries, ſome of which I have already only named or mentioned, but ſhall confine myſelf to thoſe of them that were ſeated in or near this town of Leiceſter; of which the canons regular of the order of St. Auguſtin, of whoſe great monaſtery here we ſhall ſpeak more preſently, being the moſt eminent, I will deſcribe them with as much brevity and certainty as I can.

"Moſt people or nations have endeavoured to deduce their deſcents from high and ſacred originals; and ſome from the gods themſelves, as thoſe of Italy and others: in competition with which, all religious orders and votaries, whoſe originals were any whit uncertain, to win the greater reverence, would boaſt the moſt holy and glorious men to have been founders of their order. But for the canons regular there is very great uncertainty about their beginning[5]; ſome refer their original to one pope, and ſome to another; and others to ſeveral reputed ſaints and holy men; but they themſelves generally owned the famous St. Auguſtin biſhop of Hippo to have been the firſt inſtitutor of their order[6]: but ſome go much higher, amongſt whom Thomas Aquinas, and ſay they were firſt inſtituted by the Apoſtles themſelves. In which variety, the common opinion ſettled them upon St. Auguſtin at laſt; and thoſe of this order pretend and profeſs to live according to the rules that he preſcribed; which rules have alſo been embraced by ſeveral religious votaries of other names, and are exemplified at large in the beginning of the ſecond volume of the "Monaſticon Anglicanum:" but, as thoſe rules are ſpuriouſly aſcribed to that holy man, ſo certain it is, that the lives of theſe canons regular were altogether different and unconformable to the moſt pious and chriſtian life of that great doctor of the church.

"But, whoever was the founder, certainly they were much eſteemed here; and there was no county but what was plentifully ſtored with them in great monaſteries, and thoſe very richly endowed, as may be collected from the catalogues of the religious houſes exhibited by Speed in his Hiſtory and others[7]; and for their habit, as Polydore Vergil ſaith, it was a white coat and a linen ſurplice under a black cloak, with a hood, when pulled up, covering their head and neck; under all having doublet, breeches, and white ſtockings, with ſhoes and ſlippers; and, when they go abroad, a black cornered cap, or a broad hat, their crowns being ſhaven, but not ſo much as other monks[8].

"There was another ſort of religious votaries who pretended the great St. Auguſtin to have been their founder, and theſe were a ſort of mendicant friers, not endowed like the canons regular; for they ſay, that St. Auguſtin inſtituted their order when he lived in the wilderneſs, and therefore they are called Auguſtiniani Eremitani, or Eremite Auguſtin Friers; and great contention hath been between the canons regular and them, who ſhould engroſs ſo eminent a founder; inſomuch that moſt of the Romiſh learned men do ſuſpect, whilſt others generally are aſſured, that St. Auguſtin was no inſtitutor either of the one or the other of them, according to the import of theſe old verſes:

"Mendici fratres induti veſtibus atris;
Auguſtinus ego nomen habere nego.

"Theſe begging friers, that in black are clad,
Nor name, nor habit, from St. Auſtin had.

"Theſe Auguſtinians, the firſt order of the begging friers[9], came into England out of Italy about the year 1250, and obtained many ſeats here, as the Auguſtin friers in London[10] (which was built for them by Humphrey Bohun earl of Hereford and Eſſex), and many other cloiſters in England, did heretofore belong to this order of friers. They wear a long white coat of cloth down to their heels all looſe, with a cowl or hood of the ſame when they are in their cloiſters; but, when they go abroad, they wear another black coat over the other, with another cowl, and then all bound cloſe to their bodies with a broad leather girdle or belt; and this girdle is eſteemed to have very great virtue in it, which they call St. Auſtin's girdle; and many perſons of great quality, and ſome queens, often wear it; but yet none but ſuch as are ſpecial benefactors and pay well for it. But now thoſe of this order beyond the ſeas (though they are competently rich, eſpecially in Italy and Spain) have of late years not been of ſo great eſteem, becauſe Dr. Martin Luther, who revolted from the church of Rome, and was ſo great an agent in the Reformation of the Church, was a frier of this order: but that the reflection is by this time ſomewhat worn off; and at this day they are in pretty good repute in thoſe places where they are[1].

---

[1] Euſtath. in Homer.
[2] Strabo, lib. x.
[3] Sandys's Travels, fol. 147.
[4] Eccl. Hiſt. lib. v. cap. 22.
[5] Onuphr. Panvinius, in annotationibus ad Platinam. Sabellicus, Ennead. 9. lib. 9.
[6] Bale, Cent. 7. Polyd. Vergil, lib. iii. cap. 3.
[7] Polydore Vergil, de Invent. lib. vii. cap. 3.
[8] Deering ſays, p. 58, "Their crowns to be ſhaved like other friers." R. F.
[9] Bale, Cent. 7. cap. 89.
[10] Matth. Weſtm. in anno 1250.

"I confeſs I can hardly forbear the giving of ſome account of ſome other orders of monks and friers that once flouriſhed in England, but that I fear the digreſſion would be enlarged too far, though I hope it may be pardoned hitherto. But for thoſe of them that had their ſituation in this our town of Leiceſter I ſhall ſpeak ſomething particularly, as I meet with them in the purſuit of this diſcourſe upon the place, which may give ſome light to the underſtanding, in ſome meaſure, the nature of all the reſt; premiſing, as is hinted before, that their numbers, differences, diſtinctions, and degrees, make it as difficult as unneceſſary to make exact ſpecification of them all.

"Now, for the monaſteries, frieries, and religious houſes, in and about Leiceſter, we will begin with that great and eminent abbey of St. Mary de Pratis[2], or de la Pre, ſo called becauſe ſituate with a pleaſing proſpect upon the meadows. This was firſt founded in the year 1143, with the advice of Alexander biſhop of Lincoln and other diſcreet perſons, by Robert Fitz-Robert, or Robert Boſſu, of whom we have already ſpoken amply[3], for ſuch monks as were canons regular of the order of St. Auſtin, and in honour of the Aſſumption of the bleſſed Virgin St. Mary: for he, having been very ſtubborn, and undutiful to his prince, and a great ſtickler in ſome dangerous commotions, when growing in years meditated the expiation of ſuch crimes, particularly the injuries he had brought upon Leiceſter, by founding and endowing of this and ſome other religious houſes; and into this, after the ſame was finiſhed, he entered himſelf a canon regular, with the conſent of his lady Amicia, where he lived in that profeſſion fifteen years, and there died, and was buried[4].

"In the ſame ſtrain of devotion this great earl founded a monaſtery for Ciſtercian or White Monks at Gerendon in this county; and, that his lady might ſympathize with him in ſuch a dereliction of the world, he and ſhe, or one of them, founded a nunnery at Nun-Eaton, in Warwickſhire; where ſhe, by his conſent, enrolled herſelf a nun, and in that profeſſion there died[5].

"The ſon of this Robert Boſſu was Robert Blanchmains, of whom alſo we have already fully ſpoken[6]. He married Petronel, daughter of Hugh Grenteſmainel, baron of Hinckley and lord high ſteward of England; which lady Petronel built a fair church to the ſaid abbey, which was dedicated in the year 1279, and was buried in the choir thereof before the high altar[7]. It is memorable alſo of this lady, that in a devotional fit, ſhe made a long rope or plait of her own hair, to be uſed with a pully to draw up the great lamp or light in the choir; which was afterwards kept there for a long time as a precious relick.

"Though this great abbey was not always and to all purpoſes reckoned amongſt the Mitred Abbeys, which were held by barony, and whoſe abbots were ſummoned to ſit with the peers in parliament, yet in revenue and ſtate it far exceeded many of the others, the firſt founder being very liberal in its endowments, beſides the liberality of many ſubſequent benefactors. The more eminent and hoſpitable it alſo was, in regard of its excellent and convenient ſituation, being a competent diſtance from the town, ſo that it was not crowded with other houſes, or town-bound. It was ſeated in an extraordinary rich and fertile ſoil, both giving and receiving a delicate proſpect, and having all imaginable accommodations for receipt and proviſions in its demeſnes, granges, paſtures, feeding, tithes, mills, woods, fiſhings, boons, rents, tenants, &c. and ſtanding juſt upon the great road from London into the North, it was frequented by, and gave entertainment to, perſons of all qualities, and gave great relief to the neighbourhood and poor of the country.

"And here it would not be improper to give ſome account or an inventory of the lands and poſſeſſions of this houſe, which indeed were many and large; and I preſume we ſhall not be able to attain the knowledge or diſcovery of them all; but ſo much touching the ſame as can be collected out of the Regiſtry of this Abbey, ſtill preſerved in that noble treaſury of antiquity ſir Robert Cotton's library, or other good evidence, we will caſt all together at the latter end of the diſcourſe upon the ſame.

"Thus much at preſent, and in general, touching the endowments and poſſeſſions of this great monaſtery. How it ſtood in honour and parliamentary privilege we come now to enquire; and for this purpoſe we muſt know, that all monaſteries had a chief, commonly called Abbot or Prior, Cænobiarcha. An Abbat, or Abbot, was ſo called from the Syriac word abba, father[8]; and Prior, from the Latin, denoting his priority, being both ſpiritual governors, having rule and preeminence over a religious houſe[9]. Some of theſe were mitred abbots and barons of parliament; and thoſe that were mitred or lords of parliament were exempt from the juriſdiction of the dioceſan, having within themſelves epiſcopal authority within their precincts, and were called abbots ſovereign; and, as there were abbots, ſo there were lords priors alſo, who had both exempt juriſdiction, and were lords of parliament. In the reign of king Henry III, when ſummons of peers to parliament became more certain than before, all the abbots and priors of quality were ſummoned to parliament; and in the 49th year of his reign no leſs than ſixty-four abbots and thirty-ſix priors were ſummoned to parliament[10]: but in ſubſequent parliaments their numbers were uncertain, ſometimes more and ſometimes leſs: for, when parliaments became more frequent, ſome abbots and priors that lived at great diſtance, by reaſon of age or infirmities, or idleneſs, or comparative inability of their houſes, obtained leave to be freed of their honourable, but troubleſome, attendance in parliament: for, in thoſe days, there was not ſuch labouring to be parliament-men as we now ſee there is, it being antiently eſteemed a great burden, and a trouble to ſerve in that office in either of the houſes; and therefore the knights and burgeſſes of the houſe of commons had wages from the ſeveral counties and places for which they ſerved. But now we ſee many thouſand pounds ſpent in an election, when perſons, out of faction, ambition, or ſome private deſign, labour to be choſen members of parliament; a matter much wiſhed, and ſometimes endeavoured, to be regulated by a law[11].

But to return to our Spiritual Barons.

---

[1] Lewis Owen, fol. 35.

[2] Leland obſerves that "the waulles of St. Marie abbey be 3 quarters of a mile aboute." Itinerary, vol. I. p. 16.

[3] See before, p 24—68.

[4] H. Knighton, fol. 2346; Leland, Collectanea, vol. I. fol. 70.

[5] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, in Nun-Eaton; and ſee our Appendix, p. 15.

[6] See before, p. 67—90.

[7] Leland notices no more than one tomb in Leiceſter abbey; and ſeems to have been uncertain whether it was this lady's, or the founder's. He ſays, "Other Robert Boſſue, erle of Leirceſter, or Petronilla, a counteſs of Leiceſter, was buried in a tumbe ex marmore chalchedonico yn the waul of the South of the high altare of S. Marie abbay of Leyrceſter." Itinerary, ubi ſupra.

[8] Vide Powel, in voc. Abbat.

[9] Stat. 9 Ric. II. cap. 4.

[10] Dorſ. Clauſ. 49 Hen. III. m. 11.

[11] The reader will recollect that theſe are the words of Mr. Staveley, at leaſt a hundred years back.

"King Edward III. was the firſt who fixed upon a ſet number of abbots and priors to be ſummoned unto parliament; and after him they ſettled into the number of twenty-ſix[1], generally reckoned theſe:

1. St. Alban's.
2. Glaſtonbury.
3. St. Auſtin's, Cant.
4. Weſtminſter.
5. St. Edmondſbury.
6. Peterborough.
7. Colcheſter.
8. Eveſham.
9. Winchelcomb.
10. Crowland.
11. Battell.
12. Reading.
13. Abingdon.
14. Waltham.
15. Shrewſbury.
16. Glouceſter.
17. Barduey.
18. Be'net in Holm.
19. Thorney.
20. Ramſey.
21. Hide.
22. Malmeſbury.
23. Cirenceſter.
24. St. Mary, York.
25. Selby.
26. Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, firſt baron of England.

"All theſe held of the king in capite, per baroniam; and if the king had called an abbot or prior by writ to parliament, who held not of the king per baroniam, he might take his liberty, and refuſe to ſit and ſerve in parliament[2]; and though ſuch a one had been often called by writ, he might have obtained diſcharge from that ſervice, as ſeveral did, amongſt which the abbot of Leiceſter was one; for, in the reign of king Edward III. it was that this abbot obtained a diſcharge from the king by his patent, becauſe he held not of the king by barony, and that his predeceſſors had not been conſtantly ſummoned, but interpolatis vicibus only, after the 49th of Henry III.[3] The words of the patent itſelf ſhall be given in the Appendix[4].

"The parliament wherein this was obtained was ſummoned by writs, dated 15 Nov. 25 Edward III. to ſit upon St. Hilary's day following[5], which is the 13th of January; and the 15th of February following (in the 26th year of his reign, he beginning the 25th of January) this patent or grant is dated; and in the Clauſe Rolls of that ſummons of 25 Edward III, the abbot's name is cancelled, and theſe words are written againſt it, 'Abbas Leiceſtriæ cancellatur, quia habet cartam regis quod non compellatur venire ad parliamentum[6];' yet in 27 Edward III. the abbot of Leiceſter appears ſummoned again to the great council held in that year at Weſtminſter[7], as alſo in the 29th year of that king: but his name is alſo there again cancelled, and the ſame words written over againſt it as before; ſo hard a thing was it to get ſo great a privilege, as that was then eſteemed to be, completed. And in thoſe days, when multitudes of abbots and priors were called to parliament by writ, it may be obſerved by the Records that ſeveral maſters of orders, officials, deans and priors of cathedral churches, whoſe convents were chapters to them and the biſhops, were called alſo by writs to parliament[8]. But then, in time, they, and all ſuch as held not by barony, but were called only by writ, upon petition that they and their houſes were burdened by their attendance in parliament, obtained diſcharges for them and their ſucceſſors; amongſt which, as is ſaid before, the abbot of Leiceſter was one, whoſe name we find not in the foregoing liſt; for, the abbey of Leiceſter, as hath been ſaid before, being founded by Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter (although the patronage thereof came to the crown by the forfeiture of Simon de Montfort earl of Leiceſter), yet, being of a ſubject's foundation, it could not be held per baroniam, and ſo the abbot was incapable to be legally called to parliament[9]; whereupon the king, upon the petition and agency of William le Clowne, an eminent abbot of that place, did grant, that the ſaid abbot and his ſucceſſors ſhould for ever after be eaſed and diſcharged of their attendance in parliament; for which the ſaid William le Clowne is celebrated as a great benefactor to his houſe. The like liberty the prior of Coventry alſo obtained; and ſo was it adjudged, in the parliament at York, in the caſe of the abbot of St. James near Northampton.

"Having mentioned that William le Clowne was a benefactor to this monaſtery for the purpoſe aforeſaid, it will not, I hope, be amiſs to give you a farther inventory of his good qualities and virtues, as I find them recorded, with ſome admiration, by a canon of that houſe[10]. He was, ſaith he, a prudent and moderate governor; a lover of peace; ſtudious of reformation; of a pleaſing aſpect, both to his ſuperiors and inferiors; by his good example, the members of his houſe grew ſo noted and eminent, that in his time two of them were called forth and choſen abbots; viz. one of the monaſtery of Miſſenden[11], and the other of Wellow[12]: two others to be priors; one of Tortington[13], and the other of Moteſfont[14]: two, out of extreme devotion, turned anchorites; one at Cheſter; the other at Leiceſter, in St. Michael's church there: and two others promoted to good eccleſiaſtical benefices. In his time two churches were appropriated to his abbey, Hungarton and Humberſton; and two manors obtained, Ingwardby and Kirkby Malory; with divers lands, rents, and poſſeſſions, in Hertyſhorn, Moſeley, Byteſwell, Leiceſter, Humberſton, Belgrave, Dalby, and Burſtall. Beſide the charter of privilege for not coming to parliament before mentioned, he obtained alſo that, upon vacancy by death of the abbot, the king's eſcheator ſhould not enter into or upon any of the poſſeſſions of the monaſtery, but upon the ſite of the abbey only; and that there he ſhould ſtay but one day and night for ſeiſin (for in ſuch caſes thoſe officers would be very troubleſome and chargeable); and this by charter from king Edward III. ratified and confirmed in 1377 by his ſucceſſor king Richard II. And with all perſons he was ſo taking, that none could ſcarcely deny him any thing; inſomuch that, to humour the king, who extremely delighted in dogs and hunting, he obtained a market for hounds and all kinds of dogs for hunting, in which ſports he frequently accompanied the king, prince, and great lords: but he would privately tell his friends, that he took no other delight in thoſe ſports but to gain opportunity to inſinuate with thoſe great men for ſome advantages to his houſe. And, after he had moſt commendably governed his houſe 33 years, he died XI kal. Feb. 1377[15].

"Other abbots alſo of note have been of this houſe, amongſt which Gilbert Foliot is very memorable; and in this Bale[16] hath diſcovered the error of Matthew of Weſtminſter, who ſaith he was abbot of Glouceſter[17].

"Philip de Repingdon was firſt canon, then abbot of Leiceſter. He was eminent for wit, learning, and other qualities. His wit, which is ſuppoſed to have been very modiſh, appears in a ſmart repartee to Alexander Nequam, alias Necham, from whom having received ſalute,

---

[1] Tewkſbury and Taviſtock are taken into the Mitred Abbeys by Godwin, Willis, &c. though omitted by Tanner. R. F.

[2] Coke, 4 Inſt. cap. i. p. 45.

[3] The abbots of Leiceſter, as appears by the Clauſe Rolls and Liſts of Summons in the Tower of London, were ſummoned to the parliaments, or great councils, in the following years: 49 Hen. III; 23. 27 (D. 17. 18.) Edw. I; 12 (D. 11.) 13. 14 (D. 5. 23) 16 to 20 Edw. II; 1 (D. 3. 16) 2 (D. 15. 31) 4 (D. 19. 41) 5 (D. 7. 25) 6 (D. 4. 9. 19. 36) 7, 8, 9 (D. 2. 18) 10 (D. 1. 5) 11 (D. 8. 11. 40) 12, 13 (D. 1. 28) 14 (D. 23. 33) 15 to 18, 20, 21 (D. 9. 28) 22 (D. 7. 32) 23, 24 (25 cancellatur) 27 ſummoned again, & 29 (D. 7) Edw. III. cancellatur. Appendix to Stevens's Monaſticon, vol II. p. 13.

[4] See Appendix, p. 60.

[5] Prynne's Parliamentary Writs, vol. I. p. 142.

[6] Rot. Clauſ. 25 Edw. III. m. 5.

[7] In the ſecond edition of Selden's Titles of Honour, p. 724, ſect. 29. is thus ſet down: "Writs of ſummons to parliament, bearing date at Woodſtock, anno 19 Edward III. were directed to theſe regulars; amongſt others, "Abbati de Leiceſtre," &c. Likewiſe in the 4th and 5th years of Edward III. (when the number of abbots ſo ſummoned was much diminiſhed, as being reduced to 27, beſides three priors) the abbot of Leiceſter was ſtill ſummoned; and 25 Edward III, in the Roll the abbot of Leiceſter's name is cancelled. So likewiſe anno 29; yet, in the ſummons of the 27th of the ſame king to a great council, the abbot of Leiceſter is amongſt the reſt." In p. 727, the king's patent of diſcharge to the abbot of Leiceſter is ſet down at large; the reaſon therein given, becauſe the abbot held his lands, not per baroniam, but in frank-almoine.

[8] Selden's Titles of Honour, p. 602.

[9] Rot. Parl. 26 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 22; Hale's Pleas of the Crown, fol. 183.

[10] H. Knighton, fol. 2630; and ſee our Appendix, p. 68.

[11] In Bucks. Tanner, Not. Mon. Bucks.

[12] Or Welbove, near Grimſby, co. Linc. Ibid. p. 257.

[13] In Suſſex, near Arundel. Ibid. p. 560.

[14] In Hampſhire. Ibid. p. 165.

[15] See more of him hereafter.

[16] Cent. iii. fol. 215.

[17] See hereafter, p. 260.

Phi nota fœtoris, lippus malus omnibus horis;
Phi fœtor lippus: ſemper malus ergo Philippus;

he returned thus:

Es niger et nequam cum ſis cognomine Necham,
Nigrior eſſe potes, nequior eſſe nequis.

Which Nequam being ſo liable in his name, it is alſo ſaid, that once ſuing to be admitted into St. Alban's monaſtery, he received this anſwer:

Si bonus ſis, venias; ſi nequam, nequaquam.

And, to prevent the like again, he is ſaid to have changed his name to Neckham[1].

"Henry de Knighton, ſo called becauſe born at Knighton, a neighbouring town, was a canon of this houſe in the reigns of Edward III. Richard II. and Henry IV; Mr. Burton[2] miſtaking when he ſays he was abbot there. But, whatever was his office in the abbey, he wrote in it a uſeful hiſtory, De Eventibus Angliæ; in the firſt book whereof he briefly treats on public events from the earlieſt Saxon kings to the year 1066; in the three next books he is tranſcriber only of Ranulphus Ceſtrenſis; after which he goes on with his own collections to the depoſition of king Richard II; in which work of his, ſeveral material circumſtances may be found, which may in vain be ſought elſewhere[3].

"To omit many other memorable perſons that had reſidence in this ſumptuous abbey, certain it is, that it flouriſhed a great while, being very opulent in revenues, and thence enabled to be, on all occaſions, ſubſidiary to the king, charitable to the neighbourhood and the poor, and hoſpitable to ſtrangers and travellers.

"In the year 1337, king Edward III. laid a tax of wool throughout England; and from this abbey had eighteen ſacks, every ſack valued at 19 marks.

"Several kings have here been entertained and lodged in their journeys to and from the North; particularly a great entertainment and lodging was once given to king Richard II. and his queen, with their retinue[4]; amongſt which were the duke of Ireland, earl of Suffolk, archbiſhop of Canterbury, biſhop of Chicheſter, &c.; and it is well known, that in this abbey died that famous cardinal and legate à latere Thomas Wolſey, archbiſhop of York, 1530, in the 22d year of king Henry the Eighth, and that he was here buried[5].

"And as thoſe of this religious foundation were not wanting in their charity and relief to others, ſo were they, upon occaſion, no leſs careful of their own rights, of which I ſhall deliver one memorable paſſage or two.

"In 1351, a very great difference happened between John Laurence and Stephen Laurence his brother, and other inhabitants of Belgrave, about the bounds and limits of their fields and ground in a place called Le Stocking; whereupon one night the men of Belgrave, in a tumultuous and riotous manner, pulled up the ſtakes and fences which the abbot had made in that place; and, not therewith content, but the more to deſpite the abbot and monks, ſtopped up the Foſs-way over the river Soar, and made barricadoes at the end of the bridge, ſo that the tenants of the abbey could not bring with carriages the uſual proviſions to the abbey, to the great grievance of the convent. Hereupon the abbot obtained the king's writ to certain juſtices, viz. ſir Robert Herle, ſir John de Folvile, Simon Pakeman, and Laurence Hauberk; before whom twenty-five men of Belgrave were indicted for the offence; and, being found guilty, the ring-leader, John Laurence, was bound in £40. for better behaviour, and paid 100*s*. for damages. All the reſt, who had been drawn into the fact by him, had only a fine of £10. ſet on them, to be paid among them all; and were pardoned, upon condition that they ſhould repair the Foſs-way at Coweſwalk (or Culverwater), and clear the way thence to the bridge, along the Willows and the Penny-green, and ſhould lay the way open over the bridge; and the ſaid John Laurence to releaſe all the right that he claimed to have in the place where the abbot's fences had been pulled down; and ſo the difference was ended[6].

"In the 33d year of king Edward III, John de Arden, a powerful man in Warwickſhire, impleaded the abbot of Leiceſter for the manor of Berwode, and the advowſon of Crudworth, in the county of Warwick, given to the canons of this houſe by ſome of his anceſtors; whereupon the abbot, fearing partiality in the hearing of the cauſe, for it was to be tried at Warwick, procured the king's letters to the judges of that circuit, viz. ſir John de Mowbray and Thomas Hyngylby, requiring them to do equal right; whereupon verdict and judgement paſſed for the abbot[7].

"And now it is time to ſpeak of the diſſolution of this great monaſtery; concerning which, we ſhall premiſe ſomething touching the means and manner of the diſſolution of all ſuch religious foundations in this kingdom; in order to which matter, we may firſt remember and reflect, that, about the eighth, ninth, and tenth ages of the church, upon the fall of the Roman Empire, Chriſtendom became generally overſpread with barbariſm; all Learning, with the Arts and Sciences, being decayed almoſt to extinguiſhment, of which the notices and complaints are too evident: particularly we find Genebrard thus ſpeaking of the ninth age; 'Infelix hoc ſeculum,' &c. 'This unhappy age, void of men eminent for wit or learning, neither ſhewing any famous or worthy princes or prieſts; in which nothing happened worthy to be remembered by poſterity[8]:' at which time a certain monſter was found with a dog's head, by all the other members thoſe of a man, which wonderfully repreſented the ſtate of thoſe times.' And in this iſland we read of one of our Saxon kings, Whitredus by name, who was altogether ignorant of letters, inſomuch that he could not write his own name; for, in the concluſion of a charter of privileges by him granted to the church, are theſe words: 'Ego Whitredus rex Cantie, &c. omnia ſuperſcripta confirmavi, atque a me dictata propriâ manu ſignum ſanctæ crucis, pro ignorantiâ literarum, expreſſi[9]." But then, upon this foundation of ignorance, the prieſts and churchmen of the times raiſed a ſtrong dominion in and over the conſciences of men: for then, pretended miracles, viſions, and revelations, obtained wonderfully, and were impoſed upon the world; whereby ſuch a fervour of blind devotion and zeal, by the agency of the prieſts, became kindled in the world, as gave birth to many religious orders and foundations, and endowments to many, nay multitudes of religious houſes, for the entertainment of religious votaries of all ſorts, as monks, friers, canons, nuns, &c.; in all of which, the zeal of theſe and ſome other times grew ſo intenſe, that it was thought fit and neceſſary here, by ſome acts of ſtate, to reſtrain thoſe exceſſive donations to ſuch houſes.

"But then, as nothing that is violent is long permanent, there came afterwards a reviviſcence of Knowledge, Learning, and the Arts; by which the abuſes and corruptions in theſe inſtitutions, as well as in matters of doctrine, being diſcovered, and the neceſſity of ſome reformation appearing, theſe monaſtic foundations, with divers other exceſſes which had ſprung up in the middle and dark times, were rooted up; the procedure of which amongſt us in this iſland appears to have been thus.

"The beginnings and progreſs of the doctrines of Luther and other eminent reformers are ſo well known, that it need not here be repeated; how, upon the pope's ſetting his indulgences to ſale in Germany in ſo groſs and ſcandalous a manner, that, for a little money, any man might preſerve himſelf, and deliver his friends out of purgatory[1]; which, with many other corruptions in the church, being detected by Luther and others, whoſe writings were diſperſed in England, it was ſtrange to ſee how greatly they were liſtened to and embraced by the people, by the juſt prejudices they had conceived againſt the ignorances and lives of the prieſts and clergy. They had engroſſed the greateſt part of the power and riches of Chriſtendom; and the corruptions of their doctrines, worſhip, and practice, were ſuch, that a ſmall proportion of common ſenſe, with a little looking into the New Teſtament (which about that time was tranſlated into Engliſh), did eaſily diſcover and detect them; nor had the Romaniſts any varniſh to colour their corruptions with, but the authority and traditions of the Church; and then many learned men, looking into the Fathers and Councils, found a vaſt difference between the primitive and modern Chriſtianity; for, as in the firſt ages Piety and Learning prevailed; in the middle and latter, Ignorance had almoſt buried all the Learning; and for Piety, only a little miſguided devotion was retained; the reſtleſs ambition and uſurpation of the popes being ſomewhat ſupported by the ſeeming holineſs of the mendicant friers, and pitiful learning that ran among the canoniſts, ſchoolmen, and caſuiſts.

---

[1] Camden's Remains, art. Alluſions. Of Repingdon, ſee more hereafter.

[2] Pp. 155. 163.

[3] Scripſit Chronicon de eventibus Angliæ ab anno DCCCCL. ad MCCCXCV. lib. v. Horum primo res a Saxonicis regibus uſque ad A. D. MLXVI geſtas breviter percurrit; tres ſequentes, qui ad annum uſque MCCCLXXVII pertingunt, ex Ranulphi Higdeni Ceſtrenſis Polychronico ferè verbatim exſcripſit. Hiſtoriam depoſitionis Ricardi II. lib. i. Extat utrumque opus inter Scriptores Decem Hiſtoriæ Anglicanæ, Lond. 1652, p. 2311. 2743. Cave.

[4] H. Knighton, fol. 2696.

[5] Burton, p. 163; and ſee hereafter. p. 263.

[6] Knighton, fol. 2616.

[7] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 927; from H. Knighton's MS. fol. 163. b.

[8] Genebrardi Chron. lib. iv. initio 10 ſeculi.

[9] Spelman's Concilia, tom. I. p. 198; Janus Angl. lib. i.

“ The art of Printing arriving alſo at this time to ſome degree of perfection, the tranſlated Scriptures and other good books became diſperſed abroad, whereby men were convinced, and taught to pray and praiſe God in ſuch language as they underſtood; whereby the authority of the maſs, and the reverence to eccleſiaſtical orders, mightily fell. And, as the keeping of the myſteries of Religion in the hands of prieſts only had been a principal means, in all times, of making the prieſthood ſacred and venerable; complaints were now made, that the prieſts withholding the Scriptures from the people was a tacit acknowledgement that there was an oppoſition between the Scriptures and their doctrines; that the monks and religious orders engroſſing the riches, as the popes did the dominion of the world, it was not conſiſtent with their deſigns, nor with the arts uſed to promote them, to let the Scriptures be much known; and therefore legends, ſtrange ſtories of viſions and miracles, with other devices, were thought far more proper for keeping up their credit, and carrying on their deſigns, which had no warranty from the Scriptures. Then, it appearing that the foundation of theſe monaſtical houſes had been laid on the ſuperſtitious conceit of redeeming ſouls out of pergatory, by ſaying maſſes for them there; and that they whoſe office it was to be employed in the miniſtry of ſuch ſuperſtitious purpoſes had, by counterfeiting of relicks, by forging of miracles, and many other impoſtures, heaped up vaſt wealth, to the enriching of their convents, and the magnifying of their ſaints, of which perhaps many never went to heaven, and others never were in being; theſe arts and practices being detected, together with the great viciouſneſs of the profeſſed votaries in ſome places, and in all their great abuſe of Religion, made it ſeem unfit that they ſhould be continued any longer.

“ Now, as a prelude to the general diſſolution of monaſteries, as it proved, there came a political project into the head of cardinal Wolſey, ſeconded or approved by others in this juncture who were for the ſupport of the papal and ſacerdotal dominion; that is, to wipe off the imputation of ignorance, and to ſet up Learning againſt Learning. The king alſo naturally loving Learning; the cardinal, as well for the purpoſes aforeſaid, as to do a thing acceptable to the king, reſolved to ſet up ſome colleges, in which there ſhould be both great encouragement for ſome eminent ſcholars to proſecute their ſtudies, and good ſchools for teaching and training up of youth; and ſo, by theſe learned men, the teachers of and diſputers for the new doctrines (as they were called) would be confronted, and poſſibly ſome ſtop put to the current of reformation then coming on. The cardinal, therefore, applied himſelf to have two colleges (one at Oxford, the other at Ipſwich, the place of his birth) well conſtituted and nobly endowed. But towards this it was neceſſary, by the aids and leave of the pope and king, to ſuppreſs ſome few ſmall monaſteries; which was thought as juſtifiable and lawful as it had been, in ſome former ages, to change ſecular prebends into canons regular, the devoted goods being ſtill applied to a religious uſe; and it was full as reaſonable as to ſay that the pope had an abſolute power of diſpenſing the ſpiritual treaſure of the church, and to tranſlate the merits of one man and apply them to another; it being inſinuated too that this would be a means to keep up all the reſt, ſeeing ſome then thought that in this kingdom the number was become exceſſive.

“ And now, to ſee what great effects ſuch a concurrence of ſmall motives will produce. The cardinal being ſo much conſidered at Rome as a pope of another world, that it was not hard for him to obtain almoſt any thing there, the pope (Clement VII.) conſented to the project; and the king was not averſe, foreſeeing that ſuch a beginning made it lawful to make bold with the reſt, in caſe of urgent national neceſſity; and at preſent the pulſes of the people might hereby be felt, how they would reſent a farther change; and ſo the cardinal proceeded to the finiſhing of that deſign.

“ It was not long after when the occaſions or neceſſities of the king inclined him to be dealing with ſome of the other monaſteries and religious houſes: for, having exaſperated the pope in point of his ſupremacy, and his revenue ſunk by reaſon of wars and troubles, in the 27th year of his reign, the parliament gave to the king, his heirs and ſucceſſors, all monaſteries, priories, and other religious houſes of monks, canons, nuns, &c. which had not above the clear yearly value of £200. and all ornaments, jewels, goods, and debts, which they had on the 1ſt of March, 1535: and thus became the leſſer monaſteries diſſolved, being in number 376, the yearly revenues thereof being rated at about £32,000.; and the goods and chattels, at low rates, at £100,000.; and it is not improbable that the commiſſioners were as careful to enrich themſelves as to increaſe the king's revenue. The churches and cloiſters were, for the moſt part, pulled down; and the lead, bells, and other materials, ſold.

“ Afterwards, by the parliament, in the 31ſt year of the king's reign, all monaſteries, abbeys, priories, nunneries, colleges, hoſpitals, houſes of friers, and other religious houſes, above the yearly value of £200. were given to the king, his heirs and ſucceſſors, in as large and ample a manner as the governors thereof held them in right of their houſes[2]. And at this time it was that our great abbey of Leiceſter went down. But yet we muſt know, that moſt, if not all theſe, were diſſolved or ſurrendered to the king ſome time before, but confirmed thus to him by act of parliament; the inſtruments of which ſurrenders are preſerved, and ſtill to be ſeen, in the Augmentation-office.

“ And then, after all this, by parliament, in the 37th of that king's reign[3], all colleges, free chapels, chantries, hoſpitals, fraternities, guilds, brotherhoods, and other promotions made to have continuance for ever, and chargeable with firſt fruits and tenths, with their houſes, lands, &c. were adjudged in actual poſſeſſion of the king, his heirs and ſucceſſors. And then, by computation, the number of the monaſteries and religious houſes, firſt and laſt, ſuppreſſed in England and Wales, appeared to be thus: monaſteries, 648; colleges, 90; chantries and free chapels, 2374; and hoſpitals, 110[4]; the yearly value of all which being accounted to amount unto £161,100; being above a third part of all ſpiritual revenues; beſides ornaments, money, goods, plate, jewels, lead, bells, &c. invaluable[5].

“ But then, to make theſe great revolutions and tranſactions more plauſible and current with the people, who became greatly ſtartled, as not knowing where ſuch mutilations would end, there was much art uſed; it being inſinuated and declared, firſt, that this was done for the neceſſary ſupply of the king's neceſſities, and to enable him to fortify and defend his kingdom againſt foreign enemies, then become formidable; then, whereas no ſmall ſupply was requiſite for thoſe purpoſes, by this means the charge and burden would be ſhifted from the king's loyal and good ſubjects upon thoſe who were fautors and maintainers of the pope's uſurped ſupremacy againſt the rights of the king and kingdom[1]. In the next place, there was a great declaiming againſt the vicious and lewd lives of monaſtical perſons, diſcovered by the commiſſioners and inquiſitors, and declared by the whole parliament in the preamble to the Statutes of Diſſolution, and confeſſed by the abbots and monks themſelves in divers preambles to their inſtruments of ſurrender. Again, it was ſaid to be apparent, that the lands and revenues of their houſes were not employed according to the direct intent of the owners and founders. Then, to be ſure, was not forgotten the multitudes of ſuperſtitions, and forging of miracles and relicks that were found in thoſe houſes. And, laſtly, the declaration of the king's patent, to employ moſt, or ſome, of the revenues to other and better religious uſes. But, to make a full ſcrutiny and enquiry into the vicious lives of the abbots, priors, monks, nuns, friers, canons, &c. a vicar-general (Thomas lord Cromwell) was inſtituted, and viſitors were ſent abroad, with articles and inſtructions, to make enquiry into the manners and behaviour of the religious of both ſexes. Theſe viſitors or commiſſioners acquitted themſelves vigorouſly in their diſcoveries; for, by their letters, ſtill extant, to the vicar-general, it appears that in moſt houſes they found monſtrous diſorders; that many of the votaries fell down upon their knees, and prayed to be diſcharged, ſince they had been forced to make vows againſt their wills, who thereupon were ſet at liberty by the viſitors[2]; that they found great factions in the houſes, and barbarous cruelties exerciſed by one faction againſt another, as either of them prevailed; that they were all extremely addicted to idolatry and ſuperſtition; and that in ſome of them they found the inſtruments and tools for multiplying and coining; that the lewdneſs of the confeſſors of nunneries was moſt abominable, many of the nuns being found to be with child; and that the diſſoluteneſs of abbots, monks, and friers, was notorious, not only with whores, but married women; beſides unnatural and brutal practices amongſt themſelves, equal to thoſe of Sodom. All which miſdemeanors were recorded in a black book; and, being ſo notorious in ſome, and vehemently ſuſpected in others, cauſed many of them, out of conſciouſneſs, to make ſurrenders of themſelves to the king; and then ſome of them were employed as agents or commiſſioners to incline others to ſurrender, as the prior of Giſeburn in Yorkſhire for one; in which matter the canons of Leiceſter being ſomewhat ſturdy and backward, the commiſſioners told them they could charge them with adultery, &c. if they would not ſubmit[3]; ſo that, by one way or other, moſt of them were brought in to ſurrender before the ſtatute of 31 Henry VIII, which confirmed all to the king, as is before noted; and ſome abbots, particularly thoſe of Glaſtonbury, Reading, and Colcheſter, and ſeveral priors and monks, were attainted of treaſon, and executed, for joining with, or ſending aid to, the rebels in Yorkſhire; who, upon theſe charges, roſe in great numbers, ſtyling their rebellion the Pilgrimage of Grace.

---

[1] Sloidan's Commentaries.

[2] Stat. 31 Hen. VIII. cap. 13.

[3] Stat. 37 Hen. VIII. cap. 4.

[4] Camden.

[5] Speed.

" This great monaſtery being diſſolved, the large poſſeſſions thereof were ſold, and conveyed by parcels to ſeveral of the king's ſubjects, whoſe heirs or aſſigns enjoy them at this day. I will not preſume to ſpecify the particular and reſpective preſent owners of all the lands and poſſeſſions of this houſe; but for the ſite thereof, with a fair proportion of lands, grounds, &c. thereunto adjoining and belonging, ...[Here Mr. Staveley has a chaſm, which we ſhall endeavour hereafter to ſupply. He proceeds:]

" And now I come to make my promiſe good, in giving ſome account of the lands and poſſeſſions of this great monaſtery; and in the firſt place we muſt know, that the founder thereof, Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, found in St. Mary's church in the caſtle of Leiceſter certain canons ſecular, there placed and endowed by his father, Robert earl of Mellent; which canons, with all their poſſeſſions, he tranſplanted to this abbey of St. Mary of the Meadows[4]; viz. five yard-lands without the North-gate, and eight dwelling-houſes; and in another part of the city, three yard-lands and three bovates of land; and ſix pounds a year rent in Leiceſter, with all the churches of Leiceſter both within and without the walls that were at his diſpoſal (ſue ditionis), and all the profits thereunto belonging; alſo the church of Lilburn, with the lands and tithes thereunto belonging, and £60. a year rent in that town; three carucates and one yard-land in Thurmodeſton; one yard-land, of the gift of Iſabel his mother, in Burton; in Segrave ſix carucates and three bovates of land, and the entire manor of Aſfordby, with the mill, &c.; all which were the poſſeſſions of the canons of the church of St. Mary within the caſtle.

" The founder alſo gave to his new Abbey one carucate of land at the North bridge, near to the ſite of the Mint; the houſes alſo which Gilbert the dean held of him at the South-gate; the mill that had been the biſhop's; all that Oſbert the chaplain held of him in the ſoke of Shepeſhed and in the ſoke of Halſo, with all the churches of both ſokes; the church of Sygreſham in the pariſh of Brackley, with all lands, tithes, &c.; the church of Ildſley in Berks, with the lands, tithes, &c. He gave them alſo every day three loads of wood for fuel out of his foreſts; with free feeding for their cattle there, without pannage. And theſe were all the poſſeſſions that the founder gave in his firſt charter; by which he confirmed alſo all the gifts that had been given by others; namely, the church of Thurnby, of the gift of Ralph Pincerna; and the church of Thedingworth, of the gift of Robert Pincerna his ſon; the churches of Clifton and Thorpe juxta Melton, and one mark rent a year in Leiceſter, of the gift of Ernald de Boſco; the church of Bulkington, half a hide of land in Brankote, and a meadow in Weſton, of the gift of Roger de Watervile, with all lands, tithes, &c.; and the lands in Bruntingſthorp, which Seward Pitefridus held of him, of the gift of the ſaid Seward. The founder alſo gave unto the abbot and convent the church of Coſby, that had belonged to the church of St. Auguſtin of Leiceſter; alſo the church of Aldeby (now Enderby) and chapel of Whetſtone. On the day on which he aſſumed the religious habit, he gave them the whole townſhip of Stoughton, except ſuch part of it as was of the fee of Ralph Friday. He gave them alſo, together with the mill of Belgrave, two yard-lands at the Weſt-gate; the manor of Pynſlade, with four yard-lands there; the manor of Knighton; one yard-land in Whatton; and 3000 eels, to be taken at Nun-Eaton. By this charter he releaſed to the abbot and convent, their ſervants, tenants, and villans, all ſervices whatſoever.

" They had alſo five ſhillings and ſixpence yearly rent in Bruntingſthorp, out of one croft and one bovate of land, of the lands of Thomas Walche.

" The counteſs Amicia, wife of the founder, gave to this monaſtery four pounds yearly rent, out of certain lands in Everley in Wiltſhire.

" Earl Robert Blanchmains, ſon of the founder, by his charter, confirmed all that his father or others had before given to this houſe; as, of the gift of the founder, the manor of Knighton, with the mill, &c.; of the gift of the counteſs Amicia, the four pounds rent in Everley; of the gift of Ernald de Boſco, the churches of Thorpe, Evington, and Humberſton; the place called Stockingforth, and 40 ſhillings in Welton, of the gift and confirmation of the founder; alſo the profits of the houſes that Godwinus Bena held, being four yard-lands in Leiceſter, the land which Jocelinus Mareſcallus had given, five aſſarts on the North of the wood, and the ground before the chapel; the land called Nedlebede, of the gift of Geffrey de Turvill; one carucate of land, of the gift of William de Alnei; part of his wood, with all the aſſart thereof; the church of Aldeby, the vill of Stocton, and the mill of Belgrave, of the gift of the founder.

---

[1] Coke's Inſt. 4. fol. 44.

[2] Lord Herbert, Hiſt. p. 399.

[3] On this head, ſee more fully hereafter.

[4] His charter bears date in 1137.

"The ſaid Robert the ſon alſo gave to the abbot and convent one ſtag on the day of the Aſſumption, and another on the day of the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary yearly; and liberty of fiſhing in his great pool at Groby four times in the year, on the Vigils of the Purification, the Annunciation, the Aſſumption, and the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary; paſturage at Desforth for ten cows; and two acres of alder-ground, between the highway and the land which maſter Ralph de Wolſcroft held.

"After him, Robert Fitz-Parnell, by his charter, confirmed all that his grandfather, father, or others, had given; and farther gave to the abbot and convent paſturage in the foreſt of Leiceſter, between the way to Groby and the way to Anſty; and an additional load of wood every day in that foreſt. He alſo gave them 24 yard-lands, the vill of Anſty, and four cottages, with their tofts.

"The ſaid Robert Fitz-Parnell alſo gave them lands at Farningo and Sireſham; and Weſtcote, with the appurtenances, which earl Robert his grandfather had given to the church of Lincoln in exchange for the manor of Knighton, &c. And this was for their lands in Aſfordby and Segrave, which, by aſſent and compromiſe, were given to the church of Lincoln for peace ſake.

"The counteſs Petronell confirmed all that her ſon Robert had given; and farther gave them all her meadow in Thurmodeſton, called Belloholm, and her houſes in Leiceſter, with land and garden beyond the Weſt-bridge.

"Simon Montfort earl of Leiceſter, who had married Amicia, the elder daughter and coheireſs of Robert Fitz-Parnell, gave to this abbey a wood called Doveland; and land and wood towards Anſty, which was called Oſulves-hawe; and one piece of land that William de Belgrave held.

"Simon Montfort the younger confirmed all that his father and anceſtors had given; and farther gave them, by feoffment, 300 acres of land and wood in the foreſt of Leiceſter adjoining, which land lay from the way of Anſty-croſs to Dalſyke, and from Dalſyke beyond Storkyſhall unto Oldfeld over againſt Cropſton, and from Oldfeld along by the fields of Belgrave, and all the cleyhedges, with the veſture thereof.

"Margaret de Quincy, the youngeſt daughter of Robert Fitz-Parnell, and wife to Saer de Quincy, confirmed all that her anceſtors had given; and farther gave to the abbot and convent one yard-land lying in Shepeſhed, with a toft, croft, and the mill of Shepeſhed[1], with a grove of alders adjoining: with all the multure or grinding of Shepeſhed and Hathern, and of her own houſe at Shepeſhed; and that neither ſhe nor her heirs would ever erect any other mill in Shepeſhed or Hathern. She alſo gave them houſebote and haybote, and wood out of Charnwood Foreſt, to repair their houſes and mill, toties quoties; alſo one ſtag out of Charnwood yearly on the day of the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary. She granted to them, and to their men-ſervants and tenants of Brackley, Sireſham, Weſtcote, Halſo, Farningo, Weſton, Clifton, Bulkington, Brancote, Bernangul, Sow, Merſton, Stocton, Lokinton[2], Shepiſhed, Hemington, Anſty, Thurmaſton, Clenfeld, and Burton, that they ſhould be quit and free from all ſecular ſervice, exactions, demands, ſuit of court, view of frankpledge, and all foreign ſervice whatſoever.

"Saer de Quincy confirmed the grants of his wife; which were again confirmed by Roger de Quincy their ſon; who commanded R. Chamberleyn, his ſteward, to give the abbot and convent ſeiſin of all; giving them alſo ſeveral loads of wood for firing, and the tithe and tenth of all ſales of wood in his woods of Acle and Wyſſely, and the right ſhoulder of every deer killed in his park of Acle, with liberty to make ſtalls for cattle, and free paſſage into the foreſt. He gave them one yard-land in Weſton, which Richard Kyrke held; and common in all his purparty of the foreſt of Leiceſter; alſo ten ſhillings a year rent in Schevisby, from the prior of Chaucomb; and three ſhillings and four-pence at Hemington, from the heirs of Hugh de Derby and his partners, in exchange for their right of fiſhing in Groby pool; the homage and ſervice of Helias de Lynſey and Alice his wife; four yard-lands in Thurmaſton, and certain other lands there, with the ſervices of the tenants, as alſo of the tenants of the prior of Caldwell there.

"Alan la Zouch confirmed all that his anceſtors, the earls of Leiceſter and Wincheſter, had given to this monaſtery.

"We made mention before of Ernald de Boſco, or de Bois, a good benefactor to this houſe; in reference to whom, we may here obſerve, that Robert earl of Mellent in Normandy came in with William the Conqueror; and, according to the politic proceeding of the Conqueror, who rewarded his friends and followers with the lands and poſſeſſions of the ſubdued Engliſh; this Robert obtained the earldom, conſulate, or government of Leiceſter, with vaſt poſſeſſions both in this and other counties; which deſcended to his ſon Robert Boſſu our founder. And then theſe great Normans, to carry on the policy, parcelled out great ſhares of their lands to their followers and ſervants; amongſt whom Ernald de Bois, ſteward to Robert Boſſu, had a large partage, and, ſymbolizing with his lord's devotion, gave to this monaſtery (as is in part ſpecified before) the church of Clifton, with the chapels of Wovere (Brownſover) and Rokeby, the church of Thorpe near Melton, and thoſe of Humberſton[3] and Evington.

"To this Ernald ſucceeded three Ernalds de Bois ſucceſſively; and we find the ſecond Ernald confirming all that his father had given; and alſo all that Roger Watervile had given, mentioned before (for he was heir to this Watervile) adding ſome land, with a meadow, park, &c. at Creſſewell.

"Then Ernald de Bois the third confirmed all that his grandfather or father had given; and farther gave himſelf one bovate of land in Thorpe Ernald, with a toft and croft, and common of paſture for ſix ſcore ſheep, and ten acres of meadow in a certain place called Redinwalde.

"After him, Ernald the fourth confirmed all again; and farther granted to the abbot and convent common for ten cattle, eight oxen and two cows, with his cattle in his own paſture.

"King Stephen, by charter, made a confirmation of all hitherto; alſo 20 meaſures of ſalt out of the Wiches, of the gift of Waleran earl of Mellent; and two carucates of land in Rolei, called Hanecheſtofr, with the wood adjoining, of the gift of Ranulph earl of Cheſter; giving and granting to them alſo freedom from all ſecular ſervices, with liberty to hold courts, ſac and ſoc, tol and theam, infangenetheof, and all other cuſtoms and privileges, as he had granted to any church within his land.

"In the next place, king Henry II, by charter, confirmed all that the founder or others had given or ſhould give to this abbey; and alſo the churches of Knaptoft, Erneſby, and Staunton; the church of Langton, with the chapels of Thorpe and Tur Langton, of the gift of William de Novo Mercato and Roger de Bouden; the church of Barrow, of the gift of Ranulph earl of Cheſter, the chapel of Querndon, with the lands, tithes, &c. and one carucate of land of his demeſnes in Barrow and Querndon; the church of Narborough, with the chapel of Huncote, of the gift of Roger earl of Warwick; a meadow in Sigeſwold, of the gift of Geffery de Dalry; the vill of Conkyſbury, with the mill, the cliff, and 20 acres of land in Haddon, and the church of Adſtock, of the gift of W. Avenel;

---

[1] Plac. Aſſiſ. in com. Leic. 12 Edw. I. Rot. 5. de molendino in Shepeſhed.

[2] Eſch. Leic. 7 Edw. II. m. 36. de dimid. feodi mil. in Lokington; & Rot. 8 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 6. de manerio in Lokington.

[3] Rec. in Scacc. 7 Hen. VI. Mich. Rot. 4. de terris in Humberſton.

one yard of land in Eſſewell, of the gift of H. Tuchet; two parts of the garbs of the demeſnes of Gayam, of the gift of Robert earl of Leiceſter; the moiety of the church of Cheſham, and of the church of Billeſdon, with the chapels of Rolleſton and Godeby, of the gift of Robert de Sifrewaſt; the church of Billing, of the gift of W Barre; the churches of Thornton and Sireſham, of the gift of T. Sorrell; the church of Blaby, with the chapel of Counteſs Thorpe, of the gift of William de Lodbroke; the church of Huſbands Boreſworth, and one carucate of land there, of the gift of Robert de Boreſworth, and one yard-land in the ſame, of the gift of Roger Samſon; the church of North Kilworth, of the gift of Robert Rabaz; two yard-lands in Muſele, of the gift of Reginald de Muſele; one yard-land in Humberſton, of the gift of Ralph de Martinwaſt; one yard-land in Norton, of the gift of Robert de Burton; the churches of Barkby and Hungarton, with the chapels, of the gift of Walter de Power; the church of Eaton [1], of the gift of William de Evermeu; the churches of Eaſtwell and Bitteſwell, of the gift of Robert de Arraby; the church of Crudworth, with the hermitage, the wood of Brewood, and the mill, of the gift of Hugh de Ardena; one carucate in Sutton, of the gift of Geffery de Craft; one carucate in Stoke, of the gift of R. de Craft; the church of Craft, of the gift of Ralph de Turvile; one bovate of land in Shuckburg, of the gift of Oſbert de Lemington; the church of Wanlip, and ſix yard-lands in the ſame town, of the gift of Richard l'Abbé; one carucate of land in Empingham, of the gift of the ſaid Richard; three yard-lands in Kilby; five yard-lands in Bitteſwell, of the gift of Godefrid Patroc; one carucate of land in Thedingworth, of the gift of William de Kerby; the whole manor of Cokeram, of the gift of William de Lancaſter, with the church of the ſame town, and the chapel of Elhale; the church of Queniborough, with lands, tithes, &c. of the gift of Ralph de Queniburg, one yard-land in Lilburn, of the gift of Richard l'Abbé; three yard-lands in the ſame, of the gift of Geffrey de Dalby; one yard-land in Foxton, of the gift of Robert de Cotes; the church of Thedingworth, of the gift of Ralph Pincerna; the churches of Knipton and Hareſton, of the gift of Robert the ſon of Ralph, ſo as nevertheleſs that his ſon Gervaſe ſhould enjoy the ſame during his life.

"And then king John, by his charter, confirmed all, together with the exchanges that had been made with the biſhop of Lincoln mentioned before [2].

"Within the gift of the founder was alſo comprized the Abbey-gate, a ſtreet of houſes beyond St. Sunday's bridge, heretofore belonging to the abbey.

"Beſides all which, it appears that ſeveral other churches, tithes, lands, and poſſeſſions, were impropriated and given reſpectively to this abbey, as the manor of Ingwardby, or the greateſt part thereof, ſome time belonging to the lords Percy [3], and by them given to this abbey; ſeveral lands in Kilby, held by this abbey in frankalmoigne, of the gift of William la Zouch; the church of Lokington, with the chapel of Hemington; the church of Shepeſhed; beſides the lands and privileges therein before-mentioned.

"The church of Thurnby in this county being given to this abbey, as is mentioned before, and appropriated thereunto, Stoughton fell in with the ſame, as being within the pariſh of Thurnby; near unto which they had a great grange, with excellent fiſh-pools belonging to it, where ſtores and proviſions of corn, grain, cattle, fiſh, fruits, &c. were made and laid in for the uſe and maintenance of the abbot and convent." Thus far Mr. Staveley.

We ſhall now introduce ſuch additional particulars as have occurred in various reſearches; with ſome farther account of their poſſeſſions; a liſt of the abbots; and the preſent ſtate of the ſite of the abbey.

Mr. Burton ſays, "Of this houſe was ſome time abbot that moſt learned Gilbert Foliot [4]," who was after made biſhop of Hereford, 1149; and thence tranſlated to the ſee of London 1161. Memorable for two things; the one, his allegiance and fidelity to his king, being always true and faithful to king Henry the Second in all thoſe ſtirs between the king and Thomas Becket archbiſhop of Canterbury; for which cauſe he was twice excommunicated. The other, for a reſolute anſwer made to an unknown voice heard by him; for (as Matthew Paris [5] reporteth it) coming one night from the king, after long conference had with him, of theſe troubles with the ſaid archbiſhop Becket, as he lay meditating and muſing thereon in his bed, a terrible and unknown voice ſounded theſe words in his ears,

O Gilberte Foliot,
Dum revolvis tot eſt tot,
Deus tuus eſt Aſtaroth; which he, taking to come from the Devil, anſwered as boldly,

Mentiris, Demon; Deus meus eſt Sabaoth.

[——— O Gilbert Foliot,
While you compute what's to be got,
Your God's the God of Aſtarot.
Devil or man, you lie, you ſot;
My God's the God of Sabaot. F. P.]

He wrote an Apology for King Henry the Second, againſt the archbiſhop; and an invective againſt him; and another book of his ſudden and proud riſing; one book of Epiſtles, and ſix books upon the Canticles. He died in 1187, 34 Henry II."

The circumſtance of Foliot's having been abbot of Leiceſter, already noticed by Mr. Staveley, p. 455, is evidently a miſtake; his name not being in the liſt of abbots in their regiſter; nor does he mention this among his preferments in the following account of himſelf, extracted by Mr. Peck from a curious MS. formerly belonging to the priory of Belvoir, and ſtill preſerved among the literary treaſures of the duke of Rutland in the muniment-room at Belvoir, intituled,

"GILBERTI FOLIOTH Epiſtolæ."

Literis rubris, ad imum paginæ primæ, ſic ſunt inſcriptæ:

"Hunc librum dedit frater Willielmus de Belvero, prior ejuſdem eccleſie, Deo & Beate Marie de Belvero; quem qui alienaverit vel deleverit anathema ſit. Anima dicti Willielmi & anime omnium fidelium defunctorum requieſcant in pace. Amen."

In hujus codicis folio quinto decimo a fine retro (pagina 1. col. a.) de ſeipſo & ſuis in eccleſiâ dignitatibus ſic ſcribit Foliothus:

"In promotione meâ primâ Cluniaci prior quidam ſum conſtitutus in ordine. Dehinc prior Abbatis ville [6]. Hinc abbas Gloeceſtrie [7]. Poſtea epiſcopus Herefordie [8]. Hinc tranſlatus Londonie [9]. Confidenter aſſero, quod ad nullum horum ambivi; quorum tamen unumquodque, permittente Domino, conſequutus optinui."

Mr. Peck (from whoſe MSS. this account of Foliot's book is copied) adds, "It appears by the life of Gilbert Foliot in Wharton de Epiſcop. London, p. 60, & ſeqq. that Wharton never met with any more than ſeven letters of G. Foliot's; ſo that this MS. is really a very great rarity. The ſcarcity of copies, as I take it, is owing to Foliot's adhering to the king againſt Thomas Becket; for, Becket being ſainted, and Foliot twice excommunicated by him, it was meritorious to deſtroy the letters of the Martyr's adverſary.

"The epiſtles in this volume are thus numbered:

I. Gilleberti Hereford. ep̄i, domino Radulpho decano Hereford'—Sic incipit—A te longe poſiti, p. 1.

II. [Anonymo.] Poteram me cohibere ſilentio, p. 3.

III. Patri ſuo & domino H. Winton, Dei gratiâ, epiſcopo, & S. ſedis apoſtolice legato, frater Gilbertus eccleſie B. Petri Gloceſt. dictus abbas, totius obedientie & caritatis obſequium. Quum diſcretioni noſtre, in Chriſto amabilis pater, &c. p. 4.

---

[1] Plac. Aſſiſ. in com. Leic. Rot. 15. de advoc. eccleſie de Eytou.

[2] Cart. 2 Johannis, n. 44.

[3] "This lordſhip longgid once to one Algernoune, and after it was gyven to Leyrceſter abbay. Now it is Brian Caves, that boute it of the king It ſtondith very well, and the grounde aboute it is very riche of paſture. From Belleg eve to Ingreſby a 4 miles, partely by corne, paſture, and woody ground." Leland, Itin. vol. I. p. 22.

[4] He was a native of Devonſhire. Price's Worthies, p. 289.

[5] Fol. 108.

[6] Abbeville in Picardy, where there was a Cluniac priory.

[7] 11 id. Junii, 1139 Willis.

[8] Sept. 5, 1148. To this the archdeaconry of Oxford was added in the latter end of 1151. Le Neve.

[9] April 28, 1163. Ibid.

IV. Patri ſuo & domino Sim. Wigorn' epiſcopo, frater Gilbertus eccleſie B. Petri Gloc. dictus abbas, cum pietate fructus operari juſticie. Compellit me caritas. p. 5.

V. Patri ſuo & domino ſummo Dei gratiâ pontifici Celeſtino, Fr. Gilbertus B. Petri Gloc. dictus abbas, totum quod obedientie & obſequii valet humilis & primitiva devotio. Fidelis dominus de omnibus verbis ſuis. p. 6.

VI. Patri ſuo & domino T. Cant. Dei gratiâ archiepiſcopo, Fr. G. eccleſie B. Petri Gloc. dictus abbas, totum quod pacis, quod gratie, quod ſalutis. Gratias ago benevolentie veſtre, in Chriſto dilecte pater, ib.

There is not one copy of this book mentioned in the Oxford or Cambridge or Cotton Catalogues, or in the other Engliſh or Iriſh libraries. F. PECK."

In 1148, the abbot and convent of Leiceſter obtained ſeveral material privileges from pope Eugenius III; which were confirmed by ſucceeding pontiffs.

A compoſition between Paul abbot of Leiceſter and the prior of Trentham in Staffordſhire, relative to the church of Brackley, was confirmed by pope Celeſtine III. in 1191[1].

In the time of the ſame abbot, about 1200, a feoffment occurs, to Wigan de la Mare, of two toſts in Thedingworth, near the church, on the North ſide, in the tenure of Almer and William Chubbe, for his homage and ſervice; to hold to the feoffee, in caſe he ſhould have any heir of lawful marriage; otherwiſe to revert to the feoffors. "Teſtibus; magiſtro A. de Wilnâ, Petro de Sais, magiſtro Waltero Medico, Willelmo de Ceſtriâ, Heliâ nepote abbatis, Roberto de Oſulveſton & Bertrammo ſervientibus abbatis; & multis aliis[2].

In 1210, the right of the abbot and convent of Leiceſter to the chapelry of Clay Coton, in Northamptonſhire, was determined at law[3]; and by another ſuit, in 1229, their right to divers liberties within the manor of Sireſham, Farningho, and Brackley[4], and to the advowſon of Eydon, all in the ſame county[5], was fully eſtabliſhed.

In 1234, Stephen de Segrave, who had been juſtice of England, falling into the king's diſpleaſure, and being called to an account for his adminiſtration, fled to this abbey, pretending that he was a prieſt, and reſolved to ſhave his crown again, to be a canon of this houſe. Upon ſecond thoughts, he made his peace with the king, and came into action again; but died a canon regular here, Nov. 9, 1241[6].

Robert abbot of Leiceſter, about 1245, granted permiſſion to Solomon, chaplain to the hoſpital at Brackley, to found a church within that hoſpital[7].

In 1250, Henry Rotheley, abbot of Leiceſter, with others, were preſent at the agreement made by the Eremites of St. Auſtin in Atherſton with the parſon of Manceter, about the tithes of the ſite of their houſe[8], &c.

In 1252, the abbot and convent had a charter of confirmation from king Henry III, for 300 acres of wood in the foreſt near Leiceſter[9].

In 1254, the oldeſt "Rentale" of this abbey was compiled by a monk named "Le Pin."

In 1257, the abbot of Leiceſter was directed to return into the king's court all ſuch rolls of pleas, that had been held before Stephen de Segrave, as had been left in that abbey at his death[10].

In 1269, the king's letters patent were obtained, relative to the cuſtody of this monaſtery during the vacancy of an abbot[11].

In 1270, a general chapter of the clergy was held at Leiceſter, at which the prior of Barnwell preſided in the place of the abbot of Leiceſter; and among the MSS. in the library of Corpus Chriſti college, Oxford, is one (D. 1. p. 414.) intituled, "Statuta in capitulo generali Leyceſtr', tento in octab. Sancti Trinitatis, A. D. MCCLXXVI; præſidentibus in eodem capitulo domini priore de Bernewell loco abbatis de Leyceſtriâ, & priore de Ycon'[12]."

William Shepeſhed, abbot of Leiceſter, was one of thoſe who had a protection granted to him by king Edward I, in 1275, when he obliged all monaſteries to take ſuch protection[13].

In 1279, the abbey church was ſolemnly dedicated.

In 1291, on the Tueſday after the feaſt of All Saints, abbot William de Malverna obtained an inſtrument, under the common ſeal of the abbey, teſtifying that the convent was then indebted to divers creditors in the ſum of 2060 marks, 10*s.* 6*d.*[14].

In 1296, Robert Winchelſey, archbiſhop of Canterbury, by the pope's concurrence, publiſhed the conſtitution of pope Boniface VIII. forbidding the giving any thing to laymen; and king Edward I. at his parliament held at St. Edmund's, demanded a twelfth of the laity and a large ſubſidy of the clergy. The archbiſhop and clergy, not knowing how to comply, on account of the new conſtitution, without conſulting the pope, broke up, and returned home. Hereupon the temporalties of the clergy were ſeized; but many of them, and particularly the abbot of Leiceſter, compounded, and received the king's protection[15].

In 1300, Robert, ſon of Robert of Burſtall, had liberty to grant lands to this abbey[16]; and in the ſame year it was found that prince Edmund, earl of Leiceſter, the king's brother, was their patron[17].

At the feaſt of the Annunciation following, the abbey poſſeſſed 21 ſilver ſalt-cellars, and 43 ſilver-diſhes; out of which the abbot had for his own uſe 12 diſhes and 8 ſalt-ſellars; the others were aſſigned to the uſe of the convent, and delivered ad coquinam[18].

In 1305, Richard de Bricheley had licence to give Anſty mill to this abbey[19].

In 1310-11, Anthony Bek, biſhop of Durham, had licence to give 74 acres of land at Ratby[20].

In 1311, William Aunſelys and Richard Whileby gave certain lands and tenements in the Abbey Gate[21].

In the ſame year, a commiſſion iſſued from archbiſhop Reynolds, to Thomas de Bray, a canon of Leiceſter, on a diſpute between the abbot and convent and the pariſhioners of St. Nicholas, concerning the preſentation of a vicar[22].

In 1312, in a full court of Huſtings, in the Guildhall of the city of London, Hugh de Chaundeler, John de Stratford, and John de Eure, executors of the laſt will of William de Langley, clerk, aſſigned to the abbot and convent a conſiderable eſtate, conſiſting of ſeveral houſes, &c. in the pariſh of St. Sepulchre, in the Suburbs of London; part of which extended from St. Sepulchre's church-yard to Holborn-bridge; with 14 ſhops in Cock-lane; the rent of a meſſuage called the Reindeer, and of a meſſuage in Weſt Smithfield near the Pool[23].

At the death of archbiſhop Winchelſey in 1318, Thomas Plantageret, earl of Lancaſter and Leiceſter, ſent a requeſt to the pope, that this archbiſhop, for the ſake of his holy and ſtrict life, of his excellent merits, and glorious miracles done by him, might have the honour he deſerved, of being ſolemnly canonized for a Saint; but in vain[24].

In 1320, the king having iſſued writs[25] to call the clergy together to conſider of a ſubſidy for the war, ſent a mandate to archbiſhop Reynolds for them to meet on the morrow of the tranſlation of ſir Thomas the Martyr[26]: the archbiſhop's letter[27] ſummoned them to Leiceſter, and gave a proxy (procuratorium[1]) to the biſhops of London and Wincheſter to aſſiſt at it. In his regiſter[2] is a commiſſion and proxy to appear there for him; the king's letter to convoke the clergy; and his writ to prorogue the council.

---

[1] Appendix, p. 68.

[2] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, p. 398.—Wiganus de Mara occurs in a record, 8 Hen. III.

[3] See hereafter, under the poſſeſſions of the abbey, a few pages farther on.

[4] Mich. Rec. 14 Hen. III. Rot. 30. This point was again litigated in 1319. See hereafter under the poſſeſſions of the abbey.

[5] This alſo was again conteſted at law in 1290; but was determined in favour of the abbey. See this alſo hereafter.

[6] Matth. Paris, p. 772.

[7] Appendix, p. 61.

[8] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1085.

[9] Cart. 37 Hen. III. m. 3.

[10] Appendix, p. 61.

[11] Pat. 54 Hen. III. m. 4. vel 5.

[12] Gen. Cat. 1621. 154.

[13] Stevens, vol. I. p. 175. b.

[14] Appendix, p. 72.

[15] Stevens, Monaſticon, vol. I. pp. 175. 327.

[16] Appendix, p. 61.

[17] See before, p. 222; and Appendix, pp. 23. 61.

[18] Appendix, p. 72.

[19] Ibid. p. 61.

[20] Ibid p. 62. See his ſeal, plate XVII. fig. 1.

[21] Appendix, p. 62.

[22] Ibid. p. 62.

[23] See p. 275; and Appendix, p. 73.

[24] Somner, Antiq. Cant. p. 130.

[25] Printed in Wilkins's Concil. vol. II. p. 456. Reg. Reynolds, fol. 73. a.

[26] Wilkins, ibid. p. 444. Reg. Reynolds, fol. 105. b.

[27] Wilkins, ibid. p. 538. Reg. Reynolds, fol. 207. a.

On the attainder of the earl of Lancaſter, in 1322, the abbot and convent experienced ſome temporary inconveniences; a conſiderable part of their property being diſtrained, on the idea of its belonging to that nobleman. In this ſituation was one of the grants of Simon earl of Montfort, of £6. rent at Leiceſter, a load of fuel daily from his wood, and pannage for their hogs; and a ſimilar grant of wood which they had enjoyed from the time of their foundation[3].

In 1323, John de Tours had licence to found a chantry in this abbey; and to endow it with 88 acres of arable land, and four acres and a half of meadow at Burſtall, Leiceſter, and Stanton under Burton[4].

In 1325, they were diſturbed in the poſſeſſion of the tithes of Bagworth Park; which they had long enjoyed as a member of their church of Thornton[5].

In 1326, the amount of lambs received by the abbey for tithes in the High Peak of Derby was 237; of fleeces 426 reckoning by the great hundred, which weighed 87 ſtone[6].

Among the records in the Tower during the reign of Edward III. occurs, "Litera miſſa domino papæ, de licentiâ dandâ abbati & conventui de Leiceſtre, quod ipſi adquirere valeant eccleſiam de Humberſton, dioceſ. Lincolnienſis. Data apud Eltham, 30 Martii[7].

In 1329, the abbot and convent were, by the king's writ, put into poſſeſſion of a parcel of wood at Halliwellhagh near Loughborough, which they had purchaſed from Henry de Beaumont[8].

In 1334, John de Spondon vicar of Lockington, and William de Wivelleſton vicar of Shepeſhed, had licence to grant lands at Shepeſhed to this abbey[9]; and in 1337, John de Spondon and William de Aſton had licence to grant lands, &c. at Skeffington[10].

Of William Geryn, a canon of this houſe, to whom in 1341 the abbey was indebted for the compilation of a "Rentale," the following benefactions are recorded. He gave the pulpit in the refectory, a picture in the chapel of our Lady, the cieling and painting of the whole choir and body of the abbey-church, a table at the altar of St. Mary, a ſilver croſs with the images of St. John and Mary, a picture of the crucifix, and of Mary and John, with ſeveral others[11].

In 1344, Richard abbot of Leiceſter was directed to find a proper and ſtrong houſe in his abbey, to receive the moneys collected for the tenth and fifteenth; and allow free ingreſs and egreſs to the collectors, who were to anſwer for them to the king[12].

In 1349, William la Zouch, formerly dean (and then archbiſhop) of York, and ſir Roger la Zouch, knt. had liberty to grant ſix meſſuages and ſeveral parcels of lands at Lubbeſthorpe[13].

In 1352, Henry duke of Lancaſter granted licence to the abbot and convent to impark their wood, and gave them deer to ſtore it out of his foreſt of Leiceſter; and, by his perſonal mediation with the Pope, procured for them liberty to appropriate the churches of Humberſton and Hungarton to the abbey, which was this year effected; in conſideration whereof, they remitted and quitted-claim to him their right in their lands and tenements of Everley in Wiltſhire, and a cart-load of wood, which they had uſed to receive daily out of the foreſt of Leiceſter[14].

In 1352, Simon de Iſlip, archbiſhop of Canterbury, had licence to found a chantry here; and to endow the ſame with 7 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 2 carucates, and 5 virgates of arable land, two acres of meadow, and 14*s.* annual rent, in Babbegrave, Stoughton, Coſby, and Little Thorpe; the manor of Ingwardby, and the advowſon of Willoughby[15].

In 1361, Simon Pakeman, Thomas de Roppele, clerk, and Richard of Leiceſter, had licence to grant to this abbey the manor and advowſon of Kirkby Malore, with their appurtenances; 7 meſſuages, a mill, 5 virgates of arable, 10 acres of meadow, 62*s.* 1*d.* annual rent, and an acknowledgement of two pounds of cumin, at Bitteſwell, with the advowſon of that church[16].

In 1364, ſome perſons, deſigning to rob the abbey church, got into it through the window over the altar of St. John the Evangeliſt; but, being ſoon diſcovered by the ſacriſt, they were forced to depart before they had done any damage[17].

In 1370, pope Gregory XI. granted to this abbey the liberty of eating white meats made of milk during the ſeaſon of Advent (comedendi lacticinia in tempore Adventûs Domini[18]). In this year alſo, at the requeſt of abbot Clowne, king Edward III. granted a pardon to brother Henry de Knighton, for the offence he had committed in harbouring Robert de Killingworth, a minorite, and his ſervant boy, felones regis[19]. This ſeems to have been the period when Henry de Knighton, the able Chronicler already commended in p. 257, became firſt a canon of this abbey; which, by the indulgences of divers popes, had the privilege of affording ſanctuary, to a conſiderable extent, to ſuch as choſe to aſſociate themſelves into their fraternity; and the crime of Henry de Knighton, in concealing two felons, was not of too grievous a dye to exclude him from this privilege. As a native of the neighbouring village of Knighton, he was probably indebted to this abbey, or ſome of its monks, for his education; and it is certain that, after his admiſſion, he applied himſelf ſo ſedulouſly to ſtudy[20] as to compile one of the moſt ſatisfactory Chronicles in our language.

In 1371, the abbot and convent ſold three virgates of land in Buſby[21].

To the account of abbot Clowne, who died in 1377, the "Rentale" of Charyte enables us to add, that in his time the gates of the abbey were new-built with brick; the abbot's hall was built, which coſt upwards of £39.; and more than £33. expended on Brackley chancel. He obtained an exemption from the payment of a hariot (cupam vel palfredum) on the death of an abbot; ordained the ſeveral chantries of the convent; and changed the uſe of black ſhoes to black boots (uſum nigrarum botarum a nigris caligis cum nigris ſotularibus[22]). The ſingular grant of a dog-market, or fair, which he obtained from king Edward I, as noticed in p. 255, was not eſtabliſhed[23].

In 1382, Philip de Repingdon (who had been a ſtudent of Broadgate-hall, in St. Aldate's pariſh, Oxford, and was then D. D. of Pembroke college) was accuſed of being an advocate for the doctrines of Wickliff, both in preaching, and in open diſputation in the univerſity, and alſo in his writings; amongſt which, one book was a profeſſed "Defence of Wickliffe," and another of his "Moral Doctrine." He wrote alſo a book of Homilies for the year; and others, on the Goſpels upon the Sabbath-days, of Secular Government; and of Queſtions diſcuſſed[1].

---

[1] Wilkins, Concil. vol. II. p. 539. Reg. Reynolds, fol. 207. b.
[2] Reg. Reynolds, fol. 207. b. 208. a.
[3] Appendix, p. 59.
[4] Ibid, p. 62.
[5] Ibid. p. 59.
[6] Ibid. p. 69.
[7] Rotulus Romæ, 3 Edw. III.
[8] Appendix, p. 62.
[9] Ibid.
[10] Ibid.
[11] Ibid. p. 68.
[12] Ibid. p. 60.
[13] Ibid. p. 62.
[14] Knighton, fol. 2605.
[15] Appendix, p. 63. See this archbiſhop's ſeal, plate XVII. fig. 2.
[16] Appendix, p. 63.
[17] Knighton, fol. 2628.

[18] Wheatley, in his "Illuſtration of the Common Prayer," ſays, Whitſunday was ſo called, "quia prædeceſſores noſtri omne lac ovium et vaccarum ſuarum ſolebant dare pauperibus illo die, pro Dei amore, ut puriores efficerentur ad recipiendum donum Spiritus Sancti."—"Et certè quod de lacte vaccarum refert, illud percognitum habeo, in agro Hamptonienſi (an et alibi neſcio) decimas lacticiniorum venire vulgò ſub hoc nomine, The whites of kine; apud Leiceſtrenſes etiam lacticinia vulgariter dicuntur Whitemeat."

[9] Rot. 44 Edw. III. p. 3.

[20] "Totum ſe dedicavit lectioni autorum, qui de rebus Anglicis ſcripſerunt; hoc conſilio, quod præſtantius eſſe duxerit hiſtoriam ſuæ gentis, qualicunque editam ſtylo, pernoſcere, quam alterius cujuſvis remotæ nationis originem, ac fortia facta vel ab ipſis Liviis ſcripta. Sed poſtea quam in incepto pulchrè proceſſiſſet opere, venit illi in mentem, ut recentiorum temporum e; geſtas in ordinem redigeret. Itaque multa ſelegit ex libris, quos in conſilium vocavit, multa etiam privatim ex illis, quorum longo domi militiæque claruerat experientia, didicit, ac poſteritati tanquam per manus tradidit." Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 458.

[21] Appendix, p. 69.
[22] Ibid. p. 68.

[23] Knighton, inter Decem Scriptores, 2631. 45, &c. "Abbas verò noluit inſtare circa negotium."

"This man," ſays Fox, "was a canon of Leiceſter, and had before taken his firſt degree unto doctorſhip; who preaching the ſame time at Brodgates, for the ſame ſermon he became ſuſpected and hated of the Phariſaical brood of the friers; but, through the great and notable dexterity of his wit (which all men did behold and ſee in him), accompanied with like modeſty and honeſty, he did ſo overcome, or at the leaſt aſſuage, this cruelty and perſecution which was towards him, that ſhortly after, by the conſent of the whole fellowſhip, he was admitted doctor; who, as ſoon as he had taken it upon him, ſtepped forth in the ſchools, and began to ſhew forth that which he had long diſſembled. Now the day of Corpus Chriſti aforeſaid approaching near, when the friers underſtood that this man ſhould preach, fearing leſt that he would rub the galls of their religion, they convented with the archbiſhop of Canterbury, that the ſame day, a little before that Philip ſhould preach, Wickliff's concluſions, which were privately condemned, ſhould be openly defamed in the preſence of the whole univerſity. The doing of which matter was committed to Peter Stokes, frier, ſtandard-bearer and chief champion of that ſide againſt Wickliff. There were alſo letters ſent unto the commiſſary, that he ſhould help and aid him in publiſhing of the ſame concluſions, as is before declared. Theſe things thus done and finiſhed, Repingdon at the hour appointed proceeded to his ſermon. In the which ſermon, among many other things, he was reported to have uttered theſe ſayings, or to this effect: 'That the popes or biſhops ought not to be recommended above temporal lords. Alſo, that in moral matters he would defend Maſter Wickliff as a true Catholic doctor. Moreover, that the duke of Lancaſter was very earneſtly affected and minded in this matter, and would that all ſuch ſhould be received under his protection;' beſides many things more which touched the praiſe and defence of Wickliff. And finally, in concluding his ſermon, he diſmiſſed the people with this ſentence; 'I will (ſaid he) in the ſpeculative doctrine, as appertaining to the matter of the ſacrament of the altar, keep ſilence and hold my peace, until ſuch time as God otherwiſe ſhall inſtruct and illuminate the hearts of the clergy.' When the ſermon was done, Repingdon entered into St. Frideſwide's church, accompanied with many of his friends; who, as the enemies ſurmiſed, were privily weaponed under their garments, if need had been. Frier Stokes, the Carmelite aforeſaid, ſuſpecting all this to be againſt him, and being afraid of hurt, kept him within the ſanctuary of the church, not daring as then to put out his head. The vicechancellor and Repingdon, friendly ſaluting one another in the church-porch, ſent away the people; and ſo departed every man home to his own houſe. There was not a little joy through the whole univerſity for that ſermon; but, in the mean time, the unquiet and buſy Carmelite declared the whole order of the matter unto the archbiſhop, exaggerating the perils and dangers, and requiring his help and aid."

Various proceedings were had on ſeveral different days in the priory of the Friers Preachers in London; and on the 20th of June ſome conceſſions were made by Repingdon and "Maſter Nicholas Herford," who was involved with him in the accuſation[2]. Yet we find them again appearing before the archbiſhop, on the 28th of June, in the chapel of his manor of Otford; whence (as the archbiſhop had not at that time the preſence of the doctors in divinity; and of the canon and civil law) the hearing was adjourned till the firſt of July, in the chief houſe of the archbiſhop's church at Canterbury; on which day, neither Repingdon nor Herford appearing, ſentence of excommunication was pronounced againſt them both; which, in conſequence of a mandate from the archbiſhop, dated at his manor-houſe of Lambeth, July 13, was ſolemnly denounced by the preacher at Paul's Croſs, "by holding up a croſs, and lighting up a candle, and then throwing down the ſame on the ground." Repingdon and Herford fled to the duke of Lancaſter for ſuccour; and, in the mean time, great ſearch was made for them, to cite and to apprehend them whereſoever they might be found. On the 25th of July, the ſentence of excommunication againſt them both was repeated at Oxford; after which, not finding the protection which was expected from the duke, Repingdon contrived to make his peace; for we find, by a letter in the Lambeth Regiſters, dated Oct. 23, that he was then reconciled to the archbiſhop, and admitted to his ſcholaſtical acts in the univerſity[3]; and on the 24th of November, in the preſence of the prelates and the clergy, in the chapter-houſe of St. Frideſwide, made the following abjuration:

"In Dei nomine, amen. I Philip Repingdon, canon of the houſe of Leiceſter, acknowledging one Catholic and Apoſtolic faith, do curſe and abjure all hereſy, namely, theſe hereſies and errors under-written, condemned and reproved by the decrees canonical, and by you, moſt reverend father, touching which I have hitherto been defamed; condemning moreover and reproving both them and the authors of them; and do confeſs the ſame to be catholically condemned. And I ſwear alſo by theſe holy Evangeliſts, which here I hold in my hand, and do promiſe, never by any perſuaſions of men, nor by any way hereafter, to defend, or hold as true, any of the ſaid concluſions underwritten; but do and will ſtand and adhere in all things to the determination of the holy Catholic church, and to yours, in this behalf. Over and beſides, all ſuch as ſtand contrary to this faith, I do pronounce them, with their doctrine and followers, worthy of everlaſting curſe; and, if I myſelf ſhall preſume at any time to hold or preach any thing contrary to the premiſes, I ſhall be content to abide the ſeverity of the canons. Subſcribed with mine own hand, and of mine own accord, William Repingdon[4]."

In 1389, William Courtney, archbiſhop of Canterbury, viſited the dioceſe of Lincoln. On the feaſt of St. Faith the Virgin (Oct. 6.) he viſited the cathedral of Lincoln; and on the Sunday before All Saints came for the ſame purpoſe to the abbey of Leiceſter, and ſtayed there ſeveral days; during which, information was given him, that Roger Dexter, Nicholas Taylor, Richard Wagſtaffe, Michael Scrivener, William Smith, John Henry, William Parchmentar, and Roger Goldſmith, inhabitants of Leiceſter, held opinions concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, &c. contrary to the church of Rome; whereupon he cauſed them to be cited to appear before him at the abbey next day; which they not doing, he, on All Saints day, celebrating maſs at the high altar in the monaſtery, denounced them and all their adherents excommunicate. He alſo cauſed the ſaid excommunication to be publiſhed in all the pariſh-churches; and laid the whole town under an interdict ſo long as any of them ſhould remain in the ſame, until they ſhould obtain abſolution from him[1]. Of theſe eight perſons, Mr. Carte ſuppoſes that the laſt, Roger Goldſmith, died under the ſentence of excommunication, and therefore was buried in the back-lanes, at the place which from him is to this day known by the name of Goldſmith's Grave. William Smith, Roger Dexter, and Alice his wife, at length recanted: and thereupon had the following penance enjoined them:

---

[1] "Repingtonus a literis ſuo ſæculo commendatiſſimus, in numero ſcriptorum merito quidem ponendus. Sic fama, ſic memoria, ſic virtus jubet, quibus pro dignitate obtemperandum certè. Scholis in Iſiacis ſub ipſum adoleſcentiæ florem multa tulit fecitque, diligentiâ plane admirabili uſus; quam nec ante intenſam remittebat, quam ſcopum attigiſſet deſtinatum. Tum verò inſtructiſſimus philoſophus idemque theologus, doctorum ſedulo imitatus exemplum, ad ſcribendum ſe totum contulit, multaque non infeliciter commentatus eſt; e quibus extant in Evangelia lucubrationes, "Dominicalia," lib. i. Pr. pr. "Evangelicæ tubæ comminatio." Pr. I. "Dominici adventus tempus quater." MS. Cantab. in colleg. Caii, K. 59. et in aula Pembr. MS. 49.—Sermones Repington extabant olim MS. in bibl. eccl. S. Pauli. Dugdale, 283. "De ſæculari dominio," lib. i. "Quæſtiones diſputatas," lib. i. "Scripſit etiam Defenſorium Wiclevi," lib. i. "Pro doctrina [ejus de moribus, Add. Bal. Lel.] morali ejuſdem," lib. i. "Homelias per annum," lib. i. Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 622.

[2] Extat MS. bibl. Bodl. Muſ. 163. f. 67. a. ejus et Nic. Hereford. reſponſio ad xxiv concl. damnatus in ſynodo MCCCLXXXII. Pr. "Proteſtamur ut alias publice:" et Angl. MS. bibl. Bodl. Arch. B. 83. Et in vol. III. Concil. M. Brit. et Hib. p. 161. ſeqq. ejus et Nicol. Heref. recantatio in domo fratrum minorum, 19 Jun. MCCCLXXXII. coram archiepiſcopo Cantuar. Ibid. Vid. Concil. M. Brit. et Hib. vol. III. p. 172." Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 622.

[3] "Reſtitutio domini Phil. Repyngdon, canonici Leyceſtr. ad actus ſcholaſticos et priſtinam famam per Willielm, archiep. Cant. mandatum, dat. 23 Oct. MCCCLXXXII. extat apud Twinum, A 262. et in Concil. M. Brit. et Hib. vol. III. p. 169. et 172. ſeq." Tanner, ibid.

[4] See theſe proceedings more fully detailed, from the Lambeth Regiſters, in Fox's Acts and Monuments, vol. I. p. 498—508.

"That, the Sunday next after their returning to their proper goods, they the ſaid William, Roger, and Alice, holding every of them an image of the Crucifix in their hands, and in their left hands every one of them a taper of wax, weighing half a pound weight, in their ſhirts (having none other apparel upon them) do go before the croſs three times, during the proceſſion of the cathedral church of our Lady of Leiceſter; that is to ſay, in the beginning of the proceſſion, in the middle of the proceſſion, and in the latter end of the proceſſion; to the honour of him that was crucified, in the memorial of his Paſſion, and to the honour of the Virgin his mother; who alſo, devoutly bowing their knees and kneeling, ſhall kiſs the ſame crucifix, ſo held in their hands. And ſo with the ſame proceſſion they, entering again into the church, ſhall ſtand during all the time of the holy Maſs, before the image of the croſs, with their tapers and croſſes in their hands. And, when the Maſs is ended, the ſaid William, Roger, and Alice, ſhall offer to him that celebrated that day the Maſs. Then, upon the Saturday next enſuing, the ſaid William, Roger, and Alice, ſhall in the full and public market, within the town of Leiceſter, ſtand in like manner in their ſhirts, without any more cloaths upon their bodies, holding the aforeſaid croſſes in their right hands; which croſſes three times they ſhall (during the market) devoutly kiſs, reverently kneeling upon their knees; that is, in the beginning of the market, in the middle of the market, and in the end of the market. And the ſaid William (for that he ſomewhat underſtandeth the Latin tongue) ſhall ſay this Anthem with the Collect, Sancta Katharina; and the aforeſaid Roger and Alice, being unlearned, ſhall ſay devoutly a Pater Noſter, and an Ave Maria. And thirdly, the Sunday next immediately after the ſame, the ſaid William, Roger, and Alice, in their pariſh-church of the ſaid town of Leiceſter, ſhall ſtand and do as upon the Sunday before they ſtood and did in the cathedral church of our Lady aforeſaid in all things. Which done, the aforeſaid William, Roger, and Alice, after Maſs, ſhall offer to the prieſt or chaplain that celebrated the ſame, with all humility and reverence, the wax-tapers which they ſhall carry in their hands. And becauſe of the cold weather that now is, leſt the aforeſaid penitents might peradventure take ſome bodily hurt ſtanding ſo long naked (being mindful to moderate partly the ſaid our rigour) we give leave, that after their entrance into the churches aboveſaid, whilſt they ſhall be in hearing the aforeſaid Maſſes, they may put on neceſſary garments to keep them from cold, ſo that their heads and feet notwithſtanding be bare and uncovered[2]." This ceremony being fully performed, they were all abſolved. The inſtrument for this purpoſe is dated at Dorcheſter, Nov. 17, 1389.

Whilſt the archbiſhop was at Leiceſter, complaint was made to him of Matilda, a recluſe in the church-yard of St. Peter's church in Leiceſter, as one that was tainted with the like principles as the others. Upon his excommunication of her, he, apprehending her anſwers to be ſubtle and unſatisfactory, appointed her on a day prefixed to appear perſonally before him in the monaſtery of St. James at Northampton; and in the mean time ordered the abbot of Leiceſter to put her into ſafe cuſtody. Upon her appearance at Northampton, ſhe gave the archbiſhop ſome better ſatisfaction, recanted the opinions charged upon her, and, being enjoined 40 days penance, was remitted to her recluſe abode at Leiceſter again[3].

In 1392, John Oxcliff, John Coiton, John Twywell, John Anſty, Richard Gameſton, Robert of the Halle, and Richard Barwe, had licence to give to the abbey at Leiceſter 6 meſſuages, 15 cottages, 3 virgates, 1 bovate, 1 acre, and 1 rood of arable, 3 acres of meadow, 4*d.* yearly rent, and an acknowledgement of a pound of cumin, in Leiceſter and its Suburbs, Humberſton, Burſtall, Barkby, and Lockington[4].

In 1393, on the reſignation of William de Kerby, Philip de Repingdon, who in the regiſtry at Lincoln is ſtyled "Sacr' pag' profeſſor[5]," was elected abbot of this houſe[6]. In 1395, he obtained a writ to compel Giles Jordan of Loughborough to reſtore the tithes of Woodhouſe, a chapelry of Barrow, which had been unjuſtly detained[7]; and in 1399 obtained for his abbey, from king Henry IV, an annual grant of £245. being the whole profits of the alien priory of Ware, which had been ſeized by king Edward III, during his wars with France, as a cell to the abbey of St. Ebrulph in Normandy. He obtained alſo from the king a charter of exemption from all corrodies[8], and a confirmation of all the poſſeſſions of the abbey; procured for them a beautiful tranſcript of all the privileges they had received from the different popes[9], archbiſhops, and biſhops[10]; and, in 1402, completed an agreement with John biſhop of Lichfield for ſettling their reſpective boundaries on each ſide the Trent, in the townſhips of Sallowe and Lockington[11]. He had the honour of being chancellor of the univerſity of Oxford in the years 1397, 1400, 1401, and 1402; and, in a writing, dated May 5, 1400, at which time ſeveral ſtatutes were made concerning the election of the chancellor and other officers, he is ſtyled "clericus ſpecialiſſimus illuſtris principis D. regis "Henrici;" and "Vir potens & Deum timens, amans "veritatem, & deteſtans avaritiam[12]," &c. He was confeſſor alſo to the king; and, in the brief Regiſter of Prior Charyte, we find this entry: "Memorandum, quod Henricus IV, finito magno bello in campo Salopie, et victoriâ habitâ, confeſtim fecit proclamationem per totum exercitum ſuum, ſi aliquis ſervus abbatis Leyceſtrie fuerit ibi. Statim venit unus ſervus dicti abbatis; cui rex tradidit annulum de digito ſuo, donans ei c ſolidos, precipiendo quod cum omni feſtinatione pergeret ad dominum Philippum abbatem Leyceſtrie, et nullo modo quieſcat, donec traderet ei dictum annulum, et diceret ei, quod rex vivit, habens victoriam de inimicis ſuis, benedictus Deus. Item iſte venerabilis pater Philippus ſimul & ſemel fuit abbas Leyc', doctor theologie, cancellarius univerſitatis Oxonie, & confeſſor domini regis Anglie, & poſtea epiſcopus Lincoln'[13]." On biſhop Beaufort's tranſlation to Wincheſter in 1405, Dr. Repingdon obtained the ſee of Lincoln; and after this became ſuch a perſecutor of the Wicklevians, that he was commonly called Philip Rampington. Whilſt he was biſhop, we find a commiſſion, addreſſed to his ſucceſſor Richard Rotheley, for the examination of Iſolda N. who was deſirous to exchange the pomps of the world, and the ſnares of worldly converſation, for the riches of eternal treaſure, by becoming an anchoret in the cemetery of St. Peter at Leiceſter[1]. He was made a cardinal by pope Gregory XII in 1409[2]; reſigned his biſhoprick in 1419[3]; and lived private from that time till his death, which happened in 1424; in which year, on the firſt of Auguſt, his will was proved in the new collegiate church at Leiceſter. Of this will Mr Gough has the following abſtract in Mr. Anſtis's copy of Godwin: "Ego Phil. de Ripyndon, nuper-eccleſie Linc. ep̄us, compos mentis, appropinquante conſimiliter viâ mortis meæ.—Miſſa funeralis in eccleſiâ paroch. S. Margaretæ infra clauſum Linc. pro animâ meâ—in die miſſæ meæ funeralis veſtiantur c pauperes—Corpus meum extra limen porticûs eccleſiæ parochialis Sc̄æ Margaretæ prædict', ex parte borealis ejuſdem eccleſiæ, ſub plano & aperto firmamento cæli; non in eccleſiâ vel monaſterio, quia ad hoc me indignum reputo, ſepeliri nudum & in ſacco miſerum faciant tumulari." He was however buried in his cathedral, near the South wall, by biſhop Groſſeteſte's tomb; with this inſcription on a braſs plate in the middle of a plain ſlab:

---

[1] Knighton, col. 2733. [2] Fox's Acts and Monuments, vol. I. p. 577. [3] Ibid. p. 576. [4] Appendix, p. 64.

[5] This ſeems equivalent to the modern S. T. P. ſacræ theologiæ profeſſor. [6] Reg. Bokingham, pars ſecunda. [7] Appendix, p. 64.

[8] A corrody was a ſum of money, or allowance of meat, drink, and cloathing, due to the king, or any other founder of an abbey or religious houſe, towards the reaſonable ſubſiſtence of any ſervant he thinks fit to beſtow it on. Fitzherbert, Nat. Br. 250. ſets down all the corrodies and penſions certain that abbeys, when they ſtood, were bound to perform to the king. For an elucidation of the ſubject, ſee hereafter, p. 267.

[9] See theſe in our Appendix, p. 70. [10] The confirmations of divers archbiſhops of Canterbury are enumerated in Charyte's Rentale, p. clxxv. a. b; of biſhops of Coventry and biſhops of Lincoln, p. clxxv. b; and of archbiſhops of York, p. clxxvi.

[11] Appendix, p. 64; and ſee his good deeds more particularly ſpecified, Appendix, p. 71.

[12] Gutch's Hiſtory and Antiquity of the Colleges, &c. at Oxford, p. 622; Appendix, pp. 34—36.

[13] Cotton MSS. Vitellius F. XVII.

Marmoris in tumba ſimplex ſine felle columba
Repington natus jacet hic Philippus humatus.
Flos Adamas cleri, paſtor gregis, et preco veri,
Vivat ut in celis quem poſcat quique fidelis[4]."

In 1408, another "Rentale" of this houſe was compiled by a canon of the name of Bathe.

In 1409, whilſt John Rotheley was abbot, the chancel of St. Martin's at Leiceſter was rebuilt[5].

In the regiſter of archbiſhop Arundel, an inſtrument is preſerved, under the Title of "Relaxatio interdicti Monaſterii B. M. de Pratis Leyceſt', & abſolutio procuratoris ejuſdem. Dat. apud Forde, A. D. 1410[6]."

In 1414, a parliament was held at Leiceſter, in which 110 religious houſes, called Alien Priories[7], were ſuppreſſed entirely, and their poſſeſſions given to the king and his heirs for ever[8]; moſt of which were afterwards given by Henry the Sixth to other monaſteries and houſes of learning, eſpecially King's College in Cambridge, and Eaton College, of that king's foundation. Several compoſitions which the abbey of Leiceſter had entered into with that of St. Ebrulph, reſpecting tithes of various places in Leiceſterſhire, were transferred to the prior and convent of Jeſus of Bethlehem of Shene; with whom the abbot and convent of Leiceſter entered into a new engagement; which, for the annual rent of twelve pounds a year, ſecured to them all they had before on leaſe from the abbot and convent of St. Ebrulph; conſiſting of tithes at Braunſton, Kerby, Kirkby Malory, Thorpe-Ernald, Stoughton, Buſhby, Evington, Humberſton, Great Wigſton, Thornton, Bagworth, Enderby, Doveland, the earl of Leiceſter's demeſne in the South and Weſt gates of Leiceſter, in a place called the aſſartum of Simon Danet in the Suburbs of Leiceſter, and in ſeveral places called Culleferland, Edwynerys, and Stocking[9].

At the firſt ſuppreſſion of the alien priories, that of Ware[10] was given by king Henry V. to the monks at Shene; but was afterwards in 1422[11] transferred to the abbey of Leiceſter, which had for a conſiderable time received from it a large annual income. It was, however, again reſtored to the priory of Shene; and, as parcel of their poſſeſſions, was granted by king Henry VIII. to Trinity College, Cambridge.

About the year 1420, Thomas Langley, biſhop of Durham, one of the executors of the will of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, gave to this abbey the patronage of a chantry for two chaplains founded by the duke's directions in the New College at Leiceſter[12].

In 1421, the canons of the order of St. Auſtin reminded king Henry V, that they had lately applied to him, when at Leiceſter, for the grant of a proper ſeminary at Oxford, for the education of the young canons of their order; and requeſted that a convenient place for that purpoſe might be purchaſed at Candyche, near the monks of Durham, without the walls of the city, and beſtowed on them by the king. This appears by the Rolls of Parliament[13]. And we learn from Stevens's Monaſticon, that the canons obtained, from the ſingular devotion of that monarch, a warrant under his ſignet, with a commiſſion from the lord treaſurer, to purchaſe lands at Oxford for a manſion-place; but, the king's will being not fully performed, the canons for that time were fruſtrated of their deſigns, totally diſperſed, and their buſineſs came to nought; wherefore, to renew it again, and that they might be privileged in having a nurſery for the young canons of their order[14] in the univerſity, as others had, the prior of the Holy Trinity in London, the abbot of Waltham, the prior of Twynham, the abbot of Leiceſter, the prior of Giſeburn[15], the prior of Bridlington, the prior of St. Oſwald in Noſtel, the prior of Hexham, and the prior of Carliol, in the name of the reſt, with a joint conſent, petitioned king Henry VI, that the work, which had ſlept for many years, might be carried on; wherefore the ſaid king, by his letters patent, dated Dec. 24, 1435, gave leave to Thomas Holden, eſq. and Elizabeth his wife (whom theſe canons had before procured), to give and aſſign to the prior of St. Trinity, London, and to his ſucceſſors for ever, in the name of the whole order, one meſſuage, with gardens thereunto belonging, lying in the pariſhes of St. Peter and St. Michael at Northgate, within the walls of the city (ſituated between the inn commonly called the Star-Inn, and the lane[16] that goes from Bocardo to New-Inn, on the Weſt ſide of the ſtreet[17]) to the yearly value of 40*s.* beyond repriſes; which the ſaid Thomas and Elizabeth held of the king in free burgage. Having obtained this houſe, they afterwards in proceſs of time much enlarged it with buildings, both at the entry into the little lane or alley leading from the High-ſtreet thereunto, as alſo on the other ſide almoſt oppoſite to New-Inn-Hall[18]. The pious founder, willing to extend his charity farther, laid the foundation of a chapel, intending a library over it; but he dying Auguſt 17, 1440, before it was quite built, ordered, in his will, for the finiſhing thereof, as much money as would ſerve for the neceſſary expences; beſides £103. 6*s.* 8*d.* in which the abbot of Leiceſter, the abbot of St. Oſyth in Eſſex, and the prior of Giſeburn in Yorkſhire, were, by their three obligations, bound to him for, towards other expences in building; beſides a veſtment for the prieſt, with a cope or hood lined with red ſattin, on which he would have both his and his wife's arms worked; and, after the death of his ſaid wife, they ſhould have for ever his better veſtment and ornaments for the chapel, as alſo £20. to be beſtowed upon books for the library there. The lands that belonged to this college were few or none; for the canons thereof were maintained by the greater abbeys of this order, who ſent them here to gain academical learning, ſome more, and ſome of a leſs number; and after two or three years or more, when they were graduated, were taken home to teach their fellows, and others put in their places[1]. The chapel here, with the college, was dedicated to the Virgin Mary; and in it were the bodies of the founder, who died in 1440, and Elizabeth his wife, depoſited under a fair marble ſtone, with their images curiouſly cut on braſs.

---

[1] Appendix, p. 65.

[2] "Epiſcopus Lincolnienſis (proviſus ab Innocentio VII. papa 13 kal. Decemb. Reg. Arundel.) conſecratus eſt 29 Martii MCCCCV, et poſt triennium (Sept. 18, MCCCCVIII.) purpureo inſignitus galero a Gregorio XII, tit. SS. Nerei et Achillei."

[3] "MCCCCXIX. Eccleſia Lincoln. per reſign. Philippi epiſcopi Lincoln. per ipſius procur. in manus domini Martini papæ V, viceſimo die Nov. anno prædicto in curia factam, et in craſtino ejuſd. diei autoritate domini papæ admiſſam vacavit, et a primo die menſis Februarii idem Philippus, olim epiſcopus, ab omni exercitio juriſdictionis penitus abſtinebat." Reg. Fleming.

[4] Willis's Cathedrals, vol. II. p. 54; Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain, vol. II. p. 68.

[5] Appendix, p. 72.

[6] Reg. Arundel, fol. 123. a.

[7] Theſe foundations were ſo called becauſe they belonged to foreign monaſteries; and their ſuperiors abroad uſed to ſend over French and Normans, who tranſplanted the wealth of theſe houſes to thoſe of the ſuperiors, as well as communicated the ſecrets of the kingdom to other powers; two ſufficient cauſes in policy for their ſuppreſſion. By the united labours of Dr. Ducarel, Mr. Gough, and the Publiſher of the preſent Hiſtory, a tolerably complete account of the Alien Priories was publiſhed in 1779, in two ſmall octavo volumes.

[8] Rot. Parl. 2 Hen. V. m. 9; Coke, 2 Inſt. p. 432.

[9] See farther particulars in the Appendix, p. 73.

[10] The priory of Ware had lands in Leiceſterſhire, at Belgrave, Carleton, Great Peatling, Sheveſby, and Earl's Shilton.

[11] De abbatiâ beatæ Mariæ de Pratis, pro prioratu de Ware alienig. ſibi annectand. Pat. 1 Hen. VI. p. 1. m. 41.

[12] Appendix, p. 65.

[13] Rot Parl. vol. IV. p. 159; 9 Hen. V. See Appendix, p. 60.

[14] A general chapter of canons regular was held at Leiceſter in 1425. Kennet, Parochial Antiquities, p. 572.

[15] Alias Giſeburg, in Yorkſhire. Tanner, Not. Mon. p. 650.

[16] Wood-ſtreet. A. Wood.

[17] Northgate-ſtreet. A. W.

[18] The building was ſtanding in 1723, and had been ſome time before employed as a meeting-houſe for Quakers. Stevens.

Wood ſays, "Though this college had but a ſmall continuance, yet it hath left ſufficient memory behind: it gained more repute than thoſe of a longer ſtanding; and which was the breeding and entertaining ſeveral learned men; Eraſmus[2], and others. Thus far may be ſaid of this place ſo long as it was a priory[3]."

---

[1] "Beſides theſe regulars, there were ſecular monks, as they are called in their ſtatutes, which were commoners and battlers, both which, eſpecially the canons regular, were governed by a prior, and both he and they by ſtatutes, which were conſulted of by a convocation of that order at St. James's near Northampton, 1446, and committed to the diſcretion of Thomas the abbot of Ouſney, for the framing and completing of them; who two years after, upon examination and approbation, publiſhed them in this college, under the ſaid abbot's ſeal, to whoſe overſight this place did pertain, which, though made for monks, yet ſeem to be extracted from ſome of the ſtatutes of our ancienteſt colleges, viz. in our chapel duties, the uſual way of performing divine ſervice, their ſolemn days wherein High-maſs was ſaid, eſpecially on St. Auguſtin's-day, the father of this order, the dedication of the chapel, with other commemorations for the founder and the like; and the mulcts impoſed on the abſent, as well as the regulars, as commoners and battlers, they had their ſacriſt and præcentor or rector chori *, as we now call him, choſe annually amongſt them, whoſe office was to have the cuſtody of veſtments, books, utenſils, and other ornaments of the chapel; the præcentor to give notice what prayers to be ſaid, when ſuch or ſuch ſervice to be performed, what hymn, verſicle, or collect to be ſung; and, on all high feſtival days, both ſeculars and battlers to be at his command, in the office of offering wax, frankincence, and blowing the organs; but in the leſſer feſtival days, the ſeculars were not bound to be preſent, but to go to the pariſh-church wherein they lived. Their hall-duties alſo, for the moſt part, like thoſe of the college; as reading a Latin chapter every day in the term-time; ſpeaking always of Latin (except gaudy-days) both in the hall and the limits of the college; not dining in their chambers without ſpecial leave from the prior, and the like; with many other ſtatutes relating to ſeveral matters." Stevens, Monaſticon, vol. II. p. 128. Wood's MS Hiſtory and Antiquities of the City of Oxford, in the Aſhmolean Muſeum, F. 29.

[2] Eraſmus, when he was at Oxford in 1497 and 1498, as appears by his Epiſtles to John Sixtine and Will. Mountjoy, ſtudied and had his abode in this college of the Virgin Mary; and hence alſo his Epiſtle before his "Diſputatio de tædio & pavore Chriſti" was dedicated to John Colet, then profeſſor of divinity in Oxford. Knight's Life of Eraſmus, p. 20, 21, and of Colet, p. 32. Jortin's Life of Eraſmus, p. 11. Hence he went to Cambridge, where he began to write in 1510, as appears from an Epiſtle to Andreas Ammonius. It is remarkable, that the apartments where Eraſmus was lodged in both our univerſities are now pulled down. That at Queen's College, Cambridge, was demoliſhed about 30 years ago.

[3] From Wood's MS Hiſtory of the City of Oxford, which is on looſe papers, and does not ſeem to have been prepared for publication, Mr. Gutch has favoured me with the following continuation of the hiſtory of St. Mary's college: "This priory did not much ſuffer deſtruction of its walls when it was diſſolved; neither was it rendered up in the king's hands till 1541; and then, Oct. 7, Mr. Jarvis Markham being then prior or rector, there was an inventory taken of the goods and implements therein; and employed a ſmall while, till 1547 or thereabouts, for the uſe of ſcholars as a hall; but into whoſe poſſeſſion it came afterwards, I am as yet uncertain, unleſs it was the lord Williams; for I find that he, in the 3d and 4th of Philip and Mary, ſold timber and ſlate from hence to the city by Mr. Wayt. In the ſame year alſo, viz. 1556, I meet with one John Feteplace, eſq. who, for the ſingular favour he bore to the univerſity, did, by his charter, dated 8 Oct. the ſame year, give and confirm to the chancellor and ſcholars thereof, and their ſucceſſors for ever, all this his tenement, called by the name of St. Mary's College, and which before was known by the name of Berill's Place. This he did conditionally, that they ſhould pray both for his and his parents' ſouls, and number him in their prayers as a benefactor of this univerſity. Upon this donation, the vice-chancellor, willing to keep that place from ruin and deſolation, which was then much inclining thereto, gave commiſſion to Alexander Elcock, maſter of arts, and ſeveral other ſcholars that were of the ſaid Elcock's acquaintance, to poſſeſs the ſame as a hall, and he to be their principal, paying ſuch a ſum of money annually for the rent; but with this proviſo, that if cardinal Pole would have it employed to its former uſe (times being then turned), for the entertainment of the regular canons again, then they were willingly and freely to reſign up their whole right in the ſaid hall; but this coming not to paſs, they did for three or four years or more poſſeſs the ſame, though at firſt they were denied poſſeſſion thereto by John Wayt citizen of Oxon aforeſaid, who pretended that he had intereſt therein, and that he was lord of the ſame. Thus we find it given to the univerſity by a liberal benefactor; and by them for ſome years freely enjoyed, having 13*s.* 4*d.* rent paid to them annually by the principal thereof: but whether Feteplace's title to it was bad, or what the reaſon of it ſhould be, I am yet in doubt; the univerſity afterwards loſt it; and, coming into the hands of the earls of Huntingdon, Catharine the widow of Frances earl thereof, with earl Henry his ſon and lord Haſtings, did, in the year 1562, grant and feoffee John Wayt, then mayor of Oxon, and others, of all the ſite, with the houſe thereof; which, as it appeareth by another inſtrument of the feoffees, was given and taken to the intent to maintain ten poor children, to be taught and brought up there; and likewiſe to maintain ten poor perſons, to be ſet on work, upon the coſts and charitable relief of the citizens of Oxon; ſo that this place then, and for ſome years after, was known by the name of Bridewell; to which alſo, according to the intention of the donor, for the better encouragement of the poor folk there, it was enacted, by a mayor of Oxon and his council, 11 July, anno Eliz. 7°, that the mayor of the time being ſhould pay weekly for their maintenance 6*d.* the aldermen 4*d.* the bailiffs 3*d.* the chamberlains 2*d.* the common council 1*d.* and ſo to laſt till farther order was taken. But this ſum did not continue long; for on the 19th of Auguſt following they leſſened it, and ordained, that the mayor for the time being ſhould pay towards their relief 3*s.* 4*d.* quarterly; the aldermen each of them and the other eight likewiſe, 3*s.* quarterly; the bailiffs 2*s.* apiece; the chamberlains 16*d.* apiece; the common council 12*d.* apiece, all quarterly; and this to endure for a whole year, commencing from the Midſummer preceding; which when that alſo was finiſhed, they enacted, 28 June, anno Eliz. 8, that Mr. Mayor, and the thirteen, with the bailiffs, ſhould tax all men according to their diſcretions for their maintenance another year. What became of their maintenance afterward I know not; neither do I find any more mention of it †; only ſome well-diſpoſed people would at the time of their death leave a ſmall portion of money towards their ſuſtenance; among whom, and the greateſt ſum that I have yet met with, was the gift of Richard Williams, twice mayor ſome time of this city; who, dying 1579 ‡, 21 Eliz. did leave to them £4. towards their apparelling, who always were habited with blue coats. Will. Tipping, of Draycot, co. Oxon. £300. towards the building of the New Bridewell without Northgate, which was built anno 1635.—The chapel, with a garden adjoining, was demiſed in 1575 by the mayor and commonalty to John Wait (who alſo before held it) for 21 years, as alſo part of the cloiſter for as many years to Mr. Tarlton; the one paying 26*s.* 8*d.* the other 2*s.* yearly rent; by whoſe uſage eſpecially the cloiſter, which led from the chapel towards the great gate [ſtill ſtanding 1796] almoſt oppoſite to New-Inn Hall, was much ruinated and demoliſhed; and the ſaid chapel, which was a very fair fabrick, built with free-ſtone, and very good workmanſhip to be ſeen about it, was given to Brazen-Noſe college by the owner thereof, to lay the foundation of their own chapel; which for that uſe was demoliſhed and taken away in 1656."

* Wood is not quite accurate in his ſuggeſtion that heretofore præcentor and rector chori were terms always ſynonymous. In the ſtatutes of Lichfield and Lincoln, in Wilkins, Concil. vol. I. p. 498 & p. 536, under title "De Officio Cantorum," it appears there was at Lichfield cantor (i. e. precentor) et ſuccentor (ſubchanter); and that in both cathedrals there was cantor cum aliis rectoribus chori. Somner, in Antiquities of Canterbury, p. 93, mentions his having noticed in a regiſter of Chriſt Church priory inferior and ſuperior chorus; interpreted, by Battely, to ſignify the upper ſtalls from the lower. But query, does it not allude to the ſeating of the ſinging monks on each ſide of the choir for the performance of the alternate chant; and that the precedency or ſuperiority was given to the South or right ſide, as it ſtill is to the decanal ſide in choirs, where the firſt verſe of the firſt pſalm is ſung; though Mr. Denne is inclined to think, from an expreſſion in a ſtatute of archbiſhop Winchelſey, that the ſuperior chorus might originally ſing only half the verſe, as pointed by : a colon; and that the other half was ſung by the monks on the oppoſite ſide (Wilkins, Concil. vol. II. p. 244.) According to Somner, Supprior, precentor, and one of the penitentiaries, were to take to them four other brothers; two from the right ſide of the choir, and two from the left ſide, &c. Theſe brethren Mr. Denne ſuppoſes to have been what are in the Statutes of Lichfield and Lincoln ſtyled rectores chori; but at Canterbury, it ſeems, they had the title of Cardinals (Somner, Appendix, p. 57), as they had in St. Paul's cathedral; in which, as in many other cathedrals of the old foundations, there is ſtill a prebendary denominated precentor, and a minor canon called cardinal.

† "Prior and fellowes of Brazen College did let it for 30 yeares (20 Jan. 24 Eliz.) to Dr. Lloyd, law profeſſor, by the name of Bridewell, vel S. Marie's Hoſpitall." Reg. Antiq. Br. Coll. fol. 75. b.

‡ Super tumulum in Eccleſiâ S. Aldati.

John Mackworth being dean of Lincoln in the time of William Sadyngton, who was abbot from 1420 till 1442, and a vacancy happening in the ſee of Lincoln; he would have viſited the abbey of Leiceſter, becauſe, in the compoſition made between Boniface archbiſhop of Canterbury and the dean and chapter of Lincoln, the dean was allowed to viſit, jure epiſcopali, two monaſteries, during every vacancy of the biſhoprick, in each archdeaconry; but there being an exception of ſuch monaſteries as were under the patronage of the king; and the earldom of Leiceſter, to which the patronage of the abbey belonged, being by this time united with the crown; therefore, when the dean came to the abbey, the abbot ſent his gentleman, Richard Taylerd, to the gates, forbidding him entrance; upon which the dean, with his attendants, went to the town, and did not make any farther attempt to viſit the abbey [1].

In 1434, the lady Joane Beauchamp, lady of Bergavenny, and relict of ſir William Beauchamp, deviſed by her laſt will [2], "that in every cathedral church or conventual, where her body ſhould reſt a night, toward the place where her body was to be buried (the choir of the Friers Preachers at Hereford), the dean, abbot, or prior, to have 6*s*. 8*d*.; and every canon, monk, vicar, prieſt or clerk, preſent at the dirige at the maſs in the morning, to have 12*d*." She farther ordained, "that, anon after her burying, there ſhould be done for her ſoul 5000 maſſes in all the beſt haſte that they might goodly." In obedience to theſe directions, we find an agreement between the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, and Bartholomew Brokeſby, one of her executors, for the celebration of a maſs for her ſoul at the altar of St. John the Baptiſt and Saint Auſtin, on the South ſide of their monaſtery [3].

In 1445, a leaſe occurs, from abbot John Pomerey, and Walter Pomerey of Leiceſter, to John German and others, of a meſſuage and garden in St. Margaret's [4].

In 1458, a circular letter was ſent, from this abbey, to all the neighbouring churches, requeſting their prayers for the ſouls of all the benefactors to the abbey, and of all the abbots and canons departed [5].

In 1466, a commiſſion was iſſued, to William Sutton maſter of Burton Lazars, Richard Neel of Preſtwold, then a ſerjeant-at-law, John Pulteney, eſq. and Robert Staunton, on the repreſentation of John Pomerey abbot of Leiceſter, to enquire whether the abbey of Leiceſter was exempt from the impoſition of corrodies; when it appeared that this monaſtery, being of private foundation and of frank almoigne, though the patronage had devolved to the crown in 1265 by the attainder of Simon Montfort, was undoubtedly entitled to that exemption, both by the nature of their foundation, and by a charter of king Edward III [6]; yet that, at the requeſt of ſeveral of their patrons [7], the abbots had afforded relief to ſome old dependants [8].

In the interval between Midlent Sunday and Palm Sunday, 1470, king Edward IV. came to Leiceſter abbey, and departed to Combe abbey and Coventry [9].

In 1473, the abbot and convent demiſed their capital manſion in St. Sepulchre's, London, to ſir Thomas Littleton, one of the judges of the king's bench, for 40 years, at an annual rent of 16*s*. with a covenant of forfeiting 40*d*. if the rent ſhould not be paid half-yearly, and the leaſe to be void if a year ſhould ſo elapſe [10].

In 1482, the abbot and convent ordained an eſpecial daily ſervice in honour of William Charyte, 43 years a reſident in this abbey; whoſe good deeds were ſuch as to entitle him to very peculiar notice [11], and who lived to be eminently ſerviceable to the abbey for twenty years longer. He occurs as prior in 1471; and, at the time he was thus noticed, had given to the abbey a chalice of gold, an image of our Lady gilt, and ſeveral ſums of money for the public uſe of the convent; had bought for them the windmill at Stoughton, with ſeveral lands and tenements in Hungarton, Bagrave, &c. But his principal aſſiſtance to them was in compiling the "Rentale Novum generale," which bears his name, and which furniſhes ſo many uſeful articles to the preſent Hiſtory of the Abbey [12]. This Regiſter, compiled with incredible labour, and tranſcribed with his own hand in a folio volume of 219 leaves cloſely written on both ſides, was begun in 1477, and finiſhed in 1502, when he was in his 81ſt year, 63 years after his firſt having embraced the religious profeſſion. He frequently obſerves, that there had been a great and general decreaſe in the value of all their eſtates between the years 1335 and 1493, occaſioned principally by the plague of 1346 [13]; and in many parts it is noticed that their lands, &c. afforded a much greater rent ante annum peſtilentiæ than afterwards. A rent-roll is given of the value of the ſeveral chapels, farms, and manors, ante peſtilentiam [14]; a comparative view of the different ſtate of their property at the periods of 1254, 1341, 1408, and 1477 [15]; another ſuch compariſon of the rents received in grain in 1393, 1399, 1401, and 1470 [16]; and again in 1477 [17], diſtinguiſhed into wheat, rye, barley, peas, and oats, and, in ſome few caſes, mixed grain (mixtorum bladiorum); a rental of receipts in capons, hens, cocks, and eggs [18]; and of thoſe in pipere, cumino, roſis, cirotecis, flectis, & calcaribus [19]; the cuſtoms of their tenants [20]; the places where they had a right to free-warren [21], hariots [22], view of frankpledge, &c. and of thoſe where they till lately (infra breve) had neifes (nativos) [23]. An inventory is entered, of all the exiſting leaſes from the abbey, whether of offices, farms, mills, tenements, or lands [24]; among which, we find one from the prior, aſcertaining the weight and value of all their jewels; two from the precentor, an inventory of the books delivered to him by his predeceſſor, and a liſt of ſuch books as were lent out to any of the canons; and an inventory from the ſub-chanter of all the books in his cuſtody. Engagements were likewiſe taken (between the officer going out of place and his ſucceſſor) from the ſacriſt and ſub-ſacriſt, the treaſurer, the almoner, the ſteward (firmarius), the celarer, the maſter of the grange, the ſub-celarer, the hoſpitiarius [25], the chaplain, the chamberlain (camerarius), the abbot's butler, and the keepers of his buttery, wine and ale cellar, and pantry (butterie, taberni [26], celarii, & pantrie). There were engagements alſo from the abbot's granges of Weſt-gate, Stoughton, Medoplek, and Ingwarby, of all their goods and chattels, of the books and religious veſtments, and of the houſehold goods, at each reſpective manor-houſe. The parties to all theſe were the celarer egrediens and the celarer ingrediens[1]. The engagement of each chaplain was made with the abbot's chamberlain for all that was contained in the wardrobe; with his butler for what was in the ſtorehouſe (provituarium[2]), buttry, ale and wine cellar; and with the pantler for the contents of the pantry[3].

---

[1] Appendix, p. 65. [2] See ſome farther particulars of this will, under Kirkby Beler, vol. II. p. 227.

[3] Appendix, p. 72. [4] Carte, MS. [5] Appendix, p. 65. [6] See before, p. 264.

[7] In the Parliament Rolls, vol. I. p. 156, we find, in 1302, a petition to king Edward I, from Gilbert de Bed, who had been his ſumeter more than 20 years, ten of them in the wars at home and abroad en garneſterre; ſtating, that, having in the king's laſt reſidence in Scotland been taken priſoner and wounded by the Scotch, he was unable to help himſelf; and praying the king to grant him his letter to ſome religious houſe not already burdened with any perſon for ſubſiſtence, as he had indulged others of his old ſervants. In anſwer to this petition, he was informed, that, if he pointed out any monaſtery that was not already ſo burdened, the king would write for him. On which he named the monaſteries of Bardney and Leiceſter.—The office of ſumeter here mentioned may have been that of maſter of the ſumpter or baggage horſes, there being in the Wardrobe account of king Edward I. 1299-1300, this allowance, p. 77; Rob'to atte Grove, pro uno equo liardo pomele empto de eodem apud Ebor' et lib' ibidem Will'o Mone ſometar' ad unum ſomerum pro armis reg', menſe Novemb', £10.—But, whatever was Gilbert de Bed's buſineſs, he was en garneſterre, ready equipped or accoutred, which added to his expence and loſs.

[8] What the nature of this relief was, ſee in our Appendix, p. 61. [9] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 143.

[10] Appendix, p. 74. [11] See them ſpecified, Appendix, p. 71.

[12] See the full title of this work, with a character of it by Mr. Thomas Hearne, Appendix, p. 53; and its contents, p. 67.

[13] Appendix, p. 68. [14] Charyte, fol. clxx. b. [15] Ibid. fol. cli. b. [16] Ibid. fol. clxxviii. a—clxx. a. [17] Ibid. fol. clxxi. a. b.

[18] Appendix, p. 77. [19] Ibid. p. . [20] Ibid. p. . [21] Ibid. p. 77. [22] Ibid. p. 76.

[23] This ſpecies of vaſſalage (of which ſee the Diſſertation on Domeſday, p. xlv.) was gradually wearing away at the very period when Charyte was compiling his "Rentale."—In an act of reſumption paſſed in 1485, proviſion is made, that the act ſhould not prejudice any manumiſſion of villanage, or neiſte, granted to any perſon, either by king Henry VI, king Edward IV, or the ſovereign then reigning. Rot. Parl. 1 Hen. VII; vol. VI. p. 339.

[24] Appendix, p. 69. [25] Hoſpitilarius, or hoſtiarius. His buſineſs was to accommodate ſtrangers. Tanner.

[26] Taberna, a wine cellar. Du Cange, in voce.

The ordinationes vicariarum are given for Barkby, Betteſwell, Billeſdon, Carleton, Curdworth, Diſeworth, Eaton, Glenfield, Godeby, Hamilton, Hungarton, Ilſton, Shepeſhed, Lockington, Noſeley, Thedingworth, Thornton, Thorpe Ernald, &c.; with ſeveral conteſts and compoſitions about the patronage and rights of the vicarage of Blaby[4], and of the churches of Eaton[5], Hareſton, Hathern, and Houghton; and concerning the rights and patronage of the churches of Huſbands Boſworth, Croft, Diſhley, Kilworth, and Narborough[6]. Under Wykingeſton, there is no mention of the vicarage; but of the rights of the rectory, and the intereſts of the abbey and convent of Leiceſter, of St. Ebrulf, and of the priory of Lenton, there is much. Under Barrow there are ſeveral ſettlements and compoſitions about the vicarage worth obſerving, with an accurate terrier of the pariſh. Of Stoughton Grange and Thurnby, there are full accounts[7]. The advowſon of Wanlip, and a virgate of glebe land, which had been given to the abbot and convent by William Walſh, lord of Wanlip, they afterwards exchanged with him for a meadow on the North ſide of Leiceſter, called Walſh's meadow, or the Oſtler's aker. They had an unlimited right of fiſhing at Wanlip, cum retibus & ſagenis, which they alſo gave up for a rent of 6*s*. a year at Barkby, and the homage and ſervice of William ſon of Roger de Rotheley of Syſton[8].

Charyte wrote alſo with his own hand twenty-five different books or rolls on ſubjects of importance; the laſt of which he began in 1502, in his 81ſt year. One of theſe, a ſmall quarto, on 40 leaves of vellum, is called, " Breve opuſculum compilatum per fratrem W. Charyte, ad cognoſcendum nomina fundatorum noſtrorum & benefactorum, & donationes eorum quas illi nobis dederunt in villis ſubſcriptis, ut illorum memoria noſtris in mentibus & omnibus ferventiùs hereatur;" and, on another leaf is explained to be, " Repertorium Chartarum Abbatie de Leiceſter; continens privilegia apoſtolica; nomina fundatorum & benefactorum, & donationes illorum; & confirmationes & libertates regum abbati & monachis conceſſas; & nomina abbatum, a Ricardo primo abbate ad Joannem Penney, qui erat viceſimus ſecundus, anno XI° R. Henrici VII, anno MCCCCXCVI; compilatum per fratrem Willielmum Charite, anno MCCCCLXXXVII; & poſtea continuatum.—Nota quod in iſto brevi opuſculo ſubſcripto manifeſtum eſt quomodo aliqui redditus noſtri antiqui tam de ſpiritualibus quam de temporalibus decreverunt ab anno Domini M.CCC.XXXV°. ad annum Domini M. CCCC. nonageſimum tertium, &c." This MS. at the fire in the Cotton Library was conſiderably damaged. About two thirds, however, of each leaf remain legible, the upper part only being conſumed. It is marked Vitellius F. XVII; and, though in ſome reſpects it may be called an abridgement of the " Rentale" at Oxford, contains ſeveral particulars that are not in the larger volume. Of the above-mentioned Regiſters an abſtract, by ſir William Dugdale, is preſerved in the Aſhmolean Muſeum, F. 2. p. 327; under the title of " Analecta & tranſcripta ex duobus Regiſtris abbathiæ de Leiceſtriâ, de terris, &c. eodem conceſſis in com. Warwic', 1638, per me W. D."[9]

Another of Charyte's works which has been preſerved is called " Regiſtrum Librorum Monaſterii B. M. de Pratis, Leiceſtrie, renovatum tempore fratris W. Charyte, hic precentoris;" from which it appears that the abbey had no mean collection of books; and the induſtry of the compiler is fully diſplayed[10].

In 1484, the abbot of Leiceſter was appointed a collector of the taxes of all the benefices charged or diſcharged within the archdeaconry of Leiceſter. In September that year, the abbot and convent obtained a charter for a fair at Leiceſter, on the feaſt of Saint Leonard, within the ſaid abbey; and in the pariſh of Saint Leonard two days before the ſaid feaſt, and two days after[11]. In February 1484-5, they had licence to appropriate the church of Stoke[12].

On the 27th of November, 1493, Richard Beſton, chaplain of Woodhouſe, performed his accuſtomed fealty in the chapter-houſe of Leiceſter abbey to Gilbert the abbot, in the preſence of John Penny, prior, William Charyte, quondam prior, ſir John Noris, ſir Richard Palet, chaplain, and others[13].

John Penny, whoſe birth-place Wood could not diſcover, was educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, LL. D. there; and an eminent canoniſt. He was prior of the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in 1493; admitted abbot there 7 kal. Julii, 1496; and on the 14th of September, 1503, obtained the ſmall priory of Bradley in commendam; both which he continued to hold with the biſhoprick of Bangor, to which he was nominated in 1504, and conſecrated 1505[14]; after which period, we find an agreement of his with Thomas Stoke, eſq. of Elsford, co. Stafford, by which the patronage and advowſon of Huſbands Boſworth is conveyed to the ſaid Thomas Stoke, in conſideration of divers ſums of money by him paid, and in return for divers lands and tenements given to the abbey by Thomas Stoke and his anceſtors[15]. Biſhop Penny reſigned this abbey and the priory of Bradley[16], on being tranſlated to the ſee of Carliſle[17]; the pope's bull for which tranſlation was dated 10 kal. Octob. 1508. He died at the end of the year 1519, or the beginning of 1520, on a viſit at Leiceſter-abbey; where it is ſuppoſed that he was buried; and that, on the ſuppreſſion of the monaſtery, his monument was removed to St. Margaret's church in Leiceſter, to the re-building of which church Mr. Willis deſcribes him to have been a good benefactor[18], and where, near the Eaſt end of the North aile, on an uninſcribed monument (the work of no inferior artiſt) raiſed about three quarters of a yard from the floor, his effigies ſtill remains in his epiſcopal habit, with a ring on the fourth finger of his right hand, and on the firſt and fourth fingers of the left; beſides which, there ſeem to be traces of another ring, which appears to have been ſlipped off[19]. He embraces, with his left arm, a paſtoral ſtaff, formed with a head like a mace, and reaching to his feet[20]. The figure is five feet ſeven inches and a half long, including the mitre, which exceeds the head two inches. Leland ſays, " John Penny, firſt abbate of Leirceſter, then biſhop of Bangor and Cairluel, is here buried in an alabaſter tumbe[21];" and adds, " This Penny made the new bricke workes of Leiceſter abbey, and much of the bricke walles."

The manor and demeſne of Cokeram were demiſed in 1515, by Richard Pexal, abbot of Leiceſter, to William Calvert junior, for £14. 13*s*. 4*d*.[22]

---

[1] Theſe diſtinctions do not occur in Du Cange.
[2] This word is not in Du Cange.
[3] Appendix, p. 69.
[4] Plac. coram rege 2 Hen. V. Rot. 62. de advoc. eccleſie de Blaby.
[5] See in the Appendix, pp. 92, 93, two agreements between the abbots of Leiceſter and Croxton, concerning the tithes of Eaton, in 1220 and 1228; and, in p. 94, the recovery of the patronage of that church by the abbot of Leiceſter in 1292.
[6] Carte, MS.
[7] Theſe will be given in our Appendix, as abſtracted by Mr. Hearne.
[8] Charyte's Rentale, fol. x.
[9] Sir William Dugdale's extracts will be given in the Appendix, p. 75.—Another abridgement of this brief Regiſter is preſerved at Oxford, under the title of " Collectanea doctiſſ. Ric. Jameſii, ex Regiſtro Leiceſtrenſi." MSS. Bodl. James, 24. 113. This alſo we have collated (ſee Appendix, p. 68); and in ſome inſtances it has ſupplied the deficiencies of the Cotton MS.
[10] An analyſis of this Catalogue may be ſeen in the Appendix, p. 79.
[11] Cart. 2 Ric. III.
[12] Harl. MSS. 433 p. 79. b.
[13] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxlix.
[14] The licence for conſecration was dated penult. Aug. 1505. Reg. Warham.
[15] Append. p. 66.
[16] Reg. Smith.
[17] " Spiritualia non ſeiſita ante 20 Jan. 1508, & liberata 20 Jan. 1509." Reg. Warham, f. 12.
[18] Mr. Bickerſtaffe remembered there being a mitre in the window next the veſtry; but it was gone in 1790.
[19] Might not theſe ſuppoſed four rings, worn by prior, abbot, and biſhop Penny, have a reference to the four quaſi ſpiritual wives which he wedded? Might they not allude to his having been abbot of St. Mary de Pratis, prior of Bradley, and biſhop, firſt of Bangor and afterwards of Carliſle?
[20] This monument ſhall be engraved with the view of St. Margaret's church.
[21] Burton mentions a marble monument of a biſhop John Middleton, with arms, Quarterly, fretty . . . . and a canton Gules; which has been ſuppoſed to be this of biſhop Penny. But, as Wyrley's notes preſerve an epitaph on " John Middleton, gent." mayor of Leiceſter in 1578, who died in 1588; we may conclude, that Burton confounded the two tombs, and that Middleton's has been demoliſhed; the one now remaining being undoubtedly biſhop Penny's.
[22] Appendix, p. 66.

In 1530, this abbey was rendered famous by being the laſt reſidence of cardinal Wolſey; "the whole ſtory of whoſe life and death and acts by him done," Mr. Burton obſerves, "is exceedingly well-penned by John Stow in his Annals;" and from this account, as Wolſey's conduct after the king's favour was withdrawn has frequently been miſrepreſented, it may not be here impertinent to cite ſome particulars.

"Cardinal Wolſey, having licence of the king to repair unto Richmond, was there lodged within the lodge of the great park, which was a very pretty houſe. There my lord lay until Lent, with a pretty number of his ſervants; for the reſt went to board-wages. Cromwell went to London; and my lord removed out of the lodge into the Charter-houſe at Richmond, where he lay in a lodging which doctor Collet made for himſelf, until he removed Northward, which was in the Paſſion-week; and every day reſorted to the Charter-houſe there; and in the afternoons would ſit in contemplation with one of the moſt antient fathers of that houſe in their cells, who converted him, and cauſed him to deſpiſe the vain glory of the world, and gave him ſhirts of hair to wear, the which he wore divers times after. When Mr. Cromwell came to the court, he ſhewed my lord of Norfolk that my lord would gladly go Northward, but for lack of money, wherein he deſires his help to the king. Then was the king moved therein, as well by maſter Cromwell as by the council: which matter the king referred to determine, and aſſigns to the council, who were in divers opinions, ſo that, after long debating, it was concluded that he ſhould have, by way of preſt, a thouſand marks of his penſion out of Wincheſter. When this determination was concluded, they declared the ſame to the king, who ſtraightway commanded the ſame thouſand marks to be delivered out of hand to maſter Cromwell; and ſo it was. The king commanded maſter Cromwell to reſort to him again, when he had received the ſame ſum of money; at whoſe return to the king, the king ſaid, "Shew my lord, although our council have aſſigned no ſum of money for to bear his charges; yet ye ſhall ſhew him in my behalf, that I have ſent a thouſand pounds of my benevolence; and tell him that he ſhall not lack; and bid him be of good cheer." Maſter Cromwell, humbly in my lord's behalf, thanked the king, and therefore departed, and came to Richmond to my lord, to whom he delivered the money, and whereof it was levied, that the council ſent him, and of the money which the king ſent him, adding thereto the king's comfortable ſayings, wherein my lord did not a little rejoice. Then my lord prepared all things for his journey, and ſent to London for livery-cloaths for his ſervants that ſhould ride with him; ſo that, all things being furniſhed towards his journey, in the beginning of Paſſion-week before Eaſter he ſet forward, and rode from Richmond to a place of the abbot of Weſtminſter, called Hendon: the next day he removed to a place where the lady Parry lay, called the Rie: the next day to Royſton, where he lodged in the priory: the next day to Huntington, and there lodged in the abbey: and the next day he removed to Peterborough, and there lodged in the abbey, making there his abode all the next week, where he kept his ſolemn feaſt of Eaſter, with all his train, in number 160 perſons, having with him 12 carts to carry his ſtuff of his own, which he ſent for from his college of Oxford, that were there provided, beſide threeſcore other carts of his daily carriage of neceſſaries for his buildings: upon Palm-Sunday he went in proceſſion with the monks: and upon Maundy-Thurſday he made his maundy there in our Lady chapel, having 59 poor men, whoſe feet he waſhed and kiſſed after he had wiped them; he gave every of the ſaid poor men twelve-pence in money, three ells of good canvas to make them ſhirts, a pair of new ſhoes, a caſt of red-herrings and three white herrings, and one of them had two ſhillings. Upon Eaſter-day he roſe to the reſurrection, &c. On Thurſday next he removed to maſter Fitz Williams, knight (ſome time a merchant-tailor of London, and then of the king's council, who dwelt within three or four miles of Peterborough), where he was joyfully received, and had honourable entertainment: on Monday next he removed unto Stamford, and the next day to Grantham, and was lodged in the houſe of maſter Hall. The next night he lodged in the caſtle of Newark, where he remained the next day; and from thence rode to Southwell, and there continued the moſt part of that ſummer, not without great reſort of the moſt worſhipful of the country; and divers noblemen, having occaſion to repair into the ſame country there, thought it good to viſit my lord as they travelled, of whom they were moſt gladly entertained, and had right good cheer; whoſe noble and gentle behaviour cauſed him to have much love in the country of all kind of people. He kept there a noble houſe, where was both plenty of meat and drink for all comers, and alſo much alms given at his gate unto the poor of the town and country. He uſed much charity and clemency among his tenants and other; he made many agreements between gentlemen and gentlemen, and between ſome gentlemen and their wives, and other mean perſons, the which had been long before aſunder and in great trouble; making for every of them (as occaſion ſerved) great aſſemblies and feaſts, not ſparing his purſe where he might make amity.

It chanced upon Corpus Chriſti even, in the night, when my lord and all his houſehold were at reſt in their beds, there knocked at the gate two gentlemen, the one named maſter Brierton, one of the gentlemen of the king's privy chamber, and maſter Writherley, who were come from the king in poſt to ſpeak with my lord. Theſe were let in. My lord was raiſed, and came to them into the dining-chamber; they, ſeeing him in his night-apparel, did to him due reverence, whom he took by the hands, demanding how the king his ſovereign lord did. "Sir," ſaid they, "right well and merry: we muſt deſire to talk with you apart." "With a good will," quoth he. After long talk, they took forth of a little mail a little coffer covered with green velvet, and bound with bars of ſilver and gilt, with a lock and a gilt key, with the which they opened the cheſt, out of the which they took an inſtrument or writing, containing more than a ſkin of great parchment, having many ſeals hanging to the ſame, whereunto they put more wax for my lord's ſeal; the which my lord ſealed, and ſubſcribed his name with his own hand, and delivered the ſame again unto them, deſiring them to take a bed, for it was ſomewhat paſt midnight; but they ſaid they would ſtraightway ride to the earl of Shrewſbury, to be with him ere he were ſtirring; ſo my lord cauſed them to eat ſuch cold meat as was ready, and to drink a bowl or two of wine: that done, he gave each of them four old ſovereigns of fine gold, and ſo they departed. In this ſort and manner my lord lay at Southwell until about the latter end of graſs-time; then he removed to Newik, an abbey to Rufford and Blith abbey, and ſo to Scroby, where he continued till after Michaelmas, exerciſing many deeds of charity; and commonly every Sunday he would travel unto ſome poor pariſh-church, and there would ſay his divine ſervice, and cauſe one of his chaplains to preach unto the people: that done, he would dine in ſome honeſt houſe of the town, where ſhould be diſtributed to the poor a great alms in meat and drink, as well as of money. About the feaſt of St. Michael, he removed to Cawood Caſtle, within ſeven miles of York, where he lay long after with much honour and love of the country, doing deeds of charity, and held there an honourable houſehold for all comers; and alſo built and repaired the caſtle, having artificers and labourers above the number of 300 perſons daily in wages, &c. At length, being thereunto perſuaded by the doctors of the church of York, he determined to be ſtalled there at York minſter the next Monday after Alhallows-day; againſt which time due preparation was made for the ſame, but not in ſo ſumptuous wiſe as were his predeceſſors. My lord ſent his gentleman-uſher to York, to foreſee things there that ſhould be ordered and provided for the ſolemnity, which ſhould have been as mean as could be. Upon Alhallows-day, one of the head-officers of the church of York, which ſhould have the moſt doings in all this ſtallation, was with my lord tive manor-houſe. The parties to all theſe were the celarer egrediens and the celarer ingrediens[1]. The engagement of each chaplain was made with the abbot's chamberlain for all that was contained in the wardrobe; with his butler for what was in the ſtorehouſe (provituarium[2]), buttry, ale and wine cellar; and with the pantler for the contents of the pantry[3].

The ordinationes vicariarum are given for Barkby, Bitteſwell, Billeſdon, Carleton, Curdworth, Diſeworth, Eaton, Glenfield, Godeby, Hamilton, Hungarton, Ilſton, Shepeſhed, Lockington, Noſeley, Thedingworth, Thornton, Thorpe Ernald, &c.; with ſeveral conteſts and compoſitions about the patronage and rights of the vicarage of Blaby[4], and of the churches of Eaton[5], Hareſton, Hathern, and Houghton; and concerning the rights and patronage of the churches of Huſbands Boſworth, Croft, Diſhley, Kilworth, and Narborough[6]. Under Wykingeſton, there is no mention of the vicarage; but of the rights of the rectory, and the intereſts of the abbey and convent of Leiceſter, of St. Ebrulf, and of the priory of Lenton, there is much. Under Barrow there are ſeveral ſettlements and compoſitions about the vicarage worth obſerving, with an accurate terrier of the pariſh. Of Stoughton Grange and Thurnby, there are full accounts[7]. The advowſon of Wanlip, and a virgate of glebe land, which had been given to the abbot and convent by William Walſh, lord of Wanlip, they afterwards exchanged with him for a meadow on the North ſide of Leiceſter, called Walſh's meadow, or the Oſtler's aker. They had an unlimited right of fiſhing at Wanlip, cum retibus & ſagenis, which they alſo gave up for a rent of 6*s.* a year at Barkby, and the homage and ſervice of William ſon of Roger de Rotheley of Syſton[8].

Charyte wrote alſo with his own hand twenty-five different books or rolls on ſubjects of importance; the laſt of which he began in 1502, in his 81ſt year. One of theſe, a ſmall quarto, on 40 leaves of vellum, is called, "Breve opuſculum compilatum per fratrem W. Charyte, ad cognoſcendum nomina fundatorum noſtrorum & benefactorum, & donationes eorum quas illi nobis dederunt in villis ſubſcriptis, ut illorum memoria noſtris in mentibus & omnibus ferventiùs hereatur;" and, on another leaf is explained to be, "Repertorium Chartarum Abbatie de Leiceſter; continens privilegia apoſtolica; nomina fundatorum & benefactorum, & donationes illorum; & confirmationes & libertates regum abbati & monachis conceſſas; & nomina abbatum, a Ricardo primo abbate ad Joannem Penney, qui erat viceſimus ſecundus, anno xi° R. Henrici VII, anno MCCCCXCVI; compilatum per fratrem Willielmum Charite, anno MCCCCLXXXVII; & poſtea continuatum.—Nota quod in iſto brevi opuſculo ſubſcripto manifeſtum eſt quomodo aliqui redditus noſtri antiqui tam de ſpiritualibus quam de temporalibus decreverunt ab anno Domini M.CCC.XXXV°. ad annum DominiM. CCCC. nonageſimum tertium, &c." This MS. at the fire in the Cotton Library was conſiderably damaged. About two thirds, however, of each leaf remain legible, the upper part only being conſumed. It is marked Vitellius F. XVII; and, though in ſome reſpects it may be called an abridgement of the "Rentale" at Oxford, contains ſeveral particulars that are not in the larger volume. Of the above-mentioned Regiſters an abſtract, by ſir William Dugdale, is preſerved in the Aſhmolean Muſeum, F. 2. p. 327; under the title of "Analecta & tranſcripta ex duobus Regiſtris abbathiæ de Leiceſtriâ, de terris, &c. eodem conceſſis in com. Warwic', 1638, per me W. D."[9]

Another of Charyte's works which has been preſerved is called "Regiſtrum Librorum Monaſterii B. M. de Pratis, Leiceſtrie, renovatum tempore fratris W. Charyte, hic precentoris;" from which it appears that the abbey had no mean collection of books; and the induſtry of the compiler is fully diſplayed[10].

In 1484, the abbot of Leiceſter was appointed a collector of the taxes of all the benefices charged or diſcharged within the archdeaconry of Leiceſter. In September that year, the abbot and convent obtained a charter for a fair at Leiceſter, on the feaſt of Saint Leonard, within the ſaid abbey; and in the pariſh of Saint Leonard two days before the ſaid feaſt, and two days after[11]. In February 1484-5, they had licence to appropriate the church of Stoke[12].

On the 27th of November, 1493, Richard Beſton, chaplain of Woodhouſe, performed his accuſtomed fealty in the chapter-houſe of Leiceſter abbey to Gilbert the abbot, in the preſence of John Penny, prior, William Charyte, quondam prior, ſir John Noris, ſir Richard Palet, chaplain, and others[13].

John Penny, whoſe birth-place Wood could not diſcover, was educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, LL. D. there; and an eminent canoniſt. He was prior of the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in 1493; admitted abbot there 7 kal. Julii, 1496; and on the 14th of September, 1503, obtained the ſmall priory of Bradley in commendam; both which he continued to hold with the biſhoprick of Bangor, to which he was nominated in 1504, and conſecrated 1505[14]; after which period, we find an agreement of his with Thomas Stoke, eſq. of Elsford, co. Stafford, by which the patronage and advowſon of Huſbands Boſworth is conveyed to the ſaid Thomas Stoke, in conſideration of divers ſums of money by him paid, and in return for divers lands and tenements given to the abbey by Thomas Stoke and his anceſtors[15]. Biſhop Penny reſigned this abbey and the priory of Bradley[16], on being tranſlated to the ſee of Carliſle[17]; the pope's bull for which tranſlation was dated 10 kal. Octob. 1508. He died at the end of the year 1519, or the beginning of 1520, on a viſit at Leiceſter-abbey; where it is ſuppoſed that he was buried; and that, on the ſuppreſſion of the monaſtery, his monument was removed to St. Margaret's church in Leiceſter, to the re-building of which church Mr. Willis deſcribes him to have been a good benefactor[18], and where, near the Eaſt end of the North aile, on an uninſcribed monument (the work of no inferior artiſt) raiſed about three quarters of a yard from the floor, his effigies ſtill remains in his epiſcopal habit, with a ring on the fourth finger of his right hand, and on the firſt and fourth fingers of the left; beſides which, there ſeem to be traces of another ring, which appears to have been ſlipped off[19]. He embraces, with his left arm, a paſtoral ſtaff, formed with a head like a mace, and reaching to his feet[20]. The figure is five feet ſeven inches and a half long, including the mitre, which exceeds the head two inches. Leland ſays, "John Penny, firſt abbate of Leirceſter, then biſhop of Bangor and Cairluel, is here buried in an alabaſter tumbe[21];" and adds, "This Penny made the new bricke workes of Leiceſter abbey, and much of the bricke walles."

The manor and demeſne of Cokeram were demiſed in 1515, by Richard Pexal, abbot of Leiceſter, to William Calvert junior, for £14. 13*s.* 4*d.*[22]

---

[1] Theſe diſtinctions do not occur in Du Cange. [2] This word is not in Du Cange. [3] Appendix, p. 69.

[4] Plac. coram rege 2 Hen. V. Rot. 62. de advoc. eccleſie de Blaby.

[5] See in the Appendix, pp. 92, 93, two agreements between the abbots of Leiceſter and Croxton, concerning the tithes of Eaton, in 1220 and 1228; and, in p. 94, the recovery of the patronage of that church by the abbot of Leiceſter in 1292.

[6] Carte, MS. [7] Theſe will be given in our Appendix, as abſtracted by Mr. Hearne. [8] Charyte's Rentale, fol. x.

[9] Sir William Dugdale's extracts will be given in the Appendix, p. 75.—Another abridgement of this brief Regiſter is preſerved at Oxford, under the title of "Collectanea doctiſſ. Ric. Jameſii, ex Regiſtro Leiceſtrenſi." MSS. Bodl. James, 24. 113. This alſo we have collated (ſee Appendix, p. 68); and in ſome inſtances it has ſupplied the deficiencies of the Cotton MS.

[10] An analyſis of this Catalogue may be ſeen in the Appendix, p. 79. [11] Cart. 2 Ric. III. [12] Harl. MSS. 433 p. 79. b.

[13] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxlix. [14] The licence for conſecration was dated penult. Aug. 1505. Reg. Warham.

[15] Append. p. 66. [16] Reg. Smith. [17] "Spiritualia non ſeiſita ante 20 Jan. 1508, & liberata 20 Jan. 1509." Reg. Warham, f. 12.

[18] Mr. Bickerſtaffe remembered there being a mitre in the window next the veſtry; but it was gone in 1790.

[19] Might not theſe ſuppoſed four rings, worn by prior, abbot, and biſhop Penny, have a reference to the four quaſi ſpiritual wives which he wedded? Might they not allude to his having been abbot of St. Mary de Pratis, prior of Bradley, and biſhop, firſt of Bangor and afterwards of Carliſle? [20] This monument ſhall be engraved with the view of St. Margaret's church.

[21] Burton mentions a marble monument of a biſhop John Middleton, with arms, Quarterly, fretty . . . . and a canton Gules; which has been ſuppoſed to be this of biſhop Penny. But, as Wyrley's notes preſerve an epitaph on "John Middleton, gent." mayor of Leiceſter in 1578, who died in 1588; we may conclude, that Burton confounded the two tombs, and that Middleton's has been demoliſhed; the one now remaining being undoubtedly biſhop Penny's. [22] Appendix, p. 66.

In 1530, this abbey was rendered famous by being the laſt reſidence of cardinal Wolſey; "the whole ſtory of whoſe life and death and acts by him done," Mr. Burton obſerves, "is exceedingly well-penned by John Stow in his Annals;" and from this account, as Wolſey's conduct after the king's favour was withdrawn has frequently been miſrepreſented, it may not be here impertinent to cite ſome particulars.

"Cardinal Wolſey, having licence of the king to repair unto Richmond, was there lodged within the lodge of the great park, which was a very pretty houſe. There my lord lay until Lent, with a pretty number of his ſervants; for the reſt went to board-wages. Cromwell went to London; and my lord removed out of the lodge into the Charter-houſe at Richmond, where he lay in a lodging which doctor Collet made for himſelf, until he removed Northward, which was in the Paſſion-week; and every day reſorted to the Charter-houſe there; and in the afternoons would ſit in contemplation with one of the moſt antient fathers of that houſe in their cells, who converted him, and cauſed him to deſpiſe the vain glory of the world, and gave him ſhirts of hair to wear, the which he wore divers times after. When Mr. Cromwell came to the court, he ſhewed my lord of Norfolk that my lord would gladly go Northward, but for lack of money, wherein he deſires his help to the king. Then was the king moved therein, as well by maſter Cromwell as by the council: which matter the king referred to determine, and aſſigns to the council, who were in divers opinions, ſo that, after long debating, it was concluded that he ſhould have, by way of preſt, a thouſand marks of his penſion out of Wincheſter. When this determination was concluded, they declared the ſame to the king, who ſtraightway commanded the ſame thouſand marks to be delivered out of hand to maſter Cromwell; and ſo it was. The king commanded maſter Cromwell to reſort to him again, when he had received the ſame ſum of money; at whoſe return to the king, the king ſaid, "Shew my lord, although our council have aſſigned no ſum of money for to bear his charges; yet ye ſhall ſhew him in my behalf, that I have ſent a thouſand pounds of my benevolence; and tell him that he ſhall not lack; and bid him be of good cheer." Maſter Cromwell, humbly in my lord's behalf, thanked the king, and therefore departed, and came to Richmond to my lord, to whom he delivered the money, and whereof it was levied, that the council ſent him, and of the money which the king ſent him, adding thereto the king's comfortable ſayings, wherein my lord did not a little rejoice. Then my lord prepared all things for his journey, and ſent to London for livery-cloaths for his ſervants that ſhould ride with him; ſo that, all things being furniſhed towards his journey, in the beginning of Paſſion-week before Eaſter he ſet forward, and rode from Richmond to a place of the abbot of Weſtminſter, called Hendon: the next day he removed to a place where the lady Parry lay, called the Rie: the next day to Royſton, where he lodged in the priory: the next day to Huntington, and there lodged in the abbey: and the next day he removed to Peterborough, and there lodged in the abbey, making there his abode all the next week, where he kept his ſolemn feaſt of Eaſter, with all his train, in number 160 perſons, having with him 12 carts to carry his ſtuff of his own, which he ſent for from his college of Oxford, that were there provided, beſide threeſcore other carts of his daily carriage of neceſſaries for his buildings: upon Palm-Sunday he went in proceſſion with the monks: and upon Maundy-Thurſday he made his maundy there in our Lady chapel, having 59 poor men, whoſe feet he waſhed and kiſſed after he had wiped them; he gave every of the ſaid poor men twelve-pence in money, three ells of good canvas to make them ſhirts, a pair of new ſhoes, a caſt of red-herrings and three white herrings, and one of them had two ſhillings. Upon Eaſter-day he roſe to the reſurrection, &c. On Thurſday next he removed to maſter Fitz Williams, knight (ſome time a merchant-tailor of London, and then of the king's council, who dwelt within three or four miles of Peterborough), where he was joyfully received, and had honourable entertainment: on Monday next he removed unto Stamford, and the next day to Grantham, and was lodged in the houſe of maſter Hall. The next night he lodged in the caſtle of Newark, where he remained the next day; and from thence rode to Southwell, and there continued the moſt part of that ſummer, not without great reſort of the moſt worſhipful of the country; and divers noblemen, having occaſion to repair into the ſame country there, thought it good to viſit my lord as they travelled, of whom they were moſt gladly entertained, and had right good cheer; whoſe noble and gentle behaviour cauſed him to have much love in the country of all kind of people. He kept there a noble houſe, where was both plenty of meat and drink for all comers, and alſo much alms given at his gate unto the poor of the town and country. He uſed much charity and clemency among his tenants and other; he made many agreements between gentlemen and gentlemen, and between ſome gentlemen and their wives, and other mean perſons, the which had been long before aſunder and in great trouble; making for every of them (as occaſion ſerved) great aſſemblies and feaſts, not ſparing his purſe where he might make amity.

It chanced upon Corpus Chriſti even, in the night, when my lord and all his houſehold were at reſt in their beds, there knocked at the gate two gentlemen, the one named maſter Brierton, one of the gentlemen of the king's privy chamber, and maſter Writherley, who were come from the king in poſt to ſpeak with my lord. Theſe were let in. My lord was raiſed, and came to them into the dining-chamber; they, ſeeing him in his night-apparel, did to him due reverence, whom he took by the hands, demanding how the king his ſovereign lord did. "Sir," ſaid they, "right well and merry: we muſt deſire to talk with you apart." "With a good will," quoth he. After long talk, they took forth of a little mail a little coffer covered with green velvet, and bound with bars of ſilver and gilt, with a lock and a gilt key, with the which they opened the cheſt, out of the which they took an inſtrument or writing, containing more than a ſkin of great parchment, having many ſeals hanging to the ſame, whereunto they put more wax for my lord's ſeal; the which my lord ſealed, and ſubſcribed his name with his own hand, and delivered the ſame again unto them, deſiring them to take a bed, for it was ſomewhat paſt midnight; but they ſaid they would ſtraightway ride to the earl of Shrewſbury, to be with him ere he were ſtirring; ſo my lord cauſed them to eat ſuch cold meat as was ready, and to drink a bowl or two of wine: that done, he gave each of them four old ſovereigns of fine gold, and ſo they departed. In this ſort and manner my lord lay at Southwell until about the latter end of graſs-time; then he removed to Newik, an abbey to Rufford and Blith abbey, and ſo to Scroby, where he continued till after Michaelmas, exerciſing many deeds of charity; and commonly every Sunday he would travel unto ſome poor pariſh-church, and there would ſay his divine ſervice, and cauſe one of his chaplains to preach unto the people: that done, he would dine in ſome honeſt houſe of the town, where ſhould be diſtributed to the poor a great alms in meat and drink, as well as of money. About the feaſt of St. Michael, he removed to Cawood Caſtle, within ſeven miles of York, where he lay long after with much honour and love of the country, doing deeds of charity, and held there an honourable houſehold for all comers; and alſo built and repaired the caſtle, having artificers and labourers above the number of 300 perſons daily in wages, &c. At length, being thereunto perſuaded by the doctors of the church of York, he determined to be ſtalled there at York minſter the next Monday after Alhallows-day; againſt which time due preparation was made for the ſame, but not in ſo ſumptuous wiſe as were his predeceſſors. My lord ſent his gentleman-uſher to York, to foreſee things there that ſhould be ordered and provided for the ſolemnity, which ſhould have been as mean as could be. Upon Alhallows-day, one of the head-officers of the church of York, which ſhould have the moſt doings in all this ſtallation, was with my lord at dinner at his houſe at Cawood; and, ſitting at dinner, they fell in communication of this matter, and of the order thereof, ſaying that my lord ſhould go on foot from a chapel of St. James, without the gates of the city, unto the minſter, upon cloth, the which ſhould be diſtributed among the poor after his paſſage. My lord, hearing this, made anſwer in this wiſe: “Although our predeceſſors did go upon cloth ſo, we intend to go on foot from thence without any ſuch glory; for, I take God to witneſs, I do not intend to go thither for any triumph or glory, but only to perform the rules of the church, to which I am bound. And therefore I deſire you all, and will command other my ſervants, to go as humble thither without any ſumptuous or gorgeous apparel, otherwiſe than in decent manner; for I do purpoſe to come to York upon Sunday at night next, and to lodge in the dean's houſe: and upon Monday to be ſtalled, and there to make but a dinner for you of the Cloſe, and for other worſhipful gentlemen that ſhall chance to come thither to the ſame, and to ſup with the reſidencies; and the next day to dine with the mayor, and then to prepare home hither again.”

The day being once known unto all the country, which could not be hid, the worſhipful gentlemen and others, as abbots and priors, ſent in ſuch proviſion of victuals that it is almoſt incredible, as of fat beaſts and muttons, wild fowl, and veniſon both red and fallow, and other dainty things, ſuch as would have plentifully furniſhed the feaſt; all which things were unknown to my lord; for as much as he being prevented and diſappointed of his purpoſe, by reaſon that he was arreſted of high treaſon, as ye ſhall hear hereafter, ſo that moſt part of this ſummer proviſion was ſent unto York that ſame day of his arreſt, and the next day following; for his arreſt was kept as cloſe and ſecret from the country, becauſe they doubted the common people, which had him in great eſtimation and love for his great charity and liberality which he uſed daily amongſt them. It is appointed by the king and council, that ſir Walter Walſh, knight, one of the king's privy chamber, ſhould be ſent down with a commiſſion into the North unto the earl of Northumberland, who was ſome time brought up in houſe with the cardinal; and they twain being jointly in commiſſion to arreſt the cardinal of high treaſon, maſter Walſh took his horſe at the court-gate about noon upon Alhallows-day, toward the earl of Northumberland.

Now the appointed time drew near of his ſtallation; and ſitting at dinner upon the Friday next before the Monday, on the which day he intended to be ſtalled at York, the earl of Northumberland and maſter Walſh, with a great company of gentlemen of the earl's houſe and of the country, whom he had gathered together in the king's name, came into the hall at Cawood, the officers being at dinner, and the cardinal not fully dined, being then in his fruits. The firſt thing that the earl did after he had ſet order in the hall, he commanded the porter at the gates to deliver him the keys thereof. Of all theſe doings knew the cardinal nothing; for they ſtopped the ſtairs, ſo that none went up to the cardinal's chamber; and they that came down, could no more go up again. At the laſt one eſcaped, who ſhewed the cardinal that the earl was in the hall; whereat the cardinal marvelled, and would not believe him, but commanded a gentleman to bring him the truth; who, going down the ſtairs, ſaw the earl of Northumberland, and returned and ſaid it was very he: “Then,” quoth the cardinal, “I am ſorry that we have dined; for I fear our officers be not provided of any ſtore of good fiſh, to make him ſome honourable cheer: let the table ſtand,” quoth he. With that he roſe up, and going down the ſtairs, he encountered the earl coming up with all his train; and as ſoon as the cardinal eſpied the earl, he put off his cap, and ſaid, “My lord, ye be moſt heartily welcome;” and ſo embraced each other; then the cardinal took the earl by the hand, and had him up into his chamber, whom followed all the number of the earl's ſervants; from thence he led him into his bed-chamber, and they being there all alone, the earl ſaid unto the cardinal with a ſoft voice, laying his hand upon his arm, “My lord, I arreſt you of high treaſon.” With which words the cardinal being marvellouſly aſtoniſhed, ſtanding both ſtill a good ſpace, at the laſt quoth the cardinal, “What authority have you to arreſt me?” “Forſooth, my lord,” quoth the earl, “I have a commiſſion ſo to do.” “Where is your commiſſion,” quoth he, “that I may ſee it?” “Nay, ſir, that you may not,” ſaid the earl. “Well then,” quoth the cardinal, “I will not obey your arreſt.” But, as they were debating this matter between them in the chamber, ſo buſy was maſter Walſh in arreſting doctor Auguſtine at the door in the palace, ſaying unto him, “Go in, traitor, or I ſhall make thee.” At the laſt maſter Walſh, being entered the cardinal's chamber, began to pluck off his hood, and after kneeling down to the cardinal, unto whom the cardinal ſaid, “Come hither, gentleman, and let me ſpeak with you, ſir; here my lord of Northumberland hath arreſted me; but by whoſe authority he ſheweth not; if ye be joined with him, I pray you ſhew me.” “Indeed, my lord,” quoth maſter Walſh, “he ſheweth you the truth.” “Well then,” quoth the cardinal, “I pray you let me ſee it, ſir.” “I beſeech you,” quoth maſter Walſh, “hold us excuſed; there is annexed to our commiſſion certain inſtructions which you may not ſee.” “Well,” quoth the cardinal, “I trow ye are one of the king's privy chamber; your name is Walſh; I am content to yield to you, but not to my lord of Northumberland, without I ſee his commiſſion: the worſt in the king's privy chamber is ſufficient to arreſt the greateſt peer of the realm by the king's commandment, without any commiſſion; therefore put your commiſſion and authority in execution; ſpare not; I will obey the king's will. I take God to judge, I never offended the king in word nor deed.” Then the earl called into the chamber divers gentlemen of his own ſervants, and after they had taken the cardinal's keys from him, they put him in cuſtody of the earl's gentlemen; and then they went about the houſe to ſet all things in an order; then ſent they doctor Auguſtine away to London with as much ſpeed as they could, who was bound unto the horſe like a traitor; but it was Sunday toward night ere the cardinal was conveyed from Cawood, and lodged that night in the abbey of Pomfret. The next day he removed toward Doncaſter, and was there lodged at the Black Friers; the next day he was removed to Sheffield-park, where the earl of Shrewſbury, with his lady, and a train of gentlemen and gentlewomen, received him with much honour; and the cardinal, being thus with the earl of Shrewſbury, continued there eighteen days after; upon whom the earl appointed divers gentlemen to attend continually, to ſee that he ſhould lack nothing, being ſerved in his own chamber as honourably as he had been in his own houſe; and once every day the earl would repair unto him and commune with him. After the cardinal had thus remained with the earl of Shrewſbury about a fortnight, it came to paſs at a certain time as he ſat at his dinner in his own chamber, having at his board's end a meſs of gentlemen and chaplains to keep him company; toward the end of his dinner, when he was come to eating his fruits, his colour was perceived often to change, whereby he was judged not to be in good health; whereupon one of his gentlemen ſaid, “Sir, meſeems you are not well at eaſe.” To whom he anſwered with a loud voice, “Forſooth, no more I am; for I am,” quoth he, “taken ſuddenly with a thing about my ſtomach, that lieth there along, as cold as a wherſtone, which is no more but wind: I pray you go to the apothecary, and enquire of him, if he have any thing that will break wind upward.” Then went he to the earl, and ſhewed him what eſtate the cardinal was in, and what he deſired. With that the earl cauſed the apothecary to be called before him, and demanded of him if he had any thing that would break wind upwards in a man's body? and he anſwered, he had ſuch gear. “Then,” quoth the earl, “fetch me ſome.” Then the apothecary fetched a white confection in a fair paper, and ſhewed it to the earl, who commanded one to give the aſſay thereof before him, and then the ſame to be brought to the cardinal, who received it up all at once into his mouth; but immediately after ſurely he voided much wind upwards. "Lo," quoth he, "ye may ſee that it was but wind, and now I am well eaſed, I thank God;" and ſo he roſe from the table, and went to his prayers; and that done, there came on him ſuch a looſeneſs, that it cauſed him to go to his ſtool. And not long after the earl of Shrewſbury came into the gallery to him, with whom the cardinal met; and then ſitting down upon a bench, the earl aſked how he did; and he moſt lamentably anſwered him, and thanked him for his gentle entertainment: "Sir," quoth the earl, "if ye remember, ye have often wiſhed to come before the king to make your anſwer, and I have written to the king in that behalf, making him privy of your lamentation that ye inwardly have received for his diſpleaſure; who accepteth all your doings therein, as friends be accuſtomed to do in ſuch caſes; wherefore I would adviſe you to pluck up your heart, and be not aghaſt at your enemies. I doubt not but this your journey to his highneſs ſhall be much to your advancement. The king hath ſent for you that worſhipful knight maſter Kingſton, and with him 24 of your old ſervants, now of the guard, to the intent ye may ſafely come to his majeſty." "Sir," quoth the cardinal, "I trow maſter Kingſton is conſtable of the Tower." "Yea, what of that?" quoth the earl. "I aſſure you, he is elected by the king for one of your friends." "Well," quoth the cardinal, "as God will, ſo be it; I am ſubject to fortune, being a true man, ready to accept ſuch chances as ſhall follow, and there an end. I pray you, where is maſter Kingſton?" Quoth the earl, "I will ſend for him." "I pray you ſo do," quoth the cardinal: at whoſe meſſage he came; and as ſoon as the cardinal eſpied him, he made haſte to encounter him, and at his coming he kneeled to him, and ſaluted him in the king's behalf; whom the cardinal bareheaded offered to take up, and ſaid, "I pray you ſtand by; kneel not to me; I am but a wretch replete with miſery, not eſteeming myſelf but as a vile abject, utterly caſt away, without deſert, as God knoweth[1]." Then maſter Kingſton ſtood up, and ſaid, with humble reverence, "Sir, the king hath him commended unto you." "I thank his highneſs," quoth the cardinal; "I truſt he be in health." "Yea," quoth maſter Kingſton, "and he commanded me to ſay to you, that you ſhould aſſure yourſelf that he beareth you as much good will as ever he did, and willeth you to be of good cheer; and where report hath been made that ye ſhould commit againſt him certain heinous crimes, which he thinketh to be untrue, yet he can do no leſs than to ſend for you to your trial, and take your journey to him at your own pleaſure, commanding me to be attendant upon you. Therefore, ſir, I pray you, when it ſhall be your own pleaſure to take your journey, I ſhall be ready to give attendance." "Maſter Kingſton," quoth my lord, "I thank you for your good news; and, ſir, if I were as able as I have been but of late, I would not fail to ride with you in poſt; but I am diſeaſed with a flux (at which time it was apparent that he had poiſoned himſelf[2]), that maketh me very weak. But, maſter Kingſton, all the comfortable words that you have ſpoken unto me be ſpoken but for a purpoſe, to bring me into a fool's paradiſe. I know what is provided for me. Notwithſtanding, I thank you for your good will and pains taken about me. And I ſhall with all ſpeed make me ready to ride with you to-morrow."

When night came, the cardinal waxed very ſick. Therefore, in conſideration of his infirmity (by the advice of Dr. Nicholas, a doctor of phyſic) they cauſed him to tarry all that day; and the next day he took his journey with maſter Kingſton and them of the guard, till he came to a houſe of the earl of Shrewſbury's, called Hardwick-hall, where he lay all night very evil at eaſe. The next day he rode to Nottingham, and there lodged that night more ſick; and the next day he rode to Leiceſter abbey, and by the way waxed ſo ſick, that he had almoſt fallen from his mule, ſo that it was night before he came to the abbey of Leiceſter; where, at his coming in at the gates, the abbot with all his convent met him with divers torches light, whom they right honourably received and welcomed[3]; to whom the cardinal ſaid, "Father abbot, I am come hither to lay my bones among you;" riding ſtill on his mule, till he came to the ſtairs of his chamber, where he alighted. Maſter Kingſton, holding him by the arm, led him up ſtairs; who told me afterwards that he never felt ſo heavy a burthen in all his life; and, as ſoon as he was in his chamber, he went ſtraight to bed. This was upon Saturday, and ſo he continued. On Monday in the morning, as I ſtood by his bedſide, about eight of the clock in the morning, the windows being cloſe ſhut, and having wax lights burning upon the cupboard, I thought I perceived him drawing towards death. He, perceiving my ſhadow upon the bedſide, aſked, "Who was there?" "Sir," quoth I, "it is I." "How do you," quoth he, "well?" "Aye, ſir," quoth I, "if I might ſee your grace well." "What is it a clock?" quoth he. I anſwered, "It was about eight of the clock." Quoth he, "That cannot be;" rehearſing "eight of the clock" divers times. "Nay, nay," quoth he, "that cannot be; for at eight of the clock ſhall you loſe your maſter, for my time draweth near that I muſt depart this world." With that, one Dr. Palmes[4], a worſhipful gentleman, being his chaplain and ghoſtly father, ſtanding by, bade me aſk him if he would be ſhriven, to make him ready for God, whatever chanced to fall out; which I did: but he was very angry with me, and aſked, "What I had to do to aſk him ſuch a queſtion?" till at laſt maſter Doctor took my part, and talked with him in Latin, and pacified him.

---

[1] After this paſſage our extracts are enlarged from the MS. of Mr. Cavendiſh, who was preſent, and is more circumſtantial.

[2] This parentheſis is an interpolation, not to be found in the MS. copies of Mr. Cavendiſh. "Philipot, in his Catalogue of the chancellors, ſays, the cardinal died, 'not without ſuſpicion of poiſon, which he had prepared for himſelf, and given to his apothecary to deliver when he called for it.' And Baker, in his Chronicle, ſays, 'But whether it were he took it in too great a quantity, or that there was ſome foul play uſed, he fell ſoon after into ſuch a looſeneſs, &c.' The former of theſe authors inſinuates, that the cardinal poiſoned himſelf; and the latter, that he, perhaps, might be poiſoned by others; and yet, I dare ſay, they both of them made uſe of Mr. Cavendiſh; inſomuch, that the whole weight of the evidence reſts ſolely upon his teſtimony. But then, on the other hand, it muſt be confeſſed that Mr. Cavendiſh's authority is very great, and abundantly ſufficient in this cauſe. His narrative of the life and death of his maſter muſt be read, it is true, with diſtinction, as requiring ſome care and diſcernment; for, whilſt he relates ſuch incidents as he was not actually privy to, he is liable to the ſame errors that other biographers are, and conſequently has been contradicted upon ſome points; but, in ſuch matters where he was perſonally preſent, there is no room to ſuſpect his fidelity, for in them he is a moſt competent witneſs, very fair, and very impartial." Theſe are the remarks of the late learned and Rev. Dr. Pegge, who has ſome curious papers on this ſubject in Gent. Mag. vol. XXV. pp. 25. 299; vol. LIII. p. 751.—In vol. LIII. p. 1021, is alſo a ſatisfactory collation, by Mr. Ayſcough, of two of the copies of Cavendiſh in the Britiſh Muſeum (Harl. MSS. 428. and Birch MSS. 4233.) by which it appears that the ſentence on the poiſon (which was originally printed in brackets) is not in either of thoſe MSS; but that there was ſufficient cauſe for ſuſpicion; as the cardinal twice mentions his apprehenſion of the deſign of his enemies to diſpatch him, which might be done to take off the ſuſpicion of doing it himſelf; the declaring to Mr. Cavendiſh the knowledge of his latter days; and again, when he was taken ill before the arrival of Mr. Kingſton, the ſymptoms were ſtrongly thoſe of poiſon.

[3] In Shakeſpeare's hiſtorical play of King Henry VIII, the laſt moments of Wolſey are thus beautifully deſcribed:

"At laſt, with eaſy roads, he came to Leiceſter, Lodg'd in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave theſe words,—O father abbot,
An old man, broken with the ſtorms of ſtate,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!—
So went to bed: where eagerly his ſickneſs
Purſued him ſtill; and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight (which he himſelf Foretold ſhould be his laſt), full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and ſorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His bleſſed part to heaven, and ſlept in peace.——
—So may he reſt; his faults lie gently on him!"

[A portrait of the Cardinal is given in plate XVII.]

[4] George Palmes, LL. D. rector of Collingham, co. Nottingham; prebendary of Gevendale 1539—1543; archdeacon of York, Weſt Riding, 1543; prebendary of Langtoft, 1546—1558; and of Wetwang, 1558; all in the church of York. He was deprived in 1559. See Wood, Faſti Oxon. vol. I. p. 65.

At afternoon maſter Kingſton ſent for me, and ſaid, "So it is, the king hath ſent unto me letters by maſter Vincent, one of your old companions, who hath been in trouble in the Tower for money that my lord ſhould have at his laſt departure; a great part of which money cannot be found; wherefore the king, at this Vincent's requeſt, for the declaration of the truth, hath ſent him hither with his grace's letters, that I ſhould examine my lord, and have your counſel therein, that he may take it well and in good part. And this is the cauſe of my ſending for you; therefore I deſire your counſel therein for the true acquittal of this poor gentleman, maſter Vincent." "Sir," quoth I, "according to my duty, you ſhall; and, by my advice, you ſhall reſort unto him in your own perſon to viſit him; and, in communication, break the matter unto him; and, if he will not tell the truth therein, then may you certify the king thereof; but, in any caſe, name not, nor ſpeak of, my fellow Vincent: alſo I would not have you to track the time with him, for he is very ſick, and I fear that he will not live paſt a day or two. And accordingly maſter Kingſton went to my lord, and demanded the money; ſaying, "that my lord of Northumberland found in a book at Cawood-houſe that you had but lately borrowed £1500[1]; and it will not be found, no not ſo much as one penny thereof; who hath made the king privy to the ſame: wherefore the king hath written to me to know what is become thereof; for it were pity that it ſhould be holden from you both. Therefore I require you, in the king's name, to tell me the truth, that I may make a juſt report thereof unto his majeſty of your anſwer?" With that quoth my lord, "Oh good Lord! how much doth it grieve me that the king ſhould think any ſuch thing in me, that I ſhould deceive him of one penny, ſeeing I have nothing, nor never had (God be my judge), that I ever eſteemed ſo much mine own as his majeſty's, having but the bare uſe of it during my life, and after my death to leave it wholly to him; wherein his majeſty hath prevented me. But for this money that you demand of me, I aſſure you it is none of my own; for I borrowed it of divers of my friends to bury me, and to beſtow amongſt my ſervants, who have taken great pains about me; notwithſtanding, if it be your pleaſure to know, I muſt be content; yet I beſeech his majeſty to ſee it ſatisfied, for the diſcharge of my conſcience to them that I owed it to." "Who be they?" quoth maſter Kingſton. "That ſhall I tell you," quoth my lord; "I borrowed £200. thereof of ſir John Allen of London; and other £200. of ſir Richard Greſham of London; and £200. of the Maſter of the Savoy; and alſo £200. of Dr. Heyden, dean of my college at Oxford; £200. of the treaſurer of the church; and £200. of parſon Ellis my chaplain; and another £200. of a prieſt that was then his ſteward, whoſe name I have forgotten. I hope the king will reſtore it again, foraſmuch as it is none of mine." "Sir," quoth maſter Kingſton, "there is no doubt in the king, whom you need not diſtruſt: but, ſir, I pray you, where is the money?" Quoth he, "I will not conceal it, I warrant you; but I will declare it unto you before I die, by the grace of God. Have a little patience with me, I pray you; for, the money is ſafe enough in an honeſt man's hands, who will not keep one penny thereof from the king." So maſter Kingſton departed for that time, my lord being very weak; and about four of the clock in the next morning, as I conceived, I aſked him how he did? "Well," quoth he, "if I had any meat—I pray you give me ſome." "Sir," quoth I, "there is none ready." Then he ſaid, "you are much to blame; for you ſhould have always meat for me in readineſs, whenſoever that my ſtomach ſerves me; I pray you get ſome ready for me; for I mean to make myſelf ſtrong to-day, to the intent I may go to confeſſion, and make me ready for God." Quoth I, "I will call up the cooks to prepare ſome meat; and alſo I will call maſter Palmes, that he may diſcourſe with you till your meat be ready." "With a good will," quoth my lord. And ſo I called maſter Palmes, who roſe and came to my lord. Then I went and acquainted maſter Kingſton that my lord was very ſick, and not like to live. "In good faith," quoth maſter Kingſton, "you are much to blame to make him believe he is ſicker than he is." "Well, ſir," quoth I, "you cannot ſay but I gave you warning, as I am bound to do." Upon which words he aroſe and came unto him; but, before he came my lord cardinal had eaten a ſpoonful or two of callis made of chicken; and after that he was in his confeſſion the ſpace of an hour: and then maſter Kingſton came to him, and bade him good morrow, and aſked him how he did? "Sir," quoth he, "I watch but God's pleaſure to render up my poor ſoul to him. I pray you have me heartily commended unto his royal majeſty, and beſeech him on my behalf to call to his princely remembrance all matters that have been between us from the beginning and the progreſs; and eſpecially between good queen Katharine and him; and then ſhall his grace's conſcience know whether I have offended him or not. He is a prince of a moſt royal carriage, and hath a princely heart; and, rather than he will miſs or want any part of his will, he will endanger the one half of his kingdom. I do aſſure you, I have often kneeled before him, ſometimes three hours together, to perſuade him from his will and appetite; but could not prevail. And, maſter Kingſton, had I but ſerved God as diligently as I have ſerved the king, he would not have given me over in my grey hairs: but this is the juſt reward that I muſt receive for my diligent pains and ſtudy, not regarding my ſervice to God, but only to my prince. Therefore, let me adviſe you, if you be one of the privy council, as by your wiſdom you are fit, take heed what you put in the king's head; for you can never put it out again. Maſter Kingſton, farewell. I wiſh all things may have good ſucceſs; my time draws on; I may not tarry with you; I pray you remember my words." Now began the time to draw near; for he drew his ſpeech at length, and his tongue began to fail him, his eyes perfectly ſet in his head, his ſight failed him. Then we began to put him in mind of Chriſt's paſſion, and cauſed the yeomen of the guard to ſtand by privately to ſee him die, and bear witneſs of his words and his departure, who heard all his communications. And incontinently the clock ſtruck eight. And then gave he up the ghoſt, and thus he departed this preſent life[2]. And calling to remembrance how he ſaid the day before, that at eight of the clock we ſhould loſe our maſter, as it is before rehearſed, one of us looking upon another, ſuppoſing that either he knew or propheſied of his departure. Yet, before his departure, we ſent for the abbot of the houſe to annoyle him; who made all the ſpeed he could, and came to his departure, and ſo ſaid certain prayers before the breath was fully out of his body. After that he was thus departed, maſter Kingſton ſent a poſt to the king, advertizing him of the departure of the cardinal by one of the guard

---

[1] In the printed copies of Mr. Cavendiſh's "Memoirs" it is £10,000.

[2] "The great ſtory of this abbey has a virtuous tendency. Within its walls was once exhibited a ſcene more humiliating to human ambition, and more inſtructive to human grandeur, than almoſt any which Hiſtory hath produced. Here the fallen pride of Wolſey retreated from the inſults of the world. All his viſions of ambition were now gone; his pomp and pageantry; and crouded levees! On this ſpot he told the liſtening monks, the ſole attendants of his dying-hour, as he ſtood around his pallet, That he was come to lay his bones among them; and gave a pathetic teſtimony to the truth and joys of religion, which preaches beyond a thouſand lectures.—The death of Wolſey would make a fine moral picture, if the hand of any maſter could give the pallid features of the dying ſtateſman, that chagrin, that remorſe, thoſe pangs of anguiſh, which in thoſe laſt bitter moments of his life poſſeſſed him. The point might be taken when the monks are adminiſtering the comforts of religion, which the deſpairing prelate cannot feel. The ſubject requires a gloomy apartment, which a ray through a Gothic window might juſt enlighten, throwing its force chiefly on the principal figure, and dying away on the reſt. The appendages of the piece need only be few and ſimple; little more than the crozier and red hat, to mark the cardinal, and tell the ſtory." Gilpin, Northern Tour.

THOMAS WOLSEY, CARDINAL, ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, AND LORD CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND,
DIED NOV. 29. 1529.

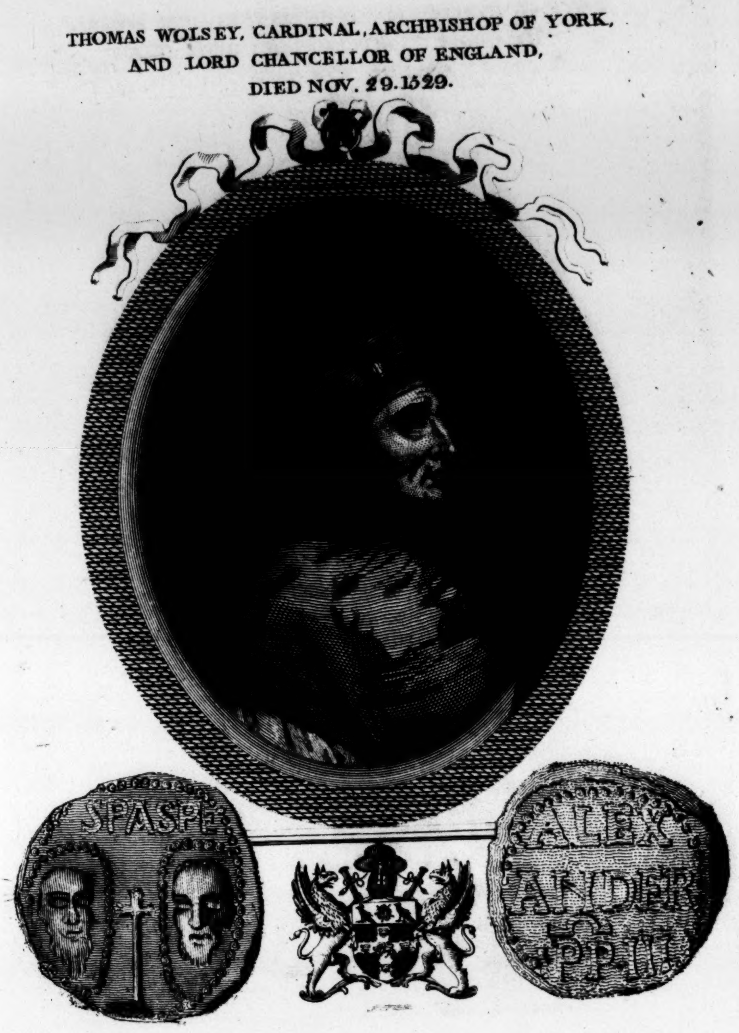

Plate XVII. p.272.

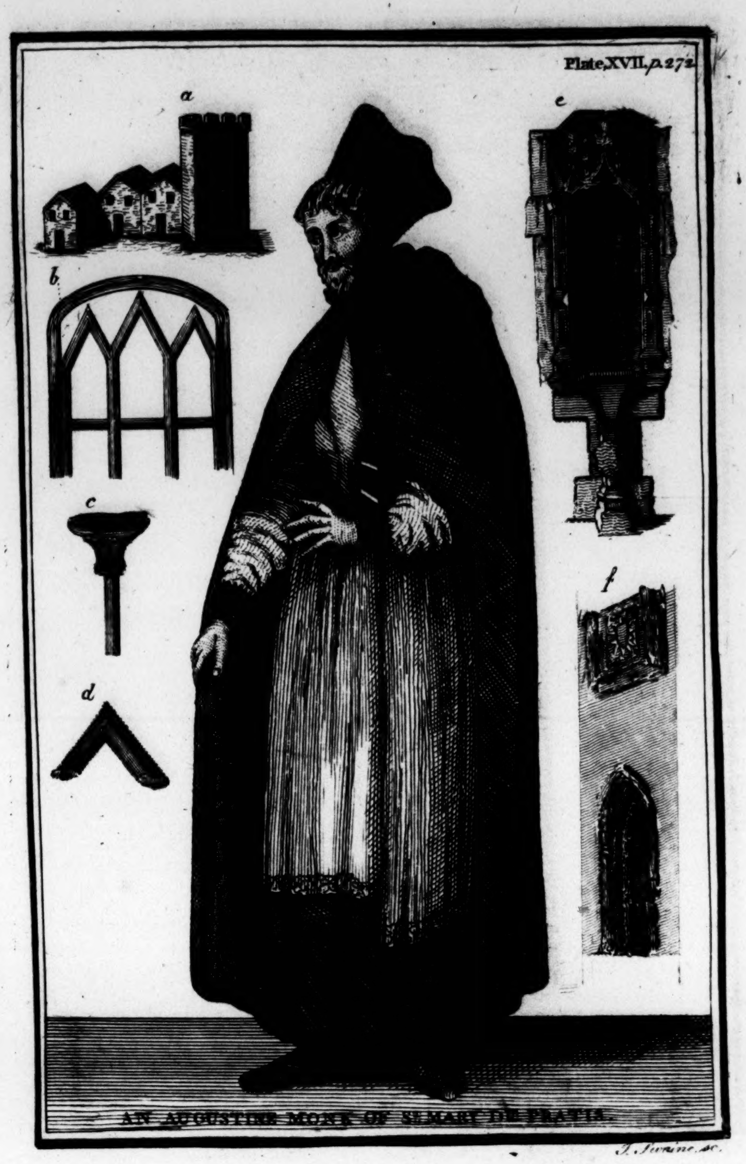

AN AUGUSTINE MONK OF St. MARY DE PRATIS.

J. Swaine sc.

Fig. 1. p. 261.

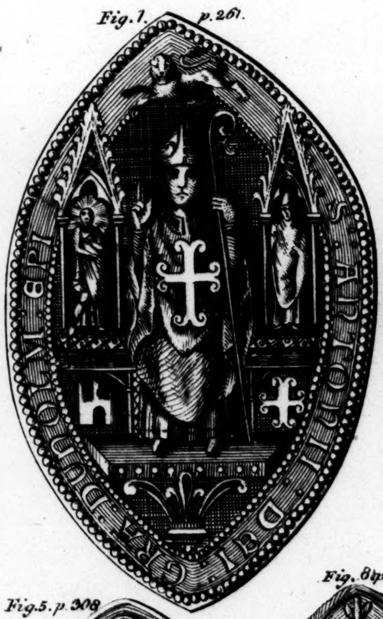

Fig. 3. p. 274.

Johñ Bowchier abbot confessor

Richard Knyght

Richard Webbe subprior
Richard Clarke
Robt Capcott

Fig. 2. p. 262.

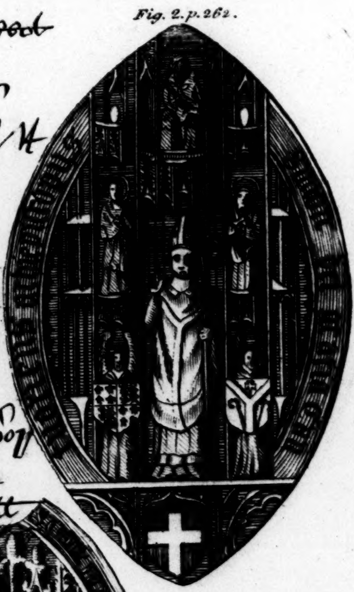

Fig. 6. p. 276.

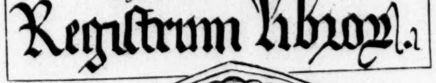

Registrum librorum. 1

Fig. 12. p. 300.

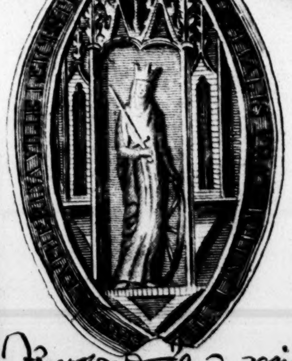

Fig. 5. p. 308

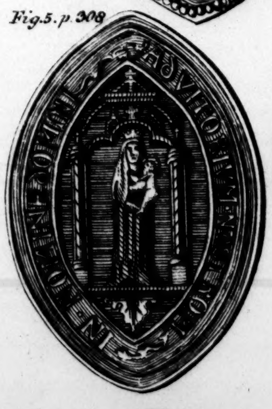

Fig. 8. p. 296.

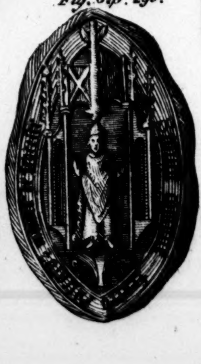

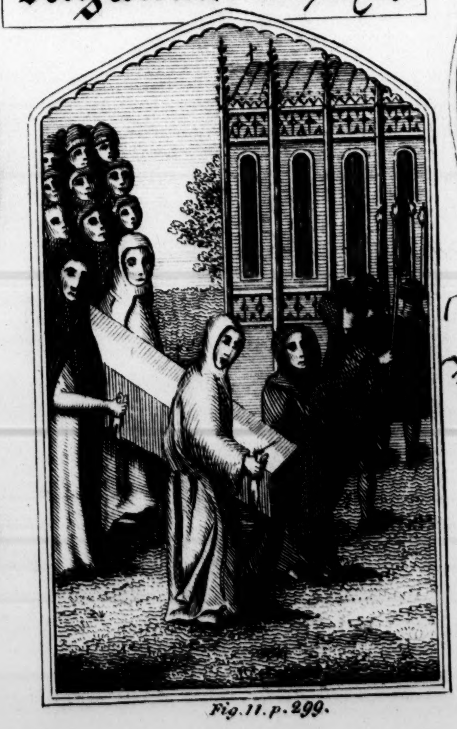

Fig. 11. p. 299.

Fig. 7. p. 294.

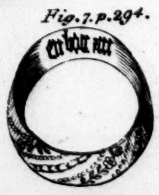

Fig. 10. p. 299.

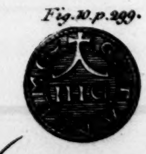

Richard Preston prior
Richard Hamill subprior

Fig. 4. p. 274.

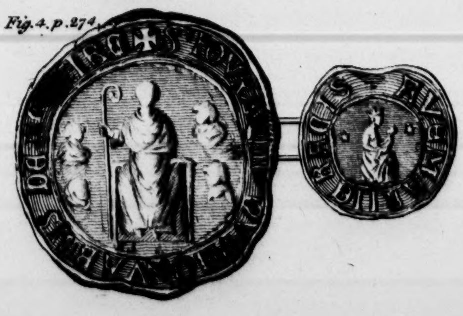

Fig. 9. p. 297.

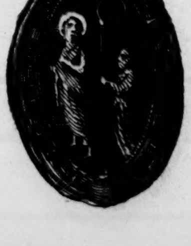

Fig. 13. p. 301.

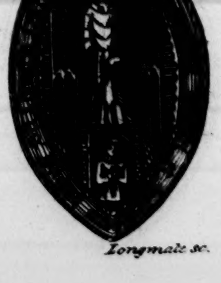

Longmate sc.

BRITISH 12 JN 1928 MUSEUM

that ſaw and heard him die. Then was maſter Kingſton and the abbot in conſultation about the funeral, which was ſolemnized the day after; for maſter Kingſton would not ſtay the return of the poſt. They thought good that the mayor of Leiceſter and his brethren ſhould be ſent for, to ſee him perſonally dead, to avoid falſe rumours that might ſpread to ſay that he was ſtill alive. Then was the mayor and his brethren ſent for; and in the mean time the body was taken out of the bed where he lay dead, who had upon him next his body a ſhirt of hair, beſides his other ſhirt, which was of very fine holland, which was not known to any of his ſervants being continually about him in his chamber, ſaving to his ghoſtly father; which ſhirts were laid in a coffin made for him of boards, having upon his dead corpſe all ſuch ornaments as he was inveſted in when he was made biſhop and archbiſhop, as mitre, croſs, ring, and pall, with all other things due to his order and dignity. And, lying thus all day in his coffin open and bare-faced, every man that would might ſee him there dead, without fayning, even as the mayor, his brethren, and others did. Lying thus watched from four or five at night, he was carried down into the church with great ſolemnity by the abbot, and conducted with much torch-light and ſervice-ſong due for ſuch funerals. And, being in the church, the corpſe was ſet in our Lady's chapel, with divers tapers of wax, and divers poor men following about the ſame, holding torches in their hands, who watched about the corpſe all night, while the chanons ſung Dirige and other divine oryſons. And, about four of the clock in the morning, maſter Kingſton and we the cardinal's ſervants came into the church, and there tarried the execution of divers ceremonies in ſuch caſes, as is uſual about the corpſe of a biſhop. Then went they to maſs; at which maſs the abbot and divers others did offer. And, that done, they went to bury the corpſe in the middle of the ſaid chapel, where was made for him a ſtate [1]. And by that time he was buried, and all ceremonies ended, it was ſix of the clock in the morning. Then went we and prepared us to horſeback, being St. Andrew's day the Apoſtle, and ſo took our journey to the court, riding that ſame day, being Wedneſday, to Northampton; and the next day to Dunſtable; and the next day to London, where we tarried until St. Nicholas' even; and then we rode to Hampton Court, where the king and council lay; giving all our attendance upon them, for our diſcharge. And the next day, being St. Nicholas' day, I was ſent for, being in maſter Kingſton's chamber then in the court, to come to the king; whom I found ſhooting in the rounds in the park, on the back-ſide of the garden; and perceiving him occupied in ſhooting, thought it not good to trouble him, but, leaning to a tree, attended there until he had made an end of his diſport; which ended, the king gave his bow to the yeoman of the bows, and went his way inward. Then maſter Norris commanded me to go to the king, who ſtood behind the door, in his night-gown of ruſſet velvet furred with ſables, before whom I kneeled the ſpace of an hour; during which time his majeſty examined me of divers particulars concerning my lord cardinal, wiſhing rather than twenty thouſand pounds that he had lived. He aſked me concerning the fifteen hundred pounds which maſter Kingſton moved to my lord. Quoth I, "I think I can perfectly tell your grace where it is, and who hath it." "Can you?" quoth the king. "I pray you tell me, and you ſhall not be unrewarded." "Sir," quoth I, "after the departure of maſter Vincent from my lord at Scroby, who had the cuſtody thereof, leaving it with my lord in divers bags, he delivered it to a certain prieſt, ſafely to be kept to his uſe." "Is this true?" quoth the king. "Yea," quoth I, without doubt; the prieſt will not deny it before me, for I was at the delivery thereof, who hath gotten divers other rich ornaments, which are not regiſtered in the book of my lord's inventory [2] or other writings, whereby any man is able to charge him therewith but myſelf." "Then," ſaid the king, "let me alone for keeping this ſecret between me and you. Howbeit, three may keep council if two be away; and if I knew my cap were privy to my council, I would caſt it into the fire and burn it: and for your honeſty and truth, you ſhall be our ſervant in our chamber, as you were with your maſter. Therefore go you your ways to ſir John Gage our vice-chamberlain, to whom we have ſpoken already, to admit you our ſervant in our chamber; and then go to the lord of Norfolk, and he ſhall pay you your whole year's wages, which is ten pounds. Is not it ſo?" quoth the king. "Yes forſooth," quoth I; "and I am behind for three quarters of a year of the ſame wages." "That is true," quoth the king; "therefore you ſhall have your whole year's wages, with our reward, delivered you by the duke of Norfolk." So I received ten pounds of the duke for my wages, and twenty pounds for my reward; and his majeſty gave me a cart and ſix horſes, the beſt that I could chooſe out of my lord's horſes, to carry my goods, and five marks for my charge homewards [3]."

Mr. Carte ſays, "Upon my enquiries about the place of Wolſey's burial [4], the moſt probable account that I have met with is from Mr. John Haſloe, whoſe grandfather Arthur Barefoot was gardener to the counteſs of Devonſhire, who lived at the Abbey before the war. He tells me, that the church ſtood, part of it in what is now a little garden, and the Eaſt end of it in the orchard (which was formerly called the New Garden), where his grandfather, with others, digging, found ſeveral ſtone coffins [5], the cavities of which did not lye uppermoſt, but were inverted over the bodies; that one of theſe was taken up, of about ſix feet and a half long, four wide, and two deep; that it ſeemed very ſound at firſt, but when it was expoſed to the air it ſoon mouldered away; that he obſerved that all of them had a round hole about the middle of them near five inches diameter, but for what uſe he could not tell; that among theſe he diſcovered cardinal Wolſey's (Mr. Haſloe forgets by what means he knew it); which the counteſs would not ſuffer to be ſtirred, but ordered it to be covered again, and his grandfather laid a great heap of gravel over it, that he might know the place; which ſtill remains there."—Mr. Browne Willis, in a letter to Dr. Chartlett, dated Whaddon-hall, April 19, 1716, adds, "I was greatly pleaſed with the above-mentioned anſwer to ſome queries I ſent to Leiceſter ſome time ago; from which place I received this anſwer on Tueſday, from the Rev. Mr. Samuel Carte, a noted antiquary there, among other things relating to that borough [1]. I have written ſince to him concerning more particulars in relation to the diſcovery. In ſhort, as I have been ever zealous concerning our founder Cardinal Wolſey, ſo I cannot but be pleaſed in whatever I diſcover about him; and it would be a great ſatisfaction to me, and I ſhould be willing to contribute much, if his body could be tranſlated to Chriſt Church. This our College ought in gratitude to do; and, dear Doctor, if you have an opportunity of ſpeaking with any of them, as doubtleſs you have many, ſound the thing, and ſee how it will agree with their notions. Methinks, though I am but a mean perſon, I could gladly undergo the charge of removing the Cardinal's body, if it were into the next pariſh-church, rather than it ſhould reſt ſo obſcurely there [2]."—The farther proceedings are thus related by Mr. Carte: "That great lover of antiquity, Browne Willis, eſq. having an extraordinary veneration for cardinal Wolſey, as the original founder of Chriſt church in Oxford, of which he and his father were members, deſired me to try if I could find out the ſepulchre of the Cardinal; which I did, hoping that, when I had provided tools and labourers, ſome others would have contributed with me towards the expence; but, finding that only one perſon would contribute twelve-pence, I deſiſted [3]."

---

[1] The funeral was attended by the mayor and corporation with their formalities and in their uniforms.

[2] This refers to a curious MS. preſerved in the Harleian Collection, intituled, N° 428, "An Inventorie of Cardinal Wolſey's rich Houſhold Stuff," written by his own officers, and including all the furniture at Hampton Court and York Houſe. This Inventory is brought down to the year of the Cardinal's death; and is well worthy the attention of the Society of Antiquaries.

[3] Here the printed copy ends; but there are ſeveral more pages of the MS. in which is the following: That, in going from the king, Mr. Cavendiſh met Mr. Kingſton coming from the council, who commanded him to go before the council, but to take heed of what he ſaid; for he ſhould be examined of certain words ſpoken by my lord his maſter at his departure (the which I knew well enough); and if I tell them the truth (quoth he) what he ſaid, I ſhould undo myſelf; for in any wiſe they may not hear of it, therefore be circumſpect what anſwer you make to their demands. Why, quoth I, how have you done therein yourſelf? Quoth he, I have utterly denied that I heard any ſuch words; and he that opened the matter firſt is fled for fear, which was the yeoman of the guard that rode to the king from Leiceſter, &c.

[4] The obſcurity of Wolſey's burial-place is thus alluded to by biſhop Corbet, in his "Iter Boreale:"

"And though from his own ſtore Wolſey might have A Palace *, or a College †, for his grave;
Yet here he lies interr'd, as if that all
Of him to be remember'd were his fall.
Nothing but earth to earth, nor pompous weight
Upon him, but a pebble or a quoit.
If thou art thus neglected, what ſhall we ‡ Hope after death, that are but ſhreds of thee?"

[5] Theſe coffins were probably thoſe of the founder, and other benefactors to the abbey.

* Whitehall. † Chriſt Church. ‡ Students of Chriſt Church.

John Bourchier, abbot of Leiceſter, ſubſcribed to the king's ſupremacy, Auguſt 11, 1534; and in that year a commiſſion iſſued from the king, to take an eccleſiaſtical ſurvey of the county of Leiceſter, directed to ſir John Villers, knight, ſir John Nevill, knight, ſir Thomas Pulteney, knight, ſir William Turvile, knight, John Harrington, Roger Radcliff, Roger Wygſton, William Aſhby, Chriſtopher Villers, Thomas Trye, John Beaumont, Thomas Waldram, Peter Ithiell, and Robert Wyngfield. In their return, the revenues of this abbey are thus ſtated [4]:

	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
In Spirituals,	247	7	8¾	785	7	8¾
In Temporals,	538	0	0
The outgoings were,
To the biſhop of Lincoln,	2	0	0	83	4	10¾
—— chapter of Lincoln,	5	0	0
—— Lichfield cathedral,	6	13	4
—— York cathedral,	2	13	4
—— archdeacon of Bedford,	0	7	7¾
—— Bucks,	0	2	9¾
—— Derby,	0	12	7¾
—— Northampton,	0	7	5¾
—— Richmond,	0	7	7¾
—— prior of Clerkenwell,	0	13	4
—— St. John of Jeruſalem,	0	4	0
—— Lenton,	0	3	4
—— Shene,	12	14	0
—— Trentham,	5	13	4
To augment vicarages [5]:
—— Billeſdon,	3	0	0
—— Bitteſwell,	1	0	0
—— Brackley,	5	4	4
—— Coſby,	0	8	0
—— Galby,	1	6	8
—— Hungarton,	3	0	0
—— St. Leonard,	5	6	8
—— St. Mary de Caſtro,	4	0	0
—— Melton,	5	0	0
—— Queniborough,	5	6	8
—— Sharnbrook,	1	0	0
—— Thornton,	3	0	0
—— Thurnby,	3	0	0
—— Youlgrave,	5	0	0

In 1539, when all the great religious houſes that were above the yearly value of £200. were given to the king, it is obſerved by Mr. Browne Willis[6] (who refers to Collier's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory for his authority) that this abbot withſtanding the diſſolution of his monaſtery, the viſitors charged him and his canons with adultery, &c. But in Collier [7] the canons only are mentioned as being threatened with a proſecution. As Henry intended to promote Bourchier to an epiſcopal ſee at Shrewſbury; and as he was actually nominated by queen Mary, in 1558, to the ſee of Glouceſter [8]; it can hardly be ſuppoſed that his character was open to ſo opprobrious an accuſation. On the contrary, in a letter from Richard Layton, one of the commiſſioners, to the lord Cromwell, the abbot is repreſented as "an honeſt man," but the canons as "obſtinate and factious." And, in a letter ſent by this abbot to Thomas lord Cromwell, he expreſsly ſays, "I have ſent by mye ſervant, the barer herof, the hundred pounds whiche I promyſed to you for your greate and manyfold payns takyn in my favour; and that I ſend it with as good will as ever I ſent anye thing in mye lyef; humblye beſeching your infynyt goodnes to contynue continuallye your former favour; the which, God beyng mye record, I prefer above all my lyvyng. Wheras your Mayſterſhip did requyre me for the ferme of Yngwordſby in maiſter Richard's favour, I have as vehementlye moved mye brotherne therfor, as I woold have doon for a ryght hygh matyer; but byecauſe it ever was the demeane lands of the houſe, and that withought the ſame ferme we can bryng upe nether bevs ne muttons for the mayntynans of our hoſpytalytes, I cannot bend them to yt; for, my predeceſſour dyd bring our pour monaſterye to the hindrans that it is yn by lettyng that ferme. Therfor, ſyns your pleaſur is that I ſhall proſpour, bycauſe I am of your Maiſterſhip's advauncement eſpecially, I with knelyng hart beſech your goodnes not to requyre it; partlye bycauſe my brotherne in noo wyeis will graunt or agree to yt, eſpecially bycauſe the lacke of that ferme is the extream undoyng of our houſſe. Thus, your good maiſterſhip extendyng your old goodnes to me your bedyman, I and all mye brotherne ſhall be bonden to pray for your proſperouſe helthe [9]." This was dated April 19; and in a ſhort time after, the abbot and convent, having no hopes of a fair trial or impartial judges, conſented to ſurrender up the valuables and large revenues of the abbey, to ſecure the penſions for life which were promiſed them on their ſo doing. The original inſtrument, for this purpoſe, dated .... die .... anno regni illuſtriſſimi domini regis triceſimo" (the day of the month having never been filled up) is ſigned by John Bourchier, abbot of Leiceiſtere; Richard Duckytt, [prior;] Richard Webbe, ſubprior; Richard Clarke; Robert Sapcott; John Dingſworth; Thomas Jurdane; John Boſworth; Thomas Kendall; John Lacie; John Revell; *John Bux*ᵐ; Gregory Kyng, Hugh Sheppe; William Clarke; William Bylſhe; Jamys Lowe; Thomas Weſtys; William Parmyter; Thomas Gamſwett. Two double ſeals [10] appended to this ſurrender, with a fac ſimile of the names of the abbot and ſome of the monks, are given in plate XVII. fig. 3, 4.

In 1553, there remained in charge here £3. 6s. 8d. fees; £32. 19s. 4d. in annuities; and the following penſions: John Bourchier, laſt abbot, £.200; Richard Duckytt £.10; John Buckeſham £.6; Richard Webbe £.6; John Lacie £.6; Hugh Shepey £5. 6s. 8d.; John Revell £5. 6s. 8d.; Gregory King £5. 6s. 8d.; William Parmyter £5; James Lowe £5; and Thomas Weſtys £5.[11]

---

[1] Mr. Carte's letter may be ſeen at length in the Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica, vol. VIII. p. 556.

[2] From Ballard's MSS. in the Bodleian Library, XVIII. 86.

[3] As a labourer was digging in 1787 for potatoes upon the ſpot where the high-altar of the chapel was ſuppoſed to ſtand, he found a human ſkull, with ſeveral other human bones, all perfect. From the ſituation of the place and other circumſtances, it was conjectured at the time that this might be the identical ſkull of cardinal Wolſey. Cambridge Chronicle, June 2, 1787.

[4] See an account of their revenues in ſpirituals and temporals in 1292 in our Appendix, p. 79.

[5] The vicar of Bulkington had 16s. 8d. given him; and nine acres of glebe land. Cotton MSS. Vitellius F. XVII. fol. 29.

[6] Hiſtory of Mitred Abbeys, vol. II. p. 112.

[7] Vol. II. p. 158.

[8] "Ep'us electus Gloceſtr." Geo. Lilius, in vitâ Fiſheri Roff. p. 31; Baker's MS Hiſtory of St. John's College, p. 283. in margine.—On the death of Dr. Brokes, biſhop of Glouceſter, which happened Sept. 7, 1558; John Bourſher, S. T. B. had, on the 25th of October, the cuſtody of the temporalities of that ſee. Godwin de Præſulibus, p. 552; from Rymer, Fœd. vol. XV. p. 489. Queen Mary died in the month following; and the ſee remained vacant till 1562.

[9] See the Introductory Volume, p. cxlii.

[10] Another ſeal of this abbey is engraved in fig. 5.

[11] Willis's Mitred Abbeys, vol. II. p. 112.

A liſt of the abbots of Leiceſter, extracted by the Rev. Henry Hall from a MS. in the Lambeth library[1]; compared with another MS. formerly in the Cotton library, and now in the Britiſh Muſeum[2].

1. Ricardus, electus anno 1144, 8 Steph. præfuit an' 24[3].

2. Willielmus de Kalewyken, electus 1167, 14 Hen. I. præfuit an' 10.

3. Willielmus de Broke, electus 1177, 23 Hen. II. præfuit an' 9. [He reſigned in 1186, on becoming abbot of the Ciſtercians.]

4. Paulus[4], electus 1186, 8 Ric. I. præfuit an' 19.

5. Willielmus Pepyn, electus 1205, 15 Joh. præfuit an' 19.[5]

6. Oſbertus[6], electus 1224, 8 Hen. III. præfuit an' 5.

7. Matthias de Bray[7], electus 1229, 13 Hen. III. præfuit an' 6. On his reſignation,

8. Alanus de Ceſtreham[8], electus 1235, 19 Hen. III. 5 kal. Nov. præfuit an' 9. This abbot appears to have been ſuſpended in 1236[9], and re-appointed.

9. Robertus Furmenteyn[10], electus 1244, 28 Hen. III. non. Nov. præfuit an' 3.

10. Henricus de Roiley, or Rotheleye[11], electus 1247, 10 cal. Aug. 31 Hen. III. præfuit an' 23.

11. Willielmus Schepiſhed[12], electus 1270, 54 Hen. III. 2 non. Octob. præfuit an' 21.

12. Willielmus de Malverniâ[13], electus 1291, 19 Edw. I. 5 id. Sept. præfuit ann' 26.

13. Ricardus Towrs[14], electus 1317, 11 Edw. II. 13 cal. Jan. præfuit an' 28.

14. Willielmus Clowne[15], electus 1345, 19 Edw. III, cal. 12 Nov. præfuit an' 32. Ob. 1377, 11 cal. Feb.

15. Willielmus de Kerby[16], electus 1377, 1 Ric. II. 3 non. Feb. præfuit an' 16.

16. Philippus de Repingdon[17], electus 1393, 17 Ric. II. præfuit an' 11.

17. Ricardus Rothele[18], electus 1404, 6 Hen. IV. 5 cal. Maii, præfuit an' 16.

18. Willielmus Sadyngton[19], electus 1420, 8 Hen. VI. 13 cal. Nov. præfuit an' 22.

19. Johannes Pomerey[20], electus 1442, 21 Hen. VI. 16 cal. Jun. præfuit an' 32.

20. Johannes Schepiſhed, electus 1474, 14 Edw. IV. 11 cal. Sept. præfuit an' 11.

21. Gilbertus Mancheſter[21], electus 1485, 1 Hen. VII. 2 cal. Oct. præfuit an' 11.

22. Johannes Penney[22], electus 1496, 11 Hen. VII. 7 cal. Julii; præfuit an' 13.

23. Ricardus Pexal[23], 3° Martii, 1509; occurs 1533.

24. John Bourchier[24] occurs in 1534[25] and 1537; and ſurrendered up his office in 1539[26]. On the death of queen Mary, her intended favour of making him a biſhop becoming of no avail, he left England; and, on the 29th of January, 1576, he, with two other Leiceſterſhire perſons, Henry Jolliffe, clerk, and John Pott, ſchool-maſter, were returned into the Exchequer as fugitives[27]; but, in Auguſt 1584, a general pardon to "John abbot late of Leiceſter" is noticed in a grant in the Britiſh Muſeum[28]; ſo that he ſeems to have been one of the laſt ſurviving abbots.

By a letter to lord Cromwell, from Francis Cave, one of the commiſſioners, dated Aug. 20, 1539, it appears that the ſurrender was then completed, and the writings in the cuſtody of Mr. Cave[29]; who ſays, "By your lordſhippes goodneſs towardes me, I now ame in the poſſeſſion of the houſe, and all the demeynes wiche was unlett at the tyme of our repare thether. We founde the houſe indettyd to dyvers creditors in £410. 10*s.* over and beſides certain ſums of money the houſe was indebted to the kinges heyghnes, wherof we make no reconinge; and for the diſcharge therof we have made ſale of the ſtoke and ſtore, withe the houſhold ſtuffe and ornaments of the churche, which amounte unto £228. The plate is onſolde, wiche maiſter Freman takith the charge of, and is valuyd at, by weyght, 190 pounds. The lead, by eſtimacōn, is valuyd at £1000; the bells at £88. For the diſchargeynge of thabbot, convent, and ſervants of the ſeide monaſtery, there haithe beyne payde, as dothe apere more particularly by the bouke we ſend yowr lordſhippe, £149. And for as moche as thabbot hathe not receyvyd of us but £20, he hath requyride me to deſyer your lordſhippe to be ſo good lorde unto hym, he may have 20 pounds, or 20 marks more. The church and houſe remeynethe as yet undefacede, and in the cherche be many thynges to be made ſale of; for the wiche yt may pleſe yowr lordſhippe to let me knawe yowre pleyſure, as well for the further ſale to be made, as for the defaſinge of the chirche and other ſuperfluous byldinges wiche be abowt the monaſtery. A hundrithe marks yerly will not ſuſteyne the charges in reparyng this houſe, yf all byldinges be lett ſtande, as your lordſhippe ſhall knowe more hereafter[1]." This was a prelude to the total demolition; which ſpeedily followed.

---

[1] Vitellius F. XVII. in Bibl. Cotton.

[2] MSS. Lambethan. DLXXV. 215.

[3] "On the authority of Bale, it has been believed that Gilbert Foliot was abbot of Leiceſter; and Bale is ſo confident of his miſtake, that he is not content to affirm that he was thence tranſlated to the ſee of Hereford; but that he never was abbot of Glouceſter, as ſome ſuppoſe. In this he is followed by Pits, Burton, and Cave. On the other hand, Leiceſter abbey was founded 1143; the firſt abbot was Richard, elected 1144, who held the abbacy 24 years. He was ſucceeded by William, ſecond abbot, 1167, who died 1177. This is clear from Henry Knighton and an old regiſter of the abbey." Wharton, de Epiſcopis London. p. 64. —This point has been already diſcuſſed, on Foliot's own authority, in p. 260.

[4] Paul*in*us occurs abbot 8 Ric. I. Dodſworth's Collections. Kennet.

[5] William occurs abbot 1204. He was abbot in the time of pope Alexander III. and Robert prior of Kenelworth. MS. Kennet.

[6] He died 1229. Chron. Dunſtap. p. 185 He is called de Dunton in the king's aſſent to his election, 22 Aug. 8 Hen. III. Kennet.

[7] Licence to elect an abbot on the death of Oſbert, 22 Jan.—Rex conſentit electioni M. de Bray prioris Leic. in abbatem ejuſdem, 29 Jan. Pat. 13 Hen. III. m. 10.

[8] "Fr. Alanus de Ceſterſham, petitâ & obtentâ a rege licentiâ, per reſignationem Matthie, admiſſ' in abbatem Sancte Marie de Pratis, Leyc'. mandat. J. archidiac' Leyc'." Reg. Groſſeteſte, ann. 1.—Licentia eligendi abb. de Leic. 4 Sept. Rex conſentit electioni Alani canonici Leic. in abbatem ejuſdem 16 Sept. Pat. 19 Hen. III. m. 4 & 29 Sept. m. 3.

[9] Robert (Groſſeteſte) biſhop of Lincoln viſited the monaſteries in his dioceſe, and removed [or rather ſuſpended] the abbot of Leiceſter 1236, and cauſed another to be placed therein. Chron. Dunſtap. p. 239. Pegge's Life of Groſſeteſte, p. 48.

[10] Licentia eligendi abb. Leic. 13 Nov. 29 Hen. III. Rex prebet aſſenſum electioni Rob. Fermentin in abb. Leic. & mandatum eſt magiſtro Rob. de Mariſco, officiali Linc. ep'i, 26 Nov. Pat. 29 Hen. III. m. 10.

[11] Rex prebuit aſſenſum electioni Ric. de Rottel. 23 Sept. 31 Hen. III.—"Henricus Rothelegh, canonicus Sancte Marie de Pratis, Leyc', ad abbatiam ejuſdem, benedictus per fratrem W. quondam epiſcopum Karl', ad rogatum epiſcopi." Ibid. ann. 13. Walter Mal-clerk had reſigned the biſhoprick of Carliſle 1246.

[12] Pat. 54 Hen. III. Prior & conventus S. Marie de Pratis pro fine 40 marc. habent cuſtodiam dicte abb'ie per ceſſionem vel deceſſum Henrici abbatis ſui.—13 Sept. ceſſit; & habuerunt licentiam eligendi 25 Sept. "Fr. Willielmus de Sepeſheved, electus abbas 7 Oct. per ceſſionem Henrici; confirmatus 18 kal. Nov." Reg. Graveſend, ann. 12.—William Schepiſhed, recorded as a writer in biſhop Tanner's Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 666, was a monk of Crokeſden in Staffordſhire; and wrote "Annals of England," in the Cotton library, Fauſtina B. VI. 6; but ſeems to be a different perſon from our abbot.

[13] Pat. 19 Edw. I. licentia eligendi per mortem W. Sept. 11. Rex conſentit electioni W. de Malverne, 21 Sept. Temporalia ſua traduntur 6 Oct.—"Fr. William de Malvernia fit abbas S. Marie de Pratis, Leiceſtr. per mortem Will' de Shepeſheved, 4 kal. Oct. 1294." Reg. Sutton, ann. 11.—He occurs 31 Edw. I. MS. Kennet.

[14] "Fr. Ric. Towrs, electus per mortem fratris Will' de Malverniâ, confirmatus 3 non. Feb. 1317." Reg. Dalderby, ann. 17. The abbot of Leiceſter was the firſt of the four "venditores, ſive aſſeſſores," appointed to enquire into the value of nones of ſheaves, wool, and lands, granted by parliament in the 14th year of Edw. III. A. D. 1341: therefore Richard Towrs muſt have been the abbot in this commiſſion, for he was elected in 1317; and continued abbot till 1345.

[15] "Per mortem Richardi de Tours; confirmatus 6 kal. Dec. 1345." Reg. Beke. See p. 262; & X Scriptores, col. 2620.

[16] "Per mortem Will' de Cloune; confirmatus 7 kal. April." Reg. Bokingham.

[17] "Fr. Phil. de Repyndon, ſac. pag. profeſſor, electus abbas per reſig. fratris Will'i de Kereby, admiſſ. 23 Jun. 1393." Ib.

[18] "Fr. Ric. Rotheley electus abbas B. M. de Pratis Leyceſt. 1404; confirmatus 12 Jun. 1405." Reg. Repingdon, ann. 1.

[19] "Fr. Will. Sadyngton electus abbas B. M. de Pratis Leyc. confirmatus 8 Nov. 1420." Reg. Flemmyng, 17 Jun. 1442.

[20] "Frater Joh. Pomerey, electus per mortem fratris Will'i Sadyngton, confirmatus 17 Junii." Reg. Alnewyk. See p. 264.

[21] Charyte's "Rentale" having been made in the time of this abbot, is ſometimes called "Rentale abbatis Gilberti."

[22] He was a monk here in 1477; and had the priory of Bradley in commendam 14 Sept. 1508. Reg. Smith. See before, p. 266; and ſee under Bradley (in vol. II. p. 508.) a general pardon to him as biſhop of Bangor and abbot of Leiceſter.

[23] "Ric. Pexal electus in abb. Leic. confirmatus ultimo die Martii 1509." Reg. Smith. He occurs abbot in a deed dated July 10, 1520; and as ſuch ſubſcribed by proxy at the convocation holden April 5, 1533. Willis, Mitred Abbeys, vol. II. p. 112.

[24] Cleopatra, E. IV.

[25] P. 170.

[26] "Omnibus, &c. Johannes Bourchier abbas monaſterii B. V. de Pratis Leyc. & ejuſdem loci conventus ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam. Noveritis nos, &c.—Fidem & teſtimonium nos prefati abbas & conventus huic preſenti ſcripto noſtro ſigillum noſtrum appoſuimus, anno dicti illuſtriſſimi domini noſtri regis 30°." Rymer, tom. XIV. p. 639.

[27] Strype, Eccleſ. Mem. vol. II. Append. p. 103. Peck, Deſid. Cur. vol. I. Book II. p. 26.

[28] Harl. MSS. 433. p. 76.

[29] We find Mr. Cave again employed as a commiſſioner in this county, under queen Mary, in 1554: "De Franciſco Cave & aliis, aſſignatis ad inquirendum ſuper certis articulis in comitatu Leiceſtriæ." Paſchæ Commiſſiones, 1 Mariæ, Rot. 4.

The dreſs of the monks of this houſe hath been already deſcribed, from Polydore Vergil[2]. Among the indulgences granted to them by the popes, that of the abbot's being permitted to wear a cap[3] (uti pileo), notwithſtanding any conſtitution or cuſtom to the contrary, is noticed as a conceſſion of pope Nicholas IV. From pope Gregory IV. they had a regulation reſpecting their boots and ſhoes; and it is noticed among the good deeds of abbot Clowne, that he changed their black boots to black ſhoes[4].

The abbey of Leiceſter had the uſual ſuite of officers that are found in the larger religious houſes[5].

The power and dignity of their abbot was conſiderable. He gave the ſolemn benediction, conferred the leſſer orders, wore a mitre a little different from that of a biſhop, who carried the croſier in his left hand, but an abbot in his right hand; wore ſandals[6], &c.—He had apartments with every ſuitable office, and regular ſervants[7], for his own immediate uſe. He preſided of courſe on all material occaſions; and occaſionally, on great ſolemnities, dined with the monks in their refectory; and was ſometimes, as we have ſeen, ſummoned to parliament, till, at the requeſt of abbot Clowne, the privilege of being excuſed from that attendance[8] was granted by king Edward III.

The prior, like the preſident under the maſter in the colleges at Cambridge, was next to the abbot in dignity. He had the care of the jewels and plate; which, in 1300, conſiſted of 21 ſilver ſalt-cellars, and 43 ſilver diſhes[9]. William Geryn, about 1340, gave a ſilver crucifix, with the images of St. John and Mary, and ſeveral paintings[10]; and prior Charyte, about 1470, gave a gold chalice.

The ſub-prior was of courſe aſſiſtant to the prior.

Three ſcriptores, or regiſters, are noticed here in an early deed[11]. They were to write and return letters, and manage the learned employments in the monaſtery.

The camerarius, or chamberlain, kept the keys of the treaſurer, and received and iſſued all conſiderable ſums of money; "in which notion," ſays Fuller[12], "the chamberlain of London holdeth his name."

The precentor and ſubchanter had the ſuperintendance of the library; and made regular entries of ſuch books as were occaſionally lent to any of the brethren.

The cellerarius, or cellerar, was the burſar, who bought in all proviſions, and appointed the pittances for the monks; and two ſuch are noticed in this houſe in 1371. "The cellerars," Fuller ſays, "were brave blades, much affecting ſecular gallantry; for I find it complained of, that they uſed to ſwagger with their ſwords by their ſides like lay-gentlemen[13]."

Of the original abbey, or of its church, we know but little. The only ſhadow I have ever found of a view of either is in the ſlight ſketch given at the corner of plate XVII. from Speed's map (not publiſhed till 1610); but even this will give ſome little idea of the original, which appears to have conſiſted of three bays of building, beſides the church.

Leland ſcarcely mentions the church; only obſerving, that there was a marble tomb in the wall of the South of the high altar. Whether this was the founder's, or the counteſs Petronell's, he knew not; but it was probably the latter, as the founder's tomb was generally on the North ſide of the high altar.

The principal chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was ornamented with paintings, the gift of William Geryn, ſome time treaſurer; who built a new cieling to the choir and body of the church, and had the whole new painted[14]. In this chapel Wolſey was buried.

The chapel of St. Auguſtine was on the South ſide of the church; as were the altars of St. Auguſtine and St. John the Baptiſt[15]. Other altars enumerated in Charyte's Catalogue of their miſſals (of which they had a conſiderable number), are the high altar of the Virgin; with thoſe of the Trinity, and of Saints Gabriel, Stephen, Michael, Leonard, Andrew, Katharine, and Anne; and a portable altar, which they poſſeſſed by an eſpecial indulgence of pope Gregory IV.

There were alſo four diſtinct chantries here.

A liſt may be ſeen in the Appendix[16] of the eminent perſonages, who, in conſequence of liberal gifts, were admitted canons of the houſe; and of thoſe who gave certain lands with their bodies[17]. Malcolm de Morvill, brother to Richard, conſtable of the king of Scotland[18], was buried in their cemetery.

As we know ſo little of the abbey itſelf, it will not be expected that we ſhould attempt a deſcription of the various parts; of which the bounding wall, and the circular gate-way ſhewn in the North view, plate XVIII, are perhaps the only remnants. It certainly was extenſive, and contained all the uſual apartments of a religious houſe; which are ſo minutely deſcribed by Dr. Fuller, that I ſhall only obſerve, that the abbot's hall here, rebuilt by abbot Clowne, the refectory, library, and infirmary, were particularly eminent.

The refectory was furniſhed with a pulpit[19] whilſt William Geryn was treaſurer; whence the monks, whoſe dinner-hour was fixed at twelve o'clock, were daily edified by a portion of divinity from the lecturer; all the others being ſtrictly enjoined to ſilence, whenever they were either in the church, the cloiſter, the dormitory, or the refectory[20].

They had alſo a Locatorium, or parlour, where they were freely permitted to diſcourſe; and an Oriol, which ſeems to have been a dining-parlour for viſitors, or for the uſe of ſuch as were ſlightly indiſpoſed[21].

The number and value of their books appears by Charyte's "Regiſtrum Librorum[22];" where they are arranged under a variety of diſtinct heads; amongſt which is one of Aſtronomy, with a liſt of their aſtronomical inſtruments, conſiſting of a large aſtrolabe and one of a ſmaller ſize; a ſphere and a radius, both of latten [de auricalco]; two triangles and a trigonometer; a catalogue, or map, of the ſtars[23] [ſtellarium]; and a green table for pointing out[24] the dominical letter [viridis tabula ad cognoſcend' literam dominicalem.]

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. cxliii.

[2] See before, p. 253; and a figure of one of the monks in plate XVII.

[3] "Ds. official' monuit D. Joh'em Haſtyngs de Wylmington capellan' quod de cætero non utatur an batte ſub pœnâ excommunications." Act. Cur. Conſiſt. Roffenſe, April 3, 1447, fol. 68. b.

[4] See before, p. 262; and Gent. Mag. vol. LXVI. p. 384.

[5] Titles of ſeveral other of the officers of this houſe have been already given, p. 267.

[6] Burton's Monaſticon, p. 62.

[7] A deed, in the Appendix, p. 55, is witneſſed, among others, by William Diſpenſator, and by Roger, John, and Peter, who are ſtyled famuli abbatis.

[8] "After the fixation of parliamentary abbots in a ſet number, the ſame was eftſoons ſubject to variety. The prior of Coventry played at in and out, and declined his appearance there; ſo did the abbot of Leiceſter, who may ſeem to have worn but half a mitre on his head; ſo alſo the abbot of St. James by Northampton may be ſaid to ſit but on one hip in parliament, he appears ſo in the twilight betwixt a baron and no baron in the ſummons thereunto. But afterwards the firſt of theſe three was confirmed in his place; the two laſt on their earneſt requeſt obtained a diſcharge." Fuller, Church Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 293.

[9] P. 71.

[10] See before, p. 262.

[11] Appendix, p. 55.

[12] Church Hiſtory, book VI. p. 284.

[13] Ibid. p. 285.

[14] Appendix, p. 71.

[15] Ibid. p. 72.

[16] Ibid. p. 70.

[17] Ibid p 71

[18] This office had been held by Roger de Quincy; whoſe ſeal, under that character, may be ſeen in the Introductory Volume, plate XII. Appendix, p. 40; and again, ſomewhat different, under the pariſh of Long Whatton.

[19] See a picture and deſcription of ſuch a pulpit at Beaulieu in Hampſhire, in Gent. Mag. vol. LXVI. p. 290.

[20] "Ne ſolæ fauces ſumant cibum, ſed & aures percipiant Dei verbum." Fuller, p. 219.

[21] See hereafter, p. 278.

[22] See a ſpecimen of his writing in plate XVII. fig. 6; and another, from his "Rentak," in plate I. Nº VI.

[23] This article, and ſeveral other parts of the Catalogue, will be illuſtrated in the Appendix, pp. 92 & ſeqq.

[24] Ibid.

There occurs alſo a diſtinct head of books of Phyſic, with an entry that they were purchaſed by W. Cadyngton, and had formerly been the property of John Bokedene, a phyſician.

Though we cannot aſcertain the particulars of the Infirmary; we know that, at the foundation [1] of the abbey, there was an eſpecial proviſion for it by the bounty of the counteſs Amicia [2]; and find Johannes de Infirmatorio a witneſs to an early deed [3], and Johannes Medicus (perhaps the ſame perſon) to another. They were in fact the only phyſicians of the neigbourhood. In this Infirmary, which was furniſhed with a miſſal, and with ſeveral portiforia, "perſons downright ſick (trouble to others, and troubled by others, if lodging in the dormitory), had the benefit of phyſick, and attendance private to themſelves. No Lent or faſting-days came over the threſhold of this room; ſickneſs being a diſpenſation for the eating of fleſh. It was puniſhable for any to eat therein, except ſolemnly deſigned for the place [4]."

Biſhop Tanner, in his "Notitia Monaſtica," while appreciating the merits of the monkiſh orders, did not mention their knowledge of medicine and their motives for practiſing it; but Dr. Freind, in his Hiſtory of Phyſic, was very ſevere in his ſtrictures on the clergy, both regular and ſecular, for interfering in a profeſſion that was foreign to their vows, and incompatible with their calls of duty; and he attributed to the monks, in great meaſure, the ſlow progreſs that was made in the ſcience of phyſic before the Reformation.

Vol. II. p. 257. "One may obſerve in reading this author (Arnoldus de Villâ novâ), that though the phyſical ſchools were then in a flouriſhing condition, particularly at Salernum, Naples, and Bologna, and bred up men of learning and experience, yet the practice of phyſick was in a great degree incroached upon both by the regular and ſecular clergy. This cuſtom had been long growing in the church; and the author of the Antiquities of the Univerſity at Paris reckons it one of the devil's ſtratagems to ſupplant religion, by drawing them out of their convents under a ſpecious pretence of doing good to their ſick languiſhing brethren: but the abuſe of it in a little time became ſo infamous, that the Roman council, aſſembled by pope Innocent II. in 1139, abſolutely forbad all the clergy to meddle with phyſick. In the council of Tours, 1163, where Alexander III. preſided, this more ſevere order was made, "That no one, after having taken the vow, and profeſſed himſelf, ſhould go out to hear any lecture in phyſic; and if any one did go out, and not return to his cloiſter in two months, he ſhould be avoided as an excommunicated perſon: and farther, upon his return, ſhould be turned down below all the reſt, and be incapable of any promotion, unleſs the pope thought fit." The canon adds, "that all biſhops, abbots, and priors, who conſent to ſuch enormities, and correct them not, ſhall be deprived of their dignities, and expelled from the church." And this order was re-inforced by the ſame pope in 1179; and revived by Honorius the Third in 1216. Notwithſtanding theſe edicts, either they grew into neglect, or the monks found the way to evade them; and it was chiefly owing to the multitudes employed in our faculty, that at length the colleges of Salernum and Montpelier began to decay. There might be ſome reaſons in theſe ages, why this ſet of men ſhould be made choice of, where their power over the conſciences of others was very great, eſpecially in caſes which required ſecreſy. But the Reformation, I think, has put an end to the enormity; and perhaps it is no great prejudice to the publick, that, in our times, there are no more preaching divines, who either cannot be well qualified in their own profeſſion, or muſt be very unſkilful in ours."

P. 266. "I muſt not paſs over this period of time without looking a little at home, and taking a ſhort view how the affairs of phyſic ſtood in our own country. The progreſs it made here was indeed very little; and it is no wonder it made no more, when there was ſcarce any encouragement for the ſtudy of it, either at court or in the univerſities; and when the monks, who had very little learning in any of the liberal arts or ſciences, made a ſort of monopoly of this profeſſion, and kept it chiefly in their own hands. However there were ſome even in that age, unknowing as it was, who endeavoured to diſtinguiſh themſelves in this way, both in their practice and their writings. The firſt practical writer extant, which this nation has produced, flouriſhed about this time; I mean Gilbert, called Anglicus: Bale places him in 1220, in the reign of king John; but Leland ſays, though he does not acquaint us upon what grounds he ſays ſo, that he was more modern."

P. 410. "Linacre had ſtill farther views for the advantage of our profeſſion. He ſaw in how low a condition the practice of phyſic then was, that it was moſt engroſſed by illiterate monks and empiricks, who, in an infamous manner, impoſed upon the publick."

As it was the deſign of Dr. Freind to expoſe the incongruity of an alliance between divinity and phyſic, he was rather unlucky in citing the authority of Linacre, who late in life entered into holy orders, and who, whilſt preſident of the College of Phyſicians that was eſtabliſhed under his auſpices, was a pluraliſt in parochial benefices and in prebends. "And if," as obſerved Democritus junior, one of the luminaries of the county of Leiceſter, "any phyſician in the mean time ſhall infer, ne ſutor ultra crepidam, and find himſelf grieved that I have intruded into his profeſſion, I will tell him in brief, I do not otherwiſe by them than they do by us if it be for their advantage. I know many of their ſect which have taken orders, in hope of a benefice; it is a common tranſition; and why may not a melancholy divine, that can get nothing but by ſimony, profeſs phyſic? Druſianus, an Italian (Cruſianus, but corruptly, Trithemius calls him), becauſe he was not fortunate in his practice, forſook his profeſſion, and wrote afterwards in divinity. Marcilius Ficinus was ſemel & ſimul a prieſt and a phyſician at once; and T. Linacer in his old age took orders. The Jeſuits profeſſed both at the ſame time; divers of them, permiſſu ſuperiorum, chirurgeons, bawds, panders, midwives, &c. Many poor country vicars, for want of other means, are driven to their ſhifts, to turn mountebanks, quackſalvers, empiricks; and, if our greedy patrons hold us to ſuch hard conditions as they commonly do, they will make moſt of us work at ſome trade, as Paul did; at laſt turn taſkers, maltſters, coſter-mongers, graziers, ſell ale, as ſome have done, or worſe. However, in undertaking this taſk, I hope I ſhall commit no great error or indecorum; if all be conſidered aright, I can vindicate myſelf with Georgius Braunus and Hieronymus Hemingius; thoſe two learned divines, who (to borrow a line or two of mine elder brother, Mr. William Burton, Preface to Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire), drawn by a natural love, the one of pictures and maps, proſpectives and corographical delights, writ that ample theatre of cities; the other to the ſtudy of genealogies, penned Theatrum Genealogicum [5]."

The caſe was, that Dr. Freind, whilſt zealous for the craft, did not well conſider that before the Reformation literature and ſcience were almoſt totally confined to eccleſiaſtics of the various claſſes; and ſome there were, who, regard being had to the times in which they lived, made diſtinguiſhed figures in ſtudies that appertained to the preſervation of life. And the firſt upon this liſt was a monk, the incomparable frier Bacon, whoſe treatiſe on the means of avoiding the infirmities of age, founded on the knowledge of chemiſtry, has been much and juſtly admired by many eminent phyſicians.

Dr. Freind has quoted three canons, which were probably as little obſerved by the monks as divers other injunctions impoſed by popes and councils; and it is believed that there was not any like poſitive reſtriction to which the regulars in this country were ſubject by a ſpecial conſtitution. But if the monks were, by reading, obſervation, and trial, acquainted with the ſalutary properties of herbs and drugs, they were of more uſe in their generation than they are commonly allowed to have been, by the application of them in reſtoring health to the ſick, and ſtrength to the convaleſcents.

---

[1] At a ſtill earlier period, the mill at the North bridge was given by Robert earl of Mellent to the canons of St. Mary de Caſtro, ad veſtitum infirmorum. Appendix, p. 54.

[2] Appendix, p. 55.

[3] Ibid. p. 56.

[4] Fuller.

[5] Anatomy of Melancholy, Preface to the Reader, p. 15, 16.

In monaſteries, the infirmatorius, the warden or preſident of the infirmary, ought not to have been deemed qualified for his office, if he were ignorant of the medical ſcience[1]; there is, however, room to ſuſpect that his chief employment might be to attend to the mode of living of the monks who were put under his care, from a perſuaſion that many of them would feign illneſs to obtain a greater latitude in their diet. Whereas the want of the infirm was only to be regarded, and not a voluptuous indulgence of the appetite; and, when a monk who had been ill firſt appeared in the chapter, he was to ſupplicate abſolution of the prior for having eat and drunk ſuch viands as were not permitted by the Benedictine rules[2]. By a ſtatute of archbiſhop Winchelſey, the monks of Chriſt Church, Canterbury, when any ſeculars were preſent, were to abſtain from eating fleſh, except at the table of the maſter in the infirmary, in the chambers of the ſick, in deporto[3], in the chamber of the prior, and in the ſtrangers' hall; where, if duly licenſed, they might partake of it for their own regale, and the ſolace of others. But, in order to prevent all junketings in the infirmary, it was a general rule, that no monk, if in health, ſhould eat in the infirmary; nor was any layman to enter it, except the ſervants and medical practitioners; for, the monks were permitted to conſult ſkilful phyſicians[4]; and, in the priory of St. Andrew in Rocheſter, a lay-apothecary was retained by agreement on theſe terms: that he was to receive fleſh, fiſh, and bread with ale, as much as he pleaſed. It appears that John Biſhop was the perſon engaged in 1498; and that, at an epiſcopal viſitation of the convent, there was a complaint againſt him for neglecting the ſick[5].

The monks of ſome orders were in the habit of being blooded five times in the year; and the operation might be performed by a layman. Heretofore, among the laity, the ſame perſons were barbers-chirurgeons[6]; and perhaps the Benedictines might occaſionally apply both razor and lancet. Thus far it is on record, that, till the reign of Henry III, the members of St. Auguſtine's monaſtery, near Canterbury, were obliged to ſhave one another; but that, about the year 1265, on account of the wounds ſuffered, and the dangers likely to be incurred from their not uſing the lancet dexterouſly, the then abbot granted that a room ſhould be prepared for the purpoſe near the baths, and that the monks might be ſhaved by ſeculars. As a memorial of this kind indulgence, abbot Robert was enrolled among the benefactors; and it was ordained, that on ſhaving days three collects ſhould be recited for the health of his ſoul[7].

At Croyland, "the ſerjeantry of the infirmary was given to Wlfin Barbour, who took an oath of obedience and fidelity in full chapter. His duty, then read to him, was to ſhave the whole convent in their turn, unleſs it ſhould happen that a ſenior wanted to be ſhaved before a junior; to wait on the monks at table in the infirmary, particularly on the ſick, whoſe proviſion he was to fetch from the cellarer, and be always ready in the infirmary at their call. If two were confined to their beds by ſickneſs, he was to attend the elder of them and lie with him; and the younger was to be attended and ſlept with by the clerk of the infirmary; and if a third, by the infirmary cook; and theſe three ſervants to be reſpectively aſſiſting to each other. If the ſick party had received extreme unction, the firſt night the ſerjeant of the infirmary and the ſerjeant cutter of the ſhoemaker[8] were to ſit up with him; the ſecond night the clerk of the infirmary and the ſerjeant ſhoemaker; and the third night the cook of the infirmary and the ſhoemaker's waſherman[9]; and ſo for nine nights ſucceſſively by turn: and the ſerjeant of the infirmary was to have for his trouble of every monk that died a tunic or four ſhillings, or ſomething of equal value, which he muſt ſell only to a monk of the ſame houſe. The reſt, who ſat up with the deceaſed, were to have two-pence out of his effects, which were all to be ſold by the prior and chamberlain, and the money given to the poor, for the good of his ſoul, or to the inferior clerks, to ſing for him. Every ſick monk might chooſe one of his brethren to attend him, provided the infirmarer[10] took his place in the convent; and the ſerjeant of the infirmary might aſſiſt the prior in celebrating, or the clerk of the infirmary the infirmarer, or any other ſenior diſpoſed to celebrate there, if not otherwiſe engaged about the ſick, for which he was to have an allowance as one of the abbot's ſervants, and four ſhillings a year for his pay. If the whole convent eat in the refectory, and none were ſick, the ſaid ſerjeant was not to go to his dinner before the bell rang; but if the monks for their own pleaſure and eaſe, or becauſe they had been bled [1], choſe to eat in the refectory, the ſervant of the infirmary was to attend them till all their proviſion was ſet on, and then retire to his own dinner; unleſs wanted by the prior or any of the ſeniors who might be ſick; and then to take his bread, and the ſick monks were to give him a ſhare [2] of their proviſion; and ſo every ſucceeding day the cook's ſervant to have their leavings; and if none, then the almoner was to find him proviſion. All theſe ſervants were ſtrictly charged not to let any ſeculars, men, women, or children, from the town or elſewhere, into the infirmary; nor was any ſecular perſon to be ſhaved or bled there, without ſpecial leave from the abbot or prior. Theſe three ſervants were to lie every night in the infirmary, and not abſent themſelves without expreſs leave from the prior [3]."

---

[1] Si ægritudo adeo invaluerit ut frater in conventu remanere non poſſit, præcipiat abbas fratri cui cujuſmodi cura impoſitum eſt ut ducet ægrum in cellam infirmorum; in qua domo ſerviatur ei ſecundum poſſibilitatem loci, tam de communibus cibi, quam de eſu carnis, ut nullius rei, ſi fieri poſſit, indigentiam patiatur. Lanfranci Conſtitut. Wilkins, Concil. vol. I. p. 357.

[2] Juſſus ſurgere, hæc, vel ſimilia verba dicat, "Domine, infirmitate meâ gravatus, in domo infirmorum diu fui, et cibo & potu, & aliis multis offendi, & contra ordinem feci, & inde peto abſolutionem veſtram." Ibid.

[3] It is not unlikely that the apartment which in the abbey of St. Alban's (ſee Gent. Mag. vol. LXVI. p. 300.) was ſtyled Oriolanum (porticus atrium), might in the priory of Chriſt Church be termed Deportum; and that what in the ſtatutes of archbiſhop Winchelſey might be ſo denominated, afterwards acquired the appellation of La Gloriette vel Honneurs; about which rooms Somner and Batteley differed in opinion, as may be ſeen in Antiquities of Canterbury, p. 106; and in Cantuaria Sacra, pp. 92, 93. In La Gloriette and Maiſter Honneurs, which were ſituated not far from the priors lodging and the infirmary, ſuch gueſts ſeem to have been entertained as were of too much conſequence to be intermixed with ſtrangers of all degrees in Aula Hoſpitum. The etymology of Deportum is ſtill, however, a deſideratum. And, qu. Is it not to be deduced from ſome old French word? S. D.

[4] Statuta R. Winchelſey, archiepiſc. Cantuar. Art. VII. De infirmatorio, & extra refectorium comedentibus.

Item monachi de cætero omnes in conſpectu communi ſecularium tam in clauſtro inferiori quam exteriori domus veſtræ a carnium eſu, exceptis locis inferius annotatis, abſtineant; ſcilicet, quod ſolum in menſâ magiſtri in infirmatorio, & cameris infirmorum, in deporto, & camerâ prioris, aut in aulâ hoſpitum, cum ab hoc ritu licentiati extiterint, veſcantur carnibus ad ſuam recreationem idoneam, vel ad ſolatium aliorum.

Item fratres non infirmi, niſi quandoque ad honeſtum infirmorum ſolatium, & hoc de præſidentis licentiâ, in infirmatorio non ſedeant, nec morentur ultra quam ter dici voleat dominicalis oratio "Pater Noſter;" nec in eo bibant aut comedant, niſi ſit eis a præſidente conceſſum.—Item commune ferculum infirmorum ex conſuetudine prius habita diſtributum in aliud ſibi competentius, ſi ſit neceſſe, mittatur, & in magnâ indulgentiâ ſuperaddatur aliquid opportunum; in quo caſu reſpectus ad ſolam infirmorum indigentiam, non autem ad appetitum voluptuarium habeatur. Hæc caute conſideret præſidens in licentiâ taliter concedenda. Wilkins, Concil. vol. II. p. 247.

Litera abbatum in capitulo provinciali Angliæ apud Northampton celebrato præſidentium anno Dom. MCCCXLIII. cap. XII. de curâ infirmorum.

Medicinalia etiam juxta peritorum conſilia medicorum eis (infirmis) præcipimus exhiberi. Secularem autem nullum cum infirmis comedere volumus, aut aliqualiter miſceri; medicis & ſervientibus ad eorum curam et cuſtodiam deputatis duntaxit exceptis.

[5] Viſitat. Ricardi Epiſcopi Roffen. in Eccleſ. Cathedral. per venerabiles viros Thomas Cutfolde, decretor. doctor. et Johannem Edmund, Sac. Theolog. Baccal. Commiſſ.

Ds. primus Charnock camerarius; ad ii. iii. iiii. &c. Artic. Concordat in omnibus, cum prior' teſt', &c. excepto quod dicit quod egri laborand' infirmitat' jacend' in firmario non ſunt cuſtodit' ſicut deberent in defectu cujuſdam Johannis Biſhop, laici habent' feod' ad cuſtodiend' infirm', &c.—Dicit ulterius quod præfat' Johannes Biſhop, laicus, habet ex mandato proprio, carnes, aquatica, & panes cum ſerviſia ex monaſt. prædict' invito celerario loci. Act. Cur. Conſiſt. fol. 319.

[6] Minutor—venæ inciſor—Raſor et minutor; chirurgicuſque expertiſſimus. Du Cange.

[7] Chronica W. Thorn; X Script. col. 1915.—Quando incepit raſura fratrum per ſeculares.

Uſque ad tempus hujus Rogeri abbatis radebant ſe mutuo fratres in clauſtro, ſet iſte propter tonſuras & diverſa pericula quæ frequenter contigerunt inter eos quia rudes & neſcii erant in officio radendi, ordinavit, cum conſenſu conventus, quod raſura fieret in camera juxta balneatorium per ſeculares quotiens opus eſſet. Et quod diebus raſuræ poſt verba mea in capitulo dicantur tres collectæ, ſcilicet, abſolve, inclina, & fideles, in memoriam illius beneficii, pro anima Rogeri abbatis, &c.

[8] Ciſſor de ſartrina. [9] Lotarius de ſartrina. [10] Infirmarius.

Farther extracts relating to the practice and habit of the monks about bleeding, de minutione Sanguinis.

Cuſtumale Roffenſe—De lavatoribus.

P. 32. "Ejus eſt focum facere contra quod fratres minuere debent, et minutorem ſummonere, ut paratus ſit fratres minuere."

P. 30. "De famulo infirmatorii—in ſocietate—minutorum ordinate ſerviet ita facete, ut nullus indigeat petere aliquid, et maxime tunc cuſtodiet hoſtium ab ingreſſu laicorum, ne aliquis abſque licentiâ magiſtri ſui introeat."

Du Cange—Minuere. "Stata erant minutionis tempora in monaſteriis, extra quæ ſanguinem minuere fas non erat, niſi gravis urget infirmitas."

"Quinquies in anno fient generalis minutiones—Prima eſt in Septembri; ſecunda eſt ante Adventum; tertia eſt ante Quadrageſimam; quarta poſt Paſcha; quinta poſt Pentecoſten: tribus diebus minutio durabit," &c. &c.—Many other inſtances might be added.

Gunton's Peterborough, p. 296.

"Before his [abbot Robert de Lyndeſey's] time there had been great diſcord and murmuring, contention and envy frequently happened among the brethren, propter minutionem, about blood-letting (which was very neceſſary ſome time to thoſe ſedentary people, who were ſubject to repletion); and no wonder, becauſe nobody could accipere minutionem, be let blood, without an order from the prior; who let ſome have it oftener, others more rarely; ſome after five weeks, others after ſix, and others not till after eight, or ten, or fifteen, or perhaps half a year. To take away, therefore, all trouble out of their minds about this matter, this abbot ordered that the convent ſhould be divided into ſix parts, and, upon the day of letting blood, he that was the ſenior of that part, whoſe turn it was to have the benefit of it, ſhould aſk licentiam minuendi (and that under his hand) for his brethren from the prior. In the margin of the book there is this note. That in abbot Walter's time this mode of minution was thus far altered, that they may be divided into five parts, and then minuerentur modo ſupradicta. For Robert Groſſeteſte, biſhop of Lincoln, in his viſitation, had forbidden the eating of fleſh altogether unto the monks every where; except only in the infirmary, or in the abbot's chamber; which was accounted by them an unſupportable burden. It is farther noted, that the convent, in former times, had liberty, at three ſeaſons in the year, to eat as much fleſh as they pleaſed in a houſe deputed for that purpoſe; and in the domus hoſpitum, houſe where they entertained ſtrangers; and in all places where they eat out of the refectory they might eat fleſh. Which liberty was quite taken away by the above-named inhibition of the biſhop. They who were minuti, let blood, were formerly refreſhed in the refectory three times a day with a regular diet, as appears by the antient cuſtomary of this church."

Extracts from Warton's Hiſtory of Poetry in England, concerning the knowledge and practice of phyſick by eccleſiaſtics.

Vol. I. p. 442. note (S). "It has been before obſerved, that at the introduction of philoſophy into Europe, by the Saracens, the clergy only ſtudied and practiſed the medical art. This faſhion prevailed a long while afterwards. The prior and convent of St. Swithin's in Wincheſter granted to Thomas of Shafteſbury, clerk, a corrody, conſiſting of two diſhes daily from the prior's kitchen, bread, drink, robes, and a competent chamber in the monaſtery, for the term of his life. In conſideration of all which conceſſions, the ſaid Thomas paid them fifty marks; and moreover is obliged to "deſervire nobis in arte medicinæ." Dat. in dom. capitul. Feb. 15, A. D. 1319 [4]." The learned and accurate Fabricius [5] has a ſeparate article on Theologici Medici. In the romance of ſir Guy, a monk heals the knight's wounds. Signature G. iiii.

There was a monke beheld him well
That could of leach craft ſome dell.

In Geoffrey of Monmouth, who wrote in 1128, Eopa, intending to poiſon Ambroſius, introduces himſelf as a phyſician. But, in order to ſuſtain this character with due propriety, he firſt ſhaves his head, and aſſumes the habit of a monk, lib. VIII. cap. 14. John Arundale, afterwards biſhop of Chicheſter, was chaplain and firſt phyſician to Henry VI. in 1468 [6]. Farilius, abbot of Abingdon, about 1110, was eminent for his ſkill in medicine; and a great cure performed by him is recorded in the regiſter of the abbey [7]. King John, whilſt ſick at Newark, made uſe of William de Wodeſtoke, abbot of the neighbouring monaſtery of Croxton, as his phyſician [8].

Thus much (principally in the words of a moſt reſpectable Antiquary [9]) by way of digreſſion on a ſubject not generally noticed, though not unintereſting to the hiſtory of monaſtic orders in general.

We return to the particular hiſtory of the poſſeſſions of this abbey; which, at the time of the ſuppreſſion, Speed ſays, was eſtimated to expend £1062. 0*s*. 4¼*d*. a year; according to Dugdale, £951. 14*s*. 5¾*d*. [10]

The ſeveral churches from which this abbey received penſions in 1477 may be ſeen in the Appendix. At that period they had, in Leiceſterſhire and other counties, 35 churches and 32 chapels appropriated [11], for which they paid procurations [12]; and 25 more churches licenſed for appropriation [13]. And it is remarked in the "Regiſtrum Breve," that their poſſeſſions were ſo numerous, that they had for every monk a church, a chapel, a mill reſerved in demeſne, and a mill from which they received tithes. I do not find that the number of the regular monks in this houſe at any time exceeded twenty [14].

---

[1] Pro minutione. [2] Campanagium. [3] Hiſtory of Croyland, p. 38. [4] Regiſtrum Priorat. S. Swithin, Winton. MS

[5] Bibl. Gr. XII. 739. ſeq. See alſo Gianon. Iſtor. Neapol. I. X. chap. xi. ſect. 419.

[6] Wharton, Angl. Sacr. vol. I. p. 777. [7] Hearne, Bened. Abbas, Præf. p. xlvii.

[8] Belvoir Chron. MS. Harl. apud Hearne, Præfat. ut ſupra, p. xlix. And ſee before, under Croxton Abbey, p. 152.

[9] The Rev. Samuel Denne, M. A. F. S. A. vicar of Wilmington and Darenth, on whom the mantle of the late learned Antiquary Dr. Pegge appears to have fallen.

[10] A MS. in the Cotton Library (Cleopatra E. IV. fol. 283.) reconciles theſe ſums, by giving the firſt of them as the groſs value, and the other as the nett amount. [11] See theſe churches enumerated, Appendix, p. 66.

[12] The original ground of procurations was by reaſon of the damage that the biſhop and his ſucceſſors were like to ſuſtain after an appropriation made, becauſe the parſon was to give entertainment to the biſhop when he viſited eccleſiatim.

[13] Appropriation, from the French approprier, properly ſignifies, in our law (as Cowell obſerves), a ſevering a benefice eccleſiaſtical, which originally and in nature is juris divini & in patrimonio nullius, to the proper and perpetual uſe of ſome religious houſe or the like; for, without the conſent of the biſhop, no religious order could receive any appropriation or tithes, as by a decree of the council of Lateran it was decreed 1180. An appropriation of a church muſt be made by the patron by licence of the king and biſhop, provided always that according to the 15th of Richard II. and 4 Henry IV. it be performed; for by thoſe acts it was provided, that in every licence which ſhould be made it ſhould be expreſly contained, that the dioceſan, according to the value, ſhould appoint a convenient ſum to be paid yearly out of the fruits and profits of the church to the poor of the pariſh; and alſo ſhould ordain a vicar, which ſhould be well and ſufficiently endowed, ſo that he might do divine ſervice, and keep hoſpitality there. See before, under Abkettleby, p. 12.

[14] This was the number that ſigned the ſurrender; and the ſame number occurs, in 1477, in the Catalogue of their books.

They had four ſeveral granges, where the corn-rents were regularly depoſited; at each of which one of their members reſided under the title of prior, or maſter of the grange. One was ſituated at the Weſt-gate of Leiceſter (now called Weſtcotes [1]); two others at Ingwardby [2] and Stoughton [3] in this county; the fourth at Medoplek [4] in the High Peak of Derbyſhire.

Enough for the preſent has been ſaid of their poſſeſſions within the county of Leiceſter; where, beſides lands, rents, and tithes, they had liberty of procuring fuel and keeping cattle in divers manors; the particulars of which will appear under each reſpective townſhip. They had property alſo (redditum voluntarium vel liberum [5], ſeu penſionem, portionem, vel decimas) in many other counties, which ſhall now be briefly noticed.

In Bedfordſhire, they had at Cameſton [Kempſton] the church and manor, the gift of Iſabel counteſs of Northampton [6].

At Scharnbroke, the church was appropriated to them about the year 1220 by William Triket, being then valued at 20 marks, excluſive of a penſion of 20*s*. to the archdeacon of Bedford. They had alſo a rent of 2*d*. and 24 acres of arable land in that lordſhip, five acres of which were ſituated between the abbot's manor-houſe and the church.

"Habemus, ex conceſſione Hugonis Linc' ep̄i, cum aſſenſu Willi decani & totius capituli, eccleſiam de Scharnbroke poſt deceſſum Ricardi rectoris ejuſdem [7].

"Vicaria conſiſtit in toto altaragio dicte eccleſie, exceptis principalibus legatis, que uſibus abbatis & conventûs Leic', per ordinationem Johannis ep̄i Linc', reſervantur; qui quidem religioſi, ſecundum eandem ordinationem, omnia onera ordinaria & extraordinaria ſuſtinebunt in perpetuum, &c. Et ſolvent loci ordinario annuatim xxs̃."—The abbot and convent contributed 20*s*. a year towards augmenting the vicarage.

At Sowrdrop, in the ſame county, they had a rent of 13*s*. 4*d*. for a place called Bolſworth Land [8].

In Berkſhire, they had originally the church of Ildſley, the gift of the founder [9]; but, as this place is not noticed in Charyte's Rentale, it was probably ſoon exchanged for other property.

In Buckinghamſhire, William Avenel gave them the advowſon of the church of Adſtock, which was confirmed to them by king Henry II. about 1166. The abbot and convent in 1422 aſſigned over this advowſon to ſir Richard Vernon and his heirs; and it continued, with the manor, in the poſſeſſion of that family till it came, with their other demeſnes at Adſtock, by marriage, to the families of Manners and Forteſcue; and in 1707 was given to the biſhoprick of Lincoln [10].

They had a portion of ſuch lands as the monks of Bitulſden held in culture, at Bitulſden, Whitefeld, and Sireſham, as were within the limits of Brackley and Sireſham [11].

At Cheſham-Leyceter, they had a moiety of the profits of the church, and of the chapel of St. Leonard at Cheſham Boys [12], the gift of Robert de Sifrewaſt; which in 1220 was valued at 30 marks, and the temporalities of the abbey at 30*s*. 5½*d*. The following extract is from an original terrier [13].

"Cheſham Leycet^{r} in the com. of Buk, perteyninge to the towne of Cheſham, and wythin the conſtabulwyke there. Yt is to be remembered and to be underſtonde that theis preſent ſcripcōns folowing, makyng mencyon wher that all the glebis and tythes of bladis and of heyze, and alſo of all the rentes, ſute, ſervyce, and demayne londis, with ther apperten', ben and ow it to be hadde, receyved, gadered, and layde wythin the lymytes, markes, and boundes of the pariſche and the park of Cheſham Leyceter forſeyde, in the ſaid com. of Buk, the which ben perteyning and belonging, by dew and right of old cuſtome, unto the rectorye and parſonage ther of the lord abbot and cōvent of the monaſtery of the bleſſed Mary Virgin in the mede of Leyceſtr', be the right of her chyrche, called the chyrche of Cheſham Leycet^{r}, in the ſeide com. of Buk, as be the hameletis and conſtabulwykes in thoſe ſubſcripcōns thereof hereaftur wreten and made plenarly apperyng; the whiche ben renewed, atte Cheſham Leycet^{r} forſayde, at the tide of the yere called Hokketyde, in the yere of our Lord MCCCCLXVIII, and the VIII yere of the reigne of kynge Edwarde the IIII, be Wylliam Wedin bayly of Cheſham forſaide, and fermar alſo unto the ſayde abbot and cōvent of theyre ſeyde chirche and parſonage; and alſo be the concentyng and avice, knowlyſhyng, tellyng, utteryng, and declaryng of the moſt aged men and beſt theryn, and therof aviſed of all the ſeyd pariſche and pariſhoners, and alſo of all themits there of the ſeide abbot and cōvent.

Wythyn the conſtabulwyke of Cheſham towne forſeyde. In the foreſt all the glebys and tythes of the landys, with appertenances, called Coppid-thorne, of Thomas Lynde, eſquir, lord of the manor of Cheſham Bury, lying in a field there, called Churchefelde, &c. The terrier is continued through more than 13 folio pages of an exact deſcription of all the lands and tithes belonging to the abbey, "within the conſtabulwyke of the duchey of Langcaſtell there, and alſo of the lordſhippe of Latimer there" (out of which the abbot and convent aſſigned "the tithes of tithes, otherwiſe the tenth part of ten parts of tithes, to the chapel and chaplain of Cheſham Boys"); "the hamelett of Layhull, the hamelett of Whelpley Wyth, in the conſtabulwyke there of the honour of Walyngforde;" the hamelettis of Alcheley Grene, Belenden, Aſherugge, Charderrugge, Hunrugge (in which were ſome lands held under the abbot and convent of Muſſenden), Cheſham Dene, otherwiſe Cheſham Water Wyth, in which were lands of John Stoketon, alderman and mercer of London; and Botteley.

The abbeſs of Burnham, in Buckinghamſhire, as lady of the manors of Holmer and Little Miſſenden [14], had ſuit of court from certain lands at Holmer, given by Henry de Rokeby to the abbot and convent of Leiceſter in free and perpetual alms; conſiſting of all the lands he had in the townſhip, with the appurtenances, both within and without the town, the woods, meadows, &c. which had been given to him by Richard de Camvile [15] in exchange for the advowſon of the chapel of Rokeby, which was a member of Clifton, and belonged to that abbey; touching which chapel there was a ſuit betwixt the ſaid Henry and the abbot in the year 1200; which ended not, it ſeems, till 1220, when a fine was levied between the abbot and Henry Rokeby, by which it was concluded that the ſaid Henry and his heirs ſhould exhibit a fit clerk to the abbot and his ſucceſſors, whom they might preſent to the biſhop; which clerk ſhould pay to them yearly the antient and due penſions they had wont to receive thence; and, to perfect this agreement, the ſaid Henry gave to that abbey for ever a yard-land in Holme. This land, which brought in a rent of 18*s*. was given by the abbey to Roger de Miſſenden, clerk, for his homage and ſervice [16]. The right to this portion of land was again confirmed by a proceſs at law in 1299; after which we find ſeveral ſucceſſive entries in the "Rentale" of the receipt of the rent from 1310 to 1323, when a regular acquittance of certain arrears occurs, ſigned by abbot Richard Tourſe, on condition of the rent being regularly paid in future.

---

[1] Of which an account will be found under Bruntingthorpe, in the pariſh of St. Mary de Caſtro.

[2] The gift of archbiſhop Iſlip. See p. 262; and a farther account under the pariſh of Hungarton.

[3] See an account of this grange under the pariſh of Thurnby.

[4] See hereafter, p. 277.

[5] Redditus liber is evidently the ſame as redditus aſſiſus; and is deſcribed ſo by Du Cheſne. S. Carte.

[6] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxxiv.

[7] Ibid. fol. cxxiv.

[8] Charyte, fol. cxxx.

[9] Appendix, p. 54.

[10] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xi; Willis's Buckingham, p. 123.

[11] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxii.

[12] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxxv. Fin. Buckingham. 14 Joan. de advoc. capellæ S. Leonardi de Ceſtreſham.

[13] Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. p. 131. & ſeqq.

[14] Clauſ. 13 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 29. pro man. de Holmere & Miſſenden Parvâ, ex conceſſ' Rogeri le Strange.—Miſled by ſir William Dugdale's extracts from the "Regiſtrum Breve," I have (in the Index to Charyte's Rentale, p. 67) placed Holmer in Warwickſhire. The name of Homer Green is ſtill to be found near Miſſenden in the maps of the county of Buckingham.

[15] The Camviles were benefactors to the priory of Burcheſter.

[16] Cotton MSS. Vitellius F. XVII; ex Plac. 2 John. Rot. 26. & Rot. Mich. 5 Hen. III; and Charyte, fol. lxii.

Sir John Brows [1], or Brewoſe, held in 1154 a meſſuage, with a virgate of land, and the wood near Holmers-hill, formerly in the tenure of William Miſſenden, a rent of 18*s.* payable at three terms in the year. Of this land William Capon rented a field near the water called le Brech, containing eight acres; John Duneſmore, a field called Argentefield, and a toft called Argenteſcroft, containing alſo eight acres; John Baldewyn, a croft called Oldfield; and two others called Hechyager, containing nine acres. From all which, ſir John Brewoſe received no more than 20*s.*

The prior of Burceſter [2] in Oxfordſhire held one toft, and the wood, where William de Miſſenden dwelt, with a field called Dichefeld, and another called Hunefred, containing more than twenty acres.

William Inngeſby had the wardſhip of Henry de Rokeby whilſt under age, as far as related to the lands which the ſaid Henry gave to Leiceſter abbey, the ſame being within his fee.

In Derbyſhire, they had a conſiderable property in the High Peak; particularly the church of Youlgrave, with the chapels of Cratton, Elton, Mydulton, and Wynſter, &c. the gift of Robert the ſon of Robert Coll, confirmed about 1250 by pope Innocent IV; the whole townſhip of Conkyſbery, with the mill, cliff, &c. and the townſhips of Newbyggen and Medoplek, the gift of William Avenel, confirmed by the biſhop of Coventry; and eſtabliſhed by regular proceſs at law in 1339 [3] and 1423 [4]; after which the abbey gave £5. a year to augment the vicarage of Youlgrave.—The church of Youlgrave was rated in 1220 at 30 marks, and Medoplek, &c. at 68*s.*

In Byrchover, Herthull in the pariſh of Bakewell, Lyes, and Smerill Grange, various lands and tithes.

At Haddon, 20 acres, the gift of William Avenel.

At Medoplek they had in 1292 two bovates of land, of the annual value of 14*s*; the mill worth 10*s*; mines worth 2*s*; aſſiſe rents 10*s*; pleas and perquiſites 2*s*; a meadow worth 6*s.* 6*d*; and other receipts to the value of 68*s.* a year.

At Stanton, lands given by Adam de Stanton.

At Hertyſhorn, in the ſame county, they had the manor-houſe of Schorthaſull, the gift of William Aſton; and three other meſſuages, two virgates, 101 acres and a half of arable land, with woods, meadows, paſtures, &c. to the amount of 26*s.* 8*d.* a year. This manor, with all its appurtenances, in Hertyſhorn or elſewhere, was granted to Chriſtopher Dean, by whom they were conveyed in 1544 to Thomas Boyde, yeoman, for a fee-farm rent of 3*s.* 4*d.*; which rent, being afterwards purchaſed from the crown, became veſted in ſir Samuel Barnadiſton, of Kedelton, Suffolk, bart. who held it in 1727; at which time Robert Charnell, of Snareſton, eſq. was owner of the manor-houſe and other property; Edward Dawſon, of Long Whatton, eſq. poſſeſſed a meſſuage, lands, &c. part of the ſaid manor; and Joſeph Clark, of Blaugherby, and Joſeph Mould, Thomas Broad, Mary Madin, and William Madin, had divers lands, &c. within the lordſhip [5].

At Okethorpe (a hamlet of Seile in Leiceſterſhire) Thomas Lathbury gave them all the lands and tenements, meadows, and paſtures, with their appurtenances, which he held under the gift and feoffment of his mother Elizabeth Norton, confirmed by William Norton and Thomas Bytſwell, conſiſting of a meſſuage and toft, four virgates of land, and the moiety of a rent of 38*s.* 8*d.* He gave them alſo, by his laſt will, all the tenements he had lately acquired in the townſhips of Cateby and Okethorpe, and in Naneby field; and directed that a lamp, or large wax candle, ſhould be provided for ever, to be burnt before the image of the Virgin in St. Mary's chapel in the abbey. Richard Glover was their tenant here at a rent of 28*s.* 8*d.* for a meſſuage, three tofts, and three virgates of land; for which they paid 2*s.* to the king for ſuit of court [6]. They had other lands, the gift of Thomas Elsforde and his anceſtors [7].

In Lancaſhire, they had the manor and church of Cokeram, with the chapels of Elhale and Thurnham, which in 1220 were valued at 26 marks; with lands at Aſsheton, Kirkelow, Geyrſtang, and Halouth [8]; the gift of William, the ſon of Gilbert, who was ſummoned to parliament by the title of William of Lancaſter, baron of Kendale, and married Gundreda the dowager counteſs of Warwick, who joined her huſband in a gift to the canons of Leiceſter of two bovates of land at Cokeram, "unde heredes ſui minus tenent in capite." This grant was confirmed to our abbey by a charter of John lord of Ireland, earl of Morteigne, Cornwall, and Nottingham (afterwards king of England), and by a bull of pope Innocent IV.

John Oxcliff and John Corton gave to the abbey of Leiceſter a meſſuage, 12 acres of arable land, and 4 of meadow, at Cokeram [9]; ſoon after which, whilſt Philip de Repingdon was abbot, they obtained, with great labour and expence, a grant of quit-claim [10] from the lady Philippa de Conor, dutcheſs of Ireland [11], and a charter of confirmation from king Henry IV.

The chancel of Cokeram church was rebuilt in 1442 whilſt John Pomerey was abbot [12].

On a part of the land belonging to the abbey of Leiceſter, at Cokerſand, where formerly ſtood an hoſpital, the abbey of Cokerſand was afterwards founded; as appears by the following agreement: "Ad univerſorum notitiam perveniat, inter Paulum abbatem & conventum de Leiceſtria in pratis, & canonicis de Cokerſand, ita conveniſſe, quod jam dictus Paulus & conventus de Leiceſtriâ, intuitu pietatis & religionis, dederunt prefatis canonicis de Cokerſand locum in quo domus hoſpitalis de Cokerſand ſita eſt, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam; ita ut liceat eis abbathiam conſtruere, & abbatem habere, ſcilicet de tribus rubris uſque ad diviſum de Thurnham, per mediam moſſam [13]." For this land the abbey of Leiceſter had an annual rent of 5*s.* 8*d.* [14]

Cokerſand was at firſt the habitation of Hugh an hermit, then converted to an hoſpital, under Lancaſter abbey, endowed by William de Lancaſter, temp. Henry II; but about 1190 changed, by authority of pope Clement, to an abbey of Premonſtratenſian canons, valued at £157. "Coker river maketh no great courſe or he come to the ſands by Cokerham village not a mile off. Thens to Cokerſande an abbey of Ciſtertienſes, about half a mile of, ſtanding very blekely an object to all winds [15]."

The ſite of Cokerham abbey is now (1796) the property of John Dalton, eſq. (who is of an antient catholic family) of Thurnham hall; whoſe anceſtors, ſince the diſſolution of the abbey, have been buried in the chapter-houſe, which is a Gothic ſtructure of an octagonal form, ſupported by a ſtone pillar, now greatly out of repair, though it is the moſt perfect part of the abbey; much of the ruins of the building having been waſhed away by the ſea. It is three miles diſtant from Thurnham hall; to which tradition, as is uſual, ſays there was a ſubterraneous paſſage. The farm here has been many years in the occupation of Mr. Holt; and is conſidered as extra-parochial [16].

---

[1] This family appears to have been ſeated in Buckinghamſhire earlier than is generally ſuppoſed. The town of Buckingham came to William de Browſe by frank marriage, as appears by Pat. 7 John, m. 23. Dugdale, Bar. vol. I. p. 419; and Willis's Buckingham, p. 26.

[2] Fin. Buckingham, 46 Hen. III. n. 52. de carucatâ terræ in Miſſenden.

[3] Plac. de quo warranto in com. Derb. 4 Edw. III. Rot. 3. dorſo.

[4] Fin. Derb. 2 Hen. VI. Hill. Rot. 452. pro manerio de Medoplec & terris in Conkyſbery.

[5] From an original deed.

[6] Charyte, fol. cxiv. b. See farther on this hamlet under Seile.

[7] Appendix, p. 66. A terrier of their lands may be ſeen in a Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. fol. 155. & ſeqq.

[8] Charyte, fol. xxxix—xlvi.

[9] Appendix, p. 64; Pat. 12 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 18. de libertatibus in Lancaſtr.

[10] Appendix, p. 68.

[11] The duke of Ireland's viſiting Leiceſter abbey has been mentioned in p. 256. John de Vere, ſeventh earl of Oxford, was created marquis of Dublin in 1385, the title of marquis being then new and unheard-of in England, and in the year following duke of Ireland. Theſe rapid promotions made him ſo haughty and inſolent, that he put away his wife Philippa; who was daughter to Ingelram earl of Bedford, by Iſabel his wife, daughter of Edward III. Dugdale, Bar. vol. I. p. 194.

[12] Appendix, p. 69.

[13] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 636.

[14] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xlvi.

[15] Leland, vol. V. p. 84.

[16] From the information of Mr. John Eccles, who viſited the ruins in May 1796.

In Lincolnſhire, they had at Benington an annual rent of ſix quarters of ſalt, worth 20*s*; and at Botulſton [Boſton] Walter Gerun gave them, cum corpore ſuo, all his land in the High-ſtreet next the ſea, and the homage and ſervice of ſeveral perſons. They had alſo divers rents, &c. the gift of Warner de Engaine, John Gerun, and others, amounting in the whole to 76*s*. 7½*d*. a year; which originally had produced £7. 12*s*. The repreſentative of the Gerun family paid annually a pound of pepper and a pound of cumin.

Reginald, ſon of William de Benington, gave to maſter Gerard, ſon of Baldric archdeacon of Leiceſter, for his ſervice and homage, certain lands, to hold for the rent of 12*d*. a year; which 12*d*. was given to the church of All Saints at Benington, to found a lamp in the ſaid church. All theſe lands Gerard gave to the abbey and convent of St. Mary at Leiceſter, by whom they were conveyed to Warner de Engayne, on condition of his paying annually ſix quarters of ſalt at Boſtom, and 12*d*. to the church of Benington[1]. The property of the abbey here was taxed in 1292 at £4.

In Middleſex, they had, in the pariſh of St. Sepulchre, in the ſuburbs of London, a conſiderable eſtate, as already noticed, p. 261; given them in 1312[2] by William de Langley, clerk; conſiſting of a capital manſion, with ſeveral houſes, ſhops, and cellars, the Saracen's-head inn[3], and a moiety of the fountain[4]. This parcel of land, extending in length from the highway leading from Newgate to Holborn-bridge, was bounded on the Eaſt by St. Sepulchre's church[5], and a tenement which William de Langley at the ſame time deviſed for a chantry[6]; on the Weſt by the tenements of Gerard the Barber and the prioreſs of Haliwell; on the South by the king's highway; and on the North it took in the ſite of Cock Lane and part of Smithfield. The abbot and convent had alſo a releaſe of all claims to the above-mentioned property from Thomas maſter of the hoſpital of St. Giles without the bars of the Old Temple and the brethren and ſiſters of that hoſpital, reſerving their right to an antient ground-rent; and another releaſe, from Humfrey prior of the church of St. Mary in Southwark, and his convent, of 3*s*. annual rent, payable out of land in Smithfield. They bought ten feet of ground, from Richard archdeacon of Ely, to enlarge the kitchen of their houſe in Smithfield; where they poſſeſſed a plot of ground near Chick-lane, 55 feet in length de pedibus Sancti Pauli; 27 feet wide towards the Eaſt, and 27 in front towards the Weſt; which they demiſed for 10*s*. a year to John Bukonite; and which was by him under-let to William the Carpenter of Smithfield; a rent of 8*s*. in Cock-lane, the gift of Peter of Southampton, alias de la Hull, and Agnes his wife, payable out of tenements which extended from his own gate to the reſidence of John Morrice; and a tenement on the North ſide of St. Sepulchre's church-yard, near Newgate, called the Reindeer, the gift of Hugo the Frenchman, a baker, and Dioniſia his wife, with a releaſe from ſir John de Woburn of 13*s*. annual rent for the ſame. This was firſt demiſed by the abbey to Chriſtiana, daughter of Ralph the Smith, of Newgate, for a rent of 21*s*.; and after to the maſter and brethren of St. Bartholomew's for 20*s*. From Warinus of Naples, prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, they had a grant of ſo much of the land of that priory as was bought of Thomas Tornatus, for a rent of 2*s*. and a pound of incenſe; and other land, 24 feet wide, extending in length to the Horſe-market, for a rent of 6*d*.

Of this eſtate, which was confirmed to them by a charter of king Edward I, the principal meſſuage, or manor-houſe, was leaſed to ſir Thomas Littleton, one of the judges of the court of king's bench, as ſtated in p. 266, for an annual rent of 16*s*.

William Strette had a leaſe of the Saracen's-head, for £7. 13*s*. 4*d*.

Eleanor Bredon, a cottage and a chamber joining to the Saracen's-head, at a rent of 20*s*.

John Rutt, an adjoining tenement, for 26*s*. 8*d*.

Richard Burſtal, another tenement, for 50*s*.

William Mynt, a meſſuage near the Pool[7] in Smithfield, for 53*s*. 4*d*. This meſſuage, with two cottages, the convent ſold to William Mynt for 100 marks; and laid out the money in an advantageous purchaſe in Leiceſterſhire. Total receipts, £16. 19*s*. 4*d*.

The outgoings were,

	s.	d.
To the maſter of St. Giles's Hoſpital a ground-rent for a tenement in Smithfield,	20	0
Another tenement near the Saracen's-head,	6	8
To the monks of Clerkenwell, from the Saracen's-head,	13	4
To the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem; from a tenement in Smithfield called Black-gate,	2	0
To the ſame, in lieu of a pound of incenſe,	0	8
To the ſame, from a tenement near Chicklane,	0	6
To St. Sepulchre's church, pro quadam pendula[8] ultra cemeterium in hoſpitio de Sarſonheyd,	2	0
Summa,	45	2

In a "Taxatio cleri infra dioc' London'[9]," the abbey of Leiceſter is thus rated for this property:

"In parochiâ Sancti Sepulchri,	xl. s̃.
Inde decima,	iiii s̃.
Medietas,	ii s̃.

At Old Ford, in the pariſh of Stepney, they had the mill called Algodiſmilne, demiſed to Henry de Calabre for a rent of two marks to the abbey, and of 10*s*. to the lord of the manor; and afterwards let to John of Honilane, citizen of London, for 28*s*. a year.

In Northamptonſhire, they had a yearly penſion of 6*s*. 8*d*. from the rectory of Aynho[10].

They once poſſeſſed the advowſon of Billing Magna, with a penſion of 20 marks, the gift of William Barre; but this was legally recovered from them by Robert Wauton[11].

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxv. a. xxvi. a. b.

[2] Pat. 14 Edw. II. p. 2. m. 4. de tenementis in London.

[3] "Near to this church is a fair and large inn for receipt of travellers, and hath to ſign the Saracen's-head." Strype's Stow, edit. 1720, book III. p. 245; and ſee edit. 1598, p. 311.

[4] Situated at Holbourn-croſs, where a conduit was firſt erected in 1498, and rebuilt in 1577 by William Lambe.

[5] "The fair pariſh church, called St. Sepulchre's, in the Baily, or by Chamberlain-gate, was newly re-edified about the reign of Henry VI. or Edward IV. in a fair churchyard, though not ſo large as of old time; for the ſame is letten out for buildings and a garden plot." Strype's Stow, ubi ſupra.

[6] No notice is taken, by the Hiſtorian of London, either of this chantry, or the property of the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, or the tenement of the prioreſs of Haliwell.

[7] "Smithfield Pond of old time in records was called Horſe Pool, for that men watered horſes there, and was a great water. In 1418 a new building was made in the Weſt part of Smithfield, betwixt the ſaid Pool, and the river of the Wells, or Turnmill Brook, in a place then called The Elms; for that there grew many elm trees; and this had been the place of execution for offenders. Since the which time, the building there hath been ſo increaſed, that now remaineth not one tree growing. This place was in uſe for executions in 1219, and, as it ſeems, long before; for a Clauſe Roll, 4 Hen. III. mentions Furcæ factæ apud ulmellos com. Middleſex, ubi prius factæ fuerunt." Stow, 1598, p. 311; or edit. Strype, p. 238.

[8] *Pendul*um in a French deed in Du Cange is a part of a mill: "Conceſſi domui infirmorum Sancti Quintini molendinum de Rovereco, cum raëriâ & pendulo, perpetuò tenendum." Charta A. 1165. apud Hemerœum in Auguſtâ Viromand. Charpentier ſuppoſes it the ſame with pencellum, a penſtock, or dam of a water-mill; and raëria is a ſluice. Du Cange in voc. But, as the ſituation here aſſigned ſeems too diſtant from any water-courſe or ſtream, quere, if it be another term for penticius, a penthouſe; which is properly ſuppoſed by Johnſon to be a corruption of pentice, and is thus defined in his Dictionary; "a ſhed hanging out, a ſlope from the main wall;" a lean-to, as it is now called in Leiceſterſhire, and many other parts of the kingdom.

[9] Harl. MSS. 60. fol. 161. b.

[10] Bridges, vol. I. p. 138.

[11] Charyte, fol. lxix. Bridges, in his account of Great Billing, vol. I. p. 405, does not notice their having had this advowſon.

The rectory and advowſon of Brackley, with the chapels of Halſo and Sigreſham, were given by the founder, whoſe deſcendants were liberal benefactors[1]. The abbot had a penſion of half a mark.

In 1191, a compoſition with the prior of Trentham, relative to this rectory, was confirmed by pope Celeſtine; in 1220 the rectory was valued at 36 marks; and, about 1223, permiſſion was given by Richard abbot of Leiceſter to erect the chapel of St. John the Baptiſt within the precincts of the hoſpital at this place, with the privileges of ſepulture, &c.[2]

"The parſonage of St. Peter's was impropriate to the abbey of Leirceſter; and there was a vicar endowed[3]." This endowment, which was made in 1225, conſiſted "in tertiâ parte decime garbarum de Brackele & de Halſo, & in medietate altaragiorum, cum manſo vicario aſſignato. Conſiſtit etiam in duabus partibus decime garbarum de octo virgatis terre in campo de Evenley; & in decimis duarum virgatarum in Parvâ Whitefeld, cum curiâ Thome de Ermenters, &c. in decimis feni & molendini[4]."

In 1272, the abbot of Leiceſter had a grant of common of paſture here[5]; and in 1295 recovered the right of preſentation to the vicarage, againſt John de Ferrars, Eleanor la Zouch, and Elizabeth counteſs of Boughan. In 1302, he preſented Robert Caſtelyen de Humberſton[6]; in 1313, was certified to hold a fourth part of a knight's fee in Brackley of Alan la Zouch[7]; and in 1329 claimed to have view of frankpledge, with other liberties in his lands here, and had his claim allowed[8].

The chapel of Brackley hoſpital was rebuilt about 1360, at the expence of more than £34; and the abbey of Leiceſter paid yearly £5. 4*s.* 4*d.* towards the augmentation of this vicarage[9].

At Brixworth[10], the abbey had lands in the ſeveral fields; the particulars of which, not noticed in Bridges, may be ſeen in a MS. in the Cotton library[11].

At Cley Cotys, or Coton, they had once the advowſon of the chapel, as a member of the church of Lilburn. This was alienated, in 1210, by a fine paſſed between Thomas de Eſtley, demandant, and William abbot of Leiceſter, deforcient[12]; and in 1254, the chapel (deducting a penſion of 20*s.* to the abbot of Leiceſter) was valued at 8 marks[13].

They had the tithes at Evenley, as a member of the church of Brackley, the gift of their founder; and demiſed them in 1323 to William Marton[14], vicar of Brackley, for 13*s.* 4*d.* a year; and again, in 1348, to William Swan[15], another vicar. They were afterwards let to the farmer of the abbot's lands at Brackley, one of whom was Stephen Chamberleyn, for the ſame ſum[16].

The church of Eydon was appropriated to this abbey, in 1202, by Richard ſon of Henry Wale; confirmed, in 1219, by a fine levied at Northampton[17]; again, in 1229, by another fine at Weſtminſter between Richard Wale, demandant, and William abbot of Leiceſter, deforcient[18]; and, in 1291, the abbot and convent preſented Richard Ryder, of Leiceſter, clerk, to this rectory, having proved their right to the patronage againſt Thomas lord Wale, who had preſented John de Martin[19].

They had the church of Farningho, of the gift of their founder; and the abbot's penſion from it was four marks[20]. The abbot and convent occur as patrons in 1219[21] (when the churches of Farningho and Sireſham were valued at £18. 1*s.* 8*d.*); and in 1290 preſented Aymo de Vienna; who had a ſecond preſentation in 1291, by reaſon that he had not obtained prieſt's orders within the year[21]. The abbot and convent had free-warren granted them at Farningho, Sireſham, and other places, in 1300[23]; and in 1329[24] were cited (as they had been in 1229[25]), to ſhew by what right they claimed from their tenants in Farningho and Sireſham, Brackley and Halſo, view of frankpledge, weifs, aſſiſe of bread and beer, &c. exemption from gelds, danegelds, and all other aids, either in wapentakes, hundreds, or ſhires, from meadows, ſcutages, and aſſizes, and all worldly ſervices, with ſac and ſoc, tol and theam, and infangenthef, together with an exemption from pannage, pontage, tolls, or ſtallage, throughout all the cities and boroughs in the kingdom[26]. Their right was on this occaſion fully eſtabliſhed; and the inhabitants of Farningho were enjoined to make a perambulation once at leaſt in every ſix years, to ſee that the boundaries of the abbot's lands were maintained, for which they were to be allowed 12*d.* to buy drink (ad emend' poculenta), drinkings being always found abſolutely neceſſary in all perambulations[27]. The total receipt of the abbey from Farningho was £12. 18*s.* 10*d.*[28]

At Halſo (now called Hawes, and generally reckoned a hamlet of Brackley, though originally the lordſhip of which Brackley itſelf was a member[29]), they had the chapel, with the tithes of garbs and hay, the gift of their founder. The church of Brackley was bound to provide a reſident chaplain, and the hamlet of Halſo to repair the chapel; the abbot and convent having been ever exonerated from that expence. The abbot and convent, however, in 1398, at the eſpecial requeſt of ſir John Lovell, after entering a ſolemn proteſt of their right of exemption, agreed to repair the roof and windows of the chancel for that time only, ſir John Lovell contributing thereto ſix good oak-trees out of his woods at Bagworth, and 40*s.* in money[30].

At Hothorpe (a chapelry of Thedingworth in Leiceſterſhire) they had the tithes of garbs and hay, as belonging to the mother-church. For the tithe of 20 acres of hay, they received 6*s.* 8*d.*[31]

The impropriate rectory and advowſon of the vicarage of Lilburn, with an annual rent from that lordſhip, originally given by Robert earl of Mellent to the church of St. Mary de Caſtro, were transferred by him to the abbey[32]. One yard-land here was given by Richard l'Abbé, and three more by Geffrey de Dalby. In 1220, this church was valued at 10 marks; and the temporalities of the abbey here at 60[33].

Richard de Morvill, conſtable to the king of Scotland, gave an annual rent of 10*s.* payable by the abbot and convent of Dryburgh in Scotland, in lieu of half a carucate of land, given by Alexander de Sancto Martino for the murder of the conſtable's brother Malcolm de Morvill, who was buried in the cemetery of Leiceſter abbey. Several diſputes having ariſen concerning the payment of this ſum, the abbot and convent at length accepted an aſſignment of 5*s.* a year, to be paid by the abbot and convent of St. James at Northampton out of a penſion of two marks and a half a year, for the church of Bozeate; which the abbot and convent of Dryburgh aſſigned afterwards to the prior and convent of St. Andrew [1] at Northampton, on condition of their paying 5*s*. a year to the abbey of Leiceſter [2].

---

[1] Leland, vol. VII. p. 12.

[2] Appendix, p. 61. See a view of Brackley church, and of the ruins of this chapel, in Bridges, vol. I. p. 150.

[3] Appendix, p. 11; and Charyte, fol. xxvi.

[4] Rot. Hugonis Wells, annis 15 & 20.

[5] Plac. 1 Edw. I. m. 17. de communi paſturâ Brackele.

[6] Reg. Sutton, ann. 3. Their being patrons on this occaſion is not noticed by Bridges.

[7] Bridges, vol. I. p. 143.

[8] See under Farningho.

[9] Appendix, p. 68.

[10] Charyte, fol. xxix.

[11] Galba E. III. fol. 125.

[12] Fin. Northampton. 12 Johan de eccleſiâ de Cotes.

[13] Charyte, fol. xxxviii; Bridges, vol. I. p. 549.

[14] This vicar is omitted by Bridges.

[15] Bridges calls him Sweyn.

[16] Charyte, fol. lvii. Bridges, vol. I. p. 165.

[17] Fin. Northampton. de advoc. eccleſie de Eyndon.

[18] Appendix, p. 61; Charyte, fol. lv.

[19] Reg. Sutton. See Appendix, p. 61; and Bridges, vol. I. p. 123.

[20] Charyte, fol. lviii; Bridges, vol. I. p. 170.

[21] Reg. Sutton.

[22] Ibid.

[23] Clauſ. 29 Edw. I. N° 27.

[24] Plac. de quo warranto in com. Northampt. 3 Edw. III. Rot. 13. de privilegiis in Farningho, Sireſham, &c.

[25] See before, p. 261.

[26] Rot. Quo warranto apud Northampton, coram Juſtic. Itinerant. 3 Edw. III.

[27] See Addenda to Lambeth Hiſtory, p. 364.—Drinke for the children, 6*d.*—1586, For making honeſt men drinke when we went to Vicar's Oke in perambulation, 2*s.* 6*d.*

[28] Charyte, fol. lviii. b. A terrier of their lands here fills ten pages in a Cotton MS. Galba E. III. fol. 101. & ſeqq.

[29] Bridges, vol. I. p. 153.

[30] Appendix, p. 74; Charyte, p. lix. b.

[31] Charyte, fol. cxiv. This is not noticed by Bridges. See more of this chapelry under Thedingworth.

[32] Charyte, fol. cv; Bridges, vol. I. p. 573.

[33] A terrier of their lands here may be ſeen in Galba E. III. p. 150.

At Sireſham, they had the church, the gift of Thomas Sorell, lord of the manor in the reign of king Henry II; and, in 1254, the rectory was valued at 15 marks; and the abbot's penſion was half a mark [3]. At Sireſham, they had alſo lands called Weſterles, or Weſtcotes; which originally were given by Robert Boſſu, their founder, to the church of Lincoln, in exchange for Knighton and the Suburbs of Leiceſter; but the biſhop and chapter, in after-times, complaining of this diſpoſition, Robert Fitz Parnell, his grandſon, took them back, and beſtowed them on the abbey; giving to the chapter of Lincoln, with conſent of the monks, certain lands in Asfordby and Segrave, which belonged to the convent. In 1315, the abbots of Leiceſter and Bitulſden, with John de Chetwode, were certified to be lords of Sireſham and Weſtcote [4].

At Standeford, Robert de Standeford gave a virgate of land to the almoner of Leiceſter abbey [5].

At Welton, they had a rent of 43*s*. ariſing from a water-mill in the poſſeſſion of John Hynckley [6]; which in 1559 was ſold by the crown to Mr. Thompſon for twenty years purchaſe [7].

In 1340, the ſpiritualities of the abbey of Leiceſter in the archdeaconry of Northampton were thus taxed:

The church of Brackley 36 marks.

The church of Lilburn 10 marks.

A penſion at Sireſham, 6*s*. 8*d*.

———— Farningho, 4 marks.

———— Cley Coton, 20*s*.

In all, 52 marks; which paid 34*s*. 6*d*. for tenths.

Their temporalities in that archdeaconry were taxed,

At Farningo and Sireſham, £18. 20*d*.

At Lilburne, 60*s*.

At Aſtwell and Empingham in Rutland, 8*s*.

In all, £21. 9*s*. 8*d*.; taxed at 21*s*. 6*d*. [8]

In Nottinghamſhire, Hugo de Dyva and Helwyſia his wife gave to this abbey two parts of the tithes of the garbs of her demeſne lands at Gotham, which was confirmed by Robert earl of Leiceſter [9].

In Rutland, they had at Aſhwell (Eſſewell juxta Ocham) an annual rent of 3*s*. the gift of Henry Touchet, lord of that manor [10].

At Empingham, four bovates, the gift of Richard l'Abbé; four others, the gift of Robert Fitz Philip; and ſeveral ſmall rents [11].

From the prior and convent of Shene in Surrey, they had a leaſe of tithes in various parts of Leiceſterſhire, at an annual rent of £12. [12] From this priory they had alſo an annual acknowledgement of a roſe.

In Warwickſhire, they had the chapel of Anſty, with that of Shelton, both hamlets of Bulkington, the gift of Roger de Watervile; for which the prior of Coventry paid them by compoſition £10. a year [13].

At Bernangull, or Bernacle, another hamlet of Bulkington, they had the tithes and certain lands, given by Roger de Watervile, and a virgate by Alice Temple, cum corpore ſuo. Four yard-lands here, of the fee of Ernald de Bois, were given antiently to the abbey by Henry the ſon of Fulco de Merſton, who afterwards became a canon of their houſe; and the gift was confirmed by Ernald de Bois, and by king Henry II. Thomas earl of Lancaſter confirmed to them a carucate in 1284. The abbot had a court-leet there for his own tenants, with other privileges, which he claimed to have had time out of mind. They granted to Guy, a knight, lord thereof, an oratory in his own houſe, provided the prieſt ſhould ſwear, in the preſence of the vicar of Bulkington, that it might be no damage to the mother-church [14].

At Berwode, a hamlet of Curdworth, Hugh de Ardena gave the manor and a hermitage; with one meſſuage, two carucates, one mill, 60 acres of meadow, 60 acres of paſture, 300 acres of wood, and 10*s*. rent in Curdworth; which were confirmed by William and Waleran earls of Warwick; of whoſe fee they were held. The abbot and convent had the patronage of the rectory, and the tithes and various parcels of land, &c. from John de Ardena and others of that family, on condition of finding two canons to celebrate divine ſervice in the chapel of Berwode-hall; but John Ardena [15], being a powerful man and a knight, impleaded the abbot of Leiceſter in 1339 for the manor of Berwode, with the advowſon of the church of Curdworth, being given to that houſe by his anceſtors many years before. By the prudence of abbot Glowne, this cauſe was terminated in favour of the monaſtery of Leiceſter. An early terrier of the manor of Berwode will be found in our Appendix [16].

The lands which Richard de Camvile had in the manor of Bigging, within the lordſhip of Newton, being granted to Henry de Rokeby from Richard de Camvile, were by the canons of Leiceſter obtained, temp. Henry II. in conſideration of the chapel of Rugby, given by them to him and his heirs, which chapel was a member of Clifton; but the mill they had from Robert the ſon of Fulco de Holme [17].

At Bramcote [18], another hamlet of Bulkington, the tithes and the mill, with eight yard-lands, the gift of Geffrey l'Abbé, Robert de Watervill, &c. The abbot and convent, as in other their lands in Warwickſhire, claimed a court-leet in 1284, as granted by the king's progenitors, for which they then produced their charters. What they then had amounted to the third part of a knight's fee; for, in 1346, it was certified, that ſo much they held of the earl of Lancaſter, who then had the honour of Leiceſter. They had here alſo the homage and relief of their free tenants, two inſtances of which are recorded in 1342 and 1470; with weyſs and ſtrays, hariots, auxilia, & merchetas [19].

At Bromwych, they had certain lands, held under them by Thomas de Bromwych; "ſicut patet in placito quod eſt in veteri regiſtro cum nigro cooperterio." This Thomas de Bromwych gave them certain common of paſture in Berwode [20].

Roger de Watervile gave the rectory and advowſon of Bulkington, with two yard-lands belonging to it, together with its chapels of Bernangul, Weſton, Ryton, Merſton, Shelton, Anſty, and Bramcote; all which were confirmed by Ernald de Bois I, and three ſucceeding Ernalds [1]. The church was valued in 1220 at 26 marks; and, at the endowment of the vicarage, a penſion of 26*s*. 8*d*. was reſerved. William Orchard, one of their tenants here, paid a yearly rent of a pair of gloves [2].

---

[1] Of this priory, ſee our Introductory Volume, p. cxlii.

[2] Charyte, fol. cxiii; Cotton MSS. Vitellius, F. XVII. fol. 16. b; and Bridges, MS. vol. I. p. 161.

[3] Charyte, fol. cxxix; Bridges, vol. I. p. 194.

[4] Appendix, p. 61; Bridges, vol. I. p. 169, 170.

[5] Charyte, fol. cxxxi; not noticed by Bridges.

[6] Charyte, fol. cxlvi.

[7] Harl. MSS. 608. p. 8. See Bridges, vol. I. p. 96.

[8] Bridges, MS. ex Offic. Primit.

[9] Charyte, fol. lix; Thoroton, p. 18.

[10] Charyte, fol. lvii; not noticed by Wright.

[11] Charyte, fol. lvi; not noticed by Wright.

[12] See before, p.

[13] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxviii; Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. pp. 65. 123.

[14] Appendix, p. 79; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 63.

[15] Edward Arden, a gentleman, though not inferior to the reſt of his anceſtors in thoſe virtues wherewith they were adorned, had the hard hap to come to an untimely death, 27 Elizabeth; the charge laid againſt him being no leſs than high treaſon againſt the queen, as privy to ſome foul intentions that Mr. Somerton, his ſon in law, a Roman Catholic, had towards her perſon. For which he was proſecuted with ſo great rigour and violence by the earl of Leiceſter's means, whom he had irritated in ſome particulars (as I have credibly heard), partly in diſdaining to wear his livery, which many in the county of Warwick of his rank thought no ſmall honour to them in thoſe days; but chiefly for galling of him by certain hard expreſſions about his private acceſſes to the counteſs of Eſſex before ſhe was his wife; that, through the teſtimony of one Hall, a prieſt, he was found guilty of the fact, and loſt his life in Smithfield. "Triſtis his exitus nobilis viri," ſays Camden, "qui ſacerdotiis inſidiis illectis & ejuſmodi teſtimonio perculſus, Leiceſtrii invidiæ vulgò vertebatur. Certum enim eſt illum Leiceſtrii invidiam nec immeritò incuniſſe, cui in omnibus quibus poterat ſe temerè objecerat, quaſi adultero obtrectaverat, & ut homini novo detraxerat." Upon whoſe attainder, his lands were given to Edward Darcy, eſq. and his heirs; but recovered all by Robert his ſon, except Curdworth and Minworth. Dugdale, vol. II. p. 931.

[16] Appendix, p. 79; Dugdale, vol. II. pp. 925, 926, 927. 932. And ſee before, p. 256.

[17] Cotton MS. Vitellius F. XVII; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 13.

[18] From a copy of a terrier of lands in the tenure of William Lucas and Richard Orchard, in Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. p. 91.

[19] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 62.

[20] Charyte, fol. xxx; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 886.

The rectory and advowſon of Clifton, and its chapels of Brownſover, Rokeby, and Newton, the gift of the firſt Ernald de Boſco, confirmed by ſucceeding Ernalds; of whom the fourth gave permiſſion to the tenants of the abbey to have common of paſture with their own tenants. They had alſo the meadow called Flexdames, given by Thomas Truan, Robert de la Beauviſme, and T. de Landa [3]; and a bovate of land, cum corpore ſuo, by Robert ſon of Robert le Sweyn. The church of Clifton, dedicated to the Aſſumption of our Lady, was antiently a prebend of St. Mary de Caſtro at Leiceſter; but, being afterwards granted to the abbey, was appropriated by Geffrey Muſchamp, biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield [4]. In 1220 this church was valued at 25 marks.

The church of St. Nicholas at Curdworth, with the hermitage and divers chapels, the gift of Hugo de Arden, valued in 1220 at 7 marks and a half; and divers lands there the gift of Thomas de Ardena [5]. Within this lordſhip the abbot of Leiceſter, in 1284, claimed a court-leet, &c.; and, to juſtify this challenge, exhibited the charters of Henry II. and Richard I. whereby the canons of that houſe had ſundry general privileges granted to them throughout all their poſſeſſions; whereupon the jury finding they had enjoyed a court-leet, with aſſiſe of bread and beer, time out of mind, thoſe liberties were allowed; and, foraſmuch as it appeared that in the time of abbot Henry a gallows had been ſet up, and a thief there taken adjudged to death, and hanged by his bailiffs, the ſame privilege was likewiſe allowed. The endowment of this vicarage may be ſeen in our Appendix [6].

At Dunton, a hamlet of Curdworth, they had certain tithes, received by the vicar; and ſome land leaſed to William Bracebridge [7].

At Holme, in the pariſh of Newton (which in the Conqueror's time had been a village, but was afterwards depopulated) this abbey had the tithes, the gift of the firſt Ernald de Boſco; and half a virgate of land, with a toft and croft, &c. the gift of Robert the ſon of Fulco de Holm, and Humfrey de Newton. The rent was 13*s*. 4*d*.; and had originally been 20*s*. The name of this place was taken from its ſituation, lying in a nook between the river Avon and a ſmall brook which comes from Shawell in Leiceſterſhire. It was afterwards called New Bigging [8].

At Ilmeſdon [Elmedon], they had the church, with lands, tithes, &c. the gift of their founder [9].

At Merſton Jabet, a chapelry of Bernangul, they had tithes, and four virgates of land, the gift of Henry, ſurnamed Jabet, ſon to Fulco de Merſton, which had been ſettled as a dower on Alice his wife. For this gift, he was admitted a canon of the houſe, and his wife a ſiſter [10].

At Minworth, a hamlet of Curdworth, they had the homage and ſervice of Simon ſon of Nicholas, an annual acknowledgement of a roſe from the heir of John Philip, and certain lands the gift of William de Ardena [11].

At Newhay, a member of Stockingford, Henry de Lilburn and his heirs paid 10*s*. a year, for 30 acres of arable land, to Stephen de Segrave; who granted to this abbey the homage and ſervice of Henry de Lilburn and his heirs, and the income ariſing from the wood at Newhay, with its appurtenances. This wood the prior of the neighbouring convent of Erdbury rented from the abbey of Leiceſter for 13*s*. 4*d*. a year [12].

At Newton, a chapelry of Clifton, they had the tithes of garbs and hay, the gift of their founder; a toft, 120 feet long, given by Bertram de Newton, for an annual acknowledgement of 4*d*.; which rent was afterwards releaſed by his daughter and heir. They had the barn and croft alſo of the demeſne; with the tithes of the hades & leys; and, inſtead of the tithe of hay there, a meadow called Wafford, given to them by the pariſhioners, producing eight cart-loads, worth on an average 8*d*. a year; and the tithes of the demeſne mill, called Cuttulmylne, worth 3*s*. 4*d*. a year. This was recovered to the abbey by a ſentence in the Court of Arches, July 31, 1452 [13].

The lordſhip of Nuneaton, with all its dependencies, except what was poſſeſſed by the abbot and convent of Leiceſter in the hamlet of Stockingford, and by the monaſtery de Caſâ Dei in Eaton and Atleberg, was given by earl Robert Boſſu, and confirmed by his ſon Robert Blanchmaines [14] to the nuns of that place; who were to pay to the abbey of Leiceſter a rent of 30 ſterlingæ and 3000 eels yearly [15]. Theſe nuns poſſeſſed in Leiceſterſhire two carucates of land at Waltham in the Wolds, with paſture there for 300 ſheep, the gift of Iſabel the founder's daughter, and of Simon earl of Northampton her ſon; two virgates of land in Swinford, given by Richard Malore; with 2*s*. rent from a houſe in Leiceſter, held by Guy Broadleas.

Among the gifts of Ernald de Boſco, they had the advowſon of the chapel of Rugby, which was a member of the church of Clifton; and concerning which there was a ſuit, in the king's court, in the year 1200, between Paul abbot of Leiceſter and Henry de Rokeby [16], which terminated in a renunciation of right on the part of the ſaid Henry; and an admiſſion from the abbot that Henry and his heirs ſhould have liberty for their homage and ſervice, after the death of Simon the dean, to nominate a clerk; whom the abbot and convent, if he were fit, would preſent to the church, on his paying them an annual penſion of 20 ſhillings, the ſaid Henry and his heirs being ſureties for the payment; and the clerk ſo preſented undertaking percipere ſingulis annis criſma de matrice eccleſia [17]. A final agreement was after this made, between William abbot of Leiceſter and Henry de Rokeby; who was to nominate in future to the abbot and his ſucceſſors a fit and proper clerk, to be by them preſented to the biſhop for induction; which clerk ſhould be bound to pay to the abbey their accuſtomed penſion of 20 ſhillings. The matter of this penſion was afterwards agitated in the conſiſtorial court of the biſhop of Lichfield about 1350, between abbot Clowne and Peter de Bilney the then rector; and decided in favour of the abbey. Yet it was again conteſted in 1465 by another rector, John Stone; and again recovered by abbot Pomerey [18].

At Ryton, a chapelry of Bernangul, this abbey had the tithes, and a rent of 46*s*. 8*d*. given by Roger de Watervill [19].

At Shelton, they had the chapel, with that of Anſty, as parcel of the church of Bulkington; for which the prior of Coventry, by compoſition, paid 10*s*. yearly to the canons of Leiceſter; a diſpute concerning which was amicably ſettled, as will be ſhewn under Scraptoft. They had here alſo a rent of two pounds of pepper [20].

Oſbert de Lemington granted an oxgang of land lying within the precincts of Shuckborough Superior. This was confirmed by king Henry II; and in a ſhort time was given by them to Thomas the ſon of Oliver de Shuckborough, for 9*s.* rent a year; afterwards reduced to 2*s.*[1]

---

[2] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 57, 58.

[1] Appendix, p. 69.

[3] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. I p. 8, 9. A terrier of their lands here fills five pages. Galba E. III p. 94, &c.

[4] Cotton MSS. Vitellius F. XVII; and Dugdale, ubi ſupra, ex vetuſto exemplari penes decan. & capit. Lichfield.

[5] Plac. quo warranto in com. Warwic. 13 Edw. I. Rot. 3. & 4. de privilegiis tenentium de Curdworth.

[6] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 924.

[7] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 932.

[8] Appendix, p. 80; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 13. See a terrier of their lands here, Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. fol. 143.

[9] Charyte, fol. lxvii; not noticed by Dugdale.

[10] Appendix, p. 81; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 63.

[11] Appendix, p. 81; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 932.

[12] Appendix, p. 81; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 1070.

[13] Appendix, p. 81; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 12.

[14] See this charter, Appendix, p. 15; and ſee vol. II. p. 380.

[15] Appendix, p. 81; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 106. b.

[16] Plac. 2 Johan. Mich. Rot. 29. dorſ. de advoc. capellæ de Rokeby.

[17] The conſecrated oil or unguent uſed at baptiſm. Regularly the parochial clergy were to have it from the cathedral church. But it ſhould ſeem the ſtipulation here was, that the clerk preſented to the chapel of Rugby ſhould have the criſm from the mother-church of Clifton, of which it is expreſsly ſaid to be a member.

[18] Appendix, p. 82; Dugdale, vol. I. pp. 23, 24.

[19] Appendix, p. 82; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 62.

[20] See under the hiſtory of that pariſh; and Appendix, p. 82.

At Sow, they had one croft, for which John Naſeby paid 8*d.* rent. They had frankpledge alſo and ſuit of court, as was determined by an inquiſition taken by the king's command. The altarage of the chapels of Sow and Wyken, both dependent on the rectory of St. Michael in Coventry, was valued at £4; and the tithes of Sow and Woodend at £10. 13*s.* 4*d.* "The royalty of Sow was bequeathed, by will of Lucy counteſs of Bedford, to Mr. George Purefoy, of Belgrave, co. Leiceſter, who enjoyed it in 1640[2]."

The whole of Stockyngford, a member of Nuneaton, the gift of William de Novo Mercato, with the aſſent of Robert earl of Leiceſter, who had exchanged this place for Whitwick. They had the chapel alſo, the gift of Geffrey de Turvile; and other lands there, the gift of Geffrey the Eremite; but they gave moſt of it to the nuns of Eaton. This manor the abbot and convent permitted William Boteler, William Babyngton, Thomas Warner, and John Catby, to aſſign over to the prior of Erdbury, reſerving to the abbey of Leiceſter their accuſtomed fealty, and a ſecurity for the payment of 63*s.* 4*d.* as a relief on every vacancy of the priory[3].

At Stretton, a virgate of land was held under this abbey by Robert Torr[4].

At Weſton in Arden, they had the tithes "garbarum, feni, & boſci, & decimas molendini[5]," as a chapelry belonging to Bulkington.

Threeſcore years and more before the Conqueſt, Ulfric Spot, a potent man in thoſe days, and founder of Burton abbey, co. Stafford, gave Wibtoft (a chapelry of Cleybrook in Leiceſterſhire) to one Athelne by will for life, and afterwards to the ſaid monaſtery; but in the Conqueror's time it was poſſeſſed by the earl of Mellent[6]. Ralph de Arraby, cum corpore ſuo, gave to this abbey one third part of the hamlet, which produced a rent of 4*l.* 17*s.* (originally £6. 17*s.*)[7]. This grant was confirmed by Ernald de Bois; and conſiſted of 7 meſſuages, 10 crofts, 5 yard-lands and a half, and a mill; wherein the abbot claimed a court-leet and the privileges he had in Bulkington, and was allowed them.

A queſtion aroſe between the abbot of Leiceſter and the rector of Sutton, concerning the tithes of nine virgates of land at Wigginhull juxta Crudworth; ſix of which, being in the fee of the earl of Warwick, belonged to the church of Sutton; and the other three, being of the fee of Thomas de Ardena, to the church of Crudworth. This diſpute was ſettled before judges delegated by apoſtolical authority; who decreed that two parts of the tithe ſhould be paid to Sutton, and one third to Crudworth; and that ſuch perſons as dwelt within the ſix virgates of the earl of Warwick's fee ſhould viſit the mother-church of Sutton on the day of the Aſſumption of the Virgin, and at Eaſter, when they were to communicate there, and alſo make the proper confeſſions during Lent, receive extreme unction from the chaplain of Sutton, bury their dead there, and pay all ſmall tithes to that church; but, as they were at a great diſtance from the mother-church, all other offerings were to be given to the chaplain officiating at Crudworth, who was to miniſter to them in ſpiritual caſes as need ſhould require. The chaplain of Sutton was to pay 3*d.* to the church of Crudworth, at Eaſter, to buy frankincenſe; and the inhabitants of the three virgates in the fee of Thomas de Ardena were to be anſwerable for all oblations whatever to the mother-church of Crudworth[8].

At Wover (Brounſover) they had the chapel, as a member of Clifton, worth £8. a year, (originally £15.) the gift of the firſt Ernald de Boſco[9].

In Wiltſhire, they had at Everley four librata terre, being one ninth of the whole townſhip, the gift of Amicia, wife to their founder, confirmed by her huſband and her ſon, for the ſuſtentation of the poor brethren in the Infirmary; or, as it is in another place expreſſed, ad pitanciam conventûs. Theſe lands in 1220 were valued at four marks; and paid 5*s.* towards a ſubſidy of a tenth; but, in the taxation of 1292 it is ſtated, "Modo abbas exoneratur de predict' vs. per placitum;" and the lands were afterwards ſurrendered by the abbot to Henry duke of Lancaſter, in exchange for Hungarton and Humberſton churches[10].

If this ſtatement of the property of the abbey ſhould not be conſidered ſufficient, the reader may conſult a magnificent volume in the Britiſh Muſeum, containing, among other articles, a Chronicle of the kings of England from 1178 to the death of Richard II; a Regiſter of the benefactors to Chriſt Church, Canterbury, and a Chronicle from the death of Canute to 1286; with ſeveral other articles relative to the church of Canterbury and to Becket. That part of the volume which relates to Leiceſter abbey is intituled, "Tranſcriptio, tempore regis Henrici Septimi, diverſarum rerum tangentium monaſterium de Pratis juxta Leiceſter. Ex ſcriptis ejuſdem eccleſiæ, domini Latimer, Roberti Brudnell, Johannis Turvile, Willielmi Cotton, Thome Eſulryk, & aliorum[11]." It begins at p. 81; fills 90 leaves; and conſiſts chiefly of antient terriers of ſeveral (but not all) of their poſſeſſions, ſome in Latin, others in Engliſh, too long to be copied here; but for the ſake of thoſe who may wiſh to conſult this MS. we give the names of the places to be found in it:

Barkby.	fol. 82	Kilby,	fol. 153
Barrow,	87	Kyrkebye juxta Melton,	147
Bagworth,	119	Lilburn,	150
Barkby,	119. b.	Lockington,	107
Belgrave,	120	Moſeley,	151
Billeſdon,	88. 121	Noſeley,	154
Boreſworth,	124	Oadby,	157
Blaby,	122	Octhorpe,	155
Bramcote,	91	Porta Occidentalis[12],	107
Brickelſworth,	125	Pynſlade[13],	111
Brontingſthorpe,	125	Queniborough,	95
Burſtall,	127	Querndon,	159
Burton Overy,	129	Rereſby,	161
Coſby,	97	Scharnbroke,	112
Coſſington,	138	Shepiſhed,	112
Cheſham,	131	Shakerſton,	162
Clifton,	94	Shucburgh,	162
Croxton,	140	Skeffington,	163
Eaton,	99	Stanton,	165
Farningho,	101	Stoke,	167
Godeby,	142	Stretton,	168
Gaddeſby,	142	Thornton,	113
Glenfelde,	135	Thorpe Ernald,	114
Holme,	143	Thorp Norboro,	168
Horſpole,	188	Thurmaſton,	118
Houghton,	144	Walton,	169
Humberſton,	144	Whatton,	169 b.
Kerbye,	146	Wover,	170

King Henry VIII, Feb. 14, 1544, granted to Richard, Roger, and Robert Taverner, ſeveral of the lands and tenements in Leiceſter, if not all, belonging to the abbey; as appears by an inſtrument, dated March 27, 1545, by which Richard, Roger, and Robert Taverner, granted to John Dicks, gentleman, one tenement in the Ward-gate, one tenement in the Abbey-gate in the pariſh of St. Leonard, which had been part of the poſſeſſions of the abbey, and which they held of the king in free burgage and common ſocage, by fealty only, and not in capite[1].

---

[1] Charyte, fol. ccxviii; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 308.

[2] Charyte, fol. cxxx; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 212.

[3] Charyte, fol. cxxxi; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 1070.

[4] Charyte, p. v. a; not noticed by Dugdale.

[5] Charyte, fol. cxlvi; Dugdale, vol. I. p. 61.

[6] Burton Regiſter, in the poſſeſſion or the earl of Uxbridge. See more of this hamlet under the pariſh of Cleybrook.

[7] Charyte, fol. cxlvii; and Cotton MSS. Vitellius F. XVII.

[8] Appendix, p. 82; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 920.

[9] Charyte, fol. cxlix; Dugdale, vol. II. p. 11.

[10] Appendix, p. 55; Charyte, fol. lvii.

[11] Cotton MSS. Galba E. III. p. 81.

[12] A terrier of lands in the Weſt Gate, including Bruntingthorpe (which was taken in the year 1381) fills 9 pages in the above-mentioned MS. p. 107. Another terrier of Bruntingthorpe in 1447 occurs in p. 125.

[13] Bulkyngton occurs p. 93. b; and Pynſlade in p. 111; but the terrier of neither of thoſe places was entered.

By another deed, 25 Aug. 1545, John Dycks, of Leiceſter, yeoman, granted to Thomas Creſſy, gent. one of the burgeſſes of Leiceſter, an orchard in St. Peter's pariſh, and a tenement in Abbey-gate, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, which he had by grant of Richard Taverner, eſq. Roger and Robert Taverner, gentlemen, in as full manner as was granted them by king Henry VIII, &c.[2]

In the Bodleian library is a ſmall printed poem[3], with the following title: "Heere beginneth a mery Jeſt of Dane Hew, Munk of Leiceſtre, and how he was foure times ſlain and once hanged;" beginning,

"In olde time there was in Leceſter town
An abbay of munks of great renown,
As ye ſhall now after heer;
But amongſt them all was one there
That paſs'd all his brethren I wis,
His name was Dane Hew, ſo have I blis."

In 1547, Thomas Day[4], clerk, a native of Leiceſter, who had been ſome time a canon of this abbey, and alſo a prebendary of St. Stephen's in Weſtminſter (and who, it is believed, in 1554 obtained the vicarage of Stepney), contributed £20. towards the ſum of £80; which the corporation of Leiceſter gave that year to Thomas Danet, of Brumkinthorpe, eſq. for his office of bailiff to the king in the liberties of Leiceſter, of which office Mr. Danet had a patent for life[5].

It has generally been ſtated that king Henry VIII. beſtowed ſome part of the poſſeſſions of this abbey on Mr. Cavendiſh; "who, in the reign of queen Mary, wrote the Life and Death of Cardinal Wolſey, to whom he had been gentleman uſher; and, having been admitted to more intimacy with his lord, and let more into ſecrets, than any other ſervant, would not deſert him in his fall, but honourably waited on his old maſter, when he had no office and no ſalary to beſtow upon him. The king himſelf had heard of the abilities and fidelity of this gentleman; and therefore ſent him word in the cardinal's laſt ſickneſs, by one of his privy chamber, 'how the king's majeſty bore unto him his principal favour, for the love and diligent ſervice that he had performed to his lord; and for which it was the king's pleaſure that he ſhould be about him as chief, in whom his highneſs would put a great confidence and truſt.' To give a more laſting teſtimony of his gratitude to the cardinal, he drew up a fair account of his life and death, of which the oldeſt copy is in the hands of the noble family of Pierpoint[6], into which the author's daughter was married; for, without expreſs authority, we may gather from circumſtances, that this very writer was the ſame perſon with the immediate founder of the preſent noble family, William Cavendiſh, of Chatſworth, co. Derby, eſq. who, being a man of learning and buſineſs, was found out and employed by king Henry VIII; and, in the 31ſt of his reign, was made one of the auditors of the court of augmentation, and diſcharged the truſt with ſuch fidelity and expedition, that the king promoted him, anno regni 27, not only to be treaſurer of his chamber, but to be one of his privy council. He bore the ſame relation to king Edward VI. and queen Mary; receiving the honour of knighthood, and a large acceſſion of eſtate, by grant of lands belonging to ſeveral diſſolved priories and abbeys, in exchange for his manors of Northal in Hertfordſhire, and Northawbery in Lincolnſhire, &c."[7]

In 1551, the ſite of Leiceſter abbey was purchaſed by William lord Parr, marquis of Northampton; and alienated about 1562 to Henry Haſtings third earl of Huntingdon, who built a fair houſe on it out of the old materials, and ſold it to ſir Edward Haſtings, knt.

In 1571, we find a grant to ſir Chriſtopher Hatton, knight, of the ſite of the monaſtery of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter, and of the water-mill adjoining, with the curtilages, buildings, and certain lands, called the Barn-yard, Aſhe Cloſe, Sterpe Orchard, Over-biggin, Nether-biggin, Read's Cloſe, Pynder's Cloſe, Whitley Typpet, Merewell Cloſe, Calverhaye, Childe Cloſe, 103 acres of meadow adjoining in the Northe Meadowe, Aſhe Cloſe Meadow, Leiceſter Meadow, and Halmore Meadow; 56 acres in the Hermitage Field and Peaſe Field; the meadow called Leiceſter Meadow; the wood called Stocking Wood, and Dove-land Coppice; the park called Leiceſter Park, otherwiſe the Little Park of Leiceſter, lately belonging to the abbey, then to William marquis of Northampton, and afterwards to ſir Edward Haſtings; which park William marquis of Winchester, ſir Walter Myldmay, knight, and ſir Edward Haſtings, had aſſigned over to the queen (nobis barganizaverunt) by deed, dated Dec. 19, 1571. Teſte 11° Februar. anno regni 14°."[8] This ſeems to have been an aſſignment preparatory to a new grant to Henry earl of Huntingdon; from whom it was re-purchaſed, in 1580, by ſir Edward Haſtings, as appears by the following record:

"Whereas the abbey of Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter, is ſeized into her majeſty's hands for the debt of Henry late earl of Huntingdon, at twenty pounds per annum, and the ſame charged in the accompt of William Skypwith, eſq. now ſheriff of the ſaid county; and whereas this Court was informed, in Trinity Term laſt paſt, by ſir Edward Haſtings, knt. tenant of the ſaid Abbey, that he purchaſed the ſaid Abbey of the ſaid late earl in the 22d year of her majeſty's reign; and that all the debts of the ſaid earl due to her majeſty before the time of his purchaſe were anſwered; and prayed that proceſs might be ſtayed, and offered to enter into bond in this Court to pay the ſaid ſeizure, or elſe procure his diſcharge before the end of this term; which this Court thought reaſonable; and the ſaid Edward Haſtings entered into bond accordingly. Now, foraſmuch as this Court is farther informed by Mr. Morgan, being of counſel with the ſaid ſir Edward Haſtings, that the ſaid ſir Edward, by reaſon of extreme ſickneſs, wherewith he hath been viſited almoſt ever ſince (and at this time is in great peril of death), could not proceed in pleading his diſcharge, and humbly craved longer time for the ſame, and that no advantage ſhould be taken by reaſon of his ſaid bond: It is ordered by this Court, the 20th day of November, this term, that the ſaid ſir Edward Haſtings ſhall have day given until the next term, to procure his diſcharge of the ſaid ſeizure; and his ſaid bond to remain as it now doth, and no proceſs to be made thereupon[9]."

---

[1] Carte, MS. ex chartis quibuſdam penes J. Haſlock.

[2] Ibid.

[3] "In printed at London, at the long ſhop adjoining unto Saint Mildred's Church in the Pultrie, by John Alde, 1596;" Art. 4° C. 39. Selden. See Herbert's Ames, p. 892.

[4] According to Le Neve, Faſti, p. 62, Thomas Day, LL. B. was collated to the precentorſhip of Chicheſter in 1547; and, at p. 234, it is mentioned that Thomas Day was the firſt canon appointed to the third ſtall in Chriſt Church, Oxford, in 1547. The ſaid Thomas Day had been inſtalled in the ſecond prebend of Oſney college. He was buried in Chriſt Church, Feb. 22, 1567. Browne Willis's Survey, vol. II. p. 451.

[5] Carte, MS. from the records of the borough of Leiceſter.

[6] Two other copies of this MS. in the Britiſh Muſeum have been already noticed, p. 271; materially differing from the printed work, which firſt appeared under the title of "The Negotiations of Thomas Wolſey, the great Cardinall of England; containing his Life and Death; viz. 1. The Original of his Promotion; 2. The Continuance in his Magnificence; 3. His Fall, Death, and Buriall. Composeed by one of his owne Servants, being his Gentleman Uſher, 1641," 4to; and afterwards under the following variations of title: 1. "The Life and Death of Thomas Wolſey, Cardinall; once Archbiſhop of York, and Lord Chancellour of England, 1667," 8vo.—2. "The Memoirs of that great Favourite Cardinal Wolſey, with Remarks on his Riſe and Fall, &c. 1706," 8vo.—3. "Sir William Cavendiſh's Memoirs of the Life of Cardinal Wolſey, Legate of the Pope, Archbiſhop of York, Biſhop of Wincheſter, Lord High Chancellor of England, and principal Miniſter of State in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, 1708," 8vo.—In Gutch's "Collectanea Curioſa," vol. I. p. 283, is "An Account of Plate, Gold and Silver, made for Cardinal Wolſey, from the Ninth Year of Henry VIII. unto the Nineteenth Year; wherein is ſet forth what he gave to the Abbey of St. Alban's, and to St. Frideſwide's College at Oxford;" and in p. 334, "A farther Account of Plate, Gold and Silver, made for Cardinal Wolſey, from the Twentieth Year of Henry VIII. unto the Twenty-firſt Year; wherein is ſet forth what he gave to the College of Ipſwich."

[7] Kennet's Memoirs of the Family of Cavendiſh.

[8] Originalia temp. Eliz. pars 2. Rot. 106. & 108.

[9] From the Original in the Exchequer, 20 November, 21 Eliz.

In 1606, Charles Blount lord Mountjoy, who in 1603 had been created earl of Devonſhire, died without lawful iſſue, poſſeſſed of ſome property here[1].

The ſite of Leiceſter abbey was in 1622 the inheritance of William Cavendiſh, the ſecond earl of Devonſhire of that name. This noble earl was beloved and admired in parliament, and a great ſpeaker in both houſes. Mr. Hobbes, in his Epiſtle Dedicatory of his Hiſtory of Thucydides to his ſon, gives this ſhining character of him; "By the experience of many years I had the honour to ſerve him, I know this, there was not any who more really, and leſs for glory's ſake, favoured thoſe that ſtudied the liberal arts liberally, than my Lord your father did; nor in whoſe houſe a man ſhould leſs need the Univerſity than in his. For his own ſtudy, it was beſtowed, for the moſt part, in that kind of learning which beſt deſerved the pains and hours of great perſons, Hiſtory, and Civil Knowledge; and directed, not to the oſtentation of his reading, but to the government of his life and the public good; for he ſo read, that the learning, he took in by ſtudy, by judgement he digeſted and converted into wiſdom and ability, to benefit his country: to which he alſo applied himſelf with zeal, but ſuch as took no fire, either from faction or ambition; and, as he was a moſt able man for ſoundneſs of advice, and clear expreſſion of himſelf in matters of difficulty and conſequence, both in public and private, ſo alſo was he one whom no man was able either to draw or juſtle out of the ſtraight path of juſtice. Of which virtue, I know not whether he deſerved more by his ſeverity in impoſing it (as he did to his laſt breath) on himſelf; or by his magnanimity in not exacting it himſelf from others. No other man better diſcerned of men, and therefore was he conſtant in friendſhip, becauſe he regarded not the fortune or adherence, but the men; with whom alſo he converſed with an openneſs of heart, that had no other guard than his own ſecurity, and that Nil conſcire. To his equals he carried himſelf equally; and to his inferiors familiarly; but maintaining his reſpect fully, and only with the native ſplendour of his worth. In ſum, he was one in whom might plainly be perceived, that honour and honeſty are but the ſame thing, in the different degrees of perſons."—He contracted a vaſt debt by his exceſſive gallantry, and ſplendid way of living; died at his houſe near Biſhopſgate, in London (where Devonſhire-ſquare is now built), on June 20, 1628; and was buried in the vault of All Saints church in Derby, with Elizabeth counteſs of Shrewſbury, his grandmother, on July 11 following[2]; where a moſt ſtately monument is erected to his memory, his own ſtatue of white marble ſtanding upright in the midſt of it. William, the third earl, his ſon and heir, by the lady Chriſtiana Bruce[3], was ten years, eight months, and ten days old, at the death of his father, being then a knight[4]. He was made knight of the Bath at the coronation of Charles I.[5]; and his mother, the counteſs dowager, getting the wardſhip of him, he was under her care. She was a woman of conſiderable celebrity, and of a ſingular character. She had brought to her huſband £10,000, the gift of king James I. Her clear jointure was no leſs than £5000. a year, to which ſhe added £4000, by her own prudent management. She ſeems indeed to have imbibed a due portion of the profitable wiſdom of her lord's grandmother, the famous counteſs of Shrewſbury, who laid ſuch ample foundations of wealth for her family. Her ſon's eſtate was charged and complicated with near thirty law-ſuits, which, by the cunning and power of her adverſaries, were made as perplexed and as tedious as poſſible; yet, by right, managed by diligence and reſolution, ſhe went through them all with ſatisfaction; ſo as king Charles jeſtingly ſaid to her, "Madam, you have all my judges at your diſpoſal." The diſcharging of the eſtate from thoſe numerous law-ſuits was not the only thing that required her care; there was a great debt to be ſatisfied, which was another ſpecimen of her trouble, as well as patience. Her lord had, before his death, obtained an act of parliament for cutting off an entail, in order to the ſale of lands; a thing not uſual in thoſe times, and "had not then been effected, but for the ſakes of thoſe for whom it was done," as king Charles was pleaſed to expreſs it. Yet this bore no proportion towards the payment of that vaſt debt for which it was deſigned; but with what money the ſale of thoſe lands brought in, together with her own care and management, the debt was diſcharged by her. Whilſt theſe controverſies were depending, ſhe committed her ſon to his father's tutor, Mr. Hobbes, who inſtructed him in the family for three years; and then, about 1634, travelled with him as his governor into France and Italy. This counteſs was a lady of that ſweet affability and ſweet addreſs, with ſo great a wit and keen a judgement, as captivated all who converſed with her; and of ſuch ſtrict virtue and morals, that ſhe was an example to her ſex. Prayers and pious readings were her firſt buſineſs; the remainders of the day were determined to her friends; in the entertainment of whom, her converſation was ſo tempered with courtſhip and heartineſs, her diſcourſes ſo ſweetened with the delicacies of expreſſion, that ſuch as did not well know the expence of her time would have thought ſhe had employed it all in addreſs and dialogue. In both which ſhe exceeded moſt ladies; and yet never affected the title of a wit; carried no ſnares in her tongue, nor counterfeited friendſhips; and, as ſhe was never known to ſpeak evil of any, ſo neither would ſhe endure to hear of it, from any, of others; reckoning it not only a vice againſt good-manners, but the greateſt indecency alſo, in the entertainment of friends, and therefore always kept herſelf within the meaſures of civility and religion. Her geſtures correſponded to her ſpeech, being of a free, native, genuine, and graceful behaviour; as far from affected and extraordinary motions as they from diſcretion. Theſe admirable qualities drew the poor to her gates, and ſtrangers to her table, and the city and court to her converſations. She had ſo eaſy and ſuch an obliging addreſs, without the leaſt allay of levity and diſdain, that every one departed with the higheſt ſatisfaction; ſhe ever diſtributing her reſpects according to the quality and merit of each; ſteering the ſame ſteady courſe in the country alſo; between which and the town ſhe commonly divided the year. Her country ſeats were many and noble; and, when her ſon came of age, ſhe delivered up to him his great houſes in Derbyſhire, all ready furniſhed; ſhe herſelf living in that of Leiceſter Abbey (near to which ſhe had purchaſed a conſiderable eſtate) until the rebellion broke out."[6]

Having met with ſevere domeſtic loſſes, by the death of her only daughter Anne[7], the wife of Robert lord Rich[8], ſon and heir to the earl of Warwick, and her ſecond ſon the brave Charles Cavendiſh[1], her thoughts became more devoted to national affairs, and ſhe then began to take an active part in the intereſting politicks of thoſe times. She retired to Greenwich towards the latter end of the rebellion; and, reflecting on the deplorable condition of the king and church, endeavoured, with her utmoſt ſkill and diligence, to recover the dignity of the crown and the liberties of the people; ſoliciting the earls of Eſſex and Holland to expiate their former engagements by eſpouſing the royal cauſe. They are ſaid both to have been very much encouraged by her earneſt ſolicitations and prudence; that Eſſex would have given the ſureſt demonſtration of his loyal purpoſes, had not death prevented him[2] (not without ſuſpicion of poiſon) Sept. 13, 1646; and that Holland was urged by her to the raſh enterprize which, on the 9th of March, 1648, occaſioned his being beheaded. When the army had made themſelves maſters of the king's perſon, and were carrying him in their triumph from place to place, they let him reſt a night or two at Latimers, a ſeat of this family in Buckinghamſhire, where this noble lady happened then to be, with her ſon the earl of Devonſhire, and his majeſty had much private conſultation with them concerning the ſtate of his affairs; and, at the ſame time, expreſſed both to her and the earl the great ſenſe he had of the faithful ſervices they had done him. After the fatal fight at Worceſter, Sept. 3, 1651, ſhe was infinitely concerned for the ſafety of the king's perſon, and could not conceal her joy when ſhe heard of his ſafe arrival in France: ſhe took care of the only remains he left in England, his domeſtic ſervants, many of whom ſhe received into her own family, and retained them with good reſpect and ſupport till their royal maſter's happy return. By three years privacy at her brother the earl of Elgin's houſe, at Ampthill, ſhe had lightened her griefs and expences, and became able to renew her hoſpitality and charity, in a ſeat which ſhe purchaſed for the pleaſant ſituation, Roehampton, in Surrey. She was diſtinguiſhed as the patroneſs of the wits of that age, who frequently aſſembled at her houſe. Waller frequently read his verſes there; and William earl of Pembroke wrote a volume of Poems in her praiſe, publiſhed afterwards; and dedicated to her, by Donne. Other contemporary wits exerciſed their talents in celebrating the virtues and accompliſhments of herſelf and her beautiful daughter lady Rich. At this houſe ſhe alſo entertained many of the king's friends, and concerted meaſures with them for the Reſtoration, correſponding at the ſame time with ſome of the principal Royaliſts on the Continent. Her letters were written in cypher, in which ſhe was aſſiſted by her nephew lord

---

[1] Eſch. 5 Jac. I.

[2] MS. J. 8. in Offic. Arm. fol. 18.

[3] "She was daughter of Edward lord Bruce of Kinloſs, and called Chriſtiana becauſe ſhe was born on Chriſtmas-day. Her father, being nobly deſcended from a brother of him who carried the crown of Scotland with great luſtre, was ambaſſador here in the decline of queen Elizabeth; and he, in conjunction with ſecretary Cecil (afterwards earl of Saliſbury), had procured of all the great men of this kingdom an engagement in writing, that they ſhould adhere to the ſucceſſion in the Scots Proteſtant line. This ſervice was juſtly rewarded by many royal favours, and by this eſpecially, that the king promoted the matching this lady into ſo great an Engliſh family, and in the marriage was pleaſed to act the father's part, and gave her with his own hand to William the ſecond earl of Devonſhire." Kennet's Memoirs of the Family of Cavendiſh.

[4] Inq. 17 Sept. 4, Car. I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. p. 240. in Bibl. Harl.

[5] Catalogue of Knights, MS.

[6] Life of Chriſtiana Counteſs of Devonſhire, paſſim; and Kennet's Memoirs of the Family of Cavendiſh.

[7] "A lady of thoſe rare endowments of mind and body, that her memory is celebrated by the Wits and Orators of her own time, the lord Falkland, Mr. Waller, Mr. Godolphin, and others." Kennet, p. 99. This lady died young, about 1644, of a feveriſh diſorder, caught, as Waller expreſſes it, in —— "the curs'd Eſſexian plains,
Where haſty death and pining ſickneſs reigns."
Her huſband married a ſecond wife, Oct. 3, 1645 (Lyſons, vol. II. p. 415); and yet, by ſome miſtake, ſhe is confounded, in all the editions of Collins's Peerage, with her niece Anne, ſiſter of the firſt duke (who was married to John Cecil, lord Burleigh afterwards earl of Exeter, with whom ſhe travelled twice to Rome, and died June 18, 1703).

[8] He ſucceeded his father as earl of Warwick in 1658; and, having outlived his only ſon, died May 29, 1659. See p. 291.

---

[1] This young nobleman, bred to books and arms, was in both a glory of the latter age. He was born in London May 20, 1620; the king was his godfather, and named him Charles. After a ſtrict tuition in his father's houſe, at eighteen years of age he was ſent to travel with a governor. He went firſt to Paris, and hearing much of the French army, then in the field near Luxemburg, was ſo impatient for ſuch a view, that he ſtole away to the camp, without the knowledge of his governor, who, hearing of the frolick, followed him in great pain, and brought him back to his ſtudies at Paris. He ſpent the year following in Italy, making his chief ſtages at Naples, Rome, and Venice; whence, in the next ſpring, he embarked for Conſtantinople, dropping his governor and Engliſh ſervants, as knowing that a traveller may learn moſt from ſtrangers After a long circuit by land through Natolia, he went by ſea to Alexandria, thence to Cairo, and was brought, by way of Malta, to Spain, and back to Paris; and, after ſome converſation with the court, returned to England about the end of May, 1641. When he had paid his duty to his mother, he was preſented to the king and queen, and was graciouſly received by them, and much careſſed by the moſt eminent perſons about the court. His inclinations determined him to arms; and therefore his mother, the counteſs, deſigned to have bought for him colonel Goring's regiment of foot in Holland: ſo he went over to be trained up there in the prince of Orange's army, the moſt eminent ſchool of war. When he had paſſed one campaign, he came over again to England, about the end of November, 1641; and when, ſoon after, the king, by tumults in the ſtreets, and greater diſtractions in the two houſes, was forced to retire to York, the earl of Devon and his brother Mr. Cavendiſh repaired thither to offer their duty and ſervice to their diſtreſſed prince. He was a perſon of ſo much addreſs and valour, that thoſe brave gentlemen of the Temple, who offered themſelves as a guard to the king's perſon, choſe him for their captain, knowing he would thither lead them, where law, honour, and conſcience, would oblige them to follow. At York, Mr. Cavendiſh put himſelf among the noblemen and gentlemen volunteers, who deſired to be under command for the king's ſervice; and made it his choice to ride in the king's own troop, commanded by my lord Bernard Stuart, his kinſman, brother to the duke of Richmond; among ſo many conſiderable perſons for qualities and fortunes, that the king was heard to ſay, "The revenues of thoſe in that ſingle troop would buy the eſtates of my lord of Eſſex, and of all the officers in his army." He marched in this troop till the battle of Edge-Hill, Oct. 23, 1642; when the king, in reſpect and tenderneſs to thoſe gallant men, would not expoſe them to equal hazard with the reſt of the cavalry, but reſerved them for a guard to his own perſon. Mr. Cavendiſh, ſuppoſing this to be no poſt of danger, and therefore not of honour, prevailed with the lord Bernard Stuart, that they ſhould wait upon the king, and entreat his leave to be drawn up on the right hand of the right wing of the horſe, as the moſt open and moſt honourable place in the battle; to which his majeſty, upon their importunity, conſented. And this indeed proved to be the poſt of hotteſt ſervice, and greateſt ſucceſs; wherein Mr. Cavendiſh ſo diſtinguiſhed himſelf by a perſonal valour, that, the lord Aubigny (who commanded the duke of York's troop) being ſlain, he was preferred to that charge before any other pretenders of eminent birth and merit. This troop was ſoon after put into the prince of Wales's regiment, wherein the ſuperior officer put ſomething on captain Cavendiſh, which he thought an indignity; and therefore he deſired his majeſty to aſſign him £1000. (which his own brother, the earl of Devonſhire, had preſented to the king,) promiſing, that, if his majeſty would be pleaſed to let him have the duke of York's troop out of the prince of Wales's regiment, he would go into the North, and raiſe the duke a complete regiment of horſe before the army could take the field; to which the king conſented, aſſuring him the honour of being colonel of his new regiment. In order to complete it, he accepted of Thomas Markham, eſq. to be his lieutenant-colonel, and Mr. Tuke for the captain of his firſt troop; and took his head-quarters at Newark, keeping under many of the rebel garriſons at Nottingham, and other neighbouring parts; and, by degrees, became maſter of the whole country; ſo that the king's commiſſioners for Lincolnſhire and Nottinghamſhire deſired his leave to petition the king, that he might have the command of all the forces of the two counties in quality of colonel-general; which he complied with, and the king granted. In this command he beat the enemy from Grantham, gained a complete victory near Stamford, and reduced ſeveral of their garriſon-towns, by the aſſiſtance of colonel Welby and other brave officers. After many glorious actions, being lieutenant-general of the horſe to his kinſman the marquis of Newcaſtle, he had the honour to receive the queen in her march to Newark, who immediately took notice, that ſhe ſaw him laſt in Holland, and was very glad now to meet him again in England. The counteſs of Derby ſitting at the end of the queen's coach, entertained her majeſty with great commendations of the general; and, when the queen was to give the word to major Tuke, ſhe gave that of CAVENDISH.—The copy of his life breaks off with his convoying the queen to Newark; but thence, with a noble guard, he waited on her majeſty towards Oxford; and in his way, with her conſent, took Burton upon Trent by ſtorm on July 2, 1643; encouraging his ſoldiers, by his own example, to ſwim over the river, and ſcale the works, and enter under ſhowers of bullets, defying all the moſt dreadful images of death, as if his life had been as immortal as he hath made his honour. The royal cauſe declining, made him only the more daring and deſperate. In his laſt action, near Gainſborough, in the latter end of July, he was driven with ſome of his ſoldiers into a quagmire, where he received his death-wound, by a thruſt under the ſhort ribs, by lieutenant-colonel Bury, as was triumphantly ſtated in a letter from Cromwell to the parliamentary committee. He deſerved the character given by the writer of his mother's life, "that he was a gentleman ſo furniſhed with all the interior and politer parts of learning (obtained at home and abroad, both by reading books and men) as well as courage, that he was prepared to defend his prince with his head and hand, by the ſtrongeſt reaſon and moſt generous valour;" and was the more capable of arms by his great knowledge in the mathematical arts (See Harl. MS. 6797. 16, 17.). Some of his papers, that ſhew a profound ſkill in numbers and meaſures, were in the hands of that eminent collector of valuable papers, Dr. John Moore, lord biſhop of Ely. When his body was brought to Newark to be interred, the whole town was ſo fond of it (even dead) that that they would not ſuffer it, for ſome days, to be laid into the ground, but wept over and admired it; and, not without the greateſt reluctance, at laſt committed him to his dormitory, covering his hearſe with tears and laurels. And when, about thirty years after, his body was removed to be interred at Derby with his mother (ſee p. 290), freſh lamentations were made, by thoſe who knew, and others that had heard, his fame; and the whole people of Newark expreſſed the moſt ſorrowful unwillingneſs to part with the relicks of ſo dear a perſon, who had been, when alive, the ornament and defence of that place. Waller wrote an Epitaph upon Colonel Charles Cavendiſh.

[2] Dugdale's Baronage, vol. II. p. 182.

Bruce, and Mr. Gale her chaplain. She became at laſt a ſuſpected perſon, and was in danger of being ſent to the Tower—a ſeaſonable bribe to the council of ſtate proved her protection. She afterwards entered into a correſpondence with general Monk; who, at the time that his conduct was moſt myſterious, is ſaid to have made known to her, by a private ſignal, his intentions of reſtoring the king. When Charles II. returned to England, he ſhewed the ſenſe he entertained of her zeal for his ſervice by frequently viſiting her at Roehampton, in company with the queen-mother and the royal family, with whom ſhe enjoyed an unuſual intimacy till her death[1], which happened Jan. 16, 1674-5. She was buried with her huſband; and it was her expreſs will, that the remains of her ſon Charles ſhould be removed from Newark, and accompany her own. Her corpſe paſſing through Leiceſter, due reſpects were paid to her memory; the magiſtrates of that place attending in their formalities, and the gentry of the country meeting there at the ſame time, waited on it out of town. The ſame honourable reception was paid to both of them at Derby, where they were interred in the burial-place of the family[2].

A Life of the Counteſs was publiſhed, in 1685, by Thomas Pomfret; and there is an original portrait of her in the duke of Bedford's Collection at Wooburn, by Theodore Ruſſell (a ſcholar of Vandyke); from which a beautiful plate has been lately copied by his grace's permiſſion[3].

In the ſtreet called The Abbey gate, this excellent lady founded a ſmall aſylum, called "The Counteſs's Hoſpital," for ſix poor women, maids or widows; and endowed it with £30. a year, to be paid quarterly, being £1. 5*s.* to each perſon.

Her houſehold-books[4], now at Chatſworth, began in her widowhood, April 1, 1635, or rather Lady-day 1635. The firſt is a thick volume folio, including 1636, 1637.

The other, Privy-purſe book, is thin, and begins Lady-day 1651, and reaches to 1655 incluſive, paged, and every page ſigned. Book coſt 8*s.*; and the writing is by Mr. Vivian.

They are not properly her own books, but her ſteward's; running thus: "Delivered ..... for the uſe of my honourable Lady." However, ſhe ſigns moſt items, in a large hand, "C. DEVONSHIRE;" and ſhe ſigned moſt bills before they were paid.

Mr. William Booth is ſteward; examiner H. P. who, Nov. 28, had a trunk with writings.

She had a book for her privy-purſe.

Perhaps Humphrey Pool lived in London in Devonſhire houſe, Devonſhire-ſquare, in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, and pariſh of St. Botolph.

Young earl abroad in France, April 16, 1635.

Pages' garters, points, and roſes, April 26.

Coachman, poſtilion, and four footmen, April 31.

Dutch bottles, 20 dozen at 3*s.*

May, footboy at £3. per annum.

Kitchin book.

Soap, weight 15 pounds, coſt 14*s.* Another, 16*s.*

Loaf ſugar.

Leiceſter (this muſt be the abbey of St. Mary); a chapel there, with a pulpit. There was a chimney, but it was walled up.

Venice glaſs 15*s.* and 16*s.* per dozen.

Elder vinegar.

Bread for Bedlam[5] 2*s.* per week; and again 30 Jan. in another part.

She goes to Bath 25th, and ſtays five weeks; and then to Leiceſter.

At Chatſworth Sept. 3.

Clerk of the kitchen, £18. per annum.

July 25. Hobbes[6] has £60. per annum.

Vamping pages' boots 2*s.*

Auguſt. Feather for lady's wear.

Sept. 24. A mutton, a veal.

26. et paſſim. Account of proviſion.

Half a year, from Lady-day 1635 to Michaelmas, £1947. 17*s.* 8*d.*; to Lady-day, £1573. 5*s.* 11*d.*; to Michaelmas, £2524. 13*s.* 11*d.*

To Lady-day, 1637, £3873. 1*s.* 2*d.*; Michaelmas, £1637. 12*s.* 8*d.*

Mr. Gale, who lived in the houſe, had £.40 a year, and was probably chaplain at Leiceſter abbey. Mrs. Gale has £.10 a year. She, I think, was houſe-keeper. His ſtudy is mentioned 20 March, 1636.

Stags at Chatſworth killed that ſummer; 12 bucks, 2 ſtags. N. B. Mr. Fullwood half a buck given, and Mr. Long.

Oct. 14. Kitchener at £2. per annum.

27. Endſor and Enſor[7] occur.

Nov. 1. Claret £6. 10*s.* per hogſhead; ſack 5*s.* 4*d.* per gallon.

Stag pies.

24. Ruſhes for Hardwick 2*s.* Before for Chatſworth.

She goes from Hardwick to Leiceſter in her way to London by Wellingborough (45 perſons) and Lewton a ſumpter-mare.

She ſtaid at Ampthill and Harding.

Dec. 4. Young lord is in Italy.

Six ſhillings fee for a doe; 10*s.* before for a buck; afterwards 10*s.* a doe, Feb. 24; and afterwards £2. a ſtag; July 4, £1. half ſtag; ſo two hinds £2.

9. Lady Bruce.

15. Gilt paper and cut paper[8].

St. Martin's[9] ſilver lace at 1*s.* 4*d.* per yard; again Aug. 20, 1637.

26. Bettony, beer, and ale.

29. Dr. Worral has £4. per annum for his tithes. He was rector of St. Botolph's without Biſhopſgate; his name Thomas; he occurs afterwards.

Fifty ſervants at 2*d.* per head is 8*s.* 4*d.*

30. Five pounds of damaſk powder to ſweeten[10] linen, Jan. 3; ſo p. 9, vol. 2. ſweet bags; and often.

Jan. 1. Blacke ſheet. Work done about it. 3 pounds of worſted coſt £1. 16*s.* for lady's bed.

3. Water-bottles dreſſed with flowers, before with ribbons.

Feb. 20. Planiſhing, burniſhing, &c. of ſilver.

23. Charles, ſecond ſon[11], lived with the counteſs.

24. Maſk at the Temple.

25. Sweet wood for the hall 1*s.*; cedar occurs before.

March 12. Given ſaltpetre-men[12] not to break up the ſtables.

March 15. Lady Maie, ſir Humphrey May vice-chamberlain's lady.

24. Coachman and poſtilion in purple; ſo pages' cloak and hoſe, &c.

Gingerlyne[13] cloth for a ſcreen, May 27, and thrice after; and June 16, 1637.

1636. Poor cels 5*s.* per week; 10*s.* May 7.

---

[1] Roehampton houſe deſcended, after the counteſs's death, to her ſon William, the third earl of Devonſhire, who died there in 1684; and, after the death of his counteſs, in 1689, appears to have been alienated to ſir Jeffery Jefferys, alderman of London, who died there in 1707. Lyſons, Environs of London, vol. I. p. 433.

[2] The monument for her and her huſband is an octagon dome, ſupported by four Ionic pillars, two at front and two behind, with two arches, North and South. In the centre ſtand their ſtatues. On the outſide are four buſts, one of them female; all moſt vilely executed. No inſcription. Arms: Cavendiſh; impaling, a chief in a canton Ermine a lion rampant; in baſe a ſaltire.

[3] See this plate in Lyſons's Environs, vol. I. p. 432.

[4] For this epitome of the counteſs's houſehold-books, I am indebted to my late worthy friend Dr. Pegge; to whom the originals were lent, in October 1776, by the preſent duke of Devonſhire.

[5] Probably a benefaction to the hoſpital of Bedlam, not far from her town reſidence in Devonſhire-ſquare.

[6] At Chatſworth is a portrait of Hobbes, a chearful look, with a glaſs of liquor in his hand.

[7] Or Edinſor, the pariſh in which Chatſworth ſtands.

[8] The amuſement among the ladies of cutting and raiſing paper brought from France into this country before 1600, and was much in faſhion within theſe few years.

[9] This probably was the ornamenting of St. Martin's church at Leiceſter, which was done very ſumptuouſly in 1635, on account of the king's coming. This appears by the churchwardens' accompts. See afterwards, p. 292, "St. Martin's ribbons."

[10] Roſe powder.

[11] See before, p. 289.

[12] In 1625, ſaltpetre-makers were permitted to dig the floors of all dove-houſes, ſtables, &c. for the ſake of the ſalts contained in them, very ſmall quantities of ſaltpetre being then brought from the Eaſt Indies.

[13] Q. Hingerlyne? See p. 202.

April 13. Spaniſh tables; alſo before and after.

16. Mrs. Murray, Mr. Oſberſton.

The counteſs had an embroidered ſaddle.

Running footman.

May 4. Three leather jacks coſt 10*s.*

May 7. King's drawing-chamber in Devonſhire-ſquare.

King and queen entertained, May 12, 1636; coſt £380. 9*s.* 7*d.*

15. Picture by ſir Anthony Vandike of the counteſs, copied by Corcellis[1], coſt £10.

To Corcellis, for pictures of the Lord Steward, earl of Pembroke, and my Lord Chamberlain, in little, £3.

27. Bills of ſickneſs delivered by pariſh-clark.

Counteſs goes to Raynham[2] and Pergoe[3], and Rochford[4], Eſſex.

The ſtate, and before the ninth 3½ yards of tawney taffety.

Watchet taffety ſarſenet at 40*s. per* ell.

College pots to ſilverſmith.

Wall candleſtick.

June 20. Vault is a great room; and before, as May 27, the making clean the heads in the vault. This was for the king's entertainment.

Running money to footmen.

July 4. Counteſs at Byfleet[5]; king and queen entertained there; ſtayed till Feb. 18.

Oct. 5. Counteſs plays at ſhovel-board.

Dec. 6. Young lord ſeems to be come home.

12. Maſking night, and after, coſt £17.

Jan. 4. Two pages; they play on lute and harp, and are richly dreſſed in ſattin.

5. Latymers.

18. A play; ribbons, paſteboard, &c. and joiner, £1. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Quere, if counteſs and earl did not remove from Byfleet to Hampton Court for a few days?

A lamb coſt 10*s.*

23. Earl again in France.

Portage and porterage; alibi.

Artichoaks ſcarce.

Clerk of kitchen has £7. per annum, and is different from caterer, who purchaſed accators, and was a kind of purveyor.

Feb. 18. Went to Leiceſter, with 16 horſes, 21 perſons, from Byfleet, Shepperton, Berkhamſted, Stratford, Wellingborough, &c.; was alſo at Ampthill, or Ampthill Lees.

March 6. Creeper, andiron.

16. Iſabella[6]-coloured ſtockings for pages, often after, and in ſecond volume.

21. Laid out at Leiceſter abbey £424. 8*s.* 6*d.*

22. Two ſalt-ſtoanes[7] for the dove-houſe, 3*s.* 9*d.*

1637, April 2. Earl of Warwick (her brother in law); elſewhere frequently.

May 7, lord Elgin[8] at Leiceſter abbey.

10. Holland for boot hoſe.

May 6. Lord of Newcaſtle's chamber at Leiceſter; ſo June 3.

12. Young lord at Leiceſter, for Hobbes is there.

June 6. Son Charles went to France, and is there Aug. 20.

July 20. Counteſs went to Hardwick.

29. She and young lord dine at Langwith Park.

31. Went to Chatſworth.

Dr. Belcankewell [Balcanqual][9] at Tutbury.

Aug. 6. Mr. Biſben has £60. per annum.

30. Counteſs ſeems to go to Hardwick.

Queen of Scots' chamber at Chatſworth.

Keepers of Peak Foreſt bring a ſtag Sept. 25.

Sept. 1. Counteſs and young earl went to the chamber in the Peak Foreſt.

20. Starching cloth for landerye 3*s.*

1635. At Ln^o^ Barm and before.

Counteſs at Bath.

A cord to maile[10] up a box.

Citrons 3*s.* apiece; alſo 3*s.* 6*d.*

King and queen ſupped at Devonſhire-houſe May 15, 1636.

Expence of diet was —	£.203	11	8
Banquet, — —	57	10	11
Other expences to king's ſervants, cooks, &c. —	56	6	0
More to carpenters, joiners, and Mr. Corcellis, —	37	10	9
Charcoal, — —	22	8	0
Billets, &c. — —	32	4	0
	409	11	4

The king gave 60 ounces of gilt plate at 5*s.* 4*d*; £16. when afterwards changed away.

July 4, 1636. Prince Elector ſupped at Byfleet.

Feb. 18. Pheaſants ſent to Leiceſter coſt 8*s.* apiece.

June 3, 1637. A marchpane £1. 10.

Dec. 15, 1635. To air by fire.

A ſmall maudling cup £1. 5*s.* 6*d.* plate.

Nov. 24. Newton, draper of Cheſterfield.

Mar. 1637. Seventy-five yards of vermilion for a bed.

May 27. Sleſe ſilk[11], and elſewhere.

	£.	s.	d.
Wages £436. 2*s.* £416. 16*s.* 8*d.*; but liveries, &c. came to	472	5	3
And next year,	508	15	0

Dec. 9, 1635. Dr. Cragg ſends a preſent.

SMALL BOOK.

Holland for ſmocks 3*s.* 6*d. per* ell, after 4*s.* 2*d.*; lace for them at 4*s.* 10*d. per* yard.

Perfumed cordevant gloves, 2*s.* 2*d.*

Lady Anne; ſhe was daughter, and married Rich.

Maſk at Putney £1.; door-keeper 2*s.* 6*d.*

Sir Paul Pinder[12], glaſs-man.

Dr. Nurſs, given to him £10.; and p. 34, £2.; and p. 45, £5.; and p. 79, ſhe pays apothecary's bill, apothecary's or doctor, £5.

Searching books at Worceſter houſe about Peak Foreſt 1*s.*

25. Half a year is £334. 17*s.* 6*d.*; next half year, £392. 14*s.* 11*d.*; ſo from Lady-day, 1652, to Michaelmas, £384. 15*s.* 3*d.*; from Michaelmas 1652, to Lady-day, £317. 11*s.* 9*d.*; to Michaelmas £481. 10*s.* 10*d.*; Lady-day, £300. 3*s.* 6*d.*; Michaelmas 1654, £275. 17*s.* 8*d.*; to Lady-day, 1655, £493. 13*s.* 4*d.*; to Michaelmas, 1655, £296. 5*s.* 9*d.*

30. Fuller, miniſter of Biſhopſgate, given him £2.

33. Lady Anne Cavendiſh[13]; a purſe for lady Betty.

33. Wax-book 6*d.* in wax-chandler's bill.

34. Mr. Harding ſeems to be a preacher; ſo p. 48.

35. Mr. Rich[14] is at Cambridge in March 1651; and the counteſs ſends him £5.

36. Gorgett, neck-handkerchiefs.

She lived at Roehampton; ſo p. 56, and afterwards.

Mr. Glenn is a perſon at good exhibition, and Mrs. Glenn has £5. given her; and Glenn and wife have £7. p. 177.

Gallery of heroic women[15], 18*s.* a book.

Hair-coloured ribbon alibi.

Spirit of ſack; and ſo before.

Lawn peake and ſquare lace for them.

---

[1] This artiſt has eſcaped the noble author of the Anecdotes of Painting.

[2] The ſeat of the Townſend family in Norfolk.

[3] The ſeat of the Chekes.

[4] The ſeat of the St. Johns.

[5] The ſeat of Henry lord Jermyn, treaſurer of the houſehold to king Charles I; maſter of the horſe to his queen; and afterwards earl of St. Alban's.

[6] Orange-coloured.

[7] A ſalt cat, as it is now called, is a maſs of clay mixed up with ſalt, and placed in pidgeon-houſes to induce the birds to drink, and to draw off their attention from tiling, to which they do great miſchief by picking out the mortar.

[8] Thomas, the firſt earl of Elgin, and lord Bruce of Whatton. He was brother to our counteſs.

[9] Dean of Rocheſter. See Archæologia, vol. XII. 122. 128. 129. & ſeq.

[10] To make it tight, to go upon a pillion.

[11] Ravelled ſilk.

[12] He was her neighbour in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet. See Gent. Mag. vol. LXV. p. 750.

[13] This was her niece; afterwards counteſs of Exeter. See p. 288.

[14] The hon. Robert Rich, the counteſs's grandſon, and the only ſon of Robert lord Rich by the lady Anne. He married, Nov. 11, 1657, the lady Anne Cromwell, youngeſt daughter to the Protector. He died Feb. 16, 1657-8, aged 23; his grandfather April 18, 1658; and his father May 29, 1659. Peck, Deſiderata Curioſa, vol. II. Book XIII. n. 13.

[15] A book by Le Moyne, ſo intituled.

Froſt-coloured.

She goes to various churches.

Lord Cavendiſh [1] in 1653 is her grandſon.

Poor have 2*s.* given at the gate every Sunday, p. 102; and on leaving town, &c.

Three lawn-pantletts £1. 4*s.* 6*d.*

Brief at Putney church 5*s.* anno 1653.

Luteſtring hingerline laced £1. 17*s.* p. 158; mohair hingerline with pleats, and buttons and loops, £1. 17*s.* 10*d.*

P. 110. She goes to ſee a dog-match at Hampton-court 1653.

111. Arris-powder one pound 1*s.* 6*d.*

119. Lord Warwick lives at Lees [2].

122. One pound of orange-powder 6*s.* for hair; p. 136.

143. To Mr. Maikerne, for a picture of General Cavendiſh, £8. 1654.

153. Noneſuch water.

164. Given to Dr. Myarne £3; ſir Theodore Mayerne, ſir Theodore Myron, p. 166, 1654. [3]

Given to Lake £3.

169. Dr. Harvey, for his opinion and writing of and to lord Cavendiſh, £2. 1*s.* 6*d.*

172. Dr. Nurſe £2.; more £3.; more £3. p. 181; more £10. p. 185.

178. Paid my lady Bruce for a fann handle ſet with ſmall diamonds and rubies, with two pendants ſuitable to it, £30; another afterwards coſts £33.

181. Given to Dr. Witherbourne £3; after £2. and £5. and £2.

188. Cedann, i. e. ſedan, 1654.

196. To Mrs. Gale, in new two-pences, one pound, 1655; this is elſewhere called ſmall-money.

197. For St. Martin's [4] ribbons, £.1 15*s.* 8*d.*

198. Upper gloves two pair, 4*s.* 6*d.*—N. B. often mentioned.

209. Lord Protector ſent a brief £. 1655; and the counteſs viſited lady Claypole.

217. Lady Oxford's picture and frame £12. 10.

225. Little ladies at Latimer's are Bruces, I think.

226. For bone-lace for ſix coyfs and croſs-clothes, and two handkerchiefs, and ſix under croſs-clothes, £4. 11*s.* 10*d.*

Holland at 12*s.* 6*d.* the ell, for handkerchiefs.

1655. Cloaths bought for lord Cavendiſh, £17. 12*s.*

Silver bone-lace at 5*s.* 8*d.* per oz. bought by oz.

Silver-plate bone-lace at 5*s.* 4*d.* alſo by yards 10*s.* 6*d.*

Donations are made to L. Ar. £20. at a time, and £10. 9*s.* Uſher archbiſhop of Armagh.

Mr. Rich is in France 1655.

Ribboning and ribbons.

Farrendon, a kind of ſtuff for petticoats.

Morella ſtuff for gown.

Ampthill belonged to Bruce; having been given by Charles II, 1660, to Robert Bruce, whom he created viſcount Bruce of Ampthill, and earl of Aileſbury.

Roehampton was purchaſed by Chriſtian counteſs of Devonſhire.

Account Book of CHRISTIAN counteſs of Devonſhire.

May 15, 1636. Charge of diet, and other neceſſary expences, for the king and queen's entertainment on the 12th of May, 1636:	£.	s.	d.
Paid for all ſorts of fowl and poultry, as appears by particulars, —	76	12	0
Paid for butcher's meat, —	18	4	11
Paid for freſh fiſh of ſeveral ſorts,	12	0	0
Paid for grocery, &c. uſed in the kitchen,	16	17	7
Paid for wine ſpent of all ſorts,	16	19	0
Paid for fruits and herbs, —	22	7	0
Paid for 240 pounds of butter ſpent,	6	0	0
Paid for 13 hundred and a half of eggs,	2	14	0
Paid for bread and flour ſpent,	5	10	8
Paid for milk and creams,	3	9	11
Paid for dry'd tongues, bacon, anchovy, &c. — —	3	18	4
Paid for oranges and lemons,	5	6	6
Paid for olives, capers, and ſallads, &c.	4	14	9
Paid for wax-lights ſpent,	8	17	0

Hitherto diet, which comes to £203. 11*s.* 8*d.*

Charges of the banquet.

Paid for making the 4 voiders, and 100 of baſkets, with ſilvering them, &c.	19	16	0
Paid for artificial flowers to adorn them,	7	10	0
Paid for the ſweet-meats of all ſorts, according to the particulars, —	30	4	11

Total of the banquet £57. 15*s.* 11*d.*

Several other charges about this entertainment, viz.

Given amongſt cooks and labourers,	30	14	0
Gifts and rewards to the king's ſervants and others, — —	21	0	0
Paid for two loads of charcoal 56*s.* and for four loads of faggots,	4	12	0
	317	8	7

Yet charges about the king's entertainment.

Paid for carpenters, joiners, and bricklayers work, according to bills,	8	15	2
Paid for ſeveral neceſſary things bought to uſe in ſeveral offices, parts of them yet remaining, —	5	18	7
Paid for portage of ſeveral things, both diet and things borrowed,	4	12	8
Paid for flowers and ſtrewings,	3	1	0
Paid for hire of hangings, carpets, &c.	4	0	0
Paid for the loan of water-pots, glaſſes, &c.	0	13	0
Paid (by Mr. Corcellis) for joiner's work, portage, &c. about this occaſion, as by his bill, — —	1	10	4
Given to Mr. Corcellis, for his pains herein, by my honourable lady's appointment, — —	10	0	0

Charges about beautifying the vault in Devonſhire houſe, London, againſt this time, viz.

Paid (by Mr. Corcellis) to Monſ. Le Soire, for the finiſhing about the great glaſs, with 14*d.* portage, —	4	1	2
Paid for painting and gilding it, &c.	1	12	0
Paid for painting the landſcape there,	5	10	0
Paid for joiners' work about the cornice of the glaſs, making frames for the two oval doors to ſtrain the painted canvas upon, for pedeſtals for the flower-pots, mending the doors there, for four fire-pans, &c. as by Mr. Corcellis's bills,	1	17	1
Paid for canvas and painting the two door-frames, — —	3	0	0
Paid for light Italian chairs for the vault to Mr. Buckatt, at 24*s.* per piece,	9	12	0
Paid for two large flower-pots for the vault, painted and gilded, bought of Mr. Chriſtmas, — —	3	10	0
The whole charge of this entertainment,	54	11	0

Yet charges about the entertainment, viz. according to particulars contained in the two former pages; and above on this page is £380. 9*s.* 7*d.*

The counteſs, when ſhe reſided at Byfleet in Surrey, July 4, 1636, entertained lord Holland, the Maids of Honour, and the Elector Palatine.

Given to my lord chamberlain's pantler for fruit that night my lord Holland ſupped at Byfleet, and for fruit at other times, — —	1	0	0
Given to my lord chamberlain's cooks,	3	10	0
Given a cook of Byfleet, —	0	5	0
Given for the hire of brakes, and pans and racks, — —	0	10	0
Given to the helpers in the kitchen,	0	5	0
Given to my lord chamberlain's man that brought the plate, —	0	10	0
Given to the wardrobe-keeper for the hire of two chairs, —	0	10	0

---

[1] William, afterwards the firſt duke.

[2] Lees priory in Eſſex.

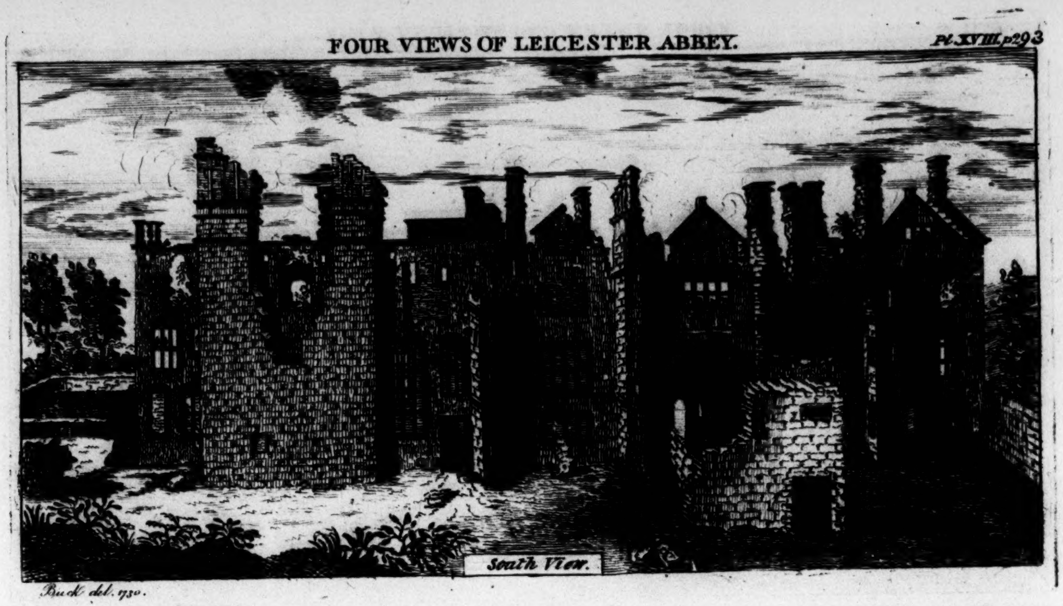
[3] Phyſician to the court.

[4] For the ornamenting of St. Martin's church at Leiceſter. See before, p. 290.

Paid

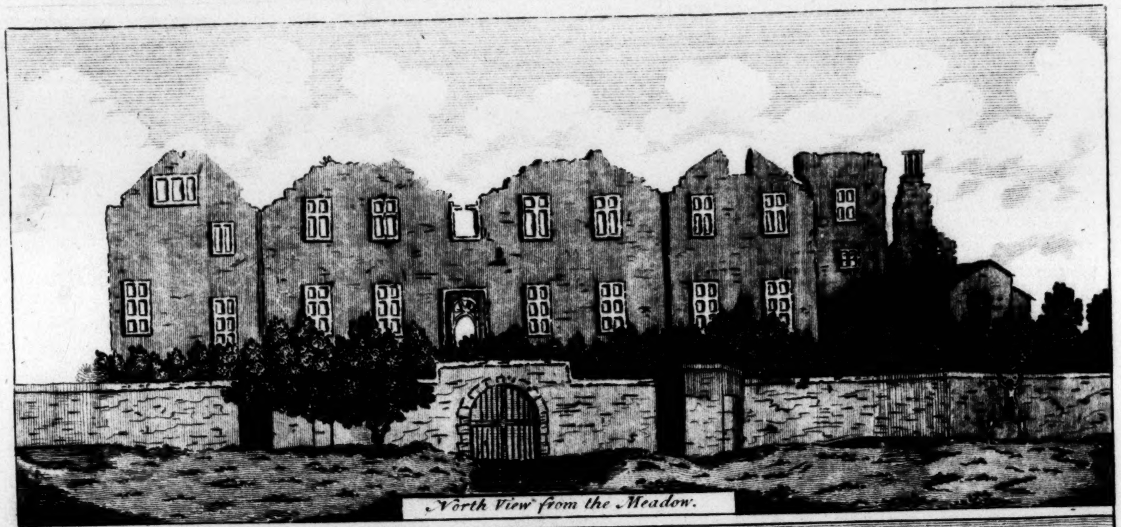
BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

FOUR VIEWS OF LEICESTER ABBEY.

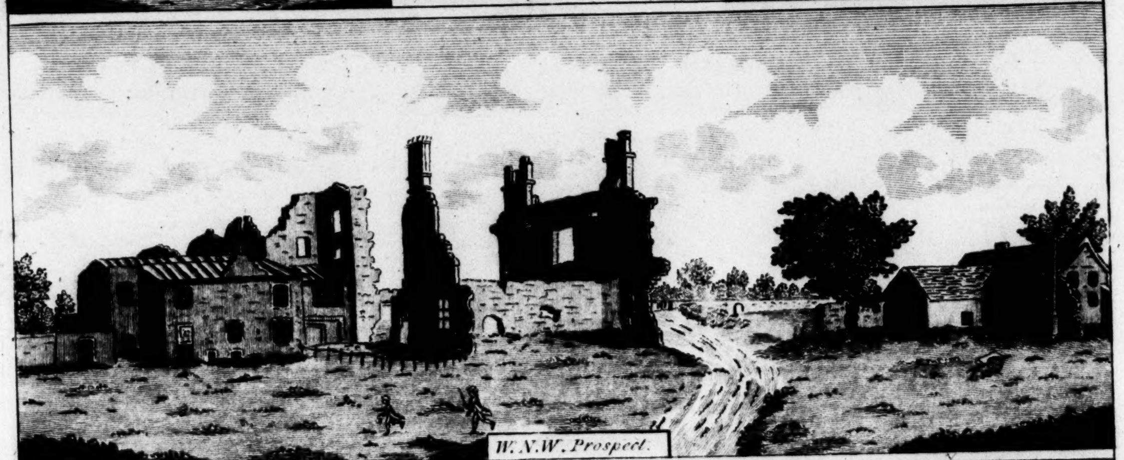


South View.

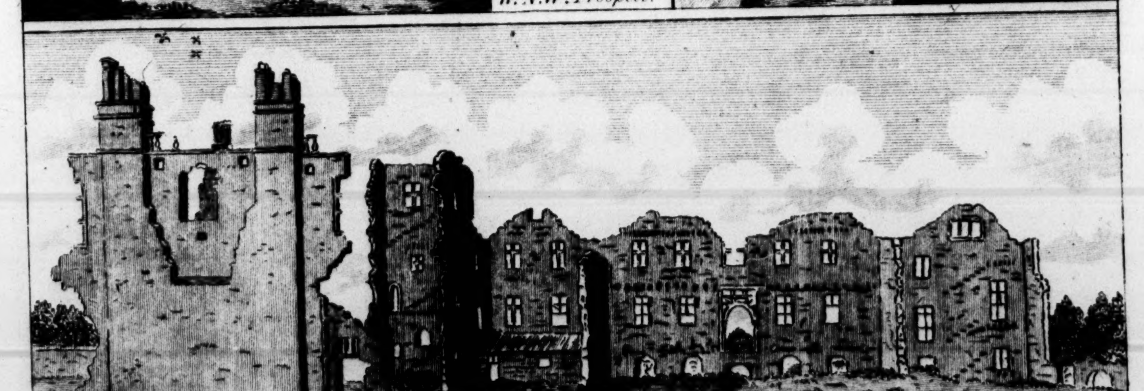
Buck del. 1730.



North View from the Meadow.



W. N. W. Prospect.



South View.

J. Pridden. del. July. 8. 1786. [illegible]

Paid for the hire of a tent, —	0	11	0
Given the keeper that brought the ſtag, by Mrs. Gale, — —	2	0	0
Given to the fidlers, —	2	10	0
Paid the maſon for moving a range,	0	3	0
Given to ſir Henry Maning's keeper that brought a buck, —	0	12	0
To the fidlers when the maids of honour ſupped at Byfleet, —	1	10	0
Paid for the hire of two carts to carry the tent and other things from Oatlands and back again, — —	0	10	0
Paid to the fidlers when the Prince Elector ſupped at Byfleet, —	1	10	0
Paid for the portage of divers things this time, — —	0	3	0
Paid for 24 ſmall cheeſes, —	0	3	0
To Mr. Cawood's maid that brought a preſent, — —	0	1	0

We find by the manuſcript Diary of Richard Symonds, that Leiceſter abbey was in 1645 the regular reſidence of the counteſs of Devonſhire; that it was occupied by the king as his head quarters from the 30th of May to the 2d of June; and that ſeveral of his officers received there the honour of knighthood [1]. It was nevertheleſs burnt by his troops [2], perhaps to prevent its being uſeful to the enemy; though the demolition has by ſome been attributed to envy on the part of Henry Haſtings the then lord Loughborough, who marched from Aſhby de la Zouch, where he was governor for the king, for the expreſs purpoſe of burning this noble manſion.

The ſite of Leiceſter abbey, after the death of the counteſs of Devonſhire, devolved to her eldeſt ſon William earl of Devonſhire [3]; who died at Roehampton Nov. 23, 1684; and was ſucceeded by his ſon William, who in 1694 was created duke of Devonſhire [4]; and died Aug. 18, 1707; leaving his property at Leiceſter to William the ſecond duke [5]; on whoſe death, June 4, 1729, it paſſed to William, the third duke; by whom, in the year 1733, it was alienated to lord William Manners (brother to the duke of Rutland); who gave it to his ſon John Manners, eſq.; and on his death, 1792, it deſcended to his ſon William Manners, eſq. who in 1793 was created a baronet, and is the preſent owner of the ſite of the abbey, with about 1500 acres of land. He is lord alſo of the manor of three pariſhes in Leiceſter, St. Mary's, St. Leonard's, and St. Margaret's (with its chapelry of Knighton).

A ſmall part only of the old houſe is preſerved for any uſeful purpoſe; a low building with a leaded roof; the remainder being merely a maſs of ruins [6]; to the Eaſt-ſouth-eaſt of which are three large cloſes walled in, with gates, and a handſome communication to each other. Theſe cloſes, where the traces of fiſh-ponds, terraces, walks, &c. may yet be ſeen, are chiefly uſed as orchards, being well ſtocked with cherries, &c.

Of the South front, copied in Plate XVIII. from Buck's view in 1730, the ſmall part now remaining will appear on comparing it with three other views taken by Mr. Pridden in 1786 [7]; namely,

1. A North view, from the meadow.
2. A Weſt-north-weſt view, ſhewing part of the North front, and an inſide view of the only remaining part of the South front.
3. Another South view, which ſhews the inſide of the North front.

The following admeaſurements of the buildings were communicated to me by the late Rev. Mr. Bickerſtaffe:

"The back of the Abbey-houſe is 42 yards long from the Soar end to the ovens; and thence, through a ſpace to continued foundations, 27 yards more of ſpace, a good part of which might be ſtables.

"A receſs within that part of the abbey-wall which is brick, and which embraces the graſs ground beyond the gardens, and is neareſt Leiceſter, has over the entrance a ſingle blank eſcutcheon, freeſtone, having three ſides equilateral, 8 inches and a half to its bottom, a pointed ſquare on an exergue ſcalloping, like the calix of a flower, half as wide as the eſcutcheon, the radii or rays three inches long. The freeſtone incloſure is 1 foot 5 inches, and has a laſt incloſure, exergue, or edging, of brick, two inches and a half thick. The entrance to this receſs, reſembling a door-way, is a yard wide, pointed at top of its arch, and paſſing through the wall, which ſeems two bricks' length in thickneſs, or a foot and a half. From the ground upwards it is 3 feet 4 inches, and then 9 inches to the point at top over the entrance. It goes farther backward, beyond the level of the wall, 1 foot

---

[1] See under Harborough, vol. II. p. 506.

[2] "The counteſs of Devonſhire's we demoliſhed with fire." Gutch's "Collectanea Curioſa," vol. I. p. 441.

[3] "This earl was ſo much a Cavendiſh in the very outward appearance, that Mr. Hobbes called him the image of his father, being of a comely ſhape and aſpect; and therefore he ended an epiſtle to him with a prayer, 'that it would pleaſe God to give him virtues ſuitable to the fair dwelling he had prepared for them.' He is ſaid to have been ſeaſoned with the juſt tincture of all private and public virtues, and to have made an early expreſſion of the ſevereſt loyalty, mixed with the nobleſt reſolution, in that famous occaſion of the earl of Strafford's bill, and many others; being then firm to the true intereſt of his prince and country. He followed the king in the North; and at York, on June 1642, was one of thoſe noble peers who ſubſcribed a declaration of their bearing teſtimony of his majeſty's frequent and earneſt declarations and profeſſions of his abhorring all deſigns of making war upon his parliament. When he ſaw a party in the two houſes too ſtrong to be ſatisfied, he ſupplied the king with money, attended him in his parliament at Oxford, and was one of the peers who ſigned there, on January 27, 1643-4, his majeſty's declaration of ſuch means as might probably ſettle the peace of the king; after which he lent him his own brother to take the field; and then retired beyond the ſeas, to wait for peace at home. This receſs could give him no repoſe; he was thruſt into the number of delinquents; his great eſtate was ſequeſtered; and when, by the mediation of his friends, an ordinance was depending for his compoſition, on October 23, 1645, order was given for his return from beyond the ſeas by a certain day. Though he had been ſo great a ſufferer for his loyalty, he ſought for no employment at court on the Reſtoration; but his majeſty ſhewed his confidence in him, by conſtituting him lord lieutenant of the county of Derby, Aug 20, 1660. In ſir William Temple's Letters, vol. II. p. 70, is a letter to lord Cavendiſh, dated July 18, 1669, relative to an attack made upon him at Paris, from which he extricated himſelf with ſpirit and honour. He lived in great plenty and reſpect, a true Engliſh peer, honoured by his prince, and beloved by the people; becauſe ſteady in the meaſures of maintaining the juſt prerogatives of the one, and the legal liberties of the other. Many perſons of honour, his cotemporaries, agree in the remembrance of him, that he was a man of as much conſcience and honour, religion and virtue, prudence and goodneſs, as they ever knew in the world. His tenderneſs and good nature to friends and relations was very exemplary. He was ſo extraordinarily fond of his grandſon, the ſecond duke, then a youth, that he could not be eaſy without him; and aſſiduouſly affected to have him as much in his company as poſſible. He was virtuous in his whole life, and prudent in all his affairs; improved his large inheritance, and took care to let it deſcend entire to his ſucceſſor.

[4] This noble duke had all the advantages of education, both by ſtudies and travels, and was a gentleman of graceſulneſs and gallantry, becoming a prince's court. The companion and guide of his travels was Dr. Killigrew, afterwards maſter of the Savoy, &c. who gave him a juſt and true reliſh in poetry, and all the refinements of ſenſe and wit. He was a poet, not by genius only, but by learning and judgement. The lord Roſcommon made him a conſtant reviſer of his verſes. He was a maſter of Horace, and would talk of the other antients with great reliſh and knowledge. He had nothing profane or indecent in any line. Between the wit and the gentleman he knew the difference, and nicely obſerved it.

[5] He was trained to the public ſervice from his youth; and in 1692 ſerved as a volunteer under king William in Flanders. As ſoon as he came of age, he was returned a member of the houſe of commons; and, on the peace concluded at Ryſwick, made a tour to France. He was elected one of the knights for the county of Derby in 1695, 1698, and 1700; and one of the knights for Yorkſhire in 1702, 1705, and 1707, when he ſucceeded to the peerage. While he was marquis of Hartington her majeſty conſtituted him captain of the yeomen of her guard; and, ſucceeding his father in his honours, the queen likewiſe conferred on him his places of dignity and truſt, with this moſt gracious expreſſion, "that ſhe had loſt a loyal ſubject and good friend in his father, but did not doubt to find them both again in him."

[6] "From ſo rich an endowment as the abbey of Leiceſter formerly poſſeſſed, we expected many beautiful remains, as it is ſtill in a kind of ſequeſtered ſtate; but in that expectation we were diſappointed. Not the leaſt fragment of a Gothic window is left; not the mereſt mutilation of an arch. Its preſent remains afford as little beauty as the ruins of a common dwelling." Gilpin, Northern Tour.

[7] Two different views, by Mr. Throſby, may be ſeen in Groſe's Antiquities.

4 inches, and more. The hollow overhead between the wall and the back part, meaſuring from the arch's point, is 1 foot 5 inches; the thickneſs of the ſtone or timber-ſeat was 8 inches; for, ſuch is the width of the chaſm in the lower part of the wall facing the entrance, where it ſeems to have been inſerted nine inches deep from the floor, or rather ground, within. On the back, about two inches up, appears an horizontal niche. It is by the way-ſide at preſent, facing the North, on which ſide the brick wall extends a great way to join the freeſtone part, but its other end is near the firſt houſe in the Abbey-gate. There the wall runs Weſt, having an ornamented vacant niche at the curve, and an arm of the old Soar before it, and ſoon loſes itſelf in the freeſtone continuation; which, after a ſhort progreſs the breadth of the Abbey-cloſe, bears Southerly, parallel with the Soar, ſo tutelary, ſo near, as ſometimes to waſh the mural foundation. Why the wall for a great extent on the North ſide the Abbey-paſture or graſs ground, is only brick, unfriended by a facing of water, and the oppoſite ſide coaſting with the Soar is freeſtone, I wiſh to account for: the interſecting freeſtone walls, which run North and ſouth, ſupply in ſome meaſure the impotence of the ſubſtantial wall of brick.

" Beginning to meaſure from the Abbey-gate end of the brick wall. To the firſt door 6 chains; to the ſeat under the radiated eſcutcheons one chain more lacking 2 yards; to the little gate beyond the two-leaved gate 23 chains; to the end of the wall from the beginning 26 chains, 44 links; the whole length, i. e. from Weſt to North. Then, beginning at the North end of the wall, are 5 chains to the firſt dome; but 10 chains 80 links to the centre of the ſecond dome; 14 chains 60 links to the middle of the dome at the Eaſt end, which contains the breadth in a line with the wall, which ſquares off from Eaſt to Weſt on the ſide of the Soar; 62 yards 2 feet 1 inch from the receſs to the door into the cloſe; 113 paced yards from the receſs to the end of the brick wall, where the ſtone one begins; 2 chains 85 links, 90 yards, from the ſtone wall to the door-ſeat; 34 feet from the gate to the dome on the other ſide, three ſquare outwards, three half feet three inches from the wall; 11 half feet two inches. To the end of this wall it may be 100 yards; no dome, or work, or pinnacle, the reſt of the way on this ſide. This ſide looks to the Northern road, through Mountſorrel, Loughborough, &c. It then ſquares from North to Weſt. About 60 yards, probably, from the end is a ſingle door by another high pair of gates, a yard and four inches wide, within the wooden door-frame, which is half a foot broad, two feet two or three inches thick: the ſtone wall at this door-place 11 half feet high; the door-place within the frame 62 half feet three inches; 16 half feet the interval; half a foot two inches one ſide-poſt of the ſecond great entrance; 20 half feet and four inches wide the two gates or folding doors. This wall goes on till it joins at a good diſtance the brick wall which has the receſs. No pinnacle or dome on this ſide; much ivy ſpreads ſeveral yards high and broad.

" On the Eaſt, in and on the wall, was a porter's lodge, a rotunda at top, lead-capt in my time, high folding-doors on its ſide leading to the Abbey, a few yards within; on the Weſt no lodge, but alſo lofty gates, leading to another ſide of the edifice; but no piece of water in front of either. The North-eaſt gate is convenient for the Northern and Eaſt by South London road, at an eaſy diſtance; the other gate ſeems rather deſigned to admit from Leiceſter, and is nearly as well ſituated for the Northern road traveller as the North-eaſt gate. No fortification, edifice, or pleaſure-houſe, on the Weſt; but the plain wall of ſtone proceeding a good way, till it meets the mural brick I have ſpoken of. I cannot ſee how the garriſon from Mountſorrel entered the Abbey; for, no walls on the Eaſt ſide or Weſt, which ſo readily occur, have been impaired; but they muſt either have forced the gates, or mounted the wall near a gate, and admitted their aſſociates, if they had not conſpirators within, and worked perhaps by night, or knew the place to be ungarriſoned, or but weakly. The wet ditch that goes to Belgrave bridge, commencing at St. Sunday's bridge, and rejoining Old Soar before its arrival at Belgrave, making the Abbey-meadow an iſland, but for a ſmall iſthmus or path in the Abbey-meadow, ſeems hardly the effect of accidental coincidence. Old Soar guards Leiceſter on the Weſt and North.

" At the garden's end, on the water's edge weſterly, three yards one foot broad, as meaſured by the eye, directing my walking-ſtaff on the bank on the oppoſite ſide, over an interval of a few yards of old Soar water, is a circular ſtone dome or ſummer-houſe, in the Abbey-meadow, as it is called, the old race-ground, on the other ſide the river (ſee plate XIX.); and which once afforded a pleaſing proſpect, at an eaſy diſtance, of the elegant tower-church of St. Margaret, being little more than the breadth of the meadow diſtant [1].

" Twenty yards from the circular dome, is a ſquare one ſtanding, like the other, not two yards in the river forward from the wall, with two loop-holes South-eaſt, and one on each ſide. From the ſame wall with the above two, and alſo on the garden's edge, another ſquare dome, ſtanding three yards or more continued in the water, perhaps 60 yards below the other, more than three yards broad from the wall to the front, in the water; and which front ſeems twice the length of the other, and is arched on each ſide, to humour the courſe of the river; a loop-hole is on each ſide, but a blind wall towards the meadow; a door in the wall about three yards from this neceſſary-houſe (I will call it) on the ſtream, and a flight of ſeven or eight ſteps. Some connoiſſeurs have ſeriouſly conſidered theſe domes as fortifications. One of them juts from the wall, reſting on an arch, a few yards upon Soar, calculated, I will venture to ſay, ' to give their daily cates a watery grave.'

" From this place a door on the Weſt by its North ſide pierces the ſtone wall running from South-Eaſt to North-weſt, ſeparating the garden from the graſs-ground, whoſe breadth meaſures from the end of St. Sunday's Bridge extra; as the wall from the garden continues ſtill on the Soar ſide, now with no domes, but a door at 40 or 50 yards diſtance, opening to a terrace of two or three yards breadth, with many loop-holes in the wall, which, as it advances to the town-ſide, with an interval of the Abbey-meadow, a quarter of a mile over, has many breaches, even to the ſurface of the earth, eſpecially ſeveral yards before it arrives at the junction of the wall which runs from the Soar Northerly, coaſting on its ditch, till it meets at not half the cloſe breadth on the Weſt ſide with the brick wall near the Abbey-gate.

" About 40 yards from it is a garden-wall, which runs from the Soar wall South eaſt to North-weſt, ſeemingly half a yard thick. Perhaps 20 yards from that, down the ſtream, preſenting five ſquares, is another dome, alſo from the wall, on the river, about as widely extended from the wall as the firſt at the other end, without loop-holes; but has an edging of three broken pinnacles like the wall, and of the ſame height; they ſeem too near each other to have been windows. At the end of this wall is the Abbey water-mill [2], and there the wall ſquares from South-eaſt to North-weſt; and at its angle a ſix-ſquare dome, with an equilateral window-frame near half a yard diameter, about the height of the wall, looking North-eaſt.

" Not 100 yards from this is another dome, three ſquare, to the North-eaſt, and edged, as the wall at top, about three yards jutting from the wall.

" One hundred yards farther is the porter's lodge, which commands the front view of the Abbey ruins; 17 feet three inches from this to the court-gate; i. e. from the two-leaved gate, which is 10 feet wide, and its top very high, ſo that a continuation of the wall covers it. This lodge has a loop-hole on the gate-ſide eight inches wide, two feet two inches long, three feet ſquare, about four feet from the wall outwards, but going much deeper backwards behind the wall, as a correſponding circle. Three yards two feet four inches is the breadth of its front."

---

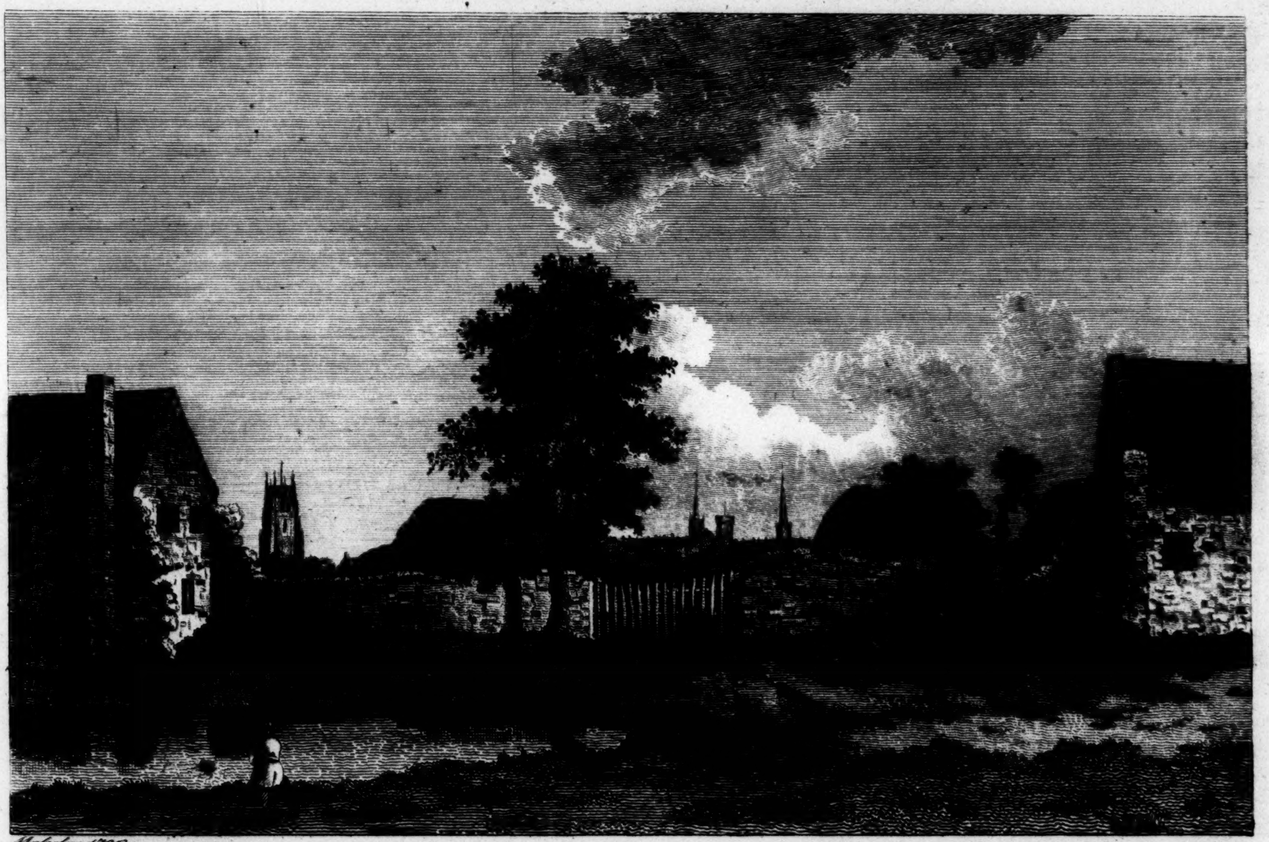
[1] In this meadow was found, in May 1796, the gold ring engraved in plate XVII. fig. 7; on which are deeply engraved the words en bon an. The ring, which appears to have been a new-year's gift, is in the poſſeſſion of Mr. J. Tailby, of Slauſton.

[2] This mill has lately been pulled down. It is ſhewn in plate XIX.

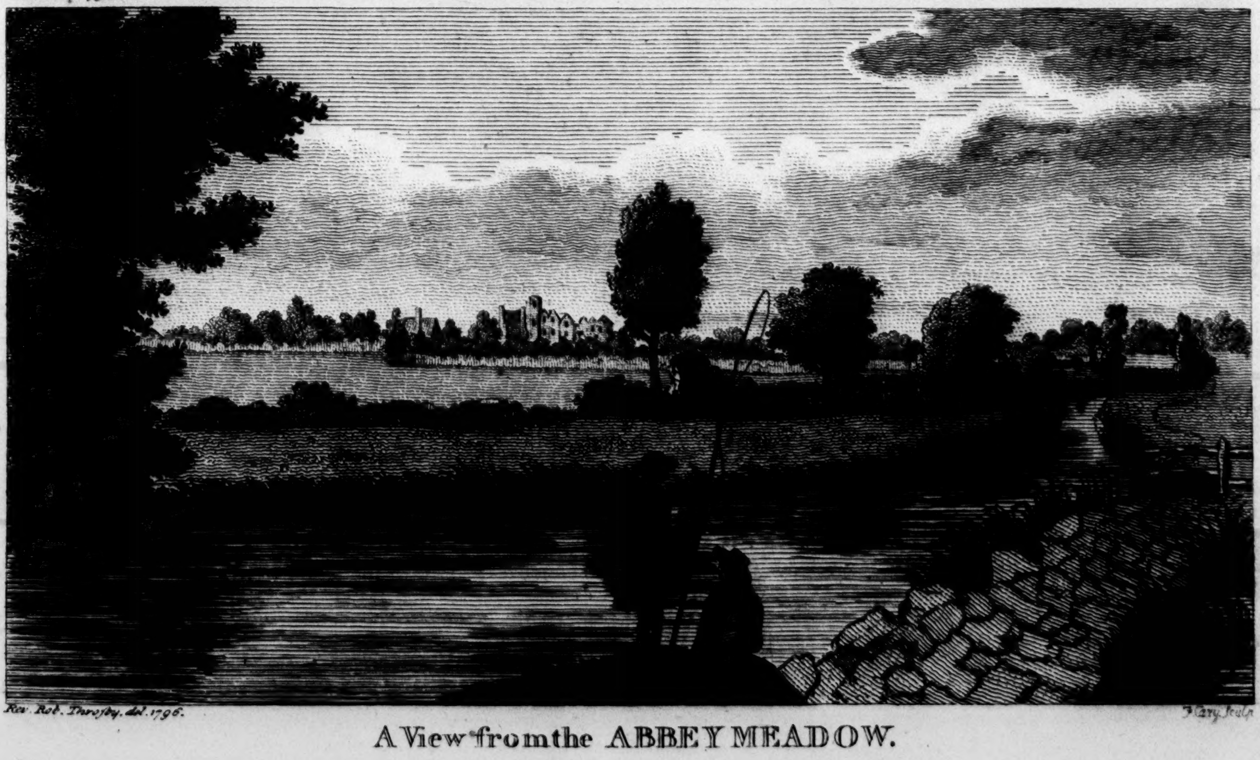
View of LEICESTER, and of the ABBEY WALL. Pl. XIX. p. 294.

Malcolm 1794

View of LEICESTER, taken within the ABBEY WALL.



Malcolm 1795



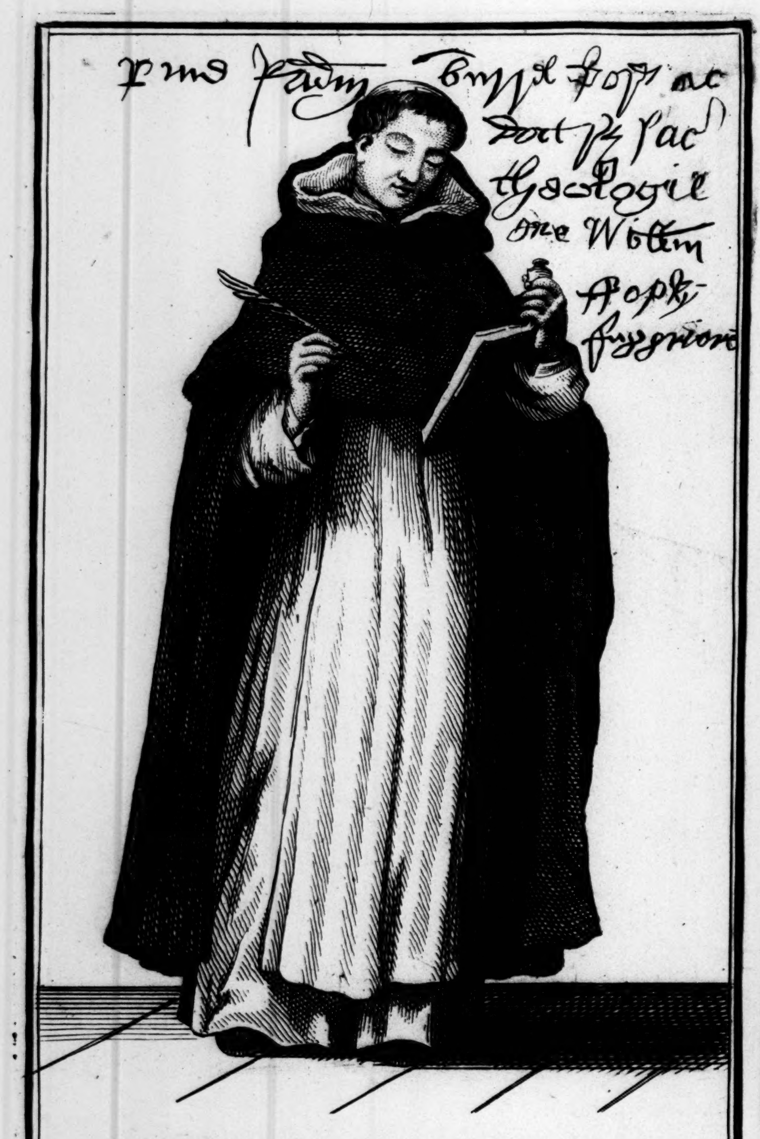
Rev. Rob. Throsby. del. 1796. J. Cary sculp.

A View from the ABBEY MEADOW.

BRITISH 12 JN 1923 MUSEUM

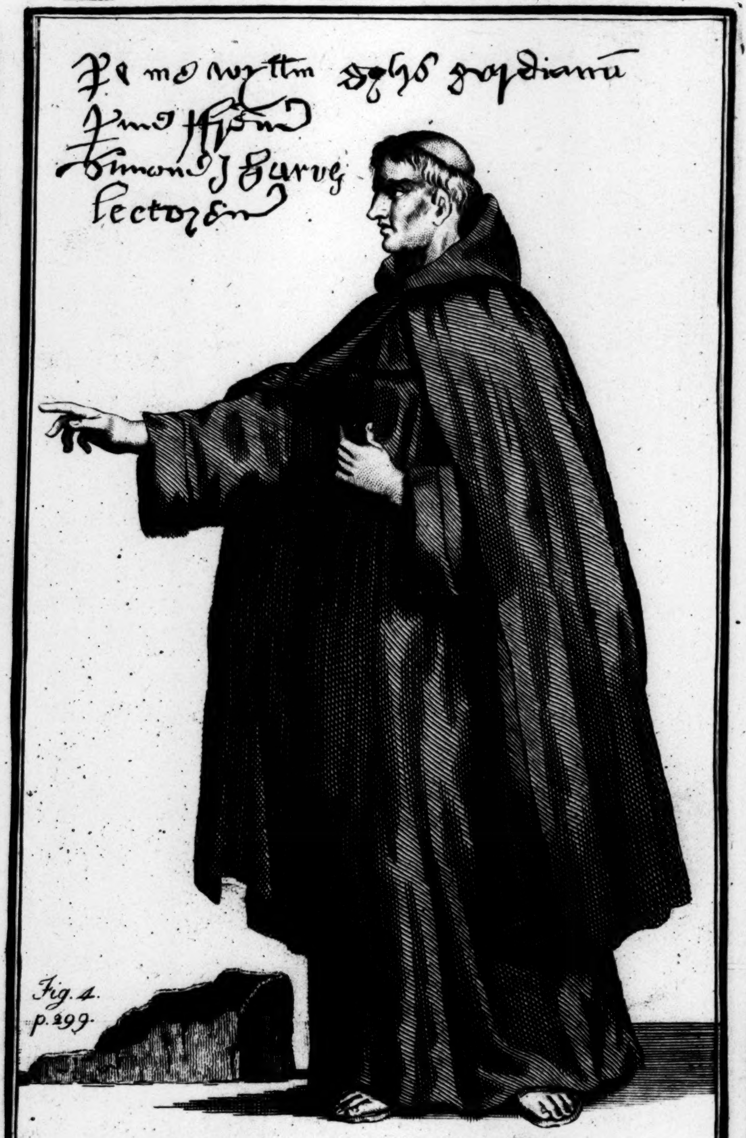
BRITISH
12 JN 923
MUSEUM

Pl. XX. p. 293.



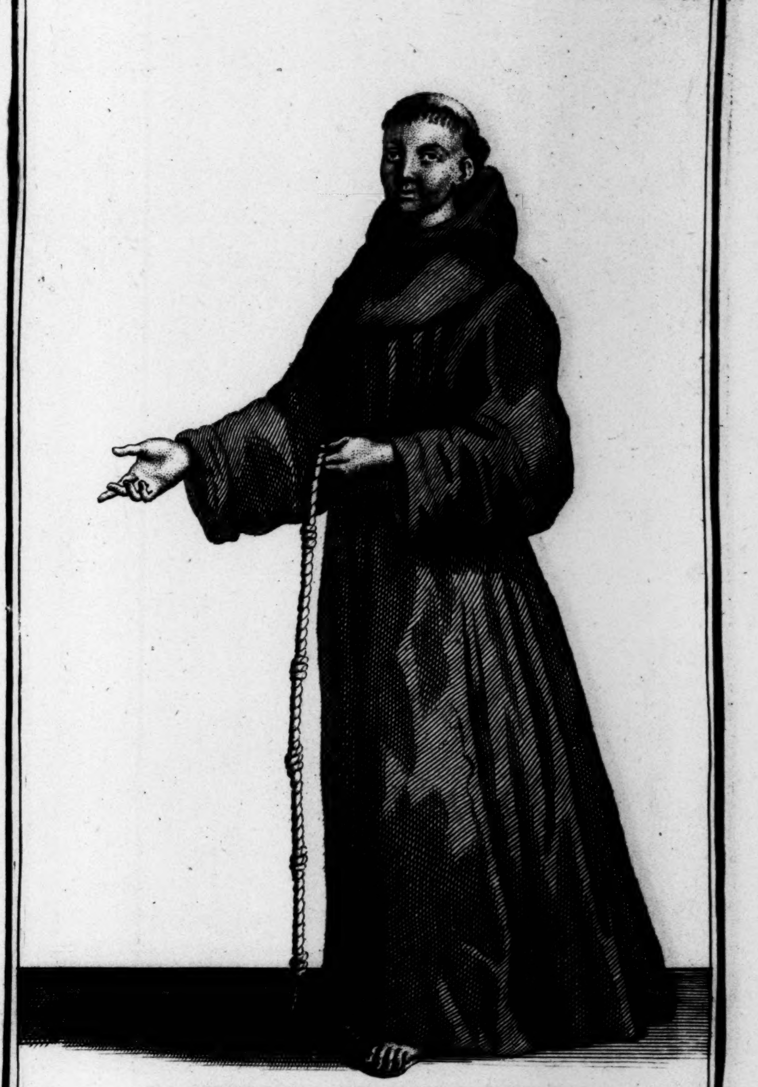
theologie
Wollm

1. A DOMINICAN OR BLACK FRIER OF LEICESTER.



gardianu
Harve
lectorem
Fig. 4.
p. 299.

2. A FRANCISCAN OR GREY FRIER OF LEICESTER.



3. A GREY FRIER, WITHOUT HIS MANTLE.

DOMINICANS, OR BLACK FRIERS.

The Mendicant Friers, it may be proper to obſerve, were divided into four diſtinct orders; which, according to Moſheim[1], were thus claſſed; the Dominicans, Franciſcans, Carmelites, and the Hermits of St. Auguſtine[2]. And the ſame learned writer obſerves, that "The enthuſiaſtic attachment to theſe ſanctimonious beggars went ſo far, that, as we learn from the moſt authentic records, ſeveral cities were divided or cantoned out into four parts, with a view to theſe four orders; the firſt part being aſſigned to the Dominicans; the ſecond to the Franciſcans; the third to the Carmelites; and the fourth to the Auguſtinians[3].

The order of Friers Preachers, or Black Friers, was begun in the pontificate of Innocent III, by St. Dominick, a Spaniard; who, being at firſt a canon, with a few who choſe to be his companions, inſtituted a new rule of ſtrict and holy living; and, leſt they ſhould grow ſluggiſh in the ſervice of God by ſtaying at home, he appointed them, in imitation of our Saviour, to travel far and wide to preach the Goſpel; which order Honorius III. confirmed; and Gregory IX. canonized the founder. They were called Dominicans, from the founder; Preaching Friers from their office to preach; and Black Friers from their garments. Their firſt habit was the ſame as that of the Auſtin canons; and they followed the ſame rule; but they ſoon changed their dreſs, and had a white caſſock, with a white hood over it; and, when they went abroad, a black cloak, with a black hood over their veſtments[4]. They came into England in 1217[5].

Frieries were ſeldom endowed, the friers being by their profeſſion mendicants, and to have no property. Yet many of them were large and ſtately buildings, in which many great perſons choſe to be buried. The ſite of thoſe in Leiceſter is well known; but there had been no tradition for a long time to diſtinguiſh preciſely their different orders. Hence, in the plan of Leiceſter drawn by Mr. Thomas Roberts (which for the part of a ſurveyor is very exact), we find near the North-gate the White[6] friers, and out of the Weſt-gate the Black[7] friers; which are ſo ſtyled by him on conjecture, becauſe he thought that he muſt give them ſome name or other, to diſtinguiſh them: but he is clearly miſtaken; for, it is believed, there never was any houſe of White friers in Leiceſter[8]; and the others are miſplaced[9].

The church of the Dominicans, or Friers Preachers, in Leiceſter, commonly called Black Friers of St. Clement's, or Le Blak Frears in le Aſhes[10], was founded by Simon de Montford the ſecond earl of Leiceſter of that name[11]; and was dedicated to St. Clement.

The Matriculus of 1220 informs us that the vicarage of St. Clement's was then ſo poor, that it was ſcarcely ſufficient to maintain a chaplain; and therefore it is likely that the church was providently given to theſe Friers Preachers to officiate in; and Mr. Carte ſuppoſed "in le Aſhes" related to the many aſh-trees which of old grew in their precincts, and that they had the title of St. Clement's becauſe ſituated in that pariſh. It appears from ſome old writings that a lane from the North-gate, turning Weſtward to the Friers adjoining, and then running Southward between the ſaid Friers and the back ſides of the houſes oppoſite to All Saints church, is called St. Clement's lane; and therefore it is probable that the church was ſituated in or near it; and that, upon its being demoliſhed, the pariſh was united to St. Nicholas, or All Saints, or partly to one, and partly to the other. The Matriculus of 1220 informs us, it was then ſo poor that it was ſcarcely ſufficient to maintain a chaplain[12].

In Mr. Le Neve's Regiſter relating to the church of Lichfield, there is a delegation to the guardians of the Friers Preachers[13] and Minors at Leiceſter, to hear and determine a difference about tithes (at Bakewell, it is believed, in Derbyſhire) between the dean and chapter of Lichfield and the prior and convent of Lenton in Nottinghamſhire, from pope Innocent IV. anno pont. 10°; and the guardian of the Friers Minors finiſhed the ſame "die Sabbati poſt Purificationem Sc̄e Marie, 1252[14]."

In 1285, Robert Willoughby and Alice his wife were benefactors to the Dominican priory at Leiceſter[15].

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum đni regis nec aliorum, licèt đnus rex concedat Roberto de Willouby & Alicie uxori ejus, quòd dant fratribus predicatoribus ville Leiceſtrie duas placeas in eâdem villâ; & quòd predicte placee terre tenentur de domino Edwardo comite Leic', per ſervitium ixđ. per annum, & continet in longitudine CIII pedes, & in latitudine LXXX[16]."

In 1321, Thomas earl of Lancaſter and Leiceſter was alſo a benefactor[17].

In 1337 and 1345, the poſſeſſions of this priory were confirmed by the letters patent of king Edward III[18].

In 1357, Henry duke of Lancaſter, earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leiceſter, granted to the Friers Preachers

---

[1] Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, Cent. XIII. chap. II. ſect. xxii.

[2] Somner ſays that the Eremites of St. Auguſtine was one, and the firſt, of the four orders of Begging Friers; but, in the funeral proceſſion, p. 299, the precedency is allowed to the Dominicans, and the Friers Eremites of St. Auguſtine follow the three other orders.

[3] Moſheim, ubi ſupra, ſect. xxiii. p. 53.

[4] See plate XX. fig. 1.

[5] "Hubert de Burgo earl of Kent was their prime patron, beſtowing his palace in the ſuburbs of London upon them, which afterwards they ſold to the archbiſhops of York, reſiding therein, till, by ſome tranſactions betwixt king Henry the Eighth and cardinal Wolſey, it became the royal court, now known by the name of Whitehall. Afterwards, by the bounty of Gregory Rokeſley, lord-mayor of London, and Robert Kilwarby, archbiſhop of Canterbury, they were more conveniently lodged in two lanes on the bank of Thames, in a place enjoying great privileges, and ſtill retaining the name of Black Friers. No fewer than fourſcore famous Engliſh writers are accounted of this order." Fuller, Church Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 270.

[6] Theſe ſhould have been called the Dominicans, or Black Friers.

[7] And theſe the Friers Eremites of St. Auguſtine.

[8] See, however, the funeral proceſſion deſcribed in p. 299.

[9] They are rightly diſtinguiſhed in our map, which is that of Dr. Stukeley. See plate III. p. 6.

[10] Rymer, vol. XIV. p. 621.

[11] Stow's MS. Rec. 18 Edw. III.

[12] See the Introductory Volume, p. lv.

[13] The word Prædicatores was not excluſively appropriated to this order of mendicants; the Franciſcan or Grey Friers being ſtyled Prædicatores as well as Minorites. This is evident from different paſſages cited by Moſheim (Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, Cent. XIII. Part II. cap. 11. l. xxvi. note x.) from the Hiſtoria Major of Matthew Paris.—"Fratres Minores & Prædicatores (ſays he) invitos ut credimus, jam ſuos fecit dominus papa"—"non ceſſavit papa pecuniam aggregare, faciens de Prædicatoribus & Minoribus, etiam invitis, non jam piſcatores hominum, ſed nummorum." "Erant Minores & Prædicatores magnatum conſiliarii & nuncii"—"Facti ſunt eo tempore Prædicatores & Minores regum conſiliarii & nuncii ſpecialis." And in Du Cange, ad voc. Minores—"Sub his diebus Prædicatores, qui appellati ſunt Minores, favente papâ Innocentio, emergentes terram reppleverunt, &c. &c. Conrad. Abbas Uſperg. ann. 1219."

[14] Tanner's Notitia Monaſtica.

[15] Inq. 13 Edw. I. de duabus placeis in villâ Leiceſtriæ. Peck, MSS. vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 4938.)

[16] Peck, MSS. vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 4938. p. 12.); ex Inq. ad quod dampn. 13 Edw. I. 1285. N° 55. Leic.

[17] Pat. 15 Edw. II. p. 2. m. 14. confirm. cujuſdam placæ terræ in villâ de Leyceſter, conceſſ. per Thomam comitem Lancaſtr' fratribus prædicatoribus."

[18] Pat. 10 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 2. vel 3. Pat. 18 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 2. vel 3.

chers of Leiceſter liberty to fiſh three days weekly (Wedneſdays, Fridays, and Saturdays) in the river Soar, with a net of convenient meſh, ſo as not to deſtroy the young fiſh:

"As touz ceux qe ceſtes l̃res verront ou orront, Henri duc de Lancaſtre, conte de Derby, de Nicole, & de Leiceſtre, & ſeneſchal d'Engleterre, ſalute en Dieu. Sachez nous de ñre grace eſpeciall avoir done conge a nos c̃hs en Dieu le prior & le convent de Frers Precheurs de Leiceſtre, qu'ils puiſſent cheſcone ſymaigne trois jours, c'eſt aſſavoir, Mykerdy, Vendredy, & Samedy, pecher ove une fluv de convenable meſh ſanz deſtruction de ẽſcoyn peſceon, & meanment ꝑvable de reſone, en la ryvere de Sore deſouz lour clos, & iſſuñ qu'ils peſchent de jour, & nemye de noct. En teſmoignage de quele choſe, nos avons fait faire ceſtes noz l̃res patentes, enſeallez de ñre ſeal, & doñ a ñre chaſtel de Leiceſter, le darrein jour de Fevrier, & l'an du regne nr̃e ſeigneur le roi Edward Tiers puis le Conqueſt trentiſme[1]."

William Layton[2] was prior of this convent in 1505; and to him, and his ſucceſſors, the corporation of Leiceſter, by act of common hall, Sept. 21, in that year, granted the paſture of two cows in their common paſture, called the Cow hey; for which the prior paid 20 marks, and engaged that his houſe ſhould pray for them for ever. In 1531, the wardens and company of ſhoe-makers agreed to pay them yearly ten marks, over and above the uſual offering duties, to have their prayers.

Ralph Burrell, the laſt prior, ſurrendered this convent[3] 10 November, 1539.

"Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus, &c. Frater Rad̃us Burrell, prior domûs ſive prioratûs Sancti Clementis de Leyceſter, ordinis Sc̃i Dominici, vulgariter nuncupat' Le Blak Frears in le Aſhes, in com. Leyceſter, alias dictus frater Rad̃us Burrell, prior domûs ſive prioratûs fratrum predicantium, vulgariter nuncupat' le Blakfreears de Leyceſter, in com' Leic', & ejuſdem loci conventus, &c. Nov. 10, anno regni 30°.

Per me Rad̃m Burrell, priorem, ac doctorem ſac' theologie.
Per me Will'm Hopkyn, ſub-priorem.
Per me Johannem Harford.
Per me Ricardum Yngylby.
Per me Elizeum Jem.
Per me Johannem Hern.
Per me Johannem Kok.
Per me Ric̃um Blaſvyn.
Per me Edwardum Whonarck.
Per me Robertum Sutton."

The miniſters accompts in the Augmentation-office thus deſcribe the lands and poſſeſſions of the late houſe of Dominican Friers (fratrum Dominicalium) in the town of Leiceſter[4].

"The account of Thomas Catelyn, gent. collector of the rents thereof.

He anſwers for £2. for a houſe within the precinct of the late houſe of friers aforeſaid, called Robert Orton's Houſe, with the appurtenances, together with the gardens and cloſes, and alſo with a grove of willows near the Soar, and alſo with the church-yard there, in the tenure of Chriſtopher Lambrige; as alſo the herbage of all lands within the limits and precincts of the ſaid houſe; demiſed to Thomas Catlyn, gent. by indenture under the common ſeal of the ſaid late houſe, dated 10th September, 30 Henry VIII. exemplified by decree of the Court of Augmentations, under the decree of the chancellor and council of that court; to have and to hold, to the ſaid Thomas Catlyn and his aſſigns, from the day of the date of the indenture, for ſixty years, at the rent of 40*s*. at Lady-day and Michaelmas; with a covenant that the leſſee ſhall have 'Hedgboote, Lope, Tope, Croppe,' of all manner, woods and underwoods. The leſſee to be charged with all repairs, 'exceptis lapidibus, maeremio, fundulis, & clavis.'

The ſite of the late houſe aforeſaid.

He anſwers alſo for 20*d*. for rent of the Cloiſter-yard, with the reſidue of the ground and land moſt apt for tenements, within the precinct of the ſaid houſe, reſerved in the hands of the prior and convent.

Sum total, — £2. 1*s*. 8*d*."

Leland, ſpeaking of the religious houſes here ſays, "I ſaw in the quire of the Blake Freres the tumbe of . . . . and a flat alabaſter ſtone, with the name of lady Iſabel, wife to ſir John Beauchamp of Holt. And in the North-croſs iſle a tombe having the name of Roger Poynter, of Leiceſter, armid, and another tombe there of a knight without ſcripture. Theſe things brevely I markid at Leyrceſter[5]."

Aug. 7, 1547, the king granted to Henry marquis of Dorſet and Thomas Duport, and the heirs of the marquis, the whole houſe, and the ſite of it, together with ſuch fiſhings as can be proved to have been belonging to the friers in Leiceſter.

"Septimo die Auguſti, 38 Hen. VIII. rex conceſſit Henrico marchioni Dorſet & Thome Duport, & heredibus marchionis, totam domum & ſcitum domûs dudum fratrum Dominicalium, vulgariter nuncupat' les Black-freyers[6]."

At the entrance of this friery[7] from the North-gate of the town, upon Mr. Noble's erecting a houſe there, in 1718, was found a pot full of Roman coins.

In 1754, two elegant moſaic pavements, with the fragment of a third, were found in a piece of ground in this friery[8], then belonging to the late Rogers Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, who died March 27, 1795[9]; and now to the younger branches of his family. Some other pavements alſo ſeem to run under the preſent building[10].

"The North Bridge, now commonly called St. Sunday's Bridge, has eight wet arches, the midmoſt high and wide; two more on the town ſide, ſmall and uſeleſs, obſtructed on both ſides by dyers' buildings, and made-ground. It is 98 yards one foot long, five yards two feet wide; parapet walls about a yard high, their thickneſs one foot two inches. One of its arches, the neareſt the town, is pointed; the other nine are round. From the top of the parapet to the water is four yards three quarters; the common depth of the water one yard eight inches, near the middle of the bridge, by the middle of the arch. I believe that, when the two dry arches of Sunday's Bridge poſſeſſed each a ſtream, the waters ſupplied a channel, or wet ditch, on the South-eaſt edge of the Abbey-meadow; as the other arches, the river, or North-weſt current, by the Abbey; and it became an iſland, in the manner of the Old Soar and Back Soar, whoſe water circulates here, running off by the North-weſt ſide of Belgrave through its bridge[11]."

---

[1] Copied by Mr. Carte, 1716, from the original deed, then in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Thomas Noble of Leiceſter.

[2] "Not Cleyton, as in the Addenda to Willis's Hiſtory of Abbeys, p. 328." Mr. Cole of Milton, MS.

[3] See the ſeal affixed to this ſurrender, plate XVII. fig. 10; and the hand-writing of the prior and ſub-prior, plate XX.

[4] Communicated by John Caley, Eſq. F. S. A. and keeper of the records in that office.

[5] Itinerary, vol. I. p. 16.

[6] From a deed communicated to Mr. Carte, by Mr. T. Noble, in 1710.

[7] See before, p. *4; where the coins are ſaid to have been found in the White friers; a miſtake accounted for in p. 295.

[8] From this ſpot they were traced under the ſtables of the Bath, now called Vauxhall.

[9] Gent. Mag. vol. LXV. p. 352.

[10] See before, p. 11; and plates VII. VIII. IX.

[11] Mr. Bickerſtaffe, MS. See before, p. 294.

FRANCISCANS, OR GREY FRIERS.

St. Francis was born of noble extraction at Aſſiſe in Umbria, a province of Italy[1]. His order, called Minores, was confirmed by Innocent III. in 1207; by Honorius III. about 1220; and by Gregory IX. in 1229. They firſt came into England in 1224, two years before the death of St. Francis[2]; and, when their order flouriſhed here, this province was divided into ſeven diſtricts, called cuſtodies; of which the fifth was the cuſtody or wardenſhip of Oxford, which had eight monaſteries; Oxford, Reading, Bedford, Stamford, Nottingham, Northampton, Leiceſter, and Grantham[3]. They were called Franciſcans from their founder; Grey Friers from their cloathing; and Friers minors out of their pretended humility. Their habit was a ſingle coat of grey colour, girt with a cord, and reaching down to their ancles, with a cowl of the ſame, and a cloak over it when they went abroad[4]. They went barefoot, and poſſeſſed nothing, but lived on charity.

Their priory at Leiceſter was founded by Simon Montfort the ſecond earl of Leiceſter of that name. In ſome collections, however, made by Mr. Stow (a MS. formerly in the poſſeſſion of John Anſtis, eſq. Garter king of arms) out of the records of 23 Edward III, the houſe is ſaid to have been founded by one Gilbert Luenor and Ellen his wife[5]; and Mr. Peck, in one of his MSS. mentions John Pickering, of Stampwick, either as the founder or as an early benefactor.

This priory ſtood on the South ſide of St. Martin's church-yard, towards which there is a portal remaining, but all the other building is quite demoliſhed.

Their church was probably that mentioned in Charyte's Rentale as "Eccleſia Sanctæ Trinitatis," which is plainly deſcribed to be within the pariſh of St. Martin; and is probably the ſame that is ſketched in the funeral proceſſion exhibited in plate XVII. fig. 11.

In 1252, the guardian of this houſe made an award in a diſpute concerning tithes between the church of Lichfield and priory of Lenton[6].

In 1402, the maſter of the Friers Minors of Leiceſter, being convicted of treaſon, was hanged at Tyburn, at the ſame time with ſir Roger Clarendon, a natural ſon of the famous Black Prince. Stevens[7] ſays, that, in 1402, ſome affirmed that king Richard II. was alive, and a conſpiracy was diſcovered, for which ſome were put to death; among theſe, ſome were Grey friers; of which one Richard Friſeley, doctor of divinity, being aſked what he would do if king Richard were preſent, anſwered, "that he would fight in his quarrel againſt any man, even to death;" whereupon he was drawn and hanged in his religious habit[8]. Shortly after, ſir Roger Clarendon, baſtard ſon of the Black Prince, and with him a ſquire and yeoman, were beheaded; and eight Grey friers hung and beheaded at London, and two at Leiceſter; all which had publiſhed king Richard to be alive[9].

William of Leiceſter, a Franciſcan frier, educated at Oxford, is noticed by Wood as an early prælector at Hereford[10].

Brother Gregory de Roſellis, of this order, and bred in the ſchool at Oxford, was prælector in their priory at Leiceſter[11].

Robert of Leiceſter[12], a frier of this order, was educated at Oxford, where he obtained the degree of D. D. and became afterwards prælector in divinity in the Franciſcan priory in his native town. Leland ſays of him, "Splendidam ex literis gloriam ſibi comparavit, quo titulo inter Franciſcanos totus eluxit. Scripſit "Commentarios" Longobardum illuſtrantes; "Quodlibeta" etiam, ac libellum "de paupertate Chriſti." He wrote alſo "De computo Latinorum ad Ricardum Swinfeld epiſcopum Hereford. tom. i." Two works of his are preſerved in the Bodleian Library (Digb. 212.) 1. "De ratione temporum, ſive de computo Hebræorum, aptato ad kalendarium Latinorum," divided into four parts; and "De computo Hebræorum, lib. i." A MS. in Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, mentions alſo, by this author, "Lecturas ſcripturarum lib. i;" and "Diſtinctiones, lib. i." He died at Lichfield in 1348, and was buried there in the Franciſcan priory[13].

Maſter John of Leiceſter, parſon of Whethamſted, obtained the privilege of that manor temp. Edward I.[14]

Richard of Leiceſter (it is not quite clear that he was a Franciſcan) wrote "De articulorum ſimboli diſtributione ſecundum Numerum Apoſtolorum;" a MS. formerly preſerved in the library of Sion College[15].—This ſeems to be the "maſter Richard Rider, of Leiceſter," whoſe father's tomb Leland noticed in St. Mary's church; the ſame that in thoſe dayes, as apperith by his works, was a great clerke[16]."

Peter Swynerfled, the 8th provincial of the Grey Friers in England, and William Nottingham[17], S. T. P. the 19th provincial, were both buried in the church of this priory[18].

Adam Bill was warden 1521[19]; but the laſt warden was William Gyles, who, with ſeven other friers, ſurrendered his convent 10 Nov. 1539.

"Frater Willus Giles, gardianus domûs ſeu prioratûs Sancti Franciſci de Leiceſtr', ordinis Sc̄i Franciſci, vulgariter nuncupat' le Gray Freers in com' Leic', alias dictus Wills Giles, prior domûs ſive prioratûs vulgariter nuncupat' le Gray Freers de Leyceſtr', in com' Leyc', & ejuſdem loci conventus. Nov. 10, anno regni 30°.

Per me Wyllum Gylys, gardianū.
Per me fratrem Simonem Harve, lectorem.
Per me fratrem Henricum Schepzed.
Per me fratrem Johannem Standyſche.
Per me Robertum Aſſtun.
Per me Radulphum Hyryk.
Per me Wyllum Abbot.

Recognitum fuit hoc preſens ſcriptum per ſupranominat' capitulum & conventum 13° die Novembris, anno triceſimo, coram nobis, Joh̃e Catlyn, Georgio Aſheby, & Joh̃e Smith, commiſſionariis d̄ni ñri regis, &c.[20]"

In Speed's Catalogue, no revenues are accounted for as belonging to this houſe; whence they are ſuppoſed to have ſubſiſted upon alms[21]; but the Miniſters Accompts in the Augmentation office thus deſcribe their lands and poſſeſſions[22]:

---

[1] Matthew Paris, p. 286.
[2] Batteley, Antiquities of Canterbury, p. 54.
[3] Stevens, Monaſticon, vol. I. p. 95, 96.
[4] See their dreſs, with and without the mantle, in plate XX. fig. 2, 3.
[5] Tanner, Notitia Monaſtica.
[6] See before, p. 295.
[7] Monaſticon, vol. I. p. 112.
[8] Stow's Chronicle, p. 347.
[9] Ibid.
[10] Hiſt. & Antiq. Univerſitatis Oxon. p. 69.
[11] Stevens, vol. I. p. 127.
[12] Another Robert of Leiceſter was archdeacon of Ely 1238—1241. See Le Neve, p. 73.
[13] Tanner's Bibl. Brit. p. 636.
[14] Salmon's Herts, p. 146.
[15] Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 636.
[16] Itinerary, vol. I. p. 16.
[17] William of Nottingham, a canon and chanter of York cathedral. None of his works are printed; but there are ſeveral of them in the libraries of England; and, among others, ſome Queſtions upon the Four Goſpels, Reflections upon all the Goſpels of the Year, Queſtions upon the Lord's Prayer, and a Treatiſe againſt the Errors of Pelagius. He died Oct. 5, 1336. Dupin, 14th Cent. p. 63. Leland's account of him, with notes, is in Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 362. Le Neve, Faſti, p. 316, puts him among the præcentors of York. Having gone through the office of profeſſor, he ſucceeded Richard in that of provincial miniſter; in the catalogue of which miniſters, we have theſe words concerning him: "B. William Notyngham, doctor of Oxford, who made the famous Expoſition on the Four Goſpels, lies at Leiceſter." Stevens, Monaſticon, vol. I. p. 132.—Quære de Will'o Nottingham circa 1330. Bale, p. 414.
[18] Hiſtory of the Grey Friers, part 2. p. 12; and Stevens, vol. I. p. 97. a.
[19] Mr. Cole of Milton, MS. in a letter to Dr. Farmer.
[20] From the original ſurrender in the Augmentation-office. See the ſeal, plate XVII. fig. 11; and a fac-ſimile of the handwriting of the guardian and prælector in plate XX.
[21] Hiſtory of the Grey Friers, London, 1726, 4to, part 2. p. 29.
[22] Communicated by Mr. Caley.

Rents of aſſize.

"Four ſhillings for free-rent of the heirs of William Wigſton, for land and ſoil, where a certain houſe of poor is ſituated.

Site of the late houſe, with the lands within the precinct.

Twenty ſhillings for the rent of the ſoil and land where the buildings of the ſaid houſe were conſtructed, with all other lands and gardens within the precinct of the ſame, being in the hands and occupation of the late prior and co-brethren.

Sum total — £1. 4*s*."

"The Gray Freres of Leirceſter ſtode at the ende of the hoſpital of Mr. Wigeſton. Simon Mountefort, as I lernid, was founder thereof; and there was byried king Richard III. ſlayne at Boſworth-field, and a knight caullid Mutton, ſumtyme mayre of Leyrceſter [1]."

"The dead corps of Richard was as ſhamefullie carried to the towne of Leiceſter as he gorgeouſlie the day before with pompe and pride departed out of the ſame towne; for his bodie was naked and deſpoiled to the very ſkin, and nothing left about him, not ſo much as a clout to cover his privy parts; and was truſſed behind a purſevant of arms, one Blanch Senglier, or White-boar, like a hog or calf; his head and arms hanging on the one ſide of the horſe, and his legs on the other ſide; and all beſprinkled with mire and bloud, he was brought to the Graie Friers church within the town, and there laie like a miſerable ſpectacle [2]; and afterward, with ſmall funeral pomp, was there interred [3]."—"But to leave the tyrant as he died, you ſhall underſtand king Henry the Seventh cauſed a tomb to be made, and ſet up over the place where he was buried, with a picture of alabaſter repreſenting his perſon [4]; which at the ſuppreſſion of that monaſtery was utterly defaced: ſince when, his grave, over-grown with nettles and weeds, is not to be found; only the ſtone-cheſt wherein his corpſe lay is now made a drinking-trough for horſes, at a common inn in Leiceſter, and retaineth the only memory of this monarch's greatneſs. But his body (as is reported) was carried out of the city, and contemptuouſly beſtowed under the end of Bow-bridge [5], which giveth paſſage over a branch of Stowre, upon the Weſt ſide of the town. Upon this bridge (the like report runneth) ſtood a ſtone of ſome height; againſt which king Richard, as he paſſed toward Boſworth, by chance ſtruck his ſpur; and againſt the ſame ſtone, as he was brought back, hanging by the horſe's ſide, his head was daſhed and broken, as a wiſe woman forſooth had foretold; who, before his going to battle, being aſked of his ſucceſs, ſaid, that where his ſpur ſtruck his head ſhould be broken. But theſe are but reports [6]."

"After revenge and rage had ſatiated their barbarous cruelties upon his dead body, they gave his royal earth a bed of earth, honourably, appointed by the order of king Henry the Seventh, in the chief church of Leiceſter, called St. Mary's, belonging to the order and ſociety of the Grey Friers; the king in ſhort time after cauſing a fair tomb of mingled-coloured marble, adorned with his ſtatue, to be erected thereupon; to which ſome grateful pen had alſo deſtined an epitaph, the copy whereof (never fixed to his ſtone) I have ſeen in a recorded manuſcript book chained to a table in a chamber in the Guildhall of London, which (the faults and corruptions amended) is thus repreſented, together with the title thereunto prefixed, as I found it [7]:

"Epitaphium Regis Richardi Tertii, ſepulti ad Leiceſtriam, juſſu et ſumptibus S^{ti} Regis Henrici Septimi.

"Hic ego, quem vario tellus ſub marmore claudit,
  Tertius a juſtâ [a] voce Richardus eram.
Tutor eram patriæ [b], patrius pro jure nepotis;
  Diruptâ, tenui regna Britanna, fide.
Sexaginta dies binis duntaxat ademptis
  Æſtateſque tuli tunc [c] mea ſceptra duas.
Fortiter in bello certans [d] deſertus ab Anglis,
  Rex Henrice, tibi, ſeptime, ſuccubui.
At ſumptu, pius ipſe, tuo, ſic oſſa dicaras [e],
  Regem olimque facis regis honore coli.
Quatuor exceptis jam tantum, quinque bis annis,
  Acta trecenta quidem, luſtra ſalutis erant.
Anteque Septembris undenâ luce kalendas,
  Reddideram rubræ jura petita [f] Roſæ.
At mea, quiſquis eris, propter commiſſa precare,
  Sit minor ut precibus pœna levata [g] tuis."

⁂ Various readings in this epitaph, in a copy given by Sandford, p. 435, from the Heralds College MSS. vol. I. p. 3:
[a] Multa. [b] Nam patriæ tutor. [c] Non. [d] Merito.
[e] Decoras. [f] Dedita jura. [g] Fienda.

Engliſhed:

"I who am laid beneath this marble ſtone,
Richard the Third, poſſeſs'd the Britiſh throne.
My Country's guardian in my nephew's claim,
By truſt betray'd I to the kingdom came.
Two years and ſixty days, ſave two, I reign'd;
And bravely ſtrove in fight; but, unſuſtain'd,
My Engliſh left me in the luckleſs field,
Where I to Henry's arms was forc'd to yield.
Yet at his coſt my corſe this tomb obtains,
Who piouſly interr'd me, and ordains
That regal honours wait a king's remains.
Th' year thirteen hundred 'twas and eighty-four,
The twenty-firſt of Auguſt, when its power
And all its rights I did to the Red Roſe reſtore.
Reader, whoe'er thou art, thy prayers beſtow,
T'atone my crimes, and eaſe my pains below."

"The wicked and tyrannical prince king Richard III, being ſlain at Boſworth, his body was begged by the nuns [friers] at Leiceſter (alitèr Grey friers), and buried in their chapel there; at the diſſolution whereof, the place of his burial happened to fall into the bounds of a citizen's garden; which being (after) purchaſed by Mr. Robert Heyrick (ſome time mayor of Leiceſter), was by him covered with a handſome ſtone pillar, three feet high, with this inſcription: "Here lies the body of Richard III. ſome time king of England." This he ſhewed me (Chriſtopher [8] Wren, B. D.) walking in the garden, 1612 [9]."

The Rev. Samuel Carte, vicar of St. Martin's in Leiceſter, ſays, in 1720, "I know no other evidence that the ſtone coffin formerly uſed for a horſe-trough was king Richard's, but the conſtancy of the tradition. There is a little part of it ſtill preſerved at the White Horſe Inn, in which one may obſerve ſome appearance of the hollow, fitted for retaining the head and the ſhoulders."

---

[1] Probably Moton; but no ſuch name occurs in the liſt beginning in 1268. If he was mayor, it muſt be before that time.

[2] Holinſhed, p. 760. "Then was the corps of Richarde, late king, ſpoyled and naked as he was borne, caſte behynd a man, and ſo caryed unreverently overthwarte the horſebacke unto the Fryers at Leyceſter: where after a ſeaſon that he had been that all men myght beholde him, he was there with lytell reverence buryed." Fabian, p. 418.

"Occidit in bello miſeranda cæde Richardus Crinibus attractus dum ferro ſævit hoſtis."

Dr. John Hird, in Hiſt. Angl. cited by Buck, in The Complete Hiſtory of England, vol. I. p. 542.—"And after all," ſays Buck, "to complete their barbariſm, they threw his body behind one upon a jade, and ſo conveyed it to Leiceſter."—"The body, after many indignities and reproaches, was obſcurely buried; for though the king [Henry VII.] of his nobleneſs gave charge unto the friers of Leiceſter to ſee an honourable interment to be given unto it; yet the religious people themſelves, being not free from the humours of the vulgar, neglected it." Lord Bacon's Life of Henry VII. Ibid. 578.—T. Carte, vol. II. p. 818, ſays, "Richard's corpſe, with a rope about his neck, thrown like a calf acroſs a horſe, was carried, and, after being treated with horrible indignities, was at laſt buried in the church of the Grey Friers without any ſolemnity."

[3] Baker's Chronicle, p. 251.—Grafton, p. 852, ſays, "he was with no leſſe funerall pompe and ſolemnitie enterred then he would to be done at the burrying of his innocent nephewes, whom he cauſed cruelly to be murthered, and unnaturally to be quelled."

[4] Holinſhed, v. II. p. 761. I cannot find Mr. Hutton's authority for calling this a ſcrubby monument. See his Boſworth Field, p. 142.

[5] See hereafter, p. 301. [6] Baker, ubi ſupra. [7] Buck's Richard III, in the Complete Hiſtory of England, vol. I. p. 577.

[8] At that time tutor, at St. John's College, Oxford, to the eldeſt ſon of ſir William Heyrick of Beaumanor; in whoſe family ſeveral curious letters of Mr. Wren's are preſerved. [9] Wren's Parentalia, p. 114.

Mr. Throſby adds, "When I was a boy, the end that then remained ſtood as a part of a heap of rubbiſh, in the inn-yard, of brick-ends, ſtones, &c. and was in appearance like the ſketch here annexed [1]."

And Mr. Hutton ſays, "I took a journey to Leiceſter in 1758, to ſee a trough which had been the repoſitory of one of the moſt ſingular bodies that ever exiſted; but found it had not withſtood the ravages of time. The beſt intelligence that I could obtain was, that it was deſtroyed about the latter end of the reign of George the Firſt, and ſome of the pieces placed as ſteps in a cellar at the ſame inn where it had ſerved as a trough [2]."

In 1513, the king's letters patent were obtained, by William, Thomas, and Roger Wigſton, for founding the hoſpital of St. Urſula, now called Wigſton's Hoſpital, on ground which was within the precincts of the Grey Friers; to which, in 1520, William Fiſher, the firſt maſter of that hoſpital, obtained the addition of St. Francis's garden. For all this, the heirs of William Wigſton engaged to pay for ever to the Crown an annual quit-rent of 4*s*.

A proceſſion to a funeral [3] in this church is thus deſcribed in the MSS. of Mr. Peck:

"Proceſſio quedam funebris antiqua, quâ cadaver veſpillonibus tedas ferentibus preceſſum eſt, & Fratribus Mendicantibus aſportatum, ſequente magnâ collachrymantium turbâ.—1. Veſpillones atratis veſtibus cereos magnos cadaveri preferentes.—2. Frater niger, ſive predicator, ordinis Sancti Dominici.—3. Frater leucopheatus, ſive minor, ordinis Sancti Franciſci.—4. Frater albus, ſive Carmeliticus [4], ordinis beate Marie de Monte Carmeli.—5. Frater Eremiticus, ordinis Sancti Auguſtini.—6. Conſanguinei, affines, proximi, pauperes, populique plurimi alii ſubſequentes, condolenteſque.

Notandum eſt, quòd cùm unicuique domui mendicantium aliquam eleemoſinam dono dederit vir mortuus, tum cadaver ejus veſte fratris mendicantis indutum eſt; idemque uniuſcujuſque ordinis frater unus linteolis ad eccleſiam ſepulchrum versùs aſportat, & in hunc modum eorum omnium confratri agnoſcitur mortuus, & bonorum operum cujuſcunque ordinis mendicantium (uti aſſeritur) fit particeps. Nec mirum igitur, quòd ſuper tumulos ſuos, & monumenta ſepulchralia, laicorum etiam mortuorum effigies, veſtibus religioſis à ſculptoribus indute, non rarò videntur expreſſe [5].

The ſite of the Grey Friers was granted, in 1536, to John Bellowe, eſq. and John Broxholme, gentleman; who had before obtained the manor of Willoughby, with many very conſiderable poſſeſſions in this and ſeveral other counties [6]; and, on the 31ſt of Auguſt that year, paid £200. to ſir John Williams, knt. treaſurer of the Augmentation of the proviſions of the Crown, as the laſt payment on the ſum of £2370. 19*s*. 0½*d*. due for their immenſe purchaſe; amongſt which were the ſite of the late Grey Friers of Leiceſter; the 4*s*. quit-rent paid yearly to the ſaid houſe of friers by the heirs of William Wigſton; the ſite of the Friers Auguſtines within the ſame town [7], and all the tenements belonging to that priory.

The Particular for this grant of the Grey Friers, &c. is in the Augmentation-Office, and agrees with the Miniſters' Accompt before-mentioned, with this addition, that the houſe and lands were valued at the ſaid ſum of £1. 4*s*. by the officers of the king at the time of the ſurrender; and there is alſo to the Particular this note: "Memorandum, the king's highnes hathe no more lands and tenements belonging to the ſaid late Fryer-houſe then be above-mentioned, to the auditor's knowledge. Theſe premiſes were ſold to Bellow and Broxholme at twenty years purchaſe."

The church was ſoon after demoliſhed; as we find among the payments of the churchwardens of St. Martin's, in 1545, ſix load of freeſtone from the Freers at 18*s*. the load; 7*d*. a day to the chief workmen; and 4*d*. to the ordinary ones; and again, in 1561, a charge of 15*s*. for a beam to be laid on the high roof, fetched from the Freers [8].

The ſite of the Grey Friers [9] became afterwards the property of Sir Robert Catlyn; from whom it paſſed to Alderman Robert Heyrick [10], who died June 14, 1618; and, by his laſt will, charged this eſtate with the following annual payments; one ſhilling to each of the poor people in Trinity Hoſpital (then 110); 40*s*. to poor widows of the Borough; and 13*s*. 4*d*. to the ſchool-maſter that teacheth the petties, or under-uſher of the free-ſchool in Leiceſter [11].

This part of the Alderman's property was ſold, in 1711, by his great grandſon, Samuel Heyrick, clerk, to Thomas Noble, eſq. whom Mr. Carte, in 1720, deſcribes as then having "a very fair houſe within the precincts of the priory of the Grey-friers."

About the year 1731, a braſs ſeal [12] was dug up in a garden in the Frier-lane, belonging to a houſe of Mr. Simpſon, within the precincts alſo of this priory. In the centre, under a rude Gothic arch, IHS, and round it, EST AMOR ME', making, when complete, I*eſus* eſt Amor me*us* [13]; an inſcription not unfrequent on old monuments and on rings [14].

"The fine ſpacious grounds belonging to this friery extended from the upper-end of the Market-place nearly to the Frier lane meeting-houſe; much of which has been built on in my time. When the workmen were digging for the cellars to the range of houſes which face St. Martin's church, they caſt up, I remember, many human bones; one ſkeleton entire [15]."

The late Rogers Ruding, eſq. deviſee of Mr. Noble, after allotting a piece of ground throughout for a common ſtreet, now called New-ſtreet, in which many good houſes are ſince built, ſold the ſite of the Grey-friers, to different purchaſers.

The manſion-houſe and gardens were ſold by Mr. Ruding to Mr. Garle in 1752, and by Mr. Garle's heirs in 1776 to Thomas Pares, junior, eſq. F. A. S. who has lately beautified the houſe, and added two extenſive wings to it. From this houſe the original quit-rent ſtill continues to be paid.

---

[1] Throſby's Leiceſter, p. 291. See this copied in plate XX. fig. 4.

[2] Hutton's Boſworth Field, p. 142.

[3] See plate XVII. fig. 11.

[4] If this ſketch of a funeral was originally made for one that took place in the church of the Grey Friers at Leiceſter, as Mr. Peck ſuppoſed, it ſhould ſeem as if there had once been a ſmall cell of Carmelites, or White Friers, in this town.

[5] Peck, MSS. vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 4938.) p. 11.

[6] See ſeveral grants to them in 36 & 37 Hen. VIII. in Jones's Index, vol. I. under the Originalia temp. Hen. VIII.

[7] Stevens's Monaſticon, Appendix, p. 4, 5.

[8] Churchwardens' Accompts of St. Martin's pariſh.

[9] It was called, in title-deeds to property which it bounded, "lands formerly belonging to ſir Robert Catlyn, knt. deceaſed, and now the land of the heirs of Robert Heyrick, gent. deceaſed;"—this in 1620. Robert died in 1618.—In another, dated 9 Car. "formerly, &c. and now the lands of the heirs of Tobye Heyricke, clerk." Tobias died in 1627.—In another, dated 1653, "formerly, &c. and now the land of John Heyrick, gent."

[10] In a letter to his brother Sir William, Jan. 8, 1615-16, Mr. Robert Heyricke ſays, "For the Blake Fryars, I nevar ment, nor doe not, to part with them, but you ſhall be pryvy to it or yt go; although Mr. Archdeacon and 2 or 3 more have ſent to me to know if I would ſell yt. And I thinke I doe yt ſomewhat too deare to them; yet one was ſo round with me that I tolld him I muſt except that yf a frend of myne wolld challenge my former promes, I muſt perform yt." And in another letter, Dec. 17, 1616, "This morning, about 9 of the clok, as I was coomyng forthe of my chambre, the bells at Sent Marten's very ſodenly rung aloud; and preſently word was brought me, that the fire was at Fryars; and preſently word cam that yt was a kylln of Robart Cocke adjoyning to the Fryars, in a very dangerous place, where the ſtac of corn and hay lay nere; but, the Lord be praiſed! it was quickly quenched." From the originals at Beaumanor.

[11] This appears from "Certain Braunches of the will of Mr. Robert Heyrick, one of the Aldermen of this Burrow of Leiceſter," hung up in the Town-hall parlour by the ſide of the picture, and printed under Houghton on the Hill, vol. II. p. 617.

[12] See plate XVII. fig. 10.

[13] In the will of William of Wickham is this bequeſt: "Item, lego domino meo archiepiſcopo Cantuarienſi unum anulum aureum, cum lapide de ruby. Item, unum par precum de auro appenſum ad unum monile de auro, habens hæc verba inſculpta, I. H. C. eſt Amor meus." Dr. Lowth's Life of that Prelate, Appendix, p. xxxviii.

[14] Gent. Mag. vol. LXVI. p. 458.

[15] Throſby's Leiceſter, p. 291.

FRIERS EREMITES OF ST. AUGUSTINE.

According to Moſheim[1], the hermits of St. Auguſtine had for their founder Alexander IV.[2] who, obſerving that the hermits were divided into ſeveral ſocieties, ſome of which followed the maxims of their famous William, and others the rule of St. Auguſtine, while others were again diſtinguiſhed by different denominations, formed the wiſe project, in 1256, of uniting them all into one religious order[3], and ſubjecting them to the ſame rule of diſcipline as that of St. Auguſtine.

" Auguſtinian Eremites lag laſt, of far later date than Auguſtinian Monks, as who firſt entered England, anno 1252[4]; and had (if not their firſt) their faireſt habitation in St. Peter's the Poor, London; thence probably taking the denomination of Poverty (otherwiſe at this day one of the richeſt pariſhes in the city) becauſe the ſaid Auguſtinian Eremites went under the notion of begging friers. Mean time, what a mockery was this, that theſe ſhould pretend to be Eremites, who, inſtead of a wide wilderneſs, lived in Broad-ſtreet, London, where their church at this day belongeth to the Dutch congregation! To give theſe Auguſtine friers their due, they were good diſputants; on which account they are remembered ſtill in Oxford, by an act performed by candidates for maſterſhip, called Keeping of Auguſtine[5]."

They had for their habit a white garment and ſcapulary, when they were in the houſe; but in the choir, and when abroad, they had over the former a cowl, and a large hood, both black, which were girt with a black leathern thong[6].

The houſe of the friers Eremites at Leiceſter was called " The Priory of St. Katharine;" or, more commonly, " The Auguſtine Friers of Leiceſter;" but when it was built, or by whom founded, is uncertain.

" Theſe Friers," ſays Mr. Carte, I have found ſtyled " St. Katharine's Auſtin Friers;" I ſuppoſe becauſe their church or chapel was dedicated to St. Katharine; and I take them to be thoſe who were ſettled without the Weſt gate Northwards, between the two channels of the river.

In 1304, Thomas earl of Lancaſter obtained the king's permiſſion to give to the friers Eremites of the order of St. Auſtin, in the county of Leiceſter, three meſſuages, ſituated contiguous to their priory (manſo dilectorum in Chriſti fratrum Hermitarum ordinis Sancti Auguſtini Leiceſtr', in ſuburbio ejuſdem ville, contigua) for the purpoſe of enlarging their place of habitation[7] (ad elargationem manſi ſui ibidem).

In 1377, the Auguſtine friers obtained leave to eat fleſh, upon condition that they ſhould keep the faſt of the Friers Minors before Chriſtmas[8].

Biſhop Tanner, in his Bibliotheca Britannica-Hibernica, p. 613, has recorded Thomas Ratcliff[9], a learned native of [Radcliffe] on the Wreke in this county, an excellent preacher (concionator), who was an Auguſtine Eremite at Leiceſter, D. D. and at length a biſhop, though of what ſee neither Bale nor Pitts with certainty knew. Pitts ſuppoſed him to be biſhop of Lincoln, perhaps becauſe Leiceſter was within that dioceſe. He flouriſhed, according to Bale[10], in 1360; or, as Pitts[11], in 1370. His principal works were, " Lecturæ Scholaſticæ;" lib. i. " Pro introitu ſententiarum," lib. i; and " Conciones ad vulgum," lib. i. Wharton[12] mentions a Thomas Ratcliffe, biſhop of Dromore in Ireland, and chorepiſcopus of Durham, who died a little before 1489; who is alſo noticed by Ware[13].

On the 23d of February 1532, it was agreed before Mr. Nicholas Rennold, then mayor, by conſent of the wardens and all the company of journeymen-ſhoemakers, that they ſhould give yearly to the Auſtin friers in Leiceſter, for all the brethren and ſiſters to be prayed for, in ready money, 10*s.* to be paid at two times in the year, beſides the offering days before uſed.

Richard Preſton, the laſt prior, ſurrendered this convent[14] 10 November, 1539.

" Omnibus, &c. Richardus Preſton, prior domûs ſive prioratûs Sancte Katherine de Leyceſter, ordinis Sancti Auguſtini, in com' Leyceſtr', alias dictus frater Richardus Preſton, frater domûs ſive prioratûs vulgariter nuncupat' Auguſtin friers de Leyceſtr', in com' Leyceſtr', & ejuſdem loci conventus, &c. Dat' 10° die Novembris, anno regni 30°.

Richard Preſton, prior.
Richard Holman, ſub-prior.
John Whyte. John Greer."

Extracts from the Miniſters Accounts, co. Leiceſter, 34 Henry VIII. in the Augmentation-Office[15].

Lands and poſſeſſions of the Houſe of Auſtin Friers, in the town of Leiceſter.

Eight ſhillings for the farm of a cloſe within the precinct of the late houſe there, called The Water Cloſe, with the appurtenances, demiſed to John Smythe, by indenture under the conventual ſeal, dated 7 Oct. 29 Henry VIII. for 21 years.

Eight ſhillings for a cloſe lying within the precinct of the ſaid houſe, called Le Bake-broke Cloſe, demiſed to the ſaid John Smythe, by conventual leaſe, dated 19 September, 30 Henry VIII.

One ſhilling and eight-pence for the farm of one curtilage, lying out of the Weſt gate of the town of Leiceſter, demiſed to Thomas Creſſey. Sum, 17*s.* 8*d.*

Site of the ſaid late houſe, with the lands and buildings of the ſame.

Four ſhillings and four-pence for the rent of the ſoil and land within the precinct of the late houſe aforeſaid, including 12*d.* for a certain parcel of land there, called The Pree, containing, by eſtimation, half a rood; and a certain vacant place on the South ſide of the church there, containing half a rood and 20 perches, being in the hands of the late prior and convent aforeſaid.—Sum total, £1. 2*s.*

---

[1] Eccleſ. Hiſt. cent. XIII. ch. II. ſect. xxii.

[2] This edict of pope Alexander IV. is to be found in the new edition of the Bullarium Romanum, tom. I. p. 110. See alſo Acta Sanctorum. menſ. Februar. tom. II. p. 472.

[3] Innocent had a deſign of uniting all theſe orders of friers into one, and it was executed by his ſucceſſor Alexander IV. who made one conventual of them under a general, and called them Hermits of St. Auguſtine, though he had drawn them from their hermitages to live in towns, and to employ them in the affairs of the church. Dupin, Eccleſ. Hiſt. cent. XIII. p. 157.

[4] Somner, Antiquities of Canterbury, p. 16, aſſigns from Bale the ſame period for their introduction into England.

[5] Fuller's Church Hiſtory, Book VI. Hiſtory of Abbeys, p. 273; cited by Newcourt, in Repertory, vol. I. p. 289.

[6] See the dreſs of a frier of this order in plate XXI.

[7] Pat. 32 Edw. I. m. 1.

[8] Leland, Coll. vol. I. pars 2. p. 308.

[9] In Godwin de Præſulibus, Radcliffe does not occur among the ſurnames; and, according to Godwin and Le Neve, John Gynewell, alias Gyndwell, was biſhop from 1351 to 1362. Suppoſing, therefore, as Tanner has ſuggeſted, Thomas Ratcliff, the Eremite frier, to have been an Engliſh biſhop, he could be only a ſuffragan. It ſhould ſeem that this famous concionator never publiſhed any of his performances, as he is not noticed in Dupin's Hiſtory of Eccleſiaſtical Writers; or rather, it may be fairly preſumed that his performances had not in them a ſufficient degree of excellence to countenance their being printed; and it is not clear, from the account of Tanner, where the MSS. are depoſited. Nor of the fourteenth century does Dupin mention any other frier Eremite or Hermit of St. Auguſtine, whoſe chriſtian name was Thomas, than Thomas of Straſburg, vol. XII. p. 71.

[10] Cent. xvi. fol. 463.

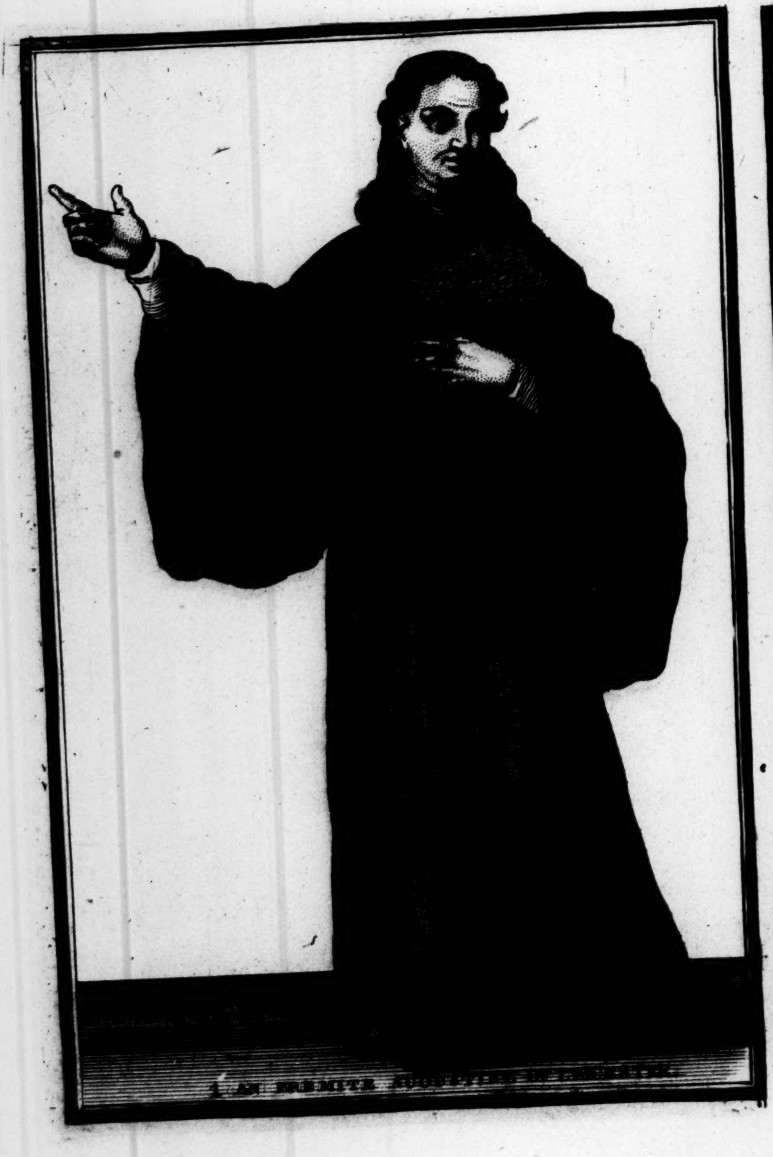
[11] P. 504.

[12] Anglia Sacra, tom. I p. 778.

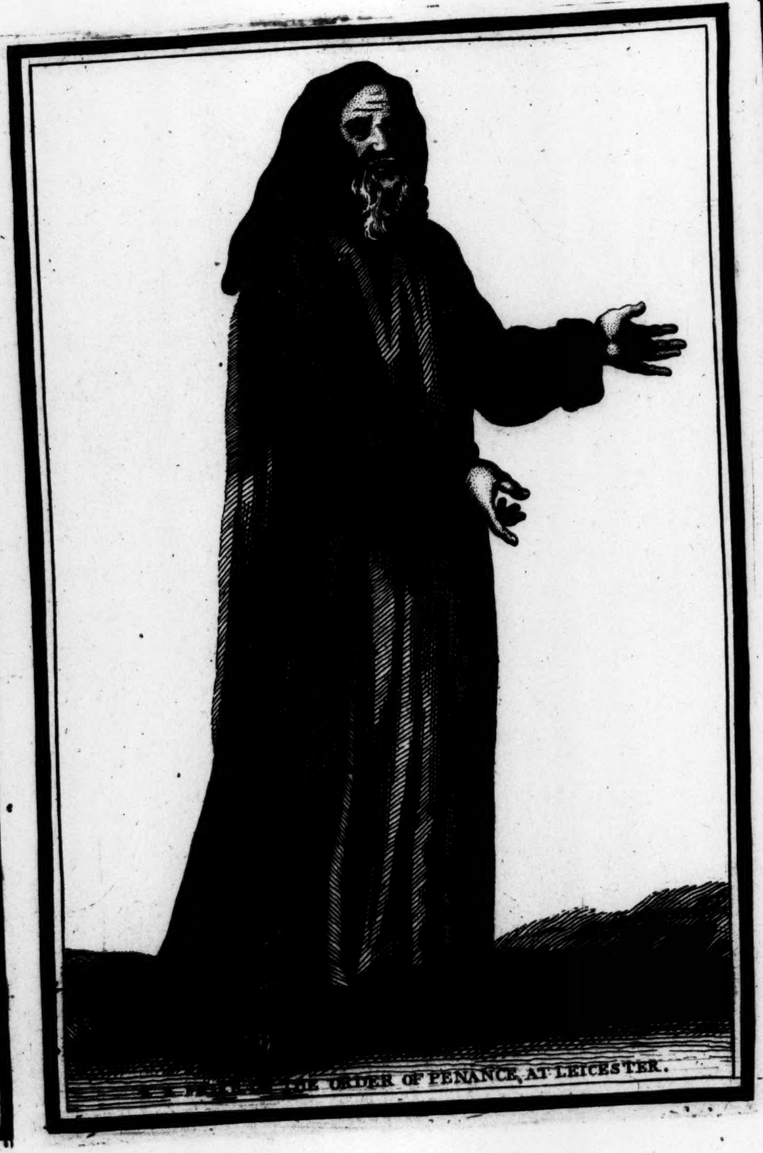
[13] De Præſulibus, p. 93. Thomas Ratcliffe, mentioned by Wharton and Ware as biſhop of Dromore in Ireland, and as having died a little before 1489, is a century too late for a man reported by Bale to have flouriſhed in 1360, and by Pitts in 1370.

[14] See the ſeat affixed to this ſurrender, and the hand-writing of the prior and ſub-prior, plate XVII. fig. 8.

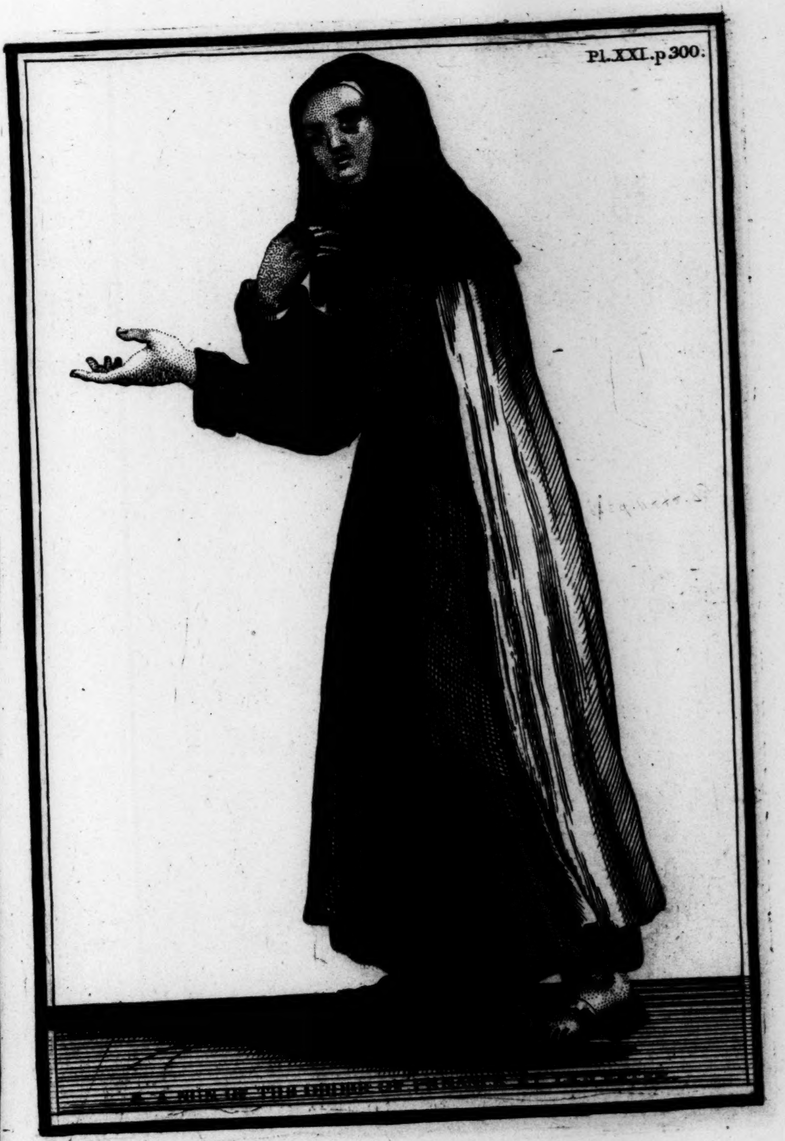
[15] Communicated by Mr. Caley.



1. AN HERMITE AUGUSTINE, AT LEICESTER.



2. A FRIAR OF THE ORDER OF PENANCE, AT LEICESTER.



3. A NUN OF THE ORDER OF PENANCE, AT LEICESTER.

BRITISH
12 JN 1928
MUSEUM

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

Pl. XXII. p. 301.

BOW BRIDGE, the Property of Joseph Cradock Esq. M. A. F. S. A.

Publiſh'd as the Act directs, by J. Nichols, May 4 1794.

Leland thus deſcribes this priory and its church:

"A little above the Weſt-bridge the Sore caſteth out an arme; and ſone after it cummith in again, and maketh one ſtreame. Wythin this ile ſtandeth the Blake[1] Frieres very pleaſauntly; and harde by the freres is alſo a bridge of ſtone over this arme of Sore. And after the hole water creping aboute half the toune cummith thorough the North bridge of a vii. or viii. arches of [ſtone.] And there Sore brek[eth into two] armes againe, wher[of the biggeſt] goith by S. Maries a[bbey ſtanding] on the farther ripe; and the other, caullid the Biſshoppes water, bycauſe the biſhop of Lincoln's tenentes have privilege on it, and after ſone methith with the bigger arme, and ſo inſulatith a right large and pleſaunt medow; wherapon the abbay, as I ſuppoſe, in ſum writinges is caullid S. Maria de Pratis. (Sore cumming again ſhortely to one botom goith a 4 miles of by the ruines of the caſtel of Mountſorelle.) Over the midle part of this arme of Biſshops water is a meane ſtone bridge: and a litle beyond it is a nother ſtone bridge, thorough the which paſſit a litle land broke, cumming from villages not far of, and ſo rennith into Biſshops water. And by Biſshops water is a chapel[2] longging to the hoſpital of S. John[3]."

"If I am not very much miſtaken, the traces of the foundation of this priory church are now diſcoverable: by which it appears that its direction was from Eaſt to Weſt, agreeable with the cuſtom of church-building; and was in length about 150 feet, and in width 90. It ſtood near by the centre of what Leland calls the "ile" between the arms of the Sore. I have examined people who have lately dug in this place to make a garden; by whom it appears that the foundations of buildings were found almoſt all the way, Southwardly, from the ſite of the church, in various directions; many of which indeed I ſaw taken up myſelf: whence an opinion may be hazarded, that the houſe of the Auguſtine Friers ſtood on, or rather occupied all, or a great part of the ground on the South ſide of the church. On the North ſide no foundations are to be traced[4].".

"On the South-eaſt ſide of the Weſt-bridge[5] is a dwelling-houſe, reſting on its edge, the water paſſing under it through the arch neareſt the town; and the back part continuing above the water on ſtone-work: once a chapel, with a bell on the South-weſt without, near the top; the frame of which ſtill remains, though the window, through which it might play, is ſtopped up. Here two mendicant friers aſked alms, for the benefit of the neighbouring priory[6].

"There was alſo till very lately a foot-bridge covered wholly over with ivy, and called Bow-bridge, becauſe it conſiſted of one large arch like a bow, ſtriding from the Friers near the Weſt-bridge, over a back water of the Soar, to the cloſe or garden called Bow church-yard[7]; and, by the narrowneſs of it, was evidently only a foot-bridge for the uſe of the friers to a conſtant ſpring of limpid water, on the paved road ſide, a few paces diſtant, called St. Auſtin's Well[8], ſtill overflowing with contributions to the back water; and it is probable that the ground by the ſide of it, now incloſed with a brick-wall, was a garden belonging to the priory. The well is three quarters of a yard broad, and the ſame in length within its incloſure; the depth of its water from the lip or back-edging on the earth, where it commonly overflows, is half a yard. It is covered with a mill-ſtone, and incloſed with ſtone and brick on three ſides; that towards Bow-bridge and the town is open[9]. This elegant and eaſy curved arch is about 145 yards Weſterly from the Weſt-bridge; its length, from abutment to abutment, ten yards and a half; the breadth two yards thirteen inches and a half; the height from a middle ſtream (i. e. a middle height of water, neither high nor low) to the top of the abutment, is two yards, thirteen inches and a half; the elevation or height, from the ſtream in the centre to the top of the arch, three yards, one foot, ten inches and a half.

"A few yards to the South-eaſt is another bridge, called Bow-bridge likewiſe[10], which leads from Bow church-yard to the town, conſiſting of five arches, rather low, which receives the ſtream at a ſmall diſtance from the Braunſton-gate bridge to deliver it to Bow, thence to paſs at a ſmall diſtance into the conflux of the Soar. From this bridge to St. Auſtin's well is 74 yards. The former Bow-bridge, conſiſting of one arch, only ſerved to convey paſſengers from the Friery to Bow church, and was without parapet walls; which the other has, 2½ feet high, where, Baker's Chronicle ſays, king Richard's ſpur ſtruck; and the event was conſtrued into an omen, that his head ſhould be bruiſed there. The length of this bridge is 23¼ yards; the breadth of it about five feet four inches: the arches are round.—The Boſworth, Hinckley, and Coventry road, from Leiceſter, is over the Braunſton-gate bridge; and its exiſtence at that time might be doubted, except that the king might take this (i. e. Bow-bridge) as a bye-way, to eſcape the crowd of the army, which yet he muſt rejoin at the other end of the lane, beyond Danet's-hall garden. The common breadth of the road by the terrace by Danet's-hall cloſe, called a Roman-way, ſeems about four feet in a hollow road between a regular deſcent of cloſe ground. From this bottom to the ſurface of the terrace, which is only a part of the deſcent, is fourteen feet in height or more. The breadth of this terrace is about the ſame breadth with the hollow way; that is, fourteen feet. The terrace has no ſtone ſurface, but ſeems an eaſy continuation of the cloſes on its Eaſt ſide towards the town. Braunſton-gate Bridge[11], over a diſcharge from the Back Soar, is 51 yards; in the middle, and as far as the arches extend, three yards 28 inches wide; the parapet walls are a yard high; five yards and three quarters wide, at the North-weſt end, which leads to the town, to near the firſt arch. Here are four high arches pointed at top, 25 yards from the town's end to the narrower part[12]."

The ſite of the peninſula on which this priory ſtood was granted, in 1536, to John Bellowe, eſq. and John Broxholme, gentleman[13]; and in 1597 was the property of Robert Temple of Leiceſter, as appears by the counterpart of an indenture between the ſaid Robert Temple and Thomas Temple his ſon and heir apparent of the one part, and Robert Heyricke one of the comburgeſſes of the town of Leiceſter in the county of Leiceſter aforeſaid, ironmonger, of the other part. In conſequence of £120. to the ſaid Robert and Thomas Temple by the ſaid Robert Heyricke then paid; they, the ſaid Temples, did bargain, ſell, and alien, unto the ſaid Robert Heyricke, his heirs, and aſſigns, "all that the ſcyte, cyrcuite, and precyncte of the late dyſſolved religyouſe howſe, or frerye, comm̃ely called or knowne by the name of, The Auguſtyne Freers, ſcytuate, lyeing, and being, in or neare adjoynyng to the Weſt parte of the towne of Leic̃ aforeſaid, and all the ſeyte and grouude therein conteyned, in quantytie by eſtemacyon three akers, be yt more or leſſe, nowe in the tenure and occupyeing of the ſaid Rob^{t} Temple, or of his aſſigne or aſſignes; and one peece of meadowe-grounde, devyeded by a lytle gutture of water one the North parte of the ſaid ſcyte next adjoynyng; and alſo one cloſe of paſture, with the appurteñies, called The Bowebryge-cloſe, conteyning by eſtimacyon three akers of grounde, be yt more or leſs, late ꝑcell of the ſaid late dyſſolved relygyouſe howſe, or fryerye, lyeing weſtwarde betweene the water of Wye, devyedyng yt from the ſaid fryers of the Eaſt partie, and the grounde of Leonard Dannett, eſquyer, of the Weſt parte; and alſo one parcell of grounde, conteynynge one gardaine, one yarde, and certaine buyldings for d̄viſe purpoſes in and upon parte of the ſame yarde, com̄only called St. Frauncys Gardaine, in Leiceſter aforeſaid, with the ſaid buyldings, romethes, and eaſements, ſtanding, ſet, lyeing, and being, in the town of Leic̄ aforeſaid, and nowe in the occupyeing of Thomas Sampſon, ꝑfeſſor of God's moſt holy worde, and maſter of the Hoſpytall of Willm̄ Wigſton, in the towne of Leic̄ aforeſaid, of the foundacyon of the ſame Willm̄, adjoyn̄ge to the North parte of the late dyſſolved relygyouſe howſe, or fryerye, com̄only called The Grey Freres; ſaving and alwayes excepting out of this bargaine and ſale one lyttell ꝑcell or platt of grounde, whereupon a lyttyl howſe is buylded and lyeth weſtwarde betwixt the Soare and the walle of the ſaid Auguſtyne fryers, and is taken as ꝑcell of the ſame fryers, and was lately rented at xx^d by the yeare; and alſo all and ſin̄gler howſes, &c. franchyſes, libertyes, waters, fyſhings, &c. w^{t}ſoever they or any of them been or bee, to the ſaid late dyſſolved relygyouſe howſe of the Auguſtyne freres, Bowebryge-cloſe, Seynt Frauncys Gardayne, or to any of theym belonginge, &c.; and all and every the rents reſerved upon any leaſe or demyſe thereof, or any part thereof demiſed, and now being in force, and not expyred; ſaving to the chaplaynes and poore of the ſaid hoſpytal of Willm̄ Wigſton, and their ſucceſſors, their leaſe and terme of yeares therin conteyned dureing the contyneance of the ſame terme of yeares, payeinge the yarly rent of IIII^s to the ſaid Rob^t Heiricke, his heires or aſſignes, thereupon reſ̄ved; to hold unto and to the uſe of the ſaid Rob^t in fee."

---

[1] The Eremite friers are here meant, whoſe habit was black. Leland had before briefly noticed the Dominicans; ſee p. 296.

[2] Of this chapel, ſee more hereafter.

[3] Itinerary, vol. I. p. 18.

[4] Throſby, MS.

[5] The Weſt-bridge ſpans the Soar, conſiſts of four arches, and is ſituated near the Caſtle.

[6] Bickerſtaffe, MS.

[7] Why Mr. Bickerſtaffe choſe to call this Bow churchyard, or whether either of the demoliſhed churches was Bow-church, I cannot diſcover. It might have been conjectured that St. Sepulchre's extra muros ſtood here, if Mr. Carte had not ſtated that this was at the end of Southgate-ſtreet. Or the friers of Penance might have had a ſmall church or chapel here.

[8] Bow-bridge was repaired by the corporation in 1688, at an expence of £15. 12*s.*; and St. Auſtin's well for £2. 14*s.* 8*d.*

[9] Since this was written, it has been entirely deſtroyed, occaſioned by widening the road.

[10] The ſite of theſe two bridges will readily be comprehended by referring either to plate XXII. or XXIII.—Fig. 1. ſhews the preſent Bow Bridge; fig. 2. the ſite of the Auſtin Friers; fig. 3. St. Nicholas's church; fig. 4. the foot-bridge to St. Auſtin's Well.

[11] This bridge is in St. Mary's pariſh; as are all the houſes beyond the bridge towards Braunſton, and all the land in the liberty.

[12] Bickerſtaffe, MS. who adds, "This bridge, which croſſes the old Soar South-weſterly, was widened with brick, and the lane leading to it, called Dun's Lane, made commodious for paſſengers, in 1792."

[13] See before, p. 298.

The ſite of the Auguſtine Friers is now the property of Joſeph Cradock, eſq. of Gumley, in this county; to whoſe good taſte my readers are obliged for a faithful engraving of Bow-bridge[1], from a drawing which was fortunately taken by Mr. Schnebbelie in 1791, a few weeks only before its final demolition[2].

FRIERS DE PŒNITENTIA JESU CHRISTI.

This ſhort-lived order of mendicant friers is of great antiquity; having been eſtabliſhed, long before the general union of the Friers Eremites, in the time of pope Innocent III, who died in 1216. Their firſt introduction into England was in 1257; in which year, ſays Matthew Paris, "there were ſeen in London a new order of friers, called De Pœnitentiâ Jeſu, or Fratres de Saccâ, becauſe they were apparelled in ſack-cloth, who had their houſe in London, near unto Alderſgate without the Gate, and had licence of Henry III, in the 54th year of his reign [1270] to remove to any other place; and in 1272 he gave them the Jews ſynagogue in Lothbury[3]."

"This fraternity admitted both men and women, who yet were not in ſtrictneſs eſteemed religious, though they profeſſed a certain religious kind of life; and therefore, as it was not a perfect or complete religion, it was not a true order. They were permitted to have property; and, if they were married perſons, to continue in that ſtate; and though, after their admiſſion into the order, they could not lawfully or regularly marry, yet, ſhould they happen to do ſo, the marriage was reputed valid. In ſhort, they were deemed eccleſiaſtical perſons; but, whether they enjoyed the perſonal and real privileges of clerks and religious perſons, authors are not agreed. The men of this profeſſion were called Fratres de Pœnitentiâ Jeſu Chriſti, Fratres Saccii, Sacci, Saccini, Saccitæ, Saccati, Freres aux Sacs, Fraires enſaques, de viridi vallæ, Sacs, Sac-Friars, de Saccis, or de Sacco; for I cannot approve of the term de Saccâ, which I find in Stowe and Weever, and from them in biſhop Tanner. They were alſo ſtyled Continentes, not becauſe they profeſſed abſolute chaſtity, for they lived in wedlock, but only as being obliged to abſtain from their wives on certain days of the week. The women, on their part, were termed Sorores de Pœnitentiâ, and Sackettes. As to the ſack, whence the greater part of theſe appellations is taken, ſome ſay it was borrowed from the ſack-cloth wherewith they were cloathed; others, becauſe it was ſhaped like a ſack; others, becauſe the brethren carried ſacks; and others again, that the ſiſters were called de Sacco, on account of the ſcapulary made of ſack-cloth, de ſachino panno, which they wore out of humility. However, the profeſſors of both ſexes together are repreſented as numerous; and Stowe even pretends they had many good ſcholars amongſt them; a fact which I think may be juſtly called in queſtion, ſince they appear to have been only Fraterculi, or Fratricelli, in any reſpect[4]."

Plate XXI. ſhews the dreſs of a frier and a nun.

This order is ſaid to have been included in the proſcription of the council of Lyons 1275; when all mendicant orders were ſuppreſſed, excepting only the Dominicans, Franciſcans, Auguſtinians, and Carmelites[5]. But it is evident that at firſt little regard was paid here to that decree; and that the houſes of this order in England, which were ten in number, each of which had its prior, were not immediately evacuated upon it. Certain it is, that in 1283 a priory of theſe friers ſubſiſted in a houſe long before eſtabliſhed in the Suburbs of Leiceſter; though it appears that they were at that time involved in a ſuit at law[6]; which probably terminated in their ſuppreſſion.

The order in general was naturally on the decline; and was peremptorily ſuppreſſed in England[7] in 1307 (in which year the prior of Lynne was their provincial), and univerſally by the council of Vienne in 1311[8].

---

[1] See plate XXII.—The view in plate XXIII. (originally engraved to accompany Mr. Peck's account of Richard's natural ſon, in his "Deſiderata Curioſa," vol. VII. N° 8,) was introduced into the Leiceſterſhire Collections, under the Hiſtory of Burbach; but, though correct as to ſituation, was rendered abſurd by miſnaming the Auguſtine friery, and ſtill more ſo by introducing a military proceſſion over the foot-bridge. Both theſe defects being removed, the view is now repeated.

[2] The bridge was waſhed away, on the 19th of November 1791, by a heavy flood, which had ſwelled the river to nearly a level with its banks. The whole diſappeared in an inſtant; yet not even a blade of graſs on the banks ſeemed to have been damaged by the ſide walls. During the preceding ſummer, Mr. Cradock, with his accuſtomed liberality, had been at ſome expence in repairing this fine remnant of antiquity; and, after the accident, wiſhed much to have had it completely reſtored; but, on inſpection by ſome maſter-builders, when the flood had ſubſided, it was found to be demoliſhed paſt all recovery. See Gent. Mag. vol. LXI. p. 980.

[3] Stow's London, ed. 1528, p. 220.

[4] Dr. Pegge, in Archæologia, vol. III. p 126.

[5] Stevens, Monaſticon, vol. II. p. 272.

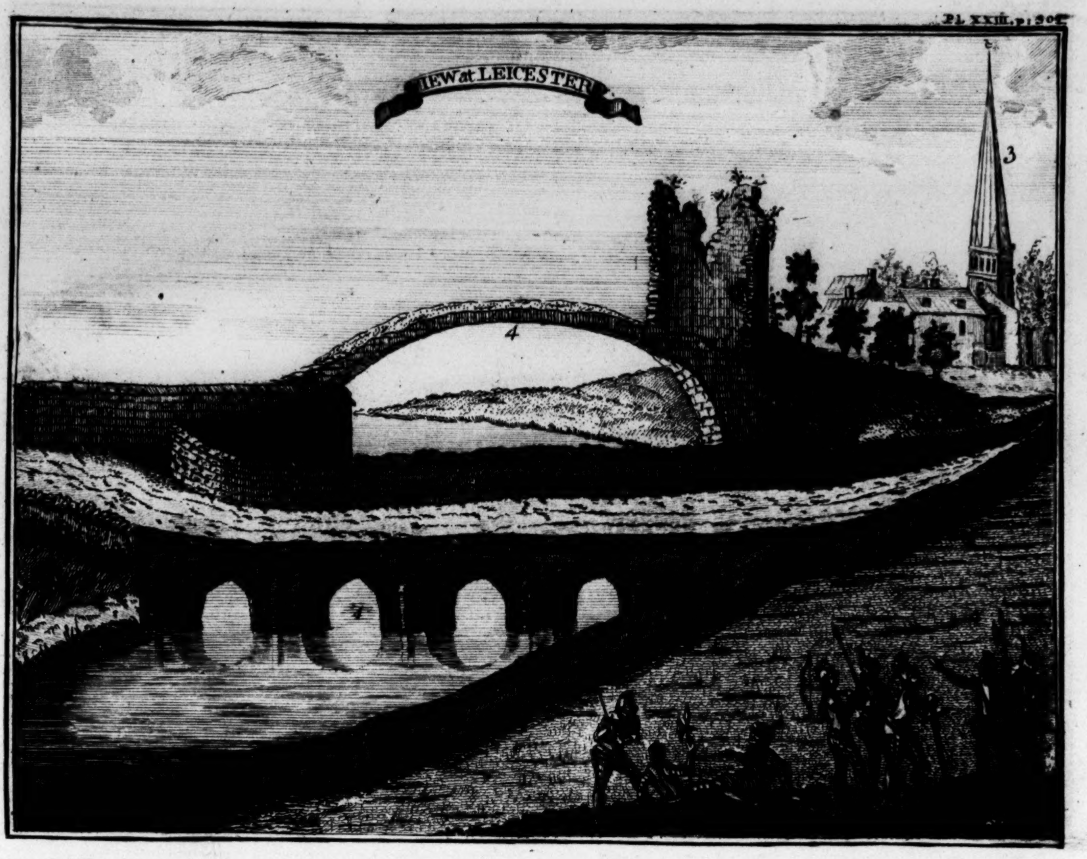
[6] Plac. Aſſiſ. in com. Leic. 12 Edw. I, Rot. 3. de injuſtè diſſeiſ. lib. ten. in Suburb. Leiceſtr', Rot. 4. dorſo, contra Ricardum priorem fratrum de Pœnitentiâ Jeſu Chriſti de Leyceſtr', pro meſſ' in Bruntingſthorp.

[7] Peter-Houſe College, Cambridge, was founded in 1280 by Hugh de Balſham, biſhop of Ely, on the ruins of two hoſtels of this order, which had been "monuments of the higheſt antiquity." Carter's Hiſtory of that Univerſity, p. 18.—Their chapel in Lothbury was granted in 1305 to Robert Fitz Walter, whoſe adjoining houſe was in the place where now ſtands Grocers Hall; and the chapel, after being the reſidence of ſeveral lord-mayors of London, was converted into the Windmill Tavern. Stow and Stevens, ubi ſupra.

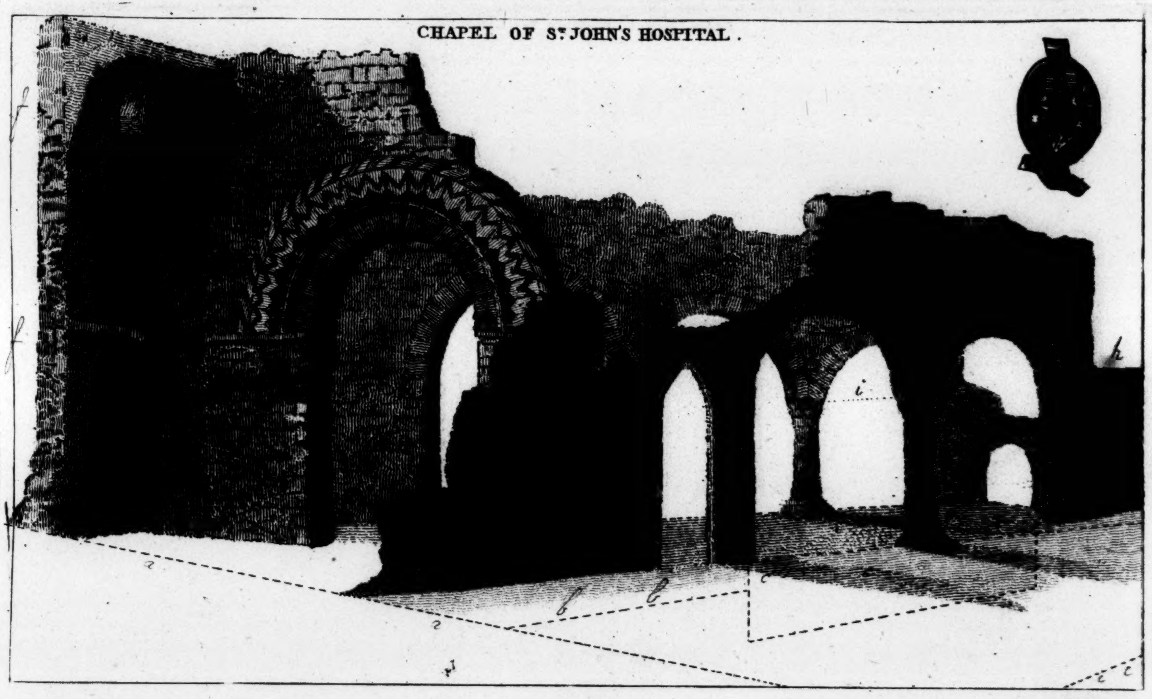
[8] Dr. Pegge, ubi ſupra, p. 127.

THE

Pl. XXIII. p. 305



IEW at LEICESTER
3
4



CHAPEL OF S.T JOHN'S HOSPITAL.
f
f
h i a a b
b c
c
c

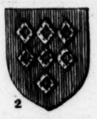
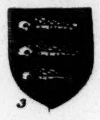
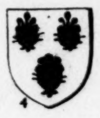
1



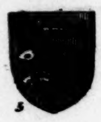
2



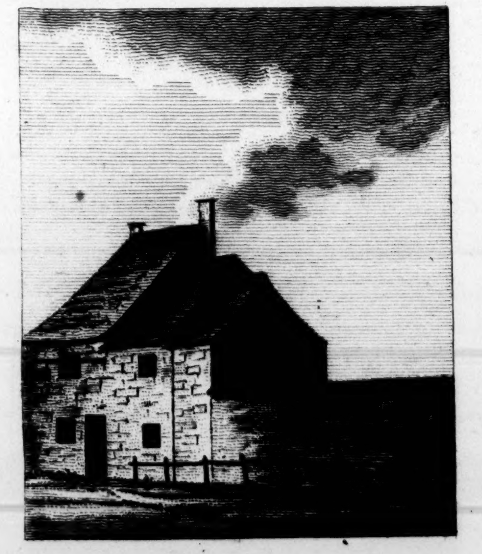
3



4

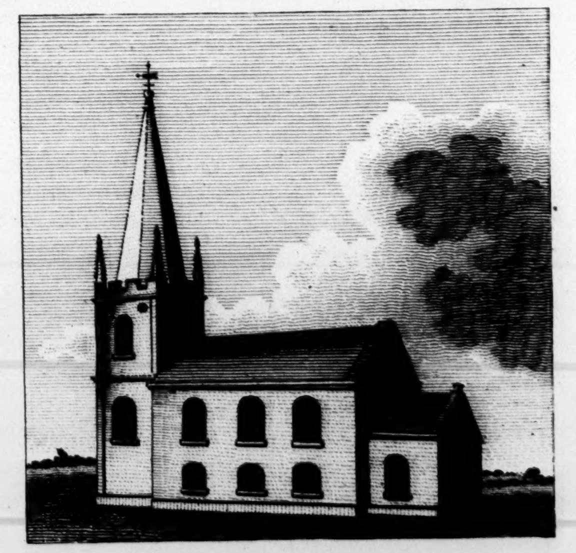


5



The SPITAL HOUSE. in Belgrave Gate.

J. Cary ſculp

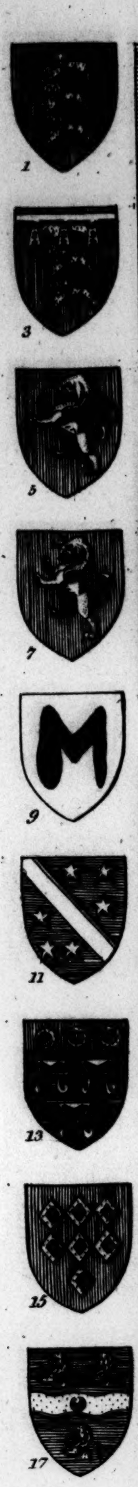


Plan for rebuilding S.T LEONARDS CHURCH.

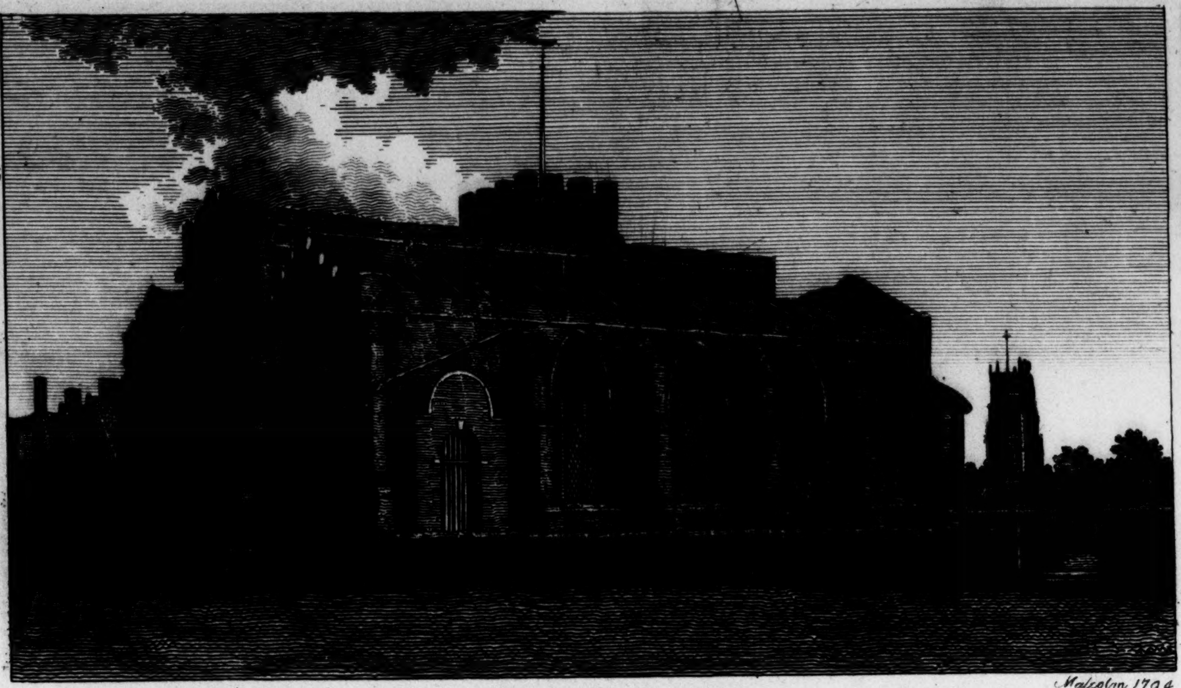
BRITISH
12 JN 1925
MUSEUM

BRITISH
12 JN 1928
MUSEUM

ALL-SAINTS, N.E.

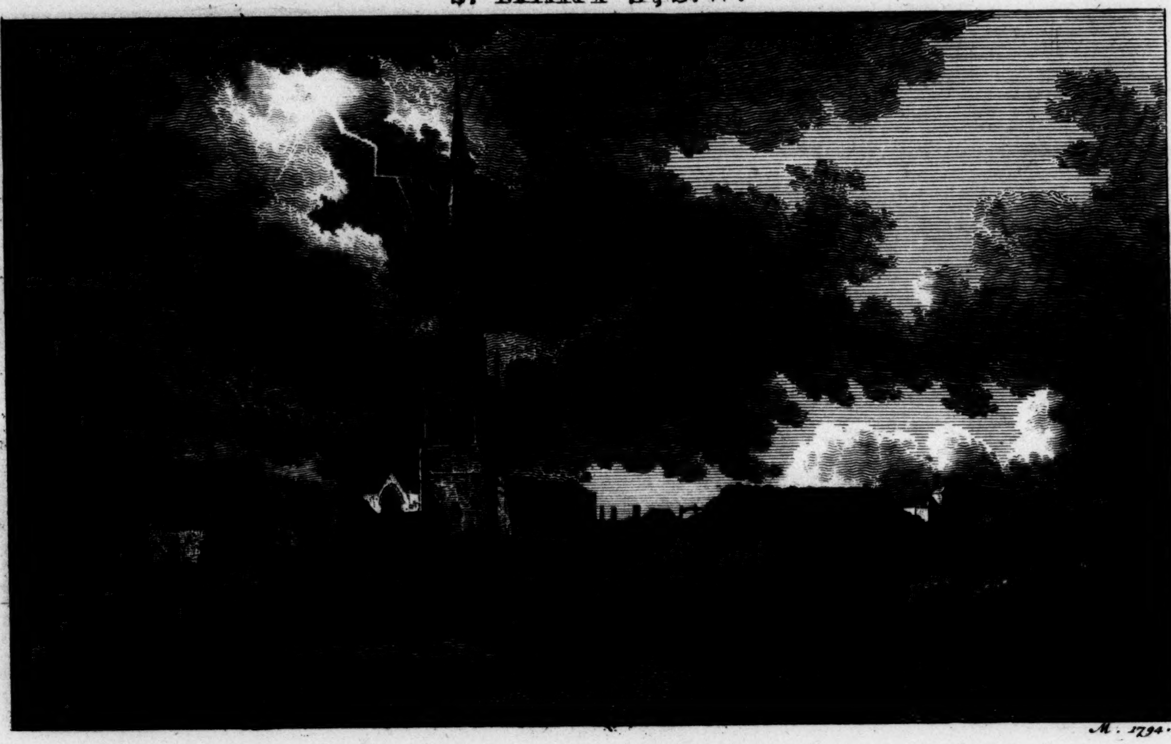


1
3
5
7
9
11
13
15
17

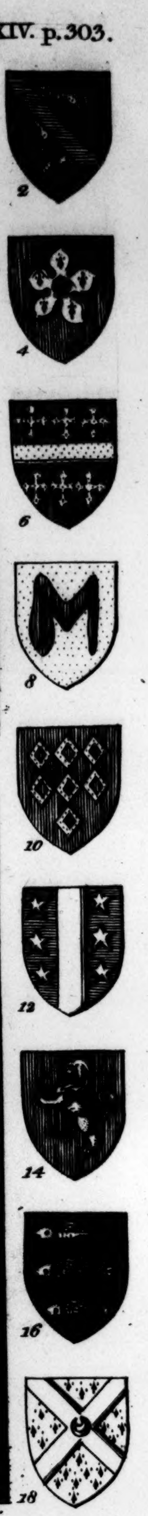


Malcolm 1794

St. MARY'S, S.W.

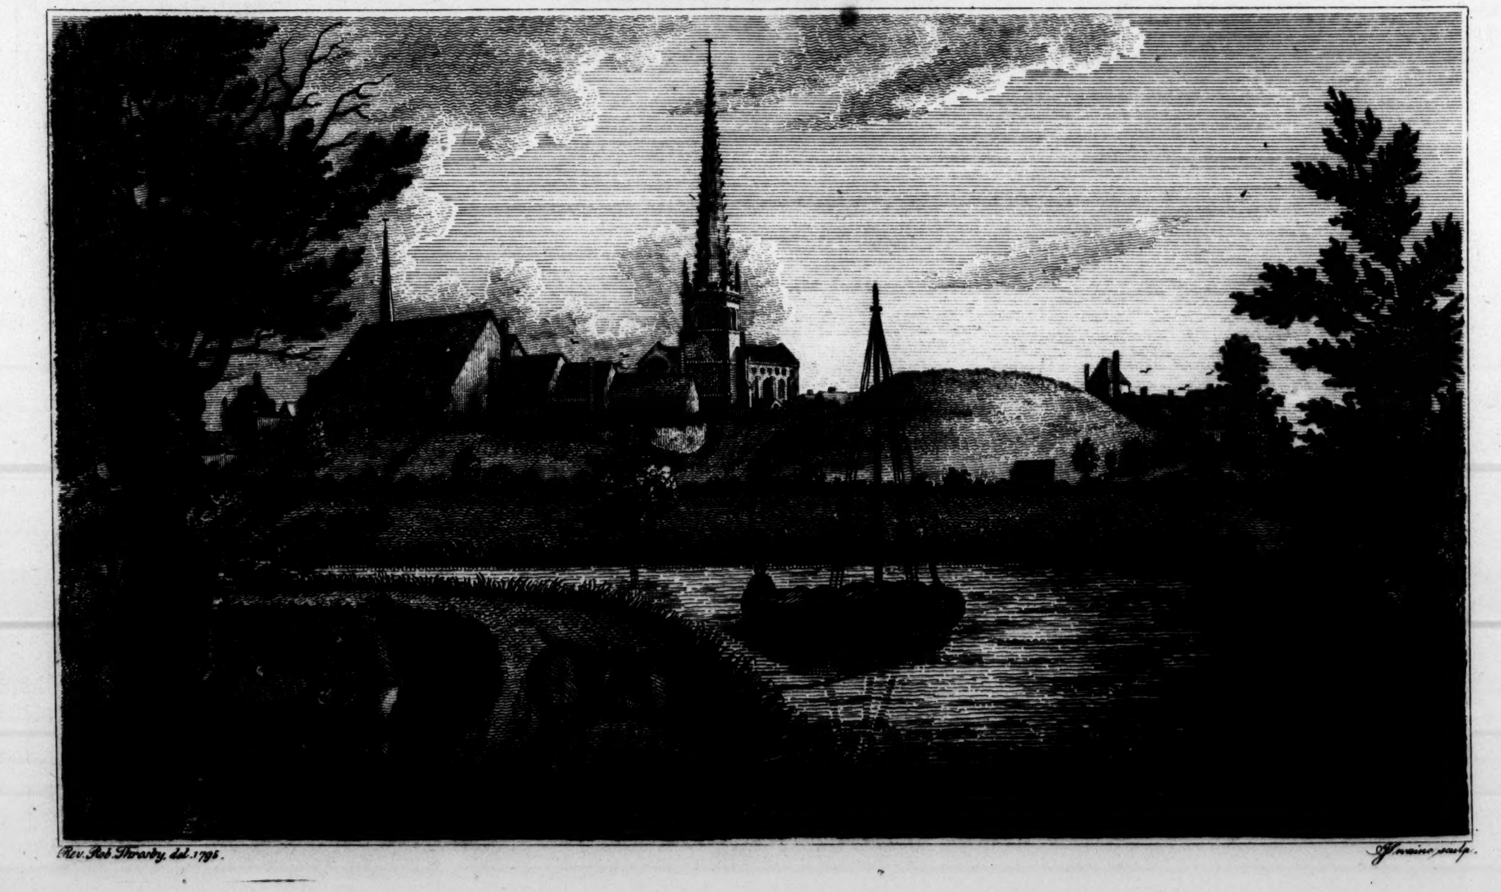


M. 1794.



2
4
6
8
10
12
14
16
18

A distant View, with the CANAL.



Rev. Rob. Throsby, del. 1795.

J. Swaine, sculp.

THE COLLEGIATE CHURCH OF ST. MARY DE CASTRO.

In the time of the Saxons there was a collegiate church ſituated a little below the caſtle[1] (infra & juxta caſtellum), whoſe founder is unknown; which, having been deſtroyed, or at leaſt very conſiderably damaged, as was the caſtle itſelf, at the Norman invaſion, was completely repaired in 1107[2], and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, by Robert de Bellomont, earl of Mellent and Leiceſter, who placed in it a dean and twelve ſecular canons; to whom he reſtored all the antient poſſeſſions which had belonged to the former church, with conſiderable additions; confirmed to them the churches of All Saints, St. Peter, and St. Martin, with all the lands and tithes thereto belonging; 60*s.* rent out of his rents at Lilburn, and 30*s.* rent in Blingeſſit and Thurmedeſton, which had been given by Ralph Boteler to augment the prebends; and appropriated to them all the other churches in Leiceſter and its ſuburbs, except St. Margaret's[3]. He gave them the mill at the North bridge, for the cloathing of their ſick; and, among other benefactions, all the churches that were within the ſoke of Shepeſhed (which then included Shepeſhed, Dixley, Hathern, Whatton, and Lockington); all thoſe within the ſoke of Halſo in Northamptonſhire, and a confirmation grant of the church of Lilburn[4]. They had moreover, of the gift of the counteſs Iſabel, one virgate of land in Burton; and, from the charitable donations of other benefactors, poſſeſſed the manor of Asfordby, with divers lands in that lordſhip and at Segrave[5].

The church of Clifton in Warwickſhire, dedicated to the Aſſumption of our Lady, was antiently one of the prebends of this collegiate church, who poſſeſſed lands at Bigging in that county; which were given by Henry de Rokeby, in conſideration of their reſigning to him the chapel of Rugby. They had the mill alſo at Bigging, the gift of Fulco de Holme[6].

After the death of earl Robert de Bellomont, the canons of this church, with all their property, were in 1137 transferred, by his ſon Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter[7], to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, which he in that year founded: but, that he might not totally ſeem to deſtroy his father's foundation, he, with the conſent of Richard the firſt abbot, placed eight canons in the church of St. Mary de Caſtro[8]; one of whom was at length made dean. Theſe were all inſtituted by the abbot; except one that was afterwards called vicar of the pariſh, who was inſtituted by the biſhop: but this regulation was changed in 1400[9]; when, by the conſent and advice of Bp. Beaufort, the abbot and convent ordained that, for the future, either the dean or the ſacriſt ſhould alſo be the vicar.

In the "Rentale" of William Charyte, the ſtate of the ſecond foundation is thus deſcribed:

"Patronus hujus eccleſie abbas Leyceſtr', ſicut patet in matriculo in his verbis: 'Eccleſie Sc̄e Marie de Caſtro patronus abbas Sc̄e Marie de Pratis, habens eam in proprios uſus [cum decimis garbarum[10], &c.] à fundatione canonicorum totam, exceptis oblationibus & obventionibus altaris, que deputate ſunt ſeptem clericis deſervientibus in eâdem in propriis perſonis; qui etiam debent de ſuis portionibus duos capellanos miniſtrantes exhibere in eâdem; & exceptâ tertiâ parte garbarum de tribus carucatis terre, quas percipit abbas Sc̄i Ebrulfi ab antiquo.

"Portio abbatis valet circiter LX ſolidos.

"Et notandum, quòd in compoſitione inter nos & abbatem de Sc̄o Ebrulfo dictus abbas locavit abbati Leyc' ad perpetuam firmam omnes decimas garbarum de communâ comitis Leyceſtr' de South & Weſt, que reſpondebat pro IIII carucatis terre, cum prato, ſicut patet in extentis manerii Leyceſtr' & ejuſdem comitis.

"In cartâ ordinationis canonicorum eccleſie Sc̄e Marie de Caſtro ſic ſcribitur: 'Univerſis Sc̄e matris eccleſie filiis Robertus comes Leyceſtr' ſalutem. Notum ſit univerſitati veſtre, quòd Ricardus abbas & conventus eccleſie Sc̄e Marie de Prato providerunt, ex conſenſu & conſilio meo, &c. octo clericos honeſtos, &c. ad ſerviendum in eccleſiâ Sc̄e Marie de Caſtello, ab eis eligendos; ad quorum ſuſtentationem conceſſerunt omnes oblationes & omnes decimas, exceptis manipulis frugum; & omnia beneficia parochie illius eccleſie, que antea commune vocabatur. Ita quòd due portiones cedent ſacriſte qui eccleſie ſervitio providebit, cum XX s̄. de ſcaccario, &c. Relique ſex portiones dabuntur ſex clericis cum eo, &c. Octavus erit capellanus, qui ad ſuſtentationem ſuam habebit quod priores capellani ante eum habere ſolebant. Sacramento ſinguli fidelitatem & canonicam ſubjectionem eccleſie Sc̄e Marie de Prato promittent, &c. Capitulo illius eccleſie abbas preſideat, vel alius canonicorum quem ad hoc mittere voluerit, ſemel in ſeptimanâ, vel quoties voluerit, & leviores clericorum exceſſus ibidem emendet. Et ſi quis clericorum de prenominatis viciis vel de quolibet majori exceſſu accuſatus in capitulum canonicorum veniet, ſuper hoc abbatis & capituli judicium pariturus.

"Decanus & ceteri canonici inſtituendi ſunt per abbatem. Vicarius inſtituendus eſt per epiſcopum, qui ſolebat habere de nobis ad ſuſtentationem ſuam XXVI s̄. VIII d̄. Sed illud mutatum eſt ex aſſenſu & conſilio epiſcopi Lincoln'; & ordinatum eſt per abbatem & conventum, anno Domini MCCCC, quòd quicunque de cetero erit decanus, vel ſacriſta ipſe, idem erit & vicarius; & habebit ad ſuſtentationem ſuam duas portiones. Sic ſolebat habere, cum XX s̄. de ſcaccario, &c. ut in ordinatione eorundem octo clericorum.

"Compoſitionem vicarie require in libro parliamenti.

"Habemus ex ſcaccario d̄ni regis, ex eleemoſinâ antiquâ per fundatorem noſtrum conceſſâ, & per cartam ſuam confirmatâ, VI l̄i.[11]

"Abbas ſolvit, archidiacono Leyceſtrie, pro procurationibus, ſynodalibus, & denariis Sc̄i Petri, eccleſie Sc̄e Marie, IX s̄. ob. q̄.[12]

"Capella Sancti Sepulchri extra muros ſpectat ad eccleſiam Sc̄e Marie de Caſtello, & eſt propria canonicorum ibidem, & debet deſerviri per capellanum eorundem. Clericus illius eccleſie inſtituendus & imponendus eſt per abbatem."

---

[1] This is exactly the ſite of the preſent church; as may be ſeen in the two views in plate XXIV; in both of which the old Mount belonging to the Caſtle and the back front of the Caſtle itſelf (the only part that is antient) are repreſented. All Saints church, with the arms, given in the ſame plate, will be deſcribed hereafter.

[2] Cart. Antiq. CC. n. 23. anno 1107.

[3] Regiſter of Leiceſter Abbey.

[4] See before, vol. I. p. 22; and Appendix, p. 54.

[5] Afterwards exchanged, by the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis, for the manor of Knighton and the Suburbs of Leiceſter. See Appendix, p. 83.

[6] See before, under Leiceſter Abbey, p. 284, 285.

[7] Robertus comes Legreceſtr' dedit eis præbendas & poſſeſſiones quæ fuerunt canonicorum ſecularium eccleſiæ S. Mariæ infra caſtellum de Legreceſtrie. Hæ donationes factæ fuere tempore Hen. I. Alexandro epiſcopo Linc." Leland, Coll. I. i. 28.

[8] There remained till very lately in the veſtry a kind of preſs called an Ark, containing ſeven cranes for the purpoſe of hanging up the veſtments of the canons, with a ſocket for the eighth crane, which had long been loſt. This preſs was deſtroyed in 1795, when the old veſtry gave place to a new one.—"Churches collegiate may be evinced from their form acroſs (as almoſt all of them are built); from ſtalls in the chancel; and a place where the prieſts uſed to hang their veſtments." Gibſon's Additions to Camden.—"Very many chancels, however, have ſtalls in them at the Weſt end, without there being the leaſt ground to imagine that the churches were of the collegiate kind: in theſe ſtalls were probably ſeated the curates of chapels dependent on the officiating prieſts at the private altars, who were expected to be attending on the parochial incumbent at the high altar on the great feſtivals, and on the day of the dedication of the churches. And it is not unlikely that the choir-ſingers of the pariſh might occaſionally make uſe of theſe ſeats." S. D.

[9] In the Regiſters of the dioceſe of Lincoln, may be ſeen an inſtrument intituled, "Portionis permutatio;" on which Mr. Tyringham Stephens remarks, "Et ibi adverte inquiſitionem quæ videtur facere per juriſdictionem abbatis monaſterii de Pratis Leic' in dictam eccleſiam & prebendarios ejuſdem." See the Introductory Volume, p. xcix.

[10] Theſe three words are in the Abbey Regiſter, but not in the Matriculus. See the Introductory Volume, p. lv.

[11] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xcix.

[12] Ibid. fol. ciii. a.

The church of St. Mary de Caſtro was parochial long before it ceaſed to be collegiate; and it appears by the preceding extracts that the chapel of St. Sepulchre once belonged to it. This church alſo was one of the earlieſt in Leiceſter that was provided with a regular cemetery [1]; and, in a taxation made about the year 1220, was rated at four marks [2].

In 1300, on a fine being paid into the Exchequer, Peter of Leiceſter, clerk, obtained liberty to give a meſſuage in Leiceſter, with the appurtenances, to the dean and canons of St. Mary de Caſtro, not ſubject to mortmain. Teſte rege, apud Karliol, 4° die Julii [3].

In 1323, it was proved that the prebendaries of this church were entitled to receive 10*s.* a year from the revenues of the earldom of Leiceſter, as a part of their founder's benefactions [4].

In 1358-9, king Edward III. by his letters patent, permitted the dean and canons of St. Mary in the Newark to ſettle an annual payment of 51*s.* 7*d.* on the ſacriſt, canons, and vicar, of St. Mary de Caſtro. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm. 24° die Januarii [5].

The advowſon of the church of Hathern, which belonged to the abbot and convent of Leiceſter as part of the ſoke of Shepeſhed, was granted by the abbot and convent, and confirmed in 1379 by the letters patent of king Richard II, to the ſacriſt and canons of St. Mary de Caſtello, reſerving to the abbot the accuſtomed penſion of 40*s.* and under a penalty of 500 marks not to alienate the ſame [6].

In 1408, the dean, ſacriſt, and canons of St. Mary de Caſtro (having, for a fine of 20 marks, procured licence from king Henry IV. to hold lands to the annual value of ten pounds) obtained letters patent to receive a grant from Thomas Thorpe, of Leiceſter, chaplain, William Freman, and John Hornyngwould, of twelve meſſuages, eleven tofts, a rood of arable land, the moiety of an acre of meadow, and 6*s.* 10*d.* rent, and the farther rent of one halfpenny, held under the king as duke of Lancaſter, and parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [7].

Theſe are all the grants which we have been able to trace to this collegiate church; yet, it may not be unneceſſary to obſerve, that the grant of Kempsford in Glouceſterſhire, and the appropriation of Higham Ferrars in Northamptonſhire, both which are ſaid in Tanner to have been given to this church, were the property of the collegiate church of St. Mary in the Newark, and will be there particularly noticed [8].

Leland ſays, "There was afore the Conqueſte a collegiate church of prebendes intra caſtrum; the landes wherof gyven by Robert Boſſu, erle of Leirceſtre, to the abbay of chanons made by him withoute the walles. A new chirch of the reſidew of the old prebendes was erected withoute the caſtelle, and dedicate to S. Marie, as the olde was [9]."

The preſent building has been erected at different times, and conſiſts of what may be termed an old and a new or additional church.

The old church, mutilated as it is to accommodate its modern neighbour, ſtill retains many curious ſpecimens of architecture in the Saxon or early Norman ſtyle [10]; and at preſent conſiſts of a nave, a chancel, a ſmall North croſs, a narrow North aile, and a large modern veſtry-room.

The chancel is very antient. Near and about the end without are ſome fine pieces of Saxon ornamented work. Of theſe parts two ſeparate ſketches are given in plate XXV; fig. 2. repreſenting the North ſide, and fig. 3. the South ſide and the Eaſt end.

Within, in the South wall, are three ſtalls [11], with zigzag arches on eight round columns, ſeparated in pairs, ſtanding in diſtinct rows before each other, and having flowered capitals; and at the Weſt end of this chancel, on either ſide, the tops of two large arches ſtill remain, on which ſtood, probably, the tower of the original church. A Gothic Eaſt window completely fills up that end: and has in it the earl of Lancaſter's arms, Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or; a label of France [12].

The North ſide has five windows, divided into days by ſlender pillars with flowered capitals; but three of them are in part blocked up. On the South ſide were alſo five round zigzag windows, one only of which remains; a ſecond has been changed to later Gothic; and the upper parts of the other three are ſeen over the two lofty arches (within which are ſcreens) ſeparating this chancel from that of the new or South church. Beyond theſe, the nave has on this ſide one lofty pointed arch, and four lower ones obtuſely pointed; over which are twelve clereſtory windows. On the North ſide are five arches nearly ſimilar to thoſe on the South, but ſomewhat more lofty, and pointed; and twelve clereſtory windows, four only in the original circular form, eight others being changed to Gothic windows.

The preſent Weſtern door-way is Gothic; but on the left ſide of this door are plain veſtiges of the original door-way, with a ſemi-circular arch, and hatched zigzag mouldings. Above this door-way a large Gothic window occupies the whole Weſt end.

On the North ſide of the nave is a narrow aile, part of the original church, which, from the appearance on the outſide, ſeems to have extended farther into the caſtle-yard. In this part of the church is a lodging chamber [13] belonging to the porter of the caſtle [janitor caſtri]; whoſe houſe joins to the North ſide of the church at the Weſt end, and forms part of a range of antient buildings, which have evidently been prebendal houſes.

"From the level of the South wall of this church," ſays Mr. Bickerſtaffe, "near its centre, and coeval with it, projects a cloſet, with loop-holes, or oblong apertures in front, looking into the church-yard; backed, a few years ago, by a door, which I well remember opening into the church; called by tradition "Little Eaſe," ſuppoſed to have been a place of diſcipline; where ſcarcely above one at a time could be admitted, and that only in an erect poſture [14]."

On the left of the pulpit-ſtairs, as you aſcend, and cloſe to them, are three compaſs ſeats adjoining, or in one frame; that which takes the right of the other two, when occupied, has a turn-up ſitting-board, decorated with a ſemi-circle ex adverſo, in alto relievo, over a tree, well ſtemmed, and well cluſtered with berries, like grapes [15].

At the Eaſt end of this aile is a ſmall North croſs, or chapel, formerly called St. Anne's chapel, which contained ſeveral images, three tables of alabaſter, and an altar, part of which was remaining in 1722. This

---

[1] Originally in Leiceſter were only two church-yards, viz. St. Mary's within the walls, and St. Margaret's without the walls. All Saints, St. Martin's, and St. Nicholas, were provided about the latter end of the twelfth century. Carte, MS.

[2] Cotton MSS. Nero D. X. p. 133. [3] Pat. 28 Edw. I. m. 1. [4] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 17 Edw. II. m. 130. Leic.

[5] Pat. 32 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[6] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxi.; Inq. ad quod dampnum, 2 Ric. II. 102. Leic.; & Pat. 3 Ric. II. p. 1. m. 41.

[7] Pat. 10 Hen. IV. pars 2. m. 8.

[8] It may be proper alſo to ſtate, that Mr. Naſmith is unluckily wrong in both his conjectures, reſpecting this church, in a note on St. John's Hoſpital; the author of the Additions to Camden being perfectly correct in ſtating that the hoſpital and chapel of the Newark ſtill exiſt on ſtipends paid out of the dutchy of Lancaſter; and the hoſpital referred to by Chauncey being that of Wigſton, where Richard Clarke was ſome time maſter, and has an epitaph.—In Tanner's account of the Frieries alſo the words "in an iſland above the bridge" ſhould be transferred from the Black to the Auſtin Friers. See before, p. 301, note.

[9] Itinerary, vol. I. p. 16.

[10] The Saxon arch was higher than the Norman, which ſucceeded it, till the pointed arch was introduced after the time of Henry II.

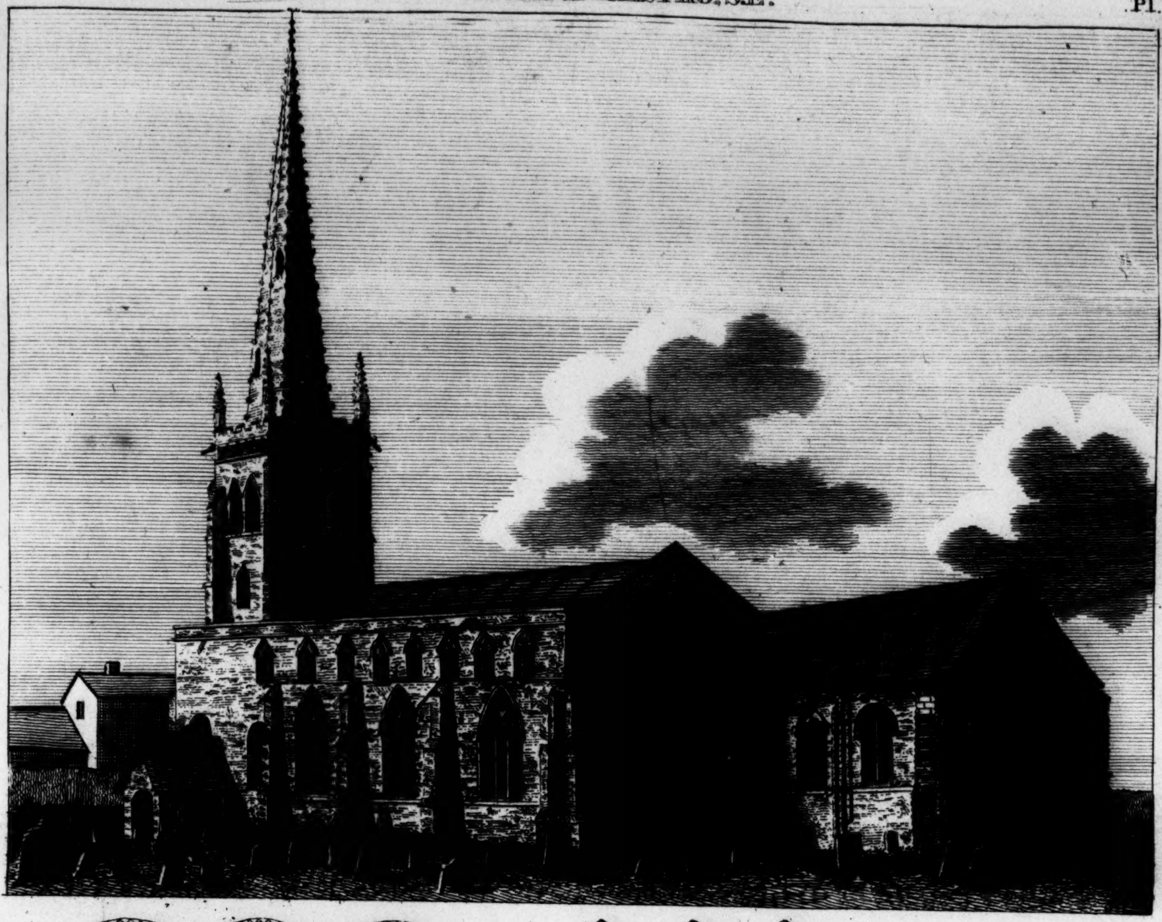
[11] Plate XXV. fig. 4.—Might not theſe three ſeats be for the accommodation of the three principal officers of the guild, the ſteward and the two wardens? They paid regular wages to only one prieſt. [12] See Plate XXV. fig. 12.

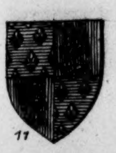
[13] This chamber, though actually within the walls of the church, is extraparochial. It is inhabited by a ſervant of the county juſtices, called the Caſtle-keeper.

[14] What Mr. Bickerſtaffe here deſcribes is probably only the aſcent to the rood-loft. Many ſuch are noticed by Mr. Bridges.

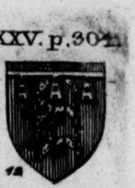
[15] Three ſeats in a ſimilar frame are near the landing of the South gallery ſtairs at St. Martin's; and ſomething of the ſame kind in St. Margaret's chancel.

St. MARY DE-CASTRO, S.E.

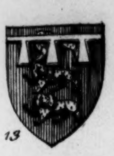




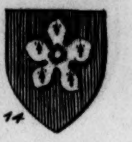
11



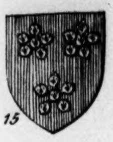
12



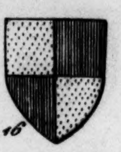
13



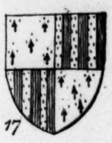
14



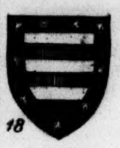
15



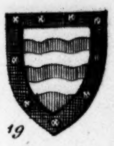
16



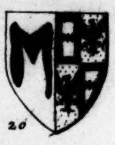
17



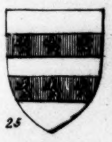
18



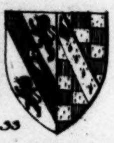
19



20



25



33

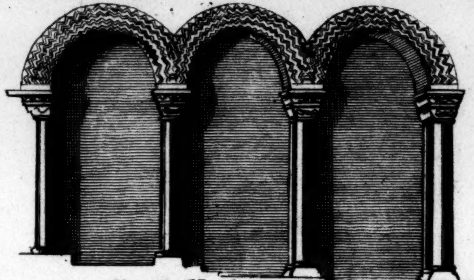


Fig. 4. In North Chancel.

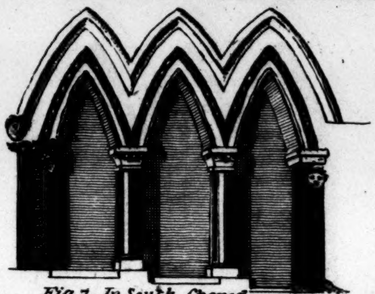

Fig. 7. In South Chancel.

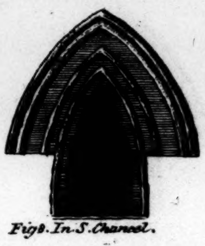

Fig. 8. In S. Chancel.

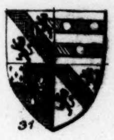
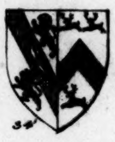
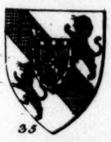


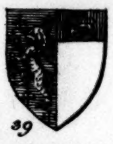
31



34



35



39

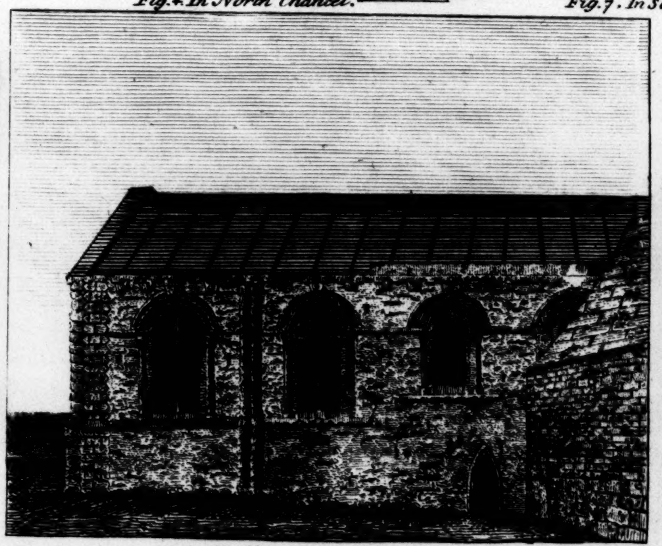


Fig. 2. N: Side of Old Chancel.

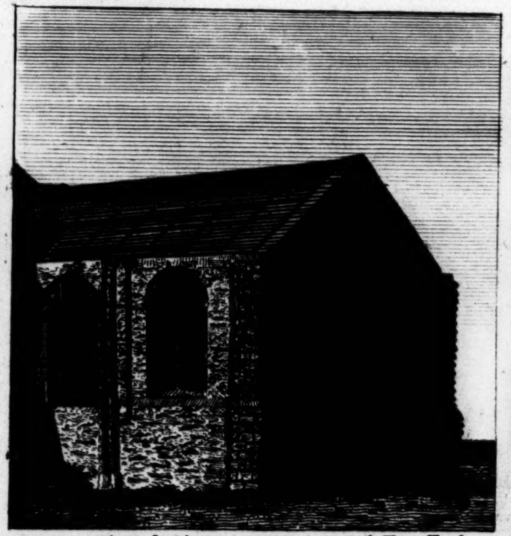

Fig. 3. S: Side of Old Chancel, & East End.

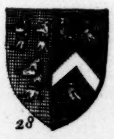
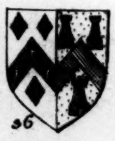
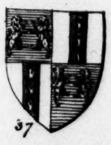


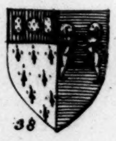
28



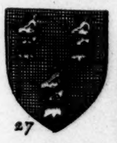
36



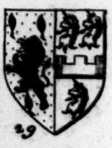
37



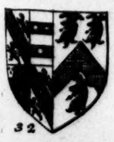
38



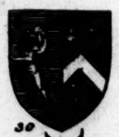
27



29

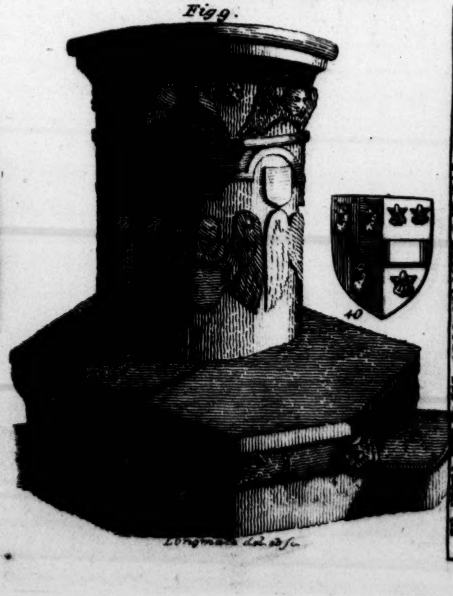


32



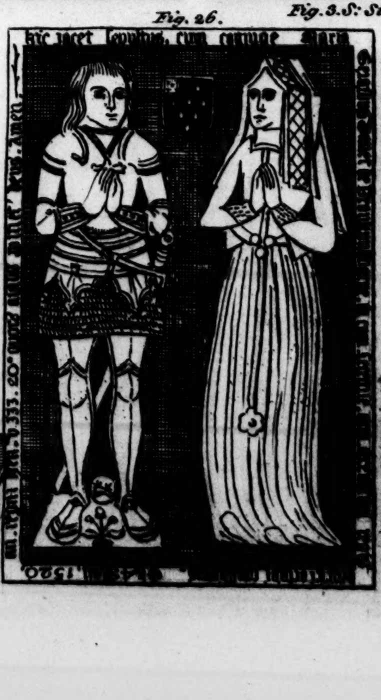
30

Fig. 9.



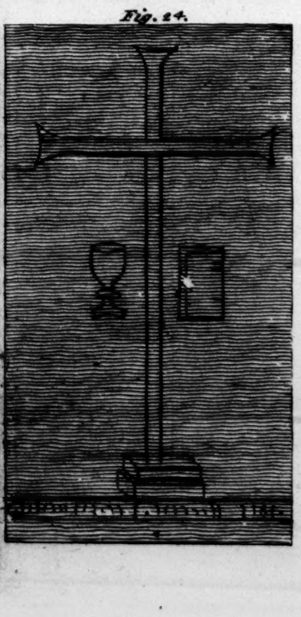
40
Longmate del. et sc.

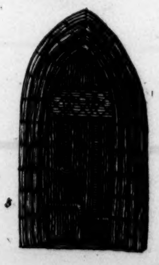
Fig. 26.



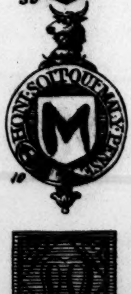
Hic jacet
cum conjuge Maria
Amen.
1520

Fig. 24.

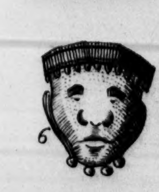




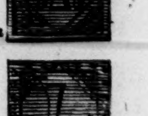
3



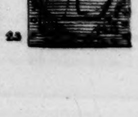
HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE
10



6



22



23

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

chapel is ſlated [1]. An old veſtry [2], which joined it to the Eaſt, was rebuilt in 1795; when the old doorway [3] on the North ſide of the chancel, which was round-arched, and profuſely adorned with zigzag mouldings, was removed.

The new church, which by tradition is ſaid to have been built by John of Gaunt (not long before the year 1400, at which period St. Mary's became parochial) is conſiderably wider than the old one, being 33 feet within the walls. When it was built, great apertures were made in what had been the outward South-wall of the collegiate church, that an eaſy communication might be had between the two churches.

It is aſtoniſhing how this South wall could have been ſo perforated, three lofty arches and four ſmaller ones having been cut through it, without diſturbing the upper works; among which, over the ſmall arches, are the twelve clereſtory windows, nine of which are now open; and, among theſe, on the ſide next to the new church, many of the fine ornaments and ſmall circular pillars, once external, are well preſerved.

The chancel of this church, which does not extend ſo far Eaſt as that of the old church by ſix yards, has at the Eaſt end two large ſemicircular windows with a ſmall oval window over them, and on the South ſide one large pointed window. In the South wall are three pointed ſtalls of different heights [4], with zigzag and dentals in the inner, and nail-head quatrefoils in the outer mouldings. The pillars are double, ſtanding in pairs as the former, and have flowered capitals. At a diſtance Eaſt of them is a ſmall plain piſcina [5].

The font is circular [6]; very curious, and rudely carved with heads and angels, much defaced by plaſtering.

The nave has two large pointed windows, with two ſmall circular ones; and over the whole eight clereſtory windows.

At the Weſt end, ſtanding as it were within the church, it not being ſkreened off, is a ſubſtantial tower (in which are five good bells) ſurmounted by four handſome pinnacles, and a lofty crocketed ſpire. See plates XXIV. and XXV.

The leaded roof of this additional church has been conſiderably lowered, as may be ſeen in plate XXV. The South door is pointed; and the wooden door has a rich top. The porch is large and modern.

On the South ſide of the church a large old wall is continued to the ſmaller Newark-gate.

In the year 1489, at Chriſtmas, the pariſhioners agreed that the ſeats ſhould be made in the nave of the old church; for which purpoſe a collection was made of what every one pleaſed to give every Sunday, from Chriſtmas till Midſummer. So likewiſe in 1490.

Mr. Mayor's pew was made in 1491.

The dean of St. Mary's college was bound to be at the charge of ſome things belonging to the church, and the pariſhioners of others; but the dean often gave ſeveral things of his good-will; and there is entered, in the churchwardens' accompts of 1498, a memorandum, "quod non pertinet ad decanum ad ſolvendum, neque pro reparatione veſtimentorum neque pro lotione eorum, neque pro organis, neque pro reparatione librorum neque coparum; ſed tamen ad inveniendum thus ad uſum ſummi altaris, ſtramentum eccleſiæ, & unum creſſet de ſebo ardente a feſto Omnium Sanctorum uſque ad Purificationem Beatæ Mariæ in nocte; & propter hoc recipit annuatim de auditore domini regis 10*s*."

The images in this church were the Rood and another Crucifix, Mary and John, the Virgin Mary, St. James, St. Hugo, St. George, &c.; a repreſentation of the Holy Trinity, and another of the five wounds, before which there was a light burning. The high altar had a lamp before it, and candleſticks belonging to it, and a canopy over it. The veſtments, altar-cloths, and other utenſils uſed in the church, were hallowed in the Abbey, for which a ſmall fee was paid.

The church being dedicated to St. Mary, her image was more eſpecially adorned with cloaths, and a crown, and placed in a tabernacle, with a candleſtick and light before it, and a table or picture (tabula) repreſenting her coronation.

From this church there uſed to be a ſolemn proceſſion every Whit-Monday to St. Margaret's church, in which the image of the Virgin Mary was carried under a canopy borne by four perſons, with a minſtrel, harp, or other muſic, and 12 perſons repreſenting the 12 Apoſtles [7], each of which had the name of the apoſtle whom he repreſented written on parchment fixed on his bonnet, and 14 perſons bearing banners, with the virgins in the pariſh attending. When they came to St. Margaret's, among other oblations, there were two pair of gloves, whereof one is ſaid to be for God, the other for St. Thomas of India.

In this church there were five ſolemnities on which oblations were made, and on the ſame days there were gatherings for the uſe of the building (ad opus fabricæ eccleſiæ); on the day of dedication of the church, otherwiſe called the Church holy-day, on the day of the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin, on All Saints Day, at Chriſtmas, and at Eaſter.

They uſed to have church ales, and the profit made by them was accounted for by the churchwardens at Chriſtmas and at Eaſter. Theſe were frequent in the reign of Henry VII; but ſeem in a great meaſure to have been left off in the time of Henry VIII.

At the Eaſt end of the South aile, near that called the Greater or Trinity Choir, a guild, or fraternity, called the Guild of the Holy Trinity, was founded by ſir Richard Sacheverel, knight, and the good lady Hungerford [8]; in which new deſks were made in 1495, with little images before them, for the expence whereof collections were made of the pariſhioners every Sunday ſucceſſively that year. The ſame year the ſtone of William the firſt lord Haſtings's arms, as a knight of the noble order of the Garter, was placed in the South wall of the old church, where it ſtill remains [9].

This guild uſed to make four gatherings in a year of the brethren and ſiſters belonging to it in the church, for defraying the expences of it, which conſiſted chiefly in the wages for their prieſt, which was paid quarterly, and their feaſts, the chief of which was a dinner on Trinity Sunday; beſide which, they had a ſupper that evening, and a breakfaſt next day, when the officers gave up their accompts, and new one were choſen for the year enſuing. The officers were a ſteward and two wardens; but after 1511 four wardens. The firſt I have met with were Mr. John Whatton, ſteward, and John Chamberleyn and Richard Morgan, wardens; who gave up their accompt in 1508, when Trinity Sunday happened on the 18th of June. By their accompt it appears that a dozen of ale coſt 20*d.*; a fat wether 2*s.* 4*d.*; ſeven lambs 7*s.*; fourteen goſlings 4*s.* 8*d.*; fifteen capons 5*s.*; thirty chicken 23*d.*; two gallons of cream 8*d.*; a gallon of honey and a quart 10*d.*; three quarters of charcoal 15*d.*; half a quarter of malt 2*s.*; a buſhel of wheat meal and a peck 22*d.*; fourteen geeſe 4*s.* 3*d.*; twelve capons 4*s.*; two loads of wood 22*d.*; four gallons of milk 4*d.*; for a pig 5*d.* &c. &c.

The guild had a ſtock of £9. 13*s.* 4*d.* which was paid into the hands of the ſteward and wardens; who thereupon engaged to make the dinner on Trinity Sunday, 1511, at their own coſt and charges, which they did, and next day paid in that ſtock, and gave account of what had been gathered at the ſeveral collections from the brethren and ſiſters, which example was followed by their ſucceſſors, by which means the ſtock increaſed in 1517 to £20.

---

[1] See, in p. 311, a charge for new ſlating it in 1513.

[2] A part of the old veſtry is ſhewn in the North view of the old chancel, plate XXV. fig. 2.

[3] Plate XXV. fig. 5, 6. [4] Ibid. fig. 7. [5] Ibid. fig. 8. [6] Ibid. fig. 9. [7] See more at the bottom of p. 314.

[8] Daughter and heir of ſir Thomas Hungerford, ſon of Robert, ſon of Walter lord Hungerford. She was married to Edward the ſecond lord Haſtings, who died November 8, 1507, leaving iſſue, by her, George the firſt earl of Huntingdon. After her firſt huſband's death, ſhe was married to ſir Richard Sacheverel, of Ratcliffe upon Soar, co. Nottingham (ſon of Ralph Sacheverel, of Hopwell in Derbyſhire), who died in 1533; and was buried in the church of St. Mary in the Newark.

[9] Argent, a maunch Sable. The arms are within a Garter, with the uſual motto of the order; and at each corner is repeated the family creſt, a buffalo's head, eraſed, Sable, crowned and gorged with a ducal coronet, and armed, Or. See Plate XXV. fig. 10.

In 1512, it is ſaid, "Omnia erant cara; modium frumenti 18*d.*"

In 1514, a table was ordered to be made, with the names of all the brethren and ſiſters, quick and dead, which was to ſtand on the Trinity altar.

The lady Mary Hungerford and ſir Richard Sacheverel were preſent at the dinner, and gave them £20.

Mr. William Wigſton was a witneſs to the accompts paſſed in 1518 and 1519; in which laſt year Richard Brokeſby, dean of Haſtings, and chaplain to king Henry VIII. was choſen ſteward.

For theſe particulars the reader is indebted to the reſearches of Mr. Carte; who has farther furniſhed, on this ſubject, the following extracts from a book concerning Trinity Guild.

	£.	s.	d.
Imprimis, pro pane, Johanni Barton, 3 dozen and a half, — —	0	3	6
Item, to William Fuk, for 2 dozen and 8 penny-worth, — —	0	2	8
Item, for a dozen of ale bought,	0	1	8
Malt was gadyrd for the renneland.
Item, for bringing of the ſame to Lawrence Hedeley's wife, —	0	0	6
Item, for bayſſe and leggs of moten for pyes, — — —	0	4	3
Item, to Robert Bolton, for a gude fat wedyr, — — —	0	2	4
Item, for 7 lames bought, —	0	7	0
Item, for 14 geſullings [goſlings] that John Chamberlayn bought, —	0	4	8
Item, for 15 capons, — —	0	5	0
Item, for 30 chekins, —	0	2	3
Item, for butter, — —	0	0	7
Item, for 2 gallons of creme, to Mrs. Smith, — — —	0	0	8
Item, for 2 gallons to Mrs. Rede,	0	0	1
Item, for a gallon to John Brown,	0	0	4
Item, for all manner of ſpyce, —	0	8	1
Item, for a gallon of honey and a quart,	0	0	10
Item, for ſalt and oatmeal, —	0	0	2
Item, for 3 quarters of charcoal,	0	1	3
Item, for half a quarter of malt,	0	2	0
For a buſhell of wheat meal and a peck,	0	1	10
Item, for 14 geeſe, —	0	4	8
Item, 12 capons, with feeding,	0	4	0
Item, for 2 lode of woode, —	0	1	10
Item, for eggs, — —	0	0	5
Item, for 4 gallons of mylke, —	0	0	4
Item, for vergeys, —	0	0	2
For a quarter of a lamb and odyr moton, for the brekefaſt for the count in craſtino,	0	0	6
Item, for a pig, —	0	0	5
Item, paid for drynking potts,	0	0	4
Item, for veſſell to St. John's,	0	0	4
Item, to Nicholas Hayn, coke, for dreſſing the dynar and ſepar and brekefaſt in craſtino: he found ſpytts and odyr, and fetchyed and bare home ye ſpytts and odyr, and veſſel, and found all maner of folks to turn and to help him, of hys own coſt, and gafe to the broderhode, to be brodyr and his wyff ſyſter, 6 —	0	5	0
Item, payed to the prieſts, for ſaying maſſe, in reward for the hole year,	0	13	4

Summa totalis, £4. 0*s.* 3*d.*

Memorandum, that John Chamberlayn, warden of the fraternity of the Holy Trinitye, Thomas Roban and Robert Edwards, ſtewards of the ſame, made their account on the morn aftyr Trinitye Sunday, the which was the 4th of June, the year of our Lord 1509, afore Mr. W. Maſon, comeſſary, Mr. William Gibſon, Mr. J. Whatton, ſir T. Derby, dean, and divers moo of the pariſhioners then being preſent.

Fyrſt, the recetts gadurryd in the chyrch of the bredren and ſyſters divers times, — — —				1	0	0
Sum total gadurryd at the dynar, 4 marc,				0	4	11
Sum total, — — —				4	18	3
Sum̃a expenſ' of Thomas Roban, for the dynar, —	1	2	2
Summa expenſ' of Robert Edward, for the dynar, —	2	0	0
Sum total of both, ————				3	2	2

Item, paid to the prieſts, —	0	13	4
Remain overplus illius anni, —	0	2	10

Memorandum, that John Chamberlayn, warden of the fraternity of the Holy Trinitye, and Thomas Knolesford and Robert Edwards, have delivered to John Whyte and William Prowit, of the money in hoole £8. wanting 5*d.*

And the pariſhyoners choſe Robert Edwards to be warden for the year to cum; and John Whyte and William Prowet to be ſtewards.

Memorandum, that John Whatton, ironmonger, Richard Morgan, kepar of the caſtle, Thomas Grene, farmer, and John Marſton, ſherman, recevyed the forſaid £9. 13*s.* 4*d.* and promyſed to make the dynar on Trinitye Sunday next coming apon their own coſts; and the money that thei gadur in the yer of the bredren and ſyſtren, and at the dynar on Trinitye Sunday, truly to gyf account thereof, and delyver hit to the paryſhioners, with the old ſtokke, on the morn affter Trinitye Sunday; and yf hit happen the 4 forſayd perſons any of them to deceſſe within the yer, thei that are on lyffe, or he that is on lyffe, ſhall anſwer for the hoole duty afoorwrytyn; and the paryſhioners ſayd that theſe ſhould be made an obligation; and thei that occupie the ſtokke ſhall be bounden therein to bryng in the ſayd ſtokke, in payn of forfeiting £40. yerely, on the morn affter Trinitye Sunday.

A memorandum, that thes forſayd perſons laudably and wyrſhypfully made the dinnar on ther own coſts and charges od Trinitye Sunday, in the year of our Lord 1511, and the yer of the reygn of king Henry the Eighth the 3d yer, the firſt perſons that made the dinar of their own coſts, the Holy Trinite be lowyde and quite them; and there was gaduryd at the ſayd dinar 5 marc and 3*s.*

Item, gaduryd twiſe in the church of the bredren and ſyſtern, —	0	10	3
Of the bredren and ſyſtern at dynar,	0	7	8

They choſe 4 guardians for the enſuing year, and delivered to them the old ſtock £9. 13*s.* 4*d.* upon conditions as above, and agreed to chuſe 4 yearly the day after Trinity Sunday.

Et concordatum eſt—alſo that every brother and ſiſter that is of this fraternity and gyld ſhall be in charity and loving either to other; quia Deus charitas eſt, et qui manet in charitate in Deo manet, et Deus in eo quod nobis concedat qui ſine fine vincit et regnat; amen.

In 1512, they choſe 2 of the old and 2 new guardians; and, by the accounts which were given up that year in aulâ caſtri, among others coram dño Henrico Croſby, vicario eccleſiæ, it appears that ſir Robert was prieſt of the fraternity.

Et memorandum, quod epiſcopi fecerunt jentaculum in feſto Sanctæ Trinitatis, 22° die Maii; et tamen omnia erant cara; modium frumenti, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Gathred at dinner, —	2	1	4
And the prieſt for his wages gathered,	0	19	0

Memorandum, quod ſolvi pro obitu tent' in die Martis prox' poſt feſtum Sanctæ Trinitatis, inprimis mihi (ſcil' decano, qui tunc erat guardianus) et ſociis quatuor 2*s.* Et duobus cantoribus 16*d.* clerico paroch' 2*d.* pulſatoribus 6*d.*

Et memorandum, we paid the prieſt for his quarter at Lammas more than was gathered of the brethren and ſiſters every one of us 4 guardians 2*s.* 5*d.*; ſum,	0	9	8
We paid, die Sancti Edmundi, for his 2d quarter at Martlemas, each 2*s.* 6*d.* ſum	0	10	0
And, in die Sancti Matthiæ, for his 3d quarter at Candlemas, every man of 4 of the ſtokke 2*s.* 7*d.*; ſum, —	0	10	5
Et memorandum, we paid the prieſt, ſir Robert, for his 4th quarter, at Invention of the Holy Croſs, or May-day, at the dinner on Trinitye Sunday, 4 nobles gathered of the brethren and ſiſtern, and made hoole the ſtokke every man,	3	10	0
Item, Mr. Dean paid for mending the Trinitie banner that was torn, —	0	0	3
Item, Mr. Booth paid for writing under our chapter-ſeal, that my lady Hungerford gave — —	0	1	4

Anno Domini 1514, feſtum Sanctæ Trinitatis, erat in feſto Sancti Barnabæ Apoſtoli.

The ſame day, ſir Thomas Derby, dean, Mr. Edward Booth, Mr. John Whatton, Edward Lydyrland, ſtewards of the Trinity Gilde, made the dinner of their own coſts; and paſſed accounts on the morn after in this manner following.

Imprimis, the prieſt paid his wages for the whole year after the rate of 8 marks.

Item, they delivered the whole ſtock received the year paſt.

And received the ſaid Trinitye Sunday, of good lady the lady Mary Hungerford, and ſir Richard Sacheverel, knt. —	1	0	0
Of other brethren and ſiſters at the dinner, with the reward of Mr. Thomas Aſhby of Quenby, — —	0	10	0
Mr. Doctor . . . . . . Darby, parſon of Northborough, one crown of gold, value	0	4	0

And for all charges deduct as hereafter doth follow:

First, the prieſt Robert's wages.

For the cook, John Brown, and his help,	0	5	0
For dirige and meſſe, prieſts and clarks,	0	2	6
Item, for ringers, — —	0	0	10
Item, for a certain writing in parchment, given to the good lady Hungerford and ſir Richard Sacheverel, knt. founders of the ſaid fraternity or gilde, —	0	1	4
Item, for the obligation of the year paſt,	0	0	6
Item, for parchment to make a table of names, — —	0	0	8
For mending the Trinity banner of ſylke,	0	0	3
Item, remains in keeping, for the entent to make a table with the names of the bretheren and ſiſters, quick and dead, ſtand on the Trinity altar, —	0	3	6

And ſo remaineth clearly in the hands of John Marſton and Robert Edward, churchwardens of this gylde, money for the more ſurety, £4. of good and lawfull money above, and beſide £14. afore rehearſed the old ſtock of the other year.

And the pariſhioners choſe new ſtewards for the year following; Mr. John Whatton, ſir Henry Croſby, vicar of Hungarton, Thomas Greene, farmer, and John Brown; and every of the 4 received of the old ſtock £3. 10*s.* and promiſſed to bring it in craſtino Sanctæ Trinitatis next coming; and of their charity, the dynar, and bounden by an obligation, as others have been before them.

Coſts for the dinner:

Imprimis, in pane, —	0	9	8
In meal, 5 ſtrikes, price —	0	4	4
In ſp'ebus 7*s.* in potu 19 dozen 16*d.*	1	5	0
In beef, — —	0	6	0
In motton, — —	0	0	7
For 5 lambs and a half, —	0	6	5
Two calves, — —	0	4	0
Item, veniſon, given by my lord Haſtings, 2 bucks, and my lady his madam.
Item, in reward to them that brought the veniſon, — —	0	2	0
Item, milke and cream, —	0	2	2
In eggs and butter, —	0	2	6
In capons 40, echone 4*d.* —	0	13	4
In geeſe 40, echone 4*d.* —	0	13	4
In chickens 40, echone 1*d.* —	0	3	4
In rabbits, 6 couple. —	0	1	8
Item, wood and charcoal, —	0	2	10
Item, for veſſels borrowed of our Lady Gilde, St. John's, and St. Margaret's, — —	0	0	8
Item, for potts to drink in, —	0	0	9
Item, for keeping the yates and killing calves, to Lawrence, —	0	0	8
Item, to Barth. Chamberlain,	0	0	4
Item, for honey, —	0	0	4
Item, for baking veniſon at Prewet's, ut putatur, — —	0	1	0
Sum, — —	5	7	0

The people at dinner 56 meſſe; and 40 at ſupper; and on the morn 8 meſſe. Laus eternaliter Deo.

In the year 1517, the ſtock came to £20. each ſteward having in his hand £5.

George Villers, of Scraptoft, was one of the ſtewards in 1517, 1518, 1519.

In 1534, the payments from St. Mary's church were,

To the dean, — —	13	0	0
To the prior of Shene, —	0	1	6
To the king, — —	1	12	0
To John Park, vicar, —	4	0	0
To John Brewer, a prebendary,	2	0	0

On the diſſolution of religious houſes the value of this collegiate church was thus ſtated:

"Colleg' B. Marie juxta Caſtrum Leic', valet in Reddit' & firm' omn' terr' & ten' p̃dict' colleg' ꝑtinen', dimiſſ' diverſis ꝑſonis tam ad volunt' quam ꝑ indenturam, ſolvend' ad feſta Annunc' B. Marie & Sc̃i Mic̃his Archangeli equaliter prout ꝑticl̃r ꝑ rentale inde fact' & renovat' apparet, ꝑ ann'	xxiiii l̃. xix s̃. vi đ.

Reddit' mobil' annuatim de diverſis liberis tẽntis p̃d' recipiend', viz. de precio xvii gallinarum ii s̃. ii đ. quelibet gallina appretiatur ad ii đ.; & ix capon' ii s̃. iii đ. quilibet capo appreciatur ad iii đ.; in toto ſolvend' ad feſta p̃d', prout ꝑticl̃r ꝑ rentale inde fact' & renovat' apparet' ꝑ ann'	v s̃. i đ.
Firma manſionis ib̃m ꝑ ann' valuat' — —	v s̃. viii đ.
	xxvi l̃. ix s̃. iii đ.

Inde repriſ', viz.

In reddit' reſolut' diverſis perſonis ſequent', viz.

Dño regi ut ducat' ſui Lancaſtr', vi s̃. i đ. nuper prioratui de Shene xviii đ. & caſtro Leic' viii đ. in toto ꝑ ann' —	viii s̃. iii đ.
Feod' ballivi ib̃m ꝑ ann'	xl s̃.
Feod' ſupervifor' omn' terr' & tenem' p̃d' ꝑ ann' —	xx s̃.
Stipend' Radi Cockley, decani ib̃m, ꝑ ann', —	x s̃.
Stipend' vi al' capellan' & clericor' ib̃m, cuilibet eor' ad xlvii s̃. ii đ. ob. ꝑ ann', in toto	xiiii l̃. iii s̃. iii đ.
Annuitate ſive annuali penſione ſolut' Ric̃o Fowler per decan' & colleg' p̃d' ꝑ ann' —	xx s̃.
Decimis dño regi annl̃r inde ſolut' ꝑ ann' —	xlvii s̃. iii đ. ob.
	xxvi l̃. xviii s̃. ix đ. ob.
Et ſic habent ſurplus,	viii s̃. vi đ. ob.

"The ſaid college was founded by Robert earle of Leiceſter for the fyndyng of eight prieſts for ever, to ſing maſs, and to pray for the ſoul of the ſaid founder within the pariſh church of our Lady. Howbeit there be at theſe preſents but ſeven of the ſaid prieſts now reſydent there, ſo that there is one rowme voyde; and there be within the ſaid pariſh D houſelyng people; and there ys a manſion houſe for all the ſaid preſts, which is before valued. Alſo the ſaid college church is within the pariſh church of our Lady, where there ys a vicar endowed, and hath a pention of the king's majeſty of viii l̃. by the yeare, by reaſon of the diſſolution of the monaſterie of Leiceſter; and hath no other profytts but only hys manſion houſe and a little garden, ſet upon the Weſt part of the ſaid college, next to Gunne dyke. Alſo there hath been no lands, or any other poſſeſſions to the ſame belonging ſold or mynyſhed ſythen the tyme before limited; nor no plate, jewels, ornaments, or other moveable goods, to the ſame alſo belonging."

Of the deans and prebendaries of this church, we are not able to furniſh any thing that approaches to a liſt; but ſhall here give the names that have occurred.

DEANS.

Gubertus decanus occurs in 1344[1].

Thomas Derby became dean in 1488; and was ſucceded in 1514 or 1515 by Sir John Pexſal or Pycſale, who died in 1520.

Richard Pexal, ſigned the compoſition, as dean, with Wigſton's Hoſpital in 1520; and at the convocation, holden April 5, 1533, ſubſcribed by proxy.

Richard Fowler was dean in 1534.

Ralph Cockley was dean at the diſſolution, 1539.

PREBENDARIES.

Two vacancies in the prebends of this church were filled by king Edward III. in 1328 and 1339.

Thomas de Melborne[2], April 25, 1372, was prebendary of the ſtall marked E in the collegiate church of St. Mary juxta Caſtrum; which he exchanged with Peter de Dalton, prebendary of Ketton in the church of Lincoln, 1372.

Roger de Bury, chaplain, prebendary of the ſtall marked H, exchanged it, 3 kal. Dec. 1372, with John de Swafham, rector of Netelham, 1372.

John Welley, prebendary of the ſtall called B, had licence to exchange it with John Martyn for the vicarage of Hyllebourne, in the dioceſe of Lincoln, both being in the patronage of the Abbey of Leiceſter, July 14, 1411[3].

John Boroughe, a prebendary of this church, and warden of Sapcote, was buried in the chancel[4].

John Brewer was a prebendary here in 1534.

Nov. 1, 1505, Charles Villars conveyed to Richard Reynolds, Richard Gyllot, and others, a meſſuage and two cottages, with their appurtenances, in Leiceſter, in the ſtreet called the Swyne-market, between the tenant of Robert Crofte on the one ſide, and the lands of St. Mary de Caſtro on the other, and extending from the Swyne-market to the Church-lane.

The lands and poſſeſſions belonging to the late college of the bleſſed Virgin Mary over againſt the caſtle in Leiceſter, were demiſed to Edward Holt, eſq. by queen Elizabeth; and at length by her granted, with other property, to the corporation of Leiceſter in fee-farm; under which title they occur in the chamberlain's accompts annually, at a rental of £32. 13*s*. 10*d*.; with £5. 3*s*. 6*d*. more, for Lammas tithes and herbage due for grounds in St. Mary's pariſh.

Dec. 22, 1577, there was a pariſh meeting, at which the churchwardens gave up their accompts, and new ones were choſen. At this accompt it was agreed by the whole conſent of the aſſembly there, that thirteen of the chief of the pariſh ſhould be choſen, to ſet order for ſuch things as ſhall be done for the church behoof; and without the conſent of them, or moſt part of them, as concerned the church-work, charges at viſitation, and ſuch like, nothing ſhould be done. The names of the thirteen then choſen were, Mr. Danet, Mr. Ruding, Mr. Worſhip, Mr. Temple[5], Mr. Ludlam, Robert Burſtal, Henry Newbold, Thomas Chamberleyn, Thomas Worthe, John Worſhip, John Walker, John Wright, William Taylor. It was agreed alſo that every one of the pariſh that had heretofore paid for church-works 4*d*. ſhould pay 4*d*.; and each one that had paid 2*d*. ſhould pay 4*d*.; and he that paid 1*d*. ſhould pay 2*d*.; and every one that paid a halfpenny ſhould pay 1*d*. from this time following. And that every ſervant taking wages ſhould pay by the year 1*d*.

Dec. 13, 1584, the thirteen were Mr. Pannit, Mr. Worſhip, Mr. Ludlam, Robert Burſtal, Henry Newbold, Thomas Chamberlayn, Thomas Moor, John Worſhip, John Walker, John Wright, William Taylor, Robert Nyx, and Richard Burſtall, who made ſeveral ſtanding orders for the better government of the pariſh. The three firſt concerned the clerk and ſexton, regulating the time and manner of their ringing for prayers on Sundays, holy-days, and their evens, and enjoining their attendance on and dutiful behaviour towards the miniſter; by the fourth, every of the thirteen abſent from church-accompt, or quarterly-meeting, when warned, forfeited 1*s*.; by the fifth, ſuch poor as being able and come not to church on Wedneſdays and Fridays, were to have no relief; by the ſixth, they determined a certain ſum to be gathered by the churchwardens, or levied by the thirteen, to mend the miniſter's wages; by the ſeventh, they obliged every pariſhioner and inmate to pay, yearly, quarterly, monthly, or weekly, what ſhould be levied on them by the thirteen, or ſeven of them, towards relieving the poor, mending the miniſter's wages, to the clerk, and other duties, on pain of 1*s*. for every default; by the eighth, every houſeholder was obliged to pay, or ſee to be paid, for his inmates, what they ſhould be levied at for the purpoſes aforeſaid, on pain of 1*s*. for every default. All the forfeitures were applied to the poor man's box.

By the churchwardens' accompts it appears, that, on Dec. 1, 1560, there was delivered to the churchwardens an indenture, bearing date the 4th of September, in the 30th year of Henry the Eighth's reign, ſealed with the ſeal of the college of St. Mary[6], for a houſe and garden, which was bought out of the church-ſtock, for the maintenance of the prieſt. How this houſe and garden came to be alienated does not appear, but ſo in fact it was.

The corporation, being entitled to all the profits which the dean and canons enjoyed, had conſequently the church-yard, the ſmall tithes, and offerings, which in other places belong to the vicar; ſo that the vicar here had nothing to depend on for his ſubſiſtence, but a ſmall penſion of £8. a year from the crown, and the voluntary contributions of the pariſhioners. But, Aug. 13, 1 Jac. I. the corporation agreed that Mr. Jeſſon Clarke, ſtipendiary miniſter of the pariſh church of St. Mary, ſhould be tenant to the town of the Eaſter-book, or duties of St. Mary's pariſh, and of the tithe-pigs, and chriſoms, as Richard Normond had them, and ſhould alſo have the mortuaries from Michaelmas following, from year to year, upon his honeſt behaviour, during the town's pleaſure, not exacting any tithes in other ſort than heretofore they have been paid at Eaſter, paying yearly to the town upon Tueſday in Eaſter-week 40*s*. and paying alſo thenceforth the 2*s*. a year which was due to the vicarage of St. Nicholas. At length the town granted to the vicar of St. Mary's £10. a year, to be paid him by the chamberlains. And the vicar having no houſe belonging to him, one Mrs. Lacy offered the pariſh of St. Mary, upon their paying her £20. to ſettle on the vicars for ever the houſe late in the occupation of Mr. Joſiah Bond, vicar of the ſaid pariſh; whereupon, March 12, 1679, at the petition of the pariſh, the town granted them £5. out of the chamber of the town, towards the payment of it. And, Aug. 13, 1706, at a common-hall, it was ordered that Mr. Fox (the vicar) ſhould have the rent of St. Mary's church-yard till the end of Mr. Wilkins's leaſe; and after that the uſe and benefit of the church-yard ſo long as the hall ſhould think fit; and on June 10, 1709, it was again ordered, that Mr. Fox, vicar of St. Mary's, ſhould be tenant of St. Mary's church-yard, paying yearly for the ſame 10*s*. and enjoy it during the pleaſure of the hall; and that the 3*s*. 4*d*. charged on him for the Eaſter-book and other dues of the pariſh ſhould not for the future be ſuperſeded, but that he ſhould pay the ſame; but at the ſame time it was ordered, that he ſhould be paid by the chamberlains 13*s*. 4*d*. over and above the 10*s*. already granted him during the pleaſure of the hall.

In 1564, the officiating miniſter of St. Mary's was ſtyled "curate;" and there were then 120 families in the pariſh[7].

In 1650, the value of the vicarage was returned to be £13. 6*s*. 8*d*.; and the vicar altogether inſufficient, ſcandalous, and a pluralitan[8].

In the king's books it is valued at £8.; and the clear yearly value is ſtated at £60.

---

[1] He bought ſeveral houſes that year in the South gate of Leiceſter.

[2] He died in 1388.

[3] Reg. Arundel, Archiep. Cant. pars 2. fol. 85.

[4] See his epitaph, p. 314.

[5] Robert Nyx was choſen, in the room of Temple, Dec. 19, 1582.

[6] See this ſeal in plate XVII. fig. 4.

[7] See the Introductory Volume, p. lxxxvii.

[8] Ibid. p. xcviii.

Obſervations on, and Extracts from, the Accompts of the Churchwardens of St. Mary de Caſtro.

1491. Mr. Mayor's pew was made.

1493. Paid for the roodlight, £.0 2 8

Paid for holly for the church ob in 1494, 0 0 8

Paid to the wardens of the ſepulchre light, 2 2 0

There were then organs in the church.

Paid at Whitſuntide, for bread, ale, fleſh, &c. for the apoſtles and others, 0 3 4

Paid to the clerk, for bringing of Our Lady auter by 0 0 6

Paid quarterly to Thomas Walker, 10*d.* (So alſo in 1494 and 1504; and to Thomas Cowdelow 1505.)

Recept. in 1493, die Dedicationis, de parochianis, ad opus eccleſiæ, 0 4 6

Rec. in die Aſſumptionis Virginis, ad opus eccleſiæ, 0 2 9

In die Omnium Sanctor', ad opus eccleſiæ, 0 5 9

Rec. pro oblatione in die Natalis Domini, 0 5 5½

Rec. de decano et canonicis, pro obitu Margaretæ Kegworth, 0 1 0

1494. The churchwardens are called churchmaſters, and ſo in other years.

Paid for coles for holy fire, 0 0 1½

A candleſtick mended that ſtood near the high altar.

Memorand', quòd parochiani eccleſiæ B. Mariæ de Caſtro, Leic', elegerunt Johannem Lokkey et Will. Fukes yconomos dictæ eccleſiæ in vigiliâ Sc̃i Adelmi ep̃i, in menſe Maii; et dñs Thomas Derby, decanus, accipiebat hos per manus ſuas ad veſperas in eâdem die Dominicâ, et in pulpito demonſtravit ad parochianos; et nemo contradicebat, ſed omnes conſenſerunt.

1495. Rec. of Mr. William Gibſon, for the third bell 2*s.*; for his wife's obit for the bells 4*s.*

Item, of Mr. William Gibſon, to the frame of the bells, for Margaret his wife's ſoul, in vigiliâ exalt', 0 4 4

Three bells, or third bell, 0 1 0

All the five bells, 0 4 0

For Katharine Clarke's, 0 1 2

For three peals of all the bells, 0 2 8

For 4 bells ringing, 2*s.* 4*d.*; other years, 2*s.* 6*d.*

Rec. of Mr. Gerard Danet [1], for waſting of torches for his lady, 0 3 0

Rec. on Pace-day for the church-work of the pariſhioners, 0 12 9

For waſte of torches, 0 4 0

Rec. upon the kirk holy-day, 0 4 1

Rec. of the church ale clearly, 0 19 0

Received at St. Margaret's 6*d.* and ſo yearly.

N. B. Here was a Lady light, and a Sepulchre light.

Received clearly of the church ale at St. Laurenttide 4 nobles.

Received for the offering on our Lady day's Aſſumption, to the church work, 0 2 8

Item, on Wedneſday after Relique Sunday, our church holiday, 0 4 0

Received clearly of the church ale on Holy-rood day, 0 5 4

Item, on Allhallows day, to the church-work, of the pariſhioners, 0 5 8

Rec. de oblat' in die Natal' Dñi, 0 5 8

—— in die Paſchæ de oblat', 0 10 6

—— on the church holyday for the offerings, 0 4 2

Item, on our Lady's Aſſumption for the offering, 0 3 2

Item, on Allhallow day, for the offering to the church-work, 0 5 4

On Chriſtmas-day, for the church-work, 0 5 5

Memorandum, on St. Vincent day, the churchmaſters began to gadyr for the deſks in the great quire, and received 21*d.*; Sexageſima Sunday received 11*d.*; and ſo they continued to gather every Sunday.

Mem. the frames for all the bells made this year; carpenters received 6*d.* per diem for work; inferior ſervants under them 3*d.* per diem; labourers 4*d.* a day.

Paid for ſweeping the ſepulchre, 0 0 6

Paid for tallow-candles for the church on Chriſtmas-day, 0 0 8

Paid for wax for the rood-light at Chriſtmas-day, 0 2 11

Paid for free-ſtone for the deſks, 0 8 4

Paid for carrying the ſame, 0 0 2

Paid for ſawing timber for the deſks, and other matters about the deſks, which this year were made in the great quire, (N. B. there were old deſks before) 0 4 7

Paid for painting the little images for the deſks in the great quire, 0 1 4

For 13 candleſticks, 0 18 5

For making the images before the deſks, 0 6 8

For ſetting-in the ſtone of lord Haſtings's arms in the wall, 0 16 0

To Wygley, for painting the ſame, 0 3 0

For painting the candleſticks in the rood-loft, 0 3 4

For the rood-light wax and making, 0 5 2

Annual obits in St. Mary's church.

Katharine Clerk, in die S^ti^ Valentini 20*d.*; paid by Nicholas Clerk. The churchwardens paid for ringing her obit 6*d.*; ſometimes received only 14*d.* viz. clearly paid by the dean, 1495, &c.

1495. Received of Iſabel Large, for her huſband's obit, 0 1 0

Rec. of John Prowet, for three bells for his wife's obit, 0 1 0

Rec. pro obitu Agnetis Kebull, pro campanis, 0 4 0

Of this nature, not annual, are many in other years.

Mem. Mr. Dean gave voluntarily ſeveral ſums towards playing on the organs every year, 0 13 4

Our Lady's tabernacle, 0 3 4

Item, he gave a good blew ſilk cloth to hold the paten of the chalice on, 0 1 0

1498. The glaſs windows made this year or mended; gatherings were made for that purpoſe often.

Rec. for all the bells and burial, and 2 torches, 0 12 4

For all the bells and burial in the church, 0 10 8

Rec. for waſte of 4 torches, 0 1 4

Several ſums were given and bequeathed towards making our Lady's tabernacle.

Mem', quòd dicti yconomi Joh̃es Whatton & Joh̃es Chamberlayne fecerunt ſuum computum coram M'ro Gibſon et parochianis eccleſiæ colleg' B. Mariæ de Caſtro Leic', in feſto Reliquiarum, viz. in vigiliâ Sancti Swithuni.

1499. The dean, of his devotion, cauſed the lamp before the high altar and the candleſtick on the high altar to be mended, and which coſt him 0 1 2

Item, he gave a cenſer, 0 4 0

Item, he cauſed an image of the Holy Trinity to be painted on the quire walls, and another of St. Hugo, 0 2 0

Paid for mending of the clerk's chamber in ſlating and lyme, 0 1 0

Paid for a play in the church, in Dominicâ infra octav' Epiph', 0 2 0

Item, paid for hallowing Mr. Pryke's cloth, 2 ſtolis, and 2 corporaſes, &c. 0 1 2

Memorandum, quòd decanus fecit feneſtram borealem pro ſuo memoriale, & ſolvit propterea, 1 3 4

Item, for painting St. James, and underſetting the body of the church there, and making the tabernacle, 4 marks.

Item, for mending 7 images' hands and feet, 0 2 0

1500. Making of Our Lady candleſtick, 0 5 0

For painting the ſame, 0 0 4

Paid for hallowing a veſtment, and three altar cloths at the abbey, 0 1 8

For making the ſilver candleſtick, 0 0 10

For thakking upon the ſtore-houſe, 0 0 4

The organiſt quarterly 3*s.* 4*d.*; and the dean, I think, paid him.

---

[1] See hereafter, p. 316.

1501, Richard Morgan, janitor caſtri, was choſen one of the churchwardens. The churchwardens uſually continued in two years, and ſome four.

1502. Paid for coles for the holy fire, 0 0 1

Paid for clenſing 3 tables of alabaſter and divers images in St. Anne's chapel, 0 3 0

Nails to faſten the tables and images, 0 0 1

Jan. 19. Paid by the dean and canons for Margaret Kegworth's obit, — 0 1 0½

1504. The clerk, for hanging the altars yearly 6*d*. (He had 8*d*. in 1595.)

Paid to the bell-ringer (who ſeems to be ſexton) quarterly 10*d*.

Linen for the clerk's rochet, 4 yards, 0 1 7

Agnes Maſs, for making the ſaid rochet, 0 0 6

Charcoal and a cord for the vail, 0 0 2

Paid for mending the garment of Jeſus and the croſs painting, — 0 1 3

Paid for a pound of hemp to mend the angels heads, — — 0 0 4

Paid for linen cloth for the angels heads and Jeſus' hooſe, making in all, 0 0 9

Et memorandum, quod dñs Tho. Derby, decanus, eodem anno fecit fieri de novo, de ſuis propriis expenſis, unum crucifixum, cum Mariâ et Johanne, ſtantem ſupra clanſtrum magni chori Scæ Trinitatis; et unam tabulam coronationis Beatæ Mariæ ſtantem ſuper ſummum altare in diebus feſtis; et ſolvebat pro illis 4 marcas.

Paid quarterly for playing on the organs 20*d*. by the pariſh, and as much by the dean.

1505. The organ-player was Roger Okley.

Paid for making the candleſticks on the high altar, — — 0 0 4

Paid for mending the candleſticks afore the ſaid high altar, — — 0 2 6

Paid for ſoldering the holy-water-ſtock at the North-door of the church, 0 0 7

Paid for ſlating the reveſtry; and lath, nails, lime and ſand, and ſlates, — 0 8 4

Paid for the plank that lies afore the high altar, — — 0 1 4

Paid for mending 3 white copes, 0 3 6

For the black cope, — 0 2 6

For ribband for it, — — 0 0 8

Four tapers of wax for the rood-light, 0 0 4

Memorandum, the dean gave the ſtone, and paved the church-porch, — 0 0 8

Ad Natale Dñi for the high-rood light, 0 3 10

Paid for making the copper-croſs, ſcouring the other croſs and cenſer, ... ing the altar, and ſweeping the windows, 0 1 4

For freſhing the canopy over the altar that the ſacrament is in, — 0 0 8

For making the foot of the holy-water ſtock at the veſtry-door, — — 0 1 0

For 8 pound of wax and making, to the high-rood, — — 0 4 8

For ſetting of Our bleſſed Lady in the church, — — 0 1 0

Memorandum, quod omnia jocalia et ornamenta data eccleſiæ viſa fuerunt à parochianis in feſto Sancti Andreæ apoſtoli in magno choro poſt nonam ei, &c.

1506. Received on Allhallow-day for the offering[1] to the church-work, — 0 3 6

Paid for making the four St. George's croſſes on the ſteeple-ſhaft, — 0 1 8

Paid at ſeveral times to one for playing on the organs 2*d*. a day; and the dean paid as much.

Paid to a frier-preacher, for playing on the organs in die Aſſumpt. B. Mariæ, 0 0 6

For horning the lantern, — 0 0 5

For playing on the organs in die Omn. Sanctorum to one of the abbey 4*d*.; the dean as much, and meat, drink, and beds.

Paid to Henry Pye, for Midſummer-quarter, for his wages of ſexton there, 0 0 10

Paid to Henry Yerle, for his quarter at Michaelmas, — — 0 0 10

1507. Paid to Henry Yerle Pye, bell-ringer, for his quarter of Michaelmas 20*d*. and ſo in following years.

Paid for 20 pounds of lead, — 0 0 8

Paid for a pound of hemp for the heads of the angels, — 0 0 3

Paid for painting the wings and ſcaff, &c. 0 0 8

Item, the dean paid for the glaſing a light of St. Anne in St. Anne chapel, 0 6 8

And of his own, — 0 3 4

Item, the young men paid for the . . . on the candleſticks, with a branch of 5 lights on the long perke of the king's money, and ſome of our Lady light, 1 2 0

The clerk's ſurplice waſhing and mending, 0 0 2

Paid to the ringers of all the bells for our king Harry the Seventh, the which deceaſed the 25th of April, — 0 1 2

1509. Paid for 3 ells of cloth linen for the clerk's ſurplice and half a yard 2*s*. 3*d*. for making the ſame 4*d*. — 0 2 7

Paid for making the ſilver candleſtick, 0 0 6

Paid for mending the candleſtick of iron afore the Trinity, — 0 0 4

Paid to the clerk for playing on the organs for Chriſtmas quarter, — 0 1 8

Paid by the dean as much of his devotion; and ſo in following years.

Paid for our Lady's crown, — 0 1 6

For mending the banner of the Trinity, 0 0 2

Paid for the canopy for the ſacrament, 0 1 8

Paid to the painters of the tabernacle for the firſt payment £9. for full payment £9; the dean gave 20*s*. Some other payments were about it.

1511. Rec. for linen cloth that was bought for the vicar's ſurplice, — 0 0 3

Paid for a ſurplice for the vicar, 0 6 8

Paid for a lanthorn for the church, 0 0 6

Obit of John Geffrey, to be kept for ever annually, for all the bells, 0 4 0

Obit of Andrew Langton, annually, 0 4 0

1512. Anno Henrici VIII. 4°; et Tho. Derby, decani collegii, 24°.

Rec. of Mr. William Wigſton the younger, for his father's ſoul, which God pardon, to be prayed for, — 0 10 0

Paid for binding the ſilver Goſpel books and covering the back with leather, 0 0 4

Paid for mending a ſtreamer, the which was king Edward's ſtandard.

Paid for bread for St. Philippe, 0 0 1

For binding the Goſpel-book covered with ſilver; the dean paid as much, 0 0 4

For mending a ſilk ſtreamer, which was torn on Whitſon Monday, — 0 0 4

The clerk's wages at Michaelmas, 0 1 8

The ſexton's, — — — 0 1 0

1513. Rec. cognat' Tho. . . . . . le Fryth, pro tertiâ campanâ pro uxore ſuâ quæ obiit apud Leyc. at Poul End, & veniebat de Markefield ex infirmitate peſtilentiæ, 12*d*.; et ſepulta eſt in cemeterio Sanctæ Mariæ; et dabat unam vaccam pro mortuo; cujus animæ propitietur Deus, Amen. 7 die infra Octav. Nat. Beatæ Mariæ.—Et memorand. quod in Vigiliâ Sancti Martini epiſcopi, ... Sawyear died at Mr. Morgan's, whoſe name was Lawrence, dwelling in Tyndale, and had but two bells; his mortuary a white horſe, performed by Lawrence Hedley, &c. 10*s*.

Rec. for all the bells for Mr. Doctor Maſon, commiſſary, in feſto Sancti Magni Martyris, 4*s*.

Paid for mending a ſtone over the Trinity quire on the South ſide, — 0 0 4

Paid for ſlating St. Anne's chapel, 0 6 8

On the feaſt of St. Auguſtin in Auguſt was a great flood.

1515. Robert Edwards and Tho. Croſſe paſſed their accounts coram dño Johe Pexſel, decano eccleſiæ.

The preceding accounts ſeem to have been made in the time of Thomas Derby, dean, who now, it is ſuppoſed, was dead.

---

[1] Ergo, what was received for the church-works were offerings of the pariſhioners on certain days for that purpoſe. T. C.

Paid for 6 yards of linen cloth, to make the clerk a ſurplice, — —	0	2	10
Paid for making the ſame, —	0	0	4
Paid for waſhing the vicar's ſurplice,	0	0	1
Paid for a board for the turnſtile,	0	0	4
John Chamberlayn, for the biſhop,	0	1	8
1516. Paid to the 12 apoſtles and the bearers of banners and other things down at Pentecoſt, for waſhing, and 4 that beryd Henry, and other things done,	0	5	8
1517. Rec. for the obit of Henry Cartt,	0	0	4
1520. This year churchwardens are firſt ſo called, being before ſtyled churchmaſters.
Received for the obit of my lord biſhop of Carliſle, — —	2	0	0
Received for the obit of the dean,	0	8	0
Item, received of the king's game,	2	6	0
1521. Received for burial of George Typping, for all the bells, —	0	4	0
For the ſame George's lying in the church,	0	6	8
For the obit of Mr. Peccal, dayen,	0	4	0
Paid for ſprinkles of the church,	0	0	2
Paid for cord for the rood-loft and for the tabernacle of our Lady, —	0	0	4
Paid for 2 ſtrike of charcoal to make the hallowed fire, — —	0	0	3
Paid for waſhing the lawn-bands for the ſaints in the church, —	0	0	2
1523. Paid for making the light afore the five wounds, — —	0	0	2
1525. Paid for hallowing the 3 albes,	0	0	8
John Coke, glaſier, agreed to mend all the glaſs windows in the church for life, receiving yearly — —	0	1	8
Paid for the tabul of St. Ann's altar,	0	0	8
Paid for the dreſſing of our Lady,	0	2	0
For making 2 rochets to the children,	0	0	4
The church-porch built.
Edward Lydurland and George Baynesford, churchwardens, with conſent of the pariſh, bought 3 copes, with a veſtment, and 2 . . . . . . of which . . . . . damaſke flowered with . . . . . flower de luces,	20	0	0
1526. Paid for wax for the rood-loft and the 5 wounds, — —	0	3	0

1543. The church is indebted to William Tebb, which the churchwardens borrowed of him, 20*s.*

Item, the ſaid church is in debt to the ſaid Mr. Tebb, for tymber, 5*s.* 8*d.*; which money and timber is borrowed towards making the North aile.

1544. At the time of accounts, the church being indebted to the churchwardens £3. 6*s.* 8*d.*; a chalice was given them to pledge; which chalice was next year ſold, and the debt diſcharged.

1555. The churchwardens are called church-reves.

Memorandum, that the mayor, the churchwardens, and the body of the whole pariſh, have, on this preſent day, Dec. 10, 1555, hired ſir William Burrows, clerk, to ſerve the church for one whole year, from the feaſt of St. Thomas the Apoſtle next, and have given him one penny in earneſt, promiſing to pay him his accuſtomed wages due for the ſame, every half year.

1571, Aug. 24. Thomas Smith, plumber, undertook to keep in repair the glaſs windows and leads of the church (except the chancel and veſtry) for 8 years, for the rate of 8*s.* per annum. This year a great many of the poorer ſort denied payment of their church-works.

1571, Sept. 19. Delivered to the churchwardens hands what was taken out of the poor men's box; and remained of ſuch money as had been given at communions before this day, £1. 17*s.*

Particulars of ſeveral fee-farm rents ariſing from the poſſeſſions of the diſſolved college of St. Mary de Caſtro, as ſtated in 1712, will be given in a future page, with thoſe of the collegiate church of St. Mary in the Newark.

In a book of the collectors of the poor, beginning in 1620, is a note, 1625, of them that hold land and cloſes in the pariſh, and are to pay 12*d.* a quarter for every £20. a year; in which lands bearing names in the pariſh are, The Dutch Holm, Burgeſs Meadow, Stone Meadow, The Cow Cloſe, Chapel Cloſe, Goſling Cloſe, The Tippel, Hill Cloſe, Cow Drift, Wye Cloſe, Walchhall Cloſe, &c.

In an indenture, Dec. 9, 3 Annæ, 1704, about Robert Loughton or George Billet's houſe, it is ſaid to be in the pariſh of St. Nicholas, in or near a ſtreet or lane called Silver-ſtreet, leading to the Black Friers, and on the Weſt part or ſide of the ſtreet, and was heretofore part of the poſſeſſions of this college.

VICARS, &c.	PATRONS.
Roger de Wileweby occurs in 1237.	The abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
Nicholas de Beby, 1240.
John Paſſelew, 1250.
Richard de . . . . . . 1248.
Thomas de Northampton, 1263.
Henry de Hinkel, 1263.
Hugo de Burſtall, 1263.
Henry de Ayleſton, 1285.
Henry Croſby, 1512.
John Park, 1534, when the vicarage was valued at £4. a year.
Sir William Burrows, clerk, was the officiating miniſter, 1555.	The corporation of Leiceſter.
Richard Normond, 1602.
Jeſſon Clarke, 1603; occurs 1625.
John Bonnet, 1618.	The king.
John Willowes, 1632.
William Croft, 1640.
——— Holden, 1648.
Thomas Peſtell, 1658.
Joſiah Bond[1], 1659; died Sept. 26, 1679.
Theophilus Tapper[2], M. A. curate, 1680.
William Fox, curate 1683; vicar 1688.
Thomas Pocklington, M. A. June 27, 1737; died May 23, 1768, in his 77th year[3].
John Simmonds[4], M. A. Oct. 17, 1768; died Aug. 29, 1778.
Thomas Robinſon[5], M. A. 1778; the preſent vicar, 1796.

---

[1] See his epitaph, p. 314.

[2] Of Queen's College, Cambridge; B. A. 1664; M. A. 1668.

[3] He was more than 52 years rector of Rotherby; where ſee his epitaph.

[4] See his epitaph, p. 314.

[5] The firſt volume of "Scripture Characters; or, a Practical Improvement of the principal Hiſtories in the Old and New Teſtament, from Adam to Joſhua incluſive; by Thomas Robinſon, M. A. Vicar of St. Mary's, Leiceſter, and late fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge;" was publiſhed in 12mo, 1789; the ſecond in 1790; the third and fourth in 1792. An octavo edition has been publiſhed ſince. Mr. Robinſon is alſo the author of "A ſerious Exhortation to the Inhabitants of Great Britain, with reference to the approaching Faſt, 1795;" and of "An Addreſs to the loyal Leiceſter Volunteer Infantry, at the Conſecration of their Colours, in the Pariſh Church of St. Martin, Leiceſter, Oct. 19, 1795. To which is annexed the Prayer uſed on that occaſion;" 8vo.

Though it is not our immediate intention to bring forward the parochial hiſtory of St. Mary de Caſtro; ſome account of the preſent ſtate of the church, with the benefactions, monuments, &c. ſhall here be given:

A remarkable high wind, March 14, 1757, blew out a ſteeple window of this church, and much damaged the reſt of the ſteeple, which was that year repaired, entirely lined with brick, girt with five braces of iron, and ſtrengthened with perpendiculars of the ſame metal, for £110.

The ſteeple was ſtruck by lightning June 15, 1763; and repaired the ſame year, at the expence of £80.

In another dreadful ſtorm, July 10, 1783, the lightning ſtruck the higheſt ſteeple window, N. E. cracked the incloſed brick work, and threw off the free-ſtone ſhell, which was half a foot thick, down to the next window incluſive, upwards of ſix yards perpendicularly; and nearly a yard broad all the way, ſplitting the ſtone-work as low as the battlements; part of whoſe wall, N. E. paſſed with the other fragments through the leads into the church; whoſe roof was repaired at £46. expence; and the ſpire taken down and rebuilt by Mr. Cheſhire for the ſum of £245. 10*s.* excluſive of the old materials. The new ſteeple was to be 61 yards from the ground; 25 yards and a foot from the battlements: the ſame proportion to be obſerved in the new erection, with additional decorations to the battlements.

Burton and Wyrley deſcribe the following ten coats in St. Mary's church; Plate XXV. fig. 11—20:

Quarterly, France and England.

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, three lozenges, conjoined in feſs, Gules, within a border Sable, Montagu; 2. and 3. Or, an eagle diſplayed Vert, beaked and membred Gules, Mounthermer.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant, in pale Or; a label Argent. De Brotherton.

Gules, a cinquefoil Ermine. Old earls of Leiceſter.

Gules, three cinquefoils Ermine. Hamilton.

Quarterly, Or and Gules. Saye.

Quarterly, Ermine, and Paly of ſix Or and Gules.

Barry of ſix, Argent and Gules, within a bordure Sable bezanté. Shareſhull.

Barry, wavy of ſix, Argent and Gules, within a border Sable bezanté. Shareſhull.

Argent, a maunch Sable, Haſtings; impaling, Gules, three lions paſſant guardant, in pale Or; a label of three points Azure, each charged with three fleurs de lis; Earl of Lancaſter [1].

The ſeven following ſhields are communicated by Francis Townſend, Eſq. from a MS. in the College of Arms [2].

In St. Mary's church.

I. A ſhield of nine quarterings, for Leonard Danet.

1. Sable, gutté d'Or, a canton Ermine. Danet.
2. Argent, two bars Gules, each charged with three lions rampant of the field. De la hay.
3. Azure, three eagles diſplayed Or, membered Gules.
4. Azure, three eagles diſplayed Or. Billeſworth.
5. Gules, a feſs checky Argent and Sable, ſix croſſes formé fitché at the feet, Argent. Boteler.
6. Or, two bendlets Gules. Sudeley.
7. Bendy of ten, Or and Azure. Montfort.
8. Checky, Argent and Sable. Ellenbridge.
9. Argent, ſix annulets Sable, 3. 2. 1. Manvers.

II. A ſhield for George Talbot, earl of Shrewſbury, who married Anne, daughter of William lord Haſtings, and aunt to George the firſt earl of Huntingdon:

1. Gules, a lion rampant within a bordure engrailed Or. De Beleſmo.
2. Azure, a lion rampant within a bordure Or. Talbot.
3. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, charged with a martlet Sable. Nevill.
4. Argent, a bend between ſix martlets Gules. Furnivall.
5. Or, a fret Gules. Verdon.
6. Argent, two lions paſſant in pale Gules. Strange.

Impaling;

Argent, a maunch Sable. Haſtings.

III. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Haſtings; 2. and 3. Gules, a feſs Or between three ſheldrakes proper; Herle; impaling ſixteen coats:

1. Sable, two bars Argent, in chief three plates. Hungerford.
2. Per pale indented Gules and Vert, a chevron Or. Hungerford.
3. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules. Huſſee.
4. Azure, three garbs Argent, banded Gules, a chief Or. Peverell.
5. Argent, a lion rampant Gules, crowned Or, within a bordure engrailed Sable, bezantée. Cornwall.
6. Argent, three torteaux, a bend company Or and Azure. Courtney.
7. Gules, a griffin rampant ſegreant Or. Redvers.
8. Checky, Or and Gules, on a bend Azure, three horſeſhoes Argent. Botreaux.
9. Argent, three toads erect Sable. Botreaux.
10. Argent, two bars Gules, in chief three torteaux. Moeles.
11. Argent, three lozenges in feſs Gules. Montacute.
12. Argent, a bend Sable, a label of three points Gules. St. Leo.
13. Argent, three eſcallops Gules. Clivedon.
14. Sable, on a chief Argent three lozenges Gules. Molyn.
15. Gules, three pallets wavy Or. Mauduit.
16. Sable, on a chief Argent three mullets of the field.

IV. Haſtings; impaling, Sable, two bars Argent in chief three plates. Hungerford.

In Mr. Ruding's houſe at Weſtcotes.

V. Quarterly:

1. Argent, on a bend between two lions rampant Sable, a wyvern, wings open of the field. Ruding.
2. Argent, on two bars Vert three plates. Clerke.
3. Sable, ſemé of croſs croſſlets fitché, and three fleurs de lis Argent, a canton Ermine. Watercroft.
4. As the firſt.

Impaling;

Per chevron, Argent and Sable, in chief two fleurs de lis Azure, in baſe a caſtle triple-towered Or. Littel.

Ruding's creſt, a wivern's head Argent, collared and lined Or, in the mouth a lion's jambe eraſed Sable.

Littel's creſt, a goat's head Sable, armed and gorged with a ducal coronet Or.

VI. Quarterly of nine, in a lozenge, for Elizabeth Chambers, daughter of Richard Chambers, of Gaddeſby; who died Dec. 19, 1584:

1. Gules, a chevron between three cinquefoils Or. Chambers.
2. Ermine, a feſs checky Or and Azure. Arden.
3. Sable, gutté d'Or a canton Ermine. Danet.
4. Argent, two bars Gules, each charged with three lions rampant of the field. De la hay.
5. Azure, three eagles diſplayed Or. Billeſworth.
6. Barry wavy of ſix Argent and Gules.
7. Argent, a feſs dancette, plain cotized between ſix mullets Gules.
8. Gules, a chevron between three caſtles Argent. Allen.
9. Gules, a feſs between three ducks, within a bordure engrailed Or. Whatley.

VII.

1. Argent, on a croſs Gules, five eſcallops Or. Villiers modern.
2. Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent. Beler.
3. Gules, a feſs between three .... Argent.
4. Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent. Villiers antient.

---

[1] This coat ſtill remains.

[2] Vincent, N° 94. p. 261. And ſee Plates XXVI. XXVII.

5. Azure, a bend between ſix mullets of ſix points pierced Argent. Houby.

6. As the firſt.

Impaling;

1. Azure, ſemé de lis, and a lion rampant Or. Beaumont.

2. Gules, three garbs Or. Comyn.

3. Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or, 3. 3. and 1. Quincey.

4. Gules, a cinquefoil Ermine. Bellomont.

5. Azure, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or. Galloway.

6. Argent, within a double treſſure flory Gules, an eſcutcheon of the laſt.

7. Azure, three garbs Or. Cheſter.

8. Gules, a lion rampant Vaire. Everingham.

9. Azure, a feſs Argent, between three cinquefoils Or. Maureward.

On the tablet over the Mayor's ſeat, under which, on an oblong ſhield, are the arms of the town.

" John Abney, mayor; William Bunney, Edmund Johnſon, chamberlains, 1700.

Robert Winfield[1], mayor; John Earpe, Gabriel Newton, chamberlains, 1721.

Humphrey Chapman, mayor; William Lewin, Joſeph Bunney, chamberlains, 1723.

Thomas Ludlam, mayor; Thomas Johnſon, William Lee, chamberlains, 1725.

Thomas Chapman, mayor; Hamlet Clarke, John Fiſher, chamberlains, 1754.

Edm. Johnſon, John Winfield, churchwardens, 1699.

John Tyler, Thomas Goodrich, 1709."

On the South-eaſt wall is a table of the different benefactions and annuities given by divers benefactors to the poor of this pariſh of St. Mary, Leiceſter, collected out of the old records, from the year 1685.

Chriſtmas.

✠ Part of an annuity of John Poultney, eſq. of Miſterton in this county; the gift to all the pariſhes being £10.

✠ Annuity of Mr. James Ellis, once Mayor of this Borough, 16*s*. 8*d*.; the whole gift being £8.

✠ Annuity of Mr. Robert Heyrick, thrice Mayor of this Borough, 5*s*.; the whole gift being 40*s*. to five widows.

✠ Annuity of Mr. Hugh Botham[2], 6*s*. 8*d*. to three pariſhes only.

New Year's Day.

✠ Part of ſir William Courtney's[3] and Mr. Evington's lottery, 10*s*. 8*d*.; the whole being £4. 10*s*. for four-penny bread.

Candlemas Day.

✠ Of Mr. Robert Heyrick aforeſaid, the whole to the Corporation, being £5.; to be given in two-penny bread.

March or April.

Part of the gift of Mr. John Norrice, Mayor of this Borough, the whole gift being £10.; to be given by Aldermen who have wards, or part of wards, in this pariſh.

Lady Day.

Part of a gift of widow Hobby, out of the rent of a houſe in the South Gate, given to widows in two-penny bread, 2*s*.; the whole gift being 4*s*.

Out of another houſe of the ſaid widow Hobby, in the South Gate, to be given to the poor, 1*s*.

Lent.

To ſend twenty poor people of this pariſh to St. Martin's church every Friday in Lent at morning prayer; there each to receive a two-penny loaf, the gift of Mr. William Ive[4], thrice Mayor of this Borough.

Friday before Eaſter.

✠ Part of a gift of the Counteſs Dowager of Devonſhire; the whole gift to the Corporation; and St. Leonard's gift to the pariſh, being £3. yearly for ever.

✠ The latter payment of Mr. Hugh Botham's annual gift, 6*s*. 8*d*.

Thurſday before Whit-ſunday.

✠ The Eaſter payment of ſir William Courtney's and Mr. Evington's lottery, 10*s*.

July 20th.

✠ Part of the gift of king Charles the Firſt, out of the rent of forty acres of land in Leiceſter Foreſt, to the poor houſe-keeper, being a freeman, 6*s*.; the gift being £6.

✠ Part of Mrs. Elizabeth Offiter's annual gift to poor houſe-keepers for coals; the whole gift being £6.

✠ The annual gift of Mr. John Nurce, of Leiceſter, being 13*s*. 4*d*.; paid yearly on St. Thomas the Apoſtle.

✠ Of Hugh Botham, gent. to the poor of this pariſh, 13*s*. 4*d*.; paid on St. Thomas and Whitſunday by equal portions.

✠ Mr. Joſeph Wright's gift, paid at Candlemas yearly, 13*s*. 4*d*.

✠ Mr. Watts's gift, paid by Mr. Simpſon yearly, 10*s*.

Mr. Peter Palmer's gift, out of a houſe in St. Martin's pariſh, 1*s*.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clarke, late of this Borough, gave to the poor of this pariſh the ſum of £100.

N. B. Marked ✠, paid by the Chamberlain, or Overſeers of charitable works[5].

An evening lecture in this church was founded by a pariſhioner [Mr. Joſeph Wheatley] in the year 1778. The deed of truſt, declaring the uſes, and appointing the truſtees, is enrolled in the Court of Common Pleas, in Trinity Term 1778; and the roll is numbered 47. It is alſo copied in the regiſtry at Lincoln.

Extracts from the Regiſters of St. Mary de Caſtro.

" Anno 1603, William Cheyney, ſonne of Chriſtofer Cheyney, of Grayes Inne in the county of Middleſex, eſquier, was borne at the houſe of ſir Thomas Cave, knight, in the Newarke by Leiceſter, being in this pariſh, the 27 day of Nov. being the firſt year of our moſt gratious ſoveraigne lord king James, and was baptiſed in this church the 4th of Dec. then next following[6]."

" Chriſtian, the wife of Thomas Cademan, buried 9th of July, 1611. Thomas Cademan, buried 27th of July. Edward, ſonne of Thomas Cademan, buried Auguſt 9. Thomas, ſonne of Thomas Cademan, buried 12th of Auguſt[7]."

" 1625, Roger, ſonne of Henry Hemminge, of the Newarke, within this pariſh, baptized the 22 July[8]."

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	571	17	2
Expended in county rates, &c.	39	18	10
——— on the poor, —	531	18	4
Rent of workhouſe[9] and habitations,	1	13	9
Expended in litigations, —	33	11	9
Money raiſed for 1783, —	668	16	10
——— 1784, —	719	17	8
——— 1785, —	704	0	1
Medium of theſe three years,	697	11	6
——— of county expences,	23	11	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	33	1	10
——— of nett annual expences,	640	18	8
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	0	0
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	13	7	3
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	1	8	0

---

[1] See his epitaph, p. 319.

[2] Hugh Botham entered his Pedigree at Leiceſter at the Viſitation of 1619. His firſt wife was Grace Jackſon; and he was at that time married to Margaret daughter of William Barrett.

[3] This ſhould be ſir William Courteen.

[4] He lies, with his wife, in St. Martin's chancel; with a legible Engliſh inſcription, their figures cut on the floor-ſtone.

[5] See the return made to Parliament, p. 126.

[6] Regiſter of St. Mary, Leiceſter, p. 8, Old Regiſter.

[7] Ibid. p. 50.

[8] Ibid. p. 120.

[9] The workhouſe at that time was capable of accommodating 112 perſons.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On the floor of the Old Chancel (or Corporation Chancel, as it is uſually called) are ſeveral painted tiles, on which are inſcribed the letters M and L[1]. Frequent interments have demoliſhed, or diſperſed, many others. The M Mr. Bickerſtaffe (ſomewhat too fancifully) took to be the initial of Municipium, the borough, and L for Leiceſtria, as they are on ſeparate ſquares; and obſerves that a few others were decorated with the cinquefoil, one of which was at the head of the inſcription over Boroughe's grave, as a token that the interment was acknowledged to be within the privilege of the Corporation.

At the Weſt end of this chancel, near the ſeat at the bottom of the pulpit-ſtairs, there formerly lay a white ſtone, not quite two feet broad, and three feet two inches long, with the figure of a prieſt delineated on it; and round it,

" Orate pro a'i'a dñi
Joh'is Boroughe, q'nd'm huj' eccl'ie p'bendar' ac gardiani de Sapcote cuj' a'i'e misereat' Deus. Amen."

This ſtone has been lately removed ſomewhat farther into the chancel; changing place with a larger and darker one, (fig. 24.) five feet ſeven inches and a half long, two feet four inches and a half wide, which bears a tall broad croſs; a Bible on its right, on its left a chalice; at its foot, under a curious baſe, a ſhort and imperfect inſcription:

" Orate pro a'i'a dñi Wilhelmi ...."

Adjoining this laſt is a large blue ſlab, with the figure of a prieſt and a ſcroll over his head; and another near it, with a prieſt, and an inſcription round the verge; but from both theſe the braſſes are torn.

In this chancel, a few years ago, a paten was dug up, which had been buried with one of the prieſts.

Leland, who viſited Leiceſter about the year 1538, ſays, " In this chirch of St. Marie extra caſtrum I ſaw the tombe in marble of Thomas Rider, father to maſter Richard of Leiceſter. This Richard I take to be the ſame that yn thoſe dayes, as it apperith by his workes, was a greate clerke[2]. Beſide this grave I ſaw few thinges there of any auncient memorie within the chirch[3]."

A miſcellaneous volume in the Cotton Library, however, preſerves in MS the following epitaph on a lady; whoſe effigies in a ſhroud-dreſs ſtill remains perfectly diſtinct on a large blue ſlab, though the braſs is torn off:

" St. Mary chirche at Leiceſtr. in the South quere:
" Hic jacet Matilda de La hay[4], uxor Thome de La hay;
que obiit xx° Maii,
año Dñi mcccclxxxiv.
cuj' a'i'e ꝓpicietur deus. amen[5]."

Arms: Argent, two bars Gules, each charged with three lions rampant of the field; De la Hay; fig. 25.

On a ſmall ſlip of white marble, inlaid on the laſt-mentioned blue ſlab:

" Joſiah Bond, hujus eccleſiæ per 19 annos elapſos myſta ſedulus.
Quodque ſui mortale fuit, hic depoſuit, Sept. 26, A. D. 1678[6], ætat. ſuæ 47."

On tablets againſt the North wall:

1. " WILLIAM BILLERS, GENT.
AGED 76 YEARS, DIED AN.
DOM. 1658; AND LEFT ISSUE
EDWARD, WILLIAM, BENJAMIN, AND JOSEPH.
HIS WIFE ALICE, AGED 71 YEARS,
DIED ANNO DOM. 1662.
THEY WERE BOTH INTERRED IN ONE GRAUE
NEERE THIS PLACE."

2. " Near unto this place lies interred the bodies of George Beckett, of the Newark, near Leiceſter, gent. and Hannah his wife; he was one of the Aldermen, and twice Mayor, of this Corporation;
they both died in his ſecond Mayoralty;
ſhe died on the 27th of December, 1691, and he on the 11th of Auguſt, 1692, being aged 64 years; her age 59.
This monument was erected for them by his executors anno Dom. 1700."

3. " Sacred to the memory of John Harris, who departed this life May 11, 1782, aged 65 years."

On the South wall:

" To the memory of Philip Bamford, gent.
who departed this life the 9th day of Dec. 1759,
aged 66 years;
and of Elizabeth his wife, who died July 4, 1783, aged 77 years."

On the Eaſt wall:

1. " Sacred to the memory of the Rev. John Simmonds, M. A. from Lullington, in the county of Derby; curate and vicar of this pariſh
32 years; and vicar of Enderby, in this county, 22 years. He died
Aug. 29, 1778, in the 58th year of his age.
He was a man of exemplary piety and univerſal beneficence, not reſting in the mere ſpeculation of religious truths, but enforcing by his own example
the precepts of that moſt holy Goſpel, of which he was a miniſter.
In the diſcharge of all Chriſtian duties none was more aſſiduous;
within the circle of his acquaintance none more eſteemed.
Theſe truths are inſcribed, to excite in the reader an endeavour to imitate ſo eminent an example."

The following addition to this epitaph was written by Mr. Bickerſtaffe:

" Loſt to the world, is now with God, we truſt,
The humble owner of this ſleeping duſt;
Rich in each heavenly grace which Chriſt inſpir'd;
O much regretted, and O much deſir'd!
Say, grateful Want, if thou canſt utter aught,
How well he practis'd what ſo well he taught.

---

[1] Plate XXV. fig. 22, 23.

[2] See before, p. 283.— This " Maſter Richard of Leiceſter" was preſented by the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis, in 1291, to the rectory of Eydon in Northamptonſhire; which he held till 1316. Fruitleſs has been the reſearch in Dupin for an account of Richard de Leiceſter's literary abilities; and probably his name, as a learned clerk, was confined to his own country. Tanner, in Bibl. Britan. p. 626, has noticed only a ſingle MS. penned by this learned clerk; and might not this MS, even though the title of it be Articles of the Creed, be principally calculated for the meridian of Leiceſter? Might it not have ſome reference to the proceſſion, on Whit Monday, from the church of St. Mary de Caſtro to that of St. Margaret, in which, as ſtated at p. 305, there were, attending on the image of the Virgin Mary, twelve perſons repreſenting the twelve apoſtles, each of which had the name of the apoſtle whom he repreſented written on parchment fixed on his bonnet?—" Scripſit de Articulorum Symboli diſtributione ſecundum numerum Apoſtolorum." Could this MS. be examined, there might be found in it ſome particulars illuſtrative of this ſolemn proceſſion. According to Tanner, this MS. was in Sion library (Bibliotheca Sion). Qu. did he mean the nunnery of Sion, co. Middleſex. In Notit. Monaſt. (Edit. Naſmith) it is mentioned, that, in the library of Corpus Chriſti College, Cambridge, there is a Regiſter or Catalogue of the MSS. that were in Bibl. Monaſt. de Sion.

At p. 310, 1498, paid at Whitſuntide, for bread, ale, and fleſh, for the apoſtles and others, 3*s*. 4*d*.

At p. 312, 1516, ſee another entry of a payment to the twelve apoſtles.

[3] Itin. p. 17.

[4] This lady occurs as a tenant to the abbot of Leiceſter, for a garden in St. Peter's pariſh, at an annual rent of two capons. See Appendix, p. 78.

[5] Cotton MSS. Veſpaſian D. XVII. fol. 53.

[6] In the pariſh-regiſter Mr. Bond's burial is entered, not in 1678, but in 1679.

Twice widow'd orphan'd ſorrows, how they weep!
They've loſt the faithful ſhepherd of his ſheep.
Hunger and Nakedneſs their loſs deplore:
Simmonds is dead, and Charity no more."

2. "To the memory of Phœbe Chatwyn, who died Jan. 22, 1783, aged 48 years."

The kindeſt mother, and of wives the beſt,
From mortal ills hath found eternal reſt.
Art thou a huſband, happy in thy wife;
Or child, whoſe mother loves thee dear as life?
With ſoul unmov'd thou ſhalt not read this ſtone,
But feel our grief, and make the loſs thy own."

On flat ſtones in the old chancel:

1. "Rafe Watton died June 3, 1631, aged 19."

2. "Here lieth the body of Robert . . . ol [1] of the Newark within the borough of Leiceſter, who departed this life June 21, 16 . 6,
aged 74."

3. "Under this ſtone lies the body of John Norrice, gent.
late maſter of the family of the Norrices.
He left behind him only one daughter;
and died in the 59th year of his age,
July the 19th, A. D. 1700."

4. "Here lyeth the body of Mary Mawſon, wife of Richard Mawſon, of the New-ork near Leiceſter,
who departed this life
May 2, A. D. 1702,
aged 69.
Here lyes interred
the body of Richard Mawſon, gent. who was governor of the Magazine in the New-ork 55 years. He departed this life May the 23, 1715, aged 79."

5. "Here lieth interred the body of Tyringham Stephens, of the Newark near the Borough of Leiceſter, gent.
regiſter to the biſhop of Lincoln, and archdeacon of Leiceſter for the archdeaconry of Leiceſter, ſecond ſon of Nathaniel Stephens, of Horton, in the county of Glouceſter, gent.
by Elizabeth daughter of Robert Tyringham [2], of Weſton Favell, in the county of Northampton, eſq.
who departed this life the 20th of June,
A. D. 1710, ætatis ſuæ 75."

6. "Here alſo lies interred Tyringham Stephens, of the Middle Temple, eſq.
eldeſt ſon of the ſaid Tyringham, by Milicent his wife, daughter of William Inge, of Thorpe Conſtantine, in the county of Stafford, eſq.
who departed this life the 5th day of June,
anno Domini 1710, ætatis ſuæ 38."

7. "Here lieth interred the body of Milicent Stephens, widow and relict of Tyringham Stephens, gent.
late of the Newark;
ſhe departed this life the 21ſt day of November,
A. D. 1721, aged 71 years."

8. "Here lie the remains of Frances Stephens, daughter of Tyringham Stephens, gent. and Milicent, his wife;
ſhe departed this life the 4th day of Auguſt 1768,
aged 78."

9. "In memory of Richard Stephens, gent. who died July 30, 1745; aged 60;
and of Sarah his wife, who died June 17, 1745; aged 73."

10. "Here lieth the body of W. Homer, the ſon of Henry and Sarah Homer, who departed this life the May 8, 1724, aged 4 years."

11. "Hic jacet corpus Roberti, filii Thomæ Pocklington, hujus eccleſiæ vicarii, qui obiit Aug. 14, 1738, æt. 11."

12. "Here lieth the body of John Farmer, gent.
late of the pariſh of Nuneaton,
in the county of Warwick.
He departed this life the 23rd day of Sept.
in the year of our Lord 1727, aged 63 years."

13. "Here lieth the body of Mary, the eldeſt daughter of Richard Farmer
by Hannah his wife, who departed this life the 17th day of Ap. 1743, aged 6 years and 10 weeks;
alſo John, their eldeſt ſon, aged 11 days.
Theſe both died young; more happy they Than thoſe that do here longer ſtay."

14. "Nathan, the ſon of William Wright, eſq.
born the 25th of Auguſt, 1735, died the 15th of March following. Flebilis occidit."

15. On a braſs plate, removed in 1761 on making a new vault for the family of an alderman:
"Hic jacet
Quod mori potuit Henrici Gilberti Cooper,
Infantis deſideratiſſimi,
Filii natu maximi
Joannis Gilberti Cooper,
De Thurgarton in agro Notting. arm.
Et Suſannæ uxoris ejus.
Natus 25to die Jul. denatus 26to, anno 1749.
Atavis erat editus antiquis;
Nullâ aliâ in re claruit,
Nec potuit.
Floſculus enim, in ipsâ quoque dulci ætatulæ
Primâ gemmâ pullulaturus,
Parcarum, heu! parcere neſciarum,
Fatali afflatu contactus,
Exaruit.
Mœſtus itaque & mœrens pater ipſius
Chariſſimi infantuli ſui memoriæ
Hoc, etſi inane munus,
Amoris monumentum
Collocavit."

16. "Here lieth interred the body of Thomas Chapman, late Alderman, and once Mayor, of this Corporation.
He died the 20th day of November, 1768, in the 71ſt year of his age."

17. "Here lieth interred the body of Ann Rawſon, wife of Mr. William Rawſon of Nottingham, and daughter of Mr. Humphrey Chapman, late one of the Aldermen, and once Mayor, of this Borough.
She departed this life the 26th day of October, 1768,
in the 60th year of her age.
Here alſo lieth the body of Mary Wilſon, the wife of Mr. John Wilſon of this borough,
and daughter of Mr. Humphrey Chapman.
She departed this life the 6th day of June, 1761,
aged 62 years."

On a flat ſtone at the South-weſt end of the church, towards the caſtle, lately covered by a new gallery:
"Propè repoſiti ſunt cineres viri reverendi Thomæ Gee [3], eccleſiæ Chriſti reformatæ in villâ Leic.
per viginti ferè annos paſtoris docti ſeduli & fidelis;
qui, cum pietate ſincerâ in Deum, juſtitiâ & charitate erga homines,
& eximiâ morum modeſtiâ & temperantiâ,
Chriſtum imitatus,
religionem tam vitâ quàm doctrinâ adornâſſet, ex mortalium cœtu ad cœleſtium ſedes gravi febre præmaturè extinctus emigravit, die menſis Septembris duodevigeſimo, A. D. 1729, natus annos 43."

On another compartment of the ſame ſtone:
"Juxta item jacet

---

[1] Perhaps Robert Wincoll, ſon of John Wincoll, eſq. counſellor of the Middle Temple, whoſe Pedigree is entered, as of Leiceſter, in the Viſitation of 1619.

[2] Robert Tyringham, of Leiceſter, M. A. was ejected from a fellowſhip of Peterhouſe, Cambridge in 1644; and reſtored in 1660.

[3] This Mr. Thomas Gee was preacher at the great or Preſbyterian meeting near the But-cloſe; and, as Mr. Bickerſtaffe's mother informed him, firſt introduced the Lord's prayer in his miniſtry. Before this erection, their houſe of worſhip was, what is now a barn, in Bonner's lane, by the Horſepool ſtreet.

Thomæ Benion quod reliquum eſt, ſupralaudati Thomæ Gee privigni, filii verò Samuelis Benion, Salop.
nuper magni nominis medici, nec minùs eximii theologi, primordiis vitæ,
tam virtute quàm ingenio maturus effulſit,
ætate ſolâ non grandis.
Vixit annos 22, obiit 18 Nov. 1727.
Catharina Benion, avuncula infra-dicti Thomæ Benion, hìc etiam requieſcit, beatâ ſpe reſurgendi.
Deceſſit 18 Aug. 1728, nata annos 42."

On another compartment:
"Juxta ſunt ſiti
hujuſce Thomæ Gee & chariſſ. conjugis liberi,
Maria Gee, nat. 24 Maii, 1712, denat' 24 Oct. 1719.
Jana Gee, nat. 17 Sept. 1714, denat. 10 Nov. 1719.
Robertus Gee, nat. 26 Nov. 1716, denat. 7 Nov. 1719.
Anna Gee, nat. 5 Jun. 1718, denat. 26 Jun. 1719.
Catharina Gee, nat. 21 Feb. 1721, denat. 17 Oct. 1724.
Hunc cippum, in amoris & officio ergò, pia & mœſtiſſima conjux poni curavit."

On another flat ſtone under the new gallery:
"Here lies interred the body of Capt. John Phillips of . . . . . in Huntingdonſhire, who, being wounded in Naſeby fight, in the cauſe of the glorious King and Martyr Charles the Firſt, died here July 8, 1645."

On a flat ſtone in the nave:
"In memory of John,
ſon of John and Ruth Brown,
who died Feb. 28, 1794; aged 26 years."

In the chancel of the South aile.
Mr. Wyrley notices,
"Leonardus Danet, de Danet's Hall, ob. 1582."

Of this tomb we cannot now diſcover the ſituation; but at Tiltey-abbey, in Eſſex, on a ſlab with the effigies of a man and his wife, ſix ſons and ſix daughters, are the arms of Danet (Sable, guttée Argent a canton Ermine [1],) and this inſcription:

"Hic jacet ſepultus, cum conjuge Maria, Gerardus Danet de Bronkynſthorpe [2], in com. Leceſtrie, arm. ſereniſſimi regis Henrici octavi conſiliarius. Ob. 4 Maij, 1520, an. regni Hen. VIII. 20. Quorum animabus propitietur Deus. Amen."

Mr. Burton ſays, "In this church lyeth buried the virtuous lady, and moſt worthy of all honour, Mabell, late wife of ſir Henry Haſtings, knt. ſonne of ſir Edward Haſtings, knight, third ſonne of Francis earle of Huntington. She was daughter to Anthony Faunt, of Foſton, in the countie of Leiceſter, eſq. and departed this life 1619." (This is alſo gone.)

On a grave-ſtone erected againſt the North corner of the Eaſt-wall are the arms of Watts, three greyhounds' eraſed, ducally gorged Or; creſt, a greyhound Sable, ducally gorged Or; fig. 27; and this inſcription:

"Tempora mutantur, et nos mutamur.
Here lieth the body of Hugh Watts the elder, gent.
ſometimes Major and Alderman of this Corporation, who deceaſed in the 61 yeare of his age, an° Dñi 1643."

Over this, on a large and high monument, are the arms of Watts; impaling, Sable, a chevron between three owls Argent, crowned Or, Burton of Stockerſton [3]; fig. 28.

"To the precious memory of Hugh Watts, gent.
ſon and heir of Hugh Watts, the elder, gent.
who married Jane,
fourth daughter of ſir Thomas Burton, of Stockerſton, in the county of Leiceſter, knight and baronet.
He had iſſue one ſon and four daughters;
and died in the faith of Chriſt, Aug. 26, 1656.

Dignum laude virum Muſa vetat mori.
Her generous male, his noble female twines
Still with her arms, and thus her ſaint enſhrines
In liquid marble of immortal lines;
Her guardian angel urged her ſo to frame
Pure precious unction, ſure conſerve of fame;
And hurle eternal perfumes on his name,
Whoſe ſpotleſs life, religion's crown and teſt,
Rule, and example, was for all the beſt,
And charm'd down deafeſt vices in the reſt;
What earlie deaws of graces did prevent
His rare, and juſt, and pondered temper'ment,
Would aſke a volume half to repreſent;
Yet by his gracious ſadd relict alone,
His large ſoul's opulence will beſt be ſhowne,
By ſympathetic virtues of her own.
Aged 45 years."

At the top of this monument there remained in 1682 a penon, with the arms of Watts without the creſt; and another penon, with the arms of Watts impaling Burton as above deſcribed [4].

On a flat ſtone, at ſome diſtance:
"HERE LIETH INTERRED ROSE WATTES,
DAUGHTER TO HUGH AND MARY WATTES,
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE THIRD OF JUNE,
ANNO DOM. 1636, ÆTATIS SUÆ 19."

On an adjoining ſlab of white marble:
"HERE LIETH THE BODIE OF JOHN SWANN,
OF THE NEWARKE NEERE THE BOROUGH
OF LEICESTER, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
THE 15TH DAY OF AUG. A. D. 1639, WHOSE SOULE WE HOPE IS IN THE HAND OF
THE LORD; TO WHOM BE PRAISE FOR EVERMORE! AMEN."

Againſt the South wall was alſo a penon of theſe arms, for the wife of Captain Sherman of Leiceſter:

Or, a lion rampant Sable between three leaves Vert; impaling, Argent, a feſs embattled between three unicorns' heads eraſed; fig. 27.

On another penon, Azure, a lion rampant between ſemé of fleurs de lis Or, Beaumont; impaling Burton as before [5]; fig. 30.

On a large ſlab:
"Under this ſtone is interred
the body of lady Jane Beaumont, aged 44 years, wife to ſir Thomas Beaumont, of Stoughton Grange in this county, baronet, being daughter to ſir Thomas Burton, of Stockerſton, in the ſame county, baronet.
And here is likewiſe buried with her
Thomas Watts, aged 16 years, her only ſone, begotten by her former huſband Hugh Watts, of the Newarke near Leiceſter, eſq.
Their bodies were both laid here together upon the 4 day of October, in the year of our Lord 1670."

The following memorials of the family of Ruding [6] are on flat ſtones, except where otherwiſe mentioned:

1. On an alabaſter ſlab, within the altar rails, (Plate XXVI.) are the figures of a man and his wife, ſeven ſons and four daughters. At the four corners of this ſtone are four ſhields; on the firſt and fourth of which are, Ruding, as in p. 312. The bearings of the ſecond and third ſhields are obliterated. Round the verge,

"Hic jacet Joh'es Rudyng geſioſ' et . . . .
. . . . atq' libe eor'd'. Que quidē Jocoſa obiit xiiii die mēſis novēbris, anno dñi m.cccccxliii. Quor' a'i'ab' ꝓpiciet' deʒ. Amen."

2. On a ſimilar ſlab, alſo within the altar-rails (Plate XXVII.), the figures of a man and woman;

---

[1] Salmon's Eſſex, p. 200; Weever, p. 63; but not noticed by Morant. Of Gerard Danet's wife ſee before, p. 309.

[2] A liberty within St. Mary's pariſh, and nearly adjoining to the town of Leiceſter. The antient family of Danett had formerly conſiderable poſſeſſions here, a part of which, with their capital manſion-houſe, is now the property of William Bentley, eſq.

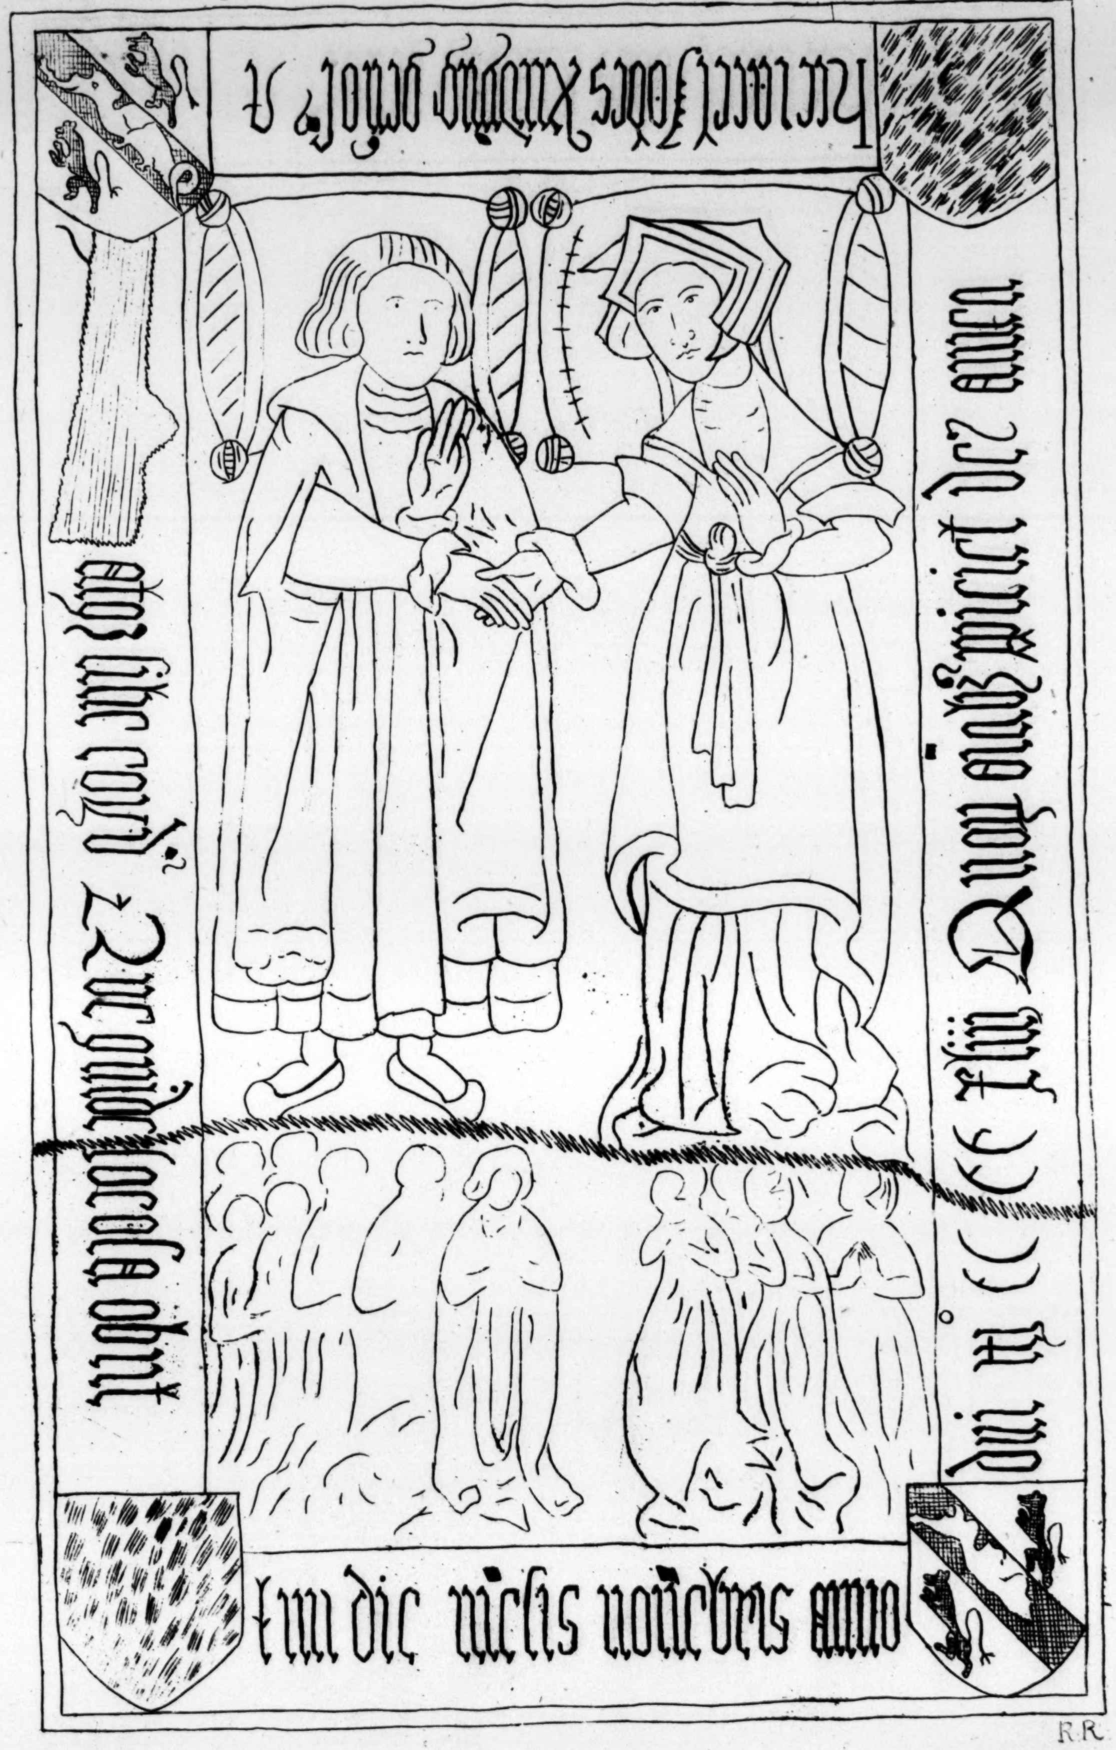
[3] Theſe arms and the inſcription are much defaced.

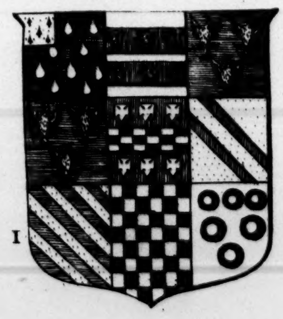
[4] Viſitation-Notes, 1682, in the College of Arms.

[5] Ibid.

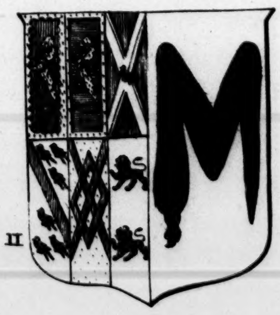
[6] This family have long been the owners of a capital manſion called Weſtcoates (formerly one of the Granges belonging to the Abbey of St. Mary de Pratis), and a conſiderable eſtate within the liberty of Bronkinſthorpe, now poſſeſſed by Walter Ruding, eſq. See ſome arms from this houſe in p. 312.—At Biggleſwade is an inſcription to the memory of John Rudyng, archdeacon of Buckingham, who died in 1481; engraved in Mr. Gough's "Sepulchral Monuments in Great Britain," vol. II. plate CII. p. 273; but he was of a different family, as appears from his arms in Willis's Buckingham, where two different coats are aſſigned to him, p. 62.

Monument of John Ruding and Joice (Purefoy) his Wife in the Chancel of St Mary's Church in Leicester

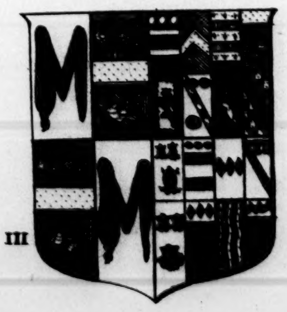




I



II

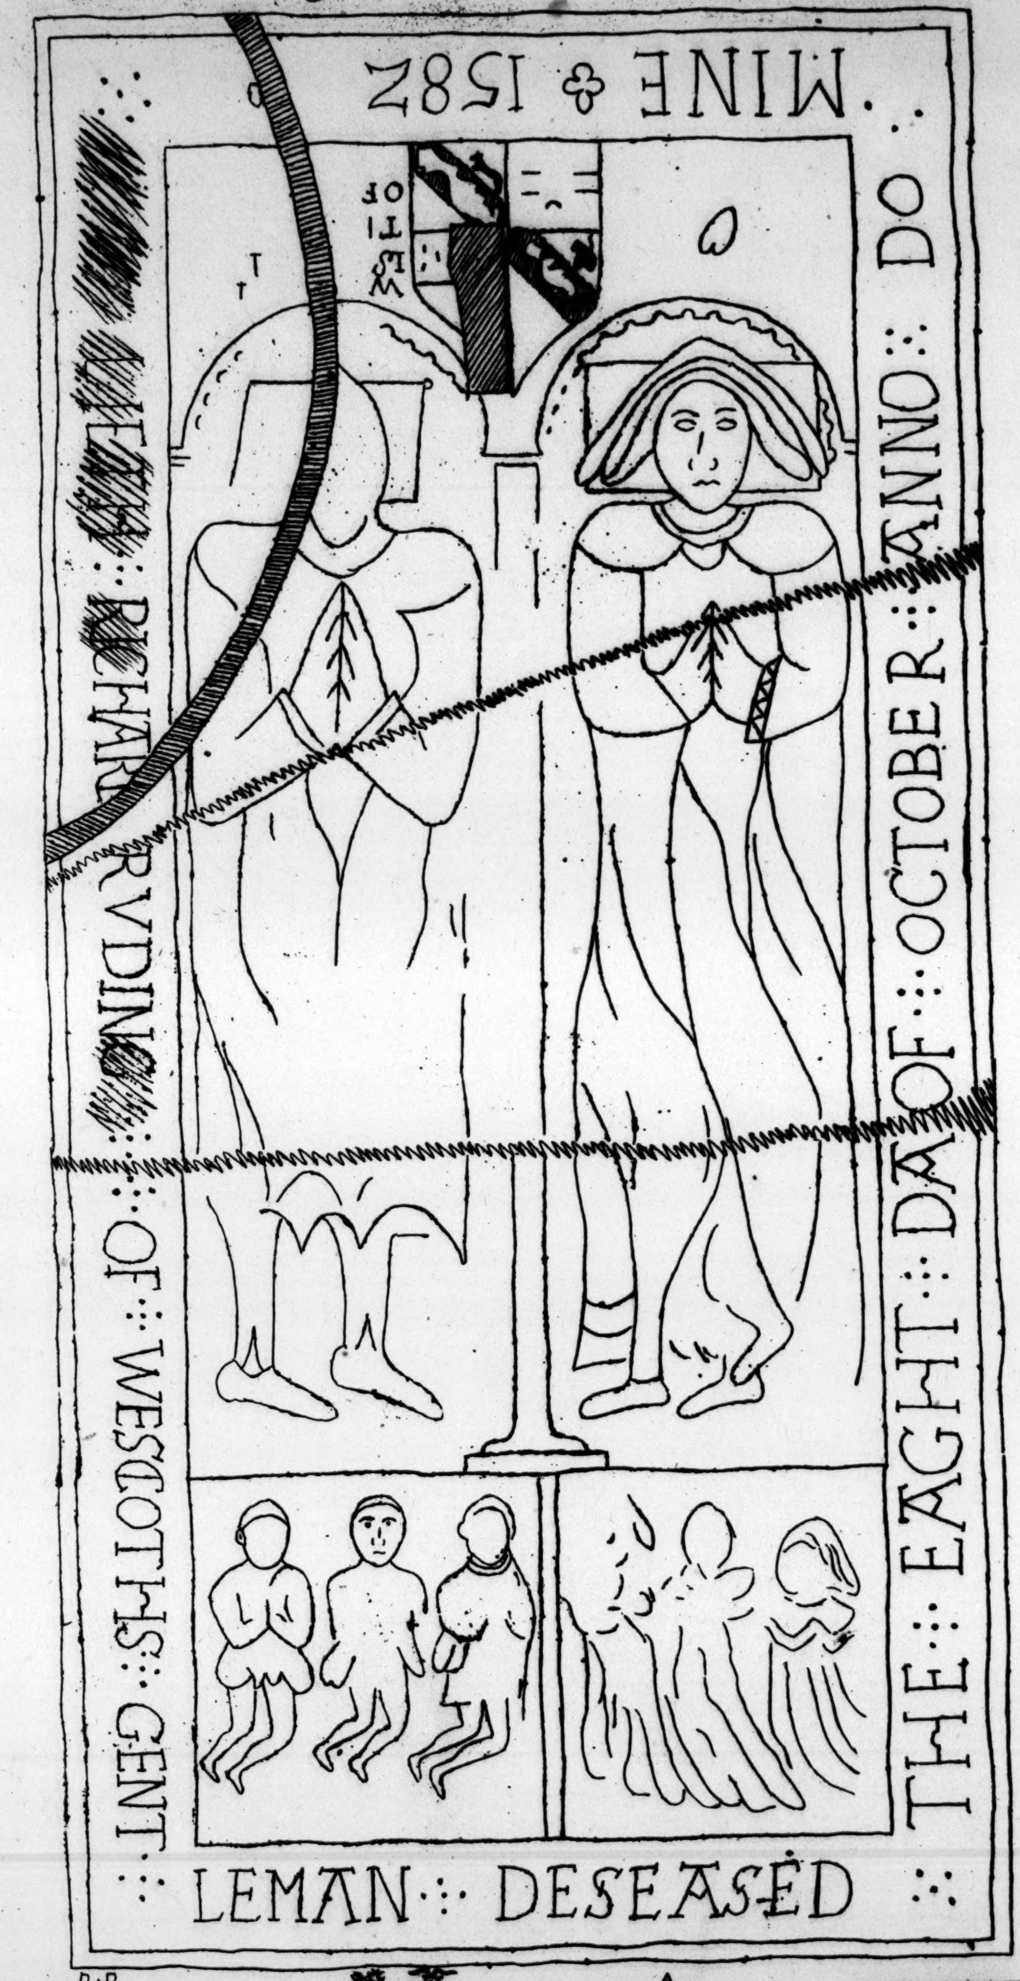


III

BRITISH 12 JN 1923 MUSEUM

BRITISH
12 JA 23
MUSEUM

Monument of Richard Ruding & Anna (Driver) his Wife in ye Chancel of St Mary's Church in Leicester.



RICHARD : RUDING : OF : WESCOTHS : GENT
LEMAN : DESEASED
THE : EAGHT : DAY OF : OCTOBER : ANNO : DO MINE 1582

and in two compartments below three ſons and three daughters. Arms: 1. and 4. Ruding; 2. Clerke; 3. Watercroſte[1]; as in p. 312; with this inſcription on the verge:

"HERE LIETH RICHARD RUDING, OF WESCOTHS, GENTLEMAN, DESEASED
THE EAGHT DA OF OCTOBER, ANNO DOMINE 1582."

3. "HERE LIETH INTERRED THE BODIE OF WALTER RUDINGE, ESQUIER, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE ON THE 12TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, ANNO DOMINI 1655, HIS AGE 78.
HE WAS SON AND HEIR OF RICHARD
RUDINGE, OF THE WEST C....."

4. "HERE LIETH ALSO THE BODIE
OF ELIZABETH, THE WIFE OF WALTER RUDINGE, ESQUIER, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
THE .. OF JUNE, 1657, HIR ...."

5. "HERE LIETH THE BODY OF
ELIZABETH HUNGATE, THE DAUGHTER OF HENRY HUNGATE, ESQ.
AND LUCY HIS WIFE, WHO WAS DAUGHTER OF WALTER RUDING
AND ELIZABETH HIS WIFE. SHE DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 26TH
OF SEPTEMBER, ANNO DOM. 1667;
HER AGE 18 YEARE AND 6 MUNTH."

6. "HERE LIES JOHN, THE
SONNE OF WALTER RUDINGE, OF WESTCOTE,
ESQ. AND JANE HIS WIFE,
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE FEBRUARY
THE THIRD, ANNO DOMINI MDCLXX,
AGED XIX."

7. Againſt the wall of the North-eaſt end, on a ſmall tablet, Ruding, with the quarterings as in fig. 31; impaling, Argent, a chevron between three goats' heads eraſed Sable, Inge; fig. 32.

"Near unto this place is interred the body of Jane, late wife of Walter Ruding, of the Weſt Coates, nere the Borrough of Leiceſter, eſq. only daughter of Richard
Inge, of Knighton, gent. and Jane Ive his wife, who departed this life Oct. the 9th, 1685, being aged 64."

8. "Here lyeth the body of John Ruding, third ſon of Walter Ruding, of Weſtcoats,
Eſq. and Sarah his wife,
who departed this life May 25, 1709,
aged 11 weeks."

9. Arms: Quarterly, as in fig. 31.

"Here lyeth the body of William Ruding, of Weſtcoats, eſq.
who departed this life the 4th of July, 1712, aged 72 years."

10. "Here lyeth interred
(in hopes of a glorious reſurrection) the body of John Rogers, archdeacon of Leiceſter, who departed this life May 7, 1715, aged 67."

11. A mural monument is alſo fixed for him againſt the South wall, with this inſcription:

"Hic
felicem præſtolantes reſurrectionem deponuntur exuviæ
reverendi viri
JOHANNIS ROGERS, A. M.
archidiaconi Leiceſtrienſis, rectoris de Segrave, olim coll. divi Johannis apud Oxon. Socii, comis, benefici, pii, pervigilis, inter
bonorum gemitus, ſuorum querimonias, eccleſiæ deſideria, pauperum efflagitationes, è mediis laboribus et malis mortalium vel optimos obſidentibus, ad emeritorum otia,
pluſquam victorum triumphos, conſummatorum beatitudines evocati nonis Maii,
Anno { Salutis 1715.
{ ætatis 67."

12. "Here lyes the body of
Sarah Rogers, wife of John Rogers,
Archdeacon of Leiceſter. She departed this life January 27, 1722, aged 65.
Here alſo lyeth the body of Anne-Lucy, ſiſter to the ſaid
Sarah Rogers, who departed this life January 29, 1722, aged 69."

13. "Here lies the body of Jane Ruding, ſecond daughter of Walter Ruding, of Weſt Coates,
eſq. and Sarah his wife;
ſhe departed this life Jan. 31, 1716,
aged 2 years and 1 months."

14. "Here lies the body of Anne Ruding, third daughter of Walter Ruding, of Weſtcoats, eſq. and Sarah his wife.
She departed this life September 26, 1717,
aged 2 years and 3 months."

15. In a lozenge, Ruding[2]; impaling, Checquy, Or and Gules, on a bend Ermine, a fleur de lis Gules, Clifton; fig. 33.

"Here lieth the body of Abigail Ruding, wife of William Ruding, of Weſtcoats, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.
and eldeſt daughter of Henry Clifton, of Toftrees[3], in the county of Norfolk, eſq.
She departed this life the 13th day of February, 1726,
aged 84."

16. Arms, Ruding alone (lions rampant guardant).

"Here lieth the body of Walter Ruding, of Weſt Coats, eſq.
the only ſon of William Ruding, eſq.
who departed this life
May the 6th, 1748,
aged 73."

17. In a lozenge, Ruding; impaling Argent a chevron between three bucks' current, Sable; Rogers; fig. 34.

"Here lieth the body of Sarah Ruding, the wife of
Walter Ruding, of Weſt Coats, eſq.
and daughter of the Rev. Mr. John Rogers, A. M. archdeacon of Leiceſter.
She departed this life
the 12th day of March, 1761,
aged 75 years."

18. Arms, Ruding alone.

"Here lieth the body of William Ruding, eſq.
the eldeſt ſon of
Walter Ruding, of Weſt Coats, eſq.
who departed this life
the 27th of February, 1762, aged 54."

19. Ruding. On an eſcutcheon of pretence, Gules, a lion rampant Or within a border Vaire; Skrymſher; fig. 35.

"Beneath are interred the remains of Anne, the wife of Rogers Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, and daughter and ſole heireſs of James Skrymſher, eſq.
of Hill Hall, in the pariſh of High Offley, and county of Stafford;
ſhe was born June 5, 1721,
and departed this life, at Derby,
March 4, 1791."

---

[1] The quarterings, Numbers 2, and 3, are much defaced, as may be ſeen in the Plate; but ſtill enough remains to aſcertain them to have been originally as deſcribed above. They are engraved complete in Plate XXV. fig. 31.

[2] The lions in Ruding's arms are here (by miſtake) rampant guardant.

[3] On a flat ſtone in the chancel of Toftes church: "In memory of Jane Ruding, daughter of William Ruding, of Weſtcoates, eſq. and Abigail his wife, daughter of Henry Clyfton, of Tofte, eſq. She died Jan. 3, 1709, aged 38 years. Alſo of Martha Ruding, daughter of William Ruding and Abigail his wife; and three ſons, William, Clifton, and Richard."

20. " Here lieth the body of Rogers Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, the fourth ſon of Walter Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, and Sarah (the daughter of John Rogers, M. A. archdeacon of Leiceſter) his wife.
He was born the 27th of October, 1710, and departed this life, at Warwick, on the 27th of March, 1795."
At top, arms of Ruding and Skrymſher as before.

On a ſmall tablet of black marble on the South wall:

Arms: Argent, on a chevron between three lozenges Sable, three ſtags' heads caboſſed of the firſt; Staveley; impaling, Or, a chevron Vert, between three towers Gules; Oneby; fig. 36.

" Near this place is interred the body of Thomas Staveley, eſq.
who, having faithfully ſerved GOD, his king, and country, many years, departed this life the 2d of January, 1683,
in the 57th year of his age[1].
He had iſſue, by Mary his wife, who was the fourth daughter of John Oneby, eſq.
three ſons and four daughters."

On an adjoining white marble monument:

" Near this place lye interred the body of Mr. James Palmer,
Mrs. Frances Palmer his wife,
Mr. James Palmer their ſon, and alſo that of Mrs. Jane Palmer their daughter;
ſhe was a gentlewoman very exemplary for her piety, virtue, and great charity.
She deceaſed April 30, 1718,
in the 39th year of her age;
who while living did always expreſs a very dutiful veneration for her parents; and to whoſe memory ſhe, the ſaid Mrs. Jane Palmer, by her laſt will and teſtament, did enjoin this ſmall monument to be erected."

On flat ſtones near the altar:

" P. M. S.
Sarah, pia & chariſſima uxor Thomæ Ludlam, obiit 4° Novemb', 1713."

" Here was interred the remains of Richard Ludlam[2], M. B.
Obiit Aug. 13, 1728, ætat. 48.
And near this place lieth Anne his wife, and daughter of William Drury, eſq. of Nottingham.
Obiit May 3, 1739, ætat. 47."

On the South wall:

" In memory of William Ludlam[3], B. D.
many years fellow of St. John's college, Cambridge, (ſon of Richard Ludlam, M. B.)
who died March 16, 1788, aged 71 years.
And of William his ſon, aged 3 years."

[The following elegant epitaph, intended for the above tomb, has been communicated by a Friend:

" Here reſts a Man, whom Genius gave to ſway
Through the bright compaſs of etherial Day;
Whoſe bound, nor Time, nor diſtance could controul,
But bore him boldly on from Pole to Pole,
Pierc'd the dark regions of all-covering Night,
And gave to Newton's ſelf a clearer Light."]

Under the table of benefactions, on a ſmall tablet:

" Mrs. Lucy Fownes
was buried in this church May the 6th, 1716, who by her laſt will and teſtament gave the ſum of twenty pounds to the poor of this pariſh; which ſum the officers of the ſaid pariſh have received, and do promiſe and intend to diſtribute the ſum of twenty ſhillings, being the intereſt of the ſaid twenty pounds, to the poor of this pariſh, yearly, for ever."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. " Hic jacet Elizabetha, quondam uxor Laurencii Carter, generoſi; & filia natu maxima Thomæ Wadland, generoſi, quæ 29° Septembris, anno D'ni 1671, obiit; cujus pietatem, probitatem, charitatem, ac patientiam, Deus in cœlis coronavit, et in die reſurrectionis omnibus pateſaciet.
Virtus poſt funera vivit."

2. " To the memory of
Laurence Carter[4], of the Neworks near Leiceſter, Eſq. thrice Member of Parliament for the Borough of Leiceſter[5], and here interred in 1710, aged 69.
Here alſo is interred Mary his ſecond wife, daughter of Thomas Potter, of the city of London, gent."

---

[1] It appears by the Pariſh Regiſter that he was buried on the 8th of January; and that his brother-in-law Dr. Richard Maſon, who died March 26, 1668, was alſo buried in this church; where, tradition ſays, is a flat ſtone in memory of him and his children, now covered by the pews.

[2] Dr. Ludlam left two ſons, William and Thomas, both clergymen. Of William, ſee the following note. The Rev. Thomas Ludlam, of St. John's college, Cambridge, B. A. 1748; M. A. 1752; is the preſent Confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital, and rector of Foſton in this county. Dr. Ludlam's only daughter was the ſecond wife of Joſeph Cradock, eſq. father to the preſent owner of Gumley Hall.

[3] The Rev. William Ludlam, rector of Cockfield in Suffolk, and vicar of Norton by Galby; fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; B.A. there 1738; M.A. 1742; B.D. 1749; was highly celebrated for his ſkill in mechanics and mathematics. He was author of " Aſtronomical Obſervations made in St. John's College, Cambridge, in the years 1767 and 1768; with an Account of ſeveral Aſtronomical Inſtruments, 1769," 4to. " Two Mathematical Eſſays; the firſt on Ultimate Ratios, the ſecond on the Power of the Wedge, 1770," 8vo. " Directions for the uſe of Hadley's Quadrant; with Remarks on the Conſtruction of that Inſtrument, 1771;" 8vo. " The Theory of Hadley's Quadrant; or Rules for the Conſtruction and Uſe of that Inſtrument demonſtrated, 1771;" 8vo. " An Eſſay on Newton's Second Law of Motion, 1780," 8vo. " The Rudiments of Mathematics; deſigned for the Uſe of Students at the Univerſities; containing an Introduction to Algebra; Remarks on the firſt ſix books of Euclid; and the Elements of Plane and Spherical Trigonometry; 1785;" 8vo. " An Introduction to, and Notes on, Mr. Bird's Method of dividing Aſtronomical Inſtruments, 1786," 4to. " Mathematical Eſſays; 1. on the Properties of the Cycloïd; 2. on Def. 1. Cor. 1. prop. 10; Cor. 1. prop. 13; Book I. of Newton's Principia; 1787;" 8vo. " Eſſays; on Scripture Metaphors; Divine Juſtice; Divine Mercy; and the Doctrine of Satisfaction, 1787," 8vo. " Two Eſſays; on Juſtification, and the Influence of the Holy Spirit," in addition to the foregoing, 1788. He alſo publiſhed, in the " Philoſophical Tranſactions," 1. " Account of a new-conſtructed Balance for the Woollen Manufacture," vol. LV. p. 205; 2. " Obſervations on the Tranſit of Venus and Eclipſe of the Sun at Leiceſter, June 3, 1769," LIX. 236;" 3. 4 and 5. " Aſtronomical Obſervations there," LX. 355. LXV. 366. 370; 6. " Eclipſe of the Sun at Leiceſter, 1778," LXVIII. 1019; 7. " An Engine for turning Ovals in Wood or Metal, and drawing Ovals on Paper," LXX. 378. In Gent. Mag. vol. XXXV. p. 412, is his Report to the Board of Longitude on the Merits of Mr. Harriſon's Watch; and in vol. XLII. p. 562. a ſhort account of Church-Organs. He was alſo, in early life, an occaſional writer in the Monthly Review.

[4] This gentleman, who was father to the Baron, obtained in 1685, from the Corporation of Leiceſter, a leaſe of the Caſtle-mill, and ſeveral fiſheries on the Soar; with liberty, at his own expence, to make ciſterns within the High Croſs, in the Borough of Leiceſter, for building and furniſhing with water ſuch pipes as he ſhould lay down in the ſaid Borough, the Biſhop's Fee, Newark, and Caſtle of Leiceſter, or any of them.—" Theſe water-works were completed at an expence, it is ſaid, of £4000; Alderman John Wilkins undertaking the execution. They were ſerved from the Caſtle mill, where remain in the wall pot pipes. The water-houſe pump, as it is yet called, is in St. Martin's pariſh, adjoining to St. Mary's.—Wilkins was a man of many ſchemes, a moſt mechanical genius. He entertained journeymen in various profeſſions. All the houſes in Leiceſter faced with imagery and other external decorations were the acts of his people. His genius was unbounded; he projected an apparatus, or complicated machine, to ſow and harrow, if not plough, at the ſame time; he ſeemed to poſſeſs no ſmall portion of a like ſpirit with the mechanical Biſhop his name-ſake. It was reported that the Corporation were jealous of his abilities, and dared not truſt him with a whole year's mayoralty; but he was once ſupplemental mayor of Leiceſter (1691), and found means to detach ſome property of the Corporation. He perſuaded his brethren to part with ſome land in different places for a conſideration he held forth; part of which he re-ſold to St. Mary's pariſh, to build a work-houſe, with garden ground. The remaining ſpot at the end of this was offered to my father by Wilkins's eldeſt ſon, after his father's deceaſe; but, as the writings to the title to this were wanting, it lay a long time unappropriated and waſte. The heads of the claiming family, two brothers, dying in untoward circumſtances, after having ſacrificed in contention the whole of their patrimony; the ſpot we advert to, having many years after their deaths been unoccupied, is of late mounded and cultivated." W. B.

[5] In 1688, 1690, and 1701.

On the ſame ſtone:

3 “ Under this ſtone lie the remains of
Thomas Carter, of the Neworks,
Clerk of the Peace for this county, ſon to Laurence Carter by Mary his wife. He departed out of this life 1747, and in the year of his age 65.
Here alſo is depoſited Judith his wife, daughter of John Ward, of Leiceſter, gent.”

4. “ Here lies Urſula Carter, wife of the rev. Iſaac Carter, rector of Heather in Lincolnſhire, and one of the prebendaries of Lincoln.
She died Aug. 24, 1721, aged 68.
Here likewiſe lies Lucy Carter, daughter of the ſaid Iſaac and Urſula Carter.
She died Nov. 24, 1738, aged 30.”

5. “ Here lieth the body of the Rev. Mr. John Carter, late fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and one of the ſons of Thomas Carter,
late of the New-work near Leiceſter, eſq.
Clerk of the Peace of this county.
He died Dec. 25, 1758, aged 32.”

6. “ To the memory of Anne Carter, daughter of Laurence Carter,
late of the New-work near Leiceſter, eſq.
She departed this life the 25th day of March, 1760,
aged 78 years.”

7. “ To the memory of Edward Carter, eſq.
eldeſt ſon of Thomas Carter,
late of the New-work near Leiceſter, eſq.
He died the 21st day of Auguſt, 1779, aged 49.”

On a fair marble, on a wall which parts the pulpit ſtairs from the South aile:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, two lions counter-combatant, Or, Carter; 2. and 3. Argent, on a pale Sable, three lions' gambs couped Argent. Creſt, a lion's head eraſed Or; fig. 37.

“ Near this place lie interred the remains of the honourable ſir Laurence Carter [1], knight, late one of the Barons of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, ſon of Laurence Carter, eſq.
and Mary his wife,
who was daughter of Thomas Wadland,
eſq. of the Neworke.
He was thrice Member of Parliament for the Borough of Leiceſter, and Recorder of the ſame.
He was eminent in his profeſſion, and in every ſtation of his life acquitted himſelf with integrity and honour.
He departed this life
the 14 day of March, 1744, in the 73d year of his age.”

On an atchievement within the North chapel:

Ermine, on a chief Gules a bezant between two billets Or; impaling Carter. Creſt, a lozenge Gules between two wings Argent; fig. 38.

On other flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. Near the communion-ſteps:

“ M. S.
Gulielmi, filii Johannis & Elizabethæ Cheſhire, plebeiâ non orti ſtirpe;
qui vitæ humanæ complevit cataſtrophen die 10mo Maii, 1758, anno ætatis 32, redemptionis 1758.
Hoc amoris ergo, mœrore haud pote communi commotus, perfici curavit pater, M. D.
Devenit mater, die 17 Junii, anno Chriſti 1760, ætat. 68.
Devenit Johannes Cheſhire, M. D.
qui obiit Apr. 30, 1762, ætat. 67.”

2. Arms: Azure, a lion rampant within a ſemi of croſs croſslets fitché Or, Jordain; impaling, Argent, on a chief Gules a lion paſſant, guardant, crowned Or. Noble. Creſt, a cubit arm habited and gloved, holding a broken ſpear; fig. 39.

“ Here lieth the body of Thomas Jordain, gent.
He was Town-clerk to this Corporation 30 years.
He departed this life June 9, 1745, aged 63.”

3. Same arms; but the creſt an eagle diſplayed:

“ To the memory of Mary Jordain, widow of Thomas Jordain, gent.
and daughter of
Thomas Noble, armig^{r}.
She departed this life May 5, 1788.”

4. “ Here
lieth the body of Robert Winfield,
Mayor of this Burrough, who departed this life the 14 day of Novem.
1720, being the day on which the anniverſary feaſt happened, aged 44 years.
Alſo Elizabeth his wife, who departed this life the 23 day of March, 172$\frac{3}{4}$, aged 49 years.
Alſo Robert their ſon, one of the Aldermen of this Burrough, who departed this life the 11 day of June, 1738, aged 34 years.
Alſo of Elizabeth Lee, relict of William Lee, and daughter of the above
Robert and Elizabeth Winfield, who departed this life the 20th day of May, 1785,
aged 76 years.”

Within the ſtalls on the South ſide:

“ Near this place are interred the remains of Mary Robinſon,
wife of the Rev. Thomas Robinſon, A. M.
vicar of this pariſh;
ſhe died in the year of our Lord 1791, aged 43.
Her object was rather to be, than to ſeem, a Chriſtian.
While ſhe fixed and maintained an entire dependance upon the blood of Jeſus for the pardon of her ſins, ſhe ſtudied to approve herſelf to God, and to evince her love of her Redeemer by a rigid attention to every relative duty, and by a calm, yet perſevering, courſe of unaffected devotion.
The hope of the Goſpel ſupported her through a lingering illneſs;
and her end was peace and joy.
O! Reader!
doſt not thou learn thy own duty in her example!
She had eleven children;
five of whom died before her in their infancy;
ſix ſurvived.”

On flat ſtones in the South aile:

1. “ Here lie the bodies of Oneſiphorus and John Raworth, ſones of Oneſiphorus Raworth by Mary his 2nd wife.
They both departed this life 22 Feb. 1693;
Oneſiphorus aged 1 yeare and a halfe;
and John 2 mounths.”

2. “ Here lieth the body of Thomas Hartſhorn, one of the Aldermen of this Borough,
who departed this life May 27, 1702,
in the 69 year of his age.”

---

[1] This gentleman, being a barriſter at law, and ſon to the worthy projector of the ſcheme for ſupplying Leiceſter with water, was fixed on almoſt unanimouſly, Sept. 1, 1698, to ſucceed ſir Nathan Wrighte in the Recorderſhip of that Borough, in which office he continued till 1729. He was choſen repreſentative in parliament for this town in 1698, 1701, 1722; was made a ſerjeant at law, 1723; king's ſerjeant, April 30, 1724; knighted May 4, 1724; and made a baron of the Exchequer Oct. 16, 1726. He reſided in the Newark, in the houſe now Mr. Coltman's, on the ſite of which ſtood the beautiful collegiate church. Dying a bachelor, he left his eſtates to his half-brother Thomas Carter, eſq.

3. "Here lieth the body of Marmion Gee, gent.
of the Borough of Leiceſter, who departed this life June 7, 1702, aged 62."

4. "Here lieth the body of Marmion Gee, of Leiceſter, gent. who departed this life
December 3, 1769."

5. "Here lieth interred the body of Martha, the wife of Samuel Tuffley.
She departed this life Aug. 4, 1761, aged 25 years."

6. "Here lieth the body of Samuel Tuffley, who departed this life Feb. 18, 1779, aged 16 years."

7. "Here lieth interred the body of Mr. William Sharpe.
He departed this life Feb. 4, 1761,
aged 59 years.
Here alſo lie the remains of Martha, the wife of Mr. William Sharpe, who departed this life the 17th day of Aug. 1784,
aged 75 years."

8. "Beneath are interred
the remains of Sampſon Chapman, who departed this life the 1st of April, 1782,
aged 57 years.
Alſo three ſons by Hannah his wife,
who died in their infancy."

9. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Martha Borrough, relict of Dr. William Borrough, rector of Sapcote in this county, who departed this life the 18th of March, 1726, æt. 87.
And near this place the body of Mr. John Borrough, ſon of the ſaid William and Martha, who departed this life June 3, 1722, æt. 52."

On a ſmall tablet of white marble on a North pillar:

"In memory of two children of
Thomas and Mary Leach;
Mary died March 21, 1793, aged 1 year;
William died Jan. 20, 1794, aged 5 months."

In the church-yard:

1. On an altar tomb:

Arms: Per pale, Gules and Azure, three bucks' heads eraſed Or, Lewin; impaling, a feſs between three eſcallops. Creſt, a buck trippant, quarterly, Or and Azure; fig. 40.

On the North ſide:

"Here lieth the body of John Lewin, who departed this life October 26, 1766,
in the 64th year of his age."

On the South ſide:

"Here lieth the body of Suſanna Lewin, wife of John Lewin,
who departed this life June 11, 1768,
in the 64th year of her age."

At the Eaſt end:

"Near this place lie
three children of John and Suſanna Lewin;
Suſannah, aged 7 weeks;
James, aged 14 years;
and Thomas, aged 21 years."

2. "Gabriel, the ſon of Gabriel Hill, brewer, by Elizabeth his wife, deceaſed [1] this life
Sept. 26, 1679, aged 3 years and 2 days."

3. "Here lieth the body of John Coleman.
In great affliction he did wait, and dyed at 38;
Is [2] mother aged 68 and ſomat more, dyed in 1704."

4. "In memory of William Bickerſtaff, who died Feb. 7, 1728, aged 41 years,
and Hannah his wife, who died Oct. 31, 1769, aged 72 years.
Alſo of Hannah and Hannah, two of their children,
who died in their infancy."

5 "In memory of the Rev. William Bickerſtaff [3], forty-eight years an uſher of the Grammar-ſchool in this town;
he died January 26, 1789, aged 60.
No noiſy vain applauſe, no dazzling blaze!
Mark'd the progreſſion of his quiet days:
Yet let this monumental tablet tell
That praiſe, which living he deſerv'd ſo well;
His joys were, Nature's ſorrows to relieve:
He gave the needy all he had to give.
To claſſic lore he led the mind of youth,
And taught to all the heavenly paths of truth.
His humble life with great examples fraught—
Himſelf the mirror of the truths he taught.
If, Reader, one more perfect you would know,
Trace him in Heaven—ſuch are not here below!"

6. "To the memory of Richard Gamble.
He died the 30th of December, 1772, aged 47 years.
Stranger, if the ſolemn ſcene before thee ſhould arreſt thy footſteps, contemplate on the uncertainty of all ſublunary enjoyments, and be admoniſhed by theſe awful wrecks of human nature to ſhun the path of diſſipation, as an enemy to temporal and eternal peace."

7. "Time how ſhort! Eternity how long!
To the memory of John Burley, junior, who departed this life Auguſt 19, 1784, aged 17 years.
Look! O look on this monument, ye gay and careleſs;
Attend on this date, and boaſt no more of to-morrow."

8. "In memory of Eliz^{h} Robinſon, an humble follower of the Saviour, who entered into his reſt
April 3, in the year of our Lord 1790, of her age 35.
Reader, pray for thyſelf, that thy life and latter end may be like hers."

9. The following inſcription was placed on a head-ſtone here, by the liberality of Mr. W. Firmadge, as a token of friendſhip, and as a tribute to departed genius:

"This grave contains the periſhable part of CHARLES ROZZELL [4]:
an offspring of parents, both of the Iriſh nation,
whoſe duſt mingles with his.
Reader,
this is the memorial of a man, not more diſtinguiſhed for the eccentric bent of his conduct, than for the ſuperior endowments of his mind;
who, by the ſtrength of natural genius, unaided by the advantages which wealth affords, exhibited thoſe rare and genuine qualities which conſtitute the Wit, the Orator, and the Poet.
He was born in Leiceſter, September 21, 1754;
and died July 25, 1792.
Whether he's ſummon'd in life's early morn,
Or in old age drops like an ear of corn,
Full ripe he falls on Nature's nobleſt plan,
Who lives to Reaſon, and who dies a Man.
CHURCHILL."

10. "Richard Kirton died April 13, 1794, aged 85."

---

[1] Sic.

[2] Sic.

[3] The Rev. William Bickerſtaffe, ſon of William and Anne Bickerſtaffe, born in St. Mary's pariſh at Leiceſter June 17, 1728, was appointed maſter of the Lower Free Grammar School in that town Jan. 30, 1749-50; ordained in December, 1770; and from that period was occaſionally a curate at moſt of the churches in Leiceſter, particularly at St. Mary's, his native pariſh, and alſo at Great Wigſton and Ayleſton, two villages at no great diſtance. On the morning of Feb. 26, 1789, after having retired to bed the preceding night as well in health as he had been for ſome time, he was found dead, appearing to have expired, as he had always wiſhed, without a ſtruggle or a groan. He was in the 61ſt year of his age; and had not long before repreſented his caſe to the Lord Chancellor, from whom he had hopes of ſome ſmall preferment. With great claſſical knowledge, he poſſeſſed a ſtrong vein of pleaſantry and ſatire. The duties of his function he diſcharged very aſſiduouſly; and, being poſſeſſed of much medical knowledge, employed it in comforting the afflicted, as he did the ſmall ſurplus of his little revenue in alleviating diſtreſs. To the improvement of the "Leiceſterſhire Collections" he was particularly attentive; and, in the deſcription of various parts of Leiceſter, his communications will appear ſagacious and entertaining. To the Gentleman's Magazine he was alſo a conſiderable contributor; and in vol. LIX. p. 203, are ſome of his letters, which will give a better idea of his merit, than can be conveyed by the moſt laboured panegyrick.

[4] See Gent. Mag. vol. LXII. p. 767.

The Hoſpital and Church of St. LEONARD.

St. Leonard's Hoſpital is ſaid to have been built by William Leproſus [1], youngeſt ſon of Robert Blanchmaines [2] earl of Leiceſter; who, being himſelf a leper, erected an hoſpital for relief of perſons labouring under that dreadful malady. The brethren of this hoſpital enjoyed, from their firſt inſtitution, a rent of 60*s*. from the bailiwick (prepoſitura) of Hinckley; which they reſigned to Simon de Montfort, earl of Leiceſter, on his giving them the larger rent of 7*l*. 19*s*. 1½*d*. from his bailiwick (provoſtrie) of Leiceſter [3].

In 1307, three meſſuages and certain lands were given to this hoſpital by Thomas earl of Lancaſter:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum đni regis, &c. ſi rex concedat Thome comiti Lancaſtrie, quòd ipſe tria meſſuagia, quatuor acras & unam rodam prati, & XXII s̄. redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in Sharneford, Burſtall, Leiceſtriâ, & Suburbio Leiceſtrie, dare poſſit fratribus hoſpitalis Sc̄i Leonardi Leiceſtrie; & quòd per ipſum comitem tenentur de đno rege in capite, ut de honore Leic', per ſervicium militare [4]."

In 1321-2, the brethren and ſiſters preferred the following petition to king Edward II:

"A lour ſeignour le roi e a ſoun counſeil p̄ent les pov̄s freres e ſoers de le hoſpital de Seint Leonard de Leyceſtre, ke il voile de ſa grace par Dieu graunter bref a ſoun gardeyn de Leyc', ke il les face paier une rente par an de ſeet liveres dis e nef ſoutz un dener e maile, des aunciens aumoſnes iſſauntz de la provoſtrie de Leyceſtr', autre ſicome la chartre ſir Simon de Mounfort, jadis counte de Leyceſtre, feeſte a les dites freres & ſoers, teſmoigne; de laquelle rente il ount eſte touſjours pleinement paie de tems de la confeccioun la chartre le dit ſire Symoun de Mountfort taunt q̄ a la fyn de la vie ſire Thomas jadis counte de Lanc'."—To which was anſwered: "Oſtendant cartas in cancellariâ, & fiat eis ibidem juſticia [5]."

They thus obtained redreſs in the following year:

"Rex dilecto ſuo Willielmo Davy, receptori ſuo de Tuttebury & Leiceſtriâ, ſalutem. Quia accepimus per inquiſitionem, quam per dilectos & fideles noſtros Hugonem de Preſtwold & Robertum de Gaddeſby fieri fecimus, quòd Simon de Monteforti, quondam comes Leiceſtrie, per cartam ſuam, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, intuitu caritatis, conceſſit fratribus hoſpitalis Sc̄i Leonardi Leiceſtr', & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ſeptem libras, decem & novem ſolidos, & unum denarium & unum obolum, percipiendos ſingulis annis de prepoſiturâ Leiceſtrie; quòdque pro conceſſione predictâ fratres dicti, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, prefato comiti & heredibus ſuis LX ſolidos, quos in prepoſiturâ ipſius comitis de Hynkell percipere ſolebant, quietos clamaverunt; & quòd iidem fratres & eorum predeceſſores de predictis VII lī. XIX s̄. I đ. ob̄. à tempore confectionis carte predicte, ſemper hactenùs per manus receptoris comitis Leiceſtrie, qui pro tempore fuit, ſingulis annis ſeiſiti fuerant, quouſque terre & tenementa Thome nuper comitis Lancaſtrie & Leiceſtrie per foriſfacturam ipſius comitis, ad manus noſtras devenerunt; & quòd iidem fratres redditum illum receperunt apud Leiceſtriam ad tres anni terminos (viz. ad feſta Purificationis beate Marie, Pentecoſte, & Sc̄i Michaelis), per equales portiones: Nos, eiſdem fratribus quod juſtum fuit fieri volentes in hâc parte, vobis mandamus, quòd fratribus predictis id quod eis à retro eſt de VII lī. XIX s̄. I đ. ob̄. predictis, à tempore quo terre & tenementa predicti Thome, ut premittitur, ad manus noſtras devenerunt; & etiam ex nunc hujuſmodi VII lī. XIX s̄. I đ. ob̄. ſingulis annis, ad terminos predictos, quamdiu terre ille & tenementa illa in manu noſtrâ extiterunt, dictis fratribus habere facias. Et nos vobis indè in compoto veſtro ad ſcaccarium noſtrum debitam allocationem habere faciemus. T. rege apud Conik. XII° Jan'. Per petit' de conſilio [6]."

In 1328, they had three meſſuages and five virgates and a half at Friſby given them by Philip Danet:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum, ſi rex concedat Philippo Danet, quòd ipſe tria meſſuagia, & quinque virgatas terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in Friſby juxta Galby, co. Leic', dare poſſit magiſtro hoſpitalis Sc̄i Leonardi de Leiceſtriâ, ad inveniendum quendam capellanum; & quòd Henricus de Bello Monte tenuit eadem tenementa de đno rege in capite, ut de honore de Winton'; & quòd remanent eidem Philippo terre & tenementa apud Wheſton & Craft [7]."

In 1348, a moſt dreadful, univerſal, and contagious diſtemper broke out in the Eaſtern part of the globe, and ſpread into the Weſtern countries, raging nowhere with more violence than at Leiceſter; and Henry of Knighton, a monk of Leiceſter abbey, relates, that above 380 perſons died of it within this little pariſh of St. Leonard; in that of the Holy Croſs above 400; in St. Margaret's above 700; and ſo in other pariſhes proportionably.

The maſter of St. Leonard's hoſpital paid an annual acknowledgement of 10*s*. to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis, to whom the church of St. Leonard belonged, for the liberty of free acceſs to their chapel for the celebration of divine ſervice; as appears from a diſpute which aroſe on this ſubject between Philip de Repindon abbot of Leiceſter and Richard the maſter of St. Leonard's; which was amicably adjuſted, in the preſence of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, in 1396, when certain regulations were entered into for the regulation of future maſters; in virtue of which, we find two ſucceſſive abbots exerciſing their viſitatorial powers, in 1396 and 1405; and in 1438, by order from another abbot, the ſacriſt diſtraining a Miſſal for non-payment of the rent; which brought the maſter of the hoſpital, Robert Matſeyn, to a public payment.

The facts are thus ſtated in Charyte's Rentale:

"Parochia Sc̄i Leonardi. Eccleſia reddit circa VI lī. X s̄. communibus annis. Habemus eam in propriis uſibus, cum decimis, &c. ex dono fundatoris noſtri ibidem. Et notandum eſt, quòd anno Domini MCCCCXXXVII. ordinatum fuit per abbatem & conventum, cum aſſenſu epiſcopi Lincoln', & conſilio diverſorum proborum, quòd aliquis capellanus electus & conſtitutus per abbatem deſerviret eccleſie Sc̄i Leonardi, & miniſtraret omnia ſacramentalia vice vicarii, quia beneficium illud fuit & adhuc eſt ita exile, quòd non potuit nec poteſt dignè aliquem vicarium exhibere; & ſolvimus predicto capellano LIII s̄. IIII đ. per annum pro ſalario ſuo.

---

[1] So Dugdale, Mon. II. 454, from Knighton's Chronicle; and ſo alſo Tanner, Not. Mon.—But my late learned friend Mr. Ruſſell doubted (ſee before, p. 90.) whether William was the founder's name. Blanchmaines had four ſons. William de Britolio, the eldeſt, for whoſe anniverſary his mother ſettled an annual penſion of 11*s*. on the monks of Lira, died before his father; but the youngeſt might alſo have been a William.—And perhaps, after all, it was The Spital, and not this Hoſpital, which he founded. See p. 323.

[2] Ralph Brooke ſays, that Robert de Bellomont, or Beaumont, third earl of Leiceſter, was called Blanchmaines from his white hands; but qu. if this title may not rather be derived from the white ſcurf of the leproſy (then moſt common in France and England), than from the beauty of his hands? eſpecially as his ſon William was ſo infected with that malady, that he founded an hoſpital for it in Leiceſter; and, more eſpecially, if we conſider that theſe ſobriquets, or ſurnames, ſo common in theſe times, were often impoſed from imperfections or deformities; as William the Baſtard; Robert Boſſu, earl of Leiceſter, ſo named, no doubt, from his crooked make; and many others eaſy to be named if requiſite; Edmund Crouchback; Henry Torto Collo (Wryneck), duke of Lancaſter. Mr. Cole of Milton, MSS. vol. XXI. p. 218.

[3] See the records ſubſequently quoted.

[4] Peck, MSS. vol. V. p. 34; ex Inq. ad quod dampnum, N° 55. Leic.

[5] Petitiones in Parliamento, 15 & 16 Edw. II. Rot. Parl. vol. I. p. 390.

[6] Peck, MSS. vol. V. p. 38; ex Rot. Clauſ. 15 Edw. II. m. 15. dorſ. de terris foriſfact.; & 16 Edw. II. m. 16.

[7] Ibid. p. 366; ex Inq. ad quod dampnum, 1 Edw. III. N° 135. Leic.

"Habemus xs̃. per annum [1] à magiſtro hoſpitalis Sc̃i Leonardi, pro ingreſſu & egreſſu in capellam ſuam ad celebrand' divina, &c. ut patet per indenturas factas inter abbatem Philippum Leyceſtr' & Ricardum magiſtrum hoſpitalis Sc̃i Leonardi ejuſdem ville, die concordie coram illuſtriſſimo principe d̃no Johanne, duce Lancaſtr', &c. anno Dñi MCCCXCVI, VIII° die Martii; per quas indenturas predictus magiſter & ſucceſſores ſui tenentur ad diverſas conſtitutiones obſervandas, ut patet in eiſdem indenturis.

"Mem', quòd dominus Philippus abbas Leyc' viſitavit dominum Ric' Mannefeld, magiſtrum hoſpitalis Sc̃i Leonardi, & fratres ejus, XXI° die menſis Martii, anno Domini MCCC° nonageſimo-ſexto. Et dominus Ric' Rodley, abbas Leyc', viſitavit eundem Ricardum, magiſtrum ejuſdem hoſpitalis, & fratres ejus, ſecundo die menſis Martii, anno Domini M°CCCC quinto, ſicut patet in inſtrumentis magiſtrorum Will̃i de Welton & Joh̃is Erneſby, notariorum pupplicorum.

"Mem', quòd anno Dñi M°CCCC°XXXVIII°, feriâ vª in Capite Ramorum, frater Joh̃es Schepiſhed, tunc ſacriſta, venit in capellam magiſtri hoſpitalis Leyc', annexam eccleſie Sc̃i Leonardi Leyc'; & ibi accepit unum Miſſale, nomine diſtrictionis, pro redditu xs̃. à retro exiſtentium, & ſecum aſportavit. Et feriâ vª in cenâ Domini proximo ſequente d̃nus Robertus Matſeyn, magiſter dicti hoſpitalis, venit in abbathiam monaſterii Leyc', in domo capitulari, coram Will̃o Sadyngton, tunc abbate dicte abbathie, & ſolvebat dicto Joh̃i Shepiſhed ſacriſte xs̃. predictos, ut in rotulo dicti Joh̃is Schepiſhed de officio ſacriſte & fabrice [2]."

"Abbas ſolvit archidiacono Leiceſtrie, pro procurationibus, ſynodalibus, & denariis Sc̃i Petri eccleſie Sc̃i Leonardi, IXs̃. xd̃. ob̃. q̃." [3]

The maſter of St. Leonard's Hoſpital paid alſo to the abbot of St. Mary an annual acknowledgement of two hens, for a toft in All Saints' pariſh [4].

In 1439, a piece of diſcipline was put in practice, which may ſeem ſtrange in our days: On Eaſter-day, John Bayford, chaplain to Robert Matſeyn, then maſter of this hoſpital, permitted two of the maſter's ſervants to receive the ſacrament in the chapel, to the prejudice of the rights of the abbot; whoſe complaint having been regularly heard before John Wardale, commiſſary to the biſhop of Lincoln, the chaplain was directed, by way of penance, to attend in the church on the following Sunday, previous to the proceſſion, bare-footed and bare headed [5], & ſine camiſiâ, carrying in his hands a wax taper of three pounds' weight; and, ſtanding in the middle of the choir, inter crucem & chorum, on the entrance of the proceſſion, to repeat ſeven pſalms [6].

In little more than 20 years after this, the hoſpital was diſſolved; and its revenues, with thoſe of the Hoſpital of St. John, were given by king Edward IV. on his acceſſion to the crown, to ſir William Haſtings, as a reward for his faithful ſervices, in 1456, when ſheriff of the county, to his father Richard duke of York. Sir William, amongſt other grants, had the appointment of ſteward of the honour of Leiceſter, and of the manors and caſtles of Leiceſter, Higham Ferrers, and Donington, and all other the king's manors in the counties of Warwick, Leiceſter, Nottingham, Northampton, and Huntingdon, parcel of the dutchy of Lancaſter; was conſtable of the caſtles of Leiceſter, Higham Ferrers, and Donington; and ranger of Leiceſter Foreſt; and in 1461 was created baron Haſtings, and admitted into the order of the Garter.

The lands of St. Leonard's hoſpital he beſtowed on the church of St. Mary in the Newark; as appears by an agreement dated Feb. 12, 1477-8, in which Dean Chauntre and his chapter covenanted with William lord Haſtings, to pay him an annuity of £20. for his life, and to keep a ſpecial obit for him in their church, in return for his benefactions [7].

There is now no part of the building remaining; but the ſituation is pointed out in Charyte's Rentale, where the chapel of the hoſpital is ſaid to be annexa eccleſie Sancti Leonardi.

After the diſſolution of the college of St. Mary in 1548, the lands of the hoſpitals of St. Leonard and St. John were granted, 2 Edw. VI. as parcel of their poſſeſſions, to Robert Catlyn [8]; and the leaſe of the lands belonging to both thoſe hoſpitals was afterwards conveyed to Stephen Harvey and George Tatam; by whom, about 1592, they were ſold to the Corporation of Leiceſter for £340.

In 1776, Mr. Freeman, an ingenious painter, of Cambridge, preſented to Mr. Cole of Milton an impreſſion of the ſeal of this hoſpital, from the original braſs ſeal which had been then lately found at Saffron Walden in Eſſex, where a family of the name of Catlyn had long been ſettled; and Mr. Cole thought it not improbable that the ſeal and writings of St. Leonard's hoſpital might have been in that family, and the ſeal by accident loſt there. "It is of an oval form [9], of three inches depth, having the full figure of St. Leonard dreſſed as an abbat, with a ſhort ſquab mitre on his head, a croſier in his left hand, a book in his right, and a pair of manacles or collar, and chains hanged from them to expreſs the nature of his charitable employment in redeeming captives. Under an arch below his feet is the half figure of one of the brethren of the hoſpital praying to him. The ſaint ſtands under a beautiful Gothic canopy, and the whole is ſurrounded with this legend:

Sigillu' com'une Magiſtꝛi et Fꝛatꝛum Hoſpital' Sc'i Leonaꝛdi Leceſtrie." [10]

The CHURCH of St. Leonard, with the temporal revenues of the pariſh, was antiently given to the abbot and convent of St. Mary in Pratis (as almoſt all the other eccleſiaſtical benefices in Leiceſter had been) in proprios uſus. Its annual value in 1220 was two marks; and in a taxation made about that period, it was rated at 50*s.*; when All Saints, St. Clement's, St. Michael's, St. Nicholas's, and St. Peter's, were all marked nichil [11].

The annnal revenues of this rectory produced, for the advantage of the abbey, 6*l.* 10*s.* communibus annis; but the vicarage was ſo ſmall that it could not ſufficiently maintain a vicar; wherefore, in 1437, it was ordained by the abbot and convent, with the approbation of the biſhop of Lincoln, that any chaplain appointed by the abbot ſhould ſerve the cure inſtead of a reſident vicar, and that he ſhould receive 53*s.* 4*d.* by the year, out of the revenues of the rectory.

Mr. Wyrley ſays, "St. Leonard's is an old church, beyond the North bridge, near unto the ſometime ſtately abbey of St. Mary de Pratis. In this church are:

Gules, a lion rampant Argent. Mowbray.
Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or. Quincy.
Sable, three fiſhes naiant in pale Argent.

And in the chapel of St. Andrew, founded by William Leproſus, are theſe arms:

Argent, three leopards' heads jeſſant Sable, Sodington.
Gules, three fiſhes naiant in pale, Arg. a bend Sable [12].

VICARS of St. Leonard's.

Adam de .... 1242.
William Capellanus, 1238.
Robert de Herdeby, 1242.
Robert de Naileſton, 1247.
Robert de Bulk .... 1258.
Moyſes Capellanus, 1267.
William Payn, 1270.
John Halifax, 1276.

In 1650, the vicar is ſtated to be "the ſame man that hath All Souls, weak, and a pluralitan."

---

[1] This ſum of ten ſhillings continued to be paid to the dean and chapter of St. Mary in the Newark after they became poſſeſſed of this hoſpital.

[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xciv. b.

[3] Ibid. fol. ciii. a. ccvii. b.

[4] Appendix, p. 77.

[5] So Martin, biſhop of Ely, pranced about his church, after walking three weeks on the highway to take poſſeſſion of his church. G. A.

[6] Appendix, p. 65.

[7] See under the hiſtory of the church of St. Mary in the Newark.

[8] To this Robert Catlyn the manor of Beby in Leiceſterſhire was alſo granted, 3 Edw. VI.; and to him and William Thomas ſeveral other lands in the ſame county. Orig. 3 Edw. VI. Pars 3. Rot. 98; & Pars 4. Rot. 80.

[9] See Plate XVII. fig. 13.

[10] Letter from Mr. Cole of Milton to J. Nichols, 1781.

[11] Cotton MSS. Nero D. X.

[12] See Plate XXIII. fig. 1—5. The ſame arms are deſcribed in the Viſitation of 1619; where 1. 2. 3. are ſaid to be in St. Leonard's church; and 4. and 5. "in eccleſiâ Hoſpitalis;" ſo that St. Andrew's chapel was poſſibly a part of the church of St. Mary in the Newark.

The pariſh of St. Leonard is not within the limits of the Town of Leiceſter, nor within the precincts of the Borough; but the magiſtrates of the County and Borough have a concurrent juriſdiction. It conſiſts principally of the ſtreet called The Abbey-Gate[1]; and compriſes ſeveral pieces of incloſed ground belonging to different proprietors. The adjoining places are the lordſhips of Anſtey, Beaumont-Leys, and the lands formerly enjoyed by this once rich and flouriſhing Abbey. The public mint alſo, which is noticed in Domeſday-book, was ſituated in this pariſh[2].

The old church, which is ſaid to have been a ſmall and very neat ſtructure, ſtood over againſt the farther end of the North bridge[3]; but, being ruinous, was rebuilt a little time before the unhappy rebellion (in the reign of king Charles I.) diſturbed the tranquillity of theſe three kingdoms. The ſituation of it was ſuch, that it commanded the bridge; and therefore, when the town of Leiceſter was made a garriſon in the diſtracted times of the civil war, and was beſieged by the army of the parliament under lord Fairfax, military policy requiring its demolition, it fell a victim to the public rage; and not having had the good fortune to riſe again from its aſhes, the pariſhioners of St. Leonard have attended divine ſervice in the church of St. Margaret, in conſideration of their paying to the church-levies, and making a due recompence to the vicar of that church; who formerly officiated under a ſequeſtration of the church of St. Leonard, granted him by the eccleſiaſtical court[4]; but is now generally preſented to the vicarage of St. Leonard's, which of late has been augmented by the addition of queen Anne's bounty.—The inhabitants of St. Leonard's, however, continue ſeparately to maintain their own poor, and bury in their own church-yard; and there was lately an intention of rebuilding the church, on a plan ſhewn in Plate XXIII.

On tomb-ſtones in St. Leonard's church-yard:

Iſaiah Garle died Feb. 19, 1709, aged 60.
Elizabeth Garle, Oct. 14, 1721, aged 75.
Ann Denſher, April 21, 1721, aged 71.
William Jarvis, Sept. 8, 1730, aged 85.
Martha Wilſon, Jan. 28, 1735, aged 78.
Iſabella Dencher, June 23, 1750, aged 84.
Thomas Burley, Sept. 14, 1758, aged 84.
Iſabella Burley, Aug. 20, 1762, aged 78.
Elizabeth Payne, March 28, 1774, aged 68.
Richard Philips, Jan. 1781, aged 70.
Francis Davis, Feb. 2, 1781, aged 81.

				Abbey Liberty.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of St. Leonard's in the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	77	15	1	76	14	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	12	19	0	3	9	4
——— on the poor, &c.	63	5	4	2	0	0
Rent of workhouſe[5], &c.	5	8	6	2	0	0
Expended in litigations,	13	9	7	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783,	153	17	6	3	19	11
——— 1784,	122	12	1	12	19	9
——— 1785,	135	16	8	17	6	4
Medium of theſe three years,	137	8	9	11	8	8
——— of county expences,	7	9	0	4	18	8
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of roads, &c.	1	0	0	4	17	10
——— nett annual expences,	128	19	9	1	12	2
——— attending upon magiſtrates,	0	0	0	0	0	0
——— entertainments at meetings,	1	16	0	0	8	4
——— law expences,	1	3	11	0	0	0
——— ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	0	0

The SPITAL,

another diſtinct hoſpital, ſaid alſo to have been founded by William Leproſus, and ſtyled the houſe of St. Edmund the Confeſſor and Archbiſhop (who died in 1244), was ſituated on the Eaſt ſide of the town, near the chapel of St. John's Hoſpital, which Leland deſcribes as ſtanding by "the Biſhops' water." Soon after the foundation (before 1250) the abbot and convent of Croxton were benefactors to this hoſpital:

"Memorandum, quòd Galfridus abbas & conventus de Croxton conceſſerunt Deo & beate Marie, & domui Sc̄i Edmundi confeſſoris & archiepiſcopi in Leyceſtriâ, & pauperibus fratribus ibidem manentibus, in feodo Rogeri Blundi, totam terram quam habuimus in Galby & Fryſeby, de dono Amicie filie Mauricii de Hampton, cum toftis, meſſuagiis, gardinis, pratis, &c. in puram eleemoſinam warentizabimus[6]," &c.

Knighton, in his Chronicle, mentions that certain followers of Wickliffe kept their rendezvous "in the chapel of St. John the Baptiſt without Leiceſter, near the houſe of the Lepers."

In 1618, Alderman Robert Heyrick, among other benefactions to the Corporation, gave 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for ever out of The Spital-houſe Cloſe.

This houſe[7] is particularly pointed out in Speed's map; but has long ſince been demoliſhed, and its place ſupplied by a ſmall building on The Cock-muck-hill, at the end of Belgrave-gate, which aſſumed the ſame name, and which in 1720 Mr. Carte deſcribes as "belonging to the county, and uſually containing ſix poor people, put in by the juſtices; but not limited to any certain number. The treaſurer of the county paid to each of them weekly 14*d.*; and they who were in it at Michaelmas yearly preſented to Mr. Thomas Noble twelve chicken, on account of an eſtate which he enjoys at Rearſby in this county, which formerly belonged to the family of Keble there, and by two coheireſſes deſcended to Noble and Orton, during which diviſion each received ſix chicken; but Orton's part coming to Faunt, and being ſince purchaſed by Mr. Noble, he is entitled to the whole. It is probable that this right was grounded on Keble's giving the ſite of the houſe for the uſe of the hoſpital."

In 1782, this aſylum again experienced a revolution; the houſes being then pulled down[8], to widen the ſtreet, and ſix others built in their ſtead in St. Margaret's church lane, as will farther appear under that pariſh.

---

[1] A ſtreet, or row of houſes, without the North gate, leading from a place called The Hare and Hounds, on St. Sunday's Bridge, to the Abbey of St. Mary de Pratis, to which, before the diſſolution, it belonged; and undoubtedly received its name from being the road or acceſs to and from that religious houſe. Three meſſuages and divers lands in the Abbey-Gate were given to that Abbey by William de Aunſelys in 1311; ſee Appendix, p. 62. And in Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxxxvi. a. lxxxvii. b. is this entry: "Habemus in Leyceſtr' plures redditus tam liberos quàm voluntarios, ex donis diverſorum, ſicut patuerunt per proprias cartas eorum hic ſubſequentes." Then follows an enumeration of their poſſeſſions in the "Vicus Abbathie," in the following ſtyle: "Habemus, ex conceſſione, dimiſſione, & quietâ clamatione Hugonis & Roberti filiorum Mathei de Elmele & Dioniſie filie ejuſdem, quandam cameram, cum curtilagio, &c." Nothing particular occurs throughout. Their poſſeſſions in the "Wodegate," and in the "Vicus Borealis, vel extra Portam borealem," follow in the ſame manner at fol. lxxxviii; but nothing material occurs. At fol. lxxxviii. b. is "The Skeyth," a ſimilar enumeration; in which the only thing worth notice is, "Habemus ibi, ex dono Petri filii Rogeri de Glenfield, unum meſſuagium, cum placeâ terre eidem pertinent', ad ſuſtentationem unius cerei ad altare Sancti Thome." In fol. lxxxix. are the like for "Belgrave and Humberſton-gates." And in fol. xciv. a. under the title of "Tenores cartarum fundatorum noſtrorum," is an account of tenants in the "Vicus Abbathie."

[2] In the Abbey Gate, Mr Carte, in 1712, notices "The Counteſs's Hoſpital," founded by the counteſs of Devonſhire, in the reign of king Charles I, for ſix poor women, maids or widows, and endowed with £30. a year, from which 25*s.* was paid to each of them quarterly. The houſes, Mr. Throſby ſays, were down, or nearly ſo, ſeveral years; but were rebuilt about 1773. I am ſorry to add that in 1796 the very traces of this benefaction had vaniſhed—Etiam periêre ruinæ.

[3] Since Mr. Bickerſtaffe's particular deſcription of this bridge, p. 296, was written, having been much damaged by the great flood in 1795, the greater part of it was rebuilt in the ſummer of 1796.

[4] Sir T. Cave, MS.

[5] Seven perſons were accommodated in this workhouſe in 1776.

[6] Peck, MSS. 4935. p. 28; from Croxton Abbey Regiſter.

[7] The dean and canons of St. Mary in the Newark paid an annual acknowledgement for it of two capons and four hens.

[8] A ſingle houſe, at the end of Belgrave-gate, ſtill preſerves the name of The Spital houſe. See Plate XXIII.

The

The HOSPITAL, or COLLEGE, of St. JOHN the Baptiſt and St. JOHN the Evangeliſt, in the pariſh of All Saints, is another charitable foundation of very great antiquity; but neither the date nor the founder can now be diſcovered.

In 1235, the firſt year after biſhop Groſſeteſte obtained the ſee of Lincoln, we find him recogniſing an agreement entered into by Gervaſe maſter of this hoſpital with John de Winton, the ſucceſſor to Groſſeteſte in the rectory of St. Margaret's, Leiceſter:

"Noverint univerſi veſtri nos cartam fratris Gervaſii, magiſtri Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Leyc', & omnium aliorum tam fratrum quàm ſororum ejuſdem domûs inſpexiſſe, in hec verba: "Univerſis Chriſti fidelibus magiſtri Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis de Leyc' ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra nos dediſſe magiſtro J. de Winton, rectori eccleſie Sancte Margarete de Leiceſtriâ, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, pro decimis curtilagii noſtri, & pro decimis gardinis quas magiſter R. Groſſeteſte, quondam rector ejuſdem eccleſie, petebat coram judicibus delegatis, toſtum noſtrum quod jacet conjunctum cemeterio capelle Sancti Johannis, in parochiâ dictâ eccleſie Sancte Margarete ex parte occidentali. Teſte A. Coſtein[1]." Nos igitur, de conſenſu W. decani & capituli noſtri Lincolnie, omnia in predictâ cartâ contenta, quantum ad nos pertinet, epiſcopali & Lincolnie eccleſie confirma imus auctoritate. Teſtibus; W. decano, R. archidiacono Linc', Joh̄e precentore, W. cancellario, W. theſaur', W. ſubdec'; J. Northt', W. Stowe, J. Leyc', G. Hunt', A. Bedf', archidiaconis; W. de Avalon; magiſtris R. de Gravel, J. de Ciſſeſtr', R. de Bolleſhover, R. de Wiſbech, capellanis; R. de Warvill, P. de Hungart'; magiſtro R. de Brinkel, W. de Winchcumb, & Tho. de Aſkes, diaconis; magiſtro Tho. Walens, R. de Oxon', J. de Crakhall, ſubdiaconis, canonicis Linc'. Dat' in capitulo Linc', kal' Aprilis, Pont' 1 (dorſ')."

This deed removes the doubt concerning biſhop Groſſeteſte's having once been rector of St. Margaret's, which Dr. Pegge ſuggeſts in his Life of that Prelate, p. 26.—Groſſeteſte held that rectory when archdeacon of Leiceſter; as did the ſucceeding archdeacons till 1276, when this vicarage was endowed.

In 1308, Philip Danet gave meſſuages and lands to this hoſpital, at Whetſtone, Croft, and Friſby:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum d̄ni regis nec aliorum, ſi d̄nus rex concedat Philippo Danet, quòd ipſe quinque meſſuagia, ſeptem virgatas terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in Weſton, Croft, & Friſeby juxta Galby in com' Leic', dare poſſit magiſtro & fratribus hoſpitalis Sc̄i Johannis Leiceſtrie. Et dicunt, quòd tria meſſuagia & quinque virgate terre & dimidia in Friſeby juxta Galby tenentur de Roberto Burdet per ſervicium xx s̄. per annum; & unum meſſuagium & una virgata terre in Weſton tenentur de Henrico de Bello-monte per ſervicium v s̄. per annum; & unum meſſuagium & una virgata terre in Croft tenentur de Hugone Turville per ſervicium vi s̄. per annum; & centum ſolidati terre & redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in Leiceſtriâ & Northburg, Craft, & Weſton, tenentur de comite Leiceſtrie per ſervicium militare[2]."

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Licèt de communi conſilio, &c. per finem tamen quem Philippus Danet fecit nobiſcum, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, eidem Philippo, quòd ipſe v meſſuagia & vii virgatas terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in Weſton, Craft, & Friſeby juxta Galby, dare poſſit & aſſignare dilectis nobis in Chriſto magiſtro & fratribus Sc̄i Johannis Leiceſtrie; habenda & tenenda eiſdem magiſtro & fratribus hoſpitalis Sc̄i Johannis Leic' & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ad inveniendum quendam capellanum, divina ſingulis diebus in eccleſiâ Sc̄i Johannis hoſpitalis predicti, pro animâ ipſius Philippi, & animabus anteceſſorum ſuorum & omnium fidelium defunctorum, celebraturum imperpetuum; & eiſdem magiſtro & fratribus, quòd ipſi predicta meſſuagia & terram, cum pertinentiis, à prefato Philippo recipere poſſint & tenere, ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ad inveniendum dictum capellanum, divina ſingulis diebus pro animabus predictis celebraturum imperpetuum, ſicut predictum eſt, tenore preſentium, licentiam dedimus ſpecialem, nolentes quòd predictus Philippus vel heredes ſui, ſeu predicti magiſter & fratres, aut ſucceſſores ſui, ratione ſtatuti antedicti, per nos vel heredes noſtros indè occaſionentur ſeu graventur; ſalvis tamen capitalibus dominis feodi illius ſerviciis indè debitis & conſuetis. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege apud Ebor', xxvii die Feb'. Per finem xl ſolidorum[3]."

In 1346, on the aid granted to the king for making his eldeſt ſon a knight, the maſter of St. John's hoſpital was aſſeſſed at 16*d.* for the thirtieth part of a knight's fee in Hungarton, of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon; and 16*d.* for the like quantity of land in Queniburgh, of the fee of Tutbury[4].

The maſter of St. John's Hoſpital was bound to pay a penſion of 10*s.* to the biſhop of Lincoln[5].

In the Archiepiſcopal Regiſtry at Lambeth we find, "Certificatorium ſuper collatione ſive proviſione factâ auctoritate d̄ni archiep̄i de Hoſpitali Sc̄i Joh̄is Leiceſtr. jure devoluto d̄no Will̄o Hyll[6] preſbytero, in ſacrâ theologiâ baccalaureo. Dat' Leiceſtr', in domo capitulari S. Joh̄is Leiceſtrie, 11 die menſis Sept. 1424[7]."

Thomas de Bretford, maſter of St. John's, and the brethren and ſiſters of that Hoſpital, gave to Leiceſter abbey a plot of ground (placeam terre), with the appurtenances, part of the land in their tenure, near the cemetery of the church "Sc̄e Trinitatis" on the Eaſt, and the Hoſpital's land on the Weſt[8].

In the church belonging to this hoſpital was founded, 1478, the guild of St. John, by Peers Celler and his wife:

"This compoſition and agreement, made Sept. 20, 17 Edw. IV. betwixt ſir Robert Syleby, maſter of the hoſpital of St. John Evangeliſt and St. John Baptiſt of Leiceſter and the brethren of the ſame place, of the one part; and Richard Wiggeſton of Leiceſter, ſteward of the gyld of the ſame St. John, of the other part; witneſſeth, that the ſaid Richard and his ſucceſſors for the time being, ſtewards of the ſaid gild, with the advice of the ſaid maſter and his ſucceſſors, ſhall find evermore, during the ſaid gylde, a prieſt to ſay or ſing maſs in the gylde chappel of St. John aforeſaid, and two days in the week in the chappel of St. John ſet at the town's end of Leyceſter, except that the maſter or his ſucceſſors at any time will ſay maſs ther themſelf; and what time they ſay maſs ther, or be forth of town, that then the ſaid gyld prieſt ſhall ſyng or ſay maſs at the high alter of the ſaid St. John, helping the ſaid maſter and his ſucceſſors to ſyng and rede in the quere ther every holy day in the yere divine ſervice, praying eſpecially for the ſouls of Peers Celler and his wife, and for the welfare and the ſouls of all the brethren and ſiſters of the ſaid gyld and houſe, and in general for oder good benefactors of the ſaid houſe or gylde; and the ſaid maſter and his ſucceſſors ſhall gyffe to the ſaid gylde prieſt mete and drynk ſufficiently, or elſe every yere for his borde 40*s.* of lawfull money; and the ſaid ſteward and his ſucceſſors to pay him the rembland of his ſalary as they can agree, and find him a chamber within the ſaid St. John; and, if it happen that the ſaid gyld prieſt fail, and have not his borde nor 40*s.* as he ought, in default of the maſter or his ſucceſſors, then it ſhall be lawfull to the ſaid ſteward and his ſucceſſors to enter into a place, with the appurtenances of St. John aforeſaid, ſet with Eſt yate of Leyceſter between the meys of the gylde of Corpus Chriſti in St. Martin churche of the Weſt ſide, and St. Marget-lane of the Eſt part, now in the tenour of Thomas Davye, grocer, and there to take a diſtreſſe for the ſaid 40*s*. and it to bere away as ofttimes as ther ys defaulte of his borde or payment of the ſaid 40*s*. yerly. In witneſs whereof, as well the common ſeal of the ſaid houſe, as the ſeal of the ſaid ſteward, alternately to theſe indentures be putt[1]."

---

[1] Afterward rector of Aſhby Folvile.

[2] Peck, MSS. vol. V. p. 32; ex Inq. ad quod dampnum, 2 Edw. III. N° 103. Leic.

[3] Pat. 2 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 38.

[4] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[5] See the Introductory Volume, p. lxxxviii.

[6] Mr. Hyll in 1424 reſigned the rectory of Staunton Wyvile. Reg. Chicheley, archiep. Cant. fol. 246. b.

[7] Reg. Chicheley, fol. 245. b. 246. a.

[8] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xcvii.

5

That the dean and canons of St. Mary in the Newark were the proprietors or guardians of this hoſpital, in 1484, appears by the following curious indulgence, containing ſome particulars not very common in licences of this caſt, communicated to Sir Thomas Cave in 1760 by the Rev. George Burton[2], rector of Elden in Suffolk, from the original, in the poſſeſſion of the feoffees for preſerving ſome charity-lands in the adjoining pariſh of Ickingham St. James. There is an oval ſeal in red wax appendant to it, with the impreſſion of a phœnix upon its neſt, the letter R on his head, and a ſtar on each ſide. (See Plate XXIII.)

"Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, decanus & canonici eccleſie collegiate beate Marie Novi Operis Leiceſtrie, proprietarii ſive cuſtodes hoſpitalis Sanctorum Joh̄is Evangeliſte & Joh̄is Baptiſte, ejuſdem loci confratribus, ſalutem, ac utriuſque hominis continuum incrementum ver'. Dilectioni veſtre innoteſcimus per preſentes, quòd omnes qui de facultatibus & bonis ſuis eiſdem à Deo collatis nobis ſubvenerint, aut in veſtram confraternitatem ſunt aſſumpti, poſſint ſibi eligere idoneum confeſſorem, qui ipſos & eorum quemlibet ab omnibus & ſingulis criminibus, exceſſibus, & peccatis, plenam haberet poteſtatem eadem abſolvendi, niſi talia ſint ſuper quibus ſedes apoſtolica ſit meritò conſulendum, videlicet votis, beatorum Petri & Pauli & Sc̄i Jacobi duntaxat exceptis. [Imprimis, cariſſimus in Chriſto papa, pater & dominus Innocentius Septimus, conceſſit omnibus fratribus & ſororibus, necnon benefactoribus, & ſeptimam partem penitencie in Domino relaxavit; Nic̄hus papa tertius conceſſit octo annos & XL dies; Bonefacius papa tertius ſeptem annos & totidem XL; Clemens papa ſextus, Joh̄es papa viceſimus, quilibet eorum octo annos & XL dies; d̄nus Martinus papa quintus ſeptem annos & totidem XL; Nic̄hus papa quintus, Calixtus papa tertius, quilibet eorum tres annos & XL dies; d̄nus Pius papa ſecundus tres annos & XL dies; & d̄nus Sixtus papa quartus[3]] omnes & ſingulas indulgentias per predictos predeceſſores conceſſas auctoritate apoſtolicâ confirmavit, & in plenam participationem omnium miſſarum & aliarum devotionum ſingulis eccleſiis per univerſum orbem Deo offerendar', & ſemel in vitâ & in tempore mortis plenam remiſſionem omnium peccatorum, ac etiam in viſitand' locum predictum annuatim à feſto Sc̄i Mathei apoſtoli uſque feſtum ſanctorum Criſpini & Criſpiani, tam in cauſis reſervatis quàm non reſervatis, plenam remiſſionem. Perſonis autem eccleſiaſticis qui in veſtram confraternitatem ſunt aſſumpti, qui propter vota irregularitatis à ſententiis canonicis, vel hominibus contractis, qui pro beneficio abſolutionis ad curiam Romanam debuiſſent accedere, ut id à dicto confeſſore valeant recipere, miſericorditèr conceſſerint, ac ſic ab eodem propter omiſſionem horarum canonicarum in divinis pro recompenſo plenam remiſſionem, & ut qui in veſtram confraternitatem ſunt aſſumpti, ſi dum eccleſie ad quas pertinent à divinis officiis fuerint interdicte eis mori contigerit, eiſdem eccleſiaſticam ſepulturam non negent, niſi vinculo excommunicationis nominatìm fuerint innodati: Unde nos decanus & canonici, proprietarii ſive cuſtodes collegii & hoſpitalis antedicti, auctoritate apoſtolicâ, vigoreque noſtrorum privilegiorum, in noſtram confraternitatem recipientes Thomam Burton & Margeriam uxorem ejus, participes privilegiorum, indulgentiarum, & aliorum pietatis operum, in omnibus fecimus per preſentes, ſigillo noſtro confraternitatis ſignato. Dat' apud Leyceſtriam, in domo noſtrâ capitulari, anno Dñi millimo quadringenteſimo octogeſimo-quarto."

On the back is endorſed the following abſolution:

"Auctoritate Dñi noſtri Jheſu Chriſti, & ſpeciali gratiâ mihi conceſsâ à ſanctiſſimo domino noſtro papâ, ego te abſolvo ab omnibus peccatis, que contra Deum & teipſum feciſti; necnon ab omnibus ſententiis, interdictionibus, ſuſpenſionibus, & excommunicationibus, concedo tibi plenam remiſſionem, ſi in hâc infirmitate deceſſeris, & in mortis articulo alioqū ex miſericordiâ Dei ſalva ſit tibi gratia, dum fueris in mortis articulo conſtitut'. Amen!"

Leland ſays, "St. John's hoſpital landes for the moſt parte was given by Edward IV. to the college of Newark in Leyrceſter;" probably in 1477, by the ſame means, and on the ſame terms, as the hoſpital of St. Leonard was conferred on them (ſee p. 322.) At length theſe lands, with thoſe belonging to the other colleges, which were then in the crown, were purchaſed from queen Elizabeth by the Corporation; who receive, as appears in the chamberlain's rent-roll, 2*l*. 0*s*. 2*d*. for an orchard, or piece of ground, formerly Thomas Chapman's, eſq. afterwards Dr. Hartopp's, on which ſtood a houſe called St. John's; which, Mr. Carte obſerves, is near "Biſhop's water, where is a chapel longging to the hoſpital of St. John: at this chapel lyeth Mr. Boucher[4]."

Chief rents belonging to the Hoſpitals of St. John and St. Leonard, payable at Michaelmas, 1712.

The warden of Wigſton's hoſpital,	£.0	1	4½
The heirs or executors of Mr. Boon, for a meſſuage or tenement in Gallowtree-gate, known by the ſign of The Black Lion,	0	0	6
The earl of Stamford, for Thurmaſton mill, — —	0	6	8
Sir William Rawlinſon, for lands in Oadby, late ſir Henry Beaumont's, and late Mr. Waldron's land, — —	0	5	11½
For the vicarage-houſe in Oadby	0	1	0½
William Davenport of Oadby, for lands there, late Mary Hall's land, —	0	0	6
Samuel Winterton, for a houſe in Senvey-gate, late John Turlington's,	0	0	9

---

[1] Catalogue of the Lock-book for fines, in the cuſtody of the mayor of Leiceſter.

[2] Some account of this gentleman has been given in vol. II. p. 258; and his epitaph in p. 423. The communication from him, printed above, was accompanied with the following deſcription of his ſituation, in anſwer to an enquiry after Mr. Burton the Hiſtorian: "As your author was of another family, and ours have never been reſident in the county, I am a perfect ſtranger to the antiquities of it. Did you ſee the county I live in (where, give me leave to aſſure you, here you would meet with a hearty welcome) you would conclude from the face of it, that we ſtudy Nature rather than Books; for, though my pariſh is at leaſt ſixteen miles round, I cannot muſter up above three or four ſcore, unleſs I admit ſheep and rabbits, the ſight of which is ſo numerous, that Don Quixote would be provoked to put himſelf in a poſture of defence, ſince they tell by thouſands. It is greatly to be wiſhed, that gentlemen of fortune and leiſure would apply themſelves to the rational amuſement of books, which affords ſuch a variety of employment for every kind of genius. I truly condole with you on ſo conſiderable and irreparable a loſs as that of a boſom friend, who had endeared herſelf by an experience of 23 years' tender affection. The relation of your preſent ſuffering has awakened in me a remembrance of what I myſelf not many years ſince have gone through, and makes me truly ſympathize with you in your diſtreſs; for, in the year 1752, I was burnt out of my houſe, and knew not that I had a bed left to lie upon. My wife and preſent daughter expoſed for many hours (upwards of ten) to all the rage of a moſt tempeſtuous wind—with not one friendly ſhed to cover them—ſurrounded by the bulk of my pariſh, more deſtitute and friendleſs than myſelf (ſee Gent. Mag. XII. 285,)—all that I had, as I then apprehended, conſuming before my eyes—the two moſt engaging comforts in life both upon the very brink of deſtruction at once. In this dark and gloomy period of time (which I think can ſcarce be imagined greater)—that indulgent hand of Providence, which ever kindly diſpenſes comforts while it ſends trials, weakened the edge of my own ſorrows by feeling for others—till reaſon could come to my aſſiſtance—and taught me to acquieſce, and to divert the gloom of melancholy by applying myſelf more aſſiduouſly than common to the ſtudy of books. I found relief by it; and am glad to hear you have fallen into the ſame tract; which I hope will in time leſſen the weight of an affliction that is remedileſs, and render it tolerable."

[3] All the words between hooks are in red ink in the original.

[4] As Leland was at Leiceſter in 1538, or 1539, the Mr. Boucher here mentioned may poſſibly be the abbot of Leiceſter, who was about that time ejected from his abbey. The expreſſion lyeth I take to mean liveth; as it is not likely that any one ſhould have been buried in this little chapel.

On taking down the old town-gaol in 1792, the ruins of St. John's chapel were diſcovered; and an accurate ſketch of them by Mr. Throſby is given in plate XXIII.[1]

July 5, 1592, the ſite of this hoſpital, with the appurtenances, were granted, by the Corporation, to Mr. Thomas Clark, for term of life, paying the queen's rent, to make a wool-hall thereof, at his own charge, he promiſing to leave the ſame to the corporation. This wool-hall growing into diſuſe in the time of James I. or Charles I. ſix poor widows were placed in it; who in 1682 were removed up into chambers then fitted up for them[2]; and, for their better ſubſiſtence, it was agreed by the clergy of the town, to preach, in their turn, a ſermon[3] upon charity or almſgiving, annually, on St. John's day, Dec. 27, at the hoſpital, or the church of All Saints near it; whereupon, Dec. 27, 1688, at a common hall, the two companies, of twenty-four and forty-eight, obliged themſelves, without ſummons, to attend the mayor on that day yearly in their gowns, to hear the ſaid ſermon, or, if abſent, to ſend ſeverally to the chamberlains 12*d*. if the abſentee was one of the twenty-four, and 6*d*. if one of the forty-eight.

In 1718, Mr. Carte copied theſe benefactions:

	£.	s.	d.
Mr. William Morton, who was thrice mayor of this borough, gave them yearly	0	18	0
Mr. Robert Heyrick, alderman, gave	0	4	0
Mr. John Heyrick, alderman, gave	1	6	8
Widow Hobby gave	0	0	6
Mrs. Elizabeth Ward, widow, daughter of Mr. Morton aforeſaid, gave	2	0	0
Mrs. Anne Puſie, widow, another daughter of Mr. Morton, gave	1	4	0
Mrs. Elizabeth Twickten, widow, daughter of William Ward, alderman, gave them	2	0	0
Robert Langton, ſen. fellmonger, gave	0	6	8
Mr. John Norris, alderman, and once mayor, gave — —	0	6	8
William Franck, eſq. alderman and mayor of the borough, and high ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter, gave —	0	6	0
Mr. John Clay, alderman, and twice mayor, gave — —	0	10	0
Mrs. Cook, widow, gave —	2	8	0
Joſeph Wright, one of the 48, gave two pair of ſhoes — —	0	0	0
Mary, relict of Mr. William Stanley, alderman, and twice mayor, gave	1	0	0
Mr. Richard Palmer, alderman, and once mayor, gave — —	0	1	0
Mrs. Katharine Henſhaw gave	0	2	0
Mr. Edward Palmer, by will, gave a cloſe of paſture or meadow ground, in the liberties of Botcheſton, containing four acres, then rated at 3*l*. 10*s*. a year, to the mayor, bayliffs, and burgeſſes, in truſt to pay them yearly (the reſidue to the Mayor for the the time being) — —	3	0	0
W. Springthorpe, of the Wood-gate, gave	0	14	0
Mr. Birkhead, miniſter of Houghton,	0	10	0
Mr. David Deakin gave yearly for ever	0	6	0
Mr. George Beckett, of the Newark, yearly	0	12	4
Matthew Simons[4], eſq. gave, to make up the gift of Mrs. Cook, —	2	6	0
And moreover gave them yearly	2	0	0
Mr. Thomas Ayre, once mayor, gave to the mayor, bailiffs, &c. in truſt, to pay to the ſaid widows yearly —	1	0	0
	£23	5	2

Mr. Thomas Blunt, alderman, and twice mayor, gave to each of the ſix poor widows, every third year, a pair of ſhoes.

John Joanes, of Ayleſton, clerk, miniſter of Belgrave, added two to the ſix widows, allowing them 6*d*. a week and gowns during his life.

Mrs. Hannah Aires, of the Northgate, gave them 20*s*. by her laſt will.

Mr. Thomas Topp, hoſier, gave them the like ſum.

Over the front of Bent's Hospital:

"Mr. John Bent, once Mayor of this Corporation, gave lands[5] to the yearly value of £24. for the maintenance of four poor widows here for ever, anno Domini 1703.

Edmund Cradock, Mayor;
Thomas Helmſley, } Chamberlains."
John Smalley, }

The four widows were to be placed by the maſter and governors of the Trinity Hoſpital, when any vacancy happened; and, by Mr. Bent's will,

	£.	s.	d.
each to have 2*s*. a week, amounting to	20	16	0
To be laid out on them in the ſpring in wood and coals — —	2	10	0
For oatmeal and candle —	0	14	0
	24	0	0

June 5, 1704, At a common hall, certain orders were made concerning theſe four widows, to be obſerved by them[6]; and it was decreed that 6*d*. a week ſhould be paid by the town to a keeper, to look to them in their illneſs; the keeper to make them a fire in the morning; and that the chamberlain ſhould make the ſpare room below ſtairs fit for the keeper to lie in. The four widows and the nurſe inhabit ground-rooms.

The widows now receive 3*s*. every Friday morning, the nurſe 2*s*.; and each of them has 10*s*. 8*d*. every year, left by Mr. Harris, and a gown every other year.

---

[1] "In this plate, aa ſhews the bounding wall of Northgate-ſtreet; bb the paſſage to the priſon-houſe; the arch againſt cc found in the back of a large chimney in the gaol-cellar; ee Gaol-lane; ff (the ſite of St. John's and Bent's Hoſpitals) is a wall correſponding with bb; both which, by appearance, formed a kind of arched roof, and perhaps ſupported a turret. The fine Saxon arch, which ſtood at the Weſt end of the nave, (ſcreened from ſight by the bending wall of the ſtreet,) eſcaped demolition. The walls in general were three feet eight inches in thickneſs; and that marked b was continued 14 feet to the Eaſt. The ſpan of the arches was 9 feet; the columns only 6 feet high, and 5 feet 8 inches in girth; and on their rude capitals lay croſs-ways four large oak beams; which, from their ſituation in the line marked i, could not have been originally ſo placed. They were wrought into grooves beneath on each ſide except the two end-ones, which were only wrought on one ſide that forms the end-wall; and, as they were much corroded, were perhaps originally part of the roof, and afterwards let down to figure as principals for the floor which covered them." Throſby's Leiceſter, p. 386.

[2] Theſe chambers now contain eight widows; ſix of whom receive 14*s*. quarterly, and a ſmall ſtipend weekly, making together ſomewhat more than 2*s*. a week; the other two about 1*s*. 6*d*. They have firing allowed them; and two of them have by turns 2*s*. 6*d*. each annually in lieu of a pair of ſhoes.

[3] The annual ſermon is now preached at St. Martin's church on the Sunday next after St. John's day.

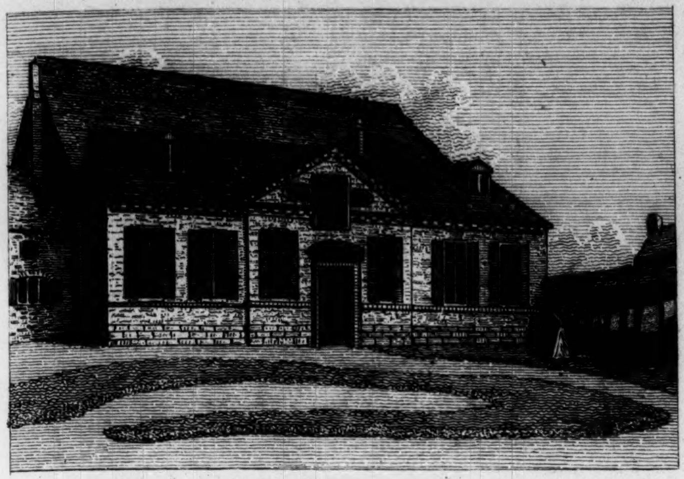
[4] This gentleman founded a ſeparate charity which bears his name. See p. 327.

[5] Some cloſes at Enderby, which in 1720 were in the poſſeſſion of Daniel Alcock.

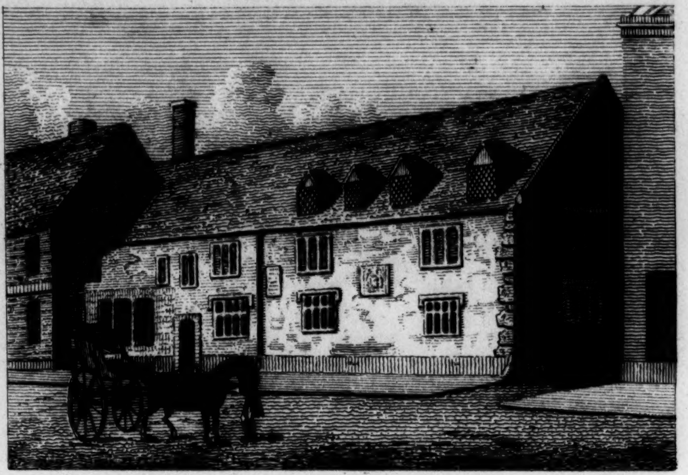
[6] The rules to be obſerved are: At their admiſſion, to bring with them to their houſe their bed, a bedſtead, and hangings, or curtains, one bolſter, two pillows, two pairs of ſhees and pillow-drawers, two blankets, one rug or quilt, one cheſt or coffer, one chair, and two towels; and to be left to the houſe, or diſpoſed of by them at their death; and, if diſpoſed of at their death, the perſon, or perſons, to whom they are given, is to give the keeper, or woman that aſſiſts them, 5*s*. To have new gowns, made of ſerge of 2*s*. per yard, once in three years; on the left breaſt of each gown a half-badge is to be fixed, and they to wear the ſaid gowns when they go to church, and at all other public appearance; and the gowns are reſpectively to be left, at their ſeveral deaths, to the ſucceſſor and ſucceſſors. That at the death of each of the ſeveral widows that now do, or hereafter ſhall, dwell in the ſaid houſe, and enjoy this charity, the houſe or place enjoyed by the deceaſed ſhall ſtand empty, and no one be admitted into it, nor have any pay, for 8 weeks from the death of any of the ſaid widows ſo dying, the two ſhillings a week for the ſaid 8 weeks amounting to 16*s*. to be put into the common box, to be equally divided between the three ſurvivors, and the keeper, or woman that aſſiſts, ſhare and ſhare alike. That the keeper, or woman that doth or ſhall aſſiſt the ſaid four widows, ſhall make the firſt fire in the morning for the ſaid widows in the common room, and ſweep and cleanſe the ſame, and carry the aſhes and dirt out of it every morning; and what fires are to be made after the morning in each and every day, and cleanſing the ſaid common room, ſhall be done by the four widows, by their ſeveral turns, every one for a week, till all have done; and ſo begin again, and continue it. That the garden ſhall be enjoyed between the Upper Houſe and the Nether Houſe, as it is now ſet out; viz. that part on the right hand from the entry and far-end to the Upper Houſe, and the other part on the left hand to the Nether Houſe.—Theſe houſes are pointed out, with the new Town-Gaol, in Plate XXVIII.

Pl. XXVIII. p. 326.

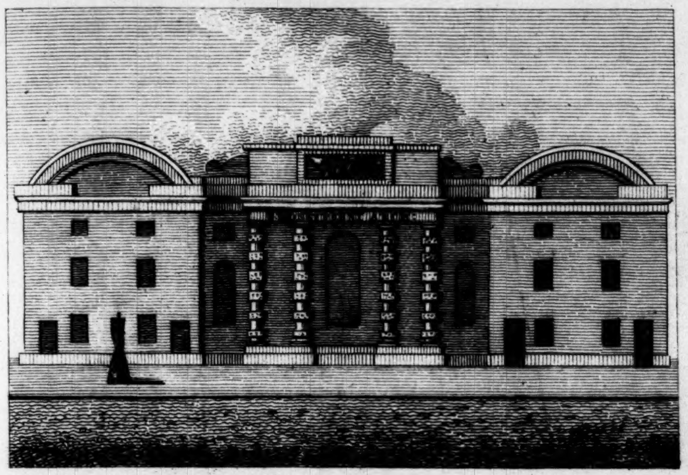
CASTLE.



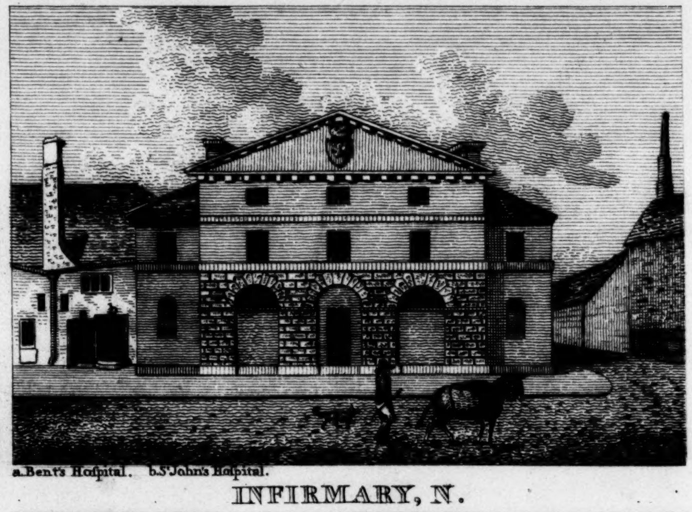
FREE SCHOOL.



COUNTY GAOL.

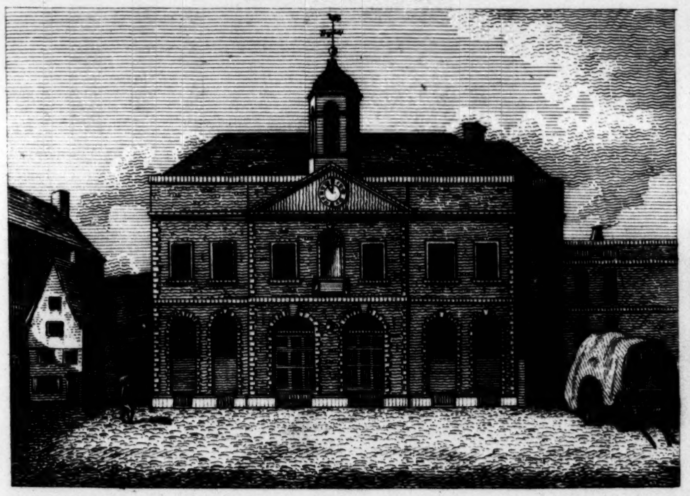


TOWN GAOL.

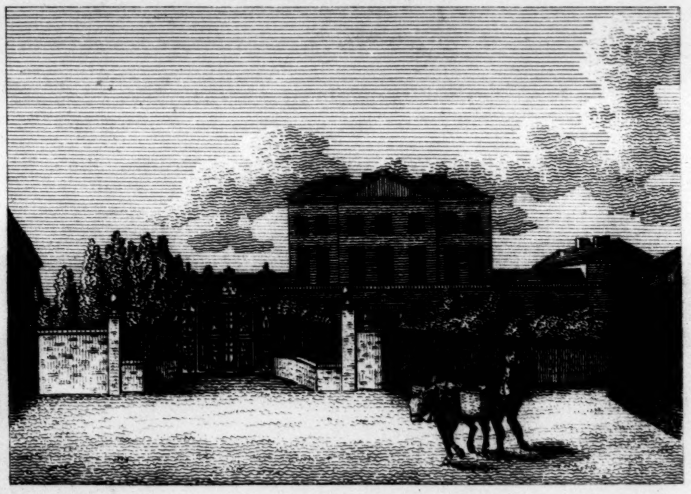


a. Bent's Hoſpital. b. St. John's Hoſpital.

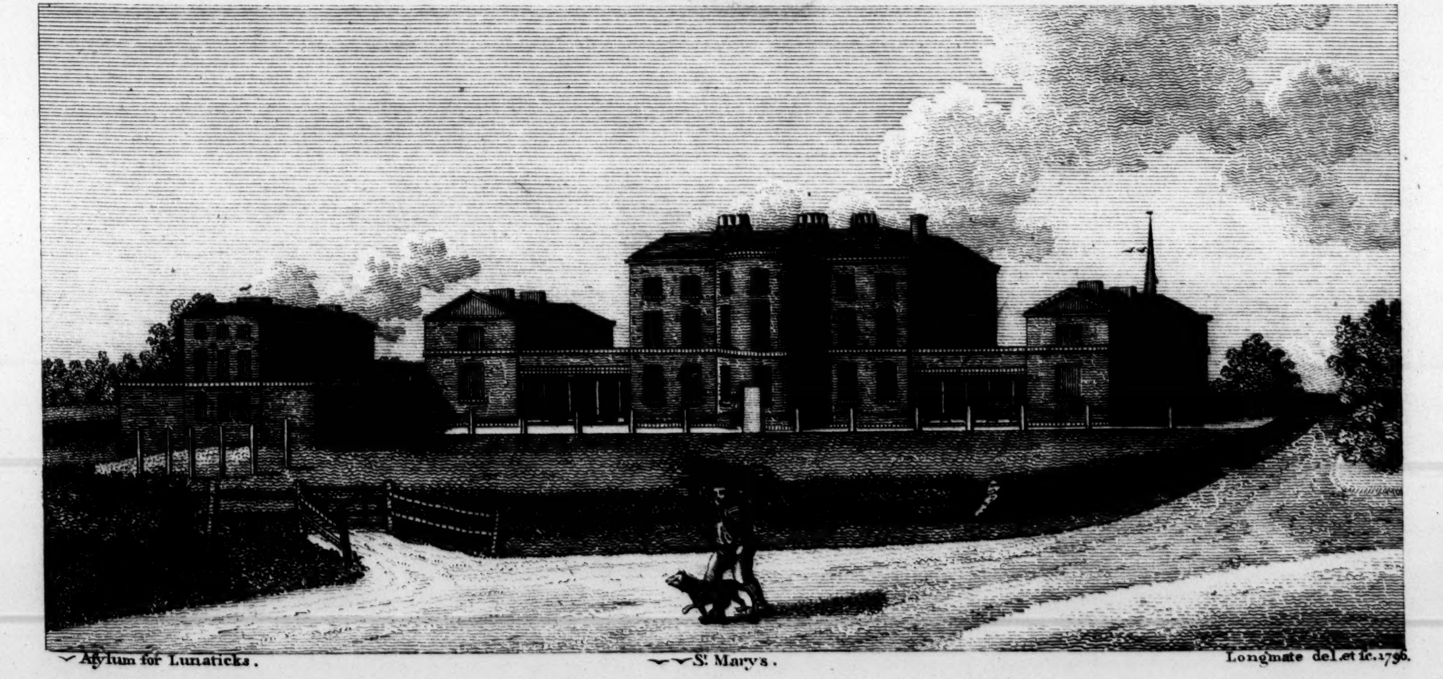
EXCHANGE.



INFIRMARY, N.



INFIRMARY, S.



Aſylum for Lunaticks. S. Marys. Longmate del. et ſc. 1796.

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

Another charitable inſtitution [1] may here be noticed, founded by MATTHEW SIMONS, Eſq. who, having purchaſed a houſe in Blue-boar lane about 1700, after having repaired and fitted it up for the purpoſe, placed therein ſix ſingle women about 1703; and at his death, about 1714, ordained a ſucceſſion of that number to be continued for ever; aſſigning to them a good garden and a good cellar in common, and to each woman £3. a year to be paid quarterly, and 15 hundred of coals, coſt what they will; and enjoined his executor or truſtees to keep the houſe in repair. The ſame Mr. Simons gave about £103. for other laſting charities.

St. MICHAEL'S Church

was ſituate in thoſe which are called the Back-lanes, the houſes whereof were demoliſhed or burnt down in 1173 [2].

William Eyton occurs vicar of St. Michael 1221; and Henry de Sc̃o Martino in 1233 [3].

The church continued a conſiderable time afterwards; for in it a monk, who was educated under William le Cloune, abbot of Leiceſter 1345—1377, is ſaid to have turned anchoret; and, in 1487, it is thus noticed in Charyte's Rentale:

"Memorandum, quòd Andreas Burgeis dedit eccleſie Sc̃i Michaelis quandam terram, in longitudine intra terram ipſius eccleſie & terram Gregorii Makepays, & in latitudine intra venellam & veterem murum Leyc', &c.

"Memorandum, quòd Matheus le Marchat, capellanus, dedit eccleſie Sancti Michaelis quandam terram, in longitudine intra terram pertinentem ad eandem eccleſiam & terram que fuit Gregorii Makepays, & in latitudine intra longam venellam & murum Leyc' [4]."

"Memorandum, quòd omnia emolumenta ad vicariam Sancti Michaelis ſpectantia, durante vacatione vicarie predicte, pertinent, & debent pertinere, ad abbatem & conventum monaſterii Leyceſtr', & non ad epiſcopum Lincoln', ſicut patet in placito inter ipſos.

Eccleſia Sc̃i Michaelis reddit vlĩ. xiiiis̃." [5]

The church was ſoon after demoliſhed.

Richard Orton, April 29, 1586, gave to the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter a rent of 12*d.* yearly, out of a cloſe lying in the late pariſhes of St. Peter's and St. Mighill's of Leiceſter, between the ground ſometime William Pureſei's and Thomas Pallet's of the Weſt part, and the queen's highway of old called Torchemer, near to a place there where formerly ſtood a croſs of the Eaſt part, and extending from a lane called Feill-lane, otherwiſe called Storchall-lane, of the South, unto a lane called St. Mighill's lane of the North, and now in the tenure of Robert Johnſon, roughlayer [6].

"This indenture, made the 27th day of April, in the 33d year of our ſovereign lady Elizabeth, and in the year of our Lord 1591, between the mayor and burgeſſes of the town of Liſter on the one part, and William Dethick, town-clerk of the ſaid town, on the other part, witneſſeth, that the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes, for, and in conſideration of, the full ſatisfaction and payment of the ſaid William, for the making ſundry writings, conveyances, and teſtaments, at divers times, for and about the affairs and buſineſs of the corporation of ſaid town, and for divers other good cauſes and conſiderations them the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes preſently moving, have, upon condition hereafter expreſſed, granted, bargained, ſold, enfeoffed, and confirmed, and, by theſe preſents, under and upon the conditions hereafter expreſſed, do, for them and their ſucceſſors, covenant, bargain, ſell, enfeoff, and confirm, unto the ſaid William Dethick, his heirs and aſſigns, one parcel of ground, or croft, with the appurtenances, called St. Michael's church-yard, together with one lane at the Weſt end thereof, lying and being together in the pariſh of St. Peter's in the town of Liſter aforeſaid, and now in the tenure of one Robert Pilkington, or of his aſſigns, and is parcell of the lands and poſſeſſions of the antient dutchy of Lancaſter, and belonging the honour of Liſter, in the ſaid county of Liſter [7]."

June 16, 1606, an agreement occurs between George Neville and Thomas Biddle, concerning two acres of paſture lately in St. Michael's pariſh, but then united to All Saints.

St. PETER'S

pariſh included part of the High-Croſs-ſtreet, and lay between All Saints and St. Martin's.

The Church is thus noticed in Charyte's Rentale:

"Patronus hujus eccleſie abbas Leiceſtr'. Vicarius ibidem inſtitutus per epiſcopum. Penſio vicarii ab antiquo v marc'. Ordinatio ejus per Hugonem epiſcopum patet in le Chartwary. Clericus eligendus eſt per abbatem [8]."

All that is farther ſaid of St. Peter's in the Rentale is, that the Abbey of Leiceſter poſſeſſed a few ſingle meſſuages in the pariſh [9].

[10] VICARS of St. Peter's.

Robertus Capellanus, 1221.
R.... de L..... capellanus, 1226.
Henry de Shirle, 1270.
William de Eaſton, 1273.

In 1283, "R. clericus S. Petri de Leiceſtriâ & ſubdiaconus" occurs as witneſs to a deed [11].

In this church, ſir William Marmion performed homage to ſir Robert Burdett, in 1369, for the lordſhip of Galby [12].

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quòd nos Joh̃es Heſylton capellanus, Joh̃es Hornyngwold de Leiceſtriâ, & Will̃us Outhorp de eâdem, dedimus, conceſſimus, & hâc preſenti cartâ noſtrâ confirmavimus, Will̃o Derby de Leiceſtriâ, tayllour, unam placeam terre, cum edificiis & omnibus pertinentiis, in Leyceſtriâ, in parochiâ Sc̃i Petri ejuſdem ville, jacent' inter terram Sc̃e Marie eccleſie Sc̃i Petri, que quondam fuit Hugonis le Carter, ex parte unâ, & terram quondam Will̃i le Cook, ironmonger, ex parte alterâ, & extendit ſe à venellâ vocat' Wylughby-lane uſque ad terram Will̃i Danet; quam quidem placeam terre, cum edificiis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, nuper habuimus ex dono & conceſſione Thome Benytt capellani, & quam placeam terre, cum edificiis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, idem Thomas nuper, ſimul cum Joh̃e Gybbeſton de Syleby, jam defuncto, habuit ex dono & conceſſione Willi Pykwell de Syleby; habend' & tenend' predictam placeam terre, cum edificiis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, prefato Willo Derby, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, liberè, quietè, benè, & in pace, in perpetuum, de capitalibus dominis ſeodi illius, per ſervicia indè debita & de jure conſueto: Et nos verò prefati Johes Heſylton, Johes Hornyngwold, & Willus Outhorp, & heredes noſtri, predictam placeam terre, cum edificiis & omnibus pertineniis ſuis, prefato Willo Derby, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, contra omnes gentes warantizabimus, & in perpetuum defendemus. In cujus teſtimonium, huic preſenti carte noſtre ſigilla noſtra appoſuimus. Hiis teſtibus; Willo Pacy, tunc majore ville Leiceſtrie; Henrico Forſter, tunc ballivo ejuſdem ville; Henrico Derby, Johe Nyghtyngale, Willo York, ballivis & .....; Willo Maloyn de Leyceſtriâ; & aliis. Dat', apud Leyceſtr', 12° die menſis Maii, anno regni regis Henrici Quinti poſt conqueſtum octavo, & anno Domini 1412[1]."

---

[1] One other inſtitution of a ſimilar nature, by a worthy individual ſtill living, will be duly noticed in a future page.

[2] The Back-lanes, which are in All Saints pariſh, and formerly a very populous part of Leiceſter, have never been rebuilt ſince this almoſt general deſtruction.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xc. a.

[4] Ibid. fol. xcvi. b. xcvii. a.

[5] The endowment of the vicarage is in the Lincoln regiſter.

[6] Carte, MS. from the Town Records.

[7] Extracted from a deed in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Cobley, of Leiceſter, who owns the ground alluded to; a part of which was lately ſold to the pariſhioners of All Saints, in addition to their church-yard.

[8] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xcvii. b.

[9] Ibid. fol. xc. a.

[10] The endowment of the vicarage is in the Lincoln regiſter.

[11] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, ed. 1. p. 391.

[12] See vol. II. p. 568.

One of the Back-Lanes in 1522 was called "Venella Sc̄i Petri."

About October, 1563, an account being taken of the four bells in this church, it was found that the great bell weighed 11 cwt. 16 lb. the ſecond bell 8 cwt. 26 lb. the third bell 6 cwt. 18 lb. the firſt bell 5 cwt. 10 lb.; that the timber of the church ſhould be taken down, and kept in ſafety with the lead.

June 30, 1564, it was ordered, that one of the bells ſhould be ſold, for repair of the ſchool-houſe; whence it appears that there was a ſchool-houſe here before the preſent free ſchool (ſee Plate XXVIII.) was erected.

Nov. 16, 1570, at a Common hall, it was agreed, that the timber of St. Peter's church ſhall be taken down, and kept in ſafety, with the lead, till farther orders.

In 1571, the following deed occurs of Richard Darker:

"Omnibus, &c. Sciatis me dediſſe Willo Dakyn meſſ' ſeu tent', & gardinum jacent', in parochiâ Sc̄i Petri, in le High-ſtreet, quod abuttat ſe versùs auſtrum ſuper gardinum Leonardi Danet, armigeri, & versùs partem borealem ſuper venellam vocat' Willoughby-lane, & versùs partem orientalem ſuper communem ſtratum vocat' le High-ſtreet, & versùs partem occidentalem ſuper peciam terre majoris & communitatis Leic'; ac etiam dediſſe prefato Willo clauſum meum quod abuttat ſe versùs auſtralem ſuper venellam voc' St. Peter's lane, & versùs domum manſionalem vicarii Sc̄i Petri ſuper partem borealem, & versùs cemeterium Sc̄i Petri ſuper partem occidentalem, & terram Willi Gilbert ſuper partem orientalem. Dat' 20 Aprilis, anno regni Elizabethe regine 21°[2]."

April 7, 1573, an indenture was made, between the mayor and co-burgeſſes of Leiceſter, whereby the queen, for £35. to be paid to the general receiver of the dutchy of Lancaſter, and other cauſes, granted to the mayor and co-burgeſſes all the lead, ſtone, and timber, of the decayed church of St. Peter, which lead by commiſſioners was certified to be 4 fodders and 400 lb.; and the mayor and co-burgeſſes covenanted to erect a ſubſtantial ſchool-houſe, within a year after the date, covered with ſlate, and the ſame from time to time to repair; and to employ the ſaid lead, ſtone, and timber, in edifying the ſame; and to employ the overplus, if any ſhould be, in bringing a conduit of freſh water into the town.

The church being thus entirely demoliſhed, it was thought convenient that the pariſh ſhould be united to ſome other; and it lying between St. Martin's pariſh and All Saints' pariſh, when the matter came to be conſidered in a common hall, March 26, 1591, there aroſe a great debate between the members which were of thoſe pariſhes; but at length it was carried that it ſhould be united to All Saints, which was completed in the time of queen Elizabeth; the proceſs of which will be given under that pariſh.

On the ſite of this church was afterwards built the County Gaol; a view of which is given in Plate XXVIII.

Other DEMOLISHED CHURCHES and CHAPELS.

1. St. Andrew's chapel is noticed by Mr. Wyrley in 1590 as belonging to St. Leonard's hoſpital; or poſſibly was a chapel within the church of the Newark[3].

2. At the Eaſt end of the church of St. Nicholas there ſtood, in very early times, two churches or chapels under the ſame roof; the one dedicated to St. Auguſtine, the other to St. Columbanus; which are ſuppoſed to have been demoliſhed either at the Conqueſt, or in the troubles of 1087[4]. Neither of them is mentioned in the Matriculus of 1220.

3. Hugh Capellanus was preſented to the vicarage of St. Clement's[5] in 1221, "per epiſcopum authoritate concilii[6]." The church was ſoon after given to the Grey Friers; whoſe fate it ſhared[7].

4. The church of St. Croſs, which has ſometimes been noticed in old writings, is only another name for St. Martin's. The oblations ad ſanctam crucem at Eaſter in this church were a part of the vicar's endowment. The High Croſs was alſo within this pariſh, and a chantry called Corpus Chriſti.

5. The chapel of the Holy Sepulchre was ſituated at the extremity of the Borough, without the walls, towards the South, at the end of South-gate ſtreet, where thoſe who were to be hanged at the gallows uſed to be interred. This chapel was appropriated to the church of St. Mary de Caſtro, and was regularly ſerved by a chaplain from that church, under the appointment of the abbot of St. Mary de Pratis[8].

6. St. James's chapel had ſome of its walls ſtanding within the memory of perſons living in Mr. Carte's time; and, conſidering that in a hall-book, 1 Richard III. one of the wards of the town is deſcribed to be "from the South-gate unto the Sepulchre church," and in another hall-book, 4 and 5 Philip and Mary, the ſame is deſcribed to extend "from the South-gate to St. James's chapel," this chapel was perhaps the ſame with The Sepulchre church, or at leaſt ſtood very near it, and poſſibly might be The Hermitage.

7. St. Trinity's was only another name for the choir in the South aile of St. Mary's church.

---

[1] From the original deed, communicated to Mr. Carte, by Mr. Noble, in 1725. [2] Ibid. [3] See before, p. 322; and hereafter, p. 339.

[4] It was demoliſhed, according to the Saxon Chronicle, p. 194, "per Hugonem ſub A. D. 1087," in the conſpiracy againſt William Rufus in favour of his brother Robert, when this Hugh ravaged the counties of Leiceſter and Northampton; as is obſerved by Maurice Johnſon, eſq. who, in Dr. Stukeley's Plan of Roman Leiceſter, Itin. I. Pl. 92. (which has been introduced in a former part of the preſent volume, p. 6) has written, "Ad Orientem Sancti Nicholai, eccleſiæ Sancti Auguſtini & Sancti Columbani ſub duobus tectis conjunctis ſuper medias columnas;" and adds, "The Rev. Samuel Carte, M. A. an aged and very learned Antiquary, and my honoured friend, in converſation on the ſpot at the place, and in his own ſtudy there, gave me a copy of a record from the Rentale B. M. V. in Pratis Leyc. 'quod eccleſia de Coſby pertinuit ad eccleſias Sancti Auguſtini Leyc. & Sancti Columbani ibidem, vocat' Holybones;' not being parochial, and ſo not entitled to perſonal tithes; not having any prædial, being pent up and incloſed infra burgum." M. JOHNSON, MS.—Mr. Johnſon ſuppoſed that the church of St. Mary de Caſtro was built on the foundation of a Roman temple.

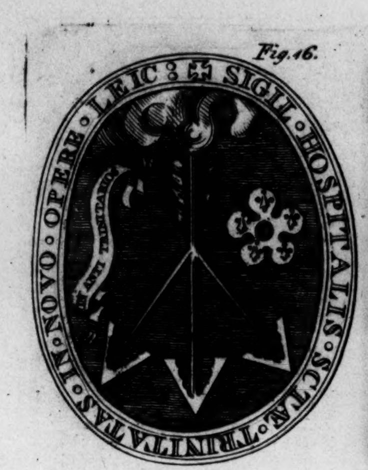
[5] The abbot and convent of Croxton poſſeſſed an annual rent of 12*d*. and two capons, given them by Peter rector of Eaſtwell, to be received from a meſſuage in the pariſh of St. Clement, in the tenure of Richard de Walton; which rent the abbot and convent beſtowed on the friers-preachers of Leiceſter. Regiſter of Croxton Abbey.

[6] The endowment of the vicarage may be ſeen in the Lincoln Regiſters.

[7] See before, p. 298. [8] See before, p. 303.

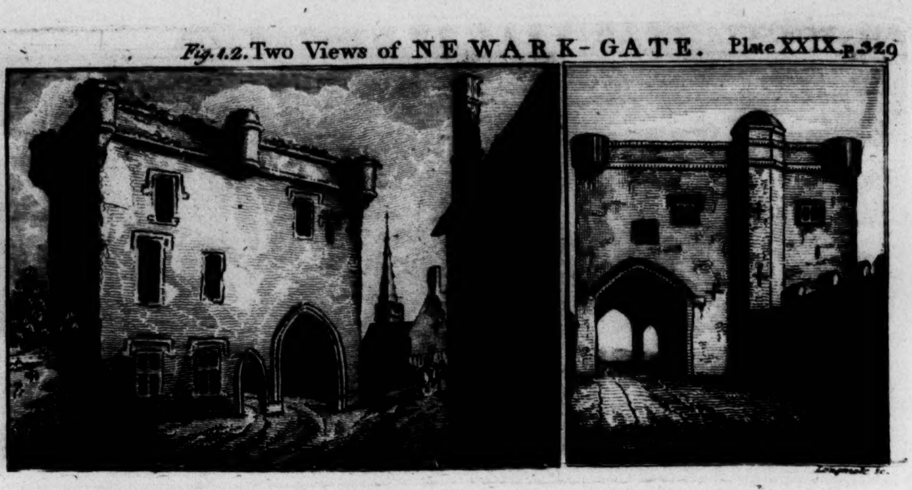
BRITISH
12 JN 1928
MUSEUM

Fig. 16.



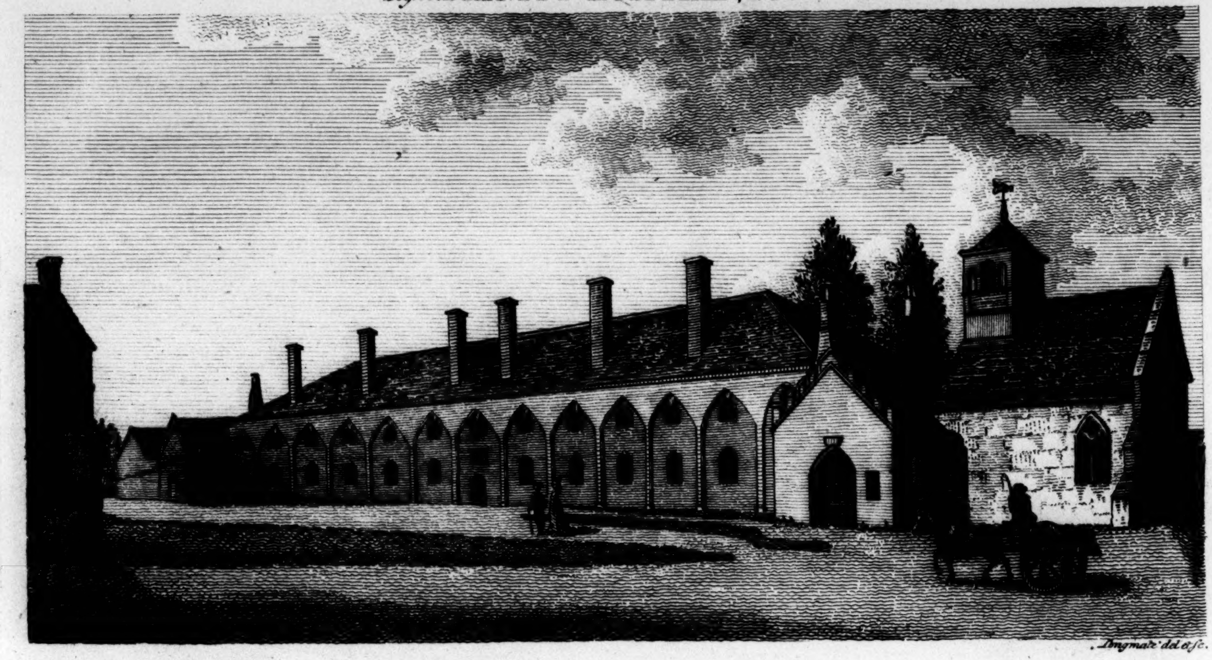
SIGIL ✠ HOSPITALIS ∘ SCTE ∘ TRINITATIS ∘ IN ∘ NOVO ∘ OPERE ∘ LEIC ∘

Fig. 1. 2. Two Views of NEWARK-GATE. Plate XXIX. p. 329



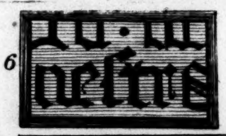
Longmate sc.

Fig. 18. TRINITY HOSPITAL, 1796.

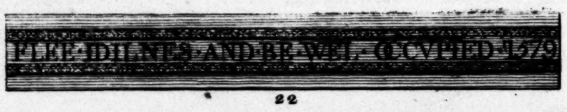


Longmate del. et sc.

6

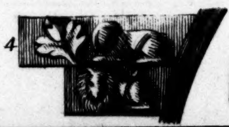


22



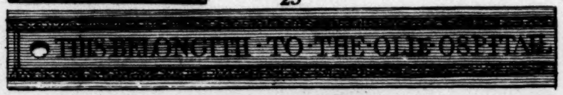
FLEE·IDILNES·AND·BE·WEL·OCCVPIED·1579

4



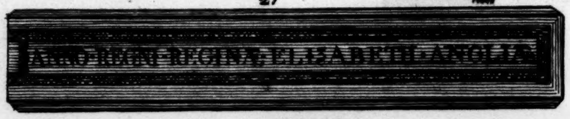
5

23



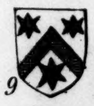
THIS BELONGITH · TO · THE · OLDE OSPYTALL

27

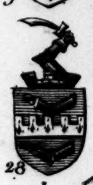


ANNO·REGNI·REGINÆ·ELIZABETH·ANGLIÆ

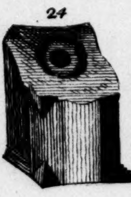
9



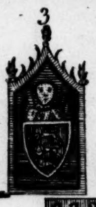
28



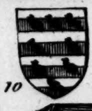
24



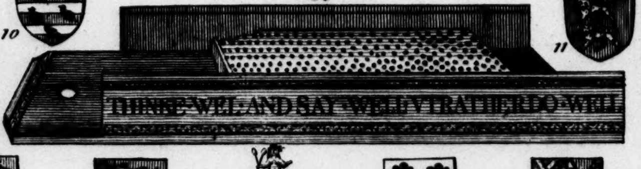
3



10

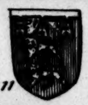


20

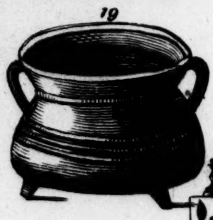


THINKE·WEL·AND SAY·WELL·V·RATHER·DO·WELL

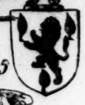
11



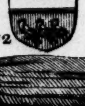
19



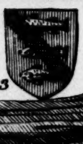
25



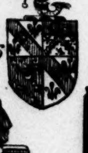
12



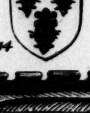
13



26



14



15

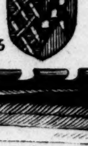


Fig. 7.

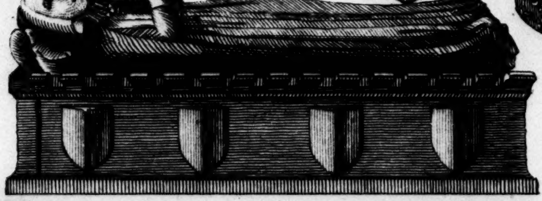

Fig. 8.

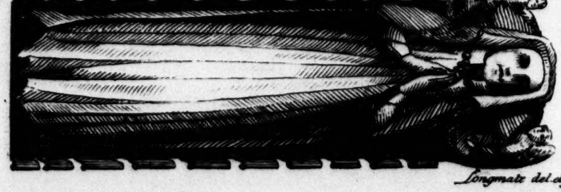

Longmate del. et sc.

27

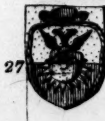

Fig. 17. TRINITY HOSPITAL, 1776.

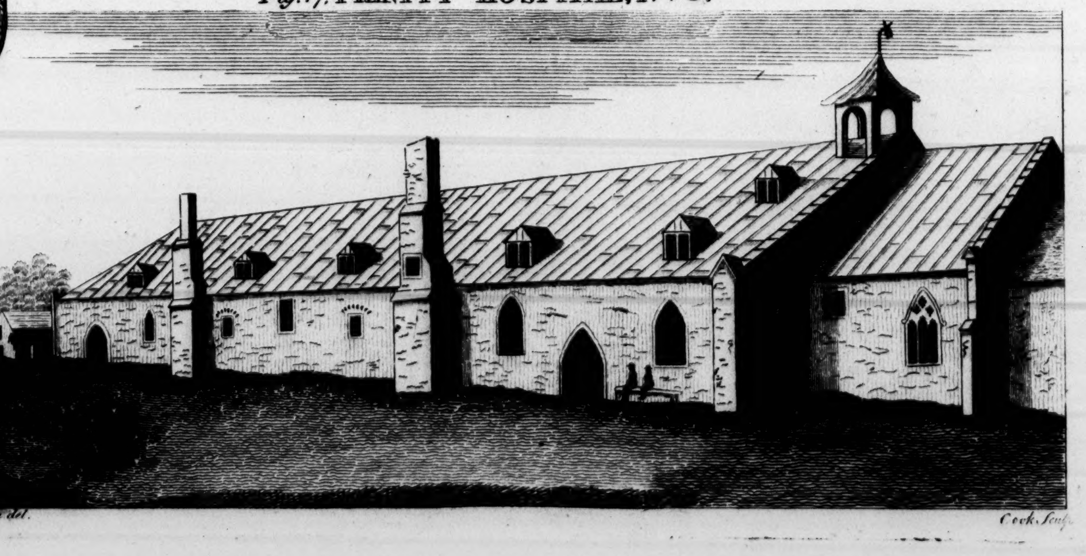

J. Pridden del.

Cook Sculp.

The HOSPITAL and COLLEGE of the NEWARK.

The Newark, a diſtrict of four acres, was originally ſurrounded, except towards the river, with high ſtone walls embattled, of which ſeveral parts remain, though many breaches are made in them. It has two lofty gates; one towards the South-gate ſtreet[1], very large and handſome, made uſe of for the county-magazine[2]; the other, which ſeparates the Newark from the Caſtle-yard, was handſomely turreted till very lately, when the upper part was houſe-topped; and the arms of the duke of Lancaſter (Plate XXIX. fig. 3.) deſtroyed; but there ſtill remain ſome emblems of its illuſtrious founders, fig. 4, 5.—The fragment in fig. 6. is from a window in the Caſtle-yard.

The Old Hoſpital was founded by Henry earl of Lancaſter, who in 1322 ſucceeded his brother Thomas in the earldom of Leiceſter; in 1327, on the reverſal of his brother's attainder, obtained the earldom of Lancaſter; and in 1330 procured the king's letters patent, dated at Woodſtock, 2 April, 4 Edw. III. for founding, in a certain place belonging to him in Leiceſter, containing within itſelf four acres, an hoſpital[3], in honour of God and the Virgin Mary, for the maintenance of 50 infirm old men, and 5 women as nurſes, under the management of a maſter, four chaplains, and two clerks; and alſo a regular chapel (oratorium), and proper houſes for the habitation of the maſter and chaplains; with liberty to confer on his foundation four acres of land in Leiceſter, and the advowſon of the church of Ircheſter[4] in Northamptonſhire; and authorizing the maſter and chaplains to hold the ſaid lands, and appropriate the ſaid church, for the maintenance of themſelves and the poor of the hoſpital, notwithſtanding the ſtatute of mortmain[5]. To this gift, in 1333, was added the advowſon of the church of Duffield in Derbyſhire[6].

Earl Henry died in 1345; and was buried with great pomp in the chapel of this hoſpital[7], where a fair tomb was afterwards erected for him. But his charitable intentions were purſued with unabated ardour by Henry his ſon and ſucceſſor, who, in 1348, acquired for this new foundation the lordſhip and advowſon of Haringdon[8] in Northamptonſhire, which had fallen into the king's hands on the diſſolution of the Knights Hoſpitallers; and in 1349 obtained from Pope Clement III. "a bull of relaxation from penance to all who ſhould viſit the hoſpital founded by Henry earl of Leiceſter; which the ſaid earl, and Henry earl of Lancaſter his ſon, relinquiſhing the place of ſepulture in which the remains of their anceſtors were depoſited, had choſen for their own interment; dated at Avignon, 3 id. Aprilis, pont. 7°."[9] He procured alſo, in 1350, from archbiſhop Iſlip, an indulgence of 40 days to all who ſhould viſit the church of this hoſpital for eight days preceding the feaſt of St. Michael, and of 30 days to thoſe who ſhould viſit it once in a year; dated at Maghefeld, 1350[10].

He was in 1351 advanced to the dignity of a duke. In 1354, he conſiderably enlarged the original foundation, by engrafting on it a collegiate church in honour of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin; "Henry Plantagenet, firſt duke of Lancaſter, founded a place by the South gate, called the New work, the moſt beautiful abbey in England[11]." And in the ſame year it was found to be of no prejudice, if the king permitted his couſin Henry duke of Lancaſter to give the advowſons of Thorpe Edmere and Wymondham to the dean of St. Mary's church in Leiceſter[12].

The ſtatutes for the regulation of the new foundation were completed, 9 kal. Aprilis, 1355; "preſentibus, fratre Willo de Cloune abbate monaſterii beate Marie de Pratis Leyc', dominis Hen' de Walton archidiacono Richm', Willo de Donne archidiacono Leyc', Willo de Louteburgh archidiacono Lewen', Willo de Grenburgh archidiacono Stafford'[13];" and on the ſame day, Richard de Hanſlape, the firſt dean, with his brethren the prebendaries, were admitted; and, agreeably to the ſuperſtition of the age, received from their founder a celebrated relick, which he had then lately brought from France, a thorn ſaid to have been part of the crown of Jeſus[14].

May 18, 1356, the duke obtained full powers, from the pope and the king, to convert the church belonging to his hoſpital into a collegiate church[15]. To the 50 almſmen and 5 nurſes originally placed in the hoſpital, he added 50 more men and 5 more nurſes[16]; who were all placed under the care and guardianſhip of the dean and canons, and provided for by an aſſignment of a rent-charge from various lands belonging to his dutchy. He gave them alſo his manor of Kempsford, with part of the manor of Chedworth, in Glouceſterſhire; the manor of Ingleſham in Wiltſhire; and the advowſons of Thorpe Edmere, Wymondham, Higham Ferrars[17], Raundes[18], Preſton, Kempsford, and Chedworth[19]; the reverſion of his manor of Wolaſton in Northamptonſhire after the death of Simon Symyon[20], who held it for his life, ſubject to a yearly payment of 40*s.* to St. David's hoſpital near Northampton. This noble grant was dated 4 March, 29 Edw. III; and on the 12th of June following the duke ſecured to the dean and canons, on divers others of his lordſhips, an annual rent-charge of £1000. if they ſhould be diſturbed in the poſſeſſion of his former grant[21]. He had for ſome time before reſided at Kempsford; but, his beloved child and only ſon having come to an untimely end, he quitted that part of the country, and employed himſelf chiefly in ſuperintending his magnificent building at Leiceſter. On his departure from Kempsford, his horſe happening to caſt a ſhoe, the inhabitants nailed it to the church-door; where it remained in 1712[1], and probably ſtill preſerves his memory.

---

[1] See two views of this gate in Plate XXIX. fig. 1, 2.

[2] "Newark-gate (the arſenal of arms) is juſt 51 yards from the South-gate; the approach to which ſeems to have been under the command of the garriſon. The extent of the front, as it faces the North-eaſt, or South-gate ſtreet, 54 feet 6 inches in front, 29 feet 1 inch in breadth; 32 feet from the Magazine to the end of the ſhops on the Newark ſide; thence to Bunney's wall 44 feet 7 inches; which together make 76 feet 7 inches." W. B.

[3] "Eodem anno Henricus comes Lancaſtrie cœpit conſtruere novum hoſpitale juxta caſtrum Leiceſtrie, ſcil', anno Gratie MCCCXXX; & comes cœpit oculis caligare in cœcitatem, & ſeneſcere." Knyghton, Chron. inter x Script. col. 2559.

[4] Pat. 14 Edw. III. pro eccleſiâ de Irenceſtre.—This vicarage was endowed in 1348; and a vicar was in 1349 preſented "per cuſtodem & fratres hoſpitalis." Bridges, vol. II. p. 180.

[5] Appendix, p. 109.

[6] Pat. 5 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 12. pro eccleſiâ de Duffield. A fee-farm rent of £24. iſſuing from this rectory, and which, after the diſſolution of the collegiate church, had been long applied towards the maintenance of the hoſpital, was alienated about the year 1678.

[7] See before, p. 226.

[8] Pat. 22 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 20. "Pro decano Leyc. de manerio de Haringdon, cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem ville appropriatâ."

[9] Appendix, p. 109; from Reg. Iſlip, archiep. Cant. f. 24. a.

[10] Ibid. from the ſame Regiſter, f. 34. b.

[11] Carte, MS. from Knighton. In the Regiſter of the Biſhop of Lincoln is preſerved "Hoſpitalis beate Marie ordinatio, & cantarie mutatio in eccleſiâ conventuali pro animâ domini Roberti Byrd ordinate."

[12] Peck, MSS. 4937, p. 162; from Inq. ad quod dampnum, 28 Edw. III. N° 2. Leic.

[13] Theſe ſtatutes are preſerved in the Regiſters at Lincoln. Reg. Gynewell, fol. 278—293. 320.

[14] Knighton, col. 2605. See before, p. 219.

[15] Pat. 30 Edw. III. "Henricus dux Lanc. filius Henrici comitis Lanc. auctoritate papæ & regis, obtinuit ut eccleſia hoſpitalis Leyc. mutaretur in eccleſiam collegiatam, pro uno decano & certo numero canonicorum, 18 Maii."

[16] Knighton miſtakes, in ſuppoſing the foundation to be for 50 men and 50 women.

[17] Higham Ferrars was appropriated, with the chapels of Chelverſton and Caldecote, 28 Edw. III. Bridges, vol. II. p. 174.

[18] The vicarage of Raundes was endowed in 1356. The firſt preſentation made by the dean and chapter to the vicarage was in 1390. The preceding incumbent (who was rector) had been preſented by "John Gynewell, Henr. com. Lanc. attorn. gen." who was afterwards (1351) biſhop of Lincoln. Bridges, vol. II. p. 186.

[19] Appendix, p. 109.

[20] Bridges, vol. II. p. 200. This is probably the ſame perſon with Simon Synden, whoſe endowment of a chantry is preſerved in the Regiſters of the Biſhop of Lincoln. See the Introductory Volume, p. xcix.

[21] Appendix, p. 109.

In 1357, the dean and canons obtained a charter of free-warren for their lands in Wolaſton; and for their manors of Kynemeresford, Chedſworth, Haryngdon, and Ingleſham[2]; and in 1358 the duke had the king's permiſſion to grant to them four acres and a half of land in Leiceſter, being near their dwelling, in elargationem manſi ſui. "Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 15° die Januarii[3];" in the ſame year, the duke and his dutcheſs Iſabella obtained for them a confirmation-grant of the manor and advowſon of Haringdon[4]; and in 1358-9, they agreed to make a yearly payment of 51*s.* 7½ d. to the ſacriſt and canons of the collegiate church of St. Mary de Caſtro. "Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 24° die Januarii[5]."

May 10, 1361, the dean and canons, taking notice that their hoſpital and college, with divers of the lands thereunto belonging, were deſcribed in the charters of their founders and benefactors to be ſituated within the borough (villa) of Leiceſter; and apprehenſive that their exempt juriſdiction might be hereafter diſputed by the Corporation; they obtained the letters patent of king Edward III; which, after a brief recital of the various benefactions to the hoſpital and college, and declaring them both to be ſituate in the Suburbs, and not within the town, permitted the duke of Lancaſter to give to the dean and canons two whole lanes (venellas) and a plot of ground next the Caſtle, for the enlargement of their houſe and church[6]. In this year, the duke died; and, by the expreſs direction of his will, was buried in this church[7].

In 1363, the dean and canons had licence to appropriate the advowſon of Llanvaylog (aliàs Llan Defailog, or Llandeveylogg,) in Carmarthenſhire[8]; where they poſſeſſed alſo the church of Pen Bre[9].

In 1369, John de Knighton, John de Burton, and John de Banbury, chaplains, gave three ſhops, one toft, ſix acres of arable land, and two acres of meadow, in the Suburbs of Leiceſter, then of the yearly value of 6*s.* 8*d.*; which the dean and canons were enabled to receive, and hold in perpetuity, at the annual value of £5. as a part of £10. a year, which by former letters patent they had been empowered to acquire. "Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 5° die Maii[10]."

In 1374, as a farther part of the annual ten pounds abovementioned, they were empowered to receive from John de Stockton and William de Swepſton, chaplains, one meſſuage, 5 tofts, 15 acres of arable land, and the third part of another meſſuage, in the Suburbs of Leiceſter; and from William Cheſelden, John de Knighton, and John de Banbury, chaplains, one toft in the ſame Suburbs; being together of the annual value of 9*s.* 5½*d.* "Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 4° Nov'[11]."

In 1380, they obtained the advowſon of Cranſley in Northamptonſhire, where this college poſſeſſed a manor appropriated to the dean and canons[12].

Thomas de Brytwell, profeſſor of divinity at Oxford, prebendary of St. Margaret's, Leiceſter, was examined, in 1382, before archbiſhop Courtney, as a witneſs on the articles of Wickliff[13]. He was afterwards chancellor of the univerſity of Oxford, and dean of the church of our Lady in the Newark; and to him was directed, in 1389, the curious proceſs concerning the Lollards performing penance in this church, already noticed under the Hiſtory of Leiceſter Abbey[14].

In 1391, Sir Maurice Berkeley, ſon of Thomas, releaſed to the dean and canons all claim to the tithes of Wolaſton, co. Northampton[15].

In 1392, William Burton and Richard Elvet, clerks, had licence to give to the dean and canons 9 meſſuages, 9 ſhops, 16 tofts, 6 acres of arable land, 11 acres and 1 rood of meadow, a rent of 9*s.* and an annual acknowledgement of a capon, a hen, and half a pound of cumin, with the appurtenances, in Leiceſter and its Suburbs; which completed their £10. a year. "Teſte rege, apud Nottingham, 9° Auguſti[16]."

In 1398, Gilbert Elvet, John de Stukley, and Peter Burnell, had licence to give "unum molendinum aquaticum de Thamiſiâ in Harrindon, unà cum gurgite, multurâ bladorum, & ſitu eidem molendino pertinentibus, ac piſcariam eorundem molendini & gurgitis, necnon medietatem unius hide terre, cum pertin', in eâdem villâ. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 1° die Septemb'[17]."

Soon after, this church loſt an eſpecial benefactor, by the death of John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, who, during his reſidence in the caſtle of Leiceſter[18], had taken great delight in this ſplendid foundation of his father and grandfather[19]; and, by his laſt will, dated from his chamber in the caſtle, Feb. 3, 1397-8, gave to this church his red garment of velvet embroidered with gold ſuns, and all the apparel to the ſaid garment belonging, with the whole of his Miſſals, and ſuch books belonging to his chapel as were according to the uſe of the church of Saliſbury, and not otherwiſe ſpecifically deviſed[20]. In his lifetime he had ſecured to them an annuity of 100 marks, in lieu of 700 marks ſettled on them at their foundation, which he had taken away[21].

In 1399, King Henry IV. reciting that Henry duke of Lancaſter, his grandfather, had begun the foundation of a collegiate church at Leiceſter, and buildings for the habitation of canons and clerks, and infirm people there dwelling; and that John duke of Lancaſter, his father, had been deſirous to complete the ſame; and approving their pious intentions; aſſigned John de Byngham and others, to provide maſons, carpenters, and other workmen, to the number of four and twenty, and to provide timber and ſtone for carrying on and finiſhing the work; commanding all mayors, bayliffs, &c. to be aiding and aſſiſting[22].

---

[1] Sir Richard Atkyns, Glouceſterſhire, p. 490; who miſtakes, however, in ſuppoſing the grant to have been made to the church of St. Mary de Caſtro. And ſee Bigland's Collections, vol. II. p. 121.

[2] Lib. Feod. Mil. penes Rememb. Reg. Scaccarii; and Bridges, vol. II. p. 200; & Cart. 30 Edw. III. n. 14. In a book of Warrants, temp. Hen. V. in the Dutchy-office, f. 9. 11. & 61. theſe ſeveral manors are noticed as belonging to this college. Tanner's Notitia Monaſtica, ed. Naſmith.

[3] Pat. 32 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 2.

[4] Appendix, p. 109.

[5] Pat. 32 Edw. pars 2. m. 2.—"Ratificatio cujuſdam compoſitionis facte inter decanos & canonicos eccleſiarum collegiatarum, viz. beate Marie juxta caſtrum & Novi Operis." Reg. Gynewell.

[6] Pat. 34 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 15.

[7] See before, p. 241; where ſeveral particulars of his will are given.—"Anno Domini MCCCLXI. nobilis dux Lancaſtrie Henricus tumulatus eſt in eccleſiâ collegiali & hoſpitali extra portam auſtralem Leyceſtrie, quam ipſe conſtruxerat, & quam prefecerat uno decano & XII canonicis prebendariis, & totidem vicariis, ac aliis miniſtris ſufficientèr requiſitis; & centum pauperibus debilibus, & decem fortibus mulieribus, que debilibus deſervirent, & procurarent in eſculentis & poculentis, & aliis neceſſariis, jugitèr die ac nocte; dictamque hoſpitalitatem pauperum, cum collegio canonicorum ſufficientèr donavit, ubi jacet ſepultus." H. Knyghton, ubi ſuprà, lib. IV.—"Erat in terrâ Anglie vir quidam, vitâ venerabilis, & gratiâ benedictus, nomine Henricus, dux Lancaſtrie primus. Hic, ex regali proſapiâ progenitus, fuit filius Henrici, qui fuit filius Edmundi, filii Henrici regis tertii, ſepultus eſt Leiceſtrie in monaſterio novo curioſo, & plurimùm ſumptuoſo, quod ipſemet integralitèr conſtruxit, immenſiſque poſſeſſionibus donavit, ac canonicis ſecularibus & pretioſis reliquiis adornavit, ubi hoſpitale benè diſpoſitum & diſtinctum pro infirmis & mulieribus, juxta monaſterium, edificavit; & ſic ad plenum omnia eis neceſſaria providit, ut nullum hoſpitale in Angliâ eò commodiùs reperiatur." Ex Chron. Tho. Otterburne, MS. in Bibl. Bodl.

[8] Pat. 37 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 8. & 41.

[9] Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 1022; from the original ſurvey in Offic. Primit. & Decim.

[10] Pat. 42 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 15.

[11] Pat. 47 Edw. III. p. 2. m. 16.

[12] Bridges, vol. II. pp. 90, 91.

[13] Fox's Acts and Monuments, vol. I. p. 497.

[14] See before, p. 264.

[15] Clauſ. 15 Ric. II. m. 32.

[16] Pat. 16 Ric. II. pars 1. m. 18.

[17] Pat. 22 Ric. II. pars 2. m. 3.

[18] The caſtle-houſe, now inhabited by Mr. Brown, and ſuppoſed to have been the duke's reſidence, is a good old building, with many ſpacious rooms, a noble cellar, and a large apartment called John of Gaunt's kitchen. The two great chambers in this houſe were originally one, as is evident from the regular arrangement and continuation of the wooden buttreſſes. The rooms were 7 yards broad, and, taken together, about 18 yards long. The rooms are on the North-weſt ſide of the manſion, by St. Mary's church, next the porter's lodge, beyond the gates which open to the caſtle-yard. On the North-eaſt ſide of this houſe, on the edge of the garden, which deſcends thence by a great ſlope to the mud, and looking up St. Mary's church lane, was an old ſtone ſummer-houſe, with the Lancaſter arms in mortar, lately demoliſhed, to mend the garden-view, and admit of paliſades.

[19] See before, p. 239.

[20] See farther particulars of this will, p. 240.

[21] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 186. See p. 332.

[22] Appendix, p. 110.

In 1405, William Allmanbury and John Northburg clerks, and Thomas de Quenby, had licence to give 3 meſſuages, 5 ſhops, three acres of land, and 16*s.* 10*d.* with the farther rent of a capon and three hens, and the appurtenances, in Leiceſter and its Suburbs, and in Wykingſton [1].

The manors of Fillebert's Court and Grey's Court, at Southrop, co. Glouceſter, were given to this church in 1406, by the lady Mary Harvey [2], for the endowment of a chantry for one prieſt; and, about the ſame time, another chantry for two prieſts, the patronage of which was given to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis [3], was founded in this church by Thomas de Langley biſhop of Durham, as executor of the will of John duke of Lancaſter, to whom he had been ſecretary. This eminent prelate, who was afterwards lord chancellor of England and a cardinal, by his will, Dec. 21, 1436, gave ſeveral books to the library of this church.

July 13, 1407, many ample privileges were granted by king Henry IV. to the dean and canons; ſome of them to continue ſo long only as the rebellion in Wales (where they had large eſtates) ſhould laſt, others in perpetuity [4].

Jan. 11, 1407-8, Thomas Quenby, Thomas Maundevile, and William Almanbury, clerks, were permitted to convey to the dean and canons two meſſuages and two tofts, with the appurtenances, in Leiceſter and its Suburbs, as part of the permiſſion which had been granted by king Richard II. to appropriate lands to the annual amount of £40. in augmentation of the revenues of this church, and the performance of divine ſervice therein [5].

In 1410, the dean and college had licence to appropriate the advowſon of Arnold, or Arnhale, in Nottinghamſhire [6]. The ſame year, they appear to have poſſeſſed certain tenements in the Strand, London [7].

On the 23d of July, 1412, king Henry IV. gave the manor of Draicote, in the pariſh of Burton ſupra Dunſmore, co. Warwick, to the dean and canons, and their ſucceſſors for ever, reſerving the rent of ten marks to be yearly paid by them out of the ſame to the chantry-prieſts in that church, to celebrate divine ſervice, for the good eſtate of him the ſaid king, and for the health of the ſouls of his father John duke of Lancaſter, and Conſtance his mother, whoſe bodies lay interred there [8].

Some privileges were confirmed to them by king Henry V, in 1411 [9]; and in 1416, they obtained the church of Bradford in Yorkſhire [10].

July 10, 1417, Thomas duke of Clarence, by his teſtament then dated, appointed that his executors ſhould purchaſe the patronage of ſome church of forty marks a year value, and procure the ſame to be appropriated to the dean, canons, and vicars of this college, to ſupport two fitting prieſts, to celebrate divine ſervice, for the ſouls of his father and mother, himſelf and Margaret his wife, his anceſtors, and all the faithful deceaſed [11].

In 1422, many conſiderable privileges were granted to this church by king Henry VI. [12]

May 6, 1424, Thomas Haliwell and John White, clerks, and John Hornyngwold, had liberty to convey to the dean and canons a meſſuage and 2 tofts in Leiceſter and its Suburbs, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter; 2 tofts, 39 acres and half a rood of arable land, one acre of meadow, and three roods of paſture, with the appurtenances, of the annual value of 13*s.* 8*d.* On the ſame day, the ſame perſons were allowed to give 2 meſſuages, 8 tofts, 24 acres of arable land, an annual rent of 3*s.* 2*d.* and another of a pound of pepper, the homages and ſervices of Robert Pecoke and Robert Smithe, paſture for 28 averia, and view of frankpledge, with the appurtenances, in Little Thorpe near Northburg, held under the king as of the honour of Cheſter; as well in and for the ſuſtentation of the dean and canons, as for the founding a chantry for two chaplains in their church, to pray perpetually for the king whilſt he lived, for his ſoul after death, and for the ſouls of John late duke of Lancaſter and his conſort Conſtance [13].

In this year, Archbiſhop Chicheley viſited the dioceſe of Lincoln jure metropolitico. He was at Lincoln, July 27; at Leiceſter, Aug. 1 (on which day the will of Philip de Repyngdon, biſhop of Lincoln, was proved before him in this collegiate church); and thence proceeded to Higham Ferrers [14].

At this viſitation, a compoſition was entered into between the archbiſhop and the members of this college; under which, the patronage of Higham Ferrers continued for ſome time alternate; the archbiſhop preſenting an incumbent in 1429 and 1444, and the dean and canons in 1437 and 1462 [15].

In 1439, Henry cardinal of England and biſhop of Wincheſter, Henry archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſir Walter Hungerford, feoffees of Henry V, late king of England, of certain lands in the dutchy of Lancaſter, granted and ſettled on "the collegiate church of our Lady of Leiceſtr', and their ſucceſſors, a rent-charge of c marks, to be had and perceyved yerely, to them and to their ſucceſſours, in free, pure, and perpetuell almeſſe for evermore, of and in the manors, lordſhips, tounes, wapentaches, and ſocage of Wyrkeſworth and Eſſeburn, with the hameletts of Irton, Mattelok, Underwode, Bradlowe, Bentley, Thorp, Mapulton, Ayton, Hunſyndon, Alforde, Penerwig, Hednaſton, Cladlowe, Carſyngton, Cromford, Snyterton, Wedneſley, Hopton, Middleton, and Over Bountſall, in the county of Derby, and parcel of the dutchy of Lancaſter, with their membres and appurtenances hole, at the termes of Seint Michell and Paſch by even portions [16]."

The preferments of this church ſeem in general to have been beſtowed on perſons of faſhion.

William Waleſby [17], who reſigned the deanry in 1450, was chaplain to king Henry VI; and was ſucceeded by Richard Andrew, who was ſecretary to that king. This uncommon pluraliſt, a native of Abberbury in Oxfordſhire, educated firſt at Wincheſter ſchool, removed to New College, Oxford, where he was admitted ſcholar in 1419, was afterwards ſome years a fellow, and in 1433 a benefactor to their library [18], became familiar with the founder, archbiſhop Chicheley; who made him chancellor of the dioceſe of Canterbury in 1437, appointed him in the ſame year the firſt warden of All Souls college [19]; and in 1438 collated him to the rectory of St. Vedaſt, London [20], which he reſigned in 1440, in which year he was prolocutor of the ſynod then held in London [21], and one of the perſons to whom the king granted the cuſtody of the alien priories belonging to the Crown [22]. Oct. 28, 1441, he was collated to the archdeaconry of Saliſbury [23]; in which cathedral he held the prebend of Farindon; in 1442, reſigned his wardenſhip of All Souls, the College then being ſufficiently finiſhed for the reception of its members. In 1443 he was appointed the king's ſecretary; and, reſigning his archdeaconry of Saliſbury in 1444, was employed in that capacity in an embaſſy of great importance, being one of the ambaſſadors ſent to France to treat of a peace concerning the two kingdoms, and of a marriage between king Henry V. and Margaret of Anjou [1]; both which being effected, he was appointed to attend the new queen in France, and to conduct her to England. In conſideration of theſe ſervices, the king, by writ of privy ſeal, dated May 15, 1445, and confirmed by parliament, granted to him an annuity of £100 [2]. He was afterwards employed in various treaties with Scotland both by Henry VI. and Edward IV. [3] Wood ſays he was keeper of the privy ſeal: but this is not certain; for, at the time he was ſecretary, Adam Moleyns enjoyed that office [4]. Dec. 1, 1450, he obtained, by the reſignation of Thomas Redman [5], the fifth prebend in our church of St. Mary in the Newark at Leiceſter, which on the 20th of the ſame month he exchanged for the firſt prebend and the deanry [6]; ard Redman was reſtored to the fifth prebend. Dean Andrew continued not long at Leiceſter; for in 1451 he was inſtalled canon of Windſor [7], and in the ſame year elected dean of York [8]; which, Wood ſays, was by a turbulent election, by two canons only and the prior of St. Oſwald, the reſt of the canons having truly choſen one John Bermyngham to that office. Much trouble there was about that election; and the three electors abovementioned lodged an appeal againſt the election of Bermyngham. The reaſon of this diſunion cannot be diſcovered; nor the grounds upon which the appeal was founded. Mr. Gutch [9] conjectures that it was in conſequence of a recommendation from the king; who, after this "vicious and unjuſt election," as it is called, granted Andrew a licence to accept of this deanry by a bull of proviſion iſſued from pope Nicholas V. which vacated Bermyngham's election. This was attributed to the bribery of Andrew; "& ſic factum fuit Romæ per pecunias prædicti Ricardi [10]; a charge probably founded on bare ſuſpicion. The canons refuſing to admit Andrew into the deanry, many of them were excommunicated, and the cathedral of York was for ſeveral weeks interdicted; but at length he was confirmed dean Jan. 21, 1451-2; though not perſonally admitted till June, 1454 [11]. Nov. 8, 1462, he poſſeſſed the archdeaconry of Bucks; but the date of that preferment is unknown [12]; and in 1465 was vicar-general to the archbiſhop of York [13]. He had been a great benefactor to All Souls College, not only by his advice and aſſiſtance at the time of its foundation, but by various gifts of copes and other eccleſiaſtical veſtments, of chalices, and of books; and at different times had expended 100 marks on the buildings of the college, particularly the kitchen: conſideration of which benefits, the college admitted him, quoad ſuffragia, a brother of their ſociety, April 20, 1469; and engaged, Oct. 26, 1471, to celebrate his obit annually, and to give 4*d.* on the day preceding to the bellman of the city, to invite by proclamation all good Chriſtians to offer a prayer for his ſoul [14]. Before his death, he reſigned all his eccleſiaſtical preferments; his archdeaconry of Bucks in in 1473; and his deanry of York June 2, 1477; and, by his laſt will, left various legacies; among others, to the poor of Abberbury, and to the cathedral of St. Aſaph [15]; to All Souls college two lavatories ſilver-gilt, and the ſum of £40. on condition that certain Pſalms and prayers for the ſafety of his ſoul ſhould be daily ſaid in the hall after dinner; which condition, on the receipt of the legacy, the College engaged to perform [16]. He died in 1477 (between Sept. 12, when his will was dated; and Nov. 5, when it was proved); and was buried in the South croſs aile of the cathedral at York, where he had founded a chantry. An inſcription was placed on his graveſtone, which is now periſhed [17].

---

[1] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 7 Hen. IV. N° 4.

[2] Pat. 7 Hen. IV. p. 1. m. 22. And ſee p. 330.—The endowment of this chantry is in the Regiſters of the Biſhop of Lincoln.

[3] Appendix, p. 65. In Charyte's Rentale, fol. ciii. a. to civ. a. is an enumeration of the charters "Collegii Novi Operis."

[4] Pat. 8 Hen. IV. n. 2.

[5] Pat. 9 Hen. IV. pars 1. m. 17.

[6] Pat. 11 Hen. IV. m. 1; Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 175; Thoroton, p. 237.

[7] Pat. 11 Hen. IV. m. 23. & Clauſ. 29 Hen. IV. m. 35. pro diverſis tenementis in le Strande, London.

[8] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 291. & Bar. vol. II. p. 197.

[9] De quibuſdam brevibus regis de libertatibus decano & canonicis nove eccleſie collegiate beate Marie Leyc. conceſſis," Irrot. Hill. Rec. 2 Hen. V. Rot. 14.

[10] Pat. 3 Hen. V. p. 2. m. 29. pro eccl. de Bradford; Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 1154.

[11] Royal and Noble Wills, p. 231.

[12] Cart. 1 Hen. VI. n. 11.

[13] Pat. 3 Hen. VI. pars 3. m. 23. 25.

[14] Reg. Chicheley, f. 374.

[15] Bridges, vol. II. p. 174; and ſee our Appendix, p. 111.

[16] Pat. 19 Hen. VI. p. 1. m. 17. recit. cartam Henrici epiſcopi Winton. & aliorum feffatorum.

[17] He had been collated to the prebend of Leighton Bozard, in the church of Lincoln, 1439; and to North Kelſey in 1456.

[18] Gutch's Hiſtory of the Colleges at Oxford, p. 197.

[19] Ibid. p. 265.

[20] Newcourt, Repertorium, vol. I. p. 565.

[21] Wilkins, Concilia, tom. III. p. 535.

[22] Rymer, Fœd. vol. V. pars I. p. 91.

[23] Le Neve's Faſti, p. 275.

In an act of reſumption, 1450, proviſion was made, that "it ſhould not affect an annuity of C marks yearly, granted to the dean and canons of the collegiate church of our Lady of Leyceſtr', and to their ſucceſſors, by Henry cardinal of England, Henry archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Walter lord Hungerford, by their letters patent, wherynne they were enfeoffed by the moſt noble prynce of perpetuell memorie our lord our fadre, and confermed by us under the ſeale of oure ſaid duchie, in pure and perpetuell almoiſe, in ſuſtentation of the grete importable charges of the ſeid church; the which C marcs was given by John ſometyme duke of Lancaſtre, in recompence of VII C marks given to theym in theire foundation, and by the ſeid John taken awey; whereof they alwey ſithen have be poſſeſſed [18]."

Another proviſo occurs, "that the ſeide act of reſumption ſtreeche not nor extende to the graunt made by us to the dean and chanons of the church collegiate of our Lady of Leyceſtr', and their ſucceſſors, of a tunne of wynne graunted to theym by us, to be taken and perceyved yerely, by the handes of oure chief boteller of England for the tyme being, or his depute, in our port of Kyngeſton uppon Hull, of ye wyne yat ſhall be taken and ſurveyed in the ſeide port for us; conſideryng that they hadde never no wyne graunted to theym by us, nor none of our progenitores, afore this tyme, to ſing with nor otherwiſe [19]."

William Witham, LL.D. prebendary of Banbury in the church of Lincoln, 1446; of Stoke, 1457; obtained the deanry of St. Mary in the Newark in 1450; was archdeacon of Stow, 1454; of Leiceſter, 1456; and dean of Wells in 1467. He died July 16, 1472; and was buried at Wells, with this epitaph, long ſince defaced:

Inſignis legum doctor, decus atque decanus,
  Eccleſie gemina, cujus hic una fuit;
Altera Leiſtrenſis, ſimul archidiaconus illuc,
  Willhelmus Witham nobilis hic recubat.
Dapſilis ac hilaris fuit hoſpitio, miſerorum
  Solamen cultu juſtitie requies.
Juſtorum ſp——, bonitatis tutor, et auctor
  Pacis, concilii fons, pugil eccleſie.
Hunc mors eripuit vitam tribuens morienti,
  Umbra mi——; at mors modo vita mori,
Anno milleno C quater LX duodeno,
  In ſetodeno clauditur hic tumulo.

In 1472-3, king Edward IV, "callyng to remembrance howe that Henr' late duke of Lancaſtr', of his grete devotion, founded at Leyceſtr', in the counte of Leyceſtr', a churche called the Churche newe Collegiat of oure Lady Seynt Marye of Leyceſter, of a deane, XII chanons, XIII vicars, III clerkes, VI choreſters, and a verger perpetuell, and uppon that fundation yave unto theym the deane and chanons of that churche, and to their ſucceſſours, certeyn londes, tenementes, and poſſeſſions, and ordeyned and eſtabliſſhed, amonge other, devyne ſervice perpetuell there to be obſerved and execute by the ſame deane, chanons, vicars, clerks, choreſters, and verger, and their ſucceſſours; and that the ſame dean and chanons, and their ſucceſſours, perpetuelly ſhuld fynde cx pore men and women, in a houſe their by the ſeid duke therfore ordeyned and bilded, and diſtribute every Friday wekely for evermore, to every pore man and woman of the ſaid nombre of a cx perſones there for the tyme beyng, viid̄, and certeyn maſſes dailly to be ſeid there, afore the ſame pore men and women, in a chapell within the ſame hous dedicate. And for that the ſame charges ſo ordeyned were over grete to be founden and born of the lyvelode yoven unto the dean and chanons of the ſeid church at tyme of the ſeid fundation, one Marye that was the wyf of William Hervy, to th'entent that the deane and chanons of the ſeid chirche the chargies to the ſame bilongyng ſhuld nowe the better ſupport, bere, and for ever contynue, of her grete devotion, by the licence of Henry the VI^te^ late in dede and not in right kyng of Englond, yave unto the dean and chanons of the ſeid chirche, one Ric' Elvethan beyng deane of the ſame, the manoir of Southrop called Filibertiſcourt, with th'appurtenauncez, in the counte of Glouceſtr', and the manoir of Southrop called Greyeſcourt, with th'appurtenauncez, in the ſame counte, and one meaſe, one toft, and II yerds and an half of lande, in Southrop in the ſame counte, and one yerde and an half of lande in the towne of Southrop biforeſeid, and in Leccheturvile in the ſame counte; to have and to hold to the ſeide deane and chanons, and to their ſucceſſours, in helpyng of the ſuſtentation and ſupporte of the ſeid charges for evermore: the which manoirs and other premiſſes, with their appurtenances, the deane and chanons of the ſeid churche, alwey after the ſeid yeſt, hiderto have occupied; and which manoirs and other premiſſes, with th'appurtenauncez, the kynges noble progenitour kyng Edward the thyrdde, by his lettres patentes ſealed with his grete ſeale, yave unto the ſeid William Hervy, and to the ſaid Marye then his wyf; to have and to hold to theym and to their heires males of their bodies comyng: unto the which Marye therof beyng ſeiſed, after the deth of the ſeid William Hervy, for that he died withoute iſſue male bitwixt theym hadde, and other dyvers conſiderations, Henr' the V^th^ late in deed and not in right kyng of Englond, by his lettres patentes ſealed with his grete ſele, releſſed all his right, title, and intereſſe, that he had in the ſame: and howe alſoe divine ſervicez and other charges aboveſeid, alwey contynuelly ſith the ſeid fundation hiderto have be duely obſerved and kept, to the verrey honour and worſhipp of God, and grete releyf and ſuſtenaunce of pore people: the Kyng oure ſoveraigne lord, of his mooſt bleſſed diſpoſition, mere motion, and certeyne ſcience, by th'advis and aſſent of the lords ſpirituelx and temporelx, and of the commens of this reame, in this his preſent parlement aſſembled, and by auctorite of the ſame, ordeyneth, enacteth, and eſtabliſſeth, that all and every actes and acte made in any of the parlementes holden ſith the firſt day of his reigne, or in this preſent parlement made or to be made, be not in any wiſe prejudiciall or hurtyng to the ſeid nowe deane and chanons, to their predeceſſors or ſucceſſours, or to the predeceſſours or ſucceſſours of any of theym, in any maner wiſe, as for, in, or of, the ſeid manoirs and other premiſſes; but that all and every actes and acte made ſith the ſeid firſt day, or in this preſent parlement made or to be made, the which be or may be prejudiciall or hurtyng to the ſeid deane and chanons, their predeceſſours or ſucceſſours, of, in, or for the ſame, or any parcell therof, be aneynſt theym, as to the ſeid manoirs and other premiſſes, and for every parcell therof, voide and of none effecte; and that the ſeid nowe deane and chanons, and their ſucceſſours, and every of theym, and the ſucceſſours of every of theym, may entre into the ſeid manoirs, landes, and tenemementes, and other premiſſes, and have, hold, and enjoy all the ſame manoirs and other premiſſes, and every parcell therof, accordyng to the tenure of the ſaid yeſte therof made to the deane and chanons of the ſeid churche by the ſeid Marye; the ſeid acte and actes, the kynges aſſumption of eſtate roiall, the kynges lettres patentes, or any other thyng by hym done, or any myſreherſell of the premiſſes in any wiſe notwithſtondyng, by what name or names the ſeid manoirs, meaſe, toft, and lande, with th'appurtenauncez, and the ſeid nowe deane and chanons, or any of their predeceſſours, or the predeceſſours of any of theym, be or were named or called in eny graunte or grauntes, lettres patentes, or other evydences therof as is biforeſeid made, or by what name or names the ſeid churche or college, in any lettres patentes of any of the kynges of Englond be named or called: ſaved to every of the kynges liege people, and to their heires, all ſuch right, title, and intereſſe, the which they or any of theym have or had in or to any of the premiſſes, the ſeid thrydde day of Marche or any tyme ſith, other then by lettres patentes of the kynge oure ſoverayne lord that nowe is[1]."

---

[1] Rymer, Fœd. vol. V. pp. 130. 133.

[2] Ibid. p. 142.

[3] Ibid. pars II. pp. 10. 12, 13. 15, 16. 25. 32. 34. 41. 47. 85, 86. 127. 131.

[4] Ibid. pars I. p. 133.

[5] "Primo die menſis Dec. 1450, admiſſus fuit magiſter Ricardus Andrewe, ſecretarius d'ni regis, ad canonicat. & quintam prebendam, quos nuper obtinuit d'n's Tho. Redman in novâ eccleſiâ collegiatâ B. M. Leyceſtr', Lincoln. dioc. ſede vacante, per reſignationem ejuſdem Thome, ultimi poſſeſſoris eorundem, vacant. ad preſentationem d'ne Margarete regine Anglie, vere ipſius prebende patrone." Reg. Stafford & Kemp, archiep. Cant. fol. 107. a.

[6] "20° die Dec. 1450, apud Croydon, admiſſus fuit mag. Ric. Andrewe ad decanat. eccleſie nove collegiate B. M. Leyc. Linc. diœc. vacant. & primam præbendam in eâdem, per reſignationem mag. Will. Waleſby ult. decani ac canonici & præbendarii ibid. vac. ad præſentationem domine Margarete regine Anglie, vere, &c.—Eodem die admiſſus fuit d'ns Thomas Redman ad canonicatum & quintam prebendam quos nuper obtinuit mag. Ric. Andrewe in eccl. novâ collegiatâ B. M. Leiceſtrie, per reſignationem mag. Ric. ult. poſſeſſoris eorundem, vacant. ad preſentationem d'ne Margarete regine Angliæ, ſede vacante, &c." Ibid. fol. 107. a. b.

[7] Le Neve, p. 379.

[8] Willis's Cathedrals, vol. II. p. 68.

[9] Hiſtory of Colleges, p. 266.

[10] Tho. Gaſcoigne, in Dictionar. Theolog. MS.

[11] Le Neve, p. 315; Drake's York, p. 464.

[12] Willis's Cathedrals, vol. I. p. 68. Le Neve, p. 68.

[13] Gutch, p. 266.

[14] Regiſter of that College, I. 24. a.

[15] Willis, from this circumſtance, ſuppoſes that he had ſome preferment at St. Aſaph.

[16] This obligation is dated Nov. 30, 1479; whence Wood ſuppoſed that to have been the year of his death.

[17] Gutch, p. 267.

[18] Rot. Parl. vol. V. pp. 186. A like proviſo occurs in 1451, and again in 1455 and 1461. Ibid. pp. 222. 305. 521.

[19] Ibid. p. 189. a.

Feb. 12, 1477-8, William Chauntre, dean of St. Mary's in the Newark, with the approbation of his chapter, covenanted with William lord Haſtings to pay him an annuity of £20. out of their manors, lands, &c. in Leiceſter, Higham Ferrers, and other places; and engaged, that, whenever he ſhould die, they would keep a ſpecial obit for him in their church on the day of his funeral, and every year celebrate an anniverſary for the ſoul of him and Catharine his wife; and that the provoſt of their church ſhould yearly on that day, at the end of maſs, pay to the dean 3*s.* 4*d.* and to every canon then preſent 2*s.* to every clerk 6*d.* to every choriſter 4*d.* and to the verger 4*d.* and to every poor man and woman of the hoſpital there 1*d.* out of the profits of the hoſpital of St. Leonard, by reaſon that the lord Haſtings had obtained that hoſpital from the king, and given it to their college for ever[2]. The patronage and revenues of St. John's Hoſpital[3] were alſo given to them at the ſame time by the lord Haſtings.

In 1480, the dean and canons were regularly incorporated, by the letters patent of king Edward IV.; and enabled to ſue and be ſued, to hold lands, &c.[4]

William Dudley, third ſon of John the eighth baron Dudley, of Univerſity college, Oxford, M. A. and prebendary of Stillington in the church of York, was preſented by king Edward IV. to a prebend of this church, Aug. 5, 1472; and on the 17th of that month was elected dean. He held alſo a canonry at Wells, and one at Wolverhampton; was dean of Windſor, 1473; archdeacon of Middleſex, 1475; and in 1476 obtained the biſhoprick of Durham. He was a great benefactor to Dudley church, and to other of the collegiate churches in which he was preferred; and, dying Nov. 29, 1483, was buried in the chapel of St. Nicholas in Weſtminſter abbey; where he has a handſome monument, with a rich canopy of three arches, and two others forming tabernacles with pedeſtals, to which deſcend animals, and over the whole ten pierced arches, and a cornice of angels holding ſcrolls. On the altar, whoſe ſide is adorned with four blank ſhields in ſtarred quatrefoils, was the figure inlaid in braſs, and this inſcription:

Hic jacet Gulielmus de Dudley, e familia baronum de Dudley, Dunelm. epiſcopus. Obiit anno Dom. 1483[5].

John Morgan (alias Yonge), a native of Wales, LL. D. of Oxford, and dean of Windſor 1484, obtained this deanry in December, 1485[6]; which he reſigned in 1496, on being promoted to the biſhoprick of St. David's. He died in 1504; and, by his laſt will, deſired to be buried in his cathedral at St. David's, and a chapel to be erected over his grave in the beſt manner that might be, according to the diſpoſition of his executors[7].

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 12 & 13 Edw. IV. vol. VI. p. 49.

[2] Clauſ. 17 Edw. IV, pars unica, dorſo.

[3] See before, p. 325, under the Hiſtory of that Hoſpital, a grant of admiſſion into their confraternity from the dean and chapter of this collegiate church, ſtyling themſelves the proprietarii, or cuſtodes, of the hoſpital.

[4] See our Appendix, p. 111.

[5] See Plate XXX; from Mr. Gough's "Sepulchral Monuments in Great Britain," vol. II. p. 285.

[6] See p. 336.

[7] Wood, Ath. Oxon. vol. I. p. 647.

The form of a preſentation to one of the prebends during the ſhort reign of king Edward V. is here given:

"Rex, &c. Sciatis nos, de gr̃â ñrâ sp̃ali, ex c̃tâ ſcienciâ & mero motu ñris, dediſſe & conceſſiſſe dilectis nobis A. B. & C. D. & aſſign' ſuis, advocacõem, collacõem, donacõem, & lib̃am diſpoſicionem, ac auctoritatem & poteſtatem conferendi ſeu donandi, cuicũq; idonee p̱ſone, quãcunq; p̃bendam in eccl̃iâ novâ collegiat' beate Marie Leyceſtr' p̱x' vacatã, cum p̱ mortem, reſignacõem, ceſſionem, p̱mutacõem, vel dimiſſionem, ſeu quocunq; alio modo h̃mod' p̃benda vacare contig̃it, p̱ unicâ & p̱x' vacacõe; & quòd benè liceat eiſdem A. B. & C. D. ac eoꝝ alt' & aſſignat' ſuis, auctoritate p̃ſent' conceſſionis ñrẽ h̃mod' p̃bend', cum p̱x' ut p̃dictum vacant', idonee p̱ſone ĩrate conferre ſeu dare, ac om̃ia & ſingula que circa p̃miſſa neceſſaria fuerint, ſeu quomodol̃t opportuerit ageret p̱implere, adeò plenè & integrè p̱ut nos fecerimus ſi conceſſio ñra facta non fuiſſet [1]."

In 1483-4, we find the following order:

"Richard III. &c. kynge of Englande and of Fraunce, and lorde of Yrelande, to all juſtices, ſtuerdes, ſhereffes, maiers, recevours, baillies, reves, conſtables, and all other oure officers, miniſtres, trueliegemen, and ſubjects, w^t^in our lordſhipps of Carmarden, Kedwelly, and Carnewaltham, in Wales, and to every of them hering or ſeing theſe our lres, greting. Forſemoche as it hath be ſhewed unto us, on y^e^ behalve of oure truſty and welbeloved the deane and chanons of our new collegiat churche of our bleſſed lady of Leiceſtre, that the revenues & duetees which w^t^in our ſaid lordſhips have of their lyveloods there hertofor growen unto them (by might & power of evill-diſpoſed p̱ſones having rule in theſe p̱tes) and alſo by others whome they have favored, maynetened, & ſupported, have from y^e^ ſaid deane and chanons ben kept and w^t^drawen, to thear gret hurt and damage, and alſo to our gret diſpleaſur: We therfore, not willinge them herafter ſo to be entreated, wronged, and appreched, have commanded the ſaid deane and chanons, y^t^ they ſhall name and appointe one of themſelff, or ſuche anoy^r^ able and pollitique p̱ſone as they ſhall thinke for y^e^ wele of their place good and profitable, to be their procto^r^ in that behalve, and him to ſende unto our ſaid lordſhips, there to take a view of their ſaid livelods, and the ſame, by their auctorities to him cõmitted, to graunt and ſet to ferme to ſuch wele-diſpoſed p̱ſones as wele and truely woll anſwere and paye ſuch dueties as ſhall growe unto them by reaſon of the ſame: And, if any p̱ſone or p̱ſones then, whatſoever he or they be, which hertofore hath or have had or receved, or herafter ſhall have or receive, anye parte of the revenues of their ſaid lyvelods and the duetes therof, which unto the ſaid deane and chanons be well owen and due, or herafter ſhall be owing or due, will not content and pay as right willeth; then the ſame proctour therof, in the name of the ſaid dean and chanons, do ſeaſe and take ſufficient diſtreſſes, wherby they may have ſuche good and ſure contentations as ſhall accorde w^t^ reaſon, the ſame diſtreſſes to be demeaned and detayned according to the lawes & cuſtomes ther deſirend; and praing you, that unto the ſaid proct^r^, or any other officers or s̃vnts which by the ſaid dean and chanons ſhall at any tyme herafter be ſent thider for the execucion of the p̃miſſes, ye will geve your aide and aſſiſtence, when ye by them on our behalve be required. So doe, not failling, &c. Yaven, &c. y^e^ xi day of Febr̃, a^o^ primo [2]."

May 16, 1511, William Wygeſton, junior, of Leiceſter, merchant of the Staple of Calais, Thomas Wygeſton clerk, Roger Wygeſton, and William Colte, obtained the king's letters patent for building a houſe, and founding a chantry here [3]; in purſuance of which, an indenture quadripartite was made, Jan. 20, 1512, between, 1, the ſaid William Wigſton; 2, John Yonge the dean, and the canons of the collegiate church; 3, Richard abbot of St. Mary de Pratis, with his convent; and, 4, Richard Gyllot mayor, and the burgeſſes of Leiceſter; in which it is ſtated, that the ſaid William Wygeſton, at his proper coſts, had newly built a manſion-place, and incloſed it, with an adjoining garden, within the precincts and walls of the college, for the manſion-place of two chantry-prieſts by him, with God's grace, to be founded within the ſame college, to the honour of Almighty God, our bleſſed Lady, St. Urſula, and St. Katharine; which manſion and garden were ſet between the manſion-place and gardens of Mr. Thomas Wygeſton, then prebendary of the thirteenth prebend, on the Eaſt part, and the Caſtle-way on the Weſt part, and extending from the church-yard of the ſaid college on the South to the garden of the Bedehouſe on the North part; and, for the foundation of the foreſaid chantry and chantry-prieſt, by licence of the dean and canons, at his proper coſts, had newly erected, to the honour of Almighty God, our bleſſed Lady, St. Urſula, and St. Katharine, a new chapel, incloſed with coſtly works wrought and made of latten, fixed and laid betwixt two pillars in the body of the church of the aforeſaid college on the North ſide, to the intent that the aforeſaid chantry-prieſts and their ſucceſſors ſhould there daily perpetually miniſter divine ſervice. The dean and canons agree to grant a leaſe of the chapel, houſe, and garden, for 99 years, to the abbot and mayor in truſt, for the two prieſts, with a covenant of renewal when 90 years ſhould be expired, and alſo to keep the ſame in conſtant repair; the ſaid William Wygeſton undertaking to aſſign to the dean and canons in fee ſimple the manor of Cheſter by the Water, and other lands in the county of Northampton, and two meſſuages and two yard-lands at Knighton, of the clear yearly value of £20. and upwards; in conſideration of which, the dean and canons were to pay to each of the two prieſts £7. a year; and perpetually, on the 26th of January, to obſerve a ſolemn obit, with Dirige and maſs on the morrow, with ſong and bells to be rung, for the good eſtate of the ſaid William Wigſton the younger during his life, and for his ſoul perpetually after his death, after like manner as they uſe to keep and do in other ſolemn obits: And the ſaid dean, canons, and other miniſters of the ſaid college, and their ſucceſſors for the time being, and every of them, being preſent at all the Dirige and maſs of the ſaid yearly obit, or the more part of them, ſhall, for the ſame obit ſo keeping and being preſent, have, perceive, and take perpetually every year, by the hands of the dean or his deputy, or by the hands of the provoſt of the ſame college for the time being, to be diſtributed in manner as hereafter followeth; to the dean, if he be preſent, 2*s.*; every canon 12*d.*; every vicar 6*d.*; every chief clerk 6*d.*; and each of the ſaid chantry-prieſts 6*d.*; and other chantry-prieſts of the ſaid college, every of them ſaying Dirige for the ſouls above rehearſed, 4*d.*; every of the choriſters 3*d.*; and the verge-bearer 3*d.* And, if any of the ſaid canons or other miniſters at the time of the ſaid obit be out of the town of Leiceſter at their recreations or other buſineſs, that they ſhall perceive and take every man after his degree and the rate above ſpecified, as they ſhould do if they were preſent; but, if in the town or precinct, and not preſent, to have nothing: And the dean and canons engage perpetually, at the time of Dirige and maſs of the ſaid obit, to find four wax tapers, ſuch as they find at other obits, to burn at the hearſe of the ſaid William; and to pay, on the day of the ſaid obit, the following ſums; to the mayor of the town of Leiceſter and his brethren, and miniſters of the ſaid town, reſorting to the ſaid college on the day of the ſaid obit, and offering there at the maſs, and ſaying at the door of the ſaid new latten chapel, before they depart out of the ſaid college, the Pſalm "De Profundis" for the ſoul of the ſaid William Wygeſton, 3*s.* in this form to be applied and paid; to the mayor for the time being 8*d.*; and to every ſix of his moſt antient brethren of the ſame town 4*d.*; and to the mayor's ſergeant 2*d.*; and to

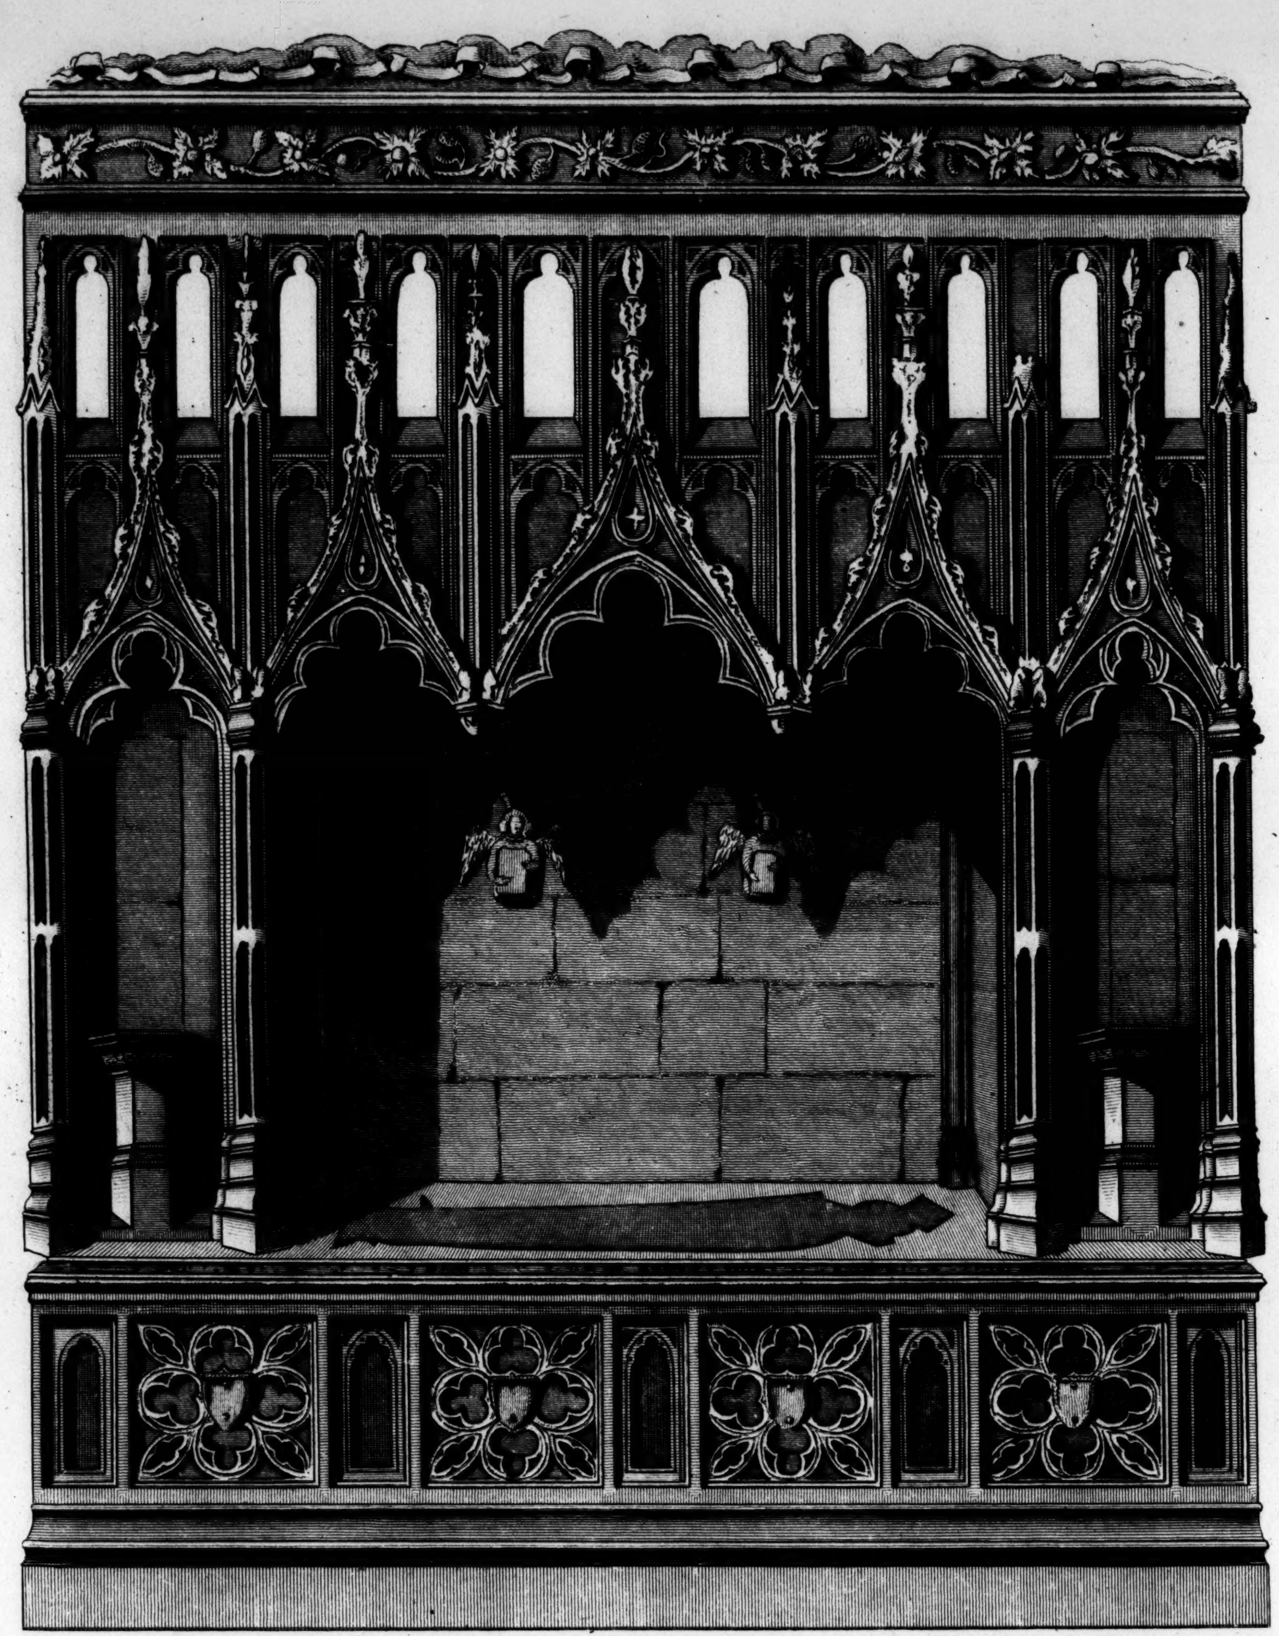
---

[1] Harl. MSS. 433. p. 21. b.

[2] Ibid. p. 152. a.

[3] "A^o^ 2 Hen. VIII. Will's Wygeſton de Leyceſtr', junior, mercator Stapule Cales, Thomas Wygeſton clericus, Rogerus Wygeſton, & Will's Colte, habent licentiam de cantariâ fundandâ ad altare beate Marie Virginis, Sanctarumque Urſule & Katarine virginum & martyrum, infra eccleſiam collegiatam beate Marie Novi Operis Leiceſtrie in com' Leiceſtr'. Teſte, &c. 16^o^ die Maii." See Appendix, p. 112.

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM



Monument of

BISHOP DVDLEY.

in

Westminster Abbey

1483.

Schnebbelie del.

Baſir

the mayor's clerk 2*d.*; and to the bellman, to make relation and notice throughout the town the day and time of the ſaid obit, as he doth at other ſpecial obits, 2*d.*; and the dean and canons to diſtribute among poor people, on the day of the ſaid obit, 2*s.* in money; and every year cauſe to be made 24 penny-tapers of wax, to be ſet upon the candleſtick of the ſaid new latten chapel, and to be renewed twice in a year, againſt the feaſtes of Eaſter and All Saints; and alſo to be lighted by the clerks of the ſaid college, or their deputies, at the eight principal feaſts ſolemnized in the ſaid college, and at all the feaſts of our Lady, and in the feaſt of St. Katharine and St. Urſula, in the times of high maſs and Magnificat. The dean and canons every year to pay to the clerks of the ſaid college, for their labour in lighting and doing out of the tapers, at the times of the ſaid feaſts, 16*d.*; and, for the ſcowering of the ſaid latten chapel, 4*d.*; and find for the two chantry-prieſts bread, wine, and wax-candle, for their maſs, when need requires. The ſaid William Wigſton endowed his chapel with theſe ornaments and anonements; two chalices of ſilver and gilt with their patents, &c.; one of them whole gift, containing 18 ounces with the patents; and the other parcel gilt, containing 11 ounces; two maſs-books imprinted; four corporaxes and corporax-caſes; five veſtments, with mobes and orfrayes ſorting to the veſtments; the firſt veſtment of blue velvet, ſet with ſilk and gold; and the ſecond white damaſk, with flowers of ſilk and gold; the third, red ſarſenet flowered with flowers of ſilk and gold; the fourth black worſted of St. Omer's, ſet with flowers of ſilk and gold; and the fifth of blue ſatin of Sipers, flowered and ſet with flowers of ſilk and gold; four hangings for the altar, for above the altar and beneath, with altar-cloths and frontels ſorting to the ſame; the firſt hanging blue velvet, ſet with flowers of ſilk and gold; the ſecond with white damaſk, ſet with flowers of ſilk and gold; and the third of black worſted of St. Omer's, with flowers of ſilk and gold; and the fourth of red and green ſatin Sipers flowered like damaſk, ſet with flowers of ſilk and gold; four pairs of curtains of ſarſenet; and four ſingle cheſt clothes; all which ornaments and anonements the dean and canons covenant to keep for the ſame new chapel, there to be occupied and worn, and no where elſe; and bind themſelves and their ſucceſſors to repair, maintain, renew, and to make and cauſe to be made, new like ornaments, or other of like value, at their proper coſts and charges, as often as need ſhall require, to be worn and occupied in the ſaid new latten chapel, ſo that the ſaid chapel be always endowed and anoned with like ornaments and anonements as is above expreſſed; or at the leaſt with three ſuits of veſtments, and three hangings for the altar as well above as beneath, with all other things thereto belonging, in like manner and form as is above expreſſed, over and beſides all other ornaments above rehearſed; to be occupied and uſed in the ſaid chapel, and by the ſaid chantry-prieſts for the ſame chantry, and their ſucceſſors, and not otherwiſe nor elſewhere, without lett, interruption, or taking away, by the ſaid dean and canons, or their ſucceſſors. For which agreement and grants William Wigſton paid to the ſaid dean and canons the day of the date of theſe preſents 100 marks ſterling; and farther it was agreed, that the dean and canons pay to the provoſt of the ſaid college 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum for his pains in the premiſſes, for which William Wigſton paid the ſaid dean and canons ten marks more[1].

In conſequence of this agreement, Thomas Wygeſton clerk, William Wygeſton the younger, merchant of the Staple of Calais, Roger Wygeſion, and William Fiſher clerk (the firſt maſter of the Hoſpital then newly founded by W. Wygeſton), obtained licence from the crown, Oct. 5, 1512, to beſtow on the new collegiate church of St. Mary at Leiceſter the manor of Cheſter by the Water, with ſeveral rents and tenements in Little Cheſter, Iryncheſter, Cheſter by the Water, and Artleborow, co. North'ton[2]; and at Knighton, co. Leic'[3].

John Yong, LL. D. and maſter of the Rolls, was elected dean of this church, Jan. 3, 1512-13[4]; obtained the prebend of Abſthorpe, in the cathedral of York, April 6, 1514; was elected dean there, May 7, and obtained the prebend of Bugthorp, Sept. 18, that year; in 1515 reſigned his deanry at Leiceſter, for a penſion of £20. a year payable out of it; died April 15, 1516; and was buried in the Rolls chapel; where, againſt the North wall, is his effigies in a ſcarlet robe and four-cornered cap, with this epitaph:

"Dominus firmamentum meum.
Jo. Yong, Legum Doctori, Sacrorum
Scriniorum, & hujus Domûs
Cuſtodi; Decano olim Ebor. vitâ defuncto xxv Aprilis,
ſui fideles Executores
hoc poſuerunt MCXVI."

His ſucceſſor in the deanry at Leiceſter was William Knight[5]; who was a native of London, bred in Wincheſter-ſchool, and admitted fellow of New College, Oxford, 1493; where having followed the ſtudy of the civil law, he was appointed one of the ſecretaries to king Henry VII; obtained the chapelry of Kibworth Harcourt in 1502; and was afterwards employed by king Henry VIII. on an embaſſy to the emperor Maximilian; who, for his eminent virtues, and as a reward for many ſervices to the Engliſh king, in expoſing his life to danger, wearing it out in continual labours for him, and ready for the future to do the like if occaſion ſhould require, granted him the following arms: "Party per feſs, Or and Gules, a demi-roſe and a demi-ſun conjoined, counterchanged of the field; on the top of the demi-roſe two eagles' heads iſſuing thence Sable, and from each ſide an eagle's wing diſplayed of the third: over the whole a cardinal's cap;" which grant was alſo confirmed to him by letters patent dated July 20, 1514[6]. In the next year he obtained this deanry at Leiceſter, by ſtipulating to pay an annuity of £20. to his predeceſſor Dr. Yong. He relinquiſhed this preferment in 1522; in which year he was admitted archdeacon of Cheſter Nov. 11; and archdeacon of Huntingdon, Sept. 17, 1523. In 1527, being then ſecretary to the king, he was ſent to the pope on the buſineſs of the divorce; and in December, 1529, being then a prebendary of St. Stephen's at Weſtminſter, and newly returned from Rome, was made archdeacon of Richmond. In 1531, he was incorporated LL. D. at Oxford, as he had ſtood in a foreign univerſity. He ſurrendered his archdeaconry of Cheſter, May 20, 1541, on its being diſſevered from the church of Lichfield, that the king might the better annex it to his new intended ſee at Cheſter; and in nine days after was rewarded the biſhoprick of Bath and Wells. In the latter of theſe cities a magnificent colonade in the centre of the market-place, with a beautiful arched roof, bore the next year this teſtimony to his liberality: "Ad honorem Dei Omnipotentis, & commodum pauperum mercatum Welliæ frequentantium, impenſis Gulielmi Knight epiſcopi, & Richardi Wooleman, hujus eccleſiæ cathedralis olim decani, hic locus erectus eſt. Laus Deo, pax vivis, requies defunctis. Amen. A. D. 1542[7]." He died Sept. 29, 1547; and, by his laſt will, dated Aug. 12, that year, bequeathed £100.[8] for conveying his body from London to Wells for interment in that cathedral, and for a tomb to be laid or ſet over it; £40. to

---

[1] Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 82.

[2] A fine of this manor had been levied by William Wyggeſton the younger, demandant, and William Coope and Joan his wife deforcients, 2 Hen. VIII. Bridges, vol. II. p. 182.

[3] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 5 Oct. 4 Hen. VIII.

[4] "Magiſter Johannes Yong, LL. D. preſentatus per regem ad decanatum eccleſie collegiate Beate Marie Novi Operis, Leyc', per mortem magiſtri Jacobi Whiſton, Jan. 3, 1512." Reg. Smith.

[5] "Magiſter Will' Knyght, utriuſque juris doctor, preſentatus per regem ad decanatum eccleſie nove collegii Beate Marie, Leyc', per reſignationem magiſtri Joh' Yong, LL. D. 4 Dec. 1515; ſolvend' penſ' ann' 20 lib' reſignanti." Reg. Atwater.

[6] See Wood's Hiſtory of the Univerſity of Oxford, by Gutch, vol. III. pp. 192. 195. The arms ſtill remain in the ſecond South window of the refectory at New College. See Plate XXVIII. fig. 27.

[7] Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. I. p. 675, ſays he was buried in the nave of that cathedral; but Godwin, p. 387, ſays (from MS. Trin. p. 91) "Obiit apud Wiveleſcomb, ibique ſepultus jacet."

[8] Godwin de Præſulibus, p. 387.

New College, and £20. to Wykeham's College at Wincheſter.

Robert Boune, the next and laſt dean of this church, was elected in 1522, and about the ſame time was preſented to the rich rectory of Hanſlope in Bucks, which in that year had been appropriated to the dean and canons of St. Mary in the Newark[1] (and of which church he was the laſt rector, as the impropriation was given, at the diſſolution of this College, to the Corporation of Lincoln[2]).

With thirty others, Dean Boune, Aug. 11, 1534, ſubſcribed to the king's ſupremacy; and at that period the yearly payments of this church are thus ſtated[3]:

	£.	s.	d.
To the Dean, Mr. Robert Bone	40	0	0
To the 13 prebendaries, each 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*	173	6	8
To 13 vicars, each £6. —	78	0	0
To 7 choriſters, each 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*	44	13	4
To the provoſt — —	10	0	0
To the treaſurer — —	1	0	0
Cantori collegii — —	2	0	0
	349	0	0

Mr. Richard Layton, one of the viſitors of religious houſes in 1539, reported to the Lord Cromwell, "that the College of the Newark, with an Hoſpital, was well kept, and honeſt men therein; £300. in their treaſury beforehand;" but "that the biſhop of Lincoln (Longland) had commanded the preachers of this college, that they ſhould no more preach but in their own benefices[4]." Nov. 12, 1543, dean Boune preſented Thomas Rigmayden, clerk, one of the prebends of his church, to the vicarage of Irchеſter, co. Northampton[5]; and Nov. 5, 1547, this dean was ſummoned to Convocation; almoſt immediately after which the college was diſſolved[6]. His name occurs in the archiepiſcopal regiſters at York[7], Sept. 8, 1553; and he died rector of Hanſlope in 1554.

The Founder of this Hoſpital, beſides the poor, deſigned a maſter and certain chaplains to have the care and management of them; but, when they were put under the government of the dean and chapter, one of the canons was entruſted therewith; who, in 1539, was Richard Fowler, treaſurer of the church, who paid them yearly 176*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.* for their daily food and proviſion in ſickneſs; whereof paid every Friday 7*d.* to each of the poor, and 10*d.* to each of the nurſes every week. He alſo paid £10. yearly for buying 50 taberdes, or gowns; ſo that every two years each poor man might have a new garment. Beſides which, there was given among them yearly, on every Good Friday, 20*s.*; they had alſo 12*l.* 10*s.* to make porridge, and £6. for fuel, a year. All this was of the gift of the founder; but their fivepenny money was of the gift of the lady Mary Harvey, which, with 6*d.* per annum to each of the poor by another charity, came to 4*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*—This appears by the following certificate from John biſhop of Lincoln; Richard biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield; ſir Richard Manners, knight; ſir Richard Cattiſbie, knight; William Lee, eſq.; John Beamonte, eſq.; William Ryggs and Clement Throckmorton, gentlemen; commiſſioners of the king for ſurvey of chauntries, hoſpitals, colleges, free chapels, fraternities, brotherhoods, gilds, and ſtipendiary prieſts, within the county of Leiceſter, by virtue of the king's majeſty's commiſſion, 31° regni.

"Collegium Novi Operis Leiceſtr', infra villam Leiceſtr', valet in redd' & firm' totius manerii de Draycote, in com' Warw', XIIII lī. XII s̄. VIII đ. & in redd' & firm' diverſ' manerior', rectoriar', terr', & ten', in diverſis aliis comitatibus, in toto per annum CCCCLVI lī. IIII s̄. V đ. ob̄. q̄.

Repriſ' in

Redd' reſolut' diverſis exeunt' de ōibus terr' & poſſeſſion' predict', per annum VI lī. XV s̄, V đ. ob̄.

Stipend' decani ejuſdem collegii, per ann' XL lī.

Stipend' XII canonicorum infra collegium prædict' annuatim reſiden', cuilibet eorum ad XIII lī. VI s̄. VIII đ. per annum — CLX lī.

Stipend' XIII vicar' ejuſdem collegii, cuilibet eor' ad IIII lī. XIII s̄. IIII đ. in toto per annum LX lī. XIII s̄. IIII đ.

Stipend' Hugonis Aſton, magiſtri organor' & choriſt' ib', per annum — X lī.

Stipend' IIII clericor' cantar' chori & unius vergiferi ac VI choriſt' ibid', cuilibet eor' ad LIII s̄. IIII đ. in toto, per annum XXIX lī. VI s̄. VIII đ.

Stipend' unius alii choriſt' ibidem, ex fundatione Willī Derby nuper canonici ibidem XL s̄.

Denarii ſolut' Ricardo Fowler, clerico, theſaur' eccleſ' collegiat' præd', pro vad' centum pauperum hōium in domo orator' dicti collegii infra precinctum ejuſdem, ac pro vad' decem mulier' attendend' ſuper eos pro cibis ſuis quotidiè parandis & tempore ægritud' illor' pauper', viz. cuilibet hōī predict' VII đ. per ſeptiman', ſolut' quâlibet ſeptiman' diebus Veneris, per annum CLXXVI s̄. III đ.

Denar' ſolut' quolibet anno pro panno laneo empt' pro 50 taberdes vel togis pro coöperiend' ex fundatione fundator', ut in ſpatio duor' annor' quilibet pauper habeat novum veſtimentum, per annum — — — X lī.

Eleemoſinis dat' pauperibus præd' in die Paraſeph', ex ordinatione fundator', inter eos annuatim dividend' per annum — XX s̄.

Denar' ſolut' dictis pauperibus orantibus pro animâ Mariæ Harvy, voc' Five-penny money, per ipſam fundat', viz. cuilibet homini pauperi V đ. per ann', & in al' eleemoſinâ eiſdem & pauperibus, cuilibet eorum ex aliâ ordinatione ad VI đ. per annum — — IIII lī. XI s̄. VIII đ.

Conſimilibus denar' ſolut' eiſdem pauperibus pro oleribus, voc' La Porage[8], pro ſuſtentatione eorundem pauperum quotidiè ex fundat', per annum — — XII s̄. X đ.

Denar' ſolut' pro focal' pro prædict' pauperibus inter hos annuatim expendend', per annum VI lī.

Feod' diverſ' officiar' & ſervien' præd' colleg' pertinen', eis conceſſ' tam per literas paten' quàm ad voluntat', prout, &c. per annum XLI lī. XVI s̄. VIII đ.

Synodal' & procurationibus annuatim ſolut' diverſ' archidiac' & al' officiar' ibidem, per annum — — XLII lī. XVI đ.

Denar' ſolut' annuatim pro cuſtubus & expenſ' obit' anniverſariorum regum Angliæ, diverſ' fundator', ac al' benefactor, in denariis diſtribut' decano, prebendar', & omnibus miniſtris chori dicti collegii, ac pauperibus, quolibet anno, per ſtatuta & ordinacōnes, ſcil' per annum LXVI lī. XIII s̄. VIII đ.

---

[1] "A. 14 Hen. VIII. rex xxvii die Junii conceſſit decano & canonicis collegii B. Marie Leyc', & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, advocaſionem eccleſie parochialis de Hanſlope, com. Durh.; habend' ſibi & ſucceſſoribus." From the Original in the Rolls Chapel.

[2] Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 499.

[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lxxxii.

[4] See the Introductory Volume, p. cxlii.—They appear to have in ſome degree purchaſed this good report; for, we find that, in 1548, William Cannam, clerk, was preſented to the vicarage of Raundes, by George Wooderoffe, gent. and John Holland, "patronis pro hâc vice, per conceſſ. decani & capituli Novi Operis, modò diſſolut.;" and in 1550 the rectory of Cranſley in Northamptonſhire was in the preſentation of Francis Cave, Roger Gyllot, &c. "conceſſ. per Collegium Novi Operis Leyc." Bridges, vol. II. p. 91.

[5] Ibid. vol. II. p. 181.

[6] "The king," in the quaint words of Dr. Fuller, "made three meals (or one meal of three courſes) on Abbey lands, beſides what Cardinal Wolſey (the king's taſter herein) had eat beforehand, when aſſuming ſmaller houſes to endow his two colleges.——The religious houſes under £200. a year were granted to him by the parliament in 1535; the greater monaſteries in 1538; and the colleges, chantries, and free chapels, in 1545.—The firſt of theſe were moſt in number; the ſecond, richeſt in revenue; the third in this reſpect better than the former, becauſe, they being ſpent and conſumed, theſe alone were left to ſupply his occaſions. But the enſuing death of king Henry VIII, for a time, preſerved the life of theſe houſes, which were totally demoliſhed by act of parliament in the firſt year of king Edward VI." Church-Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 350.

[7] Rob. Boune, 1553, decanus eccleſie collegiate Beate Marie Novi Operis, Leic', 8 Sept. Reg. Holgate, regiſt. Ebor.

[8] Hence the uſe of the great porridge-pot; ſee p. 343.

Repriſ' in

Denar' ſolut' domino epiſcopo Lincoln' & officiar' ſuis, pro perpetuâ decimâ domino regi de collegio prædict' debit', ultra ſolut' ſubſ' cùm acciderit, per annum LIXlī. xs̄. IXđ.

Stipend' diverſ' cantariſtarum annuatim ſolut' in pecuniis numerat' per decanum & capitulum collegii præd', pro diverſis cantariis infra eccleſiam collegiat' prædict' fundat', ut ſequitur; viz. Willielmo Wilſon, cantariſtæ cantariæ Mariæ Harvey, CVIs̄. VIIIđ.; Ricardo Waterworth, cantariſtæ cantariæ Willielmi Bedell, IIIIlī. VIs̄. VIIIđ.; Thomæ Marſhall & Willielmo Blakewell, cantariſtis cantariæ Johannis nuper ducis Lanc', inter eos equalitèr dividend', VIlī. XIIIs̄. IIIIđ.; Humfr̄o Ellyot & Johanni Hardye, cantariſtis cantariæ Will' Wigſton, XIIIlī.; Thomæ Hornecourt, celebrant' infra nuper hoſpitale Sancti Johannis Baptiſt' infra villam Leic' præd', LXs̄.; in toto per annum – XXXIIIlī. VIs̄. VIIIđ.

Altone omnium terrar' & ten' præd' vocat' Obitt lands jacent' infra villam Leic' & precinct' ejuſdem, eò quòd annualitèr dividentur inter decanum & præbendar' ac vicar' dicti collegii ex ordinacōne compoſicōne per certum rotulum, voc' Porcōn' roll, cuilibet' partem, ſcil' ultra repriſ' allocat', viz. decano duas partes, & cuilibet canonic' unam partem, & cuilibet vicar' tertiam partem pertinen' decan' & canonic', per annum XXIIIIlī. XVIIs̄. Iđ. ob̄.

Solut' for' an^{le} ut in reparacōnes tenementor' & vacat' ejuſdem, tam infra præd' villam Leic' & precinct' ejuſdem, quàm in diverſ' al' villar' in diverſ' com' attingen', cōibus annis, per eſtimat', ſicut apparet in annis præceden' per diverſ' comp' dicti collegii, ad minus, ultra LXXVIIIlī. XVIIs̄. VIIđ. ob̄. pro ſubſ' domino regi cùm acciderit, per annum — LXVIlī. XIIIs̄. IIIIđ.

CCCCXLIIlī. XIIIs̄. IIIIđ.

Et remanet claré per annum XIIIIlī. XXIIIđ. ob̄. q^{a}.

Cantaria dominæ Mariæ Harvey, fundat' infra predict' eccleſiam Novi Operis, Leiceſtr', val' in quâdam pencōne annuatim recipiend' per Will' Wilſon, cantariſtam cantariæ præd', per manus decani & capituli præd' collegii, in pecuniis numeratis, ad IIII anni terminos, per annum — CVIs̄. VIIIđ.

Cantaria, vocat' Elvett's Chauntry, infra dictam eccleſiam Novi Operis, Leyc', valet in quâdam annuitate ſive annuali penſione pro cantariſtâ cantariæ prædictæ recipiend' per manus decani & capituli Collegii Novi Operis, Leic', p̃d' in pecuniâ numeratâ, ad quatuor anni terminos, æqualitèr per ann' CVIs̄. VIIIđ.

Cantaria Will' Wigſton, fundat' infra præd' eccleſiam Novi Operis, val' in quâdam annuitate ſive annuali pencōne annuatim recipiend' per Johannem Hardy & Humfr̄um Gyllot, cantariſtas ibidem, per manus decani & capituli Novi Operis, Leic', equalitèr, per annum, — — XIIIIlī.

Cantaria vocat' Beddel's chantrie, infra præd' eccleſiam Novi Operis fundat', val' in quâdam annuali pencōne annuatim recipiend' per Ricardum Waterworth, cantariſtam ibidem, de prædicto decano & cap' collegii prædict', ad quatuor anni terminos equalitèr, per annum — IIIIlī. VIs̄. VIIIđ.

Cantaria, vocat' John à Gaunt's chantry, fundat' pro duobus capellan' infra præd' eccleſiam Novi Operis, Leic', val' in quâdam annuali pencōne annuatim recipiend' per Will' Blakwell & Thomam Marſhall, cantariſtas cantariæ ejuſdem, viz. per manus prædict' decani & capituli VIlī. XIIIs̄. IIIIđ. ac per dominum regem extra cur' augmentat' revenc' coronæ ſuæ ut in jure nuper monaſterii de Vaudyâ in com' Lincoln', VIlī. XIIIs̄. IIIIđ. in toto per annum XIIIlī. VIs̄. IIIIđ.

By a ſurvey at the ſame time taken of all the houſes belonging to the ſaid college of Leiceſter, ſituate and being within the walls and precincts of the ſame, it appears that the then members of it were the dean Robert Boune, ſir Richard Paget, ſir Nicholas Bradſhaw, ſir Anthony Skevington, ſir William Weſton, ſir Richard Bawdwyn, ſir Richard Fowler, ſir Chriſtopher Marſhall, ſir John Vincent, ſir John Leigh, ſir Gabriel Raynes, ſir Edward Burton, ſir William Gyllot, canons; whereof the dean's ſalary or ſtipend was £40. and his houſe, garden, and orchard, valued at 40*s.* a year. The ſtipend of the thirteen vicars was to each 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* &c.

There were five chantries founded in the church:

1. John of Gaunt's, of two chaplains, William Blackwell and Thomas Marſhall; their joint ſalary was 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and their houſe 10*s.* a year.
2. The lady Mary Harvey's, of one prieſt, William Wilſon, who had 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*
3. Elvett's, of one prieſt, who had 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; theſe two had one houſe, 10*s.* a year.
4. William Wigſton's, of two prieſts, John Hardy and Humfry Gyllot, alias Ellyott, who had between them £14. and a houſe, 10*s.* a year.
5. Beddel's chantry, of one prieſt, Richard Waterworth, of 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* a year.

The lodging between the gates was valued at 20*s.* and the lodging between the church and the great ſteeple at 5*s.* a year.

This collegiate church had ſeveral ſums to receive from the abbot and convent of St. Mary's, and ſeveral other ſums to pay to them; the particulars of which are ſpecified in the Appendix, from Charyte's Rentale [1].

In 1547, a conſiderable part of their poſſeſſions was granted by king Edward VI. to John Beaumont and William Gyes [2].

In 1553, an account being taken of the penſions payable to the members of the diſſolved religious houſes, the following return was made:

Leiceſter; Collegium Novi Operis, ſeu Newark.

John Leyghe,	Prebendarii; to each £10.
William Gillot,
John Vincent,
Richard Fowler,
Chriſtopher Marſhall,
William Weſton,
William Pachett,
Nicholas Bradſhaw,
Thomas Rigmayden [3],	Prebendarii minores; to each 2*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*
Richard Berton,
John Parke,
George Charlett,
John Borough,
William Hethecote [4],	Vicarii; to each £6.
Thomas Berwyke,
Richard Pedder,
Robert Wangle,
Thomas Mylver,
Thomas Weſtons,
John Midleton,
William Borough,
William Blackwall,	Vicarii cantariſtæ; to each £6.
Thomas Harrryſon,
Thomas Harcourt,	cantores; to each £5.
William Mansfelde,
William Kyttes,	Miniſtri in eodem collegio; to each 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*
Thomas Arden [5],
Robert Weſton [6],
John Palfreyman,

The reaſon why there were ſo many members of this collegiate church and ſo few of the abbey, whoſe penſions remained in charge, was becauſe the abbey had been diſſolved in 1539; whereas this college continued till 1547. The dean was provided for by the rectory of Hanſlope; and it may be preſumed that ſuch of the prebendaries as are not mentioned in this report were dead, or diſpoſed of in ſome preferment.

---

[1] Appendix, p. 69.

[2] 1 Pars Original. 2 Edw. VI. Rot. 106.

[3] Vicar of Ircheſter, 1543—1566.

[4] Afterwards rector of Ayleſtone; where ſee a portrait of him from the braſs on his tomb.

[5] One ſo named was inſtalled prebendary of Worceſter in the third ſtall in 1558, afterwards deprived as a bigoted Papiſt. Strype, Annals, vol. I. pp. 243. 356. Browne Willis's Survey, vol. I. p. 671.

[6] Robert Weſton, LL.D. dean of Wells in 1570, ſubſcribes to articles, Feb. 5, 1562, as proctor in convent for Lichfield and Coventry. Strype, Ann. vol. I. p. 290; his character, 292. See Wood's Hiſtory and Antiquities of Oxford, vol. II. p. 40.—Qu. whether the ſame perſon?

DEANS OF ST. MARY IN THE NEWARK.

1. Richard de Hampſlap de Toneworth [1], preſbyter, was admitted the firſt dean, 9 cal. Apr. 1355.

2. John Porter [2], admitted 7 id. Jan. 1361.

3. Thomas Brightwell [3], S. T. D. 1382.

4. Richard Elveden, 1408.

5. William Waleſby, one of the king's chaplains, occurs dean in 1422 [4]; and in 1437 was rector of Church Langton. He reſigned in 1450.

6. Richard Andrewe [5], admitted December 20, 1450.

7. William Witham died dean in 1472 [6].

8. William Dudley, 1472—1476 [7].

9. William Chauntre [8], one of the king's chaplains, Oct. 20, 1476; died 1485.

10. John Morgan [9], LL.D. Dec. 1485; promoted to the ſee of St. David's in 1496. He died in 1504.

11. Robert Middleton [10], LL. D. a canon of this church, Dec. 5, 1496. He died Jan. 14, 1499.

12. William Stokedale [11], S. T. P. 1499.

13. James Whiſton [12], LL. D. rector of Charlebury, in Oxfordſhire, 1495; and ſucceſſively prebendary of Welton, Brinkhall, Gretton, and Banbury, all in the church of Lincoln, was elected Nov. 23, 1500. He died in 1512.

14. John Young, LL.D. elected Jan. 3, 1512-13; reſigned in 1515 for a penſion of £20. a year payable out of this deanry; and died April 25, 1516 [13].

15. William Knight, LL. D. of New college, Oxford, Dec. 4, 1515. He reſigned in 1522; in 1541 became biſhop of Bath and Wells; and died in 1547 [14].

16. Robert Boune, the laſt dean, admitted in 1522, was dean at the diſſolution; and died rector of Hanſlope in 1554.

PREBENDARIES.

Oct. 2, 1366. Robert de Newton, rector of Wardley in Rutland, held the fifth prebend (cujus verus valor in pecuniâ numeratâ conſiſtit in xx marc' [15].)

1382, 22 Aug. Walter Hanloo exchanged the prebend of Taunton, in the church of Wells, for the ninth prebend in this church [16].

1424, 3 Aug. Henry Roſe was preſented to the ſeventh prebend, and admitted by the archbiſhop in perſon at Laund priory [17].

27 Oct. William Aſlakby exchanged the twelfth prebend with William Browne, dean of the collegiate church of Lancheſter, dioc. Durham [18].

1425, June 16. William Holwell was preſented to the fifth prebend, vice Walter Denton, deceaſed [19].

1450. William Williams reſigned the fifth prebend.

1450, Dec. 1. Richard Andrewe, ſecretarius regis, was admitted to the fifth prebend, on the reſignation of Thomas Redman [20].

Dec. 20, Richard Andrewe obtained the firſt prebend, and was at the ſame time elected dean [21].

1450, 20 Dec. Thomas Redman again ſucceeded to the fifth prebend, on the reſignation of Andrewe [21].

1472, 5 Aug. William Dudley was preſented to the third prebend [22].

1484, June. Laurence Squier was preſented to a prebend, vice James Letes deceaſed [23].

1484, Auguſt. William Duffeld was preſented to the fourth prebend, vice John Billeſdon deceaſed [24].

1484, William Raulyns reſigned the fourth prebend.

William Villers was preſented to the third prebend, vice William Raulyns, Dec. 1484 [25].

1484-5, Feb. Robert Morne was preſented to the fourth prebend, on the death of John Billeſdon [26].

1492-3. Hugh Lovered reſigned the twelfth prebend, by exchange, to William Ibbeſton [27].

1495. Thomas Ridley reſigned the fifth prebend.

1495, July 4. Edward Shuldham, LL. D. was preſented to the fifth prebend, vice Ridley [28].

1513, Thomas Wigſton [29] held the 13th prebend.

1534. ——— Wullock (ſee p. 344.)

---

[1] Ricardus de Hampſlap de Toneworth, preſbyter, primus decanus, preſentatus per Henricum ducem Lancaſtrie, 9 kal. Apr. 1355; & 13 prebendarii ſimilitèr admiſſi eodem die, quorum nomina regiſtrantur in Reg. Gynewell, ep. Linc'.

[2] Magiſter Joh' Porter, preſb', admiſſus ſecundus decanus eccleſie nove collegiate Beate Marie, Leyc', ad preſentationem Mathei de Aſheton & Johannis de Stafford nobilis domini, domine Matilde de Lancaſtr' filie & heredis domini Henrici, nuper ducis Lancaſtrie, defuncti, attornat', 7 id. Jan. 1361. Reg. Gynewell.

[3] See before, p. 303.

[4] See Appendix, p. 111; and vol. II. under Langton.

[5] See before, p. 331.

[6] See p. 332.

[7] Will' Dudley, elect' in decan' collegiat' eccleſie beate Marie, Leyc', per mortem magiſtri Will' Witham, admiſſus 17 Aug. 1472. Reg. Rotheram. He was afterward biſhop of Durham, 1476. See p. 333.

[8] Magiſter Will' Chauntre, per preſidentem & capitulum eccleſie nove collegiate Beate Marie, Leyceſtrie, in decanum ejuſdem eccleſie, per reſignationem magiſtri Will' Dudley, electus, & per regem preſentatus; admiſſus 20 Oct. 1476. Reg. Rotheram. W. Chauntre was appointed archdeacon of Derby in 1473. Browne Willis's Survey, vol. I. p. 421.

[9] Magiſter Joh' Morgan ad decanatum eccleſie collegiate Novi Operis, Leyc', per mortem magiſtri Willielmi Chauntre, ad preſentationem regis, Dec. 1485. Reg. Ruſſel. See p. 333; and Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. I. p. 647.

[10] Magiſter Robertus Middleton, LL. D. canonicus eccleſie collegiate Novi Operis, Leyc', ac unus de duobus canonicis ejuſdem collegii, in decanum ipſius collegii, per munus conſecrationis domini Johannis Morgan, Menevenſis epiſcopi, per capitulum ibidem domino regi Hen' VIII°, ipſius collegii racione ducatûs Lancaſtrie fundatore & patrono, electus & nominatus, per eundem dominum regem preſentatus ad dictum decanatum, 5 Dec. 1496, admiſſus. Reg. Smith.—He was prebendary of Norton Epiſcopi in the cathedral church of Lincoln, 1474; and of Donnington in the cathedral of York, which he reſigned in 1496.

[11] Magiſter Will' Stokedale, S. T. D. preſbyter, preſentatus per regem ad decanatum collegii ſive eccleſie collegiate Novi Operis, Leyc', per mortem magiſtri Roberti Middleton, 14 Jan. 1499. Reg. Smith.—William Stockdale is mentioned as proctor in 1477. Fuller's Hiſtory of Cambridge, p. 84.

[12] Magiſter Jacobus Whiſton, decr' doctor, preſbyter, preſentatus per abbatem & conventum de Eyneſham ad vicariam de Cherleburg, per reſignationem domini Willielmi Welwyn, 1495 (Reg. Smith.); preſentatus per regem ad decanatum infra eccleſiam collegiatam Novi Operis juxta caſtrum Leyceſtrie, per mortem Johannis [Willielmi] Stokedale, 23 Nov. 1500. Ibid.

[13] See p. 335.

[14] Ibid.

[15] Reg. Langham, arch. Cant. fol. 28. a.

[16] Reg. Buckingham.

[17] 1424, 3 die Auguſti, in prioratu de Landâ admiſit d'nus Henricum Roſe capellanum ad ſeptimam prebendam infra novam eccleſiam collegiatam beate Marie Leiceſtrie, Linc. diœc. ad preſentationem domine Katarine regine Anglie, matris regis Anglie & Francie, filie Caroli regis Francie, & d'ni Hibernie, vere ipſius prebende patrone. Reg. Chicheley, arch. Cant. pars 1. f. 243. a. b.

[18] 1424, 27 die Octobris recept. fuit certif. d'ni Thomæ Dunelm. ep'i, de & ſuper exped. permutat. facte inter mag. Will. Aſlakby rect. eccl. paroch. de Walton Lync. diœc. ac præbendarum præbendæ duodecimæ in eccl. nov. collegiatâ B. M. Leiceſtriæ ejuſdem diœc. dict. eccl. de Walton ad præſentat. d'ni H. regis Angliæ, &c. & dictam duodecimam præbendam ad præſentationem d'næ reginæ Angliæ, matris regis Angliæ & Franciæ, filie Karoli regis Franciæ & d'ni Hiberniæ, veræ, &c. Et Will. Broun, decanum eccl. collegiate de Langchiſtre, Dunelm. diœc. Reg. Chicheley, pars 1. fol. 249. b. And ſee Hutchinſon's Durham, vol. II. p. 357.

[19] Reg. Chicheley, arch. Cant. pars 1. fol. 259. a.

[20] Reg. Stafford. & Kemp, fol. 107. a.

[21] Ibid.

[22] Reg. Rotheram. See p. 333.

[23] Appendix, p. 112.

[24] Harl. MSS. 433. p. 77. a.—William Duffeld occurs archdeacon of Stafford in 1497. Browne Willis, I. 415.

[25] Harl. MSS. 433. p. 87. b.

[26] Ibid. p. 97. b.

[27] Reg. Ruſſel.

[28] Reg. Smith.

[29] He obtained the rectory of Houghton in 1534. See vol. II. p. 613.

Leland, who viſited Leiceſter whilſt the church continued in full ſplendour, ſays in his "Collectanea [1]," Newark college has a revenue of £800. and conſiſts of 12 prebendaries, beſides a dean and ſinging men." And in his "Itinerary" he thus deſcribes it: "The collegiate chirch of Newarke, and the area of it, yoinith to another peace of the caſtelle ground. The college chirch is not very great, but it is exceeding fair. There lyith on the North ſide of the high altare Henry erle of Lancaſter, withowt a crounet, and two men childern under the arche next to his hedde. On the Southe ſide lyith Henry the firſt duke of Lancaſter; and yn the next arch to his hedde lyith a lady, by likelihod his wife. Conſtance, doughtter to Peter, king of Caſtelle, and wife to John of Gaunt, liith afore the high altare in a tumbe of marble, with an image of braſſe (like a quene) on it. There is a tumbe of marble in the body of the quire. They told me that a countes of Darby [2] lay biried in it; and they make her, I wot not how, wife to John of Gaunt, or Henry the IV. Indeade Henry the IV. wille John of Gaunt livid was caullid erle of Darby. In the chapelle of St. Mary, on the Southe ſide of the quire, ly buried to of the Shirleys, knights, with their wives; and one Brokeſby, an eſquier. Under a piller yn a chapelle of the South croſſe iſle lyith the lady Hungreford, and Sacheverel her ſecund huſbande [3]. In the Southe ſide of the body of the chirch lyith one of the Bluntes, a knight, with his wife. And on the North ſide of the church, ly 3 Wigeſtons [4], greate benefactors to the college. One of them was a prebendarie there, and made the free grammar ſchole. The cloiſters ſtanding on the South-weſte ſide of the chirch is large and faire; and the houſes in the cumpace of the area of the college for the prebendaries be al very praty. The waulles and gates of the college be ſtately. The riche cardinal of Wincheſter [5] gildid all the floures and knottes in the voulte of the chirch. The large almoſe houſe ſtondith alſo withyn the quadrante of the area of the college [6]."

This church appears to have been demoliſhed before the viſitation of Mr. Wyrley in 1590 [7]; who ſays, "Henry Plantagenet firſt duke of Lancaſter founded a place called The Newark by the South gate of this town. This piece of building hath been commended by knights and ſquires to have been the moſt faireſt that ever they had ſeen. By this abbey [college] the ſaid Henry founded a ſtately hoſpital, which yet remaineth. In it is a very fair and ſtately monument of a lady, curiouſly wrought, but of no note or mark [8]."

In this chapel alſo Mr. Wyrley deſcribes theſe arms [9]:

9. Argent, a chevron between three mullets of ſix points pierced Sable.

10. Barry of eight, Argent and Gules, eight martlets, 3. 2. 2. and 1. Sable.

11. Gules, three lions of England; a label of three points, each charged with as many fleurs de lis, Sable, Lancaſter.

12. Gules, a feſs between ſix martlets Argent.

13. Gules, three fiſhes naiant in pale, Argent a bend Sable.

14. Argent, three leopards' heads jeſſant Sable. Sodington [10].

15. Azure fretty Argent, Cave; impaling Gules, a ſaltire Vaire.

The Hoſpital at that time continued under the patronage of the queen, in right of the dutchy of Lancaſter; by her authority the wardens were appointed; and, by her grants, moſt of the houſes and lands were transferred to the Corporation of Leiceſter; with ſeveral fee-farm rents, amounting to 4*l.* 2*s.* 5*d.* belonging to the Newark, ſeven of which were from houſes ſituated within that liberty, and others at Knighton, Carleton Curlew, Burton, Sileby, and Glenfield.

In the early part of James the Firſt's reign, William Fowkes was maſter, or warden, under a regular patent, which he had the power of transferring; and accordingly ſold it for 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to Henry earl of Huntingdon; who in 1609 offered it to the Corporation of Leiceſter, upon condition that they would pay for it as much as he gave to Mr. Fowkes; which was agreed to at a meeting of the twenty-four aldermen, and twenty-four of the ſeniors of the company of 48, Feb. 19, 1609-10; and that ſum was accordingly paid; and alſo, for charges of ſuing out the ſame in the name of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgeſſes, 37*l.* 14*s.*" [11]

At a common hall, March 28, 1610, it was agreed that the fee of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* due to the maſter of the hoſpital in the Newark ſhould yearly be paid to the uſe of the chamber; and that, as the poor in the houſe ſhould die, one other poor perſon of the town to be choſen to ſupply that room, by the mayor and twenty-four; and the poor of every pariſh to be placed one pariſh after another, a ſpecial regard being had to the pariſhes which had moſt poor.

Feb. 7, 1613-14, they purchaſed "The Grange near the borough of Leiceſter, with the appurtenances, together with all lands, meadows, feedings, and paſturages, to the ſame belonging, or uſually occupied; and the cloſe called Goſling-croft, with the appurtenances, in the borough of Leiceſter, and in the fields of Leiceſter; the tack of cattle to be depaſtured in the Cow-lees and South-fields of Leiceſter; the water-mill called the Newark-mill; the holme called Gooſe-holme, with the water; a tenement at the corner of the lane leading to the mill; the Land-ſwanne; a meadow called Beed-houſe-mead; being 16 yard-lands [12] in the whole; with all and ſingular the meſſuages, mills, houſes, edifices, ſtructures, barns, ſtables, dove-houſes, orchards, gardens, ſhops, cellars, lands, tenements, chapels, church-yards, meadows, feedings, paſturage, commons, waſtes, void way, grounds lately briers, moors, marſhes, waters, fiſheries, fiſhings, woods, underwoods, trees, and all the land, ground and ſoil of the ſame woods, underwoods, &c.; and all reverſions, mines, quarries, ſervices, &c. parcel of the late College of the Newark;" all which had been given by the Crown to [1] Vol. I. p. 74.

---

[2] This was Mary Bohun, firſt wife of Henry IV, mother to king Henry V; who died before her huſband's acceſſion to the crown; and who (Knighton, c. 2741, expreſſly ſays) was buried at Leiceſter.—"Had Henry IV. died earl of Derby, it is probable he would have been buried among his anceſtors in the collegiate church of their founding at Leiceſter; ſo that it is no improbable concluſion that his wife, who died counteſs of Derby, was actually carried thither, to his family, rather than to her own, eſpecially as the conjectures about her do not depoſit her among any of her very near relations, if they were at all related to her." Gough's Sepulchral Monuments in Great Britain, vol. II. p. 35.—This is a ſufficient confutation of Sandford's idea that ſhe was buried in Canterbury cathedral, and that Henry, out of regard to her, choſe that church for his own ſepulture, as well as of the appropriation of a figure in Hereford cathedral to her. Under the North window of the chapel of the preſent Hoſpital remains a monument, which, in 1590, Mr. Wyrley notices as "a fair and ſtately monument of a lady, curiouſly wrought, but of no note or mark;" and which might be ſuppoſed to have belonged to this counteſs, were it not that, as the college-church, which Leland deſcribes, is certainly long ſince demoliſhed, we muſt conclude the monuments periſhed with it, and look for ſome other appropriation of that in the chapel, which, being only the original oratorium of the Old Hoſpital, gives a very inadequate repreſentation of the "not very great, but exceeding fair," collegiate church.

[3] Thoroton, in his Antiquities of Nottingham, p. 11, informs us that ſir Richard Sacheverel, knight, whoſe wife was lady Mary Hungerford, was here buried, 25 Hen. VIII. This lady, by her firſt huſband, was mother to George earl of Huntingdon.

[4] In the chapel erected by William Wigſton for his chantry. The prebendary was Thomas, brother of William Wigſton, who made the free grammar-ſchool, whence it appears that theſe Wigſtons where all dead when Leland viſited Leiceſter.

[5] Beaufort. [6] Leland's Itinerary, vol. I. p. 17. [7] MS notes in the College of Arms.

[8] This ſtill remains on the North ſide of the altar; and is engraved, Plate XXIX. fig. 7, 8. See it deſcribed hereafter, p. 347.

[9] See Plate XXIX. fig. 9—15.

[10] The two coats, marked 13, 14, are elſewhere ſaid to be in the chapel of St. Andrew. See p. 322.

[11] Extracted by the Rev. Sam. Carte, vicar of St. Martin's, from the Corporation Records.

[12] They before poſſeſſed two yard-lands bought of Wightman in 1589, and two others bought of Archers in 1592. To theſe half a yard-land more was added in 1622, bought of Mr. Wadland, which completed the 29 yard-lands and a half enjoyed by the Corporation in the South Fields. Carte, MS.

Francis Morris and Francis Philips, and by them ſold to ſir William Smith, knight, of Leiceſterſhire, and Humphrey Smith, citizen of London; from whom they were bought, in truſt for the Corporation, by Thomas Sacheverell, Robert Gilliott, James Andrew, Thomas Parker, William Ive, and Rowland Puſey, all of the borough of Leiceſter, gentlemen, for the ſum of £1000. This purchaſe, as it was a favourite one, appears alſo to have been ſo beneficial to the Corporation, that they diſpoſed of ſeveral of their fee-farm rents to raiſe the money for it. They had bought in 1586, for £600. a moiety of a leaſe then held of the ſaid Grange by Francis Haſtings, eſq. and in 1592 obtained for themſelves a reverſionary leaſe of 31 years, on a reſerved rent of 32*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.*

They were ſoon after favoured by king James, through the mediation of their powerful friend the earl of Huntingdon, with letters patent of incorporation, under the title of "The Maſter, Aſſiſtants, Chaplain, and Poor, of the Hoſpital of the Holy Trinity in the Newark near the Borough-town of Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter, of the foundation of James I. king of England [1]."

See their common ſeal in Plate XXVIII. fig. 16.

In completing the purchaſe of the Grange, and in ſoliciting new letters patent, the Corporation had much aſſiſtance from Sir William Heyrick, as appears by the following original letters [2]:

1. "Right worſhipful; after our hartie commendations, with thanks for yo^{r} love and great care of us and our Corporation: Underſtandinge by yo^{r} let^{re} to your brother Mr. Robert Heyricke, that one Gibb [3], an almſman in o^{r} Hoſpital in the Newarke of Leiceſter, hath exhibited a petition to the Kinge's Ma^{tie}, and of his Highnes reference thereof to oure honorable good frende Mr. Chancellor of the Duchie, and of his good likeinge thereof, for the incorporatinge of the ſayde Hoſpital: We have therefore thought fitt to ſend upp this bearer, our lovinge friende Thomas Nurſe, to repaire to the ſayde Gibb, and to knowe of him how farr he hath proceeded therein, and fully to acquainte you therewith; that, as his proceedinge therein hitherto may be to yo^{r} good likinge, and likelie to be broughte to paſs, wee are therefore the boulder to intreate y^{r} Worſhipp's good direction, and to adviſe with o^{r} Recorder [4] howe to incorporate the ſayde Hoſpital; and that the Maior of our ſayde borough (for the tyme beinge) and certen of his brethren (in the name of o^{r} Corporation) maie for ever be maiſters thereof (yf ſo it maie be obtayned). Thus farr preſuming of y^{r} Worſhipp^{s} fav^{r} and paynes in this ſuite, wee commend you to the protection of the Almightie; and allwaies reſt your verie loveinge frends,

Leiceſter, the 17 daie of November, 1613.
To the right worſhipfull Sir William Heyricke, knight, at London, bee
theeſe d'd."

THOMAS MANBIE, Maior.
ROBART HEYRICKE.
W^{m} MORTON.
JAMES ELLYS.
JAMES ANDREWE.
T. PARKER. JO. FREAKE."

2. "I muſt neds confes that I am now far behind, not only for lettars, but allſo for matters which ſholld have bene involved in them; and cheflly and eſpeſyally for youre great paynes and care, for youre good-will in oure towne buſynes, for which you have not only won Mr. Wadland and his copartnors that were with him; but allſo, by their meaynes and myne, making it knowne to the hole company, they will nevar forget youre payns and kyndnes. And for youre ordynary good will in feaſting of the Hawſes, and Cytes, the Sanfords, the reſt, with the Withringtons, and Douglaſſis, and Parrees, all redounds to youre immortall fame. And thoughe we will no whit imytate you, nor coom nere, we have celebrated the feaſt of Natyvety in the beſt ſort we can. I had a fat doe ſent me of the even; and when we had, acording to auntient cuſtom, gon ovar all oure neabors and tennaunts; that being done, coomes ovar Mr. Samuell Clarke, parſon of Kingſthorp [5], two myle of this ſyde Northampton, and maſter of the New Oſpytall called Wigſton's Oſpytall, and one Mr. Henry Clarke [6], his eeldar brother, who is Recordar of Rocheſtar, and dwellethe there, a counſelar of the Temple, and by report a very good lawyer and a proper man. Theſe two came to ſee my daughter Dorkas, and to aſk my goodwill of her; Mr. Henry being procured by his brothar to take ſo longe a journey at this tyme of the yeare, and had not tyme to ſtay, but muſt preſently return into Kent, and backe agayne to the tearme. Good lyking of all ſides; for, if I ſhall beſtow her of a clergyman, I doe thinke, of his yeares, I ſhall hardly fynd his equall in England; an excelent preacher, very wyſſe, and lykly of great preferments. He is great with Sir Thomas Parry, my lord of London's chaplen, and in great favour with the Metropolytan. Yf you talke afar of anny tyme with Mr. Fanſhawe, he will tell you as moche of them as anny I know; and I pray you doe, and let me but here two woords after from you. And if you have ocaſyne to uſe a lawyer, as I know you have, if you doo but make tryall of the ſaid Mr. Henry, I thinke you ſhall fynd him to be learned and carfull of youre buſynes. And ſo, comēdyng all thes matters to Him that rulethe all, I ſeace to troble you furder at this tyme. Leiceſter, the 12 of January, 1613-14.

Your ever loving brother, ROBART HEYRICKE.
To the right worthy his loving brother, &c."

3. "After our hearty commendations; underſtanding by Mr. Wadland of your great paynes and care of us to Sir William Smyth, in the purchaſing of our Grange; for the w^{ch} wee and o^{r} wholl Corporation acknowledge o^{r} ſelves much bounde unto you, and reſt your debtor for your approved love towards us: ſoe ſhall o^{r} ſucceedinge age have juſt cauſe to acknowledge the ſame (althoughe the purchaſe bee verie deare); earneſtle intreatinge your advice and paynes once againe for the incorporatinge the Hoſpital; and for the followinge of which buſines wee have ſent up Mr. Wadlande, whoe will bee readie to attende you therin; and by him have ſent unto Sir William Smyth the firſte five hundreth markes, and ſecurytie for the reſt, and xi l. in gold for the lady Smyth; but, in reſpect of o^{r} povertie at this tyme, yf you can content her with x l. wee ſhall tak it as a greate kindnes, deſireing yo^{r} preſence when the aſſurance is to paſſe unto us. And thus beinge (as wee have allwayes beene) bould to trouble you, wee comend y^{u} to the protection of the Almightie; and allwayes reſt your aſſured lovinge frendes, Leiceſter, 23 Jan. 1613-4. THOMAS MANBY, Maior.

To Sir William Heyricke. ROBART HEYRICKE."

4. "My ague would not ſuffer me to wryte by the carryar, as I would have doone, to geve yow manny and harty thanks for your late kynde lettar and coppy therein of parchment; which we bothe doe unfaynedly give you great thanks for, and do acknowledge oureſellfes much bound unto you, and indepted to doe the like, or any thing ells for you that doth lye in our powers. I pray you, at youre convenyent leaſure, let one ſearch yf this be inroled anny wher, or whether it be a ſecret bargon; which, if yt be inrolled, will, I think, appeare where the recogneſencis were acknowledged. My good coſin Harvay is gone from my Lord, which I thought to let you underſtand, and, as Mr. Haſtings tells me, dothe re-

---

[1] Newark Hoſpital. fundat. Leic. 1 Pars Original. 12 Jac. I. Rot. 76. This charter is in the Hoſpital cheſt.

[2] Communicated by John Herrick, Eſq. of Beaumanor, from the originals preſerved by his anceſtor Sir William.

[3] See p. 344.

[4] Francis Harvey, eſq. of Northampton, a bencher of the Middle Temple, was then recorder. He was made a ſerjeant at law in 1614; and a judge of the common pleas in 1624.

[5] Mr. Clarke was rector of St. Peter's in Northampton (of which Kingſthorpe is a chapel) from 1608 to 1640. See a farther account of him under Wigſton's Hoſpital.

[6] Henry Clarke was a ſerjeant at law; and a repreſentative in parliament for Rocheſter in the firſt year of the reign of Charles I. as was his ſon ſir Francis in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. and Francis the grandſon in the reign of William and Mary. Henry Clarke and his family are noticed in Harris's Kent (from Philipott's Villare), pp. 127. 324; and in Haſted's Kent, vol. II. pp. 238. 423.—Dugdale is the authority contained in the note in the latter page.

porte himſellfe to be worth £7000. Yt may be, that he may doe you as much pleſure in ſuche matters as you tolld me of as he collde before. Thus, with our kyndeſt comēdacyons to my Lady and yourſelf doone, with deſire of youre prayers to God for Mr. Mayor, who is in great daungar, and fell ſicke y^{e} 23^{d} of January even, as he was putting his hand to the bonds for ſir Willyam Smyth's laſt payments; we comēd you to God's bleſſed protection. Leiceſter, this 3^{d} of Feb. 1613-4. Your loving brother, Ro. Heyricke."

5. "For the Parlement, we do heare that the writs be forthe; and my Lord is not forgettfull of us, that we ſholld not be unprovyded of burgeſſes when the tyme ſarves. To that end he hath ſent for Robart Hawford, and tolld him, that, before we ſholld want, he woold provide his brother Geordg Haſtings and Sir Henry Ritche [1]. I have ſpoken with Mr. Maior, Mr. Morton, and ſoom of the cheſeſt, that they will thinke of ſuche as be freemen, and well willars to Corporacyons, wherof I know you to be one; and alſo I put them in remembraunce of Mr. Recordar [2], which they colld not but think well of. So the matter ſtays; and my deſyre is that I may have your letter touchyng thys matter ſo ſoon as may be, the rather yf you have anny intention to be one. Leiceſter, the 22 of Feb. 1613-14. Robart Heyricke."

6. "For the place of a burges, I went preſently into the chamber, and found Mr. Maior and Mr. Morton together; and told them that I had inſtantly receayved a lettar from you, wherin you commended you kindly unto the Town; and told them that now I had receayved from you touching a burges' place, which before I had broke with them of; and red the lettar unto them. Then they bothe tolld me agayne of the meayns my Lord had made; "but," ſay they, "in anny caſe, we muſt offar one place to Mr. Recordar;" and yf he ſhould refuſe yt, as yt is thought he will, then I make no dout but yt is redy for you: but for my Lord's brother, Mr. Geordg Haſtings," ſaythe Mr. Morton, "we may in no wiſe ſay my Lord nay; for he will," ſaythe he, menyng my Lord, "ſpeke concerning the Oſpytall to the Chauncelar, to the Kinge, nay, if ther be caus, my Lord will moove the Parlement Hous." I replyd, on your advice, that you did adviſe them to take freemen; as by ſtatute, I told them, we ought: but, yf they woold take anny not reſyaunt or inhabeting within the Borow, then I told them that Mr. Recordar and you are both ſworne men to the Towne, youreſelfe born and bred and ſworn; ſo that, yf Mr. Recordar ſay nay, as I thinke he will, then I do not dout but one place is youres. I will not be unmyndfull of it; and let you knowe as ſoone we can procure the Recordar's anſwer. Leiceſtar, the 26 of February, 1613-4. Your loving brother, Robart Heyricke."

7. "I have told Mr. Maior, that he ſholld be ſuar to have lettars from the Chauncelor, which in the end are coom, and we colld not hellp yt; for yet to this day we cannot get the precept from the ſherive, which I thinke is helld away by ſome polleſy: yet I have tolld our cheffe men that youre cyteſens be choſen ſuche a day, and othar places have done, as you wrote unto me. In the end, we have ſent this day to Cotham [3], hoping to have Mr. Recordar there; ſo this nyght we ſhall knowe his mynde. And now my Lord wrytes that he hopes his brother ſhal be one of the knyghts of the ſhyre: but for Sir Henry Ritche he is very importunate, but I thinke Sir Henry will not put you by; but the voyce goes in oure hall, thatt yf Mr. Chauncelor be ſaid nay for Mr. Henry Faylton, then oure olld Oſpytall is quite gon; ſo that, you ſee, manny heads, manny braynes. But ſo ſoon as I can wryte anny ſartenty, ethar I or no, you ſhall be partaker, God willing, by the firſt. And ſo, with manny thanks for all your frendſhips, I end, ſartefying you that our Recordar hath now ſayde nay. And now I think they will ſend to my Lord, to ſe yf he will be content to releaſe us of Sir Henry Riche, which by no meanes we woold have yf we coold get his Ho. conſent; and then it will coom to youre lot. But, ſince I wrote this, we have met all oure company of 24 and 48 this afternone, being the 14 of this moonthe; and thus concluded, that Robart Hawford muſt go to-morrow in the morning to my Lorde, to entreat my Lord to nominate one, and that he will be pleſed to let Mr. Chauncelor nomynat the the other. To-morrow at night we ſhall know his mynd; and then by the caryar I hope to wryte furder to you; but you ſe alredy how yt fall out. And ſo, till the next, God have you in his keping. Leiceſter, the 14 of March, 1613-14. Robart Heyricke."

8. "My coſin Heyricke being ſent from hence of Thurſday laſt, with a letter to yourſealfe, and one other to Mr. Chauncelar, to ſygnifye unto his Honor that we were all willing to grant his requeſt, and withall to deſyr him that Mr. Henry Faylton might preſently repayre to us to take his othe; but, before Robert Heyricke cold be at London, we reſayved a ſecond lettar from Mr. Chauncellar, wherin he ſignifyethe that Mr. Faylton's buſyneſs is ſouche that he cannot entende that ſarvis, but requyres that he may have the nominacyon of another gentellman, whom he greatly com̄ends, but doeth not name him; and after his lettar wrytes a poſtſkript, that, as we expect any favor at his hand anny way, not to ſay him nay in this his requeſt; ſo that I doe imagen that coſin Heyricke ſtays the longar to bring the gentleman with him. Yf evar I live for to ſee another parlement ſummoned, and that you have intencyon to be one of the Hows, we will take no other courſe, but have you ſpeake to Mr. Chauncellar to wryte but two lynes to oure Towne, that you may be one; yt will be as ſure as any ackt of parlement. To-morrow, being Thurſday, and our county day, our knights of the ſhire are to be choſen betwyxt 8 and 9 of the cloke in the forenoon [4], and the ſarmon is to begin for the judges and juſteſis aſſembled about the ſame tyme; and the chardge to be given will not be long after, if it be not before. Leiceſter, this 22 of March, 1613-14. Robart Heyricke."

9. "Leiceſter, the 13 of Aprill, 1614. Youre long-expeckted lettar I receayved of Sayturday laſt, and one othar breeſe one beſydes; for which bothe, as for your good counſell therin to Mr. Major and us, and for youre news allſo, I rendar all poſſyble thankes. Thus hoping that till we may ſe you we may ſometymes heare from you, I end, and comēd you to the bleſſed protection of the Allmyghty, who kepe you, and defend you in your journey from evells. My comēdacyons, my wyfe's and doughter's, to yourſelfe and my Lady doon, I doe leave you to the ſafe kepeng of the Lord Jeſus. Robart Heyricke."

10. "I muſt not forget to geve you thanks, from Mr Maior and us all, for all your former care and paynes for our Towne cawſes; and to entreate your furder favour, if Mr. Wadland doe deſyre it, to bring him once acquainted with Mr. Chauncelor, Sir Danniell Day, or anny other burgeſis, or others that may doe him good in his ſute for the incorporating of the Oſpytall. The Lord be with you! Leiceſter, the 10 of May, 1614. Robart Heyricke."

11. "Towchyng the New-woorke myles, there is no ſuche forwardnes in ſellyng of them as Tō Stamford tolld you; but ſince we are ſo far in dept, that I feare we ſhall be conſtrained in the end ethar to part with them, or ſoom othar good thinge: but aſſure yourſellfe, that nethar the myles nor no ſuche thinge ſhall goe, but you ſhal be pryve to yt in tyme; and well woorthy, for we ſhall have non that will offar no ſuche kyndnes as you doe. Leiceſter, the 24 of May, 1614. Your loving brother, Robart Heyricke."

---

[1] Second ſon to Robert earl of Warwick. He was one of the burgeſſes for Leiceſter in 1608 and 1613; made knight of the Bath in 1610; created lord Kenſington in 1622, and earl of Holland in 1624; and, for his loyalty to king Charles, was beheaded March 9, 1648-9.

[2] Mr. Harvey; ſee p. 340.

[3] In Nottinghamſhire, the family-ſeat of the Markhams.

[4] Sir Henry Rich and Sir Francis Leigh were elected burgeſſes for Leiceſter in March, 1613-14.

12. "I and all the reſt moſt hartely thanke you for youre greate paynes. I went to Mr. Mayor, and willed him to ſend for ſoom half doſſin or more of the celdors; which preſently he did, and met them at the hall; but yt was 9 of the cloke or we colld mete: and at oure meeting we received likewiſe two ſeverall lettars from Mr. Wadland, wherin he ſignefyethe the greate care and paynes you have taken for the Towne; and requireth that Robart Hauford may coom up with ſpeede; which preſently we thought neceſſary to doe: and therefore we have ſent him with ſuch a coppy of an order forth of the Duchye, which ſhewes that the Duke did founde the Oſpitall for the releſe of 110 perſons to be taken out of the towne and county of Leiceſter, and with ſuch other inſtrucktions as we colld for the ſooden furnyſhe him; deſyring of God, yf yt be his good pleaſure, that we may enjoy the Oſpytall here during the King's good pleſhure; and the incorporating to reſt till we have more monney and fewer ennemyes. Thus concluding at xi of the clocke this Fryday nyght, being the 27 of May, 1614; praying to God longe to contynnew you, to his glory and your heart's deſire. Ro. Heyricke."

13. "I thanke you, and ſo we doe, and have all good cares, for your greate care and paynes you have taken for oure Towne buſynes; which though we cannot, yet I hope God will reward you for it. Leiceſtar, 9 June, 1614. Robart Heyricke."

14. "Right worſhipful; after our great thanks for your great paines and all your kindenes, theiſe are to certifie you, that wee have over-intreated Mr. Sacheverill to come up in our behalfe about our ſuite concerninge the Olde Hoſpital, to doe what he cann therein for a while, until Mr. Wadland ſhall come up. We weare the more importunate with him to undertake this journey, for that (for his knowledge of the wholl buſines, and his experience in Hoſpital matters) wee thought him as likelie at this tyme to doe good therein as any other that wee could have gotten. And therefore wee pray that you will take the paines to goe wth him to Mr. Moſeley ſo ſoone as you maie, and to make him knowne unto him to be the man whom wee have deſired to repayre unto his Worſhipp about our ſuite; and as touching the meſſage which he ſent to us by our Towne-clarke, that Mr. James Andrew is the man whom wee deſire and thinke the fitteſt to be named in the booke for the firſt man, if one particular perſon muſt be named therein; and if the general name of 'The Mayor and Aldermen of the Borough of Leiceſter for the tyme beinge' maie not ſerve in this caſe. And ſo intreatinge earneſtly the contynuence of y^{r} love, notwithſtanding the tediouſneſs of the ſuite, wee commend you, by our prayers, unto the rich rewarding of him that pitied Ninivi.

Your wor$^{p's}$ much bounden to be commanded,
Thomas Manbie, Mai^{r}. James Andrew.
William Morton. Thomas Parker.
Leiceſter, 23 June, 1614."

15. "Right worſhipfull; underſtanding by our good friends Mr. Sacheverill and Mr. Wadland of your greate paines, travell, and good endeavours, to many perſons, and ſeveral places, in the behalfe of our poor Towne, concerninge our Hoſpital; for the which we acknowledge ourſelves muche beholdinge unto you, not onlie in this, but for dyvers other your lovinge fauours done unto us and our wholl Corporation, hartilye deſiringe the contynuance of your kinde favours towards us and our poore Town; for, upon yourſelfe wee and our wholl Corporation are bound whollie to relye, without which we know not what might befall us: Wee have ſent by this bearer, Mr. Chamblin Heyrike, to paie unto S^{r} W^{m} Smyth the five hundred marks due upon Saturdaie nexte, beinge the ſeconde paiement for our Graunge, which wee purchaſed by your good meanes of him. Thus beinge, as wee have allwaies been, trobleſome, wee commende you to the protection of the Allmightie; and ever reſt your Worſhipp's aſſured frends, "Leiceſter, 2 Aug. 1614. Thomas Manbie, Maior.

To the right worſhipfull Robart Heyricke. our eſpeciall good frende William Morton.
S^{r} W^{m} Heyricke, knight. John Freake."

16. "I colld wiſhe that for the Oſpital mattar, you might grow to an end with yt, that, yf the pencyon will not willingly be confirmed, yt myght be ended without yt, yt is ſo trobleſoom to you, and will be chardgable to the Toune; and lingring brede delays. I thank you for all your newes contayned in all your papers; as alſo for the copy of the Sarmon; and the rather for that yt is, I parſayve, my godſon's doing. I pray God bles him, and make him a good man.
Leiceſtar, the 7 of Novembre, 1614.
Your faythfull and loving brother, Ro. Heyricke."

17. "For the Oſpytall byſynes, we are all bound unto you; and for the cup you have given to Mr. Attorney, I pray you wryte unto me in your next what it coſt. And looke, what yt was under £10. I will gev it them agayne; for, they are pore and nedy; and ſhortly, God ſo willing, I hope Mr. Wadland will coom, and take ſoom of the burden from you. Leiceſtar, the 2 of January, 1614-15. Ro. Heyricke."

18. "Sir, my duty firſt done, and my harty thanks premiſed for all your kindneſſes; theſe are only to informe you touching £100. which my father hath undertaken ſhall be readie in your hand towards the laſt payment (that our Toune is to make) unto Sir William Smith, which is to be about the 5 or 6 of February at the furtheſt. So it is, that that £100. myſelf and divers of my frends here have it made up amongſt us, to be lent to the Toune after the rate of £8. in the 100; and that 8 alſo is alreadie determined to be beſtowed and given to a certeine godly uſe here within this Towne. But we are deſirous, for good reaſons, to have the money lent in my brother Stringer's name, that dwellith by Aburgany houſe a little above Ludgate, who hath promiſed to repaye it of his oune money after a whyle, yf all things fall out with his mynde. And therefore theſe are to pray you to let him have yt, yf he come to you for it, to pay it himſelfe to them that are to make the payment to Sir W. Smith for the Towne, to the end to take away all ſuſpicion that the money is not his. But if he doe not come to you for it (as I thinke rather that he cannot conveniently by reaſon of his gowte), then I pray you ſo to order the matter (when you are to paye it to them that ſhall come for the Towne) as that it may not be knowne nor ſuſpected otherwiſe but that he hath left it in your hands readie for the Townes uſe aforeſayd, as I had intreated him, and as he had promiſed me that he would doe; and ſo you to receive the Town's bond over to him for the money when you deliver the mony, yf you have not either word before that tyme that the bond is otherwiſe delivered, either to himſelf, or to ſome other to his uſe. And of this my requeſt for ſecrecye I pray you to have care, to keepe me as free from ſuſpicion or knowledge as is poſſible, becauſe the knowledge of it in our Towne would bring upon me many ſuits and inconveniences for my love to the Towne, that moved me chiefely to this action, to ſave them forty ſhillings a year, their chardg of intereſt; beſides that the example of it hath brought doune alreadye ſundry others of their creditours to 8 and to 9 in the 100. And thus craving pardon for my bouldnes in being ſo troubleſome unto you, with my harty prayers both for yourſelf, my Lady, and your whole family, I take my leave. Leiceſter, the 24 of Januarie. Your much indetted kinſman, Thomas Sacheverill."

19. "According to your deſyre, here was a ſarmon preached in the New-worke, on Monday the 20th of May, by Mr. Sacheverill. His text was out of Matthew the xxvth; When I was hungry, you gave me meate. And he did not only learnedly, but alſo zelouſly, handele the ſame. There was warnynge given to bothe our companys to mete Mr. Maior at the Hall at ix of the cloke, and ſo to go downe with him to the Oſpytall; which we did, and had a tilt ſet up agaynſt the wall of the Oſpytall alonge the chauncell, and foorms next to the wall for the bettar ſort, and divers other before them toward the long alley, where at the ſyde of the alley the pulpit ſtoude. His voyce was very well harde, and yt helld fayre all the day without rayne. But the old ſaying is, where God buyllds his Chirche, the Devil will build his Chappell; for, by what meayns I will not ſay, but all them of the New-work abſented themſelves; and all the gentlemen in the Town, not one of them there only Mr. Wadland. And yet there was gathered, at the coming forthe of the New-worke gate, 5*l.* 12*s.* which made them 12*d.* apiece; which was preſently diſtributed amongſt them. In the mydſt of the ſarmon comes one of Sir Henry's men to Sergeaunt Beſwicke, and bad him tell Mr. Maior, that my Lady ſent him word that Sir Henry was not well, and that he ſhould not carry up his mace as he went forth of the New-work; notwithſtanding, he did carry it. Sir Henry hath got a ſtomake againſt Mr. Maior, and ſekes to be revenged by any meaynes he may. As God woolld, we had ſent to the biſhop of Lincoln for his allowance, that by good hap we had under his hand; that, if we had not, they would ſurely have complayned prayſently to him. Thus much I thought good to ſignifye unto you for the preſent, and more as occaſion ſarves. Leiceſter, this 22^d of May, 1616.

Your loving brother, Robart Heyricke."

20. "Right worſhipfull; the point I would now inform you of is, about all our gentryes and the men of Newark's abſence from the late Sermon; whereas (to have it done with good-will of all parts) we had not only gotten our Biſhop's allowance under his own hand, but alſo Sir Henry Haſtings and the Doctor Chip[1] had granted us their good-will. But it ſeemed they did after repent, partly uppon ſir H. falling out into bitter words with Mr. Maior, and partly being urged thereunto by Sherman, &c. whom it grieved to ſee the Towne (as it weare) there, in that place, about the which he had received the overthrow; and therefore they drew that meeting into the quarrel about the juriſdiction of the Newark, &c.; informing that word was ſent to Mr. Maior in the ſermon-tyme (by an old Lady's man dwelling nere, and in her name), that he ſhould not let his mace be borne up as he ſhould goe home; and Sir Henry being ſick that day, and pleading that he would have bene there yf he had been well, yet he did that afternoone ſend word to Mr. Maior that he did take offence at his carrying up his mace; and it is out of doubt that there would not have been ſo generall an abſence, but uppon their knowledge of his mynde to have it ſo: but Sherman and his ſonn Hemings were abroad openly at that tyme, that all might ſee that they did refuſe to come. Now the doeings about the Sermon hath increaſed the diſpleaſure and hart-burnings againſt Mr. Maior; and in lykelyhood may provoke him to doe the more agaynſt him or his Towne by way of certificate into the Dutchy. And ſo, craving pardon for my tediouſnes, I take my leave. June 11, 1616.
Your worp^s much bounden, Thomas Sacheverill."

21. "Right worſhipfull; the greate love we have ſoe often found in you heretofore towards our Towne doeth make us the more boulde to requeſt your helpe nowe againe allſoe at this tyme; and it is onelie that you would be pleaſed to goe with Mr. Wadland to Mr. Attorney of the Duchie, for the deliveringe of a letter of ours unto him, and to intreate his lawfull favour towards us in the matters conteyned in that letter, the particulars whereof we leave unto Mr. Wadland's relation. And ſoe, with due thanks for all your kindneſſes, wee doe moſt hartilie commende yourſelfe and all yours into the Almighties gracious protection; reſtinge, both now and evere,
Your worſhippes in all love to be commanded,
Will. Ive, Maior. James Ellice.
Robart Heyricke. James Andrewe.
William Morton. Tho. Parker.
Leiceſter, the eleaventh of June, 1616."

22. "I marvel you did not wryte of the death of ſir Thomas Parry[2]; but, though God have taken him away, yet I doubt not but he hathe provyded a bettar for us, and the rather by your good helpe, which as we have hertofore fully founde, ſo, for the good of your pore natyſe toune, I pray you let us ſtill retayne. I know Mr. Maior hathe wrytten to you, but yet it is not coom to my hand for my hand; but yt will. We have great neede of your helpe agayne, though we have made ſmall recompence for all your former paynes and chardges. Our nebors in the Newarke, as I am enformed, make great brags, that they will wreſt the Maſterſhip from us; and that buſy fellow Gibb[3] is turned from us, and making ſute to Mr. Attorney; and ſays, that yf he cannot fynde his favor, he will go to the Kinge. Yf you colld tell how to have him, I thinke he wolld tell you his greeſſe. Leiceſter, the 12 of June, 1616. Robart Heyricke."

23. "Sir, the Sermone on Monday was not ſo proſperous, but in the afternoone we did meete with as great croſſing, and eſpecially two wayes. Firſt, by the under-clerke Mr. Baylie, that had Gibb's booke to engroſſe; who firſt to Mr. Attorney did oppoſe himſelf as a great frend on the other ſide, by alledging that our warrant tended to the diſinheriting of the King, to the excluding of the country-poore out of the Hoſpitall: that it was contrary to his former warrants, in which caſe they were to wayte for the King's owne reſolution; that Mr. Dackombe[4] was ignorant what had bene done before in the caſe; that they muſt alter all the booke if it was drawne, and in effect make a new; and that the perpetuity to the Mayor and his ſucceſſors would never paſſe, when the King ſhould be tould what hurt he ſhould do to himſelf; and yf yt did paſſe (unleſſe we had the better counſell to draw the booke anew for the purpoſe) the patent would be overthrowne agayne as unſufficient within one yere. Secondly, Mr. Attorney himſelf was much daſhed with the aforeſaid ſpeaches; but more, when he founde his owne unability to alter and reforme the paper book according to our warrant in ſundry reſpects, and namely to bring in handſomely the aſſiſtants that be added to the Maior, and to joyne the particular perſon and the Maior and his ſucceſſors in one booke; whereuppon he was readie to caſt off all, and to have put us to get a new warrant, or els the booke to be new drawne, by ſuch as had ſkill and leaſure to doe it, at our coſt. At length we were glad to offer to be content to paſſe with the particular perſon only; and to have Tho. Manby nominated and ſet downe (in the blank left in the book) for the Maſter uppon whom the Hoſpital ſhold be incorperated; which Mr. Attorney did himſelf put into their paper booke, and ſent it ſo by his man to Mr. Bailey; who ſeemeth unwilling to do it, alledging that he is loath to give us the benefit of their booke; but, we offering him to pay him well for our coppye and what he ſhall doe for us, he ſayd he would conſeder of it; and if he did it, he could not poſſibly do it before the next weeke. Now the caſe being ſo, that yf Baily will not be brought to doe it thus, then we muſt paſs untill we have procured a new booke to be drawn, which we ſhall hardly get downe in haſte. 2. If Bayly will

---

[1] John Chippindale, doctor of the Civil Law, and commiſſary to the biſhop of Lincoln.

[2] Chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter.

[3] "Brother and Siſter, my hartie commendations to you, and my wife's. Concernyng the letter I receyved of you laſt, they ſaie it is all of my owne doinge, becauſe I beare ſome mallis againſt the towne; therefore I woulde wiſh you to gett ſir Henrie Haſtings good will, and to drawe a petition, and gett the juſtices hands to it of your owne eſtate; for, I have certified Mr. Attorney that I will complaine to the Kinge if I maie not have remedie for it. As for the howſe you ſhoulde builde me, if Mr. Maior will not give waie, let it alone till I come home. And, I praye you, haſt up the retorne of your commiſſion, and labour with the juſtices to gett too there hands concernynge your booke of orders for placynge of the countrie people; for, there is greate bragge made of there S'mon, that they are ſoe much goode to you, which the countrie woulde never doe the like. And ſoe I leave you all this tyme, committinge you to God. Your loving brother John Gibb, to his power.
This to be delivered to William Hyde, at the olde Hoſpital."
It is not unlikely that this was the ſame John Gib, a Scotchman, who was an old ſervant of king James, and of whom Wilſon, in his Life of that Monarch, p. 219, records a remarkable anecdote, of his being kicked by the King, who afterwards, finding that he had been in an error, knelt down to entreat Gib's pardon.

[4] John Dackombe, eſq. Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, was knighted Aug. 31, 1616.

doe it, yet it will not be in ſuch haſt but our adverſaryes will have their full tyme to croſſe us both with the King and with Mr. Attorney Generall if they can, and the hazard of loſing all our chardge of all the fees before it cometh to paſſe the King's hand. I am in great doubt wheather it be not beſt to leave our earneſt ſute for the drawing or making ready of our booke untill the King hath been at Leiceſter[1], and we perceeve how the buſines will prove; and now only to labour to make ſure to them of their booke; for we weare better (yf ſo it might be) that we ſhould continue to hold it, as we doe by the patents we have, durante beneplacito; but that we cannot doe, if the incorporating goe forward; which yf the King reſolve that it ſhall, then it will lye in this queſtion, wheather the warrant we have, and our meanes to mayntaine it, will kepe them from obteining a new warrant for Cave from the King; or be able to ſtay ſome of the neceſſary warrants of the three underofficers (that muſt make readie this booke, and allow it with their hands before it be offered to his Majeſtie) from ſuffering them to have their booke ingroſſed with a blanke; for either want of a new warrant from the King, or the ſure ſtanding of either the ſheref (or of either of the Atturnes for us uppon pretenſe of our warrant), will keepe them from proceeding; and then either Cave may give over in diſpayer, or Gibb may be glad to agree to this, or uppon ſome particular perſon that we like of, if the incorporation go forward, or the King may conclude of them. Or at leaſt we ſhall ſee (after the brunt is paſt) what is beſt for us to doe, better than now, and not hazard all out ſo much chardges. Now, the caſe ſtanding thus, Mr. Wadland is wonderfully deſirous to be gone hence on Thurſday in the morning ſo early as to be at Leiceſter on Friday at night; and therefore I would intreat you (if you may poſſibly) that you would be at London, and ſpeak with him, on Wenſday at night, to confer and conclude with him on the premiſſes. He will leave his man Edward here, after he is gone himſelf, three weekes, to doe any good that he can in the matter, which will be almoſt as much as his maſter. And ſo, craving pardon for my tedious ſcribbling, with my dutie to my Ladie, I cōmend yourſelf, ſhe, and all yours, unto the ſafe keping of the great Lord Keeper of Iſrael. London, this Thurſday in the morning [June .... 1616]. Your moſt aſſured, to his uttermoſt power, THOMAS SACHEVERILL.

"Since I did underſtand of Bailyes maſter, Mr. Corat, that Baily tould him abſolutely that he would not make their booke readie for us; whereuppon going to Mr. Chauncelor with our warrant, I requeſted his commandment to Mr. Baily, written uppon our warrant, by his kinſman Mr. Edward Thomas (to whom you ſpake), who did go with me to Baily; who ſayd that he had delivered Gibb the paper booke agayne now this morning, peremptorily denying to put in our name in their boke, as ackting verry unreaſonable. But, through Mr. Thomas his perſuaſion, he hath promiſed to draw one for us after tomorrow; having before alledged that he did aſſure himſelf Gibb would get a contrary warrant before we ſhould be able to bring ours to be ſigned by the King, and ſo we ſhould loſe a great deal more chardges. Yet we thought good to let there be at leaſt a paper booke drawne for us, that ſo we may come by a coppy, which otherwiſe we know not how to get. I have met Gibb twiſe to-day; at firſt ſtarke mad; the latter tyme he came to more temper than the former; he was going to Mr. Dackombe's, to have wyled there, but founde him not at home; and ſince, it ſeemeth, he was with Sir Roger, who, he ſaith, will meet with Dackombe, and Gibb ſaith he is his elder brother.

To the right worſhipfull Sir William Heirick, knight, at Richmond, with ſpeede."

24. "After a million of hartye thanks from us all; theſe are only to ſignifie unto you two things by occaſion of your laſt letter directed unto me. The former, that (the matter having bene in that danger which you write of) we feare leaſt the ſame occaſion that made him ſo willing to have given it over, may mak him ſtill (and now in your ſo long abſence from him) leſſe willing to effect the buſines, or even to neglect it and to doe nothing in it. And therefore we thinke that it would be a happye thing for us, yf your affayres might permitt you to be here (in the manner you have ſollicited him in that matter) where the King ſhal be here; and that our wiſh for your preſence here at that tyme may be alſo the more by reaſon of Mr. Sherman's geaſts lyeing (as you write) at his houſe. The other matter is, that I perceave that a wrong information is given unto Mr. Dackombe touching the ſumme of the whole pencion payed to the Hoſpitall in former tymes; which is not £255. as you write, but only 238*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* I dare ſay uppon myne owne certeine knowledge. There be indeed two other pencions (the one myne of £10. and the other Mr. Rudiard's of £6. a yere), both making up £16. which with the 238*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* doeth make a ſumme nere to £255. And hence (I think) it came, that Gibb did informe you of that ſumme; becauſe both he and Mr. Sherman have ſought by this meanes to get our ſayd pencions away from us (as well as the maſterſhip of the Hoſpitall from the Maior), even by getting the King's grant of them to the Hoſpitall in ꝑpetuity; which you know will make voyde our patents, that be only durante beneplacito. But, as I knew you would not be any meanes to further them in hurting of us; ſo I aſſure you, that it hath cauſed a wrong information to be given to Mr. Dackombe; for, 1. neither of the ſayd pencions be any of the Hoſpitall payments; but both of them are altogeather and mearely ariſing out of the diſſolved Church of Newark, without reſpect of the Hoſpitall; at the diſſolution of which Church and Colledge, when the ꝑſons (that before had their livings in it) wear all put to their pencions for their lives, in lieu and conſideration of their livings (there being therein two companyes), the Canons weare allowed £10. apiece, and the other company (which weare called Vickars) weare allowed £6. apiece. Now my pencion was originally one Wullock's pencion, who was one of the Canons of Newarke; and Mr. Rudiard's £6. was one of the Vicker's pencions, namely, old Parſon Heathcot's of Elſton, untill within 16 yeres agoo, when Mr. Rudiard ſucceded him, and gott it to be newly put into his patent (as the conſideration wherefore the King ſhould pay it to him) that he ſhould adminiſter the cōmunion in the Hoſpital for it. But for my pencion of the £10. (after the firſt Canon that had it for his life, uppō the conſideration of his living which he loſt by the diſſolution of the church in the 2 of Edw. VI.) the next that had it had it given him to pray in the Towne of Leiceſter (without any mention of the Hoſpitall), and that becauſe the Towne was a parcell of the Dutchye, whence the ſayd pencion is payed; and becauſe they loſt (by the diſſolution of the ſayd Church of Newark) that preaching which the Towne did enjoy by it when it ſtode. And with that expreſs cōſideration alone (to pray in the Towne of Leiceſter as parcell of the Dutchie) the Preachers of Leiceſter from tyme to tyme have had it expreſſed in their patents. So that (as it is moſt certeine that neither it nor Mr. Rudiard's £6. be any part of the Hoſpitall's whole pencion or payments; but of another nature, meerly and expreſsly ariſing out of the Church, as it is a diſtinct thyng from the Hoſpitall, and the Hoſpitall from it,) ſo it maketh it to be an untruth (that cānot be truly affirmed or ſaid) that ſo much as £255. hath beene payed ſince Edwarde the Seconde tyme, or frō the firſt founding of the ſayd Hoſpitall, becauſe the two pencions of £10. and £6. have beene payed but ſince Edward the VI. his tyme, and not as Hoſpitall payments at all, but for other reſpects and cōſiderations. And therefore (yf I finde oportunity) I will make Mr. Dackombe to be better informed in the poynts of the true ſuffies of all the Hoſpitall payments, when he paſſeth by us. But Gibb's meaning in that muſt be good, becauſe he doeth well know the difference, and did in playne termes ꝑmiſe me not to meddle at all with our two pencions; and did himſelf tell me that he knew the whole Hoſpitall pay to be but 238*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* I pray God, therefore, that he doe carry a truer meaning to the Towne than he doeth unto us; for I doe heare by one in ſecret, that Mr. Loveden hath written to Mr Sherman this laſt weeke that there is ſome hope to get Mr. Dackombe (our frend) out of the buſines, by reaſon we pforme not with him; and therefore I thinke Mr. Loveden did heare by Gibb of that alteration in Mr. Dackombe which you founde, and did reporte in your laſt letter. What is to be conjectured thereby, I leave unto youreſelf. And ſo, wiſhing that (touching your coming) which I dare not requeſt, I take leave, with my dewtyfull remēbrance of my Ladie, and moſt hartye prayers for yourſelf and all that is yours. Your W. much boundē and to be com̄anded, Thomas Sacheverill.

---

[1] The King viſited Leiceſter in 1612, 1614, and 1616. See vol. II. p. 627.

Leiceſter, the 9th of Auguſt, 1616."

25. "Right worſhipfull; after our hartieſt commendacōns, with thanks for yor kinde remembrance unto us in yor letter concernynge Mr. Dackombe, the new Chauncellar of the Duchie, ſince whych tyme we have not bene unmindful; and nowe have ſent upp this bearer, Roger Cotes, one of or Chamberlins, unto yu, that, by yr Worſhipp's directions, he may provide a ſilver and gilte cupp with a cover, as to yr diſcretion ſhal be thought fitt; deſiring yu to com̄ende the ſayde cuppe to Mr. Chauncellar, as a ſmall taſt of our faithfull love and true affection towards him, with much deſire of contynuance of his honble love and favour towards our poore towne, being one of the moſt auncient townes in all the wholl Duchie. Thus beinge (as wee allwaies have been) bold to trouble you, wee com̄end you to the protection of the Allmightie; and allwaies reſt your Worpp's verie lovinge freinds,

"To the right worſhipfull our verie lovinge frend Sir William Heyricke, knight, bee theſe d'd.

"Leiceſter, this laſt of June, 1616."

Will. Ive, Maior.
Robart Heyricke.
W. Morton.
James Ellis.
James Andrewe.
Thomas Parker.
Thomas Manbie."

26. "Towchyng the cup which you wrote of for Mr. Chauncellar, I red your letter to Mr. Maior; and though we be in poor eſtate, yet they geve you great thanks for your care of us, and are very willing to perfourm yt you doe think well of; and to that end have partly ſent up this bringer, Mr. Chamberlin Cotes, who, I pray you, in anny caſe let him be with you at the delyvery, as though he brought it of purpoſe from Leiceſtar. Thus, with my kyndeſt love to youreſelfe and my Lady, I end; com̄ending you both, with all yours, to the bleſſed protection of the Allmighty. Leiceſter, this 1 of July, 1616.

Your loving brother, Robart Heyricke."

27. After many harty thanks; firſt unto God, for directing and proſpering your endeavours ſo happily as he hath; and next unto yourſelf, for your ſo great pains and care taken in the behalf of this Hoſpital; theſe are only at this time to certifye you, in caſe you have not already reſolved about the form of the badge, that my father and I do both think that a little roume would do well for that purpoſe, as fit to ſignifye that this King is their ſecond friend[1]. But for the ſeale[2] and the badge both, wee ſhall be the better able to give advice, if there be neede, after we have ſeen the device, and you wryte that you will ſend it hither by the next fit meſſenger; for then it will be time enough, becauſe neither of them do neede ſo much haſte but that you may well allow yourſelf time enough before you reſolve of them. And ſo I ceaſe to trouble you any further at this time; with my humble duty to my Lady, and my harty prayers for yourſelf and all yours. Leiceſter, the 7th of January. Your worſhip's much beholden, and ready to be com̄anded,

Thomas Sacheverill."

28. "Right worſhippfull; may yt pleaſe you to underſtande, wee, whoſe names are underwritten, are bould both to crave your advice, and to acquaint you with a grievance which not onely ourſelves but many others doe undergoe. Soe yt is: yt hath pleaſed his Majeſtie, both by his publique proclamation beareinge date the 24th of March, 1618, and by his gratious letters pattents beareinge date the 29th of March, 1617, to ſignifie his Highnes pleaſure, that the ſtaple for wool and woolfells ſhould be removed from beyond the ſeas, and that from thenceforth the ſtaple ſhould be houlden at certeine citties and townes in the ſaid proclamation and pattent mentioned: and for that there was not a ſufficient number of merchants in thoſe places to meinteine the ſaid ſtaple, and by reaſon of a pattent graunted to the right honourable Lord Fenton, with power to nominate 200 men to bee free merchants of the ſtaple, diverſe of his Majeſtie's ſubjects that have uſed tradeinge in wools (for the better meintenaunce of themſelves and families) have not onely been drawne to buie their freedomes with great ſummes of mony, namely IIII*l.* the man, to the utter undoeinge of many of them, but alſo have taken corporall oath to be juſticiable to the Companie of Merchants, and to doe nothinge that may be derogative or hurtfull to the generalitie of the ſaid Staple. Yet, notwithſtandinge theſe paſſages, wee heare that the pattent either is, or like to be, called in queſtion; which gives cauſe to feare that wee ſhall both loſe our monies and priviledge, except yt pleaſe the honourable Courte of Parliament to releive us, by takinge order that wee ſhall either have our monies repayd us, or our freedome continued, which ſhall ſeeme beſt to their wiſedomes. Nowe our humble ſuite to your Worſhip is, yf you would be pleaſed to adviſe us, whether wee ſhould exhibitt a bill for this grieveance into the Parliament-houſe or not; or, if there be one alreadie preſerred by any others, then that yt would pleaſe you to be meanes for us of Leiceſter, that we may fare as others do.

Soe ſhall wee ever pray for your Worſhip's proſperous ſucceſſe; and reſt, ever at your ſervice,

"To the right worſhipful Sir William Heiricke, knight, Burgeſſe for the Burrough of Leiceſter, give theiſe.

Nicholas Gilliot.
James Ellis.
Ric. Inge."

Leiceſter, Aprill 29, 1621."

In 1647, when the parliament ſeized the revenues of the crown, the poor of Trinity Hoſpital were included in the wreck. But the Corporation of Leiceſter (who, greatly to their honour, have ever been conſiderable benefactors ſince they firſt held the wardenſhip,) laudably appropriated a portion of their own inheritance towards their maintenance, till the year 1650, when the following fee-farm rents were granted by Parliament to truſtees, and by them aſſigned to the mayor of Leiceſter and his aſſiſtants, maſters of the old Hoſpital in the Newark, for paying the poor people in the ſaid Hoſpital for ever:

	£.	s.	d.
Out of the fee-farm rents of the manor of Earl Shilton — —	1	1	10
Out of 38 meſſuages, half a yard-land, and one fourth of cuſtomary lands and parcels of demeſne lands and meadows, and ſix half-yard lands called Deer lands, and 172 acres of demeſne lands	18	12	8¾
Out of the increaſe of the cuſtomary and demeſne lands — —	0	11	6
Out of hens and eggs payable by tenants in Shilton and Elmeſthorpe,	0	16	0¼
Out of cottages in Shilton —	5	19	3¼
Out of Conygree-cloſe in Shilton, and 14 acres called Smith Waſt, and out of the warren, and Shilton Halby wood, and the fiſhing — — —	4	6	9
Shilton milne — —	2	7	4
The fee-farm rent of Tooley Park, containing 578 acres — —	40	0	0
The fee-farm rent of the manor of Hinckley — —	24	3	7½
Hinckley wood — —	3	5	0
The fee-farm rent of the manor of Foxton — — —	4	9	2¼
The fee-farm rent of the manor of Stapleford — — —	23	6	8
The fee-farm of the manor of Eaſt Langton — — —	9	7	3
The fee-farm for the horſe-milne and two tenements in the town of Leiceſter	4	3	4

---

[1] See the inſcription here alluded to in p. 348.

[2] The ſeal is noticed in p. 340.

The fee farm of the lands, tenements, meadows, and paſtures, of the late hoſpital of St. John Baptiſt and St. Leonard, granted to the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter — —				31	12	3
The fee-farm reſerved out of the Town-obit lands, and the lands and tenements of St. Margaret's guild, granted to the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter				42	18	1
The fee-farm iſſuing out of the lands, tenements, &c. belonging to the college of the Virgin Mary near the caſtle of Leiceſter, granted to the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter — —				20	8	11
The fee-farm iſſuing out of divers houſes in the Newark, with the lands, tenements, &c. belonging to Corpus Chriſti guild, granted to the mayor and burgeſſes — — —				18	8	6¼
Parcel of the lands and poſſeſſions, &c. of the hoſpital and priory of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, &c. out of the free and cuſtomary tenements in Bareſby in the pariſh of Aſhby Folvile —				2	8	9
The free and cuſtomary tenants in Gaddeſby, in the pariſh of Rothley,				5	17	0
From the free and cuſtomary	£.	s.	d.
tenements in South Croxton	0	17	6
In Somerby —	0	19	7
In South Marefield —	0	1	4
In Tilton — —	0	6	6
In Keame — —	3	11	0
In Saxulby — —	0	17	4
In all, — —				7	16	0
From the free and cuſtomary tenants in Grimſton, in the pariſh of Rothley,				1	5	0
From the free and cuſtomary tenants in Caldwell and Wickham —				2	0	3
From the free and cuſtomary tenants in Wartnaby — —				3	18	8
The fee-farm rent for tithe of grain and hay in the pariſh of Gaddeſby, with a barn to the ſaid tithe belonging				11	13	4
				289	17	3¾

The order of payments and allowances to the poor in the old Hoſpital.

	£.	s.	d.
The chamberlains are to pay on every Friday 3*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.*; that is, 6*s.* 8*d.* apiece to the ten keepers; 8*d.* to the widows of St. John's; and 5*d.* to be ſpent in bread and drink, and diſtributed among the officers of the houſe; which in the year amounts to — — —	176	3	0
Item, to the four men, about Eaſter or Spring, to pay for proviſion of wood and coals — — —	14	15	4
Item, drovers' money, payable half on Aſh-wedneſday, and half on Good Friday	2	0	0
Item, to Mr. Mayor, as maſter of the ſaid Hoſpital — —	13	6	8
To the chaplain, for reading daily prayers, to be paid quarterly —	5	0	0
To the lecturer of St. Martin's, for preaching there once in the quarter	10	0	0
Item, to the vicar of All Saints —	6	0	0
Item, for repairs of the ſaid houſe	4	0	0
Item to the widows of St. John's, to buy them a load of coals, 6*s.* 8*d.* or	0	7	8
Item, more to the ſaid widows, on All Saints day, in ready money —	0	2	0

Particular ſums paid by the chamberlains to the ſaid Hoſpital on Friday before St. Andrew's day yearly.

For the maintenance of the lamp or watch-candle — —	1	0	0
For bread and wine for the communion 6*s.* 8*d.* — — —	0	7	8
For ſixpenny-money — —	2	10	0
For fivepenny-money —	2	1	8
For halfpenny-money, alias 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* alias	10	16	8
For livery-money for 50 of the poor yearly, to buy them gowns, at 4*s.* apiece	10	0	0

Soon after the Reſtoration, the old payments of the Hoſpital returned nearly back through their former channel, and from its own poſſeſſions.

	£.	s.	d.
The whole ſums at that time allowed by the king for maintenance of the Hoſpital of the Holy Trinity amounted to	229	1	7
Towards which the Corporation paid in fee-farm rents, by two equal portions of 56*l.* 13*s.* 10¾*d.* at Lady-day and Michaelmas; which fee-farm rents were for certain lands and tenements belonging to certain religious houſes, diſſolved, and granted in fee-farm to the Corporation;	113	7	9½
For the lands belonging to the Hoſpitals of St. John and St. Leonard	15	16	1½
Town-obit lands St. Margaret's guild } —	21	9	0½
The college of the bleſſed Virgin Mary juxta Caſtrum — —	10	4	5½
Corpus Chriſti guild —	7	6	2¾
Rents of houſes in the Newark, collected by the Corporation —	1	18	0½
Total for the half year's rent of all theſe,	56	13	10¾
Theſe the auditors allowed towards payment of the poor, and at their audit at Lady-day paid over and above in money	37	1	1
Which amounted in the whole to	93	14	11¾
Alſo at their audit at Michaelmas for the fee-farm rents the auditors paid in ready money, over and above the allowance of thoſe rents, 11*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* in toto	68	13	4
Alſo the Corporation was to receive at Michaelmas of the auditors at Tutbury	66	13	4
All which three ſeveral ſums amounted to being the whole and only allowance of the King for the ſaid Hoſpital, towards their maintenance, attire, gowns, chaplains, repairs, and other neceſſary proviſions[1].	229	1	7

Fees uſually paid to the auditor at Michaelmas only upon payment of the fee-farm rents.

	£.	s.	d.
Exchequer fees for the rents of St. John and St. Leonard — —	0	17	8
For Corpus Chriſti guild —	0	8	4
For the Newark — —	0	5	4
Debentures — —	0	2	8
Acquittances to Mr. Receiver —	0	8	0
For Town obit-lands — —	0	16	4
For Quietus eſt — —	0	5	0
In toto — — —	2	15	4

In 1683 the receipts were theſe:	£.	s.	d.
Paid by Mr. Dyſon, —	113	13	11¼
Other rents paid by ditto, —	25	6	8
From the honour of Tutbury,	66	13	4
	205	13	11¼

The money which had been advanced for the poor during Cromwell's uſurpation, and expences in petitions, &c. afterwards, left the Hoſpital indebted to the Corporation, in 1684, 546*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* Till that year the warden's fee of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* was conſtantly paid; and the ſum is ſtill charged to the debt due from the Hoſpital to the Corporation[2].

Sir William Heyrick in 1614 had laid the foundation of a ſmall addition to the income of the poor of the Trinity Hoſpital, by a voluntary gift of 20*s.* for an annual ſermon on Whit-monday in the Hoſpital-yard;

---

[1] Carte, MS. out of the long paper-book in cuſtody of the Mayor, fol. 28.

[2] Throſby.

and 20*s.* more for the poor; when a collection was alſo made from ſuch inhabitants of the town as choſe to attend divine ſervice. And this for a long ſeries of years was regularly continued by his deſcendants. At the ſermon in 1687 the collection amounted to £9.

Among ſeveral other preachers on thoſe occaſions, we find the names of Dr. Bright, of Loughborow; Dr. Camfeild, of Ilſton; Mr. Beverege, of Barrow; Mr. Alſop, of Langton; Dr. Aleſounder, of Thurcaſton; Mr. Faulkingham, of Glenfield; Mr. Herricke, of Harborough; Mr. Rogers, of Segrave; and Mr. Pagett, of Barwell.

In 1695, Sir Nathan Wrighte, being then recorder of Leiceſter, drew out an account of the income of the Hoſpital; in which it appeared that there was received from the king, before the diſſolution, 216*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*; ſince, for a chaplain, £5.; for repairs, £4.; and for fuel, by gift, £4.; in all, 229*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

Expended thus:	£.	s.	d.
To 100 poor men and women, to each 7*d.* weekly — —	2	18	4
Ten keepers, each 10*d.* —	0	8	9
	3	7	1
For the year — —	174	8	4
Wood-money, —	10	0	0
Halfpenny-money, the gift of Simpkin Simpſon, — —	11	16	8
Fivepenny-money, the gift of Lady Harvey, — —	2	1	8
Sixpenny-money, the founder's gift,	2	10	0
Lamp-money — —	1	0	0
Livery-money —	12	0	0
To ſix widows of St. John's —	2	15	0
	216	11	8
Chaplain, repairs, and fuel-money, ſtated above — —	13	0	0
In all	229	11	8

From what cauſe is now not known, but, we believe, from a perſonal offence which had been given by ſome leading men in the Corporation, the annual ſermon was diſcontinued in 1698, as appears by the following letter, written that year,

"To William Herrick, Eſq. Beaumanor.

"Sir, you were pleaſed, laſt Whitſontide, to provide no preacher; nor make the allowance to the poor of the Old Hoſpital, which had been continued ſo long, to the honour and eſteeme of your family. If any offence hath been taken from any particular perſon, I hope you will not impute that to the whole body; eſpecially when you conſider that the charity, given by your anceſtors, is the cauſe of a further increaſe and releife to the poor on that day, which, upon conſideration, yourſelfe will think it great pitty to take away. I beg the favour of an anſwer to your faithful ſervant, JOHN CRACROFT, Mayor."

The anſwer to this application does not appear. But the loſs which the Hoſpital had ſuſtained was ſoon after ſupplied by an equal benefaction from the Rev. William Staveley, rector of Coſſington.

"The chief endowment of the Hoſpital," ſays Mr. Carte in 1712, "was by an annual rent-charge iſſuing out of the lands of the Dutchy, which reſtored to each of the poor 7*d.* weekly. But, after the ſale of the chief rents in the time of king Charles the Second, the revenue being leſſened, the number of the poor (by direction of the officers in the Dutchy Court, as the Lord Keeper Wrighte informed me) was reduced to about 90. And they would have a poor ſubſiſtence, were it not for ſome modern benefactors, and the yearly contributions of the members of the Corporation and other inhabitants of the town. The King, as heir to the Lancaſter eſtates, has the ſole diſpoſal of the places when vacant; and his deputy is the Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter."

The ſum of £1125. was given in 1766 by Mr. John Holmes, an inhabitant of Leiceſter, on condition that the Corporation ſhould pay him intereſt for life.

Mr. Thomas Heſilrige, Lady Moyer, the late rev. Gerard Andrewes, and the late Joſeph Cradock Eſq. may alſo be added to the liſt of benefactors [1].

Previous to 1768, the Mayor uſed to nominate to vacancies, at the end of three months after vacancies occurred, as of right. In that year, in conſequence of ſearches from an attempted innovation by the Corporation of the Dutchy right within the Caſtle-view) ſome of their leading members having entertained an idea that the Corporation magiſtrates had a concurrent juriſdiction with the county-magiſtrates therein), it was diſcovered that the right of preſentation was in the Chancellor of the Dutchy, and in the Mayor only in the caſe of his omiſſion for three months; which accounts for ſtopping the payment till that time. Lord Strange, then Chancellor, aſſerted his right; and it has ever ſince continued with his ſucceſſors, who have paid only ſuch attention to recommendations as they have thought proper.

Our preſent moſt gracious Sovereign, having been informed that the building was much out of repair, directed an eſtimate to be prepared; which was accordingly made by an eminent ſurveyor at Derby, to the amount of £1600; from which ſum £1000. being deducted for the lead and other old materials (the preſent building being ſlated, and reduced about one third in the width), the remainder of the expence (being £600.) was defrayed by the royal bounty.

Before the late alteration, the old building conſiſted of three ailes, of which only the Northern one is now ſtanding, what is now the front wall having before been a range of fine arched pillars on the ſide of a ſpacious aile. Mr. Carte deſcribes it as "comprehending, under one large roof covered with lead, a chapel at one end of it, and cells or apartments for the poor, divided into ten wards, to each of which belonged a nurſe; and adjoining to the building a large kitchen, with other proper offices."

At the Eaſt end is ſtill the chapel in its original ſtate (the ante-chapel wider from North to South than the chancel), which has a handſome window on each ſide. The Eaſt window conſiſts of three lancets.

Under the North window, on an altar-tomb, a figure of a lady [2] in a rich mantle, with a high-ſtanding cape, long ſleeves reaching to her wriſts, garment folded over her feet; angels at her head ſupport two cuſhions, the undermoſt taſſeled. An embattled moulding to the ſlab, and four ſhields on the ſide of the tomb.

The chaplain to this Hoſpital holds his place by patent from the Dutchy.

The rev. Mr. Fox, vicar of the adjoining pariſh of St. Mary, in the memory of perſons now living, held this office, and read the daily prayers himſelf. Since his time, the chaplains have uſually hired one of the almſmen to do this part of their duty.

The rev. John-Dawes Roſs is the preſent chaplain, and ſigns the preſentations for admiſſion as ſuch.

The Confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital has an augmentation to his ſtipend, by patent from the Dutchy, during pleaſure, for which he preaches four times a year in this chapel; and divine ſervice is alſo performed twice a year by the vicar of St. Mary's.

The following orders were exemplified under the ſeal of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, in February, 1780:

An augmentation of forty pounds a year being ordered by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty to the uſe of this Hoſpital; and the Dutchy Court having directed that, after Lady-day 1780, the regulations herein-after mentioned ſhall take place; the following orders were printed, for the information of the foremen, keepers, and poor of this hoſpital.

"It is ordered, that the ſeveral annual ſums following (inſtead of being divided and paid as heretofore), ſhall, after Lady-day 1780, be made one common fund for the purpoſes herein-after mentioned:

The Michaelmas rents and gifts, £116 18 4

---

[1] See the Returns made to Parliament, p. 132.

[2] This is the monument deſcribed by Mr. Wyrley, the only one which remained in 1590. See p 339.

	£.	s.	d.
The Lady-day rents and gifts, —	79	15	4
Lady Moyer's donation, — —	20	0	0
Mr. Holmes's donation, — —	45	0	0
The drovers money, livery money, lamp money, half-penny money, and ſix-penny money, — — — —	23	6	6
The old pay of 8*d.* per week, to the eight keepers, — — — —	13	17	4
Old pay of 7*d.* per week, to 80 poor,	121	6	8
The old allowance for repairs, —	4	0	0
The like for fuel, — — —	9	11	1
	433	15	3
To the above muſt be added, a ſaving made to the poor in 1776, by the voluntary bounty of the Dutchy officers, in giving up all their fees and poundage, which till then had been paid to them out of the Dutchy allowance ever ſince the reign of Edward the Sixth, amounting to the annual ſum of	14	15	0
And his Majeſty's additional grant per annum is — — — — —	40	0	0
Making in the whole,	488	11	0

By the new orders, this ſum of £488. 11*s.* is directed to be paid and applied as follows.

	Weekly allow. £.	s.	d.	Annual amount. £.	s.	d.
To the eight keepers, for ſoap for waſhing, — —	0	1	8	4	6	8
To the eight keepers, 2*s.* 4*d.* each, in lieu of all other allowances and perquiſites,	0	18	8	48	10	8
To the two women entitled to Mr. Billers's donation, and excluſively thereof, 10*d.* each, — — —	0	1	8	4	6	8
To the remaining 80 poor, 1*s.* 10*d.* each, — —	7	6	8	381	6	8
So that the ſum to be divided on Friday morning in every week is £8. 8*s.* 8*d.*; which amounts to £438. 10*s.* 8*d.* a year, — — —	8	8	8	438	10	8
To an apothecary, to be appointed by the maſter annually, to viſit the poor in ſickneſs, and for medicines, not to exceed — — — — — —				10	0	0
For fuel, not to exceed — —				11	0	0
For lamps and candles, not to exceed				5	0	0
To the foremen, for collecting the rents, 7*s.* 6*d.* at Lady-day, and 7*s.* 6*d.* at Michaelmas, — — — —				0	15	0
And the remaining ſum of £23. 5*s.* 4*d.* together with all ſavings of pay for vacant houſes three months after every vacancy, are to be kept as a fund by the maſter and aſſiſtants for the future repairs of the hoſpital, — — —				23	5	4
Total as above —				488	11	0

All the reſt of the poors money to be divided as heretofore accuſtomed.

It is alſo ordered, that all the rents and gifts ſhall be continued to be received by the foremen in the uſual manner; but they are to pay the ſame over to the chamberlains of Leiceſter for the time being, to be carried to the account of the above fund.

Item, The chamberlains are, out of the ſaid fund, to iſſue and pay to the foremen the above ſum of £8. 8*s.* 8*d.* every Friday morning weekly, to be by them immediately diſtributed amongſt the keepers and the poor in manner above-mentioned.

Item, After every vacancy, the weekly pay for the vacant houſes is to be ſtopped for three calendar months, and applied towards the expence of keeping the hoſpital in good repair.

And, laſtly, all the keepers and poor are at their own expence to keep in good repair the windows, bedſteads, floors, ſhutters, partitions, doors, hinges, locks and faſtnings, of their reſpective rooms or houſes (every one his and her own); and in default thereof, the foremen are to repair the ſame, and ſtop the expences out of the pay of the defaulters, to the intent the revenue of the hoſpital may not be charged with the repairs of the rooms, nor any one perſon contribute to the expences of the repairs of another perſon, but that every one of the keepers and poor may keep his and her room in the aforeſaid particulars in fit and decent repair."

A view of the old building, taken in 1776, is given in Plate XXVIII. fig. 17; and fig. 18. ſhews the preſent building; over the door of which is inſcribed:

"Founded
By Henry Earl of Lancaſter, 1331; — Rebuilt —
By George III. 1776."

And on a frame within the chapel:

"Henry Griſmond, duke of Lancaſter, and earl of Leiceſter. He was Founder of this Hoſpital in the year of our Lord God 1332;
and ſince granted,
by charter by our late gracious Sovereign King James, to be called the Holy Trinity, the 12th year of his reign."

In this hoſpital is a remarkably large bell-metal pot, called the Duke of Lancaſter's porridge-pot, which holds ſixty-one gallons[1]; and a curious old nutmeg-grater, called Queen Elizabeth's Pocket-piece, ornamented with a border of roſes, and quartered; and on the top of it is engraved ANNO REGNI REGINÆ ELIZABETH: ANGLIÆ," On one ſide "THINKE WEL, AND SAY WEL, BUT RATHER DO WEL;" on the other ſide, "FLEE IDILNES, AND BE WEL OCCUPIED, 1579." On the bottom, "THIS BELONGITH . TO . THE . OLDE OSPITALL[2]."

In the open yard, near the door of the chapel, is placed a large ſtone, which appears to have been the baſe of an old font[3].

John Whatton[4], eſq. of the Newark, died in 1656.

Thomas Lanie, of the Newark, (ſon of John Lanie of Cratfield, Suffolk, and brother to John Lanie, recorder of Suffolk,) entered his pedigree in the Viſitation of 1619. His wife was Gertrude, daughter of John Hunte of Lyndon in Rutland. His arms were, Quarterly, 1. and 4, Argent on a bend between two fleurs de lis Gules, a lion paſſant; 2. .... a chevron engrailed between three cinquefoils, and on a chief Gules, a lion paſſant ......; 3. Gules, a creſcent Ermine within an orle of martlets Or. Creſt, a mermaid proper, wreathed about the temples, Or and Vert, holding a ſprig[5].

John Sherman, of the Newark, entered his pedigree at the ſame Viſitation[5]. By Anne, daughter of William Cave, he had two ſons, William, aged 31; and Thomas, aged 18; and ſix daughters, the eldeſt of whom, Faith, was married to Henry Heming, then alſo of the Newark. His arms; Argent, a lion rampant Sable, charged on the ſhoulder with an annulet Argent, between three holly leaves Vert. Creſt, a ſea-lion ſejant Ermine[6]. His widow occurs among the benefactors to the Hoſpital.

The name of Alderman Becket, of the Newark, is alſo among the liſt of benefactors.

Edmund Brudenell[7], eſq. of the Newark (who married Mary daughter of Thomas Staveley, eſq. of Belgrave) died in February, 1686-7; and his brother, Richard Brudenell, eſq. Feb. 28, 1687-8.

---

[1] See Plate XXVIII. fig. 19.
[2] Ibid. fig. 20—23.
[3] Ibid. fig. 24.
[4] See his epitaph, and ſome account of him, under the hiſtory of St. Martin's pariſh.
[5] See Plate XXVII. fig. 25.
[6] Ibid. fig. 26.
[7] See an account of his deſcendants in vol. II. under Church Langton.

Mr. Carte, in 1712, ſpeaking of the Newark ſays, "The church ſtood in Mr. Carter's garden, and the foundations of it were dug up about 1690, when the garden was reduced into the form which it is now of. There are three very fair houſes, belonging to William Franke[1], eſq. Lawrence Carter[2], eſq. and Mrs. Stephens; but they are all of late erection. I believe that Mrs. Stephens's ſtands where the prebendal houſe of Thomas Wigſton was ſituated, becauſe the houſe which William Wigſton built for his two chantry prieſts adjoins to it; over the portal of which there is his coat of arms. Of the old buildings ſcarcely any thing remains except this houſe of Wigſton's, and another much like it now ſettled on the vicar of St. Mary's."

Of the three "fair houſes," that which was Mr. Franke's was afterwards inhabited by the late Joſeph Bunney, eſq. and now by John Pares, eſq. an eminent manufacturer of hoſiery (who is owner of this Liberty); Mr. Carter's (formerly Skeffington houſe) was ſome time the reſidence of Mr. Coultman, and has ſince been ſold in lots; and Mrs. Stephens's, in which Mr. Wrighte the Recorder reſided, has been, with additions, converted into two houſes. Beſides theſe, there are ſeveral other good houſes in the Newark, which is now the handſomeſt part of the town.

In the Return made to Parliament in 1776, the Newark is entered as extraparochial[3]; and ſo continues. The expence of the poor that year was only 20*s.*; of which 13*s.* was for rent.

In 1783, the ſum raiſed for the poor of this Liberty was 18*l.* 12*s.*; in 1784, 33*l.* 18*s.*; in 1785, 10*l.* 2*s.*; medium, 20*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*

On ſix large tables in the chapel are recorded:

Benefactors of the perpetuities bequeathed towards the maintenance of the poor in the old Hoſpital.

	£.	s.	d.
Henry Plantagenet, earl of Griſmond, duke of Lancaſter, and earl of Leiceſter, the firſt and chief founder of it, A. D. 1332, for 110 poor people.
Sir William Heyrick, knt. gave 20*s.* for a ſermon on Whit-monday, and 20*s.* to the poor of the hoſpital for ever; but theſe charities have been withdrawn ſince 1698 by William Heyrick, late of Beaumanor, eſq. heir of the ſaid ſir William.
William Staveley, late rector of Coſſington, in the county of Leiceſter, ſupplied the ſaid defect, giving 20*s.* for a ſermon on the ſaid day exhorting to charity, and 20*s.* to the poor of the ſaid hoſpital; in all — —	2	0	0
The lady Mary Harvey gave out of her manor of Southorp called Fillibert's Court, and the manor of Southorp called Grey's Court, in the county of Glouceſter,	26	16	0
Mr. William Taylor, merchant-tailor of London, by will, dated May 6, 1619, gave an annuity of 40*s.* payable out of his lands in Bowden, co. Kent, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, to buy them oatmeal,	2	0	0
Mr. Robert Heyrick, thrice mayor of Leiceſter, by his will, dated June 14, 1618, gave out of his ground land, called the Grey or Franciſcan Friers in Leiceſter, to each of the then poor[4] one ſhilling, payable at or before Nov. 11,	5	10	0
Mr. Tobias Heyrick, rector of Houghton, co. Leiceſter, by will, dated June 13, 1627, gave out of the Grey Friers 2*s.* yearly, to two of the ſaid poor, payable the ſame day with the donation bequeathed by his father Robert Heyrick, —	0	2	0
Mr. John Heyrick, once mayor of Leiceſter, by will, dated July 17, 1633, gave two houſes in the Southgate, then of the rent of 40*s.* a year, which were both pulled down in the time of war[5]; the ground and backſides of them are in the tenure of Anne Webſter, widow, and of the rent of 20*s.* yearly; whereof 13*s* 4*d.* to the town, and 6*s.* 4*d.* to the hoſpital, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day,	0	6	8
Mrs. Mary Heyrick, ſpinſter, ſiſter of the ſaid John Heyrick, gave a little cloſe in the pariſh of St. Margaret, adjoining to the But-Cloſe, in tenure of George Palmer, which cloſe was afterwards confirmed to the ſaid hoſpital by her brother John Heyrick, by deed 28 Aug. 1626, and is of the rent of —	0	18	8
William Morton, clerk, ſon of William Morton, archdeacon of Durham, and grandſon of William Morton, thrice mayor of Leiceſter, gave one acre, called Mary Acre, in Burgeſs-meadow, in the tenure of John Hall, glazier, of the yearly rent of — — —	1	1	0
And alſo two meſſuages in St. Martin's pariſh, whereof one in the tenure of William Springthorp, cordwainer, —	1	0	0
The other in tenure of Jane Reed, ſpinſter, of the rent of —	0	15	0
Mr. William Ive, thrice mayor of Leiceſter, by deed dated 14 Car. I. gave an annuity of £5. 10*s.* out of a houſe in the Southgate, pulled down in time of war, and alſo out of two meadows near the water-mills called Newark Mills, to be paid the firſt week in clean Lent yearly,	5	10	0
Mrs. Jane Ive, wife of the ſaid William Ive, gave alſo an annuity of 20*s.* a year, payable out of the ſaid houſe and meadows the firſt week in clean Lent,	1	0	0
Mr. James Ellis, ſenior, twice mayor of Leiceſter, by will, dated Nov. 7, 1617, gave a piece of ground or orchard over againſt the Vineyard in the pariſh of All Saints, now in the tenure of William Noon the younger, of the yearly rent of	10	0	0
Mr. James Ellis, junior, once mayor, by will, dated Jan. 16, 1628, gave two meſſuages and a piece of ground lying on the Town-wall; whereof the one meſſuage was in the pariſh of St. Mary's, and then of the rent of £4. but was pulled down in time of war; but now the

---

[1] Arms granted to William Franke, of the New Works: Azure, a feſs embattled Ermine between two dexter arms in armour, feſs-ways, Argent, garniſhed Or. Creſt, out of a mural crown Or, an arm embowed in armour proper, holding a ſword Argent, hilt and pomel Or; fig. 28. (Harl. MSS. 1171. p 64. b.)—This William Franke was high ſheriff of the county in 1674. He married a daughter of Gilbert Armſtrong, of Rampſtone, co. Notts, eſq. and ſiſter of Katharine, the wife of John Heyrick, of the Grey Friers in Leiceſter, gent.; died in 1679, and was buried at St. Martin's, where ſee his epitaph; and occurs among the benefactors to the Hoſpital, p. 347. His ſon William Franke married Anne daughter of ſir Richard Levett, lord mayor of London in 1700; by whom he had a ſon, the Rev. Levett Franke, vicar of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln, who died in 1734; a daughter, married to the Rev. Caleb Robinſon, vicar of Glen; ſee p. 437; and ſeveral other children.

[2] Afterwards Sir Lawrence Carter, and a baron of the Exchequer. See his epitaph at St. Mary's, p. 319.

[3] "The Corporation, finding ſeveral inconveniences to ariſe from the exemption of the Caſtle, Newark, &c. from the franchiſes, made ſeveral attempts to have them brought under their juriſdiction, which at length they obtained a grant of, in the charter of 41 Eliz. in very ample terms; with a ſaving to all perſons of whatſoever rights, liberties, and juriſdictions, they had and enjoyed before the making of that charter." Carte, MS. 1712.—The Corporation-Magiſtrates have, therefore, a concurrent juriſdiction with thoſe of the County in all theſe places, except the Caſtle-view.

[4] The poor are now reduced to 90; and 4*l.* 10*s.* (being 1*s.* to each) is paid to them by Thomas Pares, jun. eſq. the preſent owner of the principal part of the Grey Friers.

[5] April 20, 1713, John Cooper, mayor, John Rogers, a deacon, and William Fox, vicar of St. Mary's, as arbitrators about differences relating to theſe two houſes (then rebuilt), determined that a leaſe ſhould be made from the hoſpital to Humphry Chapman and Thomas Gamble, executors of Robert Gamble, and from Lady-day laſt, for 999 years, under the clear yearly rent of £2. 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid half-yearly to the poor; and 13*s.* 4*d.* as a fee-farm rent to the town.

ground and backſide, with a dovecote, is in the tenure of John Atkinſon, gent. and of the rent of £2. 6*s*. 8*d*. payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — 2 6 8

The other meſſuage or tenement is in Parliament-lane, in the pariſh of All Saints, in tenure of Edward Chulmley, gent. and of the rent of £5. payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — 5 0 0

The piece of ground lying on the Town-wall adjoins to the orchard, garden, and backſide of the meſſuage or tenement of the ſaid Edward Chulmeley, and is in tenure of Lawrence Dawſon, of the yearly rent of 20*s*. payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — 1 0 0

Robert Brookeſby, eſq. by deed, dated Dec. 31, 5 Jac. I. gave an annuity of 26*s*. 8*d*. payable out of his lands and tenements in Great Aſhby at Michaelmas and Lady-day — — 1 6 8

He gave alſo an annuity of 13*s*. 4*d*. out of a meſſuage or tenement and two beaſts paſtures in Wartnaby, in tenure of Robert Briſcoe, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — — 0 13 4

Chriſtopher Tamworth, of Gray's Inn, eſq. by will [1], dated May 9, 1624, gave to the Corporation of Leiceſter £20. to purchaſe lands of inheritance for augmentation of the annual revenues of this hoſpital for relief of the poor there for ever; with which was purchaſed a cottage or tenement in Wheſton, ſix roods of land, and two beaſt-paſtures, now in tenure of John Green, and of the yearly rent of 1 0 0

Mr. John Clarke, twice mayor of Leiceſter, gave an annuity of £3. 6*s*. 8*d*. out of a piece of ground, barn, and malting-kiln, in the pariſh of St. Nicholas, in tenure of John Berkhead, ſenior, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — 3 6 8

Mr. John Norrice, ſenior, once mayor of Leiceſter, gave an annuity of £1. 13*s*. 4*d*. out of lands in Willoughby Waterleſs, which the earl of Stamford purchaſed of the ſaid Mr. Norrice, payable on Friday before Eaſter yearly, — 1 13 4

Mr. Hugh Watts, ſenior, once mayor of Leiceſter, by will, dated Feb. 1, 1642, gave an annuity of 28*s*. iſſuing out of a meſſuage in Shambles-lane, in the pariſh of St. Nicholas, in tenure of Anthony Biggs, baker, to buy for every of the poor a penny-loaf on the eve of Chriſtmas, Eaſter, and Whitſuntide, for ever, 1 8 0

Mr. Julius Billers, ſenior, gent. by will, Jan. 10, 1634, gave to the corporation £100. in truſt, to pay to the poor of this hoſpital £5. 12*s*. yearly, to be diſtributed equally among them on Tueſday before Eaſter, — — — 5 12 0

Mr. William Speechly, once mayor of Leiceſter, by will, dated Dec. 8, 1651, gave an annuity of 20*s*. out of his cloſes called The Foards, in the pariſh of Barwell and Stapleton, now in tenure of Thomas Smith, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, — — 1 0 0

Mr. John Nurſe, by will, gave an annuity of — — 0 13 4

John Hinman, of the Newark, yeoman, by deed 22 Oct. 1 Elizabeth, gave a third part of a yard-land arable, lying in St. Margaret's fields, in the tenure of John Harris, of the yearly value of 40*s*. and the bringing of a load of ſand and a load of clay yearly to the ſaid hoſpital, 2 0 0

Mr. John Hinde, ſenior, twice mayor, by his will, gave £10.; enjoining his executors and overſeers of his will to purchaſe a piece of land or ſome annuity with it, which might remain to the ſaid hoſpital for ever.

Mr. John Hind, junior, by will, dated Sept. 11, 1652, gave an annuity of 24*s*. out of a cloſe and parcel of ground, and two tenements, in the Northgate-ſtreet, joining upon the Mill-lane, to be paid upon St. Thomas's day yearly, — 1 4 0

Peter Palmer, of Leiceſter, labourer, by will, dated July 10, 1610, gave an annuity of 2*s*. out of an orchard and garden, and houſe thereon, called the Water Caggs, in tenure of George Mountney, gent. payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day yearly, — — 0 2 0

Margaret Hobby, widow, gave an annuity of 2*s*. 9*d*. out of a meſſuage in the Southgate, late in tenure of Robert Meſſenger, which was pulled down in the time of war; the ground and backſide thereof now in tenure of Robert Hartſhorne, payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, 0 2 6

John Smart, of Thurleſton, co. Leiceſter, yeoman, gave an annuity of 2*s*. 6*d*. out of a cloſe near his houſe, called the Lodge, payable July 16, or thereabouts, 0 2 6

Ralph Smalley, of Leiceſter, gent. 2 0 0

Mrs. Elizabeth Ware, daughter of Mr. William Morton, alderman, and thrice mayor, gave — — — 1 0 0

Beſides 40*s*. to St. John's hoſpital.

Mr. William Pippin, of Knighton, 1 0 0

Mr. John Clay, alderman, and twice mayor, gave — — 1 0 0

Beſides 10*s*. to the widows of St. Jones's.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cook gave £66. and Mr. Matthew Symons, her ſon-in-law, added to it £100. to buy £8. per annum, whereof £4. 18*s*. to buy 56 pair of ſtockings for 56 of the hoſpital, and 14*s*. to buy bread for 56 of the poor that have not ſtockings that year [the reſt for the widows of St. John's, viz. £2. 8*s*.] 5 12 0

Mr. Francis Noble, alderman, and twice mayor, gave a houſe worth 2 0 0

Mr. Joſeph Becket, of Houghton on the Hill, out of a half yard-land in Houghton-field, gave — 0 10 0

Mr. William Billers, thrice mayor, by will, dated April 10, 1657, gave to the corporation a rent-charge of £12. a year, payable out of that parcel of meadow ground, called Leazow, and the cloſes adjoining, which he had purchaſed of Thomas Chapman, eſq. to be paid the 25th of March and the 29th of September at the Guildhall: if behind 40 days, then by legal authority to enter and diſtrain, and to have and drive the diſtreſſes and keep them till the rent is paid; upon truſt, to pay two almſwomen, placed by Mr. Billers in the ſaid hoſpital, each of them weekly on Friday 12*d*.; and for a gown every year for one of them 20*s*.; alſo to pay to the poor of the hoſpital, being 110, £5. 10*s*. on Friday next after May 1 and November 1; and the other 6*s*. to buy oatmeal; all the money to be paid into the hands of the governors of the hoſpital. And it is inſerted in the ſaid will, that the poor women to be placed ſhall not pay any money to the houſe during the vacancy.

---

[1] "I will moreover, that my executors ſhall cauſe to be laid in every year into the coal-houſe of the ſaid Hoſpital, for ſo long time as Mr. Walter Ruding's leaſe made to me of certain lands in Braunſtonthorp, alias Bromkinſthorpe, in the county of Leiceſter, ſhall continue, ſix loads of Coleorton pit-coal, to make the poor people of the ſaid hoſpital fires before Allhallows-tide, and after St. George's day, if the weather require it; and thoſe ſix loads of coal to be laid by themſelves from their other coals which they have from their founder. Item, I give to the poor people inhabiting in all the pariſhes of the town of Leiceſter 20 nobles, to be diſtributed among them by the diſcretion of the mayor of Leiceſter, and the curate or vicar of every pariſh in Leiceſter, and the chamberlains of Leiceſter. Item, I give to Willoughby and Eme Achor, of the hoſpital of St. Trinity nigh Leiceſter, five marks apiece."—He gave alſo 200 marks for the performance of divine ſervice twice every day at St. Martin's church; where, and at Tilton, ſee more of him.

Mr. William Stanley, alderman, by will, gave to the poor of the old hoſpital 20*s.* a year; for ſecurity of which ſum, and of £4. given by his brother Mr. John Stanley, for ſeveral charitable uſes, he charged a cloſe called Beadhouſe Meadow, in the occupation of Mr. Robert Hartſhorne, with an annuity of £5.

William Franke, eſq. by his will, dated 25 March, 31 Charles II. gave as followeth; "I give to the maſter, aſſiſtants, chaplain, and poor of the hoſpital of the Holy Trinity, three meſſuages, cottages, or tenements, in Leiceſter, late in tenure of George Heggs, John Noon, and Laurence Cooper, by me purchaſed of John Atton, to enjoy the ſame, paying yearly to the ſix poor widows in St. John's hoſpital 6*s.* on the 21ſt of December; and the reſidue of the profits I give to the poor of the hoſpital of the Holy Trinity; and in caſe the maſterſhip ſhall be taken away from the mayor of the borough, ſo as he cannot execute the ſame, then I give the ſaid three meſſuages to the corporation and their aſſigns, in truſt, that they ſhall demiſe the ſame at the beſt rent they can get; and the whole rents and profits thereof yearly diſpoſe as follows, viz. 6*s.* to the ſix poor widows of St. John's hoſpital; and the reſt to the poor people of the ſaid borough, in ſuch proportion as the mayor and aldermen ſhall think convenient."

Joſeph Wright, one of the 48, by will, gave the acre of meadow ground, which he was ſeiſed of in the Abbey-meadow of Leiceſter, and is of the yearly value of 40*s.* or thereabouts, to the poor of the old hoſpital for ever, to buy them oatmeal.

William Staveley, rector of Coſſington, by will, dated Sept. 21, 1702, appointed his executors, John Allen, John Rogers, and Thomas Benſkin, their heirs and aſſigns for ever, to pay 20*s.* to ſuch preacher as they ſhould appoint, for a ſermon, exhorting to charity, to be preached on Whit-Monday, at the hoſpital of the Holy Trinity in the Newark, Leiceſter; and farther pay 20*s.* more towards the collection for the poor of the ſaid hoſpital on that day.

Mr. Thomas Blunt, alderman, and twice mayor, gave 40 pair of ſhoes.

Mr. Becket, of the Newark in Leiceſter, alderman, and twice mayor, gave to the poor of this hoſpital and St. John's the uſe of £134. 10*s.*

Margaret, relict of Mr. John Sherman, of the Newark in Leiceſter, gave a ſilver communion-bowl, with a chalice, to the value of £7.

Beſides theſe benefactions, whoſe charity they ſtill annually partake of, there are others which were temporary.

Mrs. Amy Coles, widow, during her life gave annually 20*s.*

Ralph Diſon, gent. gave £1. per annum for ten years.

Mr. Anthony Major gave to each of the poor that ſhould be in this houſe at the time of his deceaſe 2*s.* 6*d.*

Mr. George Crofts gave 12*d.* apiece to the poor.

Others, at the time of their death, gave them:

John Major, of Leiceſter, gent.	10	0	0
Mrs. Alice Chapman, of Foxton, widow,	2	0	0
Mr. Danet Abney, alderman, and twice mayor, — — —	5	12	0
Mr. John Brewin, of Belgrave, gent.	5	0	0
Mr. William Brewin, of Belgrave,	5	12	0
George Reaſon, of Leiceſter, gent.	5	0	0
Elizabeth, wife of William Warbarton,	5	0	0
Mr. William Stubbing, alderman,	3	0	0
Anne, wife of Mr. David Dekins,	5	0	0
Mr. Thomas Ludlam, alderman, and once mayor, — —	5	0	0
Mr. Robert Spence, of Leiceſter,	5	0	0
Mr. Thomas Ward, of this Borough,	5	0	0
Mrs. Sarah Glover, —	5	0	0
Mrs. Joanna Ayres, widow, in the North-gate, Leiceſter, —	5	0	0
Mr. Thomas Topp, one of the 48, gave to the poor of this hoſpital	5	0	0
Mr. Henry Pate, alderman, and once mayor, to this and St. John's hoſpital,	5	0	0

Obſervations by the Rev. Samuel Carte, taken out of the Rental of the Chamberlains, 1711-12; which is of all the lands and tenements which the mayor, bailiffs, and burgeſſes, were then ſeiſed of, in fee ſimple, and otherwiſe.

1. Rents of aſſize and rents at will in the borough of Leiceſter, &c. —	29	0	7
2. Receipts of the whole Grange, with the appurtenances, and the four yard-land, and two yard-land, called Archer's Land, and half a yard-land the town purchaſed of the lord Spencer in fee ſimple, with the Newark mill and windmill, &c. (The particulars amount to 20 yard-lands, 7 acres, beſides cloſes, barns, &c.)	177	12	7
3. The Bead-houſe meadow,	27	10	3
4. Other rents, for lands and tenements, which the ſaid mayor, bailiffs, and burgeſſes, held in fee-farm of the hoſpital of St. John and St. Leonard, heretofore belonging to the late college of the Newark of Leiceſter, amount to —	53	0	2
5. Other rents of lands and tenements, parcel of the Town Obit-lands, St. Margaret's Guild, and parcel of the fee-farm rents heretofore demiſed by queen Elizabeth to Mr. Hawkes and Bakes, by indenture expired, amount to —	20	4	4
6. Rents for lands and tenements, parcel of the manor of Leiceſter, heretofore granted to the mayor, &c. in fee-farm,	4	5	6
7. Rents of Corpus Chriſti Guild, parcel of the lands and tenements, with the manor, &c. purchaſed of queen Elizabeth,	13	18	0
8. Rents, parts of the poſſeſſion of the late Guild in Leiceſter, parcel of the Town Obit-lands, — —	22	18	4
9. Part of Mr. Wylde's rents,	5	9	8

10. A rental of the lands and poſſeſſions of the College of the bleſſed Virgin Mary over againſt the caſtle of Leiceſter, heretofore demiſed by queen Elizabeth to Edward Holt, eſq. and by her majeſty granted, among other things, to the corporation in fee-farm; tranſcribed by Mr. Carte.

	£.	s.	d.
Widow Bellamy, for a meſſuage or tenement in Swines-market, in fee-farm,	0	6	8
Robert Langton, for part of a tenement in occupation of Martin Beeby,	0	2	0
Ralph Wells, for a cloſe near Ayleſton highway, late the land of Mr. Robert Heyrick, in fee-farm, —	0	5	0
Elias Wallin, for a garden, or piece of ground, or backſide of a meſſuage or tenement, near the South-gate, heretofore the land of Mr. Hugh Watts,	0	1	0
Thomas Jackſon, clerk, for a tenement in Soar Lane near Red Croſs Street, in occupation late of John Colſton, and now of Thomas Kitchin, in fee-farm,	0	10	0
Samuel Dewick and Mrs. Windſor, for a tenement in Soar-lane near Red Croſs Street, heretofore ſold to John Underwood, in fee-farm, —	0	5	0
Edward Smith, or William Dawſon, for a houſe or garden in the ſame lane, heretofore Robert Stevenſon's, —	0	12	0
Heirs of Gabriel Hill, for a meſſuage in Red Croſs Street, and a garden in Chaff-lane adjoining to the ſaid houſe, now in occupation of John Savage, being the ſign of the Bird-in-hand, in fee-farm,	1	0	0
The heirs or executors of Robert Atton, butcher, for a meſſuage or tenement in Soar-lane, in fee-farm, —	1	6	8
Robert Wringmore, for a tenement or garden in Soar-lane, heretofore ſold to John Launder, in fee-farm, —	0	12	0
Mr. Hill, or Robert Fawcett, for a garden in Soar-lane in occupation of Thomas Trantum, in fee-farm, —	0	0	8

Mr.

Mr. John Abney, for a parcel of ground belonging to a tenement in the South-gates, ruined in time of war, and for a croft, in fee-farm, —	0	16	0
William Franke, eſq. for a piece of ground adjoining to Friers-lane, in occupation formerly of William Cullis, and lately of John Burbage, in fee-farm,	0	0	4
Mr. John Wilkins, now Mr. Fox, for herbage of St. Martin's church-yard,	0	10	0
Mr. John Farmer, for a cloſe near Cowdriff land and Mr. Herdman's land,	1	0	0
Mr. Barwell, for the tithe-hay in Burgeſs-meadow, South-field, and tithable meadows beyond the mills, in fee-farm,	5	0	0
William Franke, eſq. for St. James's chapel yard and cloſe at the Nether end of the South-gates, heretofore ſold to one Mr. Simpſon, late Mr. Sherman's land,	1	6	8
Richard Brown, now Thomas Griffin, for a houſe and garden, or back-ſide, in the pariſh of St. Nicholas, by leaſe,	3	0	0
John Denſhire, for a houſe and garden in the ſame pariſh, late the land of Daniel Murfin, butcher, in fee-farm, —	1	0	0
Mr. Watts and Mrs. Lucy Fownes, for the tithes, vicarial tenths, herbage, and other dues, belonging to Danet's hall, St. Mary's mills, and the Holmes, by leaſe,	5	0	0
Mr. Samuel Heyrick, for tithes, tenths of all thoſe grounds ſome time parcel of Danet's hall, by leaſe, — —	2	0	0
William Ruding, eſq. for all the tithes, vicarial tenths, herbage, and other duties belonging to the ſame, payable out of all thoſe grounds and parcels of land belonging to the Weſtcotes, by leaſe,	5	0	0
The executor of Nathanael Sims, for a garden in Senvey-gate, late Woodford's land, in occupation of Henry Sands,	0	1	0
Matthew Symonds, eſq. for a garden, or piece of ground, ſome time a well-yard, heretofore the land of Thomas Chettleton, late Robert Griffin's, in occupation of Hugh Jordan, in fee-farm, —	0	1	4
Executor of Mr. Edmund Townſend, for an orchard and garden in Silver-ſtreet,	0	2	0
Mr. Ralph Wells, for the third part of a cloſe near Cowdriſt, in fee-farm,	0	4	0
The poor of the Old Hoſpital, for part of Dovehouſe Cloſe, beyond the Weſt-bridge, in occupation of John Winter,	0	1	6
Richard Haſſel, for a piece of meadow-ground in Glen-field, in occupation of John Carr, in fee-farm, —	0	0	6
Mr. Thomas Helmeſley, for a cloſe near St. Margaret's cow-paſture, heretofore Bennet's land, in fee-farm,	0	8	4
Mr. Watts, for lands and leys in the Weſt fields of Leiceſter, heretofore land of Thomas Bennet, eſq. in fee-farm,	0	2	6
The poor of the Old Hoſpital, for a piece of meadow-ground in Burgeſs-meadow, called Lady-acre, in fee-farm,	0	8	4
William Ruding, for a cloſe in Braunſton-gate, in fee-farm, — —	0	5	0
Robert Hobſon, for a houſe and cloſe in occupation of John Holmes,	1	10	0
Mr. Fox, vicar of St. Mary's, for the Eaſter-book and other duties of the ſaid pariſh, — —	0	3	4
For a garden and tenement in Soar-lane, near Red Croſs Street, heretofore in occupation of George King, and lately of Richard Bruce, at will. —	0	13	4
Anthony Abel and William Lyon, for a garden in Hotgate-ſtreet, alias Thornton-lane, late the land of Thomas Pare, now Elizabeth Power, in fee-farm,	0	5	0
Mr. Thomas Palmer, attorney, for a garden in Swines-market lately built upon, in occupation formerly of Thomas Ludlam, lockſmith, and now of himſelf,	0	1	2
More for a ſhop, heretofore ſold to Chriſtopher Needham, late in occupation of William Tompſon, in fee-farm,	0	2	6

11. Rents belonging to the Newark.

	£.	s.	d.
The heirs or executors of Mr. Hugh Watts, for a meſſuage, or tenement, formerly Dr. Chippendale's and Mr. Walker's, ſituate in the Newark, in occupation of Mr. Bayly, in fee-farm, —	1	6	8
Mrs. Frances Palmer, widow, for a houſe there, late Dr. Walker's, in occupation of Oliver Grace, in fee-farm,	0	13	4
Matthew Judd, for a houſe in Newark, late Mr. Hollingworth's, in occupation of Francis Hall, in fee-farm, —	0	13	4
Richard Inge, of Knighton, for two parts of Mr. Chamberlain's land,	0	12	4
Jeffrey Palmer, of Carleton Curlieu, eſq. for certain lands there, in fee-farm,	0	1	6
The heirs or executors of James Carr, of Bowden Magna, for land there, in occupation of John Carrol, in fee-farm,	0	1	0
The heirs or executors of Mr. Godfrey Barrowdale, for lands in Sileby,	0	0	6
William Needham, of Glenfield, for lands there, in fee-farm, —	0	0	3

12. Other rents[1] of the town and manor of Leiceſter, and parcel of the lands and poſſeſſions of the dutchy of Lancaſter.

	£.	s.	d.
The executor of William Higgs, mercer, for a meſſuage or tenement, heretofore the land of Mr. Ellis, in occupation of Mr. John Brockeſby, in fee-farm,	0	16	8
Mr. Thomas Palmer, attorney, for a houſe in the Swines-market, ſold to Bartholomew Parnel, in fee-farm, —	1	13	4
William Franke, eſq. for a piece of ground, being part of the town-wall, near the Frier-lane, late Mr. Manby's,	0	2	6
Robert Langton, for two pieces of land taken off the common dunghill, in the lane near the Weſt-bridge, in fee-farm,	0	0	10
Abraham Pougher, for two tenements in Parchment-lane, late the land of Mr. John Heyrick, in occupation of ——— Paul and others, in fee-farm, —	0	3	4
Mr. Alſop, for a ſhop under the Gainſborough, by leaſe, now The Spencer,	0	10	0

13. Other rents received of new, &c.	56	6	4
14. Rents given to the free-ſchool and other charitable uſes, —	150	5	0
15. Rents for ſhops and ſtalls in Saturday-market, — —	13	6	8
16. Chief rents belonging to the hoſpitals of St. John and St. Leonard,	0	16	9½
17. To Corpus Chriſti Guild, —	4	14	4
18. To St. Margaret's Guild, —	4	5	6½
19. A rental of Lammas tithes and herbage due for grounds in St. Mary's pariſh, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the college of St. Mary over againſt the caſtle,	5	3	6

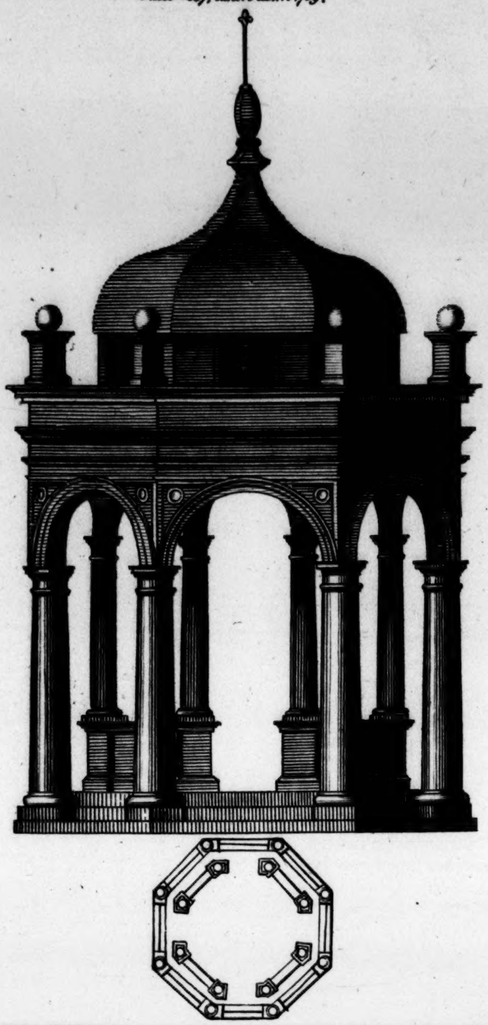
---

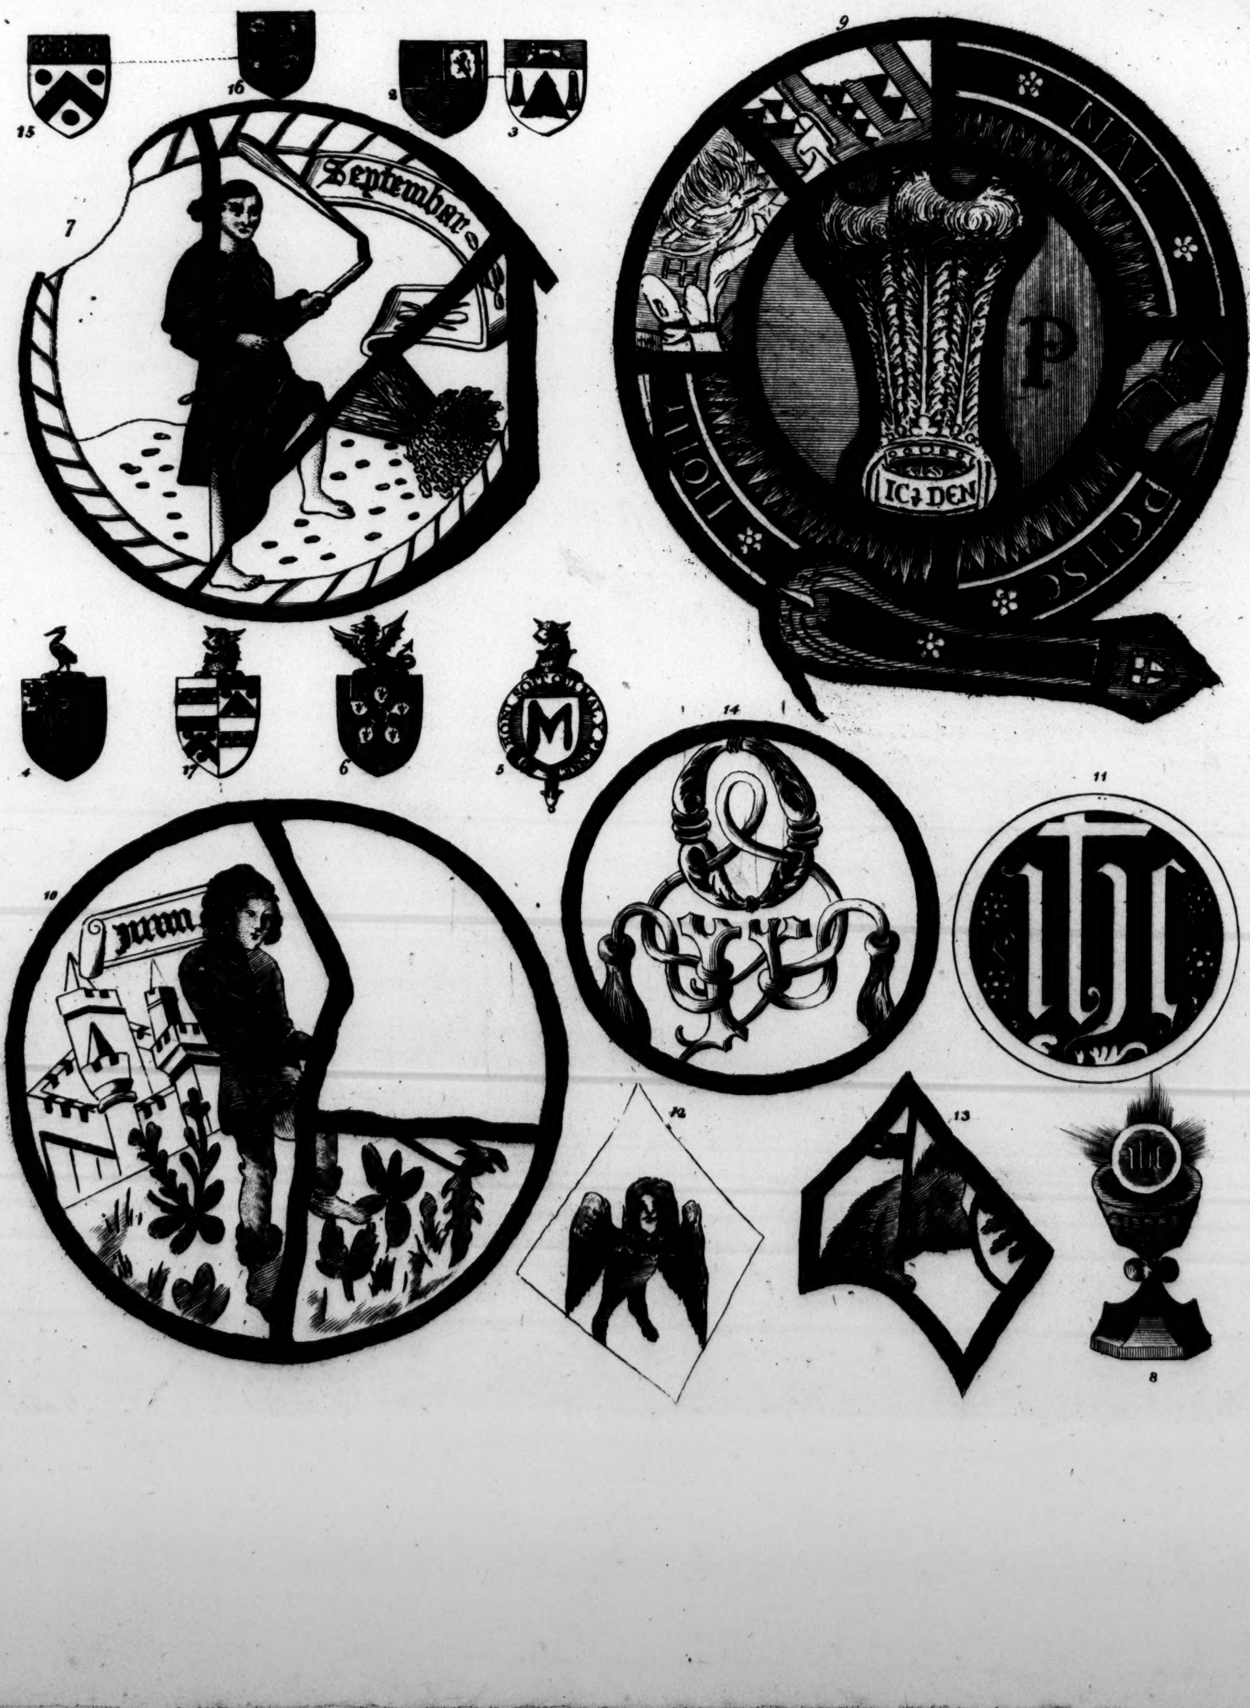
[1] Amongſt the places mentioned in the Rent-roll of 1694, the following deſcriptions occur: In the gardens of Wigſton's Hoſpital, a piece of ground called The Normandy; the Water-laggs; Chaffe-lane near Redcroſs-ſtreet; a cloſe in All Saints pariſh near Plank Well; Dove-houſe Cloſe near the New Market; Tippet Cloſe; a cloſe called the Paradiſe; Goſling Cloſe; Soar-lane, or Walker-lane, near the North-gate; a piece of meadow, called The Shield, in St. Mary's Meadow; a houſe or piece of ground, called The Hermitage, near St. James's Chapel cloſe; a piece of ground in All Saints pariſh called The Vineyard; a piece of ground, called The Lyon-yard, in St. Martin's pariſh; Frogmir Bridge; Dead Man's Lane; Cowdrift; Applegate-ſtreet; The Mayor's Old Hall; an orchard, whereupon heretofore ſtood a houſe called St. John's; St. Margaret's bed; Archdeacon-lane; Butt Cloſe; Chaffle-lane; Dove-houſe Cloſe beyond the Weſt-bridge; Lady-acre in Burgeſs Meadow; College Cloſe; Hott-gate-ſtreet; Clerk Barne; Shire-hall Cloſe; Ironmonger-lane; Bakehouſe-lane; and the Mott Orchard.

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

1. LEICESTER CROSS.

built 1557; taken down 1769.





15
16
2
3
7
September
9
ICH DEN
P
4
17
6
5
M
14
11
10
12
13
8

The TOWN HALL.

Over the entrance of the door, in one frame, the arms of king Charles the Firſt, and thoſe of the Company of Merchant Taylors, plate XXXI. fig. 2, 3, with this inſcription: " Sur Thomas White[1], knight, merchant-tailor and citizen of London 1616.

" Lo! here a ſhip, a merchant-royal, fraught
With ſtore of wealth, from whoes rich ſides unſought,
Plentie of metall hath been largelie given,
White name, White gifts, White ſoule, White ſaint in heaven;
Whoes arms wee (leſt wee ſhew ourſelfs ingrate)
Properly blazon'd here doe celebrate;
The which eternall monumente ſhal be
Of White's renowne, to all poſteritie.
Dye then, and rot, and ſtinke, you hulks of ſhame,
Who, charg'd with wealth, have nothing but the name
Of dying rich, whoſe tombs ſhall never ſpeak
Your praiſe; one White ſhall all your credits break."

At the upper end of the Hall, on the right ſide of the town-arms, ſir Thomas White, knight, in the dreſs of lord-mayor of London, with gold chain and collar of SS; he has a black cap and pointed beard; his gloves in his right hand; and on the little-finger of his left hand a ring.

Over his head:

" Quum viginti quatuor urbes hujus regni Angliæ ſuis ditâſſet opibus;
annis et honore plenus obiit Feb. 10,
anno Domini 1566, ætatis ſuæ 72."

On the right hand corner:

" Cernitur hic Thomas Whitus ſub imagine pictâ;
Cernitur hâc vitâ melius ſub imagine verâ;
Et pater & prætor Londini, miles in illo;
Providus Oxoniæ fautor, fundator in illâ;
Briſtolii decus eximium; laus prima Redingæ;
Gloria Tunbrigiæ; tibi cauſa, Coventria, famæ;
Urbis honos, orbis prudentia, gemma ſenectæ."

Over his left ſhoulder:

Gules, an annulet Argent, a border Sable charged with three eſtoiles Or; on a canton Ermine a lion rampant of the ſecond. Creſt, on a wreath a ſtork Argent, beaked and legged Or, fig. 4. Motto, AUXILIUM MEUM A DOMINO.

Round the frame:

" THOMAS WHITE, MILES,
ALDERMANUS CIVITATIS LONDON.
FUNDATOR COLLEGII SANTI JOHANNIS BAPTISTÆ
ET AULÆ GLOCESTRENSIS OXONIÆ.
GULIELMUS HEYRICKE, EQUES,
AMORIS ERGO DEDIT, 1616."

2 On the ſame ſide is a portrait of James Wigley, eſq. of Scraptoft Hall, one of the repreſentatives in parliament for the borough of Leiceſter from 1737 till his death in 1765. He is in a full-dreſſed ſuit of crimſon velvet, and full-bottomed wig.

3. To the left is a portrait of Henry Haſtings, fifth earl of Huntingdon of that name, in his robes, and collar and ribbon of the Garter; a pointed beard; black cap, and large ruff; in his right hand a white wand.

Round the frame:

" HENRIE EARLE OF HVNTINGDON, LORD HASTINGS, HUNGERFORD, BOTREUX, MULINS, AND MOULES, KNIGHT OF THE MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER, AND LORD PRESIDENT OF THE QUEENE'S COUNSELL IN THE NORTH PARTS OF INGLANDE."

In a compartment at the top of the portrait:

" This noble Peere gave an hundred markes a yeare for ever to ſundrie godly uſes; as thirtie pounds to a publique preacher for the whole town of Leiceſter; ten pounds to the chiefe ſchoolemaſter their; ten pounds to four poore ſchollers; and twentye nobles a yeare to the poore of Wigſton's Hoſpital in Leiceſter; beſides many bookes for a librari, and a ſtock of twentie poundes to provide coles at the beſt hand for the generall good of the poore; and ſundrie other greate favours which he did for this Corporation, 1623."

On the left ſide of the Hall, over the door leading to the Mace-parlour, the arms of the earl of Huntingdon are painted very large on the wall: Within the order of the Garter, Argent a maunch Sable.

---

[1] Sir Thomas White, a citizen and merchant-taylor of London in 1546, from a noble intention, paid into the hands of the mayor and commonalty of the city of Coventry £1400. to purchaſe lands, the rents of which were to be paid to ſir Thomas during the remainder of his life, and then to be applied as under. The purchaſe brought him in annually £70.; and he dying Feb. 11, 1566, aged 72, his will directed that there ſhould be given out of it, firſt to twelve poor men of the city of Coventry, 40*s*. a year each, free gift; next he willed £40. of the reſidue to four young men of the ſame place, tradeſmen, £10. each, for nine years, without intereſt, provided they were free of the ſame city, and gave ſecurity. When the nine years were expired, the ſaid truſt were to pay yearly £20. each, to two young men, free of Coventry, to be continued for thirty years, each holding the money for nine years as before, without intereſt; and at the expiration of that time they were to pay one other freeman of Coventry £40. for nine years, without intereſt, and ſo on as before for ever. In the ſecond year after the expiration of the thirty years, it was alſo ordered that they were to pay to the town of Northampton £40. the Corporation of which was directed to lend the ſame to four young freemen, inhabitants of that place, £10. each, for nine years, as in the firſt inſtance, and ſo on to four other young men for ever. In the third year after the expiration of the thirty years, they were alſo ordered to pay £40. to the town of Leiceſter, to be diſpoſed of in the ſame manner as that at Northampton. In the fourth year the ſame ſum, and in the like manner, to Nottingham; in the fifth to Warwick; and the ſixth to Coventry, where the whole £40. were then to be paid to one freeman of the city for nine years, and ſo on for ever. It was willed that no perſon was to have it twice; and to be paid in one month after the deceaſe of the principal; and the perſon to be choſen without partiality. The eſtate being much improved in the year 1700, the Corporations preferred a bill in Chancery, for an equitable diſtribution of the improved rents, which, upon hearing, was given againſt the Corporations; but, not being ſatisfied with this deciſion, they brought their claim before the Houſe of Lords the enſuing year; when it was ſettled to their advantage. It happened, upon examining the eſtate and ſettling the accompts in 1709, that the eſtate was improved to the value of £709. 2*s*. 2*d*. It was therefore ſettled that the firſt year, beginning March 25, the whole of the above annual ſum ſhould go to the city of Coventry, to be diſpoſed of to the purpoſe following, viz. to 121 poor men 40*s*. each, and to one other poor man 23*s*.; in all £243. 3*s*.; to be given according to the deed of free-gift to the donor; and £42. 4*s*. 2*d*. to be put out in free-loan, according alſo to the donor's intention. The reſt was given to the Merchant-taylors Company, reſerving a certain portion to the mayor, recorder, and aldermen of Coventry; and a diviſion alſo of it to the ſteward and town-clerk of that city; the whole amounting to the ſum of £700. 2*s*. 2*d*. This ſum the ſucceeding year, beginning March 25, was to be divided as follows: to the city of Coventry £243. 3*s*. to be given to the poor men as before. To the Merchant-taylors, mayor, &c. £60. 15*s*.; and to Northampton £405. 4*s* 2*d*. Then to Leiceſter; ſo on each ſucceeding year to Nottingham and Warwick. Various ſuits were after this had in Chancery, which were finally adjuſted by decree, dated Dec. 20, 1722; and on Lady-day 1725, the whole rental amounted to £932 2*s*. and was then in a ſtate of great probable improvement. The ſum now in the gift of the mayor and aldermen of Leiceſter, ariſing from the gift of ſir T. White, is ſaid to amount to £7500. and is lent without intereſt to tradeſmen freemen of Leiceſter, in ſums of £40. and £50.; no perſon being allowed to have more than one 50 and one £40. during his life, and theſe ſums never at one time; no petition of that nature being complied with till after the payment of the firſt loan. The Corporation have been very careful that poſterity ſhould not ſuffer from their negligence or indulgence in lending the money upon hazardous ſecurity; and few inſtances have happened detrimental to the intereſt of ſucceeding generations. Some years ago, when the Corporation built their new Exchange, they intended to have perpetuated the memory of this benefactor, by placing his ſtatue in a niche they left for that purpoſe in the front of the ſame building. Why this was not accompliſhed we have not heard. That the predeceſſors of this body of gentlemen poſſeſſed the warmeſt ſenſe of the bleſſings which through his means have been given to the hand of induſtry here, the lines written under his arms in the Town hall will teſtify.

Creſt, on a wreath a buffalo's head eraſed, armed, ducally crowned and gorged Or; and this motto, HONORANTES ME HONORABO; fig. 5.

On the oppoſite wall, equally large, the arms of the Town are blazoned; fig. 6.

4. Next to the earl of Huntingdon's is a portrait of John Darker, eſq. F. R. and A. SS. and one of the repreſentatives in parliament for the borough of Leiceſter; who died Feb. 8, 1784, aged 62. He is in a plain modern coat, with a ſmall round wig.

In the frame for the mace the town arms are repeated; with the dates 1586, 1702, 1786.

In the Mace-parlour, over the mayor's ſeat, are the king's arms between two pyramids; under which is written, "Ex dono R. Inge, majoris, anno Dom. 1637."

In the windows of this room in the firſt light at the entrance is the figure of a threſher, and two ſheaves of corn; and over it "September;" fig. 7.

2d light, a face and portcullis; the border battered, and repaired.

3d light, a large cinquefoil.

4th light, a faint figure of a man; under that a ſmall ear of corn, with a few flowerets.

5th light incloſes H. R. and a crown, over which are two chalices, with ihc; fig. 8; and under it two others.

6th light, Prince of Wales's arms and motto, with a P on the right ſide, included in a circlet or edging, like a glory or radii-like flames, ſurrounded with "HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE" in the radius, which incloſes two hands with only two thumbs, fingers out of ſight or in gloves, and the arms continued with the coat ſleeves, a leg and foot, and part of the thigh, the foot inclining upwards; fig. 9.

7th light, three chalices; and under them June; a man in a cap, bare leg and thigh, ſtockings down to the ancles; has a belt, from which hangs another; behind him a building with turrets; before him a wooden fork holds a ſtump of a branch upwards, while a hook-like ſtick-head pulls down a ragged leaf like holly; fig. 10.

8th light, a royal crown.

9th light, a cinquefoil Azure.

10th light, four chalices, and ihc; fig. 11.

11th light, a winged figure, fig. 12.

12th light, one chalice, and to the right a bear's head, with a ſort of flag-ſtaff, fig. 13.

13th light, the knot engraved, fig. 14; with five chalices above, and four below it.

In this parlour is a portrait of —— Bond, citizen and goldſmith of London, dated ÆTATIS SUÆ 30; ANNO 1594. He has a picked beard and whiſkers, black hair, large ruff round his neck, a dark brown cloſe dreſs, his wriſt covered with a very rich lace, his left hand reſting on an ornamented cuſhion, his gloves in his right hand.

Arms on the right ſide, Argent, on a chevron Sable between three hurts, three eſtoiles Argent; on a chief Gules, three cinquefoils Argent; Bond; fig. 15.

On the left ſide, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a leopard's face affronté Or; 2. and 3. Azure, a covered cup between two buckles in feſs Or; the Goldſmiths Company of London; fig. 16.

An excellent portrait of Alderman Robert Heyrick is alſo placed here, painted at the expence of the Corporation; an old man, with a long beard, black cap, ruff round his neck, black dreſs, his right hand holding both his gloves, and at the left this inſcription:

"His picture whom you here ſee,
When he is dead and rotten,
By this ſhall he remember'd be
When he ſhould be forgotten."

On the right: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, a feſs Vaire, Or and Gules, Heyrick; 2. and 3. Bond as above. Creſt, on a wreath a buffalo's head eraſed Argent, gorged with a chaplet of roſes proper, leaves Vert; fig. 17.

Near this picture, in a frame, are "Certain Branches of Mr. Heyrick's Will;" ſee vol. II. p. 617.

In another frame is fairly written, "A Part of the laſt Will and Teſtament of Mr. Alderman Thomas Ludlam the Elder; Nov. 4, 1742;" in which, among other things, he gave £100. towards the repairs of the Trinity Hoſpital.

Arms and ſeals of Leiceſter, as framed and glazed in one tablet, over a door at the ſide of the chimney of the mace-parlour.

1. Left hand ſeal at top, on a red ground this circumſcription, a little cinquefoil before the firſt word, "SIGILLUM COMMUNITATIS : : BURGI LEICESTRIE." The above is the great common ſeal for deeds, conveyances, &c. kept by the mayor and two chamberlains, under two keys.

2. The ſeal for ſtatutes, kept by the mayor for the time being; i. e. the Virgin Mary, with a child on her left arm, a long-ſtemmed, or croſier crucifix in her right hand, reaching over her right ſhoulder, under her feet a cinquefoil on a red ground, circumſcribed, "SIGILL. STAT. MAJO. BURGI LEICESTRI."

3. A ſmall cinquefoil, red ground, circumſcribed, "BURGUS LEICESTRIE." This ſeal for capias's, letters, &c.

4. A larger cinquefoil than the laſt, "✠ SIGILLUM STATUT, BURGI LEICESTRIE." This is another ſeal for the ſtatutes, kept by the clerk of the ſtatutes.

5. Three arrow heads, the middlemoſt continued as a perfect arrow, with ſide feathers, &c.; on their left a cinquefoil, on their right a ſerpentine label, inſcribed, "IN ANTITRINITARIOS;" and circumſcribed, ".SIGIL. HOSPITALIS S'CTE TRINITATIS, IN NOVO OPERE, LEIC." This is the ſeal of Trinity hoſpital in the Newark [1], kept by the mayor and two chamberlains, alſo under two keys.

6. A large cinquefoil, over it a caſque, and over that a dragon, ſtyled the arms of the borough of Leiceſter.

7. Three lions paſſant under a coronet (the duke of Lancaſter's arms).

"Theſe are the arms and town ſeales, uſed by the mayor and burgeſſes of the borough of Leiceſter, incorporated by the name of mayor, bayliffe, and burgeſſes, of the ſaid borough of Leiceſter, and enabled with many great and large privileges and immunities by many of the ancient Kings of England, and ſince confirmed and enlarged by King James, and laſtly by our moſt gracious Souveraign that now is, 20 Jan. anno 16 Car. II. with a reſervation to his Majeſty, his heirs and ſucceſſors, of approving the recorder, ſteward, ſollicitor, and town clark; of which ſaid borough, at the time of the ſecond Viſitation, viz. 23 Martii, 1681, George Bent, eſq. was mayor; Edmund Sutton, Philip Abney, John Roberts, and John Goodall, juſtices of the peace within the ſaid borough, being the fower laſt perſons who ſerved the office of mayor; Mr. William Major, and Mr. William Elliott, bayliffs; Thomas Staveley, barriſter at law, ſteward of the ſaid borough; William Storingthorpe and Henry Pate, chamberlains; Nathan Wright, barriſter at law, recorder; and John Huckle, town clark; and William Browne, ſollicitor. The aldermen are in number twenty-four, and the common-councell forty-eight.—Atteſted under the hand of George Bent, mayor."

The TOWN CROSS (Plate XXXI.) was erected in 1577, to replace an older one, which had been taken down before 1569, as appears by an entry in the accompts of the churchwardens of St. Martin's for that year [2]. The late Croſs, which was a light handſome building, was taken down in 1773, when the preſent ſubſtitute for it was made from one of the pillars.

The EXCHANGE at Leiceſter was built in alderman Smalley's mayoralty in 1747 [3]. The lower part, intended as ſhambles [4] for the town-butchers, was but a ſhort time uſed for that purpoſe. The upper rooms, one of which is ſpacious, and rather elegantly furniſhed, were intended, and are uſed to ſupply the place of the old Gainſborough, which ſtood likewiſe in the market-place prior to the preſent building. Here the magiſtrates for the borough aſſemble on certain days to determine ſuch judicial matters as are brought before them.

---

[1] See Plate XXVIII. fig. 16.

[2] "Payd to Bodely for caryinge the ſtones and ramell away from where the Croſſe ſtood VIIId."

[3] See the propoſal in 1762 to convert it into an infirmary; Gent. Mag. vol. XXXII. p. 196.

[4] This was but a modern building when deſtroyed, and it was equal to moſt both for utility and ornament. The ruins of this building were uſed to make the foundation for the Exchange. The ſhambles which now remain in Leiceſter, near St. Nicholas' church, were built for the week-day market; but have been long ſince diſuſed.

ANNALS OF LEICESTER.

Consisting of ORIGINAL CHARTERS, AUTHENTIC CORPORATION RECORDS, and MISCELLANEOUS EVENTS, digested according to the Series of Time.

THE early History of this antient and famous Borough, from the first dawning of rude tradition, through the successive periods of its domination under the Romans, and the successive struggles between the native Britains and the invading Saxons, Jutes, and Angles, has already been amply discussed. The Angles[1], we may briefly repeat, took possession of The Midland—the most noble of all the intruding party; not only as under king Egbert they gave name to the whole united kingdom, but as our ancestors were always proud of the appellation of Angles, when their enemies in contempt called them Sassons[2]. Egbert, by public edict, commanded that the several provinces united should be called Angles land. The memories of the Jutes being worn out, and the name of the Saxons suppressed, the Angles only remained, who, in respect of their number, might seem to challenge by right the denomination.

LEICESTER, during the Heptarchy, was a part of the kingdom of Mercia; of whose dukes or earls, an accurate list has been given[3]; and also of the ravages of the Danes from the ninth to the eleventh century[4].

Of the Saxon earls of Leicester before the period of the Conquest enough has been already said[5]; and the state of Leicester at that memorable epoch described from a public record of most unquestionable authority[6].

I shall now endeavour to collect, in as succinct a manner as may be, the regular Annals of the Town of Leicester, and of the remarkable events with which it has been connected; and shall, under this head, introduce the various Charters at different times obtained by its inhabitants, with such interesting particulars as an attentive examination of original documents can produce. But first it may be necessary to recapitulate briefly what has been already detailed; which cannot be more concisely performed than from the words of Mr. Burton's MS. which, when the former part was printing, I had not the opportunity of consulting.

"LEICESTER, called also by antient writers, and in old records, Legracester, Legecester, Legeocester, Leogora, and Caër Lerion; so named, not of that fabulous king Leir, whom Geffrey of Monmouth will have to be the first builder thereof[7]; but for that it standeth upon the river of Legra, or Leir, now called Soar, as Leland holdeth[8], and William of Malmesbury[9], signifying as much as the City standing upon the river Leir. Many other cities and places in this land so denominated, as Colchester upon the river Colne, Excester upon the river Exe, Riblechester upon the river Rible. It standeth in the centre and heart of the shire; the shire (as I have elsewhere said[10]) bearing the proportion of an heart, and being in the very midst and heart of the land, as by all writers, and by the topography thereof, it doth appear; and upon the great road-way called The Foss (as Ranulph Higden affirmeth), which goeth from the South into the North, which begins at Totness in Devonshire, and endeth at Catness in the utmost part of Scotland, passing through Lincoln[11]. It is situated in a most rich, delicate, and pleasant soil, and a delicious air; and, whether you respect health or wealth, pleasure or profit, it is in this place afforded. To parallel it with other Cities, is not my purpose; but, had it a Navigable River[12], whereby it might have trading and commerce, it might compare with many of no mean rank. For the antiquity thereof, I shall speak what I have either read or found in the best and most approved writers. That this was a City in the Britains time, before the coming of the Romans, I should conjecture by the name thereof set down by Nennius in his Catalogue of Cities[13], viz. Caer Lerion, that is, the City upon Leir. And Henry of Huntingdon, in his History[14], setting down the names of all the Cities which were in this island in the Britains time, there nameth this City to be one, in these words, viz. Caër Lerion, i. e. Leicestria. That this should be Ratæ, mentioned in Antonine's Itinerarium, as Mr. Camden in the late editions of his Britannia would have it, I cannot assent unto; but must reduce Ratæ to Ratby, a village distant some three miles hence, where first Mr. Camden placed it, and of which opinion he was in the first editions of his book; and that very rightly, as hereafter, when I come to Ratby, I shall set down more plainly, by reason of certain intelligences and antiquities which I have both heard and seen since the first edition of this book; yet, nevertheless, I will not deny but that the Romans had some residing here. And that this was a great Roman station, these Roman antiquities (here found and affirmed) will give strength and confirmation[15].

"First, the antient temple here, dedicated to Janus, which had a flamen, or high priest, here resident; in which place great store of bones of beasts (which here have been sacrificed) have been digged up and found, and the place yet called thereof The Holy Bones; which all histories do agree to have been here, and surely was the foundation of the Romans, as appeareth by their god Janus Bifrons, to whose honour the first temple was built in Rome by Romulus and Tatius: or, as others say, Numa Pompilius, in a place called Argiletum; and not founded by that feigned king Leir to the honour of Janus, as Geffrey of Monmouth, and (of latter days) John Harding and John Rous of Warwick, will have it; which how fabulous and improbable it is, any ordinary capacity may conceive, in that it is known to all that Janus was not adored or thought of ever of any but the Romans. And this king Leir died (at least) 300 years before Rome was built, as by their own chronology and computation will appear[16]: but this, and many such improbabilities and contradictions, will easily convince this forged history of Brute and of his progeny: some whereof are cited by Richard Verstegan, in his "Restitution of decayed Intelligence in Antiquities," p. 90; and exceeding well discovered by Mr. Speed, in his History, fol. 163. Part of the wall of this temple is yet to be seen standing at the West end of St. Nicholas's church; a wonderful antient piece of work as any, I think, to be found in this kingdom, made of Roman large bricks and small flints, bound with so solid a mortar, that with an ordinary tool it cannot be pierced[1]; which well may be perceived, in that since the foundation thereof it hath (though uncovered) withstood the fury of Time almost 1700 years. The wall is between four and five feet thick, about 23 or 24 feet high without, vaulted in the walls; which I have viewed, and well observed, not without much admiration thereof. Next, the many Roman antiquities here found, their medaglies and coins in great abundance, both in silver and copper; of Vespasian, Domitian, Trajan, Hadrian, Antonine, and others, which I myself have seen, and have of them. About ten years before the first edition of this book (about 1612), near unto the town, without and between the North and West gates, somewhat deep in the ground, was found a piece of work of stone arched over, the stones whereof it was made being very small, about an inch long, and half an inch broad and thick, neatly jointed together; and (as since it hath been related unto me) the pavement thereof was of quarries of curious workmanship[2], some square, some round, whereon were drawn the lively proportions of flowers, knots, frets, and other inventions, in exceeding orient colours. In the walls were set little statues and antickes, imbossed and cut out; the roof covered with a like kind of quarry of the same workmanship, wherein were many small and earthen pipes; it was in length near six yards, in breadth near four. This I guess to be a stouphe, or hot-house[3], to bathe in; for, as Vitruvius writeth, the Romans growing to the height of riotousness and excess, used these baths to wash and clarify themselves withal, and that every day usually before meals. And within that Roman empire they grew so famous and costly, that, as Seneca writeth[4], he seemeth to be but of mean and poor estate, whose bath walls did not shine with precious stones, and were adorned with pictures of several coloured stones; the vaults arched with crystal and Thasian stones; the cocks of silver, to spout out water; the building supported with curious pillars, graced with lively statues, and the floor set with rich jewels; and (as Pliny hath it[5]) in some the whole sides, seats, and pavement, were of pure silver, so bright that they could hardly go thereon for sliding; which were accustomed, for their further delight (as Rosinus[6] saith), to be anointed with rich and sweet ointments. These baths were of two sorts; those which had only the use of warm water brought in pipes, and let in by cocks, whereof Seneca spake in his epistle above vouched; or those which were by fire made hot, as this here in this place spoken of; and that whereof Sextus Aurelius Victor writeth[7], which Constantine the Great Emperor caused to be made so wonderfully hot, that, having put thereinto Flavia Maximiana Fausta his wife (for that she had, upon false suggestions of incestuous attempts, caused the said Constantine to put to death his eldest son Crispus Cæsar by his first wife) she was instantly stifled. In both these sorts of baths men and women entered promiscuously together; a filthy custom amongst the antients, whereof Plutarch complaineth that the Grecians learned it of the Romans[8]. Dio writeth[9], that Agrippa first instituted these mixed baths at Rome; which the wise Emperor Hadrian endeavoured to suppress, erecting for each sex several baths, as Dio and Ælian Spartianus, in his life, do shew; but it should seem they lasted not long; for Antoninus Philosophus (as it is in Julius Capitolinus) made a law against these promiscuous baths, which was kept till the time of Heliogabalus, who abrogated it. Alexander Severus (as Lampridius writeth) restored Antoninus's law again; but with no long success, forasmuch as the antient Christians did formerly use and frequent these mixed baths, which by the Clementine Constitutions[10] were prohibited; and also by synodal decrees in the Council of Laodicea, can. 30; yet, notwithstanding, this uncivil fashion continued long after; and Justinian the Emperor, amongst the lawful causes of divorces, setteth this down for one; 'if a wife do enter into a baths with men, not having first obtained licence of her husband for the same[11].'

---

[1] "Angles—most probably from that part of Denmark (yet retaining the name of Angle) which lieth between Juitland and Holsatia. From them came the East Angles, the Mercians, and Northumbers." Historie of Great Britaine, 1606, p. 187.

[2] Kennett's Parochial Antiquities, p. 23.

[3] See before, in this volume, p. 14.

[4] Pp. 14—16.

[5] Pp. 16. 17.

[6] See the extracts from Domesday, p. 17.

[7] Hist. l. i. c. 15.

[8] Collect. tom. II. p. 323.

[9] De Gestis Pontif. lib. 4. fol. 165.

[10] See vol II. p. 1.

[11] Henry de Huntington, fol. 171. b. Aluredus Beverlacensis, in cap. de Dunvallone.

[12] An advantage it has of late years very fortunately obtained. See before, p. clxi.

[13] P. 227.

[14] Lib. I. fol. 170. b.

[15] Of the Rawdykes, a Roman fortification in the neighbourhood, see before, p. 4; and under Ayleston, in vol. IV. p. 25.

[16] See Dr. George Hakewell, in his "Apology or Declaration of the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World," fol. 8.

"This City was after called by the Saxons Legrecester, and those other variations above named, in the same sense, as is before shewed. And in that division of the kingdom into an Heptarchy, it came to the king of Mercia; and king Ethelred, dividing his kingdom into bishopricks in the year 680 (but as the right reverend bishop Dr. Godwin in his Catalogue of Bishops saith, in the year 737) placed here an episcopal see[12], making Sexulfe the first bishop, to whom succeeded (as William of Malmesbury writeth[13]) Wilfrid, Hedda, Aldwine, Totta, Edbert, Unwon[14], Werenbert, Rethun[15], Aldred, Ceolred and Leofwine, the last bishop; in whose time, and in the reign of king Edgar, about the year 970, it was united to Lincoln. This City falling to decay (either upon the dissolution of the kingdom of Mercia, or through the Danish cruelty), was after repaired by Egelfleda[16], wife of Etheldred a prince of Mercia, and daughter of king Alfred, in the 14th year of the reign of king Edward senior, 914; and which was by her so well walled and fortified, that it continued for many years after, and was termed by Matthew of Paris (who wrote in the time of king Henry III.) to be impregnable[17].

"At the Conquest time it was well peopled and frequented, and had many burgesses in it; out of which number they were bound, by an antient custom (as appeareth by the book of Domesday made by William the Conqueror), to send twelve with the king, so often as he went in person to the wars; but, if he made a voyage by sea against his enemies, then they were to send four horses to carry armour and ammunition as far as London. This City paid yearly to the king 30*l*. by tale, and 20 by weight, and 25 sexterces or measures of honey. At that time there were six churches in this town; a mint; and 322 houses within the king's demesne, or held under him in capite; which, however, does not shew the complete number of houses; for many of these burgage-tenants had under-tenants, not noticed in the general survey.

"Robert de Bellemont (in his mother's right earl of Mellent in Normandy), son to Roger de Bellemont, and cousin in the fourth degree to the Conqueror[18]; attending his kinsman into England, and fighting valiantly in the battle of Hastings[19], was by him rewarded with vast possessions[20], being, at the time of this survey, seised of 64 lordships in Warwickshire, 16 in Leicestershire, 7 in Wiltshire, 3 in Northamptonshire, and 1 in Gloucestershire[21].

---

[1] This wall is particularly described and engraved in pp. 5, 6; with the famous Roman milliary, found long after Mr. Burton's time.

[2] This discovery has been noticed in p. 9, from the Chetwynd MS.; but I have thought proper to give it here in the original words of Mr. Burton; who observes, that "these kinds of pavement are at large described by Petrus Crinitus, in his Commentaries de Honestâ Disciplinâ, lib. xxii. c. 1."—Many others have since been discovered in and near Leicester. See pp. 9—14.

[3] The figure of them you may see in Boisard's Antiquities of Rome, tom. II. iii. 5 and tom. III. ii. 1; who, in six tomes, hath collected the chiefest antiquities now in Rome, curiously cut in copper by Theodore de Bryij; printed in folio, 1597.

[4] Epist. 86.

[5] Lib. xxiii. cap. 12.

[6] De Antiquit. Rom.

[7] Fol. 179. edit. Steph. 1544.

[8] In the life of M. Cato.

[9] Lib. xlix.

[10] Lib. i. cap. 6. 9.

[11] Justin. Novell. 117.

[12] Florentius Wigornensis, fol. 562.

[13] Lib. iv. Pontif. fol. 165.

[14] Unwon bishop of Leicester is a witness to the charter of Kenulph king of Mercia, made to the abbey of Crowland, dated anno 806. See Ingulphus, fol. 486. b.

[15] Rethun is a witness to the charter of Bertulph king of Mercia, made to the abbey of Crowland, dated 851. Ingulphus, fol. 490.

[16] Hen. Huntingdon, lib. v. fol. 204. Florentius Wigorniensis, fol. 346.

[17] In the year 942 (as it is in Florentius Wigorniensis, fol. 351.) king Edmund, brother to king Athelstan, did free from the power of the Danes five cities, viz. Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, Leicester, and Stamford; and brought all Mercia wholly under his own government.

[18] Gul. Gemeticensis, pp. 312, 650, 688.

[19] Gul. Pictaviensis, p. 197.

[20] William of Malmesbury.

[21] See Domesday Book, under these several counties.

"Within the town was a house of Franciscan, or Grey Friers, built by Simon Montfort earl of Leicester[1]; whither (after Bosworth field) the dead body of king Richard III. naked, trussed behind a pursuivant of arms, all dashed with mire and blood, was brought, and there homely buried; where afterward king Henry VII. (out of a royal disposition) erected for him a fair alabaster monument, with his picture cut out, and made thereon. Sir William Moton, of Peckleton, knight, was buried in this house in 1362.

"Here also was founded a Chapel of St. Andrew, or (as others say) an Hospital, by William the Leper[2], son to Robert Blanchmaines earl of Leicester.

"About the midst of the town, near St. Martin's church, stood the house of Black Friars (there is a lane thereby yet called Black Friars Lane); by whom built I know not[3]. To them, in 1285, Robert de Willoughby and Alice his wife gave two parcels of ground in Leicester[4]. In the cloister, in a niche in the wall, not long since was found a coffin of stone, wherein was a corpse laid in bond leather.

"There was also in Leicester the hospital of St. Leonard, to which Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester gave much land; and in 1307, Thomas earl of Lancaster gave thereto three messuages, four acres, and a quarter of a rood of meadow, in Leicester, Burstall, and Sharnford[5].

"There was also an hospital of St. John in Leicester, to which Philip Danet, in 1329, gave five messuages and seven yard lands and a half in Whetstone, Croft, and Frisby juxta Gaulby[6]. All the lands belonging to this house were afterward granted by king Henry IV. to the new College in Leicester called Newark.

"In the Suburb without the South gate stood the Augustine Friers, to which house Thomas earl of Lancaster was a great benefactor; who gave them three messuages in the said suburbs of Leicester in 1304[7]. In the year 1629, in a lane called Millstone-lane, near to the Horse-fair leys, without the South gate. was found and digged up a great stone coffin covered, wherein was a coffin of lead, and therein the bones of a body; so that I should guess that this was the site of the said friery, wherein this corpse had been interred."

Thus far in the words of Mr. Burton, from his MS additions to the printed book. I shall now proceed to such particular events as can be collected from the best historical records; in the course of which the judicious researches of our venerable predecessor will occasionally be very serviceable.

HENRY I.

About the year 1102, the prohibition of priests' marriages, which had been ordained by archbishop Anselm in a Council at London, was published at Leicester; but was received with great heat, and rejected by many of the married clergy[8].

"The first that was honoured with the title of earl of Leicester after the Conquest was Robert de Bellemont, already noticed as the follower of the Conqueror under the title of earl of Mellent; who, in the differences between king Henry I. and Robert de Curthose his brother faithfully adhering to the king, was by him advanced to the earldom of Leicester[9], the City being then in the hands of four lords, viz. the King, the Bishop of Lincoln, Earl Simon, and Ivo the son of Hugo [Grentesmenill][10]; which Ivo, being then in rebellion, deprived of the king's favour, and fined in a great sum, endeavoured to obtain a reconciliation by the mediation of the said earl of Mellent; but, dying soon after in a pilgrimage beyond sea, this earl subjected it all to his power, after which he exceeded all the nobles of the realm in riches and grandeur, being also esteemed the wisest man betwixt England and Jerusalem (as Henry of Huntingdon saith[11]) in worldly affairs. He repaired the castle of Leicester; in the limits of which, in the time of the Saxons, there was a collegiate church (of whose foundation is not known); which, being ruined at the Norman invasion, was in 1107 re-built by Robert earl of Mellent and Leicester, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin; wherein he placed a dean and 12 secular canons, restoring to them all the antient possessions belonging to that church[12]. He founded the Hospital of Brackley, co. Northampton, and was a great benefactor to the abbey of Preaux in France (which was of the foundation of Humphry de Vitulis his grandfather); in which abbey, retiring from the world, he became a monk, and, dying in 1118, his body was there buried; but his heart was sent to Brackley[13]."

To this earl was owing the abolition of the trial by battle for lands and tenements in burgage; in return for which the payment called Gavel pence (which was a penny a-year for every house which had a gable in the front) was first levied. To him also was owing the establishment in Leicester of the company of Twenty-four (of which more fully hereafter); and the privilege of fetching wood from Leicester Forest on the payment of a very moderate acknowledgement; which, from being collected at the bridges of the town, was called Brigg-silver.

William, the eldest son, succeeded his father in the earldom of Mellent; and Robert surnamed Bossu (or Crouchback), the second son, obtained the earldom of Leicester. He was much favoured by king Henry I. to whom he continued constantly faithful.

STEPHEN.

In works of piety earl Robert Bossu far surmounted his father. By the advice of Alexander bishop of Lincoln, and permission of king Stephen, between the years 1137 and 1143, he founded an abbey (without the walls) at Leicester, dedicated to the honour of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin. Of this magnificent abbey and its large possessions an account has been already given, very far beyond what at the commencement of this undertaking I had even hoped to obtain; but of which the following very brief recapitulation in the words of Mr. Burton's MS. may not be unacceptable.

Robert Bossu earl of Leicester founded the most sumptuous and goodly monastery of St. Mary de Pratis, without the walls, for canons regular of the order of St. Austin[14]; so called, for that it stood upon the edge of the meadows, and had the delicious and pleasant prospect of them and the water; into which house the said Robert Bossu became a canon regular professed by the space of fifteen years, that so, by repentance, he might expiate his former treasons committed to his king and sovereign; endowing the same with the prebends' lands and possessions belonging to the canons secular of the collegiate church. But, in return for what he thus took away from the church of St. Mary, he founded a new college there, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, called after (for distinction sake) Collegium Beatæ Mariæ Minoris, for a master and seven fellows[15]. This abbey had in this shire twenty-six parish churches appropriated unto it; which at the suppression thereof was valued yearly to dispend 1062*l.* 4*d.* ob. q. It was endowed by divers kings with many and large privileges, as by king Edward I. Edward II. and Edward III. with grant of free warren in all the demesne lands, and by name, in 16 several lordships in several shires. King Henry IV. granted to them, that no purveyor, or taker of the king's, should enter into their fee, or upon their lands take any corn, cattle, carriages, grain, or other manner of purveyance. The abbot of this house had a place in parliament till 26 Edw. III.; at which time, upon petition made by William Clowne, then abbot, he was discharged of summons or appearance there, by the king; for that, as he alledged, he had not a whole barony, or held not per baroniam.

In 1149, Theobald archbishop of Canterbury, being at Leicester in the regular course of his metropolitical visitation, called thither the monks of Coventry, to elect a bishop for that see.

---

[1] See p. 297.
[2] See p. 323.
[3] It was founded, about 1250, by the second earl Simon de Montfort. See p. 295.
[4] 13 Edw. I. N° 55.
[5] See p. 321.
[6] See p. 324.
[7] See before, p. 310.
[8] See p. 22.
[9] Ordericus Vitalis, p. 700.
[10] Ibid. p. 308.
[11] Henry of Huntingdon, MS. de contemptu mundi, in Bibl. Cotton. fol. 3.
[12] Cart. Antiq. CC. n. 23, 1107.
[13] Burton, MS. citing H. Knighton, MS.
[14] Leland, tom. I. fol. 30.
[15] See before, p. 303.
[16] Pat. 26 Edw. III. pars prima, m. 22. and Hen. de Knighton, temp. Edw. III.

In 1151, the famous agreement was entered into between Robert de Bossu earl of Leicester and Ranulph de Gernoniis earl of Chester, for ascertaining the boundaries of their respective properties[1].

HENRY II.

To earl Robert Bossu the burgesses of Leicester were indebted for a confirmation of the several privileges granted by his father; and for remitting the payment of the Gavel-pence. He died in 1167; and his lady Amicia became a nun in the monastery of Nuneaton. He was buried in Leicester abbey, in the South wall of the high altar, in a tomb ex marmore Chalcedonico, as Leland termeth it in his Itinerary.

To him succeeded Robert, his son and heir, surnamed Blanchmaines; who, in the year 1173, involved himself and nearly the whole town of Leicester in one common ruin. In the early part of that year, king Henry II. being then in France on account of the revolt of his son (whom he had not long before caused to be crowned in his life-time), the earl of Leicester obtained from Richard de Lucy, regent of the realm during the king's absence, permission to visit his possessions in Normandy. Previous to his departure, the walls and gates of Leicester, by the earl's care, and the zeal of his burgesses, were rendered so strong, and so well provided with other means of defence, as to be considered impregnable; and the town and castle were placed by him under the government of David brother to William king of Scotland. When arrived at his castle of Breteuil in Normandy, the earl of Leicester, who had collected vast sums of money from all quarters, declared himself openly on the part of the young king, in whose service he very actively engaged. That castle was in consequence besieged, and destroyed by the elder Henry; the earl of Leicester having precipitately fled from it to join the king of France. The town of Leicester also fell a victim to the monarch's rage; who, early in the summer, to revenge the earl's defection, sent special orders to Richard de Lucy to go against that town; which was accordingly attacked on the 3d of July; and, in consequence of an accidental fire, was speedily subdued, and the inhabitants compelled to purchase the privilege of retiring with their property[2].

"By the rebellion of Robert Blanchmaines," says Mr. Burton, "the inhabitants of Leicester were reduced to great misery; the town being sacked and burnt by the king's forces[3], the walls cast down, and the inhabitants forced to pay 300 marks for their ransom; whereupon they had licence to depart to any of the king's cities or castles; but divers of them, through fear, took sanctuary at St. Alban's, St. Edmund's Bury, and elsewhere.

The earl of Leicester, cut to the heart at this disastrous event, repaired to England, early in October, with an army of 10,000 Flemings; and, fighting unsuccessfully near St. Edmund's Bury, lost the battle and his liberty, he and his lady being both taken prisoners. A heavy fine was in consequence inflicted on him: his lands and tenements were seized into the king's hands; his castles of Leicester, Groby, and Mountsorell, demolished; and his person for a considerable time detained in custody: but, in the beginning of the year 1177, he was again received into the king's favour; and all Leicester (that is, the borough and earldom, with its several knights fees and tenements) were restored to him[4]; after which, intending a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, he confirmed the grants made by his ancestors to the monks of Lyra and St. Ebrulph.

In 1185, Ralph son of Godwin and others were fined, for sending to Leicester for a coat of mail[5].

RICHARD I.

Earl Robert Blanchmaines died in 1190 on his voyage to the Holy Land, leaving by Parnell his wife, daughter of Hugh de Grentemesnill, Robert Fitz Parnell, his son and heir; who, Feb. 1, 1190-1, was invested in the earldom of Leicester at Messina in Sicily; whence, attending the king into the Holy Land, he there unhorsed and slew the Soldan in a tournament.

In 1194, we find the earl of Leicester indebted to Aaron the Jew in the sum of 452*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* on a mortgage of several of his effects. After his return, in 1196, he was taken prisoner by the French, and forced to give 2000 marks and the castle of Pacy to the French king for his redemption.

JOHN.

"We are now arrived at that grand epocha," to use the words of an ingenious native of Leicester, "which distinguishes the reign of king John from all others. The tyranny of the six preceding monarchs of the Norman race, and his own imbecility and baseness of heart, after a violent struggle, gave us the bulwark of English Liberty, Magna Charta; but, prior to this, he had given particular grants and privileges to many large towns in the kingdom; and much earlier than the completion of that noble deed, he had granted several charters to this town, perhaps, in some measure, from motives of compassion, to foster its inhabitants, children of adversity; who even then felt anguish from that scourge of vengeance and revenge brought on them for the crimes of an imperious nobleman, their lord and governor[6]."

A charter of this monarch, whilst he was only lord of Ireland and earl of Mortaigne, bears date at Leicester, where he appears to have been at least an occasional resident; and on his accession to the throne, in the first year of his reign, June 29, 1199, the earl of Leicester obtained from him a charter "de Libertatibus[7];" and on the 26th of December the king granted and confirmed to the burgesses of Leicester, that all those buyings and sellings of the lands of the town of Leicester, which had been, or should be, reasonably made in court called The Portman Mote of the same town, should remain firm and valid; and another, for the free passage and trading of the burgesses of Leicester through the whole kingdom, without paying any manner of toll, stallage, &c.[8].

The great kindness of this noble earl to the burgesses of Leicester is evinced by a charter exempting them from all payments in lieu of personal service in the gathering-in of his harvest, and also from the penalties incurred for cattle impounded[9]. They were also indebted to him for the gift expressed in the following undated charter, translated from a Corporation-book of References:

"Know all men present and to come, that I Robert earl of Leicester have given, granted, and by this my present charter confirmed, to the free burgesses of the town of Leicester, certain limits, being according as they have been appointed, divided, and set out, by my direction, upon the view of lawful men: A certain pasture which is called Cowhaye, without The South Gates; with free ingress and engress appertaining unto the said pasture, through my lordship; to wit, a pasture which is between my pasture which is called Oxhey and near the mill of Amaris Danet on the one part, and Tackholme on the other part; to have and to hold the said pasture, with the said appurtenances, to my said burgesses and their heirs and assigns, of me and my heirs, freely and quietly for ever; they honourably paying thereout to me, and my heirs and successors, for every cow joisted or to be joisted, and for every beast in the said pasture joisted or to be joisted, 3*d.* by the year. And, for this grant and confirmation, the said burgesses have given me a certain sum of money in hand, by way of fine, that neither I the said Robert, nor my heirs, my successors, nor any other person by us nor for us, may have any challenge or claim unto the said pasture hereafter. In witness whereof, I have confirmed this charter with my seal. Testibus; Will'o de Semsell, Thomâ Esterling, Radulpho Mortivall, Ernest de . . . ., Gilberto Miners, Galfrido Costeyn, . . . de Cranford, &c."

---

[1] See the present volume, p. 26.

[2] See p. 72.

[3] Roger de Hoveden Annalium pars posterior, fol. 307. b. Matthew Paris, fol. 172. Matthew of Westminster, Flor. Histor. lib. li. fol. 38. Mr. Carte was of opinion, that the quarter of the town which lies between the North and South gates, and is called The Back Lanes, was never rebuilt from the time of this grand demolition. The wall is represented as having been almost impregnable; and so indissoluble was the cement, that some remarkable pieces of it remained for above 400 years after, as appears by an order, made March 26, 33 Elizabeth, that no one decay or pull down the town wall, by getting stones, except by licence of a common hall, on pain of twenty shillings. The late Rev. William Ludlam, in a letter with which he several years ago favoured me, observes, that "the plan of Leicester, as it stood before that event, is easily to be traced. In the heart of the town, on each side the principal street, are a number of large orchards; separated not with one common fence as usual, but a double fence; a wall belonging to each, with public ways between the two walls, called Back Lanes. These back lanes were manifestly the streets, and the orchards the site of houses and yards destroyed, and never since rebuilt. The traces of the town-wall and ditch are in many places to be seen."

[4] See p. 78.

[5] Madox, History of the Exchequer, p 391.

[6] Throsby, p. 36.

[7] Harl. MS. 84. fol. 104. b.

[8] See both these charters in p. 97.

[9] See this deed at length in p. 97.

An early grant from king John to this earl Robert, of property in the Strand, has been already printed[1]; and an undated grant from the same earl to Geoffrey the Smith, of land without the South gate of Leicester, which had been held in serjeanty by Richard the son of Herbert, grandfather to the said Geoffry, has also been noticed on account of the rarity of the seal[2].

In 1201, king John summoning the barons, and other immediate tenants of the crown, to attend him at Portsmouth, in order to embark for his transmarine dominions, and reduce the province of Poictou to his obedience, which had revolted; the barons, instead of obeying the king's summons, assembled at Leicester, and from thence sent a message to the king, that they would not attend him in this voyage, unless he would restore them their antient rights and privileges; whereupon the king immediately marched against them with what troops he had about him; and, having taken Belvoir castle, which they had fortified, the barons were so terrified by this sudden attack, which they were not prepared to oppose, that they all submitted, and came to the rendezvous at Portsmouth[3].

In 1202, the public records preserve a deed under the title of "Pardonatio Roberti comitis Mellent[4]."

William son of Heneric (or rather William Fitz Lewerick, for so his name occurs as a witness to a deed) appears to have been an alderman of the gild of Leicester in 1203; and is the earliest person that the attentive researches of Mr. Carte could discover under that denomination[5].—"The government of the town," Mr. Carte adds, "is now vested in 24 aldermen, whereof one is mayor, with a recorder, and the company of 48, who are the common council. But, by such records or passages in antient writings as I have seen, I judge that the corporation originally consisted of a gild of merchants, whereof the master was styled alderman: I have met with several with that title; and the entry of freemen in the town books was long continued under the title of Gilda mercatorum. At the same time as there began to be a mayor the company of twenty four was also established; out of whom one is chosen annually, Sept. 21, to be mayor, who enters on his office Sept. 29; and on the Monday after Martinmas swore fealty to the earl of Leicester, as he does now to the king as duke of Lancaster[6]."—"The Borough of Leicester is an antient corporation of a mayor and aldermen, incorporated by king John. Within the said Borough there be four justices of peace. This mayor is justice for four years after; and as there be new mayors, there be new justices; and they go forth after the time of four years expired[7]."

Robert Fitz Parnell married Lora, or Loretta, daughter of William lord Braose of Brember; and, dying without issue in 1204, was buried in the abbey of Leicester; leaving all that great inheritance which he had from his ancestors to his two sisters, Amicia the wife of Simon de Montfort (who was great-grandchild of Almaric, an illegitimate son to Robert king of France), and Margaret, who was married to Saher de Quency (afterward earl of Winchester)[8]; upon partition whereof, the moiety of the earldom of Leicester, with the Honour of Hinckley and the office of High Steward of England, were allotted to Simon de Montfort, who was created earl of Leicester[9].

In 1204, Petronella countess of Leicester gave to the king 3000 marks, that she might enjoy Leicester, with its appurtenances, as also all the fees and demesnes belonging to the Honour of Grentesmainell, both within Leicestershire and without, as her proper inheritance[10].

Saher de Quency also gave 1000 marks for the custody of all the lands in England which had belonged to that earl, as well in demesne as fee, excepting the Honour of Grentesmainell, and the dowry of the two countesses (mother and wife of the late earl), and the castle of Mountsorell, which the king retained; and with a proviso for any claim that might be made by Avicia countess of Montfort. The king also gave him the manors of Bagworth, Croft, Weston, and Seneby, in Leicestershire, and Hungerford in Berkshire[11].

In the same year, earl Simon de Montfort gave a ton of wine of Auxerre, on sealing a reconciliation, pro apponendo sigillo concordie, made between himself snd William bishop of Lincoln[12]; and granted to Richard Suard, for his liege homage, 20 marks of rent in his præfecture of Leicester[13]. And William de Langton paid a fine to the king, for seisin of one carucate of land in the Suburbs of Leicester, which had been given to him by the late earl of Leicester for his homage and scutage; as did Richard le Burgeis, respecting a suit which he had with William Fitz Walter, touching a messuage in the same Suburbs[14].

Jan. 18, 1204-5, king John confirmed to Master Gilbert de Aquila 100*s.* rent in the præfecture of Leicester, which earl Robert Fitz Parnell had given to the said Gilbert for his homage and service[15].

April 28, 1205, king John sent his precept to the sheriff of Leicester, to make livery to Saher de Quency of all that land, without the wall of Leicester, which had belonged to Robert Fitz Parnell late earl of Leicester (whereof he had so granted him the custody); provided it were no part of the Honour of Grentesmainell, nor of the dowry of the countess; and excepting likewise to the said countess all that land which the king had commanded to be given unto her in exchange for the lands of the Honour of Grentesmainell, which the earl had passed to the Bishop of Lincoln by an agreement between them; and excepting to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis in Leicester those lands which had been given to them by the before specified earl[16]. And soon after, in consideration of a fine of 5000 marks, the king gave him also livery of all the lands and fees of the Honour of Grentesmainell, which he had formerly assigned to the countess Petronella, but had afterward re-assumed[17].

About the same time we find the following grant: "Johannes, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, &c. Sciatis nos, intuitu Dei, & ob amorem karissimi nepotis nostri domini O. Romanorum regis illustris, dedisse, concessisse, & presenti cartâ nostrâ confirmâsse magistro Willielmo de Leicestr', clerico ejusdem regis, XXX marcas singulis annis percipiendas ad Scaccarium nostrum London'; scilicet, XV marcas ad Festum Sancti Michaelis & XV marcas ad Festum Pasche, quousque ei in certo beneficio ecclesiastico usque ad estimationem XL marcarum redditûs providerimus. Testibus; dominis J. Norwic' & H. Sarum. Dat' per manum J. Bathon' electi, apud Winleshoram, 2° die Maii, anno regni nostri septimo[1]."

---

[1] See Appendix to vol. I. p. 38; from Harl. MSS. fol. 189. Q 7. in Arce Lond.
[2] See p. 97.
[3] Modern History, vol. XVI. p. 440.
[4] Rot. Pat. 4 John, m. 2. n. 7.
[5] See before, p. 97.
[6] Carte, MS.
[7] Burton, MS.
[8] H. Knighton, ut supra.
[9] Rot. penès Thesaur. & Cam. Scaccarii.
[10] Rot, Fin. 6 John, m. 10. & Rot. Pip. 6 John.
[11] Rot. Fin. 6 John, m. 1.
[12] Pat. 6 John; Rot. 176. Warr' & Leic'.
[13] Original Charters in the British Museum, 83 G. 45.
[14] Rot. Fin. 6. John.
[15] Cart. 6 John.
[16] Rot. Claus. 6 John, de terris Normannis datis, m. 3.
[17] Rot. Fin. 7 John, m. 4.

In 1206, Petronella countess dowager of Leicester had a grant concerning the anabagium and landing of boats (de anabagio & karkid battellorum), and also for a market and bridge, in the town of Ware[2].

March 5, 1206-7, the king ratified the agreement which had been made, before himself and his barons, by Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester and Saher de Quency earl of Winton, concerning the partition which had been made of the lands of Robert late earl of Leicester; excepting to earl Simon the third penny of the earldom of Leicester, and the office of steward to the king; provided that 40*l.* land of earl Simon's purparty should remain to earl Saher, till earl Simon should secure to him certain lands in Normandy; after the death of the two countesses, Petronella the mother and Loretta the widow of earl Robert, their dowries to be divided equally between earls Simon and Saher[3]. At the same time, the king granted to Saher de Quency a yearly rent of 10*l.* out of the revenues of the county of Leicester[4]; and (probably) the same sum to Simon de Montfort; which two sums, Mr. Russell very acutely supposed to be the 20*l.* originally paid out of the issues of the county to Hugo de Grentesmainell, as recorded in Domesday.

In 1207, Loretta the widow of Robert earl of Leicester obtained a grant "de libetatibus[5]."

In 1208, Saher de Quency gave to the king three excellent coursers for the chase, for livery of a moiety of the Suburbs of Leicester; which was thereupon divided by a jury, by virtue of the king's precept[6].

"Saherus de Quency reddit compotum de tribus optimis caszuris, pro habendâ medietate Suburbii Leicestrie, quod partitum fuit per juratam legalium hominum ultimo factum per preceptum regis[7]."

After having fully taken possession of his wife's purparty, Simon de Montfort retired into France, where his paternal estate lay; and in 1209 was chosen general of the crusade which pope Innocent had ordered to be carried on against the Albigenses; and the king of England and his dominions, which had been smarting two years under a papal interdict, were now further punished with a regular excommunication.

In 1210, Saher de Quency gave to the king another good courser (such a one as the king already had) called Liard, and a good pied brache[8]: and in 1211, being then fully seised of his moiety of the Honour of Leicester, he obtained a special discharge from the scutage of Scotland, then required for the same[9].

In 1212, Lewis the Dauphin invading England, Simon de Montfort supported him with his interest in this kingdom; whereupon the earldom of Leicester appears to have been forfeited; for, in the subsequent year, it was accounted for at the Exchequer among the escheats of the crown.

In 1213, William Heneric (or Fitz Lewerick) again occurs as an alderman of the gild of Leicester[10].

June 15, 1215, the Great Charter was signed at Runnymede; and in this year the king placed the earldom of Leicester in the hands of Montfort's near relation Ranulph Blundeville earl of Chester[11], to the use of Simon de Montfort, then in France. He gave also to the earl of Chester "totam terram Simonis de Monteforti, cum Forestâ[12]."

In this state things seem to have continued till the death of king John, which happened Oct. 19, 1216.

HENRY III.

In 1218, Randulph earl of Chester, Saher de Quency earl of Winchester, William de Albini earl of Arundel, and Henry Bohun earl of Hereford, went with soldiers into the Holy Land[13]. In this year also Simon de Montfort died, unrestored, being slain with a stone before the city of Toulouse, then besieged by Louis of France. He left issue, by Amicia his wife, Almaric earl of Montfort and constable of France, and Simon; and at this period we find the earldom of Leicester in the charge of Stephen de Segrave one of the young king's chief favourites.

In 1219, king Henry III. by charter, granted to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, that no free burgess should be impeached for the debt of another, if the principal were of ability to satisfy the same[14]; and in this year the earldom of Leicester was again committed to Ranulph earl of Chester, not improbably on account of some debt or mortgage incurred either by the earl of Leicester or the Crown[15]; and a commission was issued for surveying the Forests of Leicestershire and Rutland[16].

In 1222, the earls of Winchester and Hereford both died in the Holy Land[17].

In 1224, the earl of Chester, with many of the nobility, kept their Christmas at Leicester; whence they sent word to king Henry III. who was then at Northampton, that, unless he would forbear to demand his castles, and to hearken to the counsels of Hubert de Burgh, they would take up arms against him; but the archbishop of Canterbury and his suffragans, being then with the king, sending them word on the next day, that, unless they surrendered their castles, &c. they would excommunicate them, they thought it best to submit.

Matthew of Paris tells us[18], that in 1225, a young maid, a religious recluse, died at Leicester; who, for seven years together next before her death, eat no food, saving that on Sundays she received the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ; that Hugh the bishop of Lincoln, hearing of her abstinence, had caused her to be watched, that, if there had been any imposture, it might have been discovered; and that her face was as white as a lily, with a delicate mixture of a rosy colour, which was esteemed a great evidence of her purity and chastity.

In 1227, there was a general perambulation of the king's Forests in Leicestershire[19].

Feb. 5, 1228-9, king Henry III. granted to the good men[20] of Leicester, that the fair which used to be held there for 15 days, viz. on the eve, day, and morrow of St. Peter, &c. should thenceforth be held on the day of the Purification of our Lady, and for 14 days after. Testibus; J. Bathon', A. Dunelm', episcopis; Huberto de Burgo, & aliis. Dat' apud Westm', 5° die Feb.[21]

Soon after the earl of Chester's death, which happened in 1232, Almaric earl of Montfort, eldest son of the first earl Simon Montfort, preparing for his journey into the Holy Land, proposed to the king, that his younger brother Simon should quit France, and become entirely English; and that he would surrender all his right in the earldom of Leicester, provided the king would confer it on his brother: whereupon Simon was restored to the earldom of Leicester and stewardship of England, made high senechal of Gascoign[22]; and, with the consent of Almaric, the king granted to the said Simon all the lands in England which had belonged to their father[23].

"In 1233, were seen five suns at one time together; after which followed so great a dearth, that people were constrained to eat horse-flesh and barks of trees; and in London 20,000 died for want of food[24]."

In this year, we find the names of William Teynlo and Simon Curlewache, or Carlewake, presiding over the town of Leicester, as aldermen, being the first that occur in that capacity in the Corporation-books.

---

[1] Rot. Pat. 7 John; Harl. MSS. 85. fol. 320. b. AA 41. in Arce Lond.

[2] Rot. Pat. 8 John, m. 2. n. 12.

[3] Harl. MSS. 84. fol. 112. Chartæ Antiquæ K. in Turre Lond. n. 29. And see the Appendix to vol. I. p. 39.

[4] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 687.

[5] Rot. Pat. 9 John, m. 2. n. 18.

[6] Rot. Pip. 10 John.

[7] Mag. Rot. 10 John, Rot. 3, a.

[8] Rot. Pip. 12 John.

[9] Rot. Pip. 13 John.

[10] Carte, MS.

[11] Matthew of Westminster, p. 279.

[12] Rot. Pat. 17 John, m. 19. n. 75.

[13] Hakluyt, vol. II. p. 32.

[14] From a Collection of the Town Charters, made in 1623, Mr. John Hinde, mayor.

[15] See p. 104.

[16] Rot. Pat. 4 Hen. III. m. 4.

[17] Hakluyt, ibi supra.

[18] See p. 437.

[19] Rot. Claus. 11 Hen. III. m. 19.

[20] Probis hominibus—good, and as formerly used for good in condition; in leading, respectable, superior sort of people.

[21] Cart. 13 Hen. III.

[22] Registrum Magnum, in Offic. Ducat. Lanc.

[23] Rot. Pat. 16 Hen. III. m. 6. And see the Appendix to vol. I. p. 41.

[24] From an old list of Mayors, formerly belonging to the Rev. Mr. Topp.

In 1238, the earl of Leicester had so far improved himself in the king's favour, that, on the day after the feast of Epiphany, he gave him in marriage, with his own hand, his sister Eleanor, the widow of William Mareschall the younger, earl of Pembroke[1]; and a grant at the same period occurs, "Pro Simone de Monteforti & Alianorâ uxore ejus, sorore regis[2]."

The names of William Teynlo and Simon Curlewache occur again in conjunction in 1239, and so probably continued for several succeeding years; and during this seeming dawn of corporation government, Simon de Montfort gave to the burgesses of Leicester the following confirmation of the grant of a preceding earl:

"To all faithful Christians who shall inspect this present writing of Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester, health in the Lord. Be it known unto all people, that whereas Robert some time earl of Leicester, my predecessor, has feoffed, by his charter to my burgesses of Leicester, a certain pasture called Cowhey, and lying in the South Fields of Leicester, between my pastures on either side; that I have newly remised, released, and entirely from me and my heirs for ever quit-claimed all right and claim which I have had, or might have had, unto the said pasture, to my free burgesses of Leicester, which are or shall be (for the time being); to wit, to those unto whom the said pasture ought to belong, and that they may have and hold the said pasture, with the appurtenances, of me and my heirs, freely and quietly, without waste; paying thereout yearly to me and my heirs, or my successors, for every beast joisted, or to be joisted, 3*d*. as in the time of my predecessors were accustomed to be paid. And for this remise, release, and quitclaim, my said burgesses have given me a colt, of the value of one hundred shillings, in hand, that neither I the said Simon, nor my heirs or successors, nor any of us, nor on our part, may joist or depasture our cattle in the said pasture, but from all depasturing or joisting we may be for ever excluded. In witness whereof to this present writing of quitclaim my seal is put; these being witnesses: Philip Calewan, Richard de Harecourt, Alexander de Harecourt, Henry Costeyn, Peter son of Roger, Hugo Tasch, William Tasch, Richard son of Gosselyn, William Wakelyn, Theobald Clerk, and others. Dated at Leicester, on the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross, in the 23d year of king Henry the son of king John[3]."

June 21, 1239, the earl of Leicester assisted at the ceremony of baptizing Prince Edward, the first and new-born son of king Henry III. On the 9th of August, he attended with his countess at the public churching of the queen; but this gave the king an occasion to reproach him with having dishonoured his sister; which induced the earl to take the cross, with an intent to make a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, to expiate the sin of having married a lady who had entered into vows of chastity[4].

In 1240, the Patent Rolls record an "Inhibito Torneamenti apud Leycestr'[5]."

In 1243, another grant occurs, "Pro Simone de Monteforti comite Leicestrie & Alianorâ uxore ejus, sorore regis, ac quondam uxore W. Marescalli comitis Pembrochie, postea dos ejus in Hiberniâ, cccc li'[6]."

In 1245, an inquisition was taken, "de omnibus terris, redditibus, & feodis militum, que tenentur de honore Leicestrie in comitatu Sussex[7]."

In 1246, Peter Fitz Roger governed the town of Leicester alone as an alderman; and under that title he seems to have presided till 1248, when, according to the antientest catalogue of the mayors of Leicester which can be discovered, this Peter Fitz Roger appears to have been chosen the first mayor, and to have continued in that office for nine years[8].

Jan. 10, 1248-9, Simon de Montfort, sorarius regis, was sent to Theobald king of Navarre, &c. and Count Palatine, to settle all misunderstandings[9].

Robert Grosseteste, bishop of Lincoln, having complained to Pope Innocent, that many of the Religious in his diocese had presumed to take the tithes and possessions of churches in proprios usus, without the consent of his chapter; and having obtained a bull from the Pope for their resumption; he, in the year 1250, cited all the Religious in his diocese to appear at Leicester, on the feast of St. Hilary, to hear the mandate of the Pope: but, when they were met, the Templars, Hospitallers, and many other exempts, refused to obey it, appealing to the Pope. The good Bishop, attended by the archdeacon of Oxford, went to Rome to answer their appeal; but they, with their money, had so secured the Pope's favour, that he returned with disappointment[10].

In 1250, a dispute between Simon de Montfort, at that time the king's representative in Vasconia, "contra formam pacis inter regem & cives Burdegaliæ," is recorded in the Patent Rolls[11]; and repeated in 1251, when the king sent his young son Prince Edward with authority to adjust the differences[12].

In the same year, a confirmation grant occurs, to Roger de Quency earl of Winton, one of the heirs of Robert formerly earl of Leicester, "de liberatibus suis in medietate comitatûs Leycestr'[13]."

In 1252, Roger de Quency, earl of Winton, married Eleanor wife of William de Vallibus[14].

By an inquisition taken this year, it appears that the charters, whereby the former earls had remitted the payment of gavel-pence and brig-silver, with other writings, being in the custody of one Lambert, they were burnt, together with his house; which a person, who had taken the bailiwick of Leicester to farm, taking advantage of, exacted those payments afresh; which being represented to Simon Montfort the second, then earl of Leicester, he, by indenture, quitted claim to those payments for the future; Robert Fitz Roger, the then mayor, and the burgesses, on their part, quitting claim also to some demands which they had of him; to which were witnesses, sir Ernald de Bois, sir Ralph Bassett, sir Richard de Havering, sir Thomas de Estleye, &c.

About the same time, the earl granted a charter of the same import with that of Robert Fitz Parnell (mentioned p. 358.), exempting them from any demands for the reap of his domains, and pasturage of their cows and cattle; for which they gave him 15 marks. Witnesses; sir Stephen de Segrave, sir Thomas de Menill, sir Gilbert de Segrave, sir Nicholas de Lestres, &c. He also stipulated, that for the future, usque in finem mundi, no Jews should be permitted to reside within the town of Leicester[15].

In 1254, it was found that Matthew le Venour, at his death, held in Leicester 4*s*. 9*d*. rent of William

---

[1] Matthew Paris, anno 1238.

[2] Rot. Pat. 22 Hen. III. m. 9.

[3] Transcribed from the Corporation Book of References, noticed in p. 358.

[4] See the particulars at large in p. 108.

[5] Rot. Pat. 25 Hen. III. m. 3.—At this period, the practice of meeting in Tournaments was become so prevalent, and so much danger was apprehended from it to the state, that it was thought necessary frequently to prohibit them by public proclamation; which was the case in 1218 at Northampton, and afterwards at Leicester, and several other great town. Rot. Pat. 1 Hen. III. à tergo, "De torneamento respectuand' apud North';" 3 Hen. III. m. 3. apud Stanes; ibid. m. 4. n. 2. apud Northampton; and again, in numberless instances, to 5 Edw. III. inclusive. These Tournaments were regular military contentions, and consisted of many men in Troops; in which respect they differed materially from what, as the age grew more refined, was practised under the title of Justs, which were usually between two men singly, with spears, on horseback; and were regular exercises between martial men and persons of honour.

[6] Rot. Pat. 28 Hen. III. m. 11.

[7] Esch. 30 Hen. III. n. 40.

[8] "The Corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, and 24 aldermen, a steward, bailiff, and 48 common-council-men. The burgesses in parliament are erected by the inhabitants paying scot and lot, and freemen not receiving alms, and the mayor is returning officer." Willis, Notit. Parl. pp. 31, 302.

[9] Rot. Pat. 33 Hen. III. m. 7.

[10] Matthew Paris, pp. 1026, 1027.

[11] Rot. Pat. 35 Hen. III. m. 12.

[12] Rot. Pat. 36 Hen. III. m. 7.

[13] Ibid. m. 4.

[14] Rot. Pat. 37 Hen. III. m. 19.

[15] See all these deeds in the Appendix to vol. I. p. 38.

Sadynton and Roger de Cramford; and that Robert his son and next heir was aged 28[1].

In 1255, a circumstance took place, which was of very considerable importance to the inhabitants of Leicester; that whereas the law called Borough English, whereby the youngest son used to be heir to his father, prevailed in this town; it was altered, and the right of inheritance conferred on the eldest. At the petition and with the consent of all the burgesses, the earl of Leicester obtained, "Quod omnes filii primogeniti de legitimo matrimonio in villâ Leycestrie & ejus suburbiis, post mortem patris eorum, hereditatem paternam & habitationem pacificè, &c. de utero habeant & obtineant, & sine eis heredes de uteris legitimi[2]."

Bartholomew of Dunstable was mayor of Leicester in 1257; in which year earl Simon de Montfort was permitted to make a testamentary disposition of all his lands; and a deed occurs, "De hereditate ejusdem comitis recipiend' à Rege Franciæ[3].

A deed also occurs under the title of "Debitum Regis Simoni de Monteforti comiti[4]."

In 1258, the barons, at the instigation of the earl of Leicester, compelled the king, at a parliament held at Oxford, to delegate his regal power to 24 persons, 12 to be chosen from among the king's ministers, and the rest by the barons; reserving only to the king the chief place in all public assemblies. The earl of Leicester was at the head of this supreme council, to which the legislative power was thus in reality transferred; and on the 4th of May, a deed occurs, "De disceptione inter Regem & Simonem de Montforti comite Leicestrie, concernen' terras pro debito ejusdem comitis; in quâ de XXIV ex parte Regis, &c. elect' & conventur' apud Oxon' à die Pentecostes prox' futur' in unam mensem[5]."

In the same year, Henry de Rodington was mayor of Leicester, and so continued till 1268.

In March 1258-9, Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester, Robert de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hereford, Peter of Savoy, J. Maunsell treasurer of York, Jo. de Baillol, and Robert Wallerand, were appointed "Nuncii Regis ad tractand' cum Rege Franciæ de negotiis regis;" and at the same time, by other letters patent, were empowered to treat either jointly or separately[6]. And about the same time, the earl of Gloucester, John Maunsell, and Robert Wallerand, were authorized to settle all disputes between the king and Simon de Montfort and Eleanor his wife, the king's sister. Several noblemen also entered into a bond of 3000 marks to certain merchants, for the debt due from the king to the earl of Leicester; who jointly with Eleanor his wife, had a grant of the manor and soke of Gunthorp in Nottinghamshire; and also of several other manors to the annual value of 50*l.*[7] Soon after which, the earl of Leicester, enraged at the opposition he met with from his own party, pretended to throw up all concern in English affairs, and retired wholly into France[8].

At a royal feast, on St. Edward's day, March 18, 1259-60, Henry son of Richard king of Almaine officiated as the earl of Leicester's deputy in his office of high steward of England[9].

On the 18th of May, 1261, an order was issued, "De depellendo omnes extraneos à regno, quos Simon de Monteforti comes Leicestrie nititur introducere[10];" and on the 20th of July, the king submitted all differences between himself and the earl and countess of Leicester to the arbitration of Margaret queen of France, sister to the queen of England[11].

Jan. 18, 1262-3, the king dispatched letters to the king of France, "de negotio comitis Leicester[12];" and in 1263, the earl of Leicester having reconciled himself to the king, obtained a safe conduct for himself, his wife, and children[13]; the king granted to Simon de Montfort junior, son of Simon earl of Leicester, all the possessions in England which had belonged to John Maunsell[14]; and in July this year, on Thursday before the feast of St. Margaret, a new great seal was solemnly delivered to the custody of Nicholas Archdeacon of Ely, in the presence of the earl of Leicester and other magnates of the realm[15].

When the fatal differences between king Henry III. and his barons broke out into acts of hostility, the earl of Leicester was the chief ringleader in the ensuing war; and, coming over secretly from France, collected all the forces of his party; and, entering into open rebellion, Prince Edward, the life and soul of the royal party, was by him taken prisoner, in October 1263, in a parley at Windsor; after which, the king and the barons once more agree to submit their differences to the arbitration of the king of France[16].

In December this year, we find the agreement and oaths of king Henry III. his son prince Edward, and his barons, made to Lewis king of France, to observe all the ordinances that had been made at Oxford, concerning the disputes between the king and his barons, dated at Windsor, "Dominicâ proximè post festum Sanctæ Luciæ Virginis[17]."

On the 13th of March, 1263-4, messengers were sent from the king to Simon de Montfort and the other barons, to require them to answer certain articles at Brackley, in the presence of John de Valentinis, the king of France's envoy[18].

On the 14th of May, the earl of Leicester, then general of the confederate barons, took the king, and his brother Richard king of the Romans, prisoners at the battle of Lewes; whereupon he assumed and kept the sole government of the kingdom; and appointed his nephew Henry de Montfort to be constable of Dover Castle, and warden of the Cinque Ports[19].

On the 11th of June, peace was proclaimed in London between the king and his barons; "in quâ notandum, quod Rex tempore turbationis recepit omnes Judeos London', ut eos protegeret à violentiis[20];" and on the 23d, Stephen bishop of Chichester, Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester, and Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hereford, were allowed to nominate nine of the king's council, to be sent by the king and his barons to Lewes[21].

An agreement occurs, August 25, between Simon de Montfort and Roger de Mortimer and the other Lords Marchers of Wales[22]. Simon de Montfort earl of Leicester was appointed by the king to treat with Robert de Ferrariis, "circa ardua negotia regis[23];" and, Sept. 4, the king requested that Henry son of Richard king of Almaine (at that time detained by the English barons as a hostage in the castle of Dover, under the custody of Henry de Montfort, contra voluntatem regis) might be allowed to pass over to the king of France, to negotiate peace between the king and his barons; the said Henry first binding himself by oath before the king and his magnates, that he would in no wise act against the said barons, and that he would return and surrender himself again into the custody of Henry de Montfort; for the due performance of which, several noblemen entered into a bond of 20,000 marks[24].

In December this year, the earl of Leicester had the custody of all the lands of Richard brother to the king of the Romans[25]; and about the same time a writ was issued, to enquire whether Roger de Quency had recently before his death granted to Robert de Quency, late earl of Winton, the manor of Stiventon in special tail, namely, to the then heir male of Robert the donor; and at the same time several public instruments were signed, as well on the part of the king, as of the earl of Leicester and the other then opposing barons, to submit all matters in contention to the arbitration of the king of France[1].

---

[1] Esch. 39 Hen. III.
[2] Carte, MS.
[3] Rot. Pat. 41 Hen. III. m. 12, 13. n. 16.
[4] Ibid. m. 15.
[5] Rot. Pat. 43 Hen. III. m. 9. n. 28.
[6] Ibid. m. 11. n. 24. 25.
[7] Ibid. m. 5. n. 24; m. 12. n. 29; dors. n. 4.
[8] Annal. Burton. p. 427.
[9] Rot. Pat. 44 Hen. III. m. 2. n. 3.
[10] Rot. Pat. 45 Hen. III. dors. n. 3.
[11] Ibid. m. 17. 21. 33.
[12] Rot. Pat. 47 Hen. III. m. 19. n. 53.
[13] Ibid. m. 8. n. 30.
[14] Ibid. m. 5. n. 16.
[15] Ibid. m. 6. n. 21.
[16] Matthew Paris, p. 669.
[17] Rot. Pat. 48 Hen. III. m. 18. n. 75.
[18] Ibid. m. 16. n. 57. 58. m. 17. n. 64.
[19] Ibid. m. 13. n. 47.
[20] Ibid. m. 12. n. 41.
[21] Ibid. m. 10. n. 57.
[22] Ibid. m. 5. n. 19.
[23] Ibid. m. 5. n. 22.
[24] Ibid. m. 4. n. 16.
[25] Rot. Pat. 49 Hen. III. m. 27. n. 111.

Jan. 3, 1264-5, several prisoners taken at Northampton were ordered to be released, the earls of Leicester and Gloucester having undertaken that they should attend on the king when commanded; and on the 17th, certain "milites scutiferi de partibus borealibus" had the earl of Leicester's safe conduct, and that of Roger de St. John, for the like purpose[2].

In February, this year, the earls of Leicester and Gloucester, and several other noblemen, were prohibited from holding a tournament at Dunstable; and were ordered to attend the king, respecting the liberation of prince Edward[3].

March 10, prince Edward and Henry son of the king of the Romans, who, after the battle of Lewes, had been detained by Henry de Montfort as hostages, were delivered out of custody; and, for the security of the realm, the castles of Dover, Scarborough, Bamburgh, Nottingham, &c. were committed to the custody of the barons[4].

In April 1265, Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester and high steward of England, had a grant in fee of the castle and honour of Chester, the castle and honour of the Peak, and Newcastle under Lyne[5].

May 20, a treaty of peace and amity between the earls of Leicester and Gloucester was published throughout the realm[6]; but on the 8th of June, the bishop of London was directed to excommunicate prince Edward and Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester, and their adherents, who were then in rebellion, in opposition to the treaty which had recently been concluded[7].

On the 9th of June, the town and castle of Bristol were ordered, by Roger de St. John and Giles de Argenton, the king's justices, to be guarded, for the sole use of the king and Simon de Montfort, against Edward the king's son, and all other persons[8]; and on the 12th, the earl of Leicester and Roger de St. John the king's secretary were empowered to treat with Lewin Fitz Griffin prince of Wales, who obtained from them his pardon, and was placed over all the nobles of Wales, on payment of 30,000 marks[9].

Prince Edward, after a year and half's imprisonment, making his escape, the king's letters were sent to Simon de Montfort the younger, and to several other custodes comitatuum, June 28, to put them on their guard against the rebellious conduct of the young prince and others, who had engaged in a new warfare at Monmouth[10].

On the 4th of August, the earl of Leicester was, together with Henry his eldest son, slain at the battle of Evesham; when the conquerors, at the head of whom was the young prince Edward, to their eternal disgrace, cut off the earl of Leicester's head, and sent it, as a dastardly token of victory, to his wife.

Upon the breaking out of the war, the castles at Leicester and Mountsorell had been repaired, and put into a posture of defence; but, soon after, the latter was destroyed by order of Henry III; and the former was but little made use of during this turbulent reign, notwithstanding that the town of Leicester, at the beginning of the troubles, was the resort of the barons, where they met for the purpose of raising their army, and fortifying the castle. It is exceedingly probable that the town of Leicester, about this period, had increased in population: it had escaped the distress which others unfortunately endured in consequence of the war; it had become a sanctuary to many unhappy people, who were driven from their dwellings where the scourge of war had passed. The charters of its great earls, and those granted by king John, with the prospect of a more regular mode of government, which was rising into consequence and usefulness, had rendered it a place desirable. They were again, however, forced to purchase the king's favour by the payment of a considerable sum of money.

On the 1st of October, the letters patent were revoked, which had been granted to several persons, "de pardonatione debitorum Judæorum," whilst the king, after the battle of Lewes, was in the custody and in the power of Simon de Montfort, formerly earl of Leicester, his enemy; who had used the royal seal at his own pleasure, and sealed with it divers letters contrary to the king's will, and in general to those who had opposed him and his eldest son. Another patent, which had in like manner been given to Almaric de Montfort, of the treasurership of the church of York, was also revoked[11].

On the 6th of October, for the good services performed by Gilbert de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hereford, Thomas de Clare, and John Giffard, at the battle of Evesham, the king remitted the offence of their having adhered to Simon de Montfort at the battle of Lewes[12]; and on the 25th, the posterity of Montfort being disinherited by parliament, the king granted to his second son Edmund Crouchback, in fee, "comitatum & honorem Leicestrie, ac senescalciam Anglie, nuper Simonis de Monteforti, quondam comitis Leicestrie[13];" together with all other the lands of the earl of Leicester, with those of Robert earl de Ferrariis, Nicholas lord Segrave[14], and other vast possessions; and advanced him to the earldoms of Lancaster, Leicester, and Derby.

In 1268, Jordain Wardeston was mayor of Leicester, and Alexander Bourn in 1269; in which year, it was found that the "honor, villa, & manerium de Leicestriâ," had been forfeited to the king, by the attainder of Simon de Montfort; and in the same year, the office of high steward was assigned for life to the king's second son earl Edmund.

"Edwardus, &c. militibus, liberis hominibus, & omnibus aliis tenentibus de comitatu & honore Leycestrie, senescalciâ Anglie, & de omnibus terris & tenementis que fuerunt Simonis de Monteforti quondam comitis Leycestrie, salutem. Sciatis quod dedimus & concessimus Edmundo filio nostro predicto comitatum, honorem, senescalciam, terras, & tenementa, que fuerunt prefati Simonis inimici nostri, exceptis dominicis nostris; habendum & tenendum de nobis & heredibus nostris eidem Edmundo & heredibus suis in perpetuum, faciendo servitium inde debitum & consuetum. Et ideo vobis mandamus, quod eidem Edmundo tanquam domino vestro in omnibus que ad predictum comitatum, honorem, senescalciam, terras, & tenementa pertinent, de cetero intendentes sicut predictum est. In cujus, &c. Teste, &c.[15]"

On the 20th of April in this year, at the instance of earl Edmund, a charter was obtained, under the title of "Libertates pro majore Leicestrie[16];" by which it was granted to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, "that neither their persons nor goods, in any place of the king's dominions, should be arrested for any debt whereof they were not sureties or principal debtors, unless the debtors were of their community, and under their power, having wherewith to satisfy the debts in whole or in part, and the mayor and burgesses were deficient in doing justice to their creditors; and this should be made reasonably to appear."

From this period the inhabitants of Leicester may date the growth of their prosperity. Their former losses were speedily recovered under their Lancastrian earls; who frequently honoured the town with their residence, adorned it with public and stately structures, and procured for it several privileges and immunities; in which flourishing condition it continued, till its lords, having obtained the sovereignty of the kingdom, brought it under the immediate government of the Crown.

In 1270, Alexander Bourn was again mayor of Leicester; and in this year another instance occurs of a tournament being prohibited in this town[17].

---

[1] Rot. Pat. 48 Hen. III. m. 12, 13.

[2] Rot. Pat. 49 Hen. III. m. 25. n. 106. 107.

[3] Ibid. m. 23. n. 100. 101.

[4] Ibid. m. 20. n. 87; m. 21. n. 91.

[5] Ibid. m. 18. n. 79.

[6] Ibid. m. 15. n. 61.

[7] Ibid. m. 13. n. 54.

[8] Ibid. n. 53.

[9] Ibid. n. 47. 49.

[10] Ibid. m. 12. n. 45.

[11] Ibid. m. 6. n. 27; m. 7. n. 33.

[12] Ibid. m. 5. n. 25.

[13] Ibid. m. 1. n. 7.

[14] Ibid. m. 2.

[15] Selden, Titles of Honour, p. 605.

[16] Rot. Pat. 53 Hen. III. m. 18. n. 40.

[17] Rot. Pat. 55 Hen. III. m. 18. n. 40.

EDWARD I.

In 1272, the Honour of Leicester was again demised, by the young king, to his brother Edmund earl of Cornwall[1].

In 1274, John Alsay was mayor of Leicester; and in this year it was found that Thomas de Nevill held the fourth part of a knight's fee in Leicester and Rotherby, late parcel of the possessions of sir Robert de Montalt, out of which sir Robert and his heirs ought to have wards, services, and reliefs[2].

William Leef was mayor of Leicester in 1274, and continued in office till 1277; in which year occurs, a "Participatio feudorum militum de Rogero Quenci, quondam comitis Wintonie, apud S. Neotam, inter coheredes ejusdem hereditatis."

William English was mayor of Leicester in 1279 and 1280; Thomas Gamfrey, 1281—1284.

In 1285, at Michaelmas, John de Camp, and another named Salomon, justices in eyre, held a session at Leicester, when Godfrey Manclarke was mayor, and again in 1286; Thomas Gamfrey in 1287 and 1288; John Alsay, 1289; Thomas Gamfrey, 1290; and Lawrence Miller, 1291; in which year a record occurs, under the title of "Muragium pro villâ Leicestrie[3]."

Thomas Gamfrey was again mayor of Leicester in 1292; William English, 1293; Thomas Gamfrey, 1294; Ralph Ionick, 1295; in which year, Master William Bois enfeoffed dame Milicent de Montalt in his rent of Leicester[4].

In 1296, Robert de Vere earl of Oxford, at his death, held divers lands in the town of Leicester; and Robert his son and heir was then of full age[5]. Peter Humphrey was then mayor; and so continued till 1299, in which year Edmund earl of Lancaster was sent into Gascoigne with an army; and, dying the same year at Bayonne, his body was brought into England, and interred in the abbey at Westminster[6]. At the inquisition taken on this occasion, it was found that, at the time of his death, he held the town of Leicester[7]. He was succeeded by Thomas his eldest son.

Thomas Gamfrey was again mayor in 1300, and William English in 1301; in which year we find a grant for erecting a prison in the town of Leicester, to prevent the inconvenience of sending their prisoners to the gaol at Warwick; "de prisonâ in villâ Leicestrie construend' pro prisonâ comitatûs, qui ante usque gaolam Warwici duci solebant[8]."

William Palmer was mayor in 1302 and 1303; Robert Willoby, 1304; and Roger Willoby, 1305.

Nov. 8, 1305, king Edward I. granted to Thomas earl of Lancaster and his heirs a yearly fair, to be held on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, and 14 days after, at his manor of Leicester. "Testibus; venerabilibus patribus Johanne Cicestr' episcopo, cancellario nostro; Johanne episcopo Norw'; Hen' de Lacy, comite Linc'; Petro de Gaveston, comite Cornubie; Roberto de Clifford; Milone de Stapleton, senescallo hospitii nostri; & aliis. Dat' apud manerium nostrum apud Westmon', 8° die Novembris. Per ipsum regem, nuncio Willielmo Inget[9]."

Lawrence Caedge was mayor of Leicester in 1306.

EDWARD II.

John Celar was mayor of Leicester in 1307; and John Caedge in 1308.

Aug. 2, 1309, the king, being then at Stanford, sent his letters to the sheriff of Leicester; signifying, that whereas the late king Edward his father, for the more convenience of the inhabitants of Leicestershire, had, with the consent of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, ordained, that a public prison should be made in the town of Leicester, for the safe keeping of all prisoners taken within the said county; and that whereas he himself, after the death of his said father, had, by his writ, commanded that the said prison, then not wholly finished, should be forthwith completely perfected; so that no prisoner should thenceforth be carried out of the said county of Leicester (as until then was the custom) to the prison at Warwick; and that whereas he was now credibly given to understand, that the said prison was at length accordingly finished; he therefore required, that the said sheriff should cause all such prisoners as should be thenceforth apprehended in the county of Leicester to be safely brought and kept in the said new prison at Leicester, until they should be thence delivered by due course. Teste Rege, apud Staunford, 9° Augusti[10].

John Alsay was mayor of Leicester from 1309 to 1312; in which year, Thomas earl of Lancaster, siding with the barons against Pierce Gaveston, was made their general; for which, in 1314, he obtained the king's pardon, though it seems he was not restored to his favour. This Thomas was earl of Lancaster, Leicester, and Derby, as heir to his father; and of Lincoln and Salisbury, as some say, in right of Margaret his wife, only daughter of Henry de Lacy earl of Lincoln.

Walter Basley was mayor of Leicester in 1313; John Knight, 1314; John Alsay in 1315, 1316; John Marrow, 1317; William Weanhouse, 1318; in which year, the Pope sent two cardinals, Cancellino and Lucas de Teisio, into England, to mediate a peace between king Edward II. and his kinsman Thomas earl of Lancaster and Leicester, and between the king of England and Robert Bruce king of Scotland[11]. The cardinals, therefore, with the king and queen, and archbishop of Canterbury, with all the bishops of the province, the earls and barons, and the other great men of the kingdom, came to Leicester; and on a day appointed, the earl, marching with a retinue of 18,000 men, met the king at Syroches Brigge, which now (says H. Knighton) is called Sotes Brige, where the king and the earl very kindly saluted each other; and, so far as appeared to those present, were made good friends, and thereupon the cardinals soon set forwards towards the North. The same year certain articles were agreed on at Leicester, between earl Thomas and the clergy, which were afterwards confirmed at London by the cardinals, the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Durham, and other prelates of the province of Canterbury, and then sent to the earl at Tutbury[12].

Peter Kent was mayor of Leicester in 1319, 1320; John Marrow in 1321; in which year, the barons again taking arms, on pretence of removing the Spencers (and then potent favourites), the earl of Leicester appeared at the head of them, forcing the king to a dishonourable accord; but the next year, being forsaken by the Mortimers and several leading barons of the faction, he was by the king routed at Burton upon Trent, pursued Northward, and taken at Boroughbrig, co. Ebor; and on the third day after, in the king's presence, condemned, and beheaded on the 22d of March at his castle of Pontefract[13]. He died without issue, so that Henry his brother succeeded him; who, notwithstanding his brother's attainder, found such favour at the king's hands, that, in 1324, he had a grant of the title and honour of the earldom of Leicester[14].

William Lyndrige was mayor of Leicester in 1322; John Norton, 1323; John Alsay, 1324; and Robert Strayton, 1325; when it was found that Roger Beler, deceased, and Alice his wife, had held one messuage and three shops in the town of Leicester, by the service of 2*s. per annum*; and that there was a certain burgage there, and 3*s.* rent due from the free tenants in Belgrave-gate, which the said Roger held of William la Zouch, by the service of 6*d. per annum*[15].

Robert Strayton was again mayor of Leicester in 1326; in which year, sir John de Vaus, knt. came to the Abbey of Leicester, on the nones of October, with choice armour, rich cloaths, great horses, and a vast quantity of treasure, belonging to the lord Hugh de Spenser earl of Winchester, being on his march to the earl of Leicester, who designed to assist the king against queen Isabel and her son prince Edward[1]: but the men belonging to Henry earl of Lancaster and Leicester, happening at that time to be assembled at the Castle of Leicester in great numbers, came by night to the Abbey, and besieged him there; whereupon sir John de Vaus, perceiving that he could not prosecute the business of his lord, in the next morning went to the earl of Lancaster, then residing at his Castle of Leicester. As soon as he was gone out, the people entered the Abbey, and, seizing all the things which he had brought thither, carried them to the Castle. Within three days after this, the earl, with all the forces which he could raise, departed hence to join the queen at Dunstable; and the king, being taken on the 18th of November, was committed to his custody in Kenilworth Castle, where during the whole winter he was treated with great kindness and humanity; but the next year, the earl refused to have the guardianship of him any longer, because a report was spread abroad, that some of the abettors of the old king had formed a project to steal him out of the castle of Kenelworth, when the earl was elsewhere employed on his necessary affairs[2]. The unfortunate monarch survived till the 21st of the following September, when he was cruelly murdered in Berkeley Castle.

---

[1] Rot. Pat. 56 Hen. III.

[2] Burton, p. 295.

[3] Rot. Pat. 17 Edw. I. m. 17.

[4] Esch. 23 Edw. I. N° 19. Leic.

[5] Esch. 24 Edw. I. N° 62. Leic.

[6] See a full account of him, and two splendid engravings of his monument, in vol. I. p. 222.

[7] Esch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[8] Rot. Claus. 29 Edw. I.

[9] Cart. 33 Edw. I. N° 26.

[10] Claus. 3 Edw. II.

[11] Peck, lib. X. p. 12; H. Knighton, col. 2534.

[12] Ibid. col. 2535.

[13] See before, p. 224.

[14] Rot. Fin. 14 Edw. II.

[15] Esch. 29 Edw. II. N° 98. Leic.

EDWARD III.

In the first Parliament held by the new king at Westminster, March 9, 1326-7, Henry earl of Lancaster obtained an act for reverting the attainder of his brother Thomas; on which occasion it was found that Thomas earl of Lancaster, at his death, had held of lord Edward, late king of England, father of the king who now is, the Castle and Honour of Leicester, by the service of two knights fees and a half; and the manors of Hinckley, Shulton, and Desford, co. Leic. as parcel of the Castle aforesaid, by the aforesaid service; also 30*s.* 10*d.* rent, arising out of divers free tenements in Swanington and Ravenston; and that Henry de Lancaster, brother of the said earl Thomas, was his next heir[3].

In 1327, John Norton was mayor of Leicester; and in this year king Edward III. returning from Scotland, held his second parliament at Lincoln, where he was advised by his mother queen Isabel, Roger Mortimer, and others, to demand a subsidy of the clergy; upon which the bishops desired time of deliberating concerning an answer to be given to the king at the feast of All Saints at Leicester.

In 1327-8, the king obtained a grant of the twentieth penny of the temporalities, and of the tenth of the spiritualities[4]; which was made at Leicester, at the instance of Henry earl of Lancaster.

Whilst the king continued at Leicester, the monks and inhabitants of Coventry obtained a patent, Jan. 6, for the taking toll of all vendable commodities brought into that city for six years to be sold, towards their charges of inclosing the same. Sir William Dugdale[5] supposes this was for inclosing it with a rampire of earth; for the licence to inclose it with a wall of lime and stone was granted in 1364.

In 1328, the new earl of Lancaster, out of dislike of the proceedings of the king's mother and Mortimer, refused to be present at the parliament held at Salisbury, where John of Eltham was made earl of Cornwall, Roger Mortimer earl of March, Edmund Boteler earl of Ormond; all of whom, with their adherents, gathered a great army, and ravaged the lands of the earl of Lancaster; and particularly coming to Leicester, on the day before the nones of January, staid there and in the adjacent country eight days, making great havock and spoils, destroying the woods, parks, and fish-pools, and carrying away all they could lay their hands on, whether valuable or not; gold, silver, grain, utensils, arms, and garments, wild and tame beasts, oxen, sheep, geese, hens, and the very ornaments of the churches, leaving nothing in them or elsewhere which they could meet with[6]. And all this out of spite to the earl of Lancaster, who at that time was marching from the South part to encounter them with a great power, having with him such of the nobility as formerly had been adherents to Thomas earl of Lancaster.

John Alsay was mayor of Leicester in 1328, and Henry Merlin in 1329; in which year he occurs as a witness to the following deed:

"Sciant presentes & futuri, quod ego Ricardus Cagge de Leicester dedi, concessi, & hâc presenti cartâ meâ confirmavi Roberto de Rerisby de Leicester, quinque eycras terre, cum pertinentiis, & cum crofto ibidem crescente, in parochiâ S. Margarete, in le Mersh lane, continentes septuaginta pedes; que jacent inter terram quondam Willielmi le Cu & terram Johannis de Burgo, & extendit de dictâ venellâ usque ad terram meam propriam; habendum & tenendum dicto Roberto, heredibus & suis assignatis, liberè, quietè, benè, & in pace, in perpetuum, de capitalibus dominis feodi illius, per servicia inde debita & consueta. Et ego dictus Richardus & heredes mei dictas quinque eycras terre, cum pertinentiis, dicto Roberto, heredibus & suis assignatis, contra omnes gentes warantizabimus in perpetuum. In cujus rei testimonium presentem cartam sigillo meo signavi. Hiis testibus; Henrico Merlin, majore Leicestrie; Willielmo de Clounâ, ballivo; Willielmo de la Waynhouse, Johanne de Sallowe, Johanne de Lidington, Willielmo le Porter, Willielmo Bonifeaun, Roberto de Beby, Stephano clerico, & aliis. Datum Leicestrie, die Martis proximè post festum Apostolorum Simonis & Jude, anno regni regis Edwardi tertii post Conquestum quarto[7]."

Aug. 11, 1329, king Edward III. granted to Henry de Burghersh bishop of Lincoln, and his successors in that see, liberty of free-warren in all their demesne lands at Leicester and Esfordeby[8].

Henry Merlin was again mayor of Leicester in 1330; in which year a grant of pontage (concessio pontagii) was obtained for three years, for the repair of the bridge at Leicester[9].

John Marrow was Mayor of Leicester in 1331 and 1332.

"Without the South gate, Henry earl of Lancaster, in 1332, founded an Hospital, or Bede-house, for four chaplains, two clerks, fifty men, and five women, which continueth in good state at this day. This Hospital hath in it about 110 persons; their ordinary pay is 7*d.* ob. a week. The mayor of Leicester is the master thereof. Sir William Herrick of Beaumanor, knight, hath given 10*s.* yearly for a sermon to be preached there on Monday in Whitsun week yearly, for the same end that the Hospital sermons in London are. This Hospital was incorporated by king James, by the name of The Hospital of the Holy Trinity; the seal, a triple dart issuant out of a flame in chief; with this word, In Antitrinitarios[10]. And near unto the same, Henry duke of Lancaster, son to the said Henry, built a most magnificent and goodly College, called (for distinction from the former) The New Work (which name still it beareth), for a dean, twelve prebends, and certain choristers; which, whilst it stood, was no small ornament and beauty to the city; but, at the general suppression of abbeys in the time of king Henry VIII. it was pulled down[11]."

John Martin was mayor of Leicester in 1333; John Leverych, 1334; John Alsay, 1335; William Warren, 1336; William Clanney, 1337; in which year, in summer, the king had a general subsidy of wool; at which time he received of the abbey of Leicester

---

[1] Knighton, col. 2546.

[2] Ibid. col. 2551.

[3] Esch. 1 Edw. III. Nº 88. Leic.

[4] Knighton, col. 2552.

[5] Warwickshire, ed. 1730, vol. I. p. 140.

[6] Knighton, col. 2554.

[7] Peck, MS. ex autogr. penès virum Rev. Joh. Kilby, vic. S. Marg. Leic. 1729.

[8] Cart. 4 Edw. III. Nº 46.

[9] Claus. 4 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 24.

[10] See this seal engraved in vol I. Plate XXVIII. fig. 16. In the same Plate are two views of the Hospital, taken in 1776 and 1796.

[11] Burton, MS.—Of both these splendid foundations an account has been given in vol. I. pp. 329—352.

18 sacks, and set the rate of nine marks upon each sack; but when it was transported to Brabant, each sack was sold for 20*l.*[1]

John Martin was mayor of Leicester in 1338; Jeffery Kent in 1339 and 1340; in which year, in summer time, there was a strange kind of sickness common in England, which in an especial manner reigned in Leicestershire[2]. The paroxysms of the fits were attended with intolerable pains, and caused the patients to make a noise like the barking of dogs[3].

Jeffery Kent was again mayor of Leicester in 1341; Richard Leverych, 1342; John Martin, 1343; and Richard Leverych, 1344; in which year, at the feast of St. Andrew, there was a solemn tournament held at Leicester by Henry earl of Derby, son of Henry earl of Lancaster, on occasion of the marriage of his daughter Maud; and in the Easter week, John de Alithwerl, clerk, was murdered in his own house by his wife and man-servant, and others their accomplices, and then carried and laid upon the bank of the Soar, under the Abbey; for which crime his wife Emma was burnt, and his servant hanged, but the rest escaped[4].

John Waynhouse was mayor of Leicester in 1345; when Henry earl of Lancaster was buried in his own collegiate church at Leicester with great pomp, the king and queen, with many of the nobility, attending the funeral in person[5].

In the same year, a general chapter of the order of St. Augustine was held at Leicester abbey.

John Hayward was mayor of Leicester in 1346; when Thomas Le Beke, bishop of Lincoln, on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodstock, the king's eldest son, was assessed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in the Suburbs of Leicester[6].

John Hayward was again mayor in 1347; when it was found that William de Herle, deceased, had held one messuage at Leicester of the earl of Leicester, by the service of 2*s. per annum*[7]. At the same time, the warden and scholars of Merton College held 8*s.* rent in the town of Leicester[8]. In this year, the king, being engaged in war with France, in pursuance of the aid granted him, received from the county of Leicester 333 sacks of wool; from that of Derby 252, &c.; each sack containing 26 stone, and each stone 14 pound weight[9]. In those days, a sack of wool being transported to Brabant used to be sold for 20*l.*

In 1348, John Hayward was a third time mayor; and in this year died at Lichfield Robert de Leicester, a native of Leicester, and student at Oxford. He was a Franciscan friar, and a great divine; and esteemed, in a particular manner, by his patron the bishop of Hereford. He wrote many books, whose merit gained him the reputation of a good writer and schoolman.—In this year, the most dreadful and universal plague raged in England that was ever known; which, arising in the Eastern parts of the world, spread itself Westward, and came into England; and particularly at Leicester it raged so, that (as Henry Knighton, a monk of the abbey there, tells us[10]) there died, in the little parish of St. Leonard, above 380, in that of the Holy Cross above 400, in that of St. Margaret above 700, and so in other parishes proportionably. In the same year, there was such a rot of sheep, and that putrefied them in such a manner, that neither birds nor beasts would touch them. And the calamity was so great, and every one so apprehensive of imminent death, that nobody minded riches or any thing else, so that every thing was extremely cheap; for (as Knighton tells us, without doubt from what he observed at Leicester) a man might buy a horse, which before was worth 40*s.* for half a mark; a fat ox for 4*s.* a cow for 12*d.* a heifer for 6*d.* a fat mutton for 4*d.* a sheep for 3*d.* a lamb for 2*d.* a great hog for 5*d.* a stone of wool for 9*d.* &c. It was observed, that the pestilence this year seized chiefly the meaner sort of people.

Jeffery Kent was mayor of Leicester in 1349; in which year, in the parliament adjourned to Leicester, the commons fell so severely upon the duke of Suffolk, that the king thought fit to banish him, with a secret design to recal him; but he was beheaded at sea.

William Goldsmith was mayor of Leicester in 1350, and again in 1351; in which year king Edward III. granted here a market and a fair to Henry the newly-created duke of Lancaster; which fair the said duke presently after granted to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, and their successors, to be governed by the mayor and two or three of the burgesses of the same borough, to be yearly chosen, and to have the appointment of the stalls and standings, and are now called the stewards of the fair: the same fair to be free from tolls, &c.

Roger Knightcote was mayor of Leicester in 1352; Jeffery Kent, 1353; John Paitling, 1354; and William Dunstable, 1355; in which year, 9 kal. Aprilis, the statutes of the foundation of Newark college are dated; wherein the founder then instituted a dean, thirteen canons secular, thirteen vicars, three clerks, six choristers, and one minister[11].

Roger Knightcote was mayor of Leicester in 1356; William Dunstable, 1357 and 1358; and John Cook, 1359 and 1360; in which year, on the 20th of July, King Edward III. in lieu of a fair which Henry duke of Lancaster and earl of Leicester, and his ancestors, before then held yearly at Leicester, on the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross, and 15 days after, granted to the said duke and his heirs one other fair, to be held at Leicester, three days before, upon the feast, and three days after, the feast of St. Michael; provided that all strangers resorting to the said fair should be free from toll, stallage, picage[12], and all customs and payments due to the said earl or his heirs.

"Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie et Francie, et dominus Hibernie, archiepiscopis, &c. salutem. Supplicavit nobis dilectus consanguineus et fidelis noster Henricus dux Lancastrie et comes Leicestrie, quod cum ipse habeat, et ipse et antecessores sui et alii qui comites Leicestrie pro tempore fuerunt à tempore quo memoria non existit singulis annis habuerunt, unam feriam apud villam Leicestrie, que de nobis tenetur in capite ut dicitur, in festo Invencionis Sancte Crucis et per quindecim dies proximè sequentes duraturam; velimus ei concedere quod ipse et heredes sui, loco ferie predicte, habere possint unam aliam feriam, apud villam predictam et suburb' ejusdem, singulis annis per septem dies, videlicet, tribus diebus proximè ante festum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, et in eodem festo, ac tribus diebus proximè sequentibus, in perpetuum duraturam; ita quod quilibet indigena sive alienigena ad villam et suburb' predicta, causâ ferie predicte veniens, ibidem moram faciens, et exinde recedens, tam ante dictam feriam quam post, in perpetuum, sit quietus de theolonio, stallagio, picagio, et aliis custumis et prestacionibus quibuscumque, eidem duci, seu dictis heredibus suis, racione dicte ferie qualitercumque spectantibus, solvend': Nos, optentum laudabilis et fructuosi obsequii ipsius ducis nobis à diu impensi, volentes supplicacioni sue anime in hâc parte, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali concessimus, et hâc chartâ nostrâ confirmavimus, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, eidem duci, quod ipse et heredes sui, loco dicte antique ferie, exnunc habeant unam aliam feriam, apud villam et suburbium predictam, singulis annis, per septem dies, videlicet tribus diebus ante festum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, et in eodem festo, et tribus diebus proximè sequentibus, in perpetuum duraturis, nisi feria illa sit ad nocumentum vicinarum feriarum: Quare volumus et firmiter precipimus, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quod idem dux et heredes sui in perpetuum habeant dictam feriam apud villam et suburbium predictum, cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus ad hujusmodi feriam pertinentibus; salvo semper, quod quilibet indigena sive alienigena, ad dictam villam et suburbium causâ ferie predicte veniens, ibidem moram faciens, et exinde recedens, tam in dictâ feriâ, quam ante et post, in perpetuum, sit quietus de theolonio, stallagio, picagio, et aliis custumis et prestacionibus quibuscumque, eidem duci seu dictis heredibus suis, racione ferie predicte, qualitercumque spectantibus solven', nisi feria illa sit ad nocumentum vicinarum feriarum, sicut predictum est; et quod dicta antiqua feria exnunc cesset omnino. Hiis testibus; Simone archiepiscopo Cantuar', W. episcopo Winton' cancellario, & J. Roffen' episcopo, thesaurario nostro; Ricardo de Arundell, Roberto de Ufford, Suff', & Radulpho de Stafford, comitibus; Waltero de Mannye, Johanne de Bello-Campo, & Guidone de Brian, senescallo hospitii nostri, & aliis. Dat' per manum nostram apud Westm', secundo die Julii, anno regni nostri Anglie 34°, regni verò nostri Francie 21° [1]."

---

[1] Knighton, col. 2570.

[2] Ibid. col. 2580.

[3] In the Philosophical Transactions, n. 270. p. 799, Dr. J. Freind gives an account of two families at Blackthorn in Oxfordshire, who in the years 1700 and 1701 were afflicted with a distemper much like this of 1340. Dr. Willis, in his account of it, calls it morbus novus Cynicus. See Camden, Annals of Ireland, p. 188.

[4] See before, p. 226.

[5] Knighton, col. 2584.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[7] Esch. 21 Edw. III. No 44. Leic.

[8] Ibid. No 91. Leic.

[9] Knighton, col. 2595.

[10] Ibid. col. 2509.

[11] Carte, MS. from a communication of Browne Willis.

[12] A duty paid for breaking the ground to set up stalls.

William Goldsmith was mayor of Leicester in 1361; in which year a plague happened; not so universally fatal as that of 1348, but much more destructive of the nobility and gentry; and among others the great, valiant, and liberal prince Henry Plantagenet, duke of Lancaster; who came to the earldom, by the death of his father, in 1345; was created duke March 6, 1350; and died at Leicester in Lent, 1361, much lamented by all; having, by his many good deeds, obtained the name of the good duke of Lancaster. He had made his will a few days before, it bearing date March 15, 1360, at his Castle of Leicester, in which he prescribed the order of his funeral; and according to which he was buried in the Newark, in the collegiate church which he had founded[2]. He held, at his death, the Castle, Manor, and Honour of Leicester, of the king in capite[3].

William Tubbe was mayor of Leicester in 1362; in which year, Maud, wife of William duke of Barr [Bavaria], at her death, held the Castle, Manor, and Honour of Leicester, of the king in capite; and Blanch her sister was her next heir [4].

Roger Belgrave was mayor in 1363; about which time, according to Knighton, the following circumstance occurred. A certain man, who was called Walter Winkborn, was hanged in Leicester, upon the prosecution of brother John Dingley, master of Dalby, of the order of the Knights Hospitallers; who being taken down from the gallows, after hanging the usual time, was put into a cart; but, as he was taking to St. Sepulchre's chapel to be buried, he revived; which the priests perceiving, they took him into the chapel, and there protected him from the civil officers, who would have taken him again to the gallows to have suffered. At this time king Edward III. was at the abbey, where he had rested on a journey; and the story of the man's recovery being related to him, the king was graciously pleased to grant him his pardon, saying, "Deus tibi dedit vitam, & nos tibi dabimus curtum," as Knighton[5] relates, who was then in the king's presence, and heard him utter the words.

In 1364, John Martin was Mayor of Leicester; in which year it was found, that sir Robert de Herle, at his death, held 38*s*. yearly rent, to be received out of a certain messuage in Leicester, held of the duke of Lancaster, as of the Honour of Leicester, by the service of 12*d. per annum*[6].

William Siston was mayor of Leicester in 1365; John Stafford, 1366; Thomas Bebee, 1367; John Coke, 1368 and 1369; John Stafford, 1370; in which year a writ occurs, "De officio Cambiatoris Calesiæ commisso Johanni de Leycestrie. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 6° Septembris[7]."

In 1371, William Greene was mayor of Leicester; Henry Clipson, 1372; Henry Petling, 1373; William Ferror, 1374 and 1375; William Taylor, 1376; in which year John of Gaunt styling himself "king of Castile and Leon, duke of Lancaster," by indenture, to ferm let to the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of Leicester, the bailiwick of the town, suburbs, and fields of Leicester, with the appurtenances of the same, with all executions within the same, and all other profits; the profits of the portmote courts, of the fairs, markets, and all other courts, rents, ferms, goods and chattels; of fugitives, felons, forfeitures of waste, the year and day of them; deodands, treasure-trove, &c. &c. with the keeping of all manner of prisoners—except the Castle of Leicester, the mill under the same, and rents and services levied by the porter of the said Castle by old time accustomed, and the court of the same, &c.; to hold the premises for the term of . . . years from Michaelmas next, yielding therefore to the said duke yearly 20*l*. And he also granted to them and their successors sufficient timber, in the woods of the Honour of Leicester, belonging to the said duke, for all manner of reparations for all manner of shops, houses, shambles, with all other clausures to the same belonging, by the oversight of the master forester of the Forest of Leicester. Given at Leicester, the Monday next after the feast of the Assumption of our Lady[8].

William Ferror was mayor of Leicester in 1377; in which year king Edward died on the 21st of June.

RICHARD II.

In 1377, king Richard II. held a great council of war at Stamford, to consult about an expedition into France: but it came to nothing in that inactive reign. However, it was this year ordered in Parliament, that certain small barges, called balingers, should be made and got ready, by several cities and good towns of England, against the first day of March next. The king commanded the bailiffs and good men of the town of Stamford and of the town of Leicester to make forthwith, and get ready, one competent balinger, having between forty and fifty oars, against the said day, at the costs of the more sufficient and richer men of the said town only, and not of others; and not by any means to charge any other men, of ordinary or inferior condition, to the expence of the said balinger. Afterwards, because it seemed to the king and his council, that the men of the said town of Staunford, who had possessions, goods, or chattels, to the value of 5*l*. and more, might reasonably contribute to the making of the said balinger; the king, by his letters patent, appointed sir William Busshy, knight, sir Thomas de Burton, knight, John Harowedon, and John Broun, alderman, of Staunford, three or two of them, to cause all such men of the town of Staunford, as had possessions, goods, or chattels, amounting to the value of 5*l*. and not under; to wit, each of them to be reasonably taxed and assessed, according to the rate of the value of such their possessions, goods, or chattels, to the cost of making the said balinger for the said town, and to cause the sums so taxed and assessed to be levied; and to compel all persons who were rebellious or contrariant in this matter, either by distresses if need were, or by other lawful ways and means; and to certify the king, from time to time, of the names of such rebels. These things the king commanded the said commissioners to do and execute with all speed in form aforesaid; and also commanded the bailiffs and good men of the said town to be intendant and obedient to the commissioners, or to any three or two of them, in the execution of this mandate. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 6° die Aprilis[9].

William Ferror was again mayor of Leicester in 1378; and king Richard II. having the last year commanded the men of Staunford and Leicester to fit out a balinger for the wars, which they accordingly did; he, on the 8th of February 1378-9, with the advice of his parliament, in consideration of the great charge which the men of Leicester had been at in fitting out the said balinger, confirmed a grant which had been obtained in 1199 from John earl of Mortaigne, about buying and selling of lands in the portman mote there:

---

[1] Cart. 34 Edw. III. n. 18.

[2] See the former part of this volume, p. 231.

[3] Esch. 35 Edw. III. pars 1. N°. 122.

[4] Esch. 36 Edw. III. Pars 1. N°. 37.

[5] Col. 2627.

[6] Esch. 38 Edw. III. N°. 23. Leic.

[7] Catalogue des Rolles François, vol. II. p. 103.

[8] Cart. 49 Edw. III

[9] Pat. 1 Ric. II. pars 5. m. 36. dorso.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Inspeximus cartam domini Johannis quondam Regis Anglie, progenitoris nostri, in hec verba: [Here the grant already printed in p. 97 is literally recited.] Nos autem concessionem & confirmationem predictas ratas habentes & gratas, eas, pro nobis & heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, burgensibus predicte ville Leicestrie, heredibus & successoribus suis, burgensibus ville predicte, ratificamus, approbamus, concedimus, & confirmamus, sicut carta predicta rationabiliter testatur, & prout hujusmodi emptiones & venditiones terre ville predicte hactenus rationabiliter facte extiterunt. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 8° die Februarii. Per ipsum Regem & Consilium in Parliamento, quia fecerunt quandam Balinger cum hominibus ville Stanford[1]."

Richard Clipston was mayor of Leicester in 1379; when a deed occurs, "De libertatibus olim pertinentibus & modò clamatis & allocatis Henrico de Lancaster, in villis de Lilborne, Esthaddon, Hameldon, Dodeford, & Wedon, parcell' Honoris de Leicester[2]."

Richard Gamelston was mayor in 1380; when it was found that Roger Beler, at his death, held 30*s*. rent of certain burgesses of Leicester, payable at Candlemas, which the said burgesses held of the duke of Lancaster[3].

John Stafford was mayor in 1381; Richard Knightcote, 1382; Richard Gamelston, 1383; Henry Ferror, 1384, in which year, the great Roformer Wickliffe died[4]; Henry Bebee in 1385, when, on the feast of the Translation of St. Thomas the Martyr, the king and queen passed through Leicester, in their way towards Scotland, and were followed by the chief of their army[5].

Henry Bebee was again mayor in 1386; Richard Braunston, 1387 and 1388; in which year there was such plenty, that in Leicester market 100 quarters of barley were sold for 100*s*.; and the king and queen, in their progress towards York, on the morrow of St. Valentine, called at the abbey of Leicester, and lodged that night at the lord Beaumont's at Beaumanor; and on their return the king and queen lay at Groby, 14 kal. September; and 16 kal. October, the king and queen lodged at the abbey of Leicester, and with them the duke of Ireland, the earl of Suffolk, the archbishop of York, and bishop of Chichester[6].

William Stretton, of Whetstone, gave 12*d*. yearly rent, and the reversion of a messuage and two yard lands, to Richard Braumston, mayor of Leicester, &c. die Mercurii, in festo Sancti Botulfi abbatis (1388).

Henry Clipston was mayor of Leicester in 1389; William Humberstone, 1390; Jeffery Okeham, alias Clark, 1391; when it was found that Mary wife of Roger Beler (married first to John Seintclere) held at her death 30*s*. rent in Leicester of the lord duke of Lancaster, by the service of 2*s*. per annum[7]; and also that Robert de Swillington, knight, held at his death one messuage in the town of Leicester, called Winges-place, of the duke of Lancaster, as of the Honour of Leicester[8].

Richard Braunston was again mayor of Leicester in 1392, in which year archbishop Courtney visited the abbey of Leicester[9]; and William Mercer and William Spencer, Sept. 14, gave to the mayor and corporation of Leicester divers lands and tenements in Leicester, Whetstone, and Great Glen, towards the amendment and reparation of the six bridges within the town of Leicester, and for other charges within the said town arising, to be maintained according to the appointment of the said William Mercer and William Spencer; but this act of theirs being contrary to the statute of mortmain, before it could take effect, there was first an "Inquisitio de ad quod dampnum," and then a licence from the king, of necessity to be had for that purpose; but which were as follows:

"Juratores dicunt, quod non est ad dampnum, si Rex concedat Willielmo Mercer & Willielmo Spenser, quod ipsi VIII messuagia, XV cotagia, II shopas, unum toftum, VI virgatas & IX acras terre, VI acras & unam rodam prati, & XXV solidatas, IX denaratas & obolum redditûs, & redditum unius galli & II gallinarum, cum pertinentiis, in Leicestriâ, Wheston, & Magnâ Glenne, dare possint majori ville Leicestrie. Dicunt etiam, quod II messuagia, V cotagia, II shope, unum toftum, XVIIIS. redditûs, & reversio II messuagiorum, & una roda terre cum pertinentiis in Leicester tenentur de domino duce Lancastrie; per quod servicium ignorantur; & ipse de domino Rege. Et dicunt, quod sunt in Wheston sex messuagia, X cotagia, VI virgate terre, & IX acrâ terre, VI acre & una roda prati, XIII d. ob. redditûs, & redditus unius galli & II gallinarum, que tenentur de domino Johanne de Bellomonte per servicium IIIS. xd. & secte curie de tribus in tres; & ipse de domino Rege. Et quod remanent ultra in villâ Leicestrie terre ad valenciam xxl. per annum[10].

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Licet, &c. de gratiâ tamen nostrâ speciali, & pro XX libris quas dilecti nobis major & communitas ville Leicestrie, nobis solverunt, concessimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & successoribus nostris, quantum in nobis est, Willielmo Mercer and Willielmo Spencer, quod ipsi VIII messuagia, XV cotagia, II shopas, unum toftum, sex virgatas & IX acras terre, sex acras & unam rodam prati, XXV solidatas, IX denariatas & unam obolum redditûs, & redditum unius galli & II gallinarum, cum pertinentiis, in Leicester, Wheston, & Magna Glenne (que de nobis non tenentur) dare possint & assignare prefatis majori & communitati; habend' & tenend' sibi & successoribus suis, ad emendationem & reparationem sex pontium infra villam de Leicestriâ predictam, ac ad alia onera infra eandem villam emergentia, juxta ordinationem ipsorum Willielmi & Willielmi in hâc parte faciendam, supportandum, &c. Teste Rege, apud Nottingham, 23° Septembris[11]."

Richard Humberston was mayor of Leicester in 1393; Thomas Wakefield, 1394; in which year Constantia, eldest daughter and coheir of Peter king of Castile and Leon, second wife of John duke of Lancaster (whom he had married about 1371) died, and was very honourably interred at Leicester on Sunday next after the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul. And on Monday, being the next day, Mary de Bohun, younger daughter and coheir of Humphrey earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton, the first wife of Henry earl of Derby (afterwards king Henry IV.); son of the duke of Lancaster, was buried at the New College in Leicester[12].

Henry Bebee was again mayor of Leicester in 1395; Thomas Bayley, 1396; John Houghton, 1397; and Ralph Fisher, 1398; in which year, John duke of Lancaster dying about Candlemas, his son Henry (who had been banished the foregoing year) landed in England in July, and to him king Richard surrendered himself the 20th of August, 1399; whereupon the duke brought him to Leicester, and thence to London, where, on Michaelmas day, he resigned his crown to the duke, who thereupon was declared king, by the name of whereby the dukedom of Lancaster and earldom of Leicester were united to the crown. But several conspiracies were made against him; which being discovered, many suffered on that account[13].

HENRY IV.;

Roger Humberston was mayor of Leicester in 1399; in which year, Nov. 5, the king granted to Thomas Horneby of Leicester the custody of the court called

---

[1] Pat. 2 Ric. II. pars 2. m. 3. 32.

[2] Rot. Claus. 3 Ric. II. n. 2.

[3] Esch. 4 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[4] Of whom a full account is given in the Fourth Volume, under Lutterworth.

[5] H. Knighton, col. 2675.

[6] Ibid. 2693. 2696.

[7] Esch. 15 Ric. II. pars 1. N° 5.

[8] Ibid. N° 62.

[9] See the proceedings on this occasion in the former part of this volume, p. 262.

[10] Esch. 16 Ric. II. pars 1. n. 97.

[11] Pat. 16 Ric. II. pars 1. m. 6.

[12] Knighton, col. 2741.

[13] Anglia Sacra, vol. II. p. 364.

The Prince's Court, co. Leicester, late William Outeby's.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Sciatis, quod, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, concessimus dilecto nobis Thome Horneby de Leicestrie custodiam curie vocate le Prince Court in comitatu Leicestrie, habendam pro tempore vite sue, cum omnibus exitibus & proficuis curie predicte pertinentibus, usque ad valorem quatuor marcarum per annum: quod quidem officium Willielmus Outeby habuit, de dono Ricardi nuper regis Anglie Secundi post conquestum. In cujus, &c. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 5º die Octobris[1]."

William Spencer was mayor in 1400; John Loveday, 1401; Peter Clark, 1402; in which year, some affirmed that king Richard II. was alive; and a conspiracy was discovered, for which some were put to death. Anong these some were Grey friars; of which one Richard Triseley, doctor of divinity, being asked what he would do if king Richard were present, answered, "that he would fight in his quarrel against any man, even to death;" whereupon he was hanged and drawn in his religious habit. Shortly after sir Roger Clarendon, bastard son of the Black Prince, and with him a 'squire and yeoman, were beheaded, and eight Grey friers hanged and beheaded at London, and two at Leicester; all which had published king Richard to be alive[2].

In the same year, Roger son of Roger Ironmonger granted to John Caumbrigge and others one messuage in St. Martin's parish, in Holyrood-lane; and six cottages in Baldwingate, in St. Nicholas's parish, in the town of Leicester[3].

John London was mayor in 1403; John Church, 1404; Richard Fawkner, 1405; Thomas Wakefield, 1406; and Ralph Humberston, 1407; when sir John Lovel, knt. died seised of 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly rent, arising out of a certain messuage in Leicester[4].

John Gresley was mayor in 1408; John Church, 1409; Thomas Bayley, 1410; in which year, the king was at Leicester, in November; for on the 15th of that month are the letters patent dated, whereby he empowers Isabel, relict of Fulco de Penbruge, chevalier, Walter Swan, and William Mosse, clerks, to found the collegiate church of Tonge in Shropshire.

Roger Humberston was mayor in 1411; and Thomas Walgrave, 1412; in which year, March 20, king Henry IV. died.

HENRY V.

Robert Randolph was mayor of Leicester in 1413; and Robert Evington in 1414; in which year a parliament was held in this town; but not at the period which has generally been ascribed to it by our Historians, misled by the authority of Prynne, who, in his "Abridgement of the Records," states, that the Parliament 2 Hen. V. which was summoned to meet at Westminster on the Monday after the Octaves of St. Martin, was afterwards prorogued to Leicester.

The fact is, there were two distinct parliaments in this year; and it was the earliest of these, which, by the king's writ, was convened at Leicester, on Monday the 30th of April, 'en une graunde Sale pres l'Esglise & la Mansion des Frieres Menours a Leycester.' And of the acts of this Parliament, as Prynne has not mentioned them, I shall give a short epitome.

The king's uncle, bishop of Winchester and lord chancellor, having taken for his theme, Posuit cor suum ad investigandum leges, opened the meeting by a learned speech; in which he demonstrated that no kingdom can exist in safety without a due reverence for the Supreme Being, and a proper respect for the laws; and that both the Church and State had been much endangered by the heresy of the Lollards. He recommended that proper remedies might be devised for the maintenance of peace and good order; and stated also, by the king's command, that though it had been customary with his predecessors to ask from the commons a subsidy of tenths and fifteenths from the laity, he would for the present dispense with such request, and leave it to some future time; but, that justice might be done to all persons, he recommended that triers of petitions should be appointed; and the commons were directed to assemble in Le Fermerie, a house belonging to the Friars Minors, there to elect a speaker, to be presented to the king on the following day. This they accordingly did; and Mr. Walter Hungerford was presented as speaker, and graciously accepted.

The Triers of Petitions for England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, were appointed to meet en le Fraitour ou Refectoire des Frieres Menours; and those for Gascoigne and other places beyond sea en le Maison appellée le Chapitrehous as Frieres Menours.

A subsidy was in this parliament granted to the king of 3*s.* a tun upon all wine exported and imported, except for the king's own use; and of 12*d.* in the pound upon all merchandize imported and exported, except wool, hides, and skins; and except also all manner of grain, flour, preserved fish, and cattle, imported; and corn for the victualling of Calais.

At the particular request of the lords and commons, the king created his brother John of Lancaster earl of Kendal and duke of Bedford; his other brother Humphrey of Lancaster earl of Pembroke and duke of Gloucester; and Richard of York earl of Cambridge.

Edward duke of York, for the good services he had performed to the king's father, and to the king himself, was restored, by a declaration of the king in parliament, to all the honours of which he had been deprived by a judgment against him in the parliament of 1 Henry IV.

In like manner Thomas duke of Clarence the king's brother, and his uncle Thomas Beauford earl of Dorset, were respectively restored to their titles and honours.

A certificate from Robert Hakebeche, sheriff of Cambridgeshire, that John de Wyndesore, who had been ordered to attend the parliament at Leicester on a writ of Scire facias, had in the mean time died.

Thomas Montague earl of Salisbury, son and heir of John Montague late earl of Salisbury, petitioned that the judgment passed against his father in 1401 might be reversed, on several grounds of error; which he strongly enforced by comparison with the cases of Thomas some time earl of Lancaster in 1320, and of Roger de Mortimer earl of March in 1331. A day of answer was appointed to him against the next parliament.

The following petitions presented in this parliament were of a public nature:

1. That the Church might enjoy its accustomed privileges; the lords spiritual and temporal and other liege subjects, the franchises granted by the king's predecessors; and that the great charter, the charter of the Forest, and such other statutes as were unrepealed, might continue in full force. Granted.

2. A complaint was presented against the officers of the Ecclesiastical Court, that exorbitant charges were made for probates of wills, &c.; the officials and commissaries frequently exacting fynes, fees, raunseons, & extorsions, to the amount of 100*l.* 40*l.* 20*l.* or more or less, in an arbitrary manner; whereas, by the old accustomed law, 2*s.* 6*d.* was the proper charge. In answer to which, the prelates engaged that due remedy should be provided within half a year after the see of Canterbury, then vacant, should be filled up.

3. It being represented to the king in parliament, that the revenues of divers hospitals throughout the realm, founded by his royal predecessors, or by liberal individuals, for the maintenance of aged men and women, lazars, lunaticks, pregnant women, and other distressed persons, had been grossly misapplied: Order was given for their proper visitation and reform.

4. The commons petition, that in future all persons against whom a writ of Certiorari corpus cum causâ shall be issued, may not be improperly bailed, nor released without bail unless by the consent of the plaintiff. Granted.

---

[1] Pat. 1 Hen. IV. pars 1. m. 34.

[2] Stowe's Chronicle, p. 347.

[3] Claus. 4 Hen. IV. m. 16.

[4] Esch. 9 Hen. IV. Nº 29. Leic.

5. The commons complain against improper conduct in the spiritual Courts. Ordered to be redressed.

6. They complain also, that the statutes for the regulation of labourers and artificers are evaded, by the flight of that description of persons from one county to another, by which they escaped from justice. Ordered to be amended by holding sessions uniformly throughout the kingdom in one and the same week; and the sheriff of each county to attend this part of his office under pain of forfeiting 20*l*.

7. The commons complain, that they are often impleaded in the Spiritual Courts for tithe of timber trees of 20 or 40 years growth, under the name of Silve cedue; and pray that no trees may be reckoned titheable that are of more than 21 years growth. Being an affair of great consequence, the consideration was adjourned to the next parliament, when the Clerk of the Parliament is to bring it forward at an early period.

8. The commonalty of Northumberland represent that murders, treasons, homicides, robberies, &c. are frequently committed by the inhabitants of the privileged places of Tyndale, Riddesdale, and Exhamshire, bordering on the Marches of Scotland, by reason of their being so privileged; and that they unlawfully harbour and protect certain natives of Scotland, and countenance them in murder and rapine. Due remedy is directed to be provided.

9. The commons pray that, in case of a peace with France, the possessions of the Alien Priories may not be restored to the foreign houses, but reserved to the king's use; to the intent that divine service may for the future be more regularly performed in them by Englishmen than had lately been done by Frenchmen; with the exception, however, of the possessions of such alien priories as were conventual, of priors regularly inducted, and also such as had been settled by king Henry IV. on the master and college of Fodrynghay; and saving also to all persons, whether spiritual or temporal, any such of the said possessions as they may have legally purchased foom their former owners, or received as a grant from the crown, they paying thereout all proper charges, pensions, annuities, and corrodies. Granted.

10. The commons assert, that the commonalty of the land is, and ever has been, "a member of the king's parliament, as well Assenters as Petitioners;" and pray that nothing which they may ask through the mouth of their Speaker may pass into a law in any way that may change the intention of what they ask. The king grants that nothing shall be enacted that may bind them without their assent; reserving his real prerogative, to "grant and deny what him lust of their petitions and askings." And, having a great desire to amend whatever may be found amiss, he, by the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and at the request of the commons, agrees to the several following Statutes which appeared to be necessary and profitable;

11. A Statute against murder, robbery, spoiling of goods, breaking through treaties and safe-conducts, within the realms of England, Ireland, Wales, and the high seas.

12. A Statute against Hereticks and Lollards.

13. A Statute for the more effectual suppression of riotous and unlawful assemblies.

14. Another Statute against murders, homicides, robbers, &c. who, having committed the said several offences, by secreting themselves in woods or other lurking-places, avoided the then existing laws.

Thus ended the public business of the parliament at Leicester; in the course of which the following petitions were presented to them, on what in modern language would be styled private business.

1. William Cryche, prior of Mountagu in Somersetshire, represented that his priory, being a cell to Clugny in France, had been seized by king Edward III. and was afterwards given by king Henry IV. to Fraunceys de Baugiaco, predecessor to the petitioner; and therefore prayed, as the brethren of the house were all Englishmen, that they might remain in quiet possession. Granted.

2. John Rypon, abbot of Founteynes (who, in obedience to a papal bull, had, by the king's order, been put into legal possession), having a legal process against Roger Frank, a monk (who had intruded himself into the said abbey, and taken from it several ornaments and goods) was way-laid, on the edge of Welbeck Park, by Olyver Frank brother to the said Roger, and Robert Frank his cousin, with at least 40 other persons, and dangerously wounded; for which he requested redress. He was referred to seek his remedy by common law.

3. Another petition of the same abbot John Rypon is also entered, stating that his abbey had been plundered of several chalices, jewels, and other church ornaments; also of the common seal; and that 500 oxen and 700 sheep had been forcibly taken away; and that, whilst he was on his journey to London, to answer in the courts of king's bench to a writ issued thence against him, he was forcibly attacked near Welbeck, as represented in his former petition; and praying relief. Again referred to common law.

4. Roger Frank, monk, and of right abbot of Founteynes, represents that he was lately made abbot there, agreeably to the statutes and privileges of the Cistertian order, and duly put into possession and confirmed by the superior of that order in a general chapter; till one John Rypon, lately abbot of Meux, by untrue suggestions to the pope, had obtained a bull to oust him from the said abbey, to the great prejudice of the king and his crown, and contrary to law; and praying to be restored to his abbey. There being a writ pending between the parties on the Statute of Provisions, as Master William Hankeford chief justice of the king's bench asserted; the king directed both parties to await the issue of that trial.

5. A petition of Thomas duke of Clarence, Esmond earl of March, Thomas earl of Salisbury, Henry le Scrop lord of Masham, John Nevill son and heir of Ralph earl of Westmoreland, and Lucy relict of Edward late earl of Kent; stating, that John duke of Milan and the commonalty of that city had neglected to pay 70,000 florins, which they had engaged to pay by bonds entered into on the marriage of Edward late earl of Kent with Lucy daughter of Barnabo late duke of Milan; and praying that letters of marque and reprisal may be granted for the effectual recovery of the same. Granted.

6. A petition of John Barndesley, respecting the manor of Shorteley in Coventry, formerly the property of Roger Leedaile, esq. whose widow the said John had married, by whom he had a son William; and complaining that they were unjustly disseised of the said manor by Baldwin son and heir of Baldwin Frevile. Le Roy vorra faire gree ceste partie, à l'instance & requeste des Co'es esteantz en cest Parlement.

7. The tenants of Darleton and Ragenell in Nottinghamshire state, that they have always enjoyed common of pasture belonging to their freeholds; but of late sir Richard Stanhope had forcibly inclosed all the common fields, meadows, and pastures, to their great injury. As this petition relates to frank tenement, the king will be further advised on it.

8. Oliver Billyng, of Wympeton, in the county of Nottingham, and Agnes his wife, widow of John Sewale of the same place, state, that the said John Sewale, by his last will, had appointed the said Agnes and John Sewale of Coventry, her brother, his executors; and that, after his death, the last mentioned John being old and impotent, had renounced the executorship, and Agnes had solely administered: Yet, nevertheless, sir Richard Stanhope, under the sanction of John Sewale's name, had taken all the goods and chattels of her late husband to the amount of 60*l*. and all her own goods worth 20*l*. more, with all her cloaths except what she was then wearing, and all the debts which were due to her amounting to 19*l*.; and praying relief. The petition was openly read in parliament in the presence of sir Richard Stanhope; who denied all the allegations it contained.

9. A petition of the chancellor and scholars of the University of Cambridge, complaining of the great inconveniences sustained by being under the frequent necessity of answering to indictments of felony, in cases wherein they had in no wise offended; and praying, that the chancellor of the University and certain burgesses of the town may be authorized to take cognizance of such supposed offences. The king will provide proper remedies for both Universities.

10. John Bryn, Roger Leney, Robert Swynnerton, Thomas Marchall, and Henry Herdley, complain, that Robert Corbett and Richard Lacum, who in the last parliament had been returned knights of the shire for the county of Salop, had maliciously named the said petitioners to be collectors of the tenths and fifteenths granted in that parliament; and, in further prosecution of their malice, had by force of arms obstructed them in the execution of their duty, and violently assaulted and wounded them, killed their horses, to the detriment of the king's revenue, and the dishonour of his crown and dignity. The answer to this petition appears in the large schedule annexed.

11. The large schedule, above referred to, enumerates many instances of interruption received by the said collectors, at Eton, Moreton Corbet, Oldbury, and Shrewsbury; and the particulars of an attack made at Dunstable (where the king then was) on two of the said collectors, who were deputed by their brethren to carry their collection to the Exchequer, when they were cruelly beat and wounded by Roger Leney. Ordered to be tried, by due form of law, in the court of king's bench.

12. Edmund le Ferrers, esq. complains that Hugh Erdeswyck and divers other persons of the counties of Chester and Stafford had made a violent assault on his town of Charteley, in the county of Stafford, killed John Page, one of his servants, and demolished his park pales; and praying redress. The Statute of 13 Henry IV. provides a sufficient remedy.

13. A counter petition of Hugh Erdeswyck, esq. complains of riotous proceedings on the part of Edmund Ferrers; of which several instances are produced. The same Statute is sufficient for this also[1].

In 1414, Francis Keble, esq. died seised of one message, with the appurtenances, in Leicester; which was held of the king, as of his dutchy of Lancaster, by fealty, and the service of 3*s.* 9*d. per annum*[2].

In 1415, Ralph Humberston was mayor of Leicester; in which year, Oct. 24, was the famous battle of Agincourt[3].

Thomas Saborne was mayor in 1416; John Earnsby, 1417; Henry Bebe, 1418 (in which year the lord Cobham and sir John Oldcastle were hanged[4]); William Pacy, 1419; and Thomas Walgrave, 1420; in which year Robert Shillington died seized of one message and two shops in Leicester; which were held of the king, as of the Honour of Leicester[5].

In 1421, Ralph Humberston was mayor of Leicester; and John Church in 1422; in which year, on the 31st of August, king Henry V. died, at the age of 34.

HENRY VI.

In 1423, Henry Foster was mayor of Leicester; in which year, Maud wife of sir John Lovel, knt. died seised of 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly rent, arising out of a certain message in the town of Leicester: which was held of Katherine Queen of England, as of the Honour of Leicester; also of a certain parcel of meadow in the same place, held of the same Queen[6].

In this year, Richard Hynam, of Leicester, had licence to go out of the kingdom[7].

Henry Darby was mayor of Leicester in 1424; and William Newby in 1425.

In 1425-6, a parliament was held at Leicester, the writs for which, dated at Westminster, Feb. 7, and returnable at Leicester Feb. 18, were thus directed:

Rex, &c. charissimo avunculo suo Johanni duci Bedfordie, &c.

Humfrido duci Glocestrie.
Thome duci Exonie.
Joanni duci Norfolcie.
Henrico comiti Northumberland.
Humfrido comiti Stafford.
Jacobo de Berkley chevalier.
Magistro Thome de la War.
Willielmo de Ferrariis de Groby chevalier.
Johanni de Wells, chevalier.
Johanni baroni de Graystock, chevalier.
Reginaldo Gray de Ruthin, chevalier.
Johanni Latimer, chevalier.
Roberto de Poynings, chevalier.
Willielmo Bottreaulx, chevalier.
Johanni Dacre de Gilsland, chevalier.
Willielmo Clinton, chevalier.
Willielmo Harrington, chevalier.
Jacobo de Audley, chevalier.
Johanni Gray de Côdenor, chevalier.
Radulpho Cromwell, chevalier.
Lodovico Robesart, chevalier.
Ricardo Strang, chevalier.
Johanni le Scroop de Masham, chevalier.
Willielmo Lovell, chevalier.
Willielmo la Zouch de Harringworth.
Waltero Hungerford.
Johanni Tibetot, chevalier.
Reginald le Warr, chevalier.
Thome de Morle, chevalier.
Willielmo Cheyn, Capitali Justiciarie.

The Parliament was accordingly holden, on Monday the 18th day of February, in the great hall of the Castle of Leicester, the lords and commons being there, in due form assembled; when Henry bishop of Winchester, chancellor of England, declared,

1. that the king's will was, that the English Church, and all the king's liege subjects of every description, should enjoy their liberties.

2. He then took for his theme the words of St. Paul, Sic facite ut salvi sitis; the which he divided into three parts. The first to God's protecting the faith of the Church against the innovations of the Hereticks and the Lollards. The second, by imparting sound counsel. The third, by granting liberal subsidies; from which, he affirmed, a threefold benefit would follow; viz. glory to God, by protecting his faith; honour to the king, by receiving sound counsel; and peace to the subjects by liberal granting. Wherefore he willed the prelates, peers, and commons, respectively, to labour therein.

3. He then directed the commons to assemble themselves in quâdam bassâ camerâ eisdem communibus pro eorum domo communi ordinatâ & assignatâ, there to elect a speaker, to be presented the next day to the king.

4, 5, 6, 7. Receivers and triers of petitions were then appointed. Those for England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, to meet in the chapter-house of the collegiate church of St. Mary de Castro; and those for Gascoigne and other foreign parts in the North chapel of the same church.

8. The king appointed, by letters patent, John duke of Bedford his commissioner, to prorogue and dissolve the parliament.

9. On the 28th of February, the commons presented before the king Richard Vernon, knight, to be their speaker; with whom, after the accustomed protestation, Rex benè se contentavit.

10. Upon the commons disliking the dissention between the nobles, the duke of Bedford and other lords made a solemn decree amongst themselves, that every of them should, wirhout affection, hear and end the dissention between the duke of Gloucester and the bishop of Winchester, so as neither of them should be encouraged to break the peace: to which order, after every of the lords were sworn, they sent the copy thereof to the commons; it being also ordered, that none of the lords, or their followers, should repair to the parliament with weapons.—["In this town (as Robert Fabian, alderman of London, writeth in his Chronicle[8]) was kept, in 1425-6, the famous Parliamentum Fustium, or Parliament of Bats; so called,

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 2 Hen. V. Pars I.; see the printed Rolls, vol. IV. pp. 15—33.
[2] Esch. 2 Hen. V.
[3] From the Roll of Mayors of Leicester.
[4] Ibid.
[5] Esch. 8 Hen. V. N° 71. Leic.
[6] Esch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.
[7] Catalogues des Rolles François, col. II. p. 241.
[8] Fol. 186. b. 201. b.

for that parliamentary men being forbidden to wear swords or weapons, then they used bats and staves; which also likewise being inhibited, they wore in their sleeves great stones and plummets of lead [1]."

11. On the fifth of March, "Concordatum fuit & ordinatum, quod proclamatio fieret in villa Leycestrie, quod universi & singuli in villâ predictâ existentes, qui aliqua annuitates, feoda, vel officia habent, ex concessione vel confirmatione domini regis, compareant coram domino rege & consilio suo, in Castro Leycestrie, die Mercurii tunc proximè futuro, ad faciend' & recipiend' quod per dictum dominum regem & consilium suum tunc ibidem contingeret ordinari."

12. The difference between the duke of Gloucester and the bishop of Winchester, by their formal instruments, was compromitted to certain bishops and lords, who, by like formality, make a full order between them; viz. that the bishop should first submit himself to the king; which he did: Whereupon the duke of Bedford, in open parliament, by the king's commandment, pronounced the said bishop excused, as well of that it is said that the said bishop had procured one to have murthered the king, being prince, as the murtherer confessed (who having been delivered to the earl of Arundel, the said earl lete sake him forthwith, and drownd hymn in the Thamyse); as also for that it was said that the bishop should counsel, and would have it procured, by king Henry V. being prince, to have deprived king Henry IV. his father.

13. Moreover they awarded, that the said bishop should acknowledge to the said duke of Gloucester an offence, and by his submission to pray his favour; and that the duke should promise the same; and that, in token thereof, either of them should take the other by the hand. Which was done, in token of reconciliation.

14. On the 13th day of March, the bishop of Winchester, for sundry causes, prayed to be discharged of the great seal, whereof by common consent he was discharged. The bishop of Bath, treasurer of England, was of his office also discharged.

15. On the 18th day of March, John bishop of Bath and Wells, late treasurer of England, by a writ of privy seal, delivered unto the duke of Bedford the king's great seal of gold in a leather bag; the which the duke took, and shewed openly, and then sealed it up with his own seal; and after delivered the same to John bishop of London, chancellor of England.

16. On the 8th of February, the bishop of Durham, by virtue of a privy seal to him directed, delivered the last will and testament, with a codicil on paper thereto annexed, of king Henry V. which was sealed with the great and privy seal, and the privy signet to the lords of the privy council; who delivered the same over, safely to be kept, to Master William Alnewyk, keeper of the privy seal.

17. It is enacted that the lords of the council shall have full power to bind the king, his heirs and successors, to his creditors, for one assurance for the sum of 40,000*l.*

18. At the petition of the earl of Huntingdon, the king, by common consent, released to Lewis of Burbon, earl of Vendosme, who had been taken prisoner at the battle of Agincourt, all arrears of ransom.

19. The duke of Bedford, who had the keeping of the castle at Berwick, to him and his heirs male, with the fee of 500 marks, had licence, by common consent, to appoint a deputy there, at the king's pleasure.

20. It is enacted, that any of the feoffees of king Henry V. may take the homage of fealty of any tenants holding under them.

21. It is enacted, that the king's council, by authority of parliament, shall have power to end all such petitions relative to private business as shall not have been ended by parliament.

22. It is decreed, by common assent of the lords, that the late subsidy of tonnage and poundage to the king granted ought simply to be paid, notwithstanding any condition.

23. On the 20th day of March, before the lords and commons, the bishop of London, chancellor of England, by the king's commissary's commandment, prorogued the parliament, from the same day, till Monday next after the feast of George, at Leicester.

24. On the 1st day of June, being the last day of parliament, the commons, by assent of the bishops and lords, granted to the king the subsidy of wools, tonnage, and poundage.

25. The king, by common consent, granted, by his letters patent, that the prior of St. Trinity in York, being a cell of the abbey of Meremostier in France, shall be denizens.

26. The king grants to Thomas Cornyssh, of Woxebrigge, co. Middlesex (on the humble petition of Margaret his wife), a pardon for stealing of sheep from a close belonging to Alice Scolecroft.

27. At the request of the merchants of the Hans in Germany, the king, in conformity to their privileges, appointeth to them sir William Crowmere, one of the aldermen of London, to be a judge between party and party of the same company of Hans in all suits; and that, within one month after the death, or leaving over, of the said alderman, there be appointed to them one other alderman to supply the same.

28. Petitions of the commons, with the answers.

Upon motion of the commons, it was granted, that all such merchants as had paid subsidy for their wools, and could prove before the council that the same or any part thereof was perished, might ship the same quantity without custom.

29. That no man make a presentation, collation, or induction, to any alien, of any benefice or ecclesiastical dignity, on pain of Premunire. The king will be advised.

30. That no man of good name be impeached by the accusation of any being in sanctuary, unless sureties be bound that proof be made thereof. The Statutes already made shall be observed.

31. That every patron may present a-new, in case of non-residence of the incumbent. The bishops have promised to take order therein.

32. The print against bribery of sheriffs, chap. 4. agrees with the record.

33. That all strangers being within the realm about queen Joan may depart out of the realm. The Statutes thereupon made shall be observed.

34. That the chancellor of England for the time being may, for reasonable fines, grant licences to the king's tenants that hold in chief, to alien their lands; and to the king's widows, to marry themselves according to the antient custom. The king will be advised.

35. The print touching the misprision of clerks of the king's courts, chap. 3. agrees with the record.

36. The print touching knights of parliament, chap. 4. agrees with the record.

37. The print touching exportation of provisions, chap. 5. agrees with the record.

38. The print touching assizes and protections, chap. 2. agrees with the record [2].

At Whitsuntide this year, the duke of Bedford, regent of France, knighted the young king Henry VI. who thereupon immediately conferred the like honour on Richard earl of Cambridge, and about 40 more. At this parliament also the said earl of Cambridge was not only restored in blood, which was inherited by his father, but also was created duke of York; which enabled him afterwards, as he did, to put in and prosecute claim to the crown.

In 1426, John Picwell was mayor of Leicester; William Husly, 1427; William Pacy, 1428; and William Humberstone, 1429; in which year, the following Gentlemen of this county were summoned to attend the king, for the defence of the realm:

"Leicestr'. Will' Trussell, chevalier, Rob' Nevill, chevalier, Tho' Pultney, arm', Johannes Perwick, arm', Alanus Moton, arm,' Everardus Digby, arm',

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] Prynne's Abridgement of the Records, pp. 582—585. Rot. Parl. 4 Hen. VI.; printed Rolls, vol. IV. pp. 295—308.

Tho' Nevill, arm', Rob' Wiwell, arm', Johannes Charnel, arm'[1]."

In 1430, Thomas Walgrave was mayor of Leicester; John Loughborough, 1431 (in which year, Dec. 7, king Henry VI. was crowned at Paris); Thomas Clarke, 1432; William Newby, 1433 (in which year the arbitration concerning The South Field near Leicester was made, which will be elsewhere noticed[2]); John Reynolds, 1434; Adam Pacy, 1435[3]; and Walter Pomerey, 1436; in which year, sir Richard Hastinges, knt. died seised of three crofts in Leicester, held of the abbot of St. Mary de Pratis in that town[4].

William Hasty was mayor of Leicester in 1437; John Coventre, 1438; John Reynolds, 1439; Adam Racye, 1440; Thomas Charity, 1441; William Wimeswold, 1442; William Grantham, 1443 (in which year, Feb. 1, Paul's Steeple was burnt[5]); William Newby, 1444; Thomas Green, 1445; John Brynight (or Bennet), 1446; Ralph Furnys, alias Fisher, 1447; William Wigston, 1448; and William Stringer, 1449; in which year the parliament, which was summoned to meet at Westminster on the 6th of November, was, ab aëris infectionem in villâ Westm' & aliis locis circumvicinis, adjourned to the City of London; where, on the 4th of December, they were assembled in the house of the Black Friers; and for some time continued to sit, till on the 30th of December they were prorogued, to meet at Westminster on the 22d of January, 1449-50.

At the commencement of this parliament, there being great discontents against the dukes of Somerset and Suffolk, upon the loss of Normandy; and the commons having impeached William de la Pole, duke of Suffolk; he was imprisoned, but soon after released out of the Tower, and restored to his former place about the king again; which so incensed the people, that there was danger of an insurrection[6].

The insalubritas aëris still continuing to prevail in Westminster, the parliament was, on the 30th of March, 1450, prorogued to the 29th of August, and then to meet at Leicester; at which place the usual subsidy was granted[7]. But the commons persevering in their prosecution of the duke of Suffolk, and very few of the nobility appearing at Leicester, the parliament was re-adjourned to Westminster.

Whilst the archbishop of Canterbury was at Leicester, in his attendance upon this parliament, Reginald Peacock, on his translation from St. Asaph to the see of Chichester, made his profession of obedience to him on the 31st of March[8].

John Reynolds was mayor of Leicester in 1450; William Clarke, 1451; William Wimeswold, 1452; and Thomas Charyte, 1453.

May 23, 1454, was the battle near St. Alban's.

In 1455, sir Leonard Hastings, knt. died seised of three crofts in Leicester, held of the abbot of St. Mary de Pratis[9].

Thomas Dalton was mayor of Leicester 1454—1456; Thomas Green, 1457; and John Reynolds, 1458.

In the Records of the Corporation of Leicester is preserved the following very curious entry:

"It is to have in mind that John Frysley, of Leicester, burgess, came into the court of Portman moot of Leicester, the Monday next after the feast of St. Valentine, 1458-9, afore John Reynolds the elder, at that time being mayor of the said town, and his brethren; and there, wilfully, devoutly, and holily, bearing in mind the unstableness of this present life, and also the insecurity of people left after a man's present life in ministration of his temporal goods, any thing to the health of his soul, and also the great worship and pleasure to the mayor for the time being and all his brethren, hath given to the mayoralty of Leicester, perpetually to endure, certain lyflode and tenement, as in divers deeds and muniments thereof made more plainly doth under this condition appear that followeth; i. e. the mayor for the time being shall find a priest perpetually to sing for the said John Frysley, his wife, his father and mother, the mayor and his brethren for the time being, and in all time to come, and all his benefactors. And if the mayor be negligent, and no priest will have, then the feoffours which shall be feoffed in the said livelode and tenement, shall have a priest to sing, say, and pray, for the health of the souls of the said John Frysley, his wife, father and mother, the mayor, his brethren, and all his benefactors, in the church where the said John lieth, as long as the mayor for the time being is without a priest. Also the said mayor which for the time shall be, with the provenues coming and growing of the said lyflode and tenement, shall yearly pay and content the said priest his salary, and keep all manner of reparations necessary to the said lyflode and tenement, by the good advice of the said feoffees. And if the mayor will no priest find, then the feoffees to find a priest, and pay him his salary, and with the overplus to make reparations. And the said John Frysley chargeth the feoffees that they make new feoffees after three or four of them have deceased[10]."

In 1459, was the battle at Blore Heath[11]; and the following persons were appointed commissioners for this county, to select proper archers for the defence of the realm.

"Johannes vicecomes Beaumont, abbas Leycestrie, Edwardus Grey de Groby, Willielmus Hastings, Johannes Bellers, Thomas Palmer, Willielmus Fildinge, Thomas Berkeley, Ricardus Nele, Ricardus Hotofte."

William Wigston was mayor of Leicester in 1459.

The battle of Northampton[11] was fought July 9, 1460; in which year, Robert Shillingham was elected mayor of Leicester; and during his mayoralty the battle of Wakefield, commonly called York field[11], was fought, Dec. 31; and on the 4th of March, 1460-1, king Henry VI. was deposed.

EDWARD IV.

March 29, 1461, king Edward obtained a decisive victory over the forces of the late king Henry at Towton[11]; and in this year it was found that Everard Digby, attainted of high treason, was seised of one messuage in Leicester[12].

The following entry is also of this period:

"It is to have in mind that John Reynolds the elder, of Leicester, burgess, the 3d of May 1461, for the goodly zeal that he had to the honourable and worshipful office of mayoralty of the town of Leicester, the which was by him four sundry years ministered, gave to the mayoralty aforesaid perpetually a tenement in the High Street of Leicester, by the High Cross there set, between the tenement of John Roberts on the South and the tenement of John Danet on the North, as in certain muniments thereof made appeareth, to have and to hold the said tenement, with the appurtenances, to the mayoralty of the town of Leicester perpetually, in manner, and all conditions, means, and rules, as the livelode, lands, and tenements, late of John Frysley above specified, were given by the said John Frysley to the office of mayoralty of the town of Leicester[13]."

Robert Rawlett was elected mayor of Leicester in 1461; and on the 15th of May, 1462, king Edward IV. for service done by the mayor and burgesses of Leicester against the king's enemies, granted them 20 marks yearly, from Michaelmas past, for 20 years. This grant was at the Castle of Leicester, by the labour of Robert Rawlett then mayor, and of Thomas Green and John Roberds, then being burgesses of the parliament.

---

[1] Nomina illorum qui [per singulos Angliæ comitatus] arma antiqua portantium, qui ad regem veniendum, pro defensione regni summoniti sunt, 1429.

[2] See under The South Field in the Hundred of Guthlaxton.

[3] In this year was a great frost, endured from .... to Feb. 14; so that neither ships might sail, nor boats be rowed, in the river of Thames; and therefore all the vintages were carried to London in carts by land. (From the Roll of Mayors.)

[4] Esch. 15 Hen. VI. No 58. Leic.

[5] From the Roll of Mayors.

[6] This year rose the commons in Kent; and made there a captain, named John Cade. (From the Roll of Mayors.)

[7] Rot. Parl. 28 Hen. VI. vol. V. p. 172.

[8] He was deprived in 1457; and sent to the abbey of Thornley.

[9] Esch. 34 Hen. VI.

[10] Extracted by Mr. Carte from the Lock Book for Fines, in custody of the mayor of Leicester.

[11] From the Roll of Mayors.

[12] Esch. 1 Edw. IV. No 7. Leic.

[13] From the Lock Book, as before; in which follow some feoffments made of John Frysley's lands, before John Reynolds senior, then mayor, and Peter Curteys, bailiff, 24 and 26 Dec. 17 Edw. IV.

John Yoman was elected mayor of Leicester in 1462; and in his mayoralty, in April 1463, was the battle of Hexham[1].

John Reynolds was elected mayor of Leicester in 1463; and in his mayoralty, king Edward IV. by his letters patent under the seal of the duchy of Lancaster, dated at his castle of Leicester, June 2, 1464, "gave to his well-beloved servant Mauryce Arnolde, squire, his serjeant porter, all the issues and profits to him due and growing, of a place called Blanckchapillon, with all the lands belonging to the same, in the city of London[2]. And in the same year, in an act of resumption of grants, there was a clause for saving the grant of 20 marks to the town of Leicester, which had been granted them in 1462. A proviso also occurs, that an act of resumption "shall not be prejudicial to Richard Chambre, of a grant committing the keeping to him of one mec'e, with the appurtenances, in Leicester, late by us, by our letters patent, under our great seal made[3]."

On the 24th of August, 1464, king Edward IV. for the greater security and quiet of the corporation of Leicester, granted to the then mayor and burgesses, and to their successors for ever; 1. that the mayor for the time being and four of the discreetest comburgesses, with one person skilled in the laws (to be called the recorder) should be justices to keep and cause to be kept the statutes of servants, artificers, and labourers. 2. That the said mayor and comburgesses, or any three or two of them, with the recorder, should have the full correction, privilege, power, and authority, of knowing, inquiring, hearing, and determining of all matters of transgression, misprision, and extortion, and of all other causes, complaints, and misdemeanors, within the said town and liberties, as fully and entirely as any other justices of servants, labourers, and artificers in the county of Leicester, have elsewhere therein; matters of felony therein, and of melting, clipping, washing, and other falsifying of the coin only excepted. 3. That no justice of the peace, or other justice or commissioner of the king or his heirs, in the county, should intermeddle there in any matter, except as before excepted. 4. That neither they the mayor and burgesses, or their successors, any constable of the town of Leicester, or any other person there sojourning, should be bound or compelled to appear before any other justice of the peace, or any other justice or commissioner of the king or his heirs, either within or without the said town, to enquire or do any thing in the matters aforesaid, happening in the said town and liberties (except as before excepted), save only before the mayor and four of the discreeter comburgesses, and their successors, as is above said. 5. That if any mayor, burgess, constable, or other person within the said town or liberties thereof abiding, should be summoned or impanelled, and refuse to appear before any other justice about any such matter, or to swear or enquire about any heads or articles thereunto belonging, that, for such his refusal, he should not be put in contempt, or incur any loss or penalty to the king or his heirs. 6. That the mayor of the 24 comburgesses should yearly, upon the feast of St. Matthew the Evangelist, elect four of the said 24 to be justices of the peace for the year ensuing; and two of the said 24 to be coroners; and no other coroner to intermeddle. 7. Lastly, that they, the mayor and burgesses and their successors, should not be impanelled on any assises, juries, jurisdictions or recognizances (though they concern either the king or his heirs, or any other of his liege people) or be sworn or put upon the trial of any amerciament of any assize or panal before any justices or commissioners of the king or his heirs, about any thing, cause, or matter, happening without Leicester, when the trial is to be taken out of the said borough.

"Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie et Francie, et dominus Hibernie, omnibus ad quos presentes litere pervenerint, salutem. Sciatis quod nos, volentes securitati et quieti dilectorum ligeorum nostrorum majoris et burgensium ville sive burgi nostre Leycestrie, concessimus, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, et per presentes concedimus Johanni Yoman[4], nunc majori ejusdem ville sive burgi, et burgensibus ejusdem, ac successoribus suis pro tempore existentibus, quod hujusmodi major et quatuor de discretioribus comburgensibus ville sive burgi illius, in formâ subsequendâ eligendis et nominandis, quamdiu in hujusmodi officiis majoratûs aut burgensium fuerint, cum uno legisperito in perpetuo nominando Recordatore Leycestrie, sint justiciarii nostri et heredum nostrorum ad pacem infra villam sive burgum predictum, procinctus et limites ejusdem ville sive burgi, necnon ad statuta et ordinaciones de servientibus, artificibus, et laboratoribus edita, conservandum et custodiri faciendum in perpetuum. Et quod iidem major et quatuor comburgenses ville sive burgi illius pro tempore existentes, tres vel duo eorum, cum dicto recordatore, plenam habeant correctionem, punitionem, protestatem, et auctoritatem cognoscendi, inquirendi, audiendi, et terminandi omnes res et materias, tam de omnibus feloniis, transgressionibus, misprisionibus, et extortionibus, quam de omnimodis aliis causis, querelis, et molestiis quibuscumque, infra eandem villam sive burgum, procinctus et limites ejusdem, qualitercunque contingentibus sive emergentibus, adeo plenè et integrè sicut custodes pacis nostre et justiciarii ad felonias, transgressiones, et alia malefacta audiendum et terminandum assignati et assignandi, ac justiciarii servientium, laboratorum, et artificium, in comitatu Leyc', extra villam sive burgum ac procinctus predictos, habent, seu in futurum qualitercumque habebunt; terminationibus de omnimodis feloniis, ac de contrafacturâ, tonsurâ, loturâ, et aliâ falsitate monete regni nostri Anglie, duntaxat exceptis; et quod nullus custos pacis, justiciarius, aut commissionarius nostri, vel heredum nostrorum, ad premissa, sive aliquod premissorum, in comitatu predicto audiendum et terminandum assignatus, in aliquo intromittat infra villam sive burgum predictum, aut procinctus et limites ejusdem, seu extra eandem villam sive burgum, procinctus et limites ejusdem, pro premissis, aut aliquo premissorum, infra villam sive burgum predictum, ac procinctus ejusdem, qualitercumque facta sive emergentia, exceptis preexceptis; nec infra villam sive burgum predictum, aut procinctus ejusdem, aliquod officium suum de premissis, sive aliquo premissorum, exceptis preexceptis, infra dictam villam sive burgum ac procinctus ejusdem, qualitercumque factis sive emergentibus aliqualiter faciendum, inquirendum, vel exequendum, ingrediantur, nec ingredi presumant. Concessimus etiam eisdem majori et burgensibus, et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui, seu eorum aliquis, aut aliquis constabularius ville sive burgi illius pro tempore existens, aut aliquis alius infra villam sive burgum predictum commorans seu commoraturus, non arctentur neque compellantur, non arctetur nec compellatur, ad comparendum coram aliquibus justiciariis pacis nostre, vel heredum nostrorum, in comitatu predicto, vel coram justiciariis nostri vel heredum nostrorum, ad felonias, transgressiones, et alia malefacta, in eodem comitatu, audiendum et terminandum assignati vel assignandi, aut aliquibus aliis justiciariis vel commissionariis nostri aut heredum nostrorum, extra villam sive burgum predictum, ac procinctus et limites ejusdem, neque infra eandem villam sive burgum, procinctus et limites ejusdem, ad inquirendum vel aliquid aliud faciendum pro premissis vel aliquo premissorum, infra eandem villam sive burgum, procinctus aut limites ejusdem, factis, emergentibus sive contingentibus, exceptis preexceptis, preterquam coram prefatis majore et quatuor

---

[1] From the Roll of Mayors.

[2] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 548.

[3] Ibid. p. 541.

[4] John Yoman, though mentioned by name in this charter, was the mayor of the preceding year, as is evident by the uniform testimony of various Rolls of Mayors; and John Reynolds is recognized as mayor Sept. 10, 1464, in a deed abridged in p. 375.

de discretioribus comburgensibus & successoribus suis pro tempore existentibus, ut predictum est. Et si aliquis major, burgensis, constabularius, vel aliquis alius, infra dictam villam sive burgum, procinctus & limites ejusdem residens, vel extunc residere contingens, exnunc summoneatur aut impanelletur ad comparendum coram aliquibus hujusmodi custodibus aut justiciariis pacis, laboratorum & artificium nostri, vel heredum nostrorum, in comitatu predicto, vel coram justiciariis aut commissionariis nostris, vel heredum nostrorum, ad felonias, transgressiones, & alia malefacta ibidem perpetrata, audiendum & terminandum, assignati vel assignandi, exceptis preexceptis, & ipse coram eis defaltam fecerit, vel ad jurand' sui inquirend' de vel pro aliquibus articulis infra villam sive burgum predictum factis sive perpetratis, exceptis preexceptis, recusaverit, non propter hoc ponatur in contemptu, nec ullum deperditum aut gravamen erga nos vel heredes nostros ex hâc causâ incurrat. Et insuper concessimus, & per presentes concedimus, prefatis majori & burgensibus, & eorum successoribus, quod iidem major et viginti quatuor comburgenses ville sive burgi predicti, & eorum successores pro tempore existentes, de anno in annum, in festo Sancti Matthei Evangeliste, eligere possint, de ipsis viginti quatuor comburgensibus predictis, quatuor discretiores comburgenses, essendi justiciarii nostri & heredum nostrorum, ad premissa sive premissorum infra villam sive burgum predictum, procinctus & limites ejusdem, exceptis preexceptis, cognoscendi, inquirendi, audiendi, & terminandi; ac, de eisdem viginti quatuor comburgensibus, duos coronatores, qui officium coronatoris infra villam sive burgum predictum, procinctus & limites ejusdem, facient & exequantur; & quod iidem coronatores sic electi, & successores sui qui pro tempore erunt, in perpetuum habeant & exerceant officium coronatoris nostri & heredum nostrorum in villâ sive burgo predicto, & procinctibus & limitibus ejusdem, tam in presentiâ nostrâ & heredum nostrorum, quam in absentiâ nostrâ & heredum nostrorum, in omnibus rebus, prout aliquo tempore ante datum presentium aliquis coronator noster infra villam sive burgum predictum, ac procinctus ejusdem, officium coronatoris ibidem exercere consuevit; ac etiam in omnibus aliis rebus infra eandem villam sive burgum, aut procinctus ejusdem, accidentibus, contingentibus, sive emergentibus in futuro, que ad officium coronatoris quovismodo pertinent sive spectant, & que si infra aliquem comitatum regni nostri Anglie acciderent aut emergerent per coronatores seu coronatorem ejusdem comitatûs exerceri, compareri, seu fieri deberent, adeò plenè & integrè, pacificè & quietè, prout iidem coronatores sive coronator alterius comitatûs regni nostri Anglie hujusmodi officium coronatoris, & omnia alia officium illud tangentia, occupant seu exercent, occupat seu exercet, aut occuparunt sive exercuerunt, occupare seu exercere quovismodo legitimè poterint vel poterit in futuro, sine occasione, impetitione, vel impedimento nostri, vel heredum nostrorum, aut aliorum officiariorum seu ministrorum nostrorum quorumcunque; ita quod nullus alius coronator nostri vel heredum nostrorum se pro aliquo ad officium coronatoris pertinens infra villam sive burgum predictum, ac procinctus ejusdem, emergente sive accidente, aliqualiter intromittat, nec villam seu burgum illum ad aliquod ad officium coronatoris pertinet faciendum ingrediatur. Concessimus etiam, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, prefatis majori et burgensibus, & eorum successoribus, quod nec ipsi nec eorum aliquis ponantur neque ponatur, impanellentur neque impanelletur, in aliquibus assisis, juratis, inquisitionibus, seu recognitionibus, licet tanget nos vel heredes nostros, vel aliquos alios ligeos nostros; nec jurentur nec onerentur, nec ullus eorum juretur seu oneretur, super triatione arraiamenti alicujus assise sive panelli coram aliquibus justiciariis seu commissionariis nostris vel heredum nostrorum, de vel pro aliquâ re, causâ, vel materiâ quâcumque, extra villam sive burgum predictum emergente sive contingente, capiendam extra villam sive burgum predictum. In cujus rei testimonium, has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso, apud Wodestoke, 24° die Augusti, anno regni nostri quarto. Per breve de privato sigillo, ac de datâ predictâ, auctoritate Parliamenti [1]."

Sept. 10, 1464, the mayor and commonalty of Leicester let, for 12 years, to Ranulph Beryngton, taylor, for 12*d*. per annum, a piece of land lying in the parish of St. Margaret, in Le Water Croftes, between the land of St. Margaret's and the land of St. John Leicester; John Reynolds then being mayor, Peter Curteis bailiff, &c.

William Holbech was elected mayor of Leicester in September 1464; Roger Wigston, 1465; and John Frysley, 1466.

"It is agreed for ever, in time of the mayoralty of William Frysley, by the wardens and all the occupation of the craft of taylors, that there shall no taylor set up his craft as a master within the town of Leicester, but the wardens of the said craft shall bring in 10*s*. in money, and pay it to the chamberlains, for his duty to the chapman's gild, a fortnight before the chamberlains enter into their accompt, upon pain of forfeiting 20*s*. of the gild of taylors' money, to be levied by the chamberlains [2]."

Richard Gyllott was elected mayor of Leicester in 1467; and at a common hall holden the Friday before the feast of St. Luke, it was ordained, "that if any person enter and abyde within the gild hall at any comon hall holden at the day of election of the mayor, or other comon hall, except he be of the forty-eight; that he, by comand of the mayor, be forthwith comitted to warde, to continue forty days on the mayor's grace, paying 40*d*. to the chamberlains to the use of the town, without pardon or grace of any part. And also if any person of what degree soever name one of the mayor's brethren to the office of mayoralty till such time as the mayor hath comanded the cryer to make an noy and read the ordinance before time made, and declared the liberty of election, and discharged himself according to the antient custom; for the same shall pay like forfeiture and penalty as before is rehearsed. And if any mayor be verily known innocent [negligent] in execution of these ordinances, he shall forfeit to the chamber 20*s*. to be witholden by the chamberlains of the mayre's fee [2]."

Then follow several orders, made by Richard Gillot, mayor, at a common hall, on Thursday before St. Simon and Jude; whereof some are:

"That no one in town bear any weapon except in support of the mayor; but a knight or esquier may have a sword borne after hym. Every countryman to leave his weapon at his inn, and bear it not in town, on forfeit of the weapon, and his body to prison as long as the mayor likes.

That no one walk, after nine of the bell be stricken in the night, without light, or without cause reasonable.

That bakers [take care] that the town lack no bread white or brown, on pain of imprisonment.

That such as bring wine to town sell none without leave of the mayor, on like pain.

That brewers sell the best ale for 1½*d*.; the second, 1*d*.; the third, ½*d*. a gallon; and by measure sealed.

That butchers bring the skins and tallow with the flesh to the market; and no butcher to kill a bull till baited, nor buy flesh of other butchers to sell again.

That geese be sold for 4*d*. apiece, and the best pig for 6*d*.

That none lay muck at his door, nor stones, timber, or clay, &c. within the four gates, and four streets of the suburbs, but remove it within three days.

That no one play for silver at any unlawful game forbidden by the statute.

That no writer set the mayor to witness in any scripture without his knowledge.

That no franchised person sue another by spi-

---

[1] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. Pars 1. m. 12.

[2] S. Carte, ex Libro Villæ Leycestriæ, temp. Edw. IV. Ric. III. Hen. VII. & part. Hen. VIII.

ritual or temporal law, but only before the mayor, if due remedy can there be had, on pain of imprisonment, &c.

That no woman wash cloaths or other corruption at the comon wells, or High-street.

That scoldes be punished by the mayr on a cuckstole before their door, and then carried to the four gates of the town.

That no buyer of corn cheapen it till ten of the bells be stricken on Saturday.

That such as have gates or doors on the Town-wall against the market leave them not open on a market-day, on pain of 20*d.* and imprisonment forty days.

That butchers sell their meat, not at their house, but the common shambles, on pain of 12*d.*

That no ducks be let abroad in any street within the four gates.

That every man be ready, at every affray in the town, to assist the mayor; and if he come not when sent for, the mayor may fetch him; and if he shut his door, the mayr may break it open, and imprison him while he liketh.

That no man lend others in the country any weapon but in support of the mayr.

That all inhabitants sumoned come to the common hall, or to attend the mayr to ride against the king, or for riding of the George, or any other thing to the pleasure of the mayr and worship of the town, on payn to the mayr's brethren 2*s.* and a comoner 12*d.*

That every person opening a shop pay yearly 3*s.*4*d.* till he enter into the Chapman's gild.

That every one keeping corn in his house from market-day to market-day for any person of the country forfeit 12*d.*

Charcoal to be sold, from All Saints to Easter, for 7*d.* the quarter, and from Easter to All Saints for 6*d.*; as that none sell it for above 1½*d.* a strike [1]."

King Edward IV. in consideration of his good services, granted to Peter Curteys, his servant, one messuage, with the appurtenances, in Leicester, situate in the High-street, near the South gate there; which messuage was forfeited to the king, by the attainder of Edward Digby, esq. then convicted of rebellion. Teste Rege, apud Westmon', 25° die Aprilis [2]."

A proviso occurs in 1464, and is repeated in 1467-8, that an act of resumption "shall not in any wise be prejudicial or hurting into our right well beloved servant Richard Kestven, squier, of, to, or for, the graunte by us to him made of a horsmylne and two mesuages, with th' appurtenaunce, lying in a strete called Swyne-market, within our town of Leycestre, not exceeding the yearly value of 8*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*; ne to Pyers Courteys and William Trussell, of or for the loppes and croppes of woode, falled withyne our Fryth of Leycestere, for the brusyng of our dere there, or for repreacyon of the pale there, to theym graunted by oure lettres patentez; ne to the maire and burgeis or co'i'altee of oure towne of Leycestre, of or for 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to theym graunted, terme of 20 yeres, by oure lettres patentez [3]."

In 1468, Philip Purefoy died seised of three messuages and seven tofts in Leicester; and John Purefoy was his next heir [4].

Richard Yates was elected mayor of Leicester in 1468; John Wigston, 1469 (in which year was the battle beside Banbury [5]); and Rob. Shillingham, 1470.

March 1, 1470-1, king Edward IV. after his flight into Holland, returning landed at Ravenspur in Yorkshire, and went thence to York, and Wakefield, and Sowdal, Doncaster, Nottingham, and thence to Leicester, where 3000 able men and well armed came to him, thence he came before the walls of Coventry, where the earl of Warwick lay with 6 or 7000 men, but would not come out to battle.

On Easter Sunday, the 14th of April, 1471, there was a battle at Barnet field [5]; and another, May 9, at Tewksbury [5].

John Parsons was elected mayor of Leicester in 1471; and in 1471-2, the king, for service done by the mayor and burgesses of Leicester against his enemies, and in consideration of their great costs, granted them 20*l.* yearly, from Michaelmas then last past, for the term of 20 years; to be received of the profits of the Honour of Leicester, unless within the time he should give them lands and tenements to that value. Dat. sub sigillo ducatûs Lancastrie, apud Westm', 2° Januarii, anno regni 11.

Roger Wigston was elected mayor of Leicester in 1472; when Joan (late wife of John Lovel, knight) died seised of two burgages, five cottages, one garden, and six acres of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Leicester, which were held of the king as of the Honour of Leicester; and Francis Lovel was their son and heir [6].

On the 2d of April, 1473, king Edward IV. by the charter which here follows, granted to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester licence to hold a fair in the town and suburbs of Leicester three days before, upon the feast of St. Philip and St. James, and three days after, yearly for ever; the profits and government of the said fair, with all its liberties and privileges, to belong to the mayor and corporation.

"Edwardus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Francie, & dominus Hibernie, archiepiscopis, &c. salutem. Sciatis quod nos, ob affectionem & dilectionem quas habemus ad villam nostram Leicestrie, necnon dilectis & fidelibus nostris majori & burgensibus ibidem commorantibus, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ & mero motu nostris, concessimus, & per presentes confirmamus, eisdem majori & burgensibus ejusdem ville Leicestrie, & successoribus suis, quandam feriam apud eandem villam Leicestrie & suburb' ejusdem, singulis annis, per septem dies, videlicet, tribus diebus ante festum Apostolorum Philipi & Jacobi, & in eodem festo, & in tribus diebus proximè sequentibus in perpetuum duraturam; ita quod quilibet indigena sive alienigena ad dictam villam Leicestrie & suburb' causâ ferie predicte veniens, ibidem moram faciens, & exinde recedens, tam in dictâ feriâ, quam ante & post in perpetuum, sit quietus de theolonio, stallagio, picagio, & aliis custumis & prestacionibus quibuscumque, nobis seu heredibus nostris racione ferie predicte qualitercumque spectantibus. Volumus insuper & concedimus, pro nobis & heredibus nostris predictis, ac per presentes confirmamus, prefatis majori & burgensibus predicte ville Leicestrie, & successoribus suis in perpetuum, omnimodo ordinacionem, gubernacionem, & assignationem stallorum & placearum, ac totum regimen predicte ferie, & omnium & singularum libertatum & aliarum consuetudinum ad eandem feriam spectantium, per majorem ejusdem ville Leicestrie qui pro tempore fuerit, & duos vel tres de probioribus & melioribus hominibus ejusdem ville in auxilium ipsius majoris ad hoc annuatim electis, deputatos & juratos per dictos majorem & burgenses suos, sine impedimento seu perturbacione nostri vel heredum nostrorum, seu aliorum ministrorum nostrorum quorumcunque. Hiis testibus; venerabilibus patribus in Christo Thomâ Cardinali, archiepiscopo Cantuarie; R. Bathon' & Wellen', cancellario nostro Anglie, & Thomâ Lincoln', custode privati sigilli nostri, episcopis; ac precharissimis fratribus nostris, Georgio Clarencie, & Ricardo Gloucestrie, ducibus; necnon consanguineis charissimis nostris, Henrico Essex', thesaurario nostro Anglie, & Johanne Wiltes', capitali pincernâ nostro Anglie, comitibus; dilectisque fidelibus nostris Thomâ Stanley de Stanley, senescallo hospitii nostri, & Willielmo Hastings de Hastings, camerario hospitii nostri, militibus; & aliis. Dat' per manum nostram, apud palacium nostrum Westm', secundo die Aprilis, anno regni nostri tercio decimo [7].'

Sept. 7, 1473, the mayor and commonalty of Leicester let for 99 years to John Whittewell a piece of land lying apud le Southgate end, & continet in longitudine a cemiterio Sancti Sepulchri versus Austrum, & in latitudine a terris gildæ corporis Christi, &c. he paying yearly 4*d*.

---

[1] Ex Libro Villæ Leycestriæ temp. Edw. IV. &c.

[2] Rot. Pat. 7 Edw. IV.

[3] Rolls of Parliament, 4 Edw. IV. vol. V. p 547; and 7 & 8 Edw. IV. p. 603.

[4] Esch. 8 Edw. IV. No. 29. Leic.

[5] Roll of Mayors.

[6] Esch. 12 Edw. IV. No. 7. Leic.

[7] Cart. 13 Edw. IV. n. 5.

Robert Rawlett was elected mayor in 1473; and in November, 1474, John Roberts (being then mayor), Peter Curteis, bailiff, and Thomas Tayllor of Whetstone, gave to the mayor and commonalty of Leicester a rent-charge of 6*d*. per annum, payable out of his lands at Scraptoft. Dated at Whetstone, in festo S. Lucæ.

In the same year, in a grant of a fifteenth and twentieth, for raising 51,147*l*. 4*s*. 7¾*d*. Leicestershire was taxed at 1043*l*. 19*s*. 8¼*d*.[1]

William Holbech was elected mayor of Leicester in 1475; and Peter Wyndwode in 1476.

Thus far the list of mayors has been compiled from a comparison of a variety of antient Rolls; which, though agreeing in the main, have occasionally some slight variation. By the industry, however, of the Rev. Samuel Carte, for many years vicar of St. Martin's, I am enabled not only to continue the series with exactness, but to enrich these Annals with extracts, which it is hoped will be gratifying to Antiquarian curiosity, and honourable to the antient Borough from whose very valuable and authentic Records they have been transcribed.

In the beginning of an antient MS. intituled, "Liber Villæ Leycestriæ, temp. Edw. IV. Ric. III. Hen. VII. & part. Hen. VIII." are the following forms of the oath of the Mayors; of the Jurier for the year; of them that enter into the Chapman Gilde; of the Chamberlains; of Fish Sayers; Flesh Sayers; of Constables; of Ale Tasters; of Leather Sayers; of the Recorder; of the Occupations, &c.

The Oath of the MAYOR.

"I shall maintain the peace of our Lord the King; and the affrayers thereagainst and the disturbers thereof I shall do to be arest and punish as the law woll. I shall maintain the assize of bread, wine, and ale, and all other maner of victualls; and the trespassers with them I shall punish as the law woll. I shall assay all maner of weights and measures; and the fals I shall dampe, and the trespassers with them I shall punish as the law woll. I shall suffer no forestaller nor regrater dwell within this town, nor the fraunches of the same. I shall do even right as well to the poor as to the rich; and all other good customs and fraunchises of this town I shall support and maintain during the time of mine office. So help me God and all Saints[2]."

The Oath of the JURIER.

"This hear you, Mayor and Juries, and ye Brethren of the Gilde, that I shall yield lawfull judgment; shall do lawfully as well to the poor as to the rich after the quantity of their trespass. I shall come continually to the court of Portmote, and at the summons of my mayor, when I shall be warnynde by his officers, if I be in the town, without a reasonable excuse. And that I shall maintain lawfully the assize of bread, wine, and ale, and all other victualls, with Mr. Mayor; and I shall maintain the fraunches and good customs of this town, and the same keep. So help me God and all Saints."

The Oath of them that enter into the CHAPMAN GILDE.

"This hear you, Mayor and ye Brethren of the Gilde, that I truly the customs of my Gilde shall lawfully hold, and my Gild in all things serve. I shall lote and scot with my brethren of the Gild, whether I dwell in the town, frauncheses, or in the Bishop Fee, or in any other place. Also I shall warne Mr. Mayor and the good folks of the town if I know any man that merchandizeth within the fraunches of this town, that been able to enter into the Chapman Gilde. And also I shall be obedient and ready at Mr. Mayor's commandment and sommons; and the good customs and fraunchisses of this town to my power I shall maintain, as God me help and all Saynts."

The Oath of the CHAMBERLAINS.

"We shall faithful and true officers be unto our master the Mayor, diligent of attendance at all times, obedient to his commandment, and ready to do his precepts. We shall improve the livelode belonging unto the comminalte of this town of Leicester, to the most behove of the same town; and also the tenements thereof we shall well and sufficiently repare during our office. We shall endeavour also for to emprove the Chapman Gilde to the uttermost of our powers. We shall be attendant at the Cornwall on the Saturday during our year, and the same to our powers we shall order; and all traunters that there can be found we shall present to our master the Mayor; and all horses and mares that there can be found we shall cause them to be had from the Corn-wall, and out of the market-place. And moreover we shall well and truly charge and discharge ourself of all lands and rents belonging to this town and of the Chapman Gilde, and of all other money as shall come to our hands belonging unto the cominalte of this town, and thereof a true aceompt shall yield up to the auditours assigned in the end of our year; and all other things lawfull that belongeth or partaineth to our office well and truly to our powers we shall do. So help us God and all Saints."

The Oath of the CONSTABLES.

"I shall true Constable be, and true arest make of all affrayers and disturbers of the king's peace, and of all felons within my office; and shall true oath give unto the watchmen, and in due hour during the time of the same I shall maintain all manner of officers of the king within my Constableship during the time of my said office; and all other things that appertaineth to my office I shall duly and truly execute to my power and knowledge. So help me God and all Saints."

The FISH SAYER's Oath.

"You shall take a lawfull assay and view of fish; and weekly, on the market-days and other days, search that if it be salt, and sweet, and good for man's body; and if you find any defective, you shall cause such fish and the person owner thereof to be brought before Mr. Mayor; and also shall present all forestallers, regueters, and ingrossers of such victual within this Borough. These and all other things belonging or appertaining to the office of a Fish Sayer you shall truly execute and do, to the best of your power, knowledge, skill, and ability. So help you God."

The FLESH SAYER's Oath.

"You shall take a lawfull assay and view of all manner of flesh offered to be sold within this Borough, that it be not tached with pock, morrein, mesle, nor with any other infectious disease or fault, but that it be good, wholesome, sound, convenient meat for man's body. You shall weekly, as well on the market days as one other week days, make due search for defective flesh; and if you find any defective, both the flesh and the owner thereof you shall bring before Mr. Mayor. These and all other things that belong or appertain to Flesh Sayers you shall duly and truly do and execute, to the best of your knowledge, skill, and ability, so long as you continue in the said office. So help you God."

The ALE TASTER's Oath.

"You shall diligently and truly search and take a lawful assay of all manner of Ale and Beer brewed to be sold within the peecincts of this Borough; and that which is not good and well brewed you shall not allow of, as if it be raw red, or long ropy, or have any other fault; and shall not spare any person for any favour, kin, or alliance, nor do any wrong out of envy or hatred; but you shall deal justly and do right to every one, to the best of your power and skill; and that Ale and Beer that you shall find defective, you shall true presentment make thereof, and of the owners of the same, to Mr. Mayor and the justices of the peace. All these things you shall duly and truly do and execute at all times so long as you shall continue in your office. So help you God."

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 14 Edw. IV. vol. VI. p. 116. a.

[2] Mr. Carte has also copied the more modern oath of the Mayor; but the older one is here preserved.

SEARCHERS AND SEALERS OF LEATHER.

"You shall duly and truly search and take a lawfull assay of all maner of Tanned Leather within this Borough of Leicester, that it be well and sufficiently barked, tanned, and good, and also of all manner of wares made of Leather within this Borough; and if you find any Leather, or wares made of Leather, within the said Borough, defective, such Leather and wares and the offenders you shall cause to be attached, and them brought before Mr. Mayor. These and all other things that belong and appertain to your said office you shall well and truly execute for the year ensuing, according to the laws and statutes in such cases made and provided, according to the best of your knowledge, skill, and ability. So help you God."

The Oath of SEARCHERS OF HYDES AND TALLOW.

"You shall duly and truly search and take a strict view of all Hydes and Tallow brought to this market, that the said Hydes and Tallow be good and merchantable, according to the statutes in that case made and provided; and if you find any defective, that then you inform Mr. Mayor therewith, and also of the persons offending: And you shall do and execute all other things belonging to the said office for this ensuing year, according to the best of your knowledge, skill, and ability. So help you God."

The Oath of the RECORDER.

"You shall swear to be true to our lyche Lady the Queen[1], and her heirs Kings. You shall justly do justice as well to the poor as to the rich; and all other things to your office of Recordership belonging you shall well and truly do to your power. So help you God, &c."

The Oath of the OCCUPATIONS to their Ordinals.

"You shall do and execute all good rules and customs contained and specified within your Ordinal. You shall be obedient to your steward and wardens' commandment, at all convenient times; you shall duly and truly pay all such duties and forfeits mentioned in your Ordinal to be due for any offence, matter, or thing, therein contained; and all other good rules and lawful customs therein expressed you shall maintain and keep, to the best of your power, skill, and ability. So help you God."

The Oath of the MAYOR'S OFFICERS, his CLERK, and SERJEANT.

"I shall true and faithfull officer be unto my master the Mayor for this year being, and to his lieutenant in his absence, and to all other their successors, Mayors and lieutenants of the same town, during the time of my office and service. The counsel and secrets of this town I shall not utter nor disclose, but faithfully keep. I shall be diligent and ready at the Mayor's commandment, and in like wise to his lieutenant, for the town busynez. So help me God, &c."

Then follows a regular entry of elections:

"Die Dominicâ, in festo S. Matthei Apostoli, 17° Edw. IV. Petrus Wynwode amotus est ab officio majoratûs; et in loco ejus electus est pro anno sequenti Johannes Reynolds senior, major; et Willielmus Chaunler pro communitate camerarius, et Willielmus Pekesale pro majore.

Custodes pacis; Johannes Reynolds senior, major; Petrus Wynwode, Willielmus Holbeche, Johannes Parsons, Johannes Roberdes.

Seneschalli Nundinorum. Election of the Stewardys of the Faire; chosen, furst, one for the new maire; and the second be the old maire; and the thirde for the commons: Robertus Sheryngham, Willielmus Holbeche, Johannes Rokeden.

At a common hall holden at Leicester, Jan. 12, in the year afore-written, for a parliament to be holden at Westminster the 16th of the same month, was chosen, be my master the maire and all his brethren, Peers Curtes for to be one of their brethren of the benche. And also the same day the said Peers Curtes was chosen by the commons to be burges of the said parliament. And, bi the election of the maire and his brethren, was chosen at the same time John Wygston.

M^{dm}. The parliament began to be holden at Westminster on y^{e} 17th Jan. yn the 17 of Edw. IV.; which parliament was dissolved on the 25th day of February next following yn the same yere.

At a comon hall at Leyc', 26th March, in the year aforewritten, the pleyers which pleid the Passion play the yere next afore brought yn a byll, the which was of [certain deuties] of mony; and wheder the Passion shal be put to crafts to be bounden, or nay. And at that time the seid pleyers gaff to the pachents ther mony which that thei had getten yn playing of the seid play ever fore to that day; and all the raymentts with all maner of stuff that they had at that tyme. And at the same comen hall, be the advyse of all the comons, was chosen thies persons after-named for to have the gydyng and rulle of the seid play; Roger Wigston, Robert Sheringham, &c.

Gilda Mercatorum, 9.

[Hic datur Rentale terrarum et tenementorum majoris et communitatis in Wheston.]

"To the honour of Almighty God, and increase of unity and worship of the mayor and of his brethren of the bynke of the town of Leyc', &c. on the feast of St. Edward the king, 17 Edw. IV. by the assent of John Reynolds then mayor, and of all his brethren, it was ordeyned that none of the said brethren, secretly nor openly, in no cause ne matter, reprove ne dishonour, by word ne deed, none of theire order; but that every of them, in absence and presence, report and say well be oder, on pain of forfeit to the chamber of the town, the first time 3*s*. 4*d*. the second time 6*s*. 8*d*. to be forthwith levied by the mayor and the two masters of Corpus X^{ti} gild. And if any refuse to pay his penalty, then he to be comitted by the mayre to ward, there to continue without redemption till the paine be levied. And if the mayor be lacheous in execution on that behalf, the same penalties to be levied upon the mayor by the masters of Corpus X^{ti} gild. And if any of the said brethren be obstinate, and will not be reconciled, and be war by the penalties afore noted, the third time, he to be deposed and discharged of the bynke, and excluded the fellowship of the brethren for evermore. And if any of the said brethren have any reasonable cause or matter to other, every of them that findeth himself agrieved shew his cause or grief to the mayor and masters of Corpus X^{ti} gild; and they to take a rule between the parties; and for love, favour, or alliance, as right and good conscience requireth, to determine, award, and end the cause. And that none of the parties disobey the warde of the said mayor and masters, on the penalties afore-mentioned. And also that every of the said brethren do their uttermost to save and increase the honour of the majoralty, and continually report in every place and company, by their mayor, the most honour, worship, and goodness, they can or may. And to their hearing or knowledge, if any other person, in word or deed, reprove or dishonour their mayor, that then every of the said brethren use his most effectual endeavour to rebuke, reconcile, and reform, every such simple person to his power, on the pain and deposition afore written. Moreover it is ordained, that if any of them disclose or utter to any persons any manner of counsell moved or determined among them, or to his power alter or contrary any manner of agreement among themselves concluded, as in naming of the new mayor upon St. Matthew's even, or for choosing of burgess for the parliament, or any other matter concerning good rule or profit to the town, the mayor, or his brethren; he or they forthwith to be deposed and discharged from the bynke, and excluded of the fellowship of the said brethren for ever. Also it is ordered, that no mayor hereafter set no man upon the bynke without advise and councell of all or most part of his brethren, in pain of himself to be discharged of the bynke, and excluded of the fellowship of the said brethren for evermore after the time of his office of the mayoralty.

---

[1] This, probably, is not older than the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Mr. Carte has also copied one still more modern.

The mayor and his brethren, being by writing and otherwise informed that the king and certain of his lords have knowledge of divers ungodly rules and demeanings afore-time used at the com'on halls; and for those take such displeasure, that without a remedy found it is likely to turn to the undoing of the large liberties and franchises of this town, &c. For a remedy and amendment, &c."

[The orders aforegoing, with those made 7 Edw. IV. (p. 375.) seem to be part of the "Books of the Ordinances of the town," mentioned by William Wygeston senior (see hereafter, 3 Hen. VIII. 1511), which "went from mayor to mayor."]

"At a common halle, holden at Leyc' on the XXVI day of Marche (17 Edw. IV.) in the yeare afore written; att the which comon halle the pleyers the which pleed the Passion play the yere next afore brought yne a byll, the whiche was of s'ten dewtes of mony; and wheder the Passion shul be put to crafts to be bounden, or nay; and at that tyme the seid pleyers gaff to the p'achents their mony which that thei had getten in playing of the seid play everfore to that day, and all the rayments with all other manner of for' that they had at that tyme: And at the same comon halle, be the advyse of all the Comons, was chosen thies persones after-named, for to have the gydynge and rulle of the seid play[1]." (Here follow the names of about twenty of the Corporation.)

Richardus Elkesley, nuper de Leyc' capellanus, gave to the mayor, chamberlains, and commonalty of Leyc', a messuage in Belgrave gate, extending thence to Barkby lane, to the intent that the chamberlains should expend 20*d.* for celebrating his obit in St. Margaret's church on the 11th of August, paying the vicar 3*d.* &c. Dated, Festo Inventionis S. Crucis, 18 Edw. IV.; John Reynolds then being mayor, and John Bayhuwe vicar of St. Margaret's church.

Die Lunæ, in festo S. Matth. 18 Edw. IV. Johannes Reynoldes amotus est ab officio majoratûs; et electus est Thomas Thowithby.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

N. B. The Auditores Compotorum are chosen for the Easter quarter; Swyne's market, South quarter, North quarter; for each three.

Die Martis, in festo S. Matth. 19 Edw. IV. Thomas Totheby amotus est ab officio majoratûs; et in loco ejus electus est Johannes Persons.

Gilda Mercatorum, 16.

Die Jovis, in festo S. Matth. 20 Edw. IV. Johannes Persons amotus est ab officio; et Johannes Wyggeston electus est major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 15.

Die Veneris, in festo S. Matth. 21 Edw. IV. Johannes Penny electus est major.

Gilda Mercatorum, 14 (inter quos Ricardus Wod hosyer, Johannes Clough hosyer.)

Die Sabbati, in festo S. Matth. 22 Edw. IV. Johannes Penny amotus est; et electus est Petrus Curtes major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 19; inter quos, Thomas Lynalls, clericus majoris predicti.

At a com'on hall, on Friday after the feast of St. Dennys, 22 Edw. IV. ordeined, that none of the mayre's brethren of the benke shall bake or brew to sell, on pain to be deposed and discharged of the benke.

At a common hall, Friday next before the feast of the Epiphany, 22 Edw. IV. there were chosen burgesses for the parliament, i. e. for the commons, Mr. Maire (viz. Mr. Peers Courteis), and John Robardes for the maire's bredren.

In an act of resumption 1482, provision is made, that it "extend not, ne in any wise be prejudiciall, unto the maire and communalte of the town of Leycestr', of or for any graunte or grauntes to them made by the kyng's grace undre any of his letters patentes sealed with his grete seale[2]."

On the 9th of April following, 1483, king Edward IV. died at Westminster, of a surfeit, in the 23d year of his reign, and 42d of his age.

EDWARD V.

The crown, which only hovered over the head of young Edward, settled for a short time on that of Richard, who was at once the uncle, protector, and murderer of the young king, who was only 12 years old at the death of his father. Richard, an ambitious prince, but renowned as a soldier and politician, sent the young king and his brother to the Tower, and removed, partly by carnage, all their friends from their presence. In two months they were no more.

Sir Thomas More says, "that one Tyrrel was appointed by Richard to murder them; and he procured one Miles Forrest and John Dighton to be the immediate instruments thereof. The former (says he) was a fellow flushed in murder beforetime; and the latter a horse-keeper, a big, broad, square knave. About midnight, all others being removed, these two ruffians entered the princes' apartments, and suddenly wrapped up their bed-clothes, and forced them against their mouths with all their strength, till they ceased to struggle under the pressure of their weighty bodies; which when these monsters perceived, they lay their dead bodies naked upon the bed, and then fetched Tyrrel, their employer, to be satisfied of the completion of the horrid deed, who caused their bodies to be buried under the stairs."

This short but eventful reign proved fatal, among others, to the lord Hastings, Anthony Woodvile earl Rivers, brother to the dowager queen, and to her father lord Richard Grey, who were beheaded by order of the Protector; and the young king's life and reign concluded June 22, 1483, in 2 months and 18 days.

RICHARD III.

Die Lunæ, in festo S. Matth. 1 Ric. III. Petrus Courteis amotus est ab officio; et electus est Johannes Roberdes major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

At a common hall, Wednesday 12 Jan. 1 Ric. III. in the mairalty of John Roberds, by power of the king's writte unto the mayre and his brethren and the co'i'alte of the same direct, for the election of the burgesses of the parliament, to begin 23 day of January, there is chosen by the mayre's brethren[3] to be burges John Roberds; and by the co'i'altie[4] there is chosen Peres Curtis.

---

[1] Extracted from the Hall Books belonging to the Corporation of Leicester.

[2] Rot. Parl. 22 Edw. IV. vol. VI. p. 202.

[3] The government of the town being antiently lodged in 24 persons, styled "The mayor and his brethren," these separately made choice of one of the members of parliament, and the comminalty of the town chose the other. This distinct choice lasted a good while in king Henry the Eighth's reign; but I cannot tell the precise time when they began to choose jointly. S. Carte.

[4] The commons concerned in the election of their members were all the inhabitants of the town, whether freemen or others, till 4 Henry VII. when the king, by the advice of his council of the dutchy, to prevent the disorders which frequently happened in the election of mayor, burgesses of parliament, and making assessments, ordered the mayor and 24 comburgesses to call unto them only 48, whom they should judge to be the wisest and gravest of the commonalty, upon these occasions (see p. 382.) At the next election of annual officers, Sept. 21, 5 Hen. VII. the commons at large insisting upon their antient privilege in a tumultuous manner, the king in parliament that year ordained, that the mayor and his brethren should from time to time choose 48 of the most discreet inhabitants of the town, who, with the mayor and his brethren, or more part of them, should make yearly election of all the mayors and other officers of the said borough, and their election should be good, &c. (see p. 383.) The election of parliament-men is not expressly mentioned in this act; nevertheless, all elections of them were in fact made agreeable to the tenor of it till the Restoration of king Charles II. when sir John Pretyman made interest with the commons at large, and, upon a hearing in the house of commons, was admitted to be duly elected in virtue of their votes: and now the right of election is vested in the freemen at large, not receiving alms, and in the inhabitants paying scot and lot, not being persons certificated from other places. As to the persons elected, it is observable that of old they were always inhabitants and members of the borough: the first instance which I have met of any country gentleman's election being in the first parliament of queen Mary, when William Faunt and Thomas Farnham, esqrs. were chosen. S. Carte.

At a com'yn hall holden at Leyc', 7 April, 1 Ric. III. it was ordeyned as follows: "In nomine Dei, Amen. Wheras, for the grete rumor and shlander that runns upon the town of Leyc', as well of divers evil disposed persons, as of broken pavements, stones, timber, and muck, to the great noysance of the king's people, and destruction of this said town, without due remedy therein be had: It is therefore ordeyned and stablished, by the hole assent and agreement as well of the right honourable and worshipfull John Roberds, esq. at that time being mayre, and all his brethren coburges of the same town, as by the worshipful co'i'alte of the same; that the said town shall be divided in twelve wards; and in every of the said wards one of the mayre's brethren for the time being, dwelling within the same ward or next thereunto, to be called an Aldreman; and to have full power and authority to correct and punish all such people as been afore rehearsed, or at any time doing a trespass, after the quantity of his trespass. And if any such person will not obey the correction and punishment of the said aldreman, that then the said aldreman shall shew his name and dealing unto the mayre; and he, according to justice, to correct and punish the said trespasser, until he shall with benevolence submit himself unto his said aldreman, and ask pardon of him, of his ungodly disobeying and demeaning against him. And at every time as it shall happen any such aldreman to decease, or to be mayre, that then, at the next comyn hall to be holden after his decease, one other of the mayre's brethren to be chosen an aldreman, and to have the said power and correction, &c.

First; it is agreed and ordeyned, by the hole assent, consent, and agreement, of the mayre, his brethren, and comminaltie aforesaid;

That the first ward shall begin at the High Cross in Leicester, on both sides the strete Northward, to the Mayre's hall, with Apullgate, to St. Nicholas church, the lane behind the said church, and the Black Freres lane.

The second warde to begin in the High strete at the Mayre's hall lane, and the Dede lane, on both sides the strete, unto the North gate, with St. Peter's church-yard lane, and St. John's lane.

The third warde to begyn from the North gate without unto the North bryge on both sides, Senvy gate on both sides, unto St. Margaret's church and Sore lane.

The fourth warde to begin at St. Margaret's church, unto the corner at the little brige without the East gate, and Belgrave gate on both sides, unto the corner forgeinst the Berhill Cross.

The fifth warde to begyn at Humberstone gate on both sides, Galewtre gate on both sides, and the Roundell.

The sixth warde to begin from the East gate on both sides the strete unto Roger Trig's and Pekeshull.

The seventh warde to begyn at Roger Trig's and William Pekeshul, unto the High Cross on both sides.

The eighth warde to begyn in the Shepe market on both sides, Lowesby lane on both sides, unto Thomas Phelip's, and the Church lane, unto the High street.

The ninth warde to begyn in the Cank at Thomas Phelip's, on both sides the Saturday market, unto the East gate.

The tenth warde to begin at the High Cross Southward, on both sides the strete, unto the Grey Freres lane, and to the Sore lane, the Hofe gate, and so forth, to the West brige, ard without as far as the fraunches goes.

The eleventh warde to begin at the said Grey Freres lane and Sore lane unto the South gate on both sides, the Sore lane to Fossbrok, Bukkons lane, and Gun dyk.

The twelfth warde to begin at the South gate on both sides, unto the Sepulcre church.

In 1483, it was found that Edward late king of England, by his letters patent, bearing date at Westminster, August 9, 7 Edw. IV. granted the office of the stewardship of the Honour of Leicester, parcel of his Duchy of Lancaster; the office of the Constableship or Wardenship of the Castle of Leicester; the office of Chief Forester of the Forest and Chace of Leicester; and the office of the Keeper of the Park of the Frith of Leicester, called Leicester Frith, to William lord Hastings, deceased; and that the said William lord Hastings was also seized of one messuage, three gardens, and 2*s.* rent, in Leicester[1].

Die Martis, in festo S. Matth. 2 Ric. III. electus major Robertus Croft.—Gilda Mercatorum, 15.

Richard ascended the throne with but little of the common exultations of the people; but with many secret execrations. The mourning relatives of the unfortunate sufferers formed a design to banish him from the throne, to place thereon Richmond, a descendant of John of Gaunt, who was then an exile in Britanny. Richmond accepted the offer to marry the late king Edward the Fourth's daughter Elizabeth, and thereby effect an union with the opposite factions of York and Lancaster. He soon landed an army of 2000 men in Wales; and, being joined by numbers on his march, hastened to attack Richard, who had fixed his standard at Nottingham, and was forcing recruits into his service.

On the 21st of August 1485, "with a frowning sterne countenance, but yet in great pompe, Richard entered the town of Leicester after the sun was set, being full of indignation, and swelling in anger, which somewhat he asswaged with threats of revenge[2]."

"His army chiefly consisted of foot, which he separated into two divisions; the first marched five in a rank, then followed the baggage; then himself, gorgeously dressed, upon a large white courser, richly caparisoned, attended by his body guards. The second division marched five a-breast also. The horse formed the wings, and kept near the centre; and, in the manner they marched, this army must have covered at least three miles of the road[3]."

Richard slept at the Blue Boar Inn[4], part of which house is supposed to be now standing, opposite the Free-school. The bedstead[5] whereon he is supposed to have lain is still preserved; and its history is thus handed down. In the year 1613, Mrs. Clark, keeper of that inn, was robbed by her servant maid and seven men; and the relation is thus given by sir Roger Twisden, who had it from persons of undoubted credit, who were not only inhabitants of Leicester, but saw the murderers executed: "When king Richard III. marched into Leicestershire against Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. he lay at the Blue Boar Inn, in the town of Leicester, where was left a large wooden bedstead, gilded in some places, which, after his defeat and death in the battle of Bosworth, was left, either through haste, or as a thing of little value (the bedding being all taken from it) to the people of the house: thenceforward this old bedstead, which was boarded at the bottom (as the manner was in those days), became a piece of standing furniture, and passed from tenant to tenant with the inn. In the reign of queen Elizabeth this house

---

[1] Esch. 1 Ric. III. Nº 32. Leic.

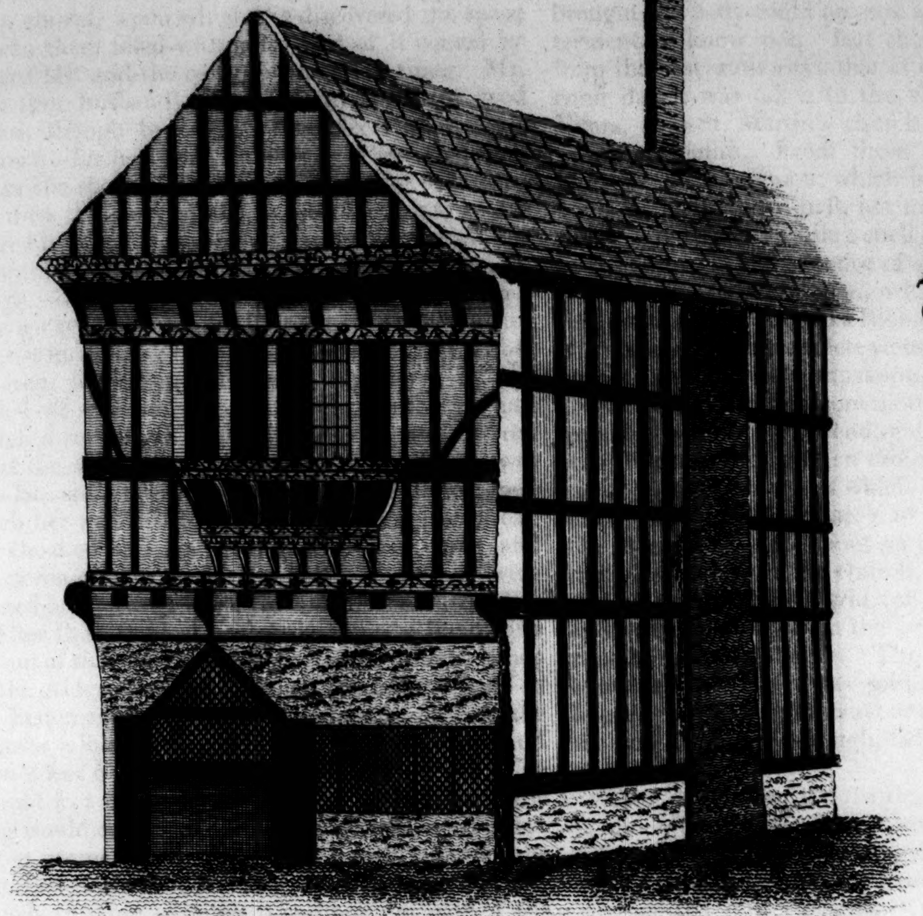
[2] Speed.

[3] Hutton.

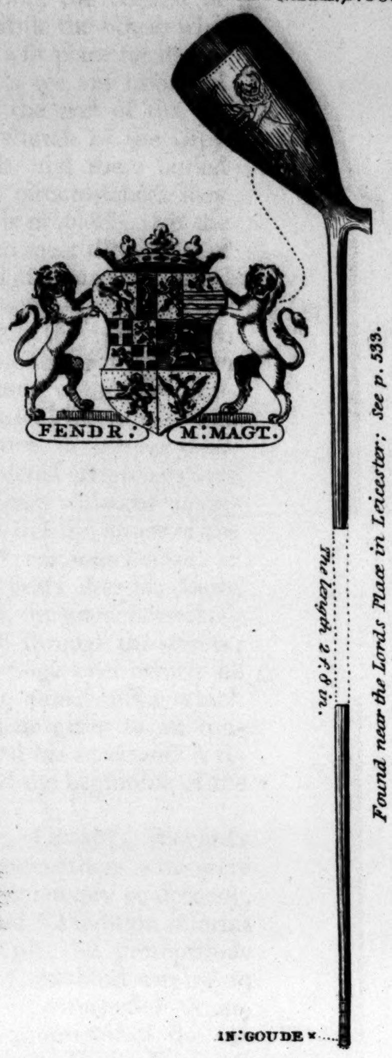
[4] The principal part of Leicester was then that street which leads from the North to the South gate. The chief inn stood opposite the Free-school; where the king lay, then the sign of the Boar, "his cognizance," says Mr. Speed: but, upon his defeat, all the signs of the Boar being torn down as an insult to his memory, it seems probable that this inn afterwards became the sign of the Blue Bell. The Rev. Mr. Pigot, of Leicester, had once a piece of glass, now in the possession of Miss Simons, the present occupier of that house, which was taken from one of the windows, on which is painted a blue bell. The present name of the lane, in which part of this house stands, seems compounded of the former and latter signs, "Blue Boar lane." The building (of which two views are here given in Plate XXXII.) evidently shews the age of Richard, and the chimney which appears in Blue Boar lane of an earlier age; it is built of thin brick or tiles, ornamented with some wrought stone. The room in which it is said he slept is very large, and now open to the roof; the timber which supports it is painted with vermillion, in a rude vine-tree tendril form. There is on the left, as you approach the old steps which lead into this room, a low door, the pannels of which are handsomely carved.

[5] See a representation of it in Plate XXXII.

Vol. I. Pl. XXXII. p. 380.

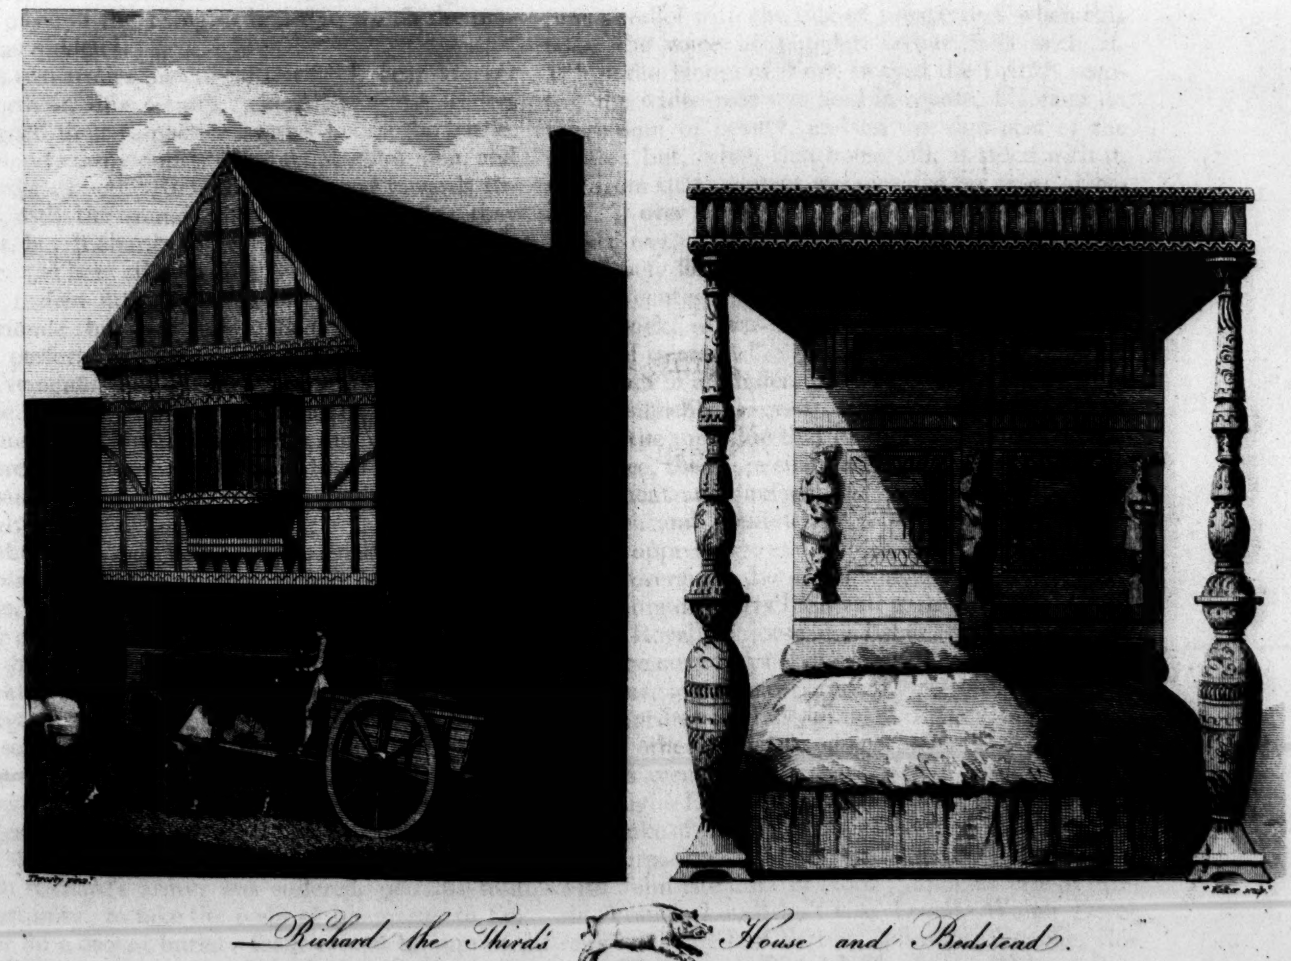


Blue Boar Inn at Leicester.



FENDR.
M. MAGT.
IN: GOUDE
Found near the Lords Place in Leicester; See p. 533.

The length 2 f. 6 in.



Throsby pinx.
Walker sculp.
Richard the Third's House and Bedstead.

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

was kept by one Mr. Clark, who put a bed on this bedstead; which his wife going to make hastily, and jumbling the bedstead, a piece of gold dropped out. This excited the woman's curiosity; she narrowly examined this antiquated piece of furniture, and, finding it had a double bottom, took off the uppermost with a chissel, upon which she discovered the space between them filled with gold, part of it coined by Richard III. and the rest of it in earlier times. Mr. Clark (her husband) concealed this piece of good fortune, though by degrees the effects of it made it known; for he became rich from a low condition, and, in the space of a few years, mayor of the town; and then the story of the bedstead came to be rumoured by the servants. At his death, he left his estate to his wife, who still continued to keep the inn, though she was known to be very rich; which put some wicked persons upon engaging the maid servant to assist in robbing her. These folks, to the number of seven, lodged in the house, plundered it, and carried off some horse-loads of valuable things, and yet left a considerable quantity of valuables scattered about the floor. As for Mrs. Clark herself, who was very fat, she endeavoured to cry out for help, upon which her maid thrust her fingers down her throat, and choaked her; for which fact she was burnt, and the seven men, who were her accomplices, were hanged at Leicester some time in the year 1613."

After this, the bedstead came into the hands of a servant of that inn; and, before it came into the hands of Mr. Alderman Drake, it had been many years in the Redcross-street, where it had been cut to make it fit for a low room. The feet which were cut off were 2 feet 6 long, and each square 6 inches. The present feet are modern.—It is not probable that the king would carry such a bedstead about with him; but it seems more likely that he was put on the best bed in the house; and that the money was secreted, in some convenient and obscure part of the bedstead, till his return after the battle; or, in the hurry of the preparation next morning, it might be forgotten. Half the money which has been found in old houses was hidden during some violent troubles in the country, and, through the sudden death of the owner, has remained there till some change has taken place in the thing or house in which the money was hidden[1].

The two armies met in Sutton field, near Market Bosworth in this county, where the great leaders harangued their respective armies before the battle. Richmond's army consisted of about 5000 men, and Richard's 12,000. Richmond advanced towards Richard with the sound of trumpet for battle; they fought, but Richard's followers fought not like their leader. When all was lost but his life, stern Richard rushed into the arms of death, to seek for Richmond; but was surrounded by his enemies, after performing the most brilliant and warlike atchievements that History has related. He died by the hands of a multitude, who cut his body in the most shocking and barbarous manner, while he was breathing his last. It is said that his body was so shamefully mangled, that it had the appearance of only a mass of blood.

"Richard's body being stripped naked, all tugged and torn, and not so much as a clout left to cover his shame, was trussed, behind a pursuivant at arms, like a hog or a calf; his head and arms hanging on one side the horse, and his legs on the other, all besprinkled with mire and blood, and was so carried to Leicester[2]."—"No king," says Mr. Hutton, "was ever so degraded a spectacle; humanity and decency ought not to have suffered it." Mr. Carte says, "they tied a rope about his neck, more to insult the helpless dead, than to fasten him to the horse."

It should seem that this Blanch Sanglier, an officer in Richard's army, was suffered, perhaps from importunity, to take the body of his master to Leicester for a decent burial; for it cannot be supposed that Richmond would send the body to be buried at Leicester, unless it were to convince the world that Richard was dead. However, whether the body lay exposed in the town-hall, then at the bottom of Blue Boar lane, where the hospital called Symonds now stands, by the order of Richmond, the request of the mayor and his brethren, or while the officer who brought the body could procure a fit place for its interment, I know not. But this we are informed from the best authority, that at the end of the second day it was taken to the church of the Grey Friars, near St. Martin's church, and there buried in a stone coffin. From these circumstances may be hazarded an opinion, which is probable, that the body lay at the town-hall, not to meet the insults of the rabble, but only while a shell of stone was formed to contain it, at the expence of some who might detest the actions of the man, while they pitied fallen Majesty. All were not like Richmond, who, while in the possession of a complete victory, was totally destitute of that mercy and compassion which ennobles man!

Henry VII. neither from motives of love nor compassion, we may apprehend, erected afterwards over king Richard's remains an ordinary alabaster monument to his memory, on which was the figure of the king; but at the dissolution of religious houses, in the succeeding reign, about 50 years after his death, it was ruinated with the church, the grave ransacked, and his bones taken in triumph through the streets; and at last thrown over the bridge over which he rode to the fatal battle. The stone coffin which contained his body was sold or given to an innkeeper, in whose possession and his successors it remained, as an horse-trough, till the beginning of the eighteenth century[3].

Two days after the battle, Catesby, Richard's confidential minister, with some others who were taken prisoners, without any ceremony or decency, were executed at Leicester; and "Tradition informs us that the town's-people, with the promptitude with which the lower orders of mankind engage in every purpose that is either recommended by novelty or example, obliged the proprietor of the inn where Richard slept to change the White Boar, his sign, for that of the Blue. The fluctuations of the human mind are remarkable. The tide of applause runs parallel with the tide of prosperity; when this falls, the voice of popular favour falls with it. While the House of York swayed the British sceptre, the white rose was held in repute, bloomed on the bosom of beauty, and on the sign-post of the public; but, when that house fell, it faded with it, and from that moment was elevated no more. Even now, if ever we see the sign of the rose, it is always a red: nay, it was but recently that this innocent and lovely flower recovered its pristine credit; for, in the contests between the Houses of Stuart and Brunswick, it was supposed to be tainted with the smell of treason[4]."

An act of attainder, passed in 1485, begins thus: "Forasmoche as every King, Prince, and Liege Lord, the more hie that he be in estate and prehemenence, the more singularly he is bound to the advancement and preferring of that indefferent vertue Justice; and promoteinge and rewardinge Vertue, and bi oppressinge and punishinge Vice: Wherefore oure Soveraigne Lord, calleinge unto hys blessed remembraunce thys high and grete charge adjoyned to hys Royall Majestie and Estate, not oblivious nor puttinge out of hys godly mind the unnaturall, mischeivous, and grete perjuries, treasons, homicides, and murdres, in shedding of infants blood, with manie other wronges, odious offences, and abominac'ons ayenst God and man, and in esp'all oure said Soveraigne Lord, committed and doone by Richard late Duke of Glouc', callinge and nameinge hymself, by usurpac'on, King Richard the III^{d}; the which, with John late duke of Norff', Thomas erle of Surrie, Francis Lovell kn't visc' Lovell, Walter Devereux kn't, late lord Ferrers, John lord Zouche, Robert Harrington, Richard Charleton, Richard Ratcliffe,

---

[1] Throsby, p. 62.

[2] Holinshed and Speed.

[3] See further particulars of this tomb, and the epitaph inscribed on it, in a former part of this History, p. 298.

[4] Hutton.

cliffe, William Berkeley of Welley, Robert Brakenbury, Thomas Pilkinton, Robert Midletoune, James Harrington, kn'ts; Walter Hopton, William Catesby, Roger Wake, William Sapcott, Humfrey Stafford, William Clerke of Wenlocke, Jeffrey S't Jermin, Richard Watkins, herrauld of armes, Richard Revell of Derbishyre, Thomas Poulter of the countee of Kent the younger, John Walsh otherwyse called Hastinges, John Kendale, late secretarie to the said Richard late duke, John Buck, Andrew Ratt, and William Bramton of Burford, the XXI^st daie of August, the first yere of the reigne of oure Soveraigne Lord, assembled to theyme atte Leicestre in the countee of Leycestre a grete hoste, traiterously intendinge, imagininge, and conspireinge, the destrucc'on of the Kinges royall p'soune, oure Soveraigne Leige Lord. And they, with the same hoste, with banners spred, mightyly armed and defenced with all manner armes, as gunnes, bowes, arrowes, speres, gleves, axes, and all other manner articles apt or needfull to gef and cause mightie battaille agen oure said Soveraigne Lord, kept togedre from the said XXII^d daie of the said month thanne next followinge, and theyme conduced to a feld within the said shyre of Leicestre, there bi grete and continued deliberac'one, traiterously levied warre ayenst oure said Soverayne Lord, and his true subjects there being in his service and assistance under a banner of oure said Soveraine Lord, to the subversion of this realme, and com'on weale of the same[1]."

By this act, the above persons are all declared traitors, and their estates forfeited; with an exception in favour of John Catesbie, knight, Thomas Kennell, and William Ashby, esquires, for the manor of Kirbie upon Wretheck in the county of Leicester, and of other lands and tenements in Kirbie, Stretton, Somerby, Thorp Segfeld, and Godebie, which they had of the gift and feoffment of Thomas Davis and John Bye[2].

HENRY VII.

In festo S. Matth. 1485, 1 Hen. VII. electus major Thomas Swyke.

Die Jovis, in festo S. Matth. 2 Hen. VII. Thomas Swyke amotus est ab officio majoratûs, et pro anno sequenti electus est Thomas Palet.

At a comyn hall holden Wednesday before the feast of Corpus Xp'i day, 1487, 3 Hen. VII. it was ordayned, that no person, franchist or unfranchist, sue any of his neighbours by spiritual law nor temporal law, neither for debt, trespass, nor surety of the peace, &c. without licence of the maire, but only before the said maire of this town, in pain of imprisonment for forty daies, and of making his costs good that he made his neighbour to lose; and also, after this day, he that so dothe, shall lose his franches and his freedom of the town for ever, and forfeit 40*s.* to the town.

Also ordeined, that if any person make a fray at the High Cross of Leicester, and blood be drawn, he shall forfeit 6*s.* 8*d*; if no blood be drawn, he shall forfeit 3*s.* 4*d*.

Item, a fray made in any part of the town, on the market day, 6*s.* 8*d.* The maker to pay, if blood be drawn, not on market day, 3*s.* 4*d.*; if blood be not drawn, 1*s.* 8*d*.

"Henry, by the grace of God, kynge of England and of France, and lord of Ireland. To all to whom these l'res shall be shewed, gretynge. Know ye that, in consideration of the true and faithful service that the mayers and burgesses of our towne of Leycester have don unto us, and hereafter intend to doo, and also the gret costes and charges that they have susteigned and borne, by oure commandment, in oure journees, fields, and battailles; and the costes that they dyde and made upon oure servants wounded and maymed in our first field, to ther coste and charge of clxxx*l.*; and to thentent that they shuld be strong hereafter, better to kepe our lawes and peax within our said towne; and also that the said maires and burgesses shall support and helpe to be kept our mercats on Wednesday, Freyday, and Satturday, every weke ther to be holden; and for the affection that we have and beare to our subjectes of our said town, for ther prudence and hy merits rehersed: Wee, of our grace especiall, have geven and graunted unto the mayer and burgesses, and ther successurs, an annuite and annuele rent of xx*l.* sterling, to be hade and received yearly frome the feast of Saint Michell the Archangele last passed, for the terme of every yere then next ensuyng, by the hand of our receiver and baylyff of our said towne and honour of Leicester for the tyme beinge, at the feaste of St. John Baptist and of Saint Mychell the Archangele, by even porcyons. In witnes whereoff, we have caused to be made this oure l'res patentz. Geven at oure cite of London, under oure seall of our Duchy, the XVI day of Februare, the thyrd yere of our reigne.

In festo St. Matth. 3 Hen. VII. electus major Roger Wygston.—Gilda Mercatorum, 21.

"Henry, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, to our trusty and welbeloved the mayr, bayliff, comburgy, and burgy of our town of Leyc', parcel of our Duchy of Lancaster, greeting: And forasmuch as we be enformed, that at every election of the mayr ther, or burges of the parliaments, or at assessing of any lawfull imposition, the co'i'altie of our said town, aswell poor as rich, have alway assembled at the com'on hall; whenas such persons as be of little substance or reason, and not contributors, or else full little, to the charge susteined in such behalf, and have had great interest, through their exclamations and hidyness, to the subversion not only of the good policy of our said town, but likely to the often breach of the peax, and other inconveniences, encreasing and causing the full mysery and decline of our said town, and to the great discorage of you the governors ther: For reformation whereof, and to the entent that good rule and substantial order may be had and entertained there from henceforth, we will and strictly charge you, and also com'and you, the said mayr, bayliff, and 24 comburgesses of our said town now being, and that for the time shall be, that at all com'on halls and assemblies hereafter to be holden there, aswell for the election of the mayr, of the justices of the peace, and burgesses of our parliaments, as also at assessing of any lawfull impositions, or otherwise, ye jointly chose and call unto you our bayliffe of our said town for the time being, and only 48 of the most wise and sad com'oners inhabitants ther, after the discretions of the same co'i'altie, and no more: and ye then to order and direct all matters occurrent or supervening among you, as by the reason and conscience shall be thought lawfull and most expedient. Given at our palace of Westminster, under our seal of our said Duchy, the 2d day of August, the 4th year of our reign.

Per consilium ducatûs Lancastrie."

Fest. S. Matth. 4 Hen. VII. electus major Thomas Davy.—Gilda Mercatorum, 16.

22 Dec. 4 Hen. VII. At a common hall, were chosen to be burges of the parliament, to begyn 13 of January next, Peter Curteys and Roger Wigston.

Note, that in the time of Thomas Davy's being mayor, 17 Sept. 5 Hen. VII. the mayor and his 24 brethren took an oath, that no one of the 24 should take upon him the office of mayor, or other office, at the election of the commonalty; but only at the election of the mayor and his brethren, and the 48 of the commonalty, on pain of being excluded from the bench, and the number of the 24, without a contrary command had from the king, &c.

Festo S. Matth. 5 Hen. VII. Thomas Davy amotus fuit ab officio suo; & in loco ejus electus fuit pro anno sequenti Rogerus Tryg, per prefatum Thomam Davy & confratres suos, & per 48 nomine totius communitatis, secundum ordinationem & preceptum domini nostri regis & consilii sui, ut patet in scriptis sub magno sigillo suo ducatûs sui Lancastrie prefatis majori & confratribus suis directis. Et eodem die Thomas Toutheby electus fuit pro anno sequenti per communitatem ville predicte, contra ordinationem & preceptum domini nostri regis predicti. Et super controversiam & disconcordiam illam, & ad evidend' majorem moovemenciam, ad instantiam dicti domini nostri regis, per literas suas sub privato sigillo suo prefato Thome Davy directas, & ad instantiam parium suorum & 48, dictus Thomas Davy occupavit officium majoratûs ville predicte pro anno sequenti.—Gilda Mercatorum, 22.

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 1 Hen. VII. vol. VI. p. 276.

[2] Ibid. p. 277.

In 1489, "Billa, formam Actûs similiter in se continens, porrecta fuit Domino Regi, in Parliamento predicto, ex parte inhabitancium ville Leycestrie, que in se seriem verborum sequentium continebat. 'To the Kyng oure Sovereigne Lorde. Forasmoch as of late greate dyvysions and discordes have growen and been had, as well in the townes and bourghes of Leycestre and Northampton, as in other dyvers townes and burghes corporate within the realme of England, amongest the inh'itauntes of the same, for eleccion and choise of maires and other officers within the same, by reason that such multitude of the said inhabitauntes, beyng of litill substaunce and havour, and of no sadnes, discrecion, wisdome, ne reason, which oft in nombre excede in their assembles others that been approved, discrete, sadde, and well-disposed p'sones, have, by their multitude, and their bandys, confederacies, exclamations, and heednesse, used in the said assembles, caused greate trobles, dyvysions, and discordes amongest themselfe, aswell in the said elections, as in assessyng of the lawfull charges and impositions amongest theym, to the subversyon of the goode rule, governaunce, and polytike demeanyng of the bourghes, and oftetymes to the great brech of the kyng's pease within the same, to the fere, drede, and manyfold perills that thereby may ensue. For reformacion wherof, and for the more quyet and restfullnes of the kyng's subgicts herafter, and for the conservacion of the kynge's peas more fermely to be observed and kept, it is ordeyned, established, and enacted, by the advyse and assent of the Lordes Sp'uall and Temporall, and Com'ens, in this parliament assembled, and by auctorite of the same, that from hensforth the elleccions of maires and other officers, and also the assessyng of all lawful charges and impositions, that herafter shall be made and had in the bourgh of Leycestre, shall be had, made, and used, after the fourme folowyng: That is to say, the maire of the towne of Leycestre and his brethren for the tyme beyng, or the more parte of theym, upon their othes and discressions, shall name and chose XLVIII p'sones, of the most wise, discrete, and best-disposed persones of the inh'itauntes within the said towne; and the same p'sones, or parte of theym, from tyme to tyme herafter to chaunge, when and as ofte as they or the more parte of theym shall seme most necessarie and behovfull; which persones so by them chosen and named, and the said maire and his brethren, or the more parte of theym, shall have and make yerly elleccions of all the maires that herafter shall be maires of the said bourgh and towne; and elleccions by them or the more parte of theym so made, to stande and be goode and effectuall in the lawe, yerly hereafter for ever to endure, in lyke maner, fourme, and condition, as yf the elleccions were made by suche waye, maner, and fourme, as aforetyme hath been used and accustumed, in, of, and for the same elections in the same bourgh; and that the voices of every other p'sone or p'sones, other then been afore reherced, in all eleccions within the said towne, as to chosyng any officers of the same, be voide, and of none effecte in the lawe: And over this, that all other officers of the said towne, that by dutie of their offices owe to be attendant upon the maire and maires that nowe be, or that herafter in the said bourgh shall be electe, chosen and made, only by the said maire and his brethren for the tyme beyng, or the more parte of theym, without assemble of any other p'sones, inh'itauntes of, in, or for the same. Provided alway, that if in the said eleccions, or any of theym, the voices be evenly divided and equall for sondry parties, then the voice of the maire for the tyme beyng to stand and be reputed for II voices in the same election; and if any eleccion or eleccions herafter happe to be made of maire or maires in the said towne in other wise then in this acte afore is reherced, then that elleccion or elleccions to be taken voide, and of no strength ne effecte. And over this, be yt ordeyned by the said auctorite, that yf any of the inh'itauntes nowe beyng, or that herafter shall be inhabited in the said borough and towne, attempte or do to the breche, ympedyment, or lett of this present acte; that then the said p'sone or p'sones to forfeite the sum'e of x*l.*; the moite therof to be to the kyng, and the other moite to be the maire of the said towne for the tyme beyng, to employe to the charges of the said towne. And that yt shall be lefull to the maire of the said bourgh and towne for the tyme beyng to com'ytte every such p'sone or p'sones, troblyng or lettyng the said elleccion, to prison within the same towne, and there to remayne without baille or maynprize, till the said som'e or som'es of money be fully levyed and paide.'—Cui quidem bille perlecte & intellecte per dominum regem, auctoritate & assensu predictis, ut sequitur respondebatur. Le Roy le vuelt[1]."

At a common hall, 6 Nov. 5 Hen. VII. at the instance of the king's writing to the same mayre directed, it was agreed, that for and towards the charge of the said mayre, he shall have, over and above his fee accustomed, the sum of 7*l.* sterling; so that this grant hereafter be no precedent, &c.

At a common hall, 25 May, 1490, the chamberlayns were ordered to pay of their proper goods a certain sum (viz. 10*l.* &c. for half a fifteen) to the king, in name of the town, in like manner as other chamberlayns have done for such like charges and other charges to the said town appertaining, untill such time as they may levy it again of the revenues and other receipts of the said town.

It was also agreed, that John Ashby should ride to London, to have communication with the counsell of the Dutchy, and with my Lady York's counsell, for the matter concerning taking toll and passage money of the inhabitants of this town by the officers of Grantham; and that he should have, daily, in going and coming, 12*d.* for his costs of himself and horse, and for his reward.

Agreed, Sept. 3, 6 Hen. VII. in the mayoralty of Thomas Davy, by consent of the mayor and his brethren named the twenty-four, that whosoever of the twenty-four hereafter be mayor shall, by reason of his oath, endeavour in all things to justify all such matters, causes, and punishments, as the mayres before him have done or entered in, for the weal, worship, and honour of the said town or office, as effectually as it were done or begun within his year of mayoralty.

St. Matthew's day, 6 Hen. VII. at a common hall, it was agreed, that any of the twenty-four chosen to be mayre (so that he be not put upon the same office within seven years next following), if he refuse to serve, he shall forfeit 20*l.*; and for lack of payment, the mayr may commit him to ward, without bayl, till payment be made of the said 20*l.* whereof 10*l.* to be paid to the mayr for the time being towards his charge, over and above his accustomed fee; and the other 10*l.* to the chamberlains for use of the town: And if the mayor neglect to punish and levy the sum'e aforesaid, then the mayr to be deduct of his fee of 10*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and no fee to have for that year, at jopardy of the chamberlains if they pay him.

And it is enacted, that if any inhabitant of the said town be named or chosen by the mayr or his brethren, or the forty-eight, to be chamberlain, and he refuses to serve, they are to proceed to a new election, and he is to pay to the chamberlains 5*l.* for use of the town, and then he is to be reputed as a chamberlain; but, in case of non-payment, the mayr is to com'it him to ward without bayl; and if the mayr neglect to do so, he is to forfeit 5*l.* out of his fee, at the jopardy of the chamberlains if they pay him.

Festo S. Matthei, 6 Hen. VII. Thomas Davy amotus est & Roger Tryg electus est major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 15.

---

[1] Rot. Parl. 5 Hen. VII. vol. VI. p. 432.

Festo S. Matthei, 7 Hen. VII. William Gibson electus major.

The view taken 22 May, 7 Hen. VII. in the tyme of marialtie of William Gybson, of the charts, deeds, indentures, and other munyments, &c. as hereafter followeth, within the tresore house, then being and remaining:

Imprimis, of three charters of Michaelmas fayr, and one of the new fayr, knyt togadr in a box.

Item, two charters of the grant of king John; one of selling and buying of lands and tenements within portmote to be forme and stable; and another of grant to pass through all England without payment of any toll, passage-money, &c.; and another charter of the same of king Henry.

Item, the confirmation of all the grants confermed at a parliament holden 4 Hen. VI.

Item, the grant of the election of the mayr, and of the assessing of impositions by the mayr, his brethren, and 48.

Item, a ple of warantize.

Item, a box of the charter of the justices of the peace and coroners.

Item, a rede paper, with three charters in it, of divers grants.

Item, a box of the tenements in Dede lane, conteyning the evidences of the same.

Item, a box of the evidences of the lands and tenements in Wheston.

Item, a box of evidences of the lands and tenements in Ratclyff, Thrussington, and Cosington.

Item, a box of evidences of a tenement in Belgrave gate, that Richard Illesley, chapelain, gaf unto the town of Leyc'.

Item, a box of evidences of the lyvelode at the High Cross that was John Fresley's.

Item, a box of evidences of a house at the West Bryg, and other at the North Bryg; and of the rent 6*d.* a year in Mekyll Ashby.

Item, a box of evidences of divers tenements in the North gate.

Ad communem aulam, tent' 23 Aug. anno supradicto pro burgensibus parliamenti inceptur' 17 die Octobris, anno supradicto (electi sunt) pro communitatu villæ prædictæ Petrus Curteys, & pro majore & comburgensibus Robertus Croft.

Festo S. Matth. 8 Hen. VII. Thomas Swyke electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 26.

Festo S. Matth. 9 Hen. VII. Robert Crofte electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

Festo S. Matth. 10 Hen. VII. Thomas Hurst electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

Festo S. Matth. 11 Hen. VII. Andrew Langton electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 5.

Festo S. Matth. 12 Hen. VII. William Rowlet electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 16.

John Waysse paid for the chamberlainship (i. e. to be excused from bearing it) 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Festo S. Matth. 13 Hen. VII. Richardus Gillot electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 16.—(Three persons fined for the chamberlainship, each paying 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; as four did next year.)

Festo S. Matth. 14 Hen. VII. William Wygston senior electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 11.

At a com'on hall, 21 Sept. 14 Hen. VII. agreed, that every of the forty-eight that hath been chamberlayn shall pay, to the upholding of St. George's gyld, by the year, 6*d.*; and they that have not been chamberlains shall pay at least 4*d.*

Item, that every of the forty-eight shall pay to the wayts 2*d.* a quarter.

Item, that if any of the mayor's brethren, being within the shire, shall be absent from the court of portmote three court-days togather, contrary to his oath, if he be not sick, he shall forfeit 12*d.* to be levied by the chamberlains, to the use of the town.

Festo S. Matth. 15 Hen. VII. William Wygston junior electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 18.—[The order made 7 April, 1 Ric. III. was this year renewed, 22 Nov. 15 Hen. VII.; and the 12 wards set out as before.]

At the same com'on hall, 22 Nov. 15 Hen. VII. it was ordained, that no brewer tun forth their ale to their customers till the ale-tasters had approved it, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.*; nor till, after it be clensed, it have stood an hour at least, and settled.

Also ordained, that the fine for chamberlainship be 5*l.*

Also typlers, selling ale by unlawful measure, or not sealed, to forfeit 2*d.*

21 Sept. 16 Hen. VII. at a com'on hall, it was enacted, that no one should break any pavement within the precincts of the market-place, for pitching of booths, on pain of 20*d.* a piece, to be levied by the chamberlains, &c.

Also agreed, that the chamberlains shall pay yearly 13*s.* 4*d.* to a person appointed by the mayor and his brethren, to keep clear the market-place, and convey the filth to a place to be assigned to him.

Agreed, that the mayor shall keep the court at Wheston every year by Michaelmas next after his election, on pain of 6*s.* 8*d.*

It was agreed, that no one lay any muck or filth in the precincts of the Saterday market, on pain of 12*d.* to be levied by the chamberlains.

Festo S. Matth. 16 Hen. VII. William Gibson major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.—Thomas Jakys, recordator. [This is the first time that the recorder is mentioned by name; and this same person, viz. Thomas Jakys, continues to be so mentioned till 1 Henry VIII.]

At a com'on hall, on the feast of St. Vincent, 16 Hen. VII. certain persons were appointed to conferr with certain of the canons of the Abbey, about a chief rent concerning which there was a variance between the Town and Abbey.

At the same hall ordered, that no vintner sell wyne in pots unsealed, but bring their pots to William Coke to be sealed; and he, for three pots sealing, to have 4*d.* Unsealed pots, after a fortnight, be seized by W. Coke, and kept to his proper use.

Festo S. Matth. 17 Hen. VII. Roger Tryg electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 22.

The King's Roll of all the Lords, Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen, resyent in the County of Leicester, 17 Hen. VII.

Gray marchio Dorsettiæ Dominus Harrington
Dn's Ferrers de Chartley
Dominus Hastings
Radulphus Shirley, miles
Mauritius Barkley, miles
Johannes Digby, miles
Thomas Kebill, arm.
Thomas Nevill, arm.
Thomas Morton, arm.
William Ashebye, arm.
Thomas Sherard, arm.
Everardus Feldinge, arm.
Willielmus Turpine, arm.
Johannes Turvile, arm.
Thomas Purfrey, arm.
Willielmus Charnells, arm.
Johannes Beamonte, arm.
Edmund Shepey, arm.
Barth'us Brokesby, arm.
Johannes Villers, arm. vicecomes
Thomas Stockes, arm.
Johannes Woodford, arm.
Thomas Haselrigge, arm.
Willielmus Wigeston
Henricus Sotell
Thomas Anteswesill
Christopherus Nele
Gerardus Danett
Robertus Stonesbye
Thomas Gerarde[1]."

Festo S. Matth. 18 Hen. VII. William Frysley electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

Festo S. Matth. 19 Hen. VII. Johannes Norys electus major.—Gilda Mercatorum, 16.

Ad communem aulam tent' die Jovis prox' ante festum Natalis Domini 19 Hen. VII. electi fuerunt burgenses parliamenti incepturi 26 Jan. prox' futur' Robertus Orton pro communitate, & Willielmus Wigston junior pro majore & confratribus.

Ordered at the said hall, that no one dwelling in the franchise of the town pin any cattle at the Castle; but complain to the alderman of the ward where he or the trespasser dwells, and stand to his award.

Festo S. Matth. 20 Hen. VII. John Reed agreed to pay 5*l.* to be discharged of the chamberlainship. Robert Orton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 6.

King Henry the Seventh, in the 20th year of his reign, doth, by his charter, confirm the former charter of the fourth of Edward the Fourth; and granteth further to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester, that the mayor, recorder, and four discreetest burgesses of the same town, shall be justices of peace within the said borough, and limits thereof; and gives them power to enquire, hear, and determine of all offences against divers statutes, and of all felonies, murders, and other malefactors; and against another statute for the counterfeiting, clipping, washing, and falsifying of money (non obstante the execution in the former charter), and to punish the offenders in the premises: And also they, or two of them, to bind men to the peace, or good behaviour, and to commit to prison any person refusing to find sureties for the peace or good behaviour: And granteth likewise, that the mayor, recorder, and four justices, or five, four, three, or two of them, quorum the recorder to be one, shall have power to hold sessions, and to enquire, by the oaths of lawful men of the said borough, of all treasons, murders, felonies, rapes, trespasses, &c.: And the justices to have wages as the justices of the county have, and to take indictments concerning the premisses; and the same to hear and determine, and thereupon to grant process, until the offenders be taken and outlawed, in as large and ample manner as any justices of the county may do; and to assess fines and inflict punishment upon the delinquents in the premisses as the justices in the county may do: And that when any subsidy, fifteenth, or tenth, or any other tax, shall be granted by the parliament to the king, his heirs or successors, that the inhabitants of the borough of Leicester shall be taxed and assessed by themselves, and not with the county; and that commission shall be awarded to the mayor and four discreet burgesses for the taxing and assessing of the burgesses within the said town and limits thereof, to be associated by the king, his heirs or successors: And that the tax of the fifteenth or twentieth shall be 21*l.*, ultra 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* allowed to the collectors, being the antient charge or tax for the fifteenth or twentieth for the said borough of Leicester; and that commission shall be awarded to the mayor and four burgesses, to nominate collectors for the subsidies and fifteenths, so as the said inhabitants there shall not be taxed, cessed, or charged, by any other commission: And that the mayor and commissioners shall chuse such a collector as they will answer for, and to certify his name to the Exchequer; and that such collector shall be only charged with the subsidies and fifteenths of the town, and not of the county: And that no free burgess being resident in the town shall hereafter be chosen collector for the subsidy or fifteenth, forth of the town, for any lands or goods which he hath in the county. But take the record:

---

[1] Harl. MS. 6166. p. 116.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Inspeximus literas patentes domini Edwardi nuper regis Anglie Quarti, majori et burgensibus ville sive burgi sui Leycestrie factas, in hec verba: "Edwardus, Dei gratiâ," [&c. ut supra, p. 374]. "Nos autem literas predictas, ac omnia et singula in eisdem contenta, rata habentes et grata, ea pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, acceptamus et approbamus; et dilecto et fideli servienti nostro Roberto Orton nunc majori, et burgensibus dicte ville sive burgi, tenore presentium, ratificamus et confirmamus, prout litere predicte in se rationabiliter testantur. Et ulterius, de uberiori gratiâ nostrâ, ac ad instantiam et specialem requisitionem dilecti et fidelis servientis nostri Roberti Orton, nunc majoris ville sive burgi predicti, necnon ob singularem affectionem et dilectionem quas penes predictos majorem et burgenses sive inhabitantes predicte ville sive burgi gerimus et habemus, ac pro conservatione pacis nostre, ac sano regimine et pro bono reipublice, ville, et burgensium sive inhabitantium predictorum augendo, dedimus et concessimus, ac per presentes literas nostras damus et concedimus, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, prefatis nunc majori et burgensibus ville predicte, suburb' et procinctuum ejusdem, et successoribus suis majoribus sive burgensibus predictis, quod de cetero dicti nunc major ejusdem ville, et successores sui qui pro tempore erunt, ac quatuor de discretioribus burgensibus ejusdem ville, simul cum majore et recordatore ejusdem ville, sint custodes et justiciarii pacis nostre, et heredum et successorum nostrorum, infra villam predictam, suburb' et procinctuum ejusdem, quorum dictus recordator ejusdem ville pro tempore existens erit unus, ad omnia ordinaciones et statuta apud Westm', Wynton', et Northampton', pro conservatione pacis nostre, heredum et successorum nostrorum, necnon ad statuta et ordinationes ibidem et alibi, de venatoribus, operariis, artificibus, servitoribus, hostellariis, ponderibus, mensuris, vendicione victualium, mendicantibus, et vagabundis, ac aliis hominibus mendicantibus qui se nominant Travelyngz-men, ac ad statuta et ordinationes apud Westm', anno regni Henrici Quarti nuper regis Anglie primo et secundo, de libertatibus, ac aliis libertatibus pannorum minimè dandis, nec eisdem libertatibus aliqualiter utendis, et de omnibus feloniis, murdris, et aliis malefactoribus; ac ad quoddam aliud statutum de contrafacturâ, tonsurâ, loturâ, et aliis falsitatibus alicujus monete edite sive facte, predictâ exceptione de hujusmodi terminationibus de omnimodis feloniis, ac de contrafacturâ, tonsurâ, loturâ, et aliis falsitatibus monete regni nostri Anglie, duntaxat exceptis, in dictis literis patentibus domini Edwardi nuper regis Anglie Quarti contentâ et specificatâ, in contrarium inde factâ, non obstantibus; ac ad omnia et singula alia statuta et ordinationes pro bono pacis, et quieto regimine et gubernatione populi nostri, edita, et in posterum edenda, de et in omnibus suis articulis, juxta vim, formam, et effectum eorundem, infra dictam villam Leycestrie, suburbia et procinctus ejusdem, custodiendum et custodiri faciendum, inquirendum, audiendum, et terminandum, ac ad omnes illos quos contra formam ordinationum et statutorum predictorum, aut eorum alicujus, delinquentes invenerunt, castigandum et puniendum, castigare et punire faciendum, prout secundum formam et effectum ordinationum et statutorum eorundem, predictâ excepcione non obstante, fuerit faciendum; et ad omnes illos qui aliquibus de populo nostro infra villam predictam, suburbia et procinctus ejusdem, minas fecerint, de corporibus suis, vel de incendio domorum suarum, ad sufficientem securitatem de pace et bono gestu suo erga nos, heredes et successores nostros pro tempore existentes, et cunctum populum nostrum inveniendum, coram eis seu eorum duobus, per debitam legis formam venire faciendum; et si hujusmodi securitates invenire recusaverint, tunc eos in prisonâ nostrâ ville predicte, quousque hujusmodi securitates invenerint, salvo custodiri faciendum. Volumus etiam et concedimus prefatis nunc majori et burgensibus, et successoribus suis, quod dicti major, recordator, et alii quatuor burgenses ejusdem ville pro tempore existentes, sex, quinque, quatuor, tres, et duo eorum, quorum recordator ejusdem ville pro tempore existens omnino erit unus, de tempore in tempus futuris temporibus sint et erint justiciarii nostri, heredum et successorum nostrorum, ad inquirendum per sacramentum proborum et legalium hominum de villâ predictâ et suburb' ac procinctibus ejusdem, per quos rei veritas melius sciri poterit, de omnibus proditionibus, murdris, feloniis, raptibus mulierum, et aliis feloniis quibuscumque, ac de quibuscumque transgressionibus, riotis, routis, et conventiculis illicitis, imbraciariis, manutenenciis, ambidextriis, extortionibus, confederationibus, conspirationibus, transgressionibus, regratariis et forestallariis, infra villam predictam, suburbia et procinctus ejusdem, per quoscumque et qualitercumque factis sive perpetratis, et exnunc fieri sive perpetrari contingentibus, necnon ad omnia indictamenta quecumque ad hujusmodi transgressiones et alia malefacta quecumque infra villam predictam, et suburbia ac procinctus ejusdem, coram prefatis majore, recordatore, sex, quinque, quatuor, et tribus eorum, audiendum et terminandum, quorum recordator ejusdem ville pro tempore pore existens erit unus, justiciarii nostri et heredum et successorum nostrorum, de premissis seu aliquo premissorum, ac ad processus inde faciendum versus omnes quos coram justiciariis nostris, et heredum et successorum nostrorum, de premissis seu aliquo premissorum de cetero judicari contigerit, quosque capiantur, reddantur, vel utlagentur, faciendum et continuandum; necnon ad omnia et singula que contra formam ordinationum et statutorum predictorum, seu in evasionem eorundem, seu eorum alicujus, infra villam predictam, suburbia et procinctus ejusdem, facta, perpetrata, seu attemptata fuerint, et que ibidem in posterum fieri, perpetrari, seu attemptari contigerit, tam ad sectam nostram quam aliorum quorûmcunque, coram eisdem justiciariis, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, aut pro seipsis, conqueri aut prosequi volentium, audiendum, ac secundùm legem et consuetudinem regni nostri Anglie, ac juxta formam ordinationum et statutorum predictorum terminandum, in tam amplis modo et formâ prout aliqui alii justiciarii pacis nostre, heredum et successorum nostrorum, alibi in aliquo comitatu regni nostri Anglie inquirere, audire, seu terminare possint et poterint; necnon transgressiones forstallarum predictarum, ac omnia alia superius ad determinandum, non declarat' ad sectam nostram tamen, et ad omnia alia que virtute aliquorum ordinationum sive statutorum per custodes pacis nostre, heredum et successorum nostrorum, ac justiciarios nostros, heredum et successorum nostrorum, hujusmodi discuti et terminari debent, audiendum et terminandum; et ad quoscunque contra formam ordinationum et statutorum predictorum, seu eorum alicujus delinquentium, per fines, redemptiones, et amerciamenta, ac alio modo, pro delictis suis castigandum et puniendum, prout ante ordinationem et punitionem corporalem hujusmodi delinquentibus pro delictis suis exhibendum factum fieri consuevit alibi infra regnum nostrum Anglie pertinent seu pertinebunt, faciendum, exercendum, audiendum, et terminandum; salvis nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, finibus, recognitionibus, redemptionibus, exitibus, et amerciamentis, nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, ratione justiciariorum predictorum, in singulis cessionibus ipsorum majoris, recordatoris, et aliorum nostrorum predictorum in hâc parte nobis adjudicandis et afferandis sive pertinentibus. Volumus tamen quod predicti justiciarii nostri, et eorum quilibet, de et super singulis finibus et exitibus in cessionibus predictis forisfacturis et assidendis habeant, et eorum quilibet habeat, tanta vadia et feoda, prout singuli justiciarii et custodes pacis in dicto comitatu Leycestrie juxta formam statuti inde editi habentis percipiunt, licet officium justiciarii in villâ sive burgo predicto post statutum predictum ordinatum pro hujusmodi vadiis percipiendis per dictum pregenitorem nostrum ordinatum fuerit; et quod aliqui alii justiciarii pacis nostre, heredum aut successorum nostrorum, aut aliqui alii justiciarii heredum aut successorum nostrorum, aliqua ordinationum et statuta de premissis, aut aliqua premissorum, edita sive ordinata, infra villam predictam, suburbia et procinctus ejusdem, emergentium sive contingentium, aut ad aliqua premissorum, aut ad aliquod officium de aut pro iisdem seu eorum aliquibus ibidem exercendum, faciendum, seu exequendum in aliquo ibidem, se non intromittant, nec eorum aliquis se intromittat, aut aliquam jurisdictionem inde habeant seu exerceant. Et ulterius, de uberiori gratiâ, scientiâ, et mero motu nostris, dedimus et concessimus, ac per presentes damus et concedimus, prefatis nunc majori ville sive burgi predicti, et burgensibus predictis, et successoribus suis, quod quandocunque et quotiescunque acciderit seu contigerit exnunc unquam in futuro aliquam quintamdecimam et decimam, quotam, taxam, auxilium, subsidium, aut annuam vel certam pecunie summam, vel alia onera quecumque, quocunque nomine aut formâ concedantur aut concedi contigerint, nobis, heredibus aut successoribus nostris regibus Anglie, per communitatem nostri Anglie, ac per cives et burgenses civitatum et burgorum ejusdem regni, auctoritate parliamenti sive communis consilii, aut aliter quovis modo, et ex quâcumque urgente causâ, nobis sive heredibus vel successoribus nostris, concedi, prestari, aut conferri ullo modo, quod super moderatione, taxatione, ordinatione, assessione, collectione, levatione, receptione, et percepcione omnium et singularum, sive alicujus aut aliquarum hujusmodi quintarumdecimarum, decimarum, quotarum, taxarum, auxiliorum, subsidiorum, aut annue vel certe pecunie summe cujuscunque, vel alicujus inde parcelle, aut aliorum onerum quorumcunque, nullus aut nulli commissionariorum, moderatorum, assessatorum, ordinatorum, vel taxatorum, in predicto comitatu Leycestrie, pro corpore ejusdem comitatûs assignati sive assignandi in eâ parte, de cetero assignetur sive assignentur per commissionem regiam nostri, heredum aut successorum nostrorum, sive per aliud mandatum regni quodcumque, ad moderandum, taxandum, ordinandum, sive assidendum, aliquem sive aliquos burgenses, commorantes sive inhabitantes aut residentes infra villam sive burgum predictum et suburbia ejusdem, pro bonis, catallis, terris, tenementis, aut rebus suis, infra villam sive burgum predictum aut suburbia ejusdem adtunc existentibus sive extunc existere contingentibus, cum hundredis, burgis, villis, villatis, terris, tenementis, et hamelettis, personis, bonis, catallis, terris, aut tenementis, infra dictum comitatum Leycestrie existentibus, ut parcella oneris ejusdem comitatûs contributoria sive oneranda; sed volumus, ordinamus, et tenore presentium, quantum in nobis est, pro nobis, heredibus ac successoribus nostris, stabilimus, ac per presentes concedimus, prefatis nunc majori et burgensibus ville sive burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod prefatus major ejusdem ville sive burgi nunc existens, ac singuli successores sui, major ibidem pro tempore existens, et qui exnunc pro tempore fuerit, ac quatuor probiores, discretiores, et sagaciores burgenses ejusdem, eidem majori pro tempore existente associandi, per nos, heredes ac successores nostros pro tempore existentes, per commissionem regiam, de tempore in tempus, cum hujusmodi casus evenerit, aut concessiones hujusmodi fieri contigerint, in premissis assignentur, et potestatem ac auctoritatem de cetero in perpetuum habeant infra villam sive burgum predictum, ad ordinand', moderand', taxand', et assidend', per seipsos, majorem, et quatuor discreciores viros ville sive burgi predicti sic assignand', ex commissione regiâ, separatos à commissionariis corporis dicti comitatûs Leicestrie exnunc assignand', super et in singulis hujusmodi concessionibus, oneracionibus, et prestacionibus quintarumdecimarum, decimarum, quotarum, taxarum, auxiliorum, subsidiorum, aut alterius contribucionis vel oneris cujuscumque, nobis, heredibus aut successoribus nostris, fiend', et quibuslibet inde parcelle, omnes et singulos burgenses, residentes, commorantes et inhabitantes ville sive burgi illius et suburb' ejusdem pro tempore existen', pro ratâ et porcione suâ bonorum, cattallarum, terrarum, et tenementorum suorum, infra villam sive burgum ill' contingen' de jure contributorum et onerabilium, taxand' sive apporcionand' vel assidend'; videlicet, ad quamlibet integram quintamdecimam et decimam viginti et unam libras pro taxâ ejusdem ville nobis et heredibus nostris solvend', ultra summam centum et tresdecim solidorum et quatuor denariorum, pro taxâ ville sive burgi illius in singulis solucionibus hujusmodi deducend', et eisdem burgensibus, ac eorum collectoribus inde deputand' allocand', prout villa sive burgus predicta antiquitus sit contribuere et taxari, ac in deductione suâ predictâ exonerari aut allocari hactenus pro parte et porcione ejusdem ville sive burgi consuevit cum dicto corpore tocius comitatûs Leycestrie supradicti, dum eidem corpori ipsius comitatûs Leycestrie in collectione et solucione suâ contributor' fuit. Et volumus ac ordinamus quod nos, heredes ac successores nostri, ac quilibet nostrorum, singulas commissiones nostras majori et quatuor discrecioribus burgensibus dicte ville sive burgi pro tempore existentibus, pro singulis talibus taxacionibus, deputacionibus, et nominacionibus collectorum infra villam sive burgum ill' deputand' dirigi faciemus exequendas; ita quod de cetero in perpetuum villa sive burgus predict', ac omnes et singuli majores, burgenses, residentes, commorantes, et inhabitantes ejusdem et suburb' inde, de solucione quintedecime et decime predict', et aliarum concessionum, prestacionum, et contribucionum predict', cum aliis villis, burgis, villatis, hundredis, hamelettis, et locis, de corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie, pro porcione suâ inde quocienscunque evenerit contribuend' nullatenus oneretur aut onerentur, set pro eâdem porcione suâ ville sive burgi illius ad summam supradictam, et pro parte rate sue ejusdem, ultra deduccionem predictam, per moderatores, taxatores, et assessores predicte ville sive burgi illius, per nos, heredes et successores nostros, reges Anglie pro tempore existentes, ut premittitur, tantummodo assignand', onerentur et taxentur; ita quod per aliquos commissionarios, assessores, sive taxatores de dicto comitatu Leycestrie, seu aliquos alios generales commissionarios nostros infra regnum nostrum Anglie existentes, ordinari aut nominari contingentes, pro corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie seu alibi deputand' sive assignand', extra villam sive burgum ill', aliquomodo non taxentur, assidentur, aut solvere vel aliquo modo onerari conantur vel distringantur seu occasionentur; quodque dicti major et ceteri contaxatores, moderatores, assessores, et ordinatores, infra villam sive burgum ill' et suburbia inde, pro tempore de cetero existentes, per nos, heredes et successores nostros, ut premittitur, assignati et assignandi, per se, divisi ab aliis commissionariis de corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie, tantos et tales sufficientes collectores quintarumdecimarum, decimarum, quotarum, taxarum, auxiliorum, subsidiorum, et cujuscumque ulterius oneris et contribucionis, et parcell' eorumdem, infra villam sive burgum predict' et suburbia ejusdem, nobis, heredibus aut successoribus nostris, pertinent' et pertinere contingent', quando et quociens casus hujusmodi concessionum inde colligendi et levandi evenerit seu contigerit, pro quibus respondere voluerint, nominare, deputare, assignare, ordinare, aut onerare, valeant et debeant, ac de eorum nominibus, quotiens sic fieri contigerit, de tempore in tempus, nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, in Scaccarium nostrum aut alibi, prout pro concessionibus hujusmodi fieri contingent, per seipsos solos, et divisos ab aliis commissionariis corporis dicti comitatûs Leycestrie, sub eorum sigillis debitè certificent; et quod singuli predicti collectores dicte ville sive burgi, sic de tempore in tempus quociens et quando nominati, deputati, ordinati, aut onerati fuerint in formâ predictâ, in hujusmodi casu, de cetero non onerentur cum collectoribus corporis dicti comitatûs Leycestrie in aliquo modo, nec de pluribus aliis sive majoribus summis, in compotis suis, cum dictis collectoribus de corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie respondeant; sed quod ipsi collectores infra dictam villam sive burgum de cetero, in formâ predictâ, ut premittitur, deputandi et nominandi, de tantis et talibus summis, unde dicta villa sive burgus, ac singuli burgenses commorantes, inhabitantes, ac residentes ibidem, et suburbiis inde, pro se, à dicto corpore predicti comitatûs Leycestrie divisis, pro ratâ et onere ejusdem burgi, prout casus eveniet, onerari aut assidi per dictos assessores infra villam sive burgum predict', per se, ut premittitur, assidend' onerabuntur, et à quibuscumque collectionibus, contributionibus, et solutionibus suis, cum collectoribus de et pro corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie, et aliis collectoribus quibuscumque extra villam sive burgum predict' deputandis, sint exnunc in perpetuum penitus separati, divisi, et onerati, licet ipsi burgenses sive inhabitantes infra dictam villam sive burgum et suburbia inde, per commissionarios de corpore dicti comitatûs Leycestrie exnunc quovis modo cum collectoribus ejusdem comitatûs deputentur aut deputari contigerint. Concedimus eciam majori, burgensibus, et successoribus suis predictis, quod nullus burgensis residens ville sive burgi qui nunc est, et exnunc fore contigerit, de cetero non fiat nec fit, aut oneretur fore, collector aliquorum premissorum in aliquo loco sive aliquibus locis infra dictum comitatum Leycestrie, seu alibi extra villam sive burgum predictum aut suburbia inde existentibus, per aliquos commissionarios de dictâ corporatione predicti comitatûs Leycestrie, seu aliquos alios extra villam sive burgum ill' deputand', assignand', aut nominand', ratione aliquorum bonorum, cattallorum, terrarum, aut tenementorum suorum in dicto comitatu Leycestrie, seu alibi extra villam sive burgum predictum et suburbia inde existentia aut existere contingentia; sed quod ipsi burgenses et eorum singuli, ac eorum heredes et successores, et eorum quilibet, burgensis ville sive burgi predicti exnunc in perpetuum, tenore et auctoritate presencium, de cetero et de tempore in tempus, de singulis hujusmodi collectionibus suis, ac omnibus solucionibus ratione dictarum collectionum contingentibus, in dicto comitatu Leycestrie, seu alibi extra villam sive burgum predict', in hâc parte penitùs erga nos et heredes nostros exonerati et quieti existant, et eorum quilibet existat; eo quod expressa mencio de vero valore annuo premissorum, aut de aliis donis sive concessionibus per nos, progenitores sive predecessores nostros, eisdem majori et burgensibus ante hec tempora factis in presentibus facta non existit, aut aliquo statuto, actu, ordinacione, sive restrictione, in contrarium premissorum, facto, ordinato, edito, sive proviso, aut aliquâ aliâ re, causâ, seu materiâ quacumque, in aliquo non obstante. In cujus, &c. Teste Rege, apud Westm', quarto die Marcii.

Per ipsum Regem, et de dato, &c. pro tresdecim solidis et quatuor denariis solutis in Hanaperio[1].”

21 May, 21 Hen. VII. enacted by Robert Orton mayor, by consent of the twenty-four and forty-eight, firmly hereafter to be observed, that, from the said 21 May to Michaelmas next come twelvemonth, the Sheeps market shall be kept in the Saturday market, and the profits thereof be received for the use of the town by such persons as are deputed by the mayor and his brethren, &c.; the mayor to forfeit 40*s*. and every of his brethren 20*s*. if he attempt to break the said ordinance.

21 Sept. 21 Hen. VII. At a common hall, it is agreed, and given to Frere William Seyton, prior of the Black Friers of Leicester, and to all his successors for ever, the pasture of two kye in our commonalty called The Cow-hey, to be as free to them as any of us, without let or impediment of any of us; for the which he gave us twenty shillings, and he and his house to pray for us for ever. In witness of the same, we gave him and his house our seal of office.

Festo S. Matth. 21 Hen. VII. Richard Reynolds elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.

Festo S. Matth. 22 Hen. VII. John Wasse, alias Wayes, elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.

Festo S. Matth. 23 Hen. VII. Walter May elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 8.

Some made free are stated to have consented to pay at Michaelmas next 5*s*. and at Christmas next 5*s*.

Ad communem aulam tent' die Veneris prox' post Festum Sancti Ricardi Episcopi, 23 Hen. VII.

It is agreed, that the Sheeps market shall be henceforth holden still in the Market-place; and the profits to be to behoof of the town.

And at the same common hall William Clarke taketh the profits of the Sheeps market, with the 122 craches for the sheeps penns, for seven years; to pay yearly to the chamber of the town 3*l*.; and at the end of the term to have as many craches, and sufficiently repaired. [Several agreements and arbitrations concerning private persons were made before the Mayor, and entered in the Hall-book.]

Several persons paid five nobles, or 33*s*. 4*d*. as a fine for the chamberlainship; and one paid 53*s*. 4*d*.

Mem. That it is enacted that no one shall lay any manner of muck or sweepings within the four gates of the town, but without in such places as ben assigned, viz. in the nether ende of Belgrave gate, and in the field without Galtre gate end, and beyond the Horse fair, under payn for every default 40*d*. For the West quarter at the Sore side, at the comyn drawts.

---

[1] Pat. 20 Hen. VII. Pars 1. m. 18.

Festo S. Matth. 24 Hen. VII. Miles Lamberd elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

About this period the possessions of the abbot and convent of Croxton in the town of Leicester are thus described in the Register of that Abbey:

"Habemus in Leycestriâ, de dono Simonis filii Willielmi Kipping, cum corpore suo, capitale messuagium suum, cum camerâ & omnibus pertinentiis suis, in liberam eleemosinam, sine aliquo retenemento; quod scilicet jacet in parochiâ S. Martini, salvo servicio debito dominis feodi. Warentizabit, &c.

Item Radulfus le Tanur & Alicia Kipping uxor sua concesserunt & confirmaverunt etiam nobis quandam domum cum pertinentiis in orientali parte solarii, & redditum inde provenientem; tenendam nobis benè & in pace, faciendo servicia que pertinent ad capitales dominos. Warantizabunt, &c.

Item Cecilia Kipping, filia Willielmi Kipping, in plenâ potestate & viduitate sua, confirmavit nobis, in puram eleemosinam, pro se & heredibus suis, totum jus & clameum quod habuit, vel habere poterit, in predictis messuagio & solario versus orientem, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis; & quandam domum in parte orientali solarii, cum pertinentiis suis, & redditum inde provenientem; habendam & tenendam benè & in pace, sine aliquo retenemento, faciendo servicium quod ad capitales dominos pertinet. Warentizabit, &c.

Item habemus, de dono ejusdem Cecilie Kipping, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemosinam, homagium & totum servicium Henrici filii Reginaldi Howel de Leycestriâ & heredum suorum; scilicet, annuum redditum XIId. & unius flette, de quadam terrâ cum pertinentiis & edificiis in Leycestriâ, in alto vico orientali, in parochiâ Sancti Martini; quam scilicet terram dicta Cecilia habuit de dono patris sui, nichil juris vel clamei sibi & heredibus in predictâ terrâ retinens, vel in homagiis & serviciis predicti Henrici vel heredum suorum. Warantizabit, &c.

Item habemus remissionem & quietam clamationem Willielmi de Odiston de annuo redditu XII*d*. quem de nobis percipere solebat, de tenemento quod habemus de dono predicti Simonis Kipping, retinendo sibi & heredibus suis alios XII*d*.; ita quod nec ipse nec heredes sui, ratione homagii, relevii, secte alicujus, auxilii, sive cujuscunque consuetudinis, de predicto tenemento ad unquam exigere poterunt imperpetuum. Et si contingat quod distringamur vel implacitemur de homagiis & releviis & arreragiis ad predictum tenementum pertinentibus, pro se & heredibus, sive capitali domino & heredibus suis vel assignatis faciendis, predictus Willielmus & heredes sui nobis warantizabunt in perpetuum.

Item habemus, de dono Petri quondam persone de Estwelle, annuum redditum XII*d*. & II caponum in eâdem villâ, in puram eleemosinam; recipiendum de quodam messuagio in parochiâ Sancti Clementis, quod Ricardus de Walton tenuit. Quem quidem redditum fratres predictatores[1] manentes in Leycestriâ habent de dono nostro, intuitu caritatis, in perpetuum.

Item habemus, de dono Warini Rufi, quandam terram in eâdem villâ, cum edificiis in eâdem constructis, que jacet inter terram quam Ricardus de Wyteby tenuit & terram Roberti Albi.

Item habemus, de dono Rogeri Blundi, annuum redditum XVIII*d*. & II gallinarum & unius galli, in puram eleemosinam; quem Warinus predictus sibi reddere solebat pro predictâ terrâ, quam idem Warinus nobis dedit. Item recepimus, de tenemento quod habemus de dono predicti Warini, V*s*. per annum ad tres terminos, per manum Rogeri Curteys[2].

Item Henricus filius Rogeri Howel, & heredes sui, tenent de nobis quoddam tenementum cum edificiis in eâdem villâ, in parochiâ Sancti Martini; quod scilicet emit de Ceciliâ Kipping; reddendo nobis XII*d*. & unam flettam (viz. ad Purificationem IIII*d*. ad Pentacosten IIII*d*. ad S. Michaelem IIII*d*. & ad Natale unam flettam); & faciendo nobis omnia servicia debita & consueta, secundùm consuetudinem ville; & etiam reddendo nobis I*s*. ad Natale, pro constructione gabli solarii sui super gablum solarii nostri.

Robertus de Feure de Leycestre & Alicia uxor ejus tenent de nobis unum messuagium in altâ stratâ orientali Leycestrie, ad terminum XL annorum; reddendo nobis annuatim V*s*. ad tres terminos.

Summa totius redditûs nostri in eâdem VI*s*. o'. unam flettam. Expaiamus XII*d*."[3]

HENRY VIII.

Festo S. Matth. 1 Hen. VIII. Richard Eyr elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 9.

Thomas Jackys, the recorder, is here, last of all, mentioned among the justices of peace.

In this year Robert Orton was bailiff of Leicester. This officer is called the King's Bailiff; and was, prior to the office of Mayor, called the Earl's Bailiff. He holds his place for life, and is chosen alternately by the earls of Huntingdon and the 24 aldermen. The Huntingdon family obtained this privilege from James I. The office, whatever it might have been, is now in a great measure honorary; excepting that the gentleman who holds it is returning officer, in conjunction with the Mayor, at elections for Members to serve in Parliament. The Corporation are addressed as a body by the names of "Mayor, Bailiffs, &c." though there is but one Bailiff.

Mem. quod Dec. 20, 1 Hen. VIII. Radulphus Swyllington admissus est in gildam mercatorum istius villæ; & insuper, die & anno supradicto, prædictus Radulphus admissus est unus combergensium ejusdem villæ; proviso semper quod non oneretur ad aliquod officium ibidem occupandum, nec sit ad [summonitionem] majoris aliqualiter pro aliquâ causâ nisi ad placitum ipsius Radulphi.

Festo S. Matth. 2 Hen. VIII. William Wygston junior elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 29.

It is enacted, that henceforth no one shall redeem his chamberlainship under 4*l*.

Also, that the mayor for the time being shall every year take the accompts for the church of St. Martin's within his time, under pain of 40*s*.

Also, that all brewers that brew to sell shall give twelve gallons of their best ale for 12*d*.

Item, it is enacted that the mayor's serjeant shall have, of every prisoner committed to the hall for a fray, 4*d*.: and of every prisoner so committed for any other trespass, 2*d*. in name of a fee, to mend his wages, &c.

Also, that no man shall put no more beasts in the Cowhey above two and a bullik.

Festo S. Matth. 3 Hen. VIII. William Wigston senior elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.

William Wygston the elder (was) son and heir and executor of Roger Wygston, esq.—Robert Gaddisby was at that time clerk to the mayor; and the chandlers engaged to sell candles at 1¼*d*. the pound.

Mem. that I William Wygeston the elder, mayor of Leicester, received of William Wygeston the younger, last mayor, these parcells; first, the mayor's seal of offyce, sylver; the com'on seal, copper and gilt, in a purse, with four keyes; also a box, with two grants, concerning the liberties of the town: one of them under the broad seal, and the other under the seal of the Dutchy.

Item, a great book lokett; two other books concerning the ordinances of the town, and sysing good ale and other vetell.

Item, a broken metwand.

Item, a quartern weight of brass.

Item, two half stones of brass of 14lb. weight.

Item, three other brazen weights, each less than other.

Item, a gallon of brass.

---

[1] Of the Friers Preachers at Leicester, commonly called the Dominican or Grey Friers, see before, vol. I. p. 295.

[2] Peter Curteys occurs in 1467 as owner of a house in the West Gate.

[3] Peck's MS. in the British Museum, 4935. ex cod. MS. in 4to, apud Belvoir, fol. 28. a.

Festo S. Matth. 4 Hen. VIII. Richard Gyllot elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 8.

Commissioners for levying a subsidy granted 4 Henry VIII. 1513.

In villâ Leyc'.—*Richard Gillot, *Ralph Swillyngton (recorder), *William Wygston senior, *William Wygston junior, *Richard Eyre, *Richard Reynold (mayor in 1514), *Milo Lambert, Thomas Cotton, William Rolt, *Walter May, Thomas Smyth, William Bartlot, Thomas Burton, Richard Beeston, John Wasse, John Lokear, Thomas Hurst, John Rede, Thomas Whattok, Henry Gillot.

Sir John Digby, sir William Skevington, William Turvile, William Reynold, William Turpin, Robert Brokesby, John Brokesby, William Lolle, William Laudale, John Ludford, Thomas Fernam, in 1514.

In com' Leyc'.—*Thomas marquis of Dorset, *George lord Hastynges, *Robert Brudnell, un' justic' regis, *William Hastynges, esq. *Thomas Norton, master of the hospital at Burton Lazars, *sir Maurice Berkeley, *sir Robert Shirley, *Richard Sacheverell, *William Brokysby, *Thomas Hasilrige, *sir Thomas Pulteney, Christopher Neele, *William Aissheby, *Thomas Brokesby, *Ralph Swillyngton, *Thomas Entwysell, *John Beaumont, *John Villers, *John Fowler, William Reynold, *Robert Jakes, *Thomas Fyndern, *Walter Kebill, *Thomas Kebill, *Thomas Hervye, *Robert Lengham, *John Chernelles, *Robert Borogh, George Hastings, mil', in 1514.

(Those marked * were again commissioners in 1514.)

Festo S. Matth. 5 Hen. VIII. Richard Reynold elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 6.

Festo S. Matth. 6 Hen. VIII. Thomas Burton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 9.

Ad communem aulam tent' die Lunæ prox' ante festum Assumptionis Beatæ Mariæ, 7 Hen. VIII.

Agreed that a subsidy of 21*l.* shall be levied and gedered within the town, to content the town's debt; and there were assessors appointed for each of the 12 wards, and one collector with the constable in each ward.

1 May, Robert Orton was bailiff.

Festo S. Matth. 7 Hen. VIII. Thomas Cotton mayor.

Festo S. Michaelis Archangeli 8 Hen. VIII. John Reede elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 18.

Festo S. Matth. 9 Hen. VIII. Thomas Smyth elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 30.

Mem. that in the fest of St. Leonard, in 9 Hen. VIII. William Prowdlof, in the house, rebuked the mayor and his brethren for the sessing of the fifteenth penny in the time of meraltie of Thomas Smyth. Sir William Lucas, prest, Christopher Grevys, Thomas Leyx, Richard Rutter, sworn and examined, seyn upon their oaths, that the said William Prowdlof said that he had as redy 20 nobles in his perse as any knaff of the bench that sat upon the sessment of the fifteenth penny, or of the best churles of herlotts of them all. Wherupon, according to reason, was the said William Prowdlof comytted to ward, and there punyshed eight days; and so after came into the cort of portmote, and there upon his knees askyt the meyr and his bredren openly forgyffnes in the face of the cort, and so was pardoned.

[This is placed in the book before 20 Hen. VII.]

Festo S. Matth. 10 Hen. VIII. Richard Beeston elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 6.

Festo S. Matth. 11 Hen. VIII. William Bartlatt elected mayor[1].

Festo S. Matth. 12 Hen. VIII. Wm. Wygston senior elected mayor the third time.—Gilda Mercatorum, 5.

The 13 Jan. sir Nicholas Wagstaffe, priest, and vicar of St. Martin's in Leicester, owned a debt before the mayor, and gave sureties to pay it.

Die Jovis, viz. die Depositionis Sancti Antonii 12 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, agreed that Mr. Harward buy at London, for the common wealth of the town, a lawful strike of brass, a gallon of brass, a yard of brass by the standard, and all other weights and measures needful; and the chamberlains to content and pay to the said Robert Harward bill, costs, and charges of the same.

Die Veneris prox' ante Festum S. Hugonis, 12 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, ordered that no baker of the country bring any bread into the town but on the market-day, i.e. Wednesday and Friday, and to set their bread at the High Cross, and there sell it by the pennyworth or twopennyworth; and carry bread to none of their customers, in pain of forfeiting their bread to the king, and their bodies to be imprisoned at the mayor's commandment; and on Saturday to bring their bread to the Saturday market, and there to sell it.

Also agreed, that the first Friday in clean Lent every mayor hold a common hall; and there the chamberlain's accounts to be shewed, that it may be known in what degree the town stands. [Three fining for the Chamberlainship, paid each 4*l.* 4*s.*]

Also agreed, that all bakers that bake for sale make good wholesome bread, according to the assize, on pain of forfeiting the first time 3*s.* 4*d.* and the second time 6*s.* 8*d.*; and so to double as often as they make default.

Also that brewers make good ale, and wholesome, and mighty of the corn, according to the statute, and to sell 13 gallons for 2*s.* 6*d.*; and, upon default, forfeit the first time 3*s.* 4*d.* the second 6*s.* 8*d.* and so to double as often as they make default; also to make good wholesome ale for the poor people of ob' the gallon; and they that find themselves grieved to have remedy of Mr. Mayor.

Also, that no brewer set forth no ale till the alderman of the ward and two of the forty-eight have tasted it, on forfeiture the first time 3*s.* 4*d.* and so to double as often as they make default; and if the alderman of the ward be a brewer, then those of the forty-eight to call the alderman of the next ward to taste: for they that be brewers shall be no tasters.

Also, that no tipler sell ale but with measure sealed according to the king's statute, on pain of 4*d.* toties quoties.

Also, that all measures, as strikes, gallons, pottles, quarts, pints, and all other measures, both sealed and unsealed, be brought before the Mayor; and those that be able shall be admitted, and those that be not able to be mended.

Die Lunæ prox' ante Festum S. Matth. Apostoli 13 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, enacted that no man shall redeem the chamberlainship under the sum of 5*l.*; and if any Mayor do or would break this act, he is to forfeit 6*l.* to be levied by the Mayor succeeding; and if he will not execute it, he is to forfeit 10*l.* to be levied to the common wealth of the town.

Also, it is agreed that there shall be found, at the charge of Mr. Mayor and his brethren and the forty-eight, ten able archers in harness, with bows and arrows, swords and bucklers, with other able harness for their bodies; and five of them to be harnessed at the charge and cost of the twenty-four, and five at the charge of the forty-eight, to be ready within a day's warning, when the king pleases to send for them.

Festo S. Matth. Apostoli 13 Hen. VIII. Robert Harward elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 8.

The King, being about to declare war against France, caused a survey to be made of all the lands in England, much in the nature of Domesday, in order to get an account of the wealth and estates of his subjects; which, when he had received, he sent commissioners to demand money of them by way of loan.

"Capitales redditus ville Leycestrie, in tempore majoratûs Roberti Harward.

Imprimis, IIIs. IVd. de uno tenemento apud Pontem Borealem, quondam Johannis London, modò in tenurâ Roberti Walton, barber.

Item, IIs. de uno tenemento in le Northgate, modò in tenurâ Nicholai Cley, quondam Willielmi Whelton, per annum.

Item, XVIIId. & II gallos de duabus cotagiis in le

---

[1] The following undated order is believed to have been made in his time: "By the Kinge. [Henry VIII.] Trusty and welbeloved, we grete you well. And forasmuch as we, for diverse considerations us moving, intend to have almaner persons reseant, inhabiting, and abiding, or hereafter to be reseant, inhabiting, and abiding, within that our town of Leicester and the liberties thereof, liable to do unto us service of war when the caas shall require, to be at the leading and conducing of our right trusty and well-beloved counsellor the lord Hastyngs, steward of our said towne: We therefore will and com'and you, and every of you, that ye in no wise suffer any of the said personnes to be taken by any maner personne or personnes whatsoever they be, nor reteigned to any of them; but that they be allwayes in a redynes and furth comyng to geve attendaunce upon our said counsillor, to do unto us service of war when we shall geve unto hym com'aundement in that behalf; any our lettres, placards, or other our lettres of com'issions or com'aundement maide or to be maide to the contrary thereof notwithstandyng. And that ye faile not thus to do, as ye intend to please us, and woll eschue the contrary. Geven under our signet, at our manor of Esthampsted, the 17th day of July."

Northgate, de Thomâ Gaddisby, per annum.

Item, ii*s*. & i gallum de unâ peciâ terre infra clausuram dicti Thome Gaddisby in le Ashlane, per annum.

Item, viii*s*. de uno messuagio apud Portam Occidentalem, quondam Thome Hiklyn, per annum.

Item, iii*d*. de uno tenemento juxta Portam Australem, nuper in tenurâ Petri Davy, modò vocato le Pynfold, per annum.

Item, iiii*d*. de uno tenemento in parochiâ Sancti Nicholai Leycestrie, quondam Ricardi Cawthorn, nuper concesso communitati ville Leycestrie, per annum, in perpetuum.

Whetstone, iiii*d*. de capitali redditu exeunte de tenemento W. Stretton in Wheston predict', per annum.

Item, i*d*. exeunt' unius tofti & dimidie virgate terre in tenurâ Willielmi Yannill in Wheston, per annum.

Item ix*s*. exeunt' unius tofti & dimidie virgate terre in tenurâ Johannis Skevyngton in Wheston, per annum.

Item, ix*s*. exeunt' unius messuagii & dimidie virgate terre in tenurâ Thome Bodicote.

Item, vi*d*. exeunt' unius messuagii in Cosby, juxta ecclesiam ibidem, in tenurâ Willielmi Dawbyn, alias vocati Broughton, per annum.

Item, vi*d*. exeunt' de omnibus terris & tenementis in Scraptoft, modò Tho' Taylor de Wheston, per ann'.

Item, iv*d*. de terris & tenementis Johannis Skevyngton in Wheston, pro relaxatione secte curie ibidem.

Item, ii*d*. exeunt' de terris & tenementis Willielmi de Webster in Wheston per annum[1].”

Die Veneris prox' ante Festum Sancti Clementis 13 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, enacted that brewers make good ale, and sell for 1½*d*. a gallon.

Also, that tallow-chandlers sell candles at 1*d*. the pound, on pain of 3*s*. 4*d*.

Also, that no person receive bread out of the country till it be seen and weighed before Mr. Mayor or his officers, and by the warden of the bakers, on pain to forfeit every time 12*d*. to be levied by the chamberlains, for the wealth of the town.

Also, that Mr. Mayor and his brethren shall prove all ordinals of all the occupations within the town; and those that be good to allow them, and those that be evil to damn them.

Also, that no one shall receive any corn that comes on the market-day to be sold till it has been in the common market-places, and there set down till the market be full gathered, whether it be sold or unsold, in pain of default, the first time, 12*d*. and every time to double.

Also, that all trespassers that are committed for punishment to Mr. Mayor's hall shall take their victuals of the serjeant, except men's sons and prentices.

Also, that all bakers that sell horse-bread within the houses to any guest sell but two loaves for 1*d*. on pain of 3*s*. 4*d*.

Also, that all persons on the market-day, having unladen their horses, geldings, or mares, lead them out of the market-place, on pain of 2*d*. for every horse, &c. taken in the market-place, to be levied by the chamberlains.

Die Veneris, 1^{ma} Septimanâ Quadragesimæ 13 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, the sheep-penns were set to two persons, whereof each to pay 33*s*. 4*d*.

In pursuance of a commission from the King, March 30, 13 Hen. VIII. the constables were sworn to present all persons spiritual and temporal, widows, and all that were 16 years of age, shewing what harness they had meet for war, and the value of their goods, and the yearly value of their lands, tenements, and other profits, what they have or be worth, in their several wards; and if there be any retained, and to whom; and whether there be any aliens or strangers born out of the king's allegiance; and who be lords, and whose tenants, and of whom they hold.

Die Veneris prox' post Festum Sancti Hugonis episcopi 13 Hen. VIII. At a common hall, ordered that brewers make good and wholesome ale, and sell for 1¼*d*. a gallon under the hair sieve, and to give 13 gallons to the dozen, with God's good to the same; and that no brewer tun out till the ale-tasters have tasted their ale, on pain of 3*s*. 4*d*. the first time, and 6*s*. 8*d*. the second time, &c.

Festo S. Matth. 14 Hen. VIII. William Bolte elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 2.

At a common hall, on Friday next after the Annunciation of our Lady, 14 Hen. VIII. there were chosen burgesses for the present parliament, for the commons Mr. William Bolte mayor, and Mr. Roger Wygston for the mayor's brethren.

Festo S. Matth. 15 Hen. VIII. Richard Reynolds elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 18.

Die Veneris prox' post Festum Sancti Hugonis episcopi 15 Hen. VIII. Ordered, that all brewers make good and wholesome ale, and sell 14 gallons for 16*d*.

Also, that all brewers brew with no hops to be medyllyd within their mashfat nor zelyngfat, on pain the first time of 3*s*. 4*d*. the second 6*s*. 8*d*. the third 10*s*.

Also, that no brewers tun out ale till the ale-tasters have abyllyd it, on pain of 3*s*. 4*d*. Also, that no typlers sell ale with unsealed measures, on pain of 12*d*.

Also, that tallow chandlers make good candles, of good stuff and good wick, and to sell 13lb. for 18*d*.; and 6½lb. for 9*d*.; and 3¼lb. for 4½*d*. on pain the first time 3*s*. 4*d*. the second 6*s*. 8*d*. &c.

Allso it is enactyd at the same com'on hall, be the said meyr and his brether' the xxiiii, and the xlviii electyd of the com'yns, that this acte foloyng to be of effect, and evermore to theym that shall hereafter to be ferme and stable, that whosoever be the marster of Seynt Georgis gylde shall cause the George to be rydyn, according to the olde auntient costome, that ys to sey betewxt Sent George's day and Whytsondey, except a causse reassonnable; and he or they that make defaute in rydyng of the seyd Georg of the seid maister or maisters to forfet, frome the day of this acte forthwards, v*l*.; and that to be levied of the seid maister or maisters, to the behew and use of the seid gyld, by the meir for the tyme beyng and the chamburleyns: And yf the seyd meyr and chamberleyns be necligent in ataching or levyeng of the seid forfet, that then the meire to forfet xxvi*s*. viii*d*. and eyther chamburleyn to forfet vi*s*. viii*d*. and to be peyd to the profet of the same gyld.

Moreover, that all forfeits made by the masters since the last time that the George was ridden, shall be paid to the profit of the same gild, of every wrangler behind 26*s*. 8*d*.

Also, that no waterman carry no burne upon the Sunday without cause reasonable, on pain of imprisonment.

Also, that the Swines market shall be kept, from this day forth, in the Parchment lane, and no more in the High street [and] in the East gate.

Also, that all bakers that carry into the country shall bring their bread on horseback to the mayor, or to the wardens of the craft, and there to be weighed, and seen that it be able paste and wholesome, on pain of forfeit the first time 12*d*. the second time 20*d*. the third time 3*s*. 4*d*. &c.

Also, that every one absent from the common hall pay the old forfeit, without a cause reasonable; i. e. every one of the twenty-four 12*d*. and of the forty-eight 6*d*. to be levied by the chamberlains.

Festo S. Matth. 16 Hen. VIII. Robert Staples elected mayor.

Ralph Swyllyngton, recorder, died this year; and in his room was chosen Thomas Broksby, alias Broxby.—Gilda Mercatorum, 21.

Robertus Staples nuper defunctus est in die Epiphaniæ Domini; & ad communem aulam tent' die Lunæ prox' post Festum Sancti Hilarii electus erat Henricus Gillot in loco ipsius Roberti in officium majoratûs per totum consilium confratrum & XLVIII.

Et in festo S. Matth. 17 Hen. VIII. dictus Robertus & Henricus Gillot amoti sunt ab officio majoratûs, & in loco eorum electus est Edward Beyr.

Festo S. Matth. 18 Hen. VIII. John Westwise elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

In this year the Corporation of Leicester thought it expedient to procure the following exemplification, under the great seal of England:

---

[1] Carte, MS.

“Henricus Octavus, Dei gratiâ, &c. omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Inspeximus quoddam breve nostrum de certiorand’, Thesaurario & Camerariis nostris direct’, necnon certificationem ejusdem nobis in Cancellariam nostram missam, & in filaciis ejusdem Cancellarie residentem, in hec verba: ‘Henricus Octavus, &c. Thesaurario & Camerariis suis salutem. Volentes, certis de causis, certiorari utrum villa nostra Leycestrie, alias dicta Ledecester, sit de antiquo dominico Corone Anglie necne, vobis mandamus, quod, scrutatis rotulis, recordis, & aliis memorandis nostris, penes vos remanentes, de eo quod inde inveneritis, tenores earundem nobis in Cancellariam nostram, sub sigillis vestris, distinctè & apertè, sine dilatione mittatis, unà cum hoc breve, ut, inspectis tenoribus predictis, ulteriùs inde fieri faciamus quod juris fuerit & rationis, & per eandem curiam Cancellarie nostre consideratum fuerit in hâc parte & decretum. Teste meipso, apud Westm’, 19° die Novembris, anno regni nostri decimo octavo. PEXSALL.’

“Responsio Thesaurarii & Camerariorum: “Scrutato Libro vestro de Domesday, in Thesaurariâ vestrâ sub custodiâ nostrâ existente, & de eo quod invenimus tangente villam infrascriptam vobis mittimus in quâdem scedulâ huic brevi consutâ.

‘In Libro de Domesday, inter alia, continetur sic; videlicet, ‘LEDECESTRESCYRE.

Civitas de Ledecestre te’pore Regis Edwardi reddeb’ p’ annu’ Regi . xxx lib’ ad numerum de xx^{ti} . in orâ . et xv . sextar’ mellis.

Quando Rex ibat in exercitu per terra’ :’ de ipso burgo xii . burgenses ibant cu’ eo . Si u^{o} per mare in hoste’ ibat ; :’ mittebant ei iiii . equos de eod’ burgo usque Londonia’. ad co’portand’ arma uel alia quæ opus . e’e’t.

Modo h’t Rex . W . p’ om’ib’ redditib’ ciuitatis ej’dem et comitat’ . xl.ii . lib’ et x . solid’ ad pond’.

Pro i accipitre x lib’ ad numer’ p’ su’mario xx^{ti} sol’.

De monetarijs . xx . lib’ per annu’ de xx . in orâ .

De his xx lib’ h’t Hugo de Grentemaisnil t’ciu’ denariu’.

[&c. &c. as in vol. I. p. 1. ending with]

Silva tot’ Vicecomitat’ Hereswode vocat’ h’t iiii leu’ in l’g, & i leu’ in lat’.’

“Nos autem tenorem certificationis predicte, ad instanciam majoris & comitatûs ville predicte, duximus exemplificandam per presentes. In cujus rei testimonium, has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso, apud Westm’, vicesimo tertio die Novembris, anno regni nostri decimo octavo. PEXSALL.

$$\text{Ex}^{r}\text{ per}\left\{\begin{array}{l}\text{Will'm Throkmerton,}\\ \text{Radulphum Pexsall,}\end{array}\right\}\text{Clericos.”}$$

Festo S. Matth. 19 Hen. VIII. Thomas Burton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.

Festo S. Matth. 20 Hen. VIII. Roger Gyllot elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 5.

At a common hall, holden at Corpus Christi hall 11th of August, 21 Hen. VIII. it was agreed to give to John Beaumont, gent. 6*s*. 8*d*. fee, to answer in such causes as the town shall need and require.

Festo S. Matth. 21 Hen. VIII. Thomas Bett elected mayor.

At a common hall this day agreed, that if any of the forty-eight be elected by the mayor and his brethren comburgesses to be of the said comburgesses, and refuse it, that then he forfeit 10*l*. to be levied by the chamberlains.

Mem. the 27th day of March, there was brought to Thomas Bett, then mayor of Leicester, hawthorn bud’ytt furth, baene flowres, and a cullumbell flour.

Festo S. Matth. 22 Hen. VIII. William Tebb elected mayor. In this year Cardinal Wolsey died in Leicester Abbey.

Friday after St. Hugh’s day, at a common hall, enacted that brewers shall give twelve gallons for 15*d*. and small ale ob’. the gallon; and they to make good ale. Also, that no chandler sell above 2½*d*. the pound till Candlemas, on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*.; and shall not sell dozens or half dozens by wholesale into the country except by licence of the mayor, on forfeiture of 6*s*. 8*d*.

The eldest son of a freeman paid 2*d*. others 10*s*. to be made free. [What each person paid is first mentioned 15 Hen. VIII.]

Festo S. Matth. 23 Hen. VIII. Nicholas Rennold elected mayor. Thomas Cattelyn was then bailiff.—Gilda Mercatorum, 3.

Mem. there was brought to Mr. Nicholas Reynolds, on St. Leonard’s day, a chester of appletree blooms.

Here follows the charter of 4 Edward IV. which has been printed in p. 374; and after that an account of several transactions and orders passed in time of several mayors aforegoing, as followeth in part:

A letter of Henry VIII. to the justices of Leicestershire, with a proclamation for enforcing the laws for pursuit and suppression of robbers and rioters.

Another of Jan. 31, 1 Hen. VIII. about vagabonds and beggars.

[Here ends the old Hall Book, used temp. Edw. IV. Ric. III. and till 23 Hen. VIII. The following book contains the rest of the reign of Henry VIII. Edward VI. and Mary.]

23 Feb. at a common hall, enacted that no man enter into the chapman’s gild but he shall pay the 10*s*. within the year.

Agreed by the twenty-four, the 5th April, that Mr. Christopher Clught should not ride the George this year, for divers considerations.

Mem. It was agreed before Nicholas Rennold, then mayor of Leicester, by consent of the wardens and all the company of journeyman shoemakers in the town, that they shall give yearly to the Austin Freers in Leicester, for all the brethren and sisterne to be prayed for, in ready money 10*s*. to be paid at two times in the year, besides the offering-days afore-used.

Festo S. Matth. 24 Hen. VIII. John Barton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

22 Nov. at a common hall, it was agreed, in case of coming late to a common hall, (upon reasonable warnings), the mayor’s brethren to pay 6*d*. if the mayor be sitting; and if they come after, each to pay 12*d*.; and if any of the forty-eight come too late, he is to pay 3*d*. if the mayor be sitting; and if after he is up, then to pay 6*d*.

Also, that no brewer sell above 2*d*. the gallon.

Roger Redcliff, esq. (high sheriff in 1529) was appointed by the king’s writ, June 30, 1534, to take the ecclesiastical survey of the county of Leicester.

Festo S. Matth. 25 Hen. VIII. Christopher Clught, alias Clough, elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

20 Nov. at a common hall, agreed that no brewer that is a common brewer sell above 1½*d*. a gallon: and that no brewer sell in his house above 3*d*. a gallon; and that no chandler sell above 1½*d*. per pound, and carry none into the country except they ask leave of the mayor.

Festo S. Matth. 26 Hen. VIII. William Bolte elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

Festo S. Matth. 27 Hen. VIII. Thomas Burton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 9.

19 Nov. at a common hall, enacted that brewers sell ale for 2*d*. a gallon; and that chandlers sell candles at 1½*d*. per pound, and 13 to the dozen.

Festo S. Matth. 28 Hen. VIII. Roger Gyllot elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 27.

Mr. Thomas Bruxby continued to be recorder till the last year inclusive; but this year John Baymond was recorder, and so continued till 33 Hen. VIII.

Thomas Catlyn was then bailiff of Leicester.

Festo S. Matth. 17 Hen. VIII. Randyll Awood elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

Nov. 16, 29 Hen. VIII. at a common hall, agreed that brewers sell for 1*d*. a gallon; and chandlers sell for 1½*d*. a pound, and 13 to the dozen.

Festo S. Matth. 30 Hen. VIII. William Pratt elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

Festo S. Matth. 31 Hen. VIII. Nicholas Reynold elected mayor the second time. The fine for absence of any of the twenty-four was made 8*d*.; of the forty-eight 4*d*.—Gilda Mercatorum, 17.

Leicester Abbey suppressed in this year.

18 Jan. at a common hall, it was enacted that no craftsmen nor vitteller, being foreigners, shall sell ware or victuals, except by wholesale, on the market-day within the town.

Jan. 29, the occupation of Smiths gave to the chamber of the town 13*s*. 4*d*. towards the charges of the town now at this term, &c. The Butchers gave 26*s.* 8*d.*; and the Bakers gave 6*s.* 8*d.*

King Henry VIII. granted to the mayor and burgesses of Leicester two fairs, to be held five days apiece; the one upon the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, and the other on the feast-day of the Conception of our Lady, and two days before and two after, free from toll, stallage, &c. with the government of the fair and ordering of the stalls to the mayor and two or three burgesses, to be yearly chosen, now called Stewards of the fair.

"Henricus Octavus, Dei gratiâ, Anglie et Francie rex, fidei defensor, dominus Hibernie, et in terrâ supremum caput Anglicane ecclesie, omnibus ad quos presentes litere pervenerint salutem. Sciatis quod nos, ob affectionem et dileccionem quas habemus et gerimus ad villam nostram Leycestrie, ac ad communem utilitatem ejusdem, necnon dilectis et fidelibus nostris majori et burgensibus ibidem commorantibus, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, concessimus, ac per presentes, quantum in nobis est, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus eisdem majori et burgensibus ville nostre Leycestrie predicte, et successoribus suis in perpetuum, quandam feriam apud eandem villam Leycestrie et suburbia ejusdem, singulis annis, per quinque dies duraturam; videlicet, duobus diebus ante festum Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste, et in die ejusdem festi, et duobus diebus idem festum proximè sequentibus. Et insuper sciatis quod nos, pro consideracionibus predictis, concessimus, ac per presentes concedimus et confirmamus, prefatis majori et burgensibus predicte ville Leycestrie, et successoribus suis, quandam aliam feriam apud eandem villam Leycestrie, et suburbia ejusdem, singulis annis per quinque dies duraturum; videlicet, duobus diebus proximè ante festum Conceptionis beate Marie Virginis, et in die ejusdem festi, et in duobus diebus idem festum proximè sequentibus, in perpetuum; ita quod quilibet indigena sive alienigena ad dictam villam Leycestrie et suburbia ejusdem, causâ feriarum predictarum seu earum alicujus veniens, et ibidem moram faciens, et exinde recedens, tam in dictis feriis et in earum quâlibet, quam ante et post, in perpetuum, sit quietis de theoloneo, stallagio, picagio, et aliis custumis et prestacionibus quibuscumque, nobis, heredibus vel successoribus nostris, racione feriarum predictarum seu eorum alicujus qualitercumque spectantibus, accedentibus, sive pertinentibus. Volumus insuper et concedimus, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, ac per presentes confirmamus, prefatis majori et burgensibus predicte ville Leycestrie, et successoribus suis in perpetuum, omnem et omnimodò ordinacionem, gubernacionem, et assignacionem stallorum et placearum in predictis feriis et in earum quâlibet, ac totum regimen earundem feriarum, et earum cujuslibet, et omnium singularum libertatum et aliarum consuetudinum ad easdem ferias et quamlibet eorum spectantium, per majorem ejusdem ville Leycestrie qui pro tempore fuerit, et duos vel tres de probioribus et melioribus hominibus ejusdem ville, in auxilium ipsius majoris ad hoc annuatim electis, deputatis et juratis per dictos majorem et burgenses, sine impedimento seu perturbacione nostri vel heredum nostrorum, seu aliorum ministrorum nostrorum quorumcumque; ita quod predicte ferie, seu earum aliqua, non sint vel sit in prejudicium vel nocumentum aliquarum feriarum vicinarum; eo quod expressa mencio de vero valore annuo, aut de certitudine premissorum, vel eorum alicujus, aut de aliis donis sive concessionibus per nos vel per aliquem progenitorum nostrorum prefatis majori et burgensibus ante hec tempora factis in presentibus minimè factis existat, aut aliquo statuto, actu, ordinacione, sive provisione, inde in contrarium factis, editis, ordinatis, sive provisis, aut aliâ re, causâ, vel materiâ quâcumque, in aliquo non obstante. In cujus rei testimonium, has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso, apud Walden, vicesimo die Marcii, anno regni nostri 31°."[1] 12 March, the King having granted to the town two fairs (Midsummer fair, and the Conception of our Lady before Christmas), over and besides two fairs antiently granted by the King's progenitors; Towards the charges of the charter under the great seal, the masters, wardens, and stewards of the gilds of Corpus Christi and St. Margaret's, in the name of the brotherhood, gave 20*l.*; viz. each of the gilds 10*l.* And it was agreed that this should be registered in the Town-book, to remain for ever.

Received of the master and stewards of Corpus Christi gild, towards the charges of labouring the King's charter for two new fairs for the town of Leicester, 10*l.*; of the gild of St. Margaret's, for the same, 10*l.*; of the occupation of Bakers, 6*s.* 8*d.*; of the Butchers, 26*s.* 8*d.*; of the Smiths, 13*s.* 4*d.* In all, 22*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

The chamberlains paid to Mr. Barton, for riding to London and Waldyng, and for sealing the charter, 10*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*; to Robert Cotton, for like charges, 9*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.*; to Mr. Gyllot, for the town's business, 6*s.* 8*d.*; to Mr. Wood, for the like, 6*s.* 8*d.*; to Mr. Bolte, for riding to London, 40*s.* In all, 22*l.* 11*s.* 1*d.*

So that the town was at no more charge than 4*s.* 5*d.*

Festo S. Matth. 32 Hen. VIII. Robert Gaddisby elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

This year, in the account of the election, the King has given him the title of "Fidei Defensor, & in terrâ Supremum Caput Anglicanæ Ecclesiæ," and so often to the end of the book.

Festo S. Matth. 33 Hen. VIII. Hugh Aston elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 13.

This year John Baymond is mentioned as recorder; but his name is blotted out, and instead thereof is inserted Edward Gryffyn recorder, who continued so till 3 Edw. VI. inclusive.

Ale under the sieve for 1½*d.* a gallon, 13 to the dozen; candles 1½*d.* a pound, 13 to the dozen.

Festo S. Matth. 34 Hen. VIII. Thomas Cressy elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, . . .

Festo S. Matth. 35 Hen. VIII. Christopher Clugh elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

Oct. 5, at a common hall, Mr. Mey, master of St. George's gild, because the George was not ridden, paid 40*s.*

Festo S. Matth. 36 Hen. VIII. William Olyffe elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 9.

Festo S. Matth. 37 Hen. VIII. Robert Cotton elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

"One William Foxby having fallen asleep, could not be awaked, by pinching and burning, till after fourteen days; and when awaked was found, in all points, as if he had sleep butt one night[2]."

19 March. At a common hall, enacted that if the mayor and his brethren choose any of the forty-eight to be one of the 24 comburgesses, and he refuse, he shall pay 10*l.* half to the king, and half to the town; and for non-payment, to be put into wards.

At the same hall, enacted, that if any inhabitant summoned by the constable or mayor's officers come not to the common hall at any hour appointed, or to attend the mayor, to ride to meet the king, or to do any other thing that shall be to the pleasure or worship of the town, without reasonable cause or special licence of the mayor, he shall forfeit, if of the twenty-four, 12*d.*; and the forty-eight, or other, 6*d.*: And if any of the twenty-four or forty-eight refuse to pay, the mayor may commit him to ward till he pay; and if the mayor be negligent or forgetful in executing this act, then he is to forfeit 2*s.* and the succeeding mayor shall have power to levy it; and if he refuse payment, to commit him till he pay all such forfeitures. [This act was first made at a common hall, on Thursday before St. Simon and Jude. 7 Edw. IV. Mr. Richard Gyllot being mayor; and, last of all, confirmed 29 Jan. 1 Mary, in the mayoralty of Mr. Thomas Davinport, for ever to endure.]

20 Nov. Mr. Robert Cotton, then mayor, &c. pur-

---

[1] Pat. 31 Hen. VIII.

[2] In the margin of a book containing a list of the mayors of Leicester.

chased, in name of the town, of Richard Roger and Robert Taverner, gents. a chief going out of a piece of ground of 12*d.* a year to the King, belonging to the Court of Augmentation (which piece of ground was given to the town by the earl of Huntingdon), paying, for the said chief of 12*d.*, 20*s.*

Festo S. Matth. 28 Henry VIII. Robert May elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 11.

Ale under the sieve, 1½*d.*; stale ale, 2*d.* a gallon, and 13 to the dozen; candles 2*d. per* pound, 13 to the dozen.

EDWARD VI.

King Edward VI. in the first year of his reign, reciting the charter of King John, for freedom of toll; and the patent of Edw. III. for Michaelmas fair; the patent of Ric. II. for confirmation of the patent of King John, for fines in the portmote court; and the patent of 13 Edw. IV. for May day fair; and the charter of 4 Edw. IV. for making of justices of peace; and the charter of Hen. VII. for confirmation of that patent, and for the enlargement of the authority of justices of peace; doth approve, ratify, and confirm all the said charters [1].

About the 13th of May, Robert Maye being mayor, the town purchased of Thomas Danet, of Bronkynsthorp, esq. and bailiff to the king in the liberties of Leicester, the office of the said bailiwick, for which he had a patent for his life; for which they gave him 80*l.*; of which Thomas Dey, clerk, born in Leicester, and some time canon of the late monastery of St. Mary in Leicester, and also prebendary of St. Stephen's in Westminster, gave them 20*l.*

Festo S. Matth. 1 Edw. VI. Ranulph Wood elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

Nov. 20, Thomas Daye, by consent of the parish of St. Margaret, paid 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* towards the maintenance of the chamber of the town of Leicester.

Ale, 1½*d.* 13 to the dozen; candles, 2*d. per* pound.

Many years before and after, the eldest son paid 2*d.* the second son 5*s.* others 10*s.* for their freedom; and 2*d.* for swearing.

18 April, "Rex concessit Thome Hawkins molendinum eqninum, ac unum tenementum, ac quatuor shopas, cum omnibus pertinentiis, &c. situat' infra villam Leicestrie, in Foro ibidem vocato Swynesmarket, habend' pro termino vite."

Money gathered for setting forth 11 horsemen, to go with sir Richard Manners into Scotland, 6 Aug. 2 Edw. VI.; Randall Wood mayor the second time:

Paid, for the 11 horses and harness, with other furniture at the same time, 47*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*

Gathered, of divers churches in the town, towards the said charge, 48*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*; viz.

Received of the churchwardens of St. Peter's, towards the same, 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; of the churchwardens of Allhallows, 6*l.*; of St. Margaret's, 10*l.*; of the churchwardens of St. Nicholas, 3*l.*; of St. Martin's, 18*l.* 10*s.*; of St. Mary's 8*l.*—in all 48*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*; of which the surplus is 18*s.* 8*d.* Which was put into the hands of the chamberlains, Mr. Nicholas Reynolds being mayor.

Festo S. Matth. 2 Edw. VI. John Gatlyff elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 7.

Festo S. Matth. 3 Edw. VI. Nicholas Reynold elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

> "The coppy of my lord of Huntyndon's let^{r} sent to Mr. Mayor and his brethren, with the eight and forty, as herafter follyth.
>
> 'To my assuered friends the mayor of Leycester and his brethr'n and to every of them, geve this wythe spede.

'After my ryght harty com'endac'ons: thes be to adv'tyse you that I am com'aunded by the Kyng's Ma^{tie}, and hys moste honorable councell, to s've in the parties beyond the sees, with suche a numbre as to me by them ys appoynted to be ther generell captane in the hole jurney (of whych numbre I am assygnd to have of myne owne furnyture CCC able men), they to be levyed, by vertue of the Kyng's Ma^{ties} highe comyssyon under hys brod seale, of my frends, favorers, tenaunts, and servaunts: And for that I have at all tymes reckneyd you to be my very frends, as heretofore I have approvyd the same; therfore nowe I hartely requyre you to furnyche unto me to goe in thys jurney suche and as many able men, wherof as many of them to be good archers and gunners, well furnyshed with armour, weapon, money, and horses, to serve them to the see syde, as ye may convenyently make: and ther horses shal be sent home to you agayne: And that I maye be assueryd from you to have them here at London with me within X days; for my tyme ys but XIIII days to tarye here, before I take my leave of the Kyng's Ma^{tie} and hys honorable councell, to accomplyshe hys Grace's plesure and comaundement in hys affayers. And your frendshyps, to me shewed at this presente, shall bynd me in frendshype towards you, every of you, during my lyff. And thus I byd you hartily farewell. Wrytten the XIIIth of November, 1549.

Your friend, FRAUNCIS HUNTINGDON [2].'

"Money gathered for my lord Huntyngdon the XIXth day of November, in the thyrd yere of the reigne of our Soveraigne Lord Kyng Edward the Sext, &c. in the tyme of may'alty of Mr. Nich'is Reynolds then beying mayor, of the benevolent wyll of the XXIIII and the XLVIII, as folloythe.

[Here follow the names of the mayor and 19 of the aldermen (probably the then whole number), amongst whom were Mr. Nicholas Heyrek and Mr. John Heyrek; and the sums set against each of their names, as paid, are 5*s.* each, except that against the name of one of the aldermen, Mr. Otlyff, nothing is put; so he subscribed nothing.]

[Here follow the names of the whole forty-eight, all of whom subscribed something (except two); one of them subscribed 3*s.* 4*d.* many of them 2*s.* 8*d.* some 2*s.* others less. The whole amount was 10*l.*]

'21 Nov. 3 Edw. VI. A copy of a receipt from Robert Templeman, servant to Mr. Thomas Hastyngs, by the hands of the mayor of Leicester, of the benevolent wyll of the said mayor and his brethren the XXIIII and the whole XLVIII, in the name of the hole body of the seid towne of Leyc', of 10*l.* towards the furnyture of CCC men into Bulloign wythe th'erle of Huntyngdon.'

"The answere of the letter sent for the receypt of the seyd money:

'After my ryght hartye com'endac'ons; sygnyfyeng you that I have receyvyd from you consernyng my late requests made unto you, for my Sov'ayn affayres beyond the sees, wherby I perceve the lovyng, frendly, and hartye good wyll of you and every of you to me wards; wherfore I hartely thank you, and wil be glad, when yt shall plese God to send me prosperous retorne, and at a merye metyng, to shew you and every of you semblable plesure. And for that I cannot be in the countrey thys Crystmas, to have the company of you, wherof I wold have bene glad; my trustye servant Mychill Purpherey shall delyver you for a token, whensoever you shall call upon hym from me, two does, to make merye with at your plesures. And thus I byd you all hartily farewell. From my house in London, the XXVth of this present November, 1549.

Your frend assuered, FRAUNCIS HUNTYNGDON."

Festo S. Matth. 4 Edw. VI. Robert Newcom elected mayor. The foregoing year Edward Gryffyn was recorder; but this year John Beamont was recorder, and so continued 5 Edward VI.—Gilda Mercatorum, 31.

The sheep-penns were set for 8*l. per annum.*

At a common hall, it was agreed by the mayor, aldermen, and common-council-men, "That every man having any cattel goyng or pasturyng within the Cowhey shal fynde yerly, when nede shal requyre, a man to worke a day's worke about the same for the fencyng and safe kepeyng of the same pasture." It appears also, by this agreement, that those who refused were to pay 6*d.* for every beast; and the chamberlains of the town for the time being were empowered to hire men and set them at work in repairing and ditching the said Cowhey.

---

[1] Pat. 1 Edw. VI. p. 6. n. 1.

[2] Extracted from the Town Book of Acts belonging to the Corporation of Leicester; XIIII° die Novembris, anno Regis Edwardi VI. tercio, in tempore Maioralt' Nicholai Reynolds.

16 Jan. At a common hall, the twenty-four agreed to pay each 2*s.* and the forty-eight 12*d.* each, towards charges of the suit for agistment in Beamont Lease; and promised to pay more, if more should need.

Money gathered for the suit of Beaumont Leas, at two times, in the mayoralty of Mr. Robert Newcom, 20 February; viz. each time of the twenty-four, 2*s.* and of the forty-eight, 12*d.* a piece; at both times, 9*l.* 8*s.*

Item, given to the marquis of Dorset, when he went to the North, two geldings, price 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; that is to say, the twenty-four paid 5*s.* and the forty-eight 2*s.* 6*d.* each, which came to 11*l.* 15*s.*; and the rest was paid by the churches and by the chamberlains.

On the 20th of April, John Corbet doth grant, before Henry marquis of Dorset, that the poor of Leicester shall have their milch kye going weekly (viz. in Beaumont Lees), from May-day till Lammas, after the rate of three half-pence a week, and the rich after the rate of 2*d.* a week, for every of them. Also the said Corbet doth grant, that the poor of Leicester shall have their labouring horses going from May-day to Lammas after the rate of 3*d.* the week, and the rich 4*d.* the week apiece; and so to have them going, from year to year, as long as the said Corbet doth occupy it.

6 Sept. there was allowed 6*s.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for keeping four post-horses; the twenty-four paying 3*s.* 4*d.* and the forty-eight 1*s.* 8*d.* each.

20 Sept. These parcels are to be delivered from mayor to mayor, for the town's use. One great mace; four little maces; one lock-book; a purse with five keyes, and the mayor's seal therein; three books for the com'n hall; one great paper book for areasts; two books of the acts of parliament; one bag with . . . . weights for bread, after Troy weight, of four pounds; a bag of brasen weights, from six pounds to half a pound; one brasen standard; one brasen strike; a brasen gallon; a pair of scales for bread.

Festo S. Matth. 5 Edw. VI. Thomas Wilcocks elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

Johannes Beamont, Magister Rotulorum Curiæ Cancellariæ Domini Regis, & Recordator Villæ Leic'.

20 Dec. At a common hall, agreed that if any one cut down any boughs, to set at their doors or windows, out of any close, garden, or orchard, within the liberties of the town, he shall forfeit 12*d.* and his body to prison.

11 March. At a common hall, agreed that labour shall be made immediately to London, to see if they can get the land given by the Bishop of Carlisle[1] to found a free school in Leicester, in the parish of St. Margaret, which land Mr. John Beamont hath 12 years past sold away; and also to get the bailiwick of Leicester in fee-farm to the town; and also to get the Bishop's Fee joined with the said town; and hath sent up for the same Mr. Boughton, clerk, &c. of whose charges the parish of St. Margaret one-half, and the town the other half.

20 June. At a common hall, agreed that, yearly, each of the twenty-four shall make two carseys, and each of the forty-eight one, to set the poor to work; each carsey to be 18 yards long, and brought to the mayor's hall to be sealed; and upon failing, to forfeit 3*s.* 4*d.* to the poor man's box.

Agreed, that the bailiwick of Leicester remain to one of the brethren that hath not been Mayor, to occupy every man in his order upon the bench; and if any of the twenty-four in his course refuse it, he to pay 40*s.* or to be committed.

Festo S. Matth. 6 Edw. VI. Nicholas Heyrek elected mayor. John Hunt recorder.—Gilda Mercatorum, 8.—Candles at 3*d.* per pound.

Nov. 30, Mr. Overend promised to pay to the chamberlains 40*s.* 20 Jan. next, for not occupying the bailiwick of the town.

The wayts collars, three weighing 23 ounces and 3 quarters.

19 May. At a common hall, agreed that no one shall put any cattle into the Cowhey but two cows, or one cow and two heifers, which are his own, and neither ox nor steer; yet a freeman may hire a milch cow or two, and put into the pasture for his own use; but not, under colour of hiring one cow, to find pasture for another, on pain, between May day and Lammas day, of 2*s.* 6*d.* for the first time, 5*s.* the second, and the third time to lose his freedom.

MARY.

In festo S. Matth. Apostoli, 1 Mariæ, Willielmus Overend electus est in officium majoratûs; quod recusavit exercere, & petitus ad finem suam admitti; & admittitur ad 20*l.* inde solvend'.

Ale at 2¼*d.* and 13 to the dozen; candles 2½*d.* and 13 to the dozen.

Festo S. Matth. 1 Mariæ, Thomas Davynport elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12. [Here was written Johannes Hunt recordator; but it is blotted out, and there is inserted Franciscus Fernham recordator, who continued to 3 and 4 Philip and Mary.

Burgenses Parliamenti villæ Leyc'. Willielmus Faunt, Thomas Farneham, armigeri.

At a common hall, 17 Nov. (a man having been killed in the street in a night) it is enacted, that no person, of what degree soever, inhabiting in the town or suburbs, go abroad in the street after nine o'clock at night, and after the curfew bell leaves ringing, except officers and the watch: And if any person dwelling in town or suburbs after nine o'clock be found in the street, or keeping company out of his own house in any inn, tavern, or ale-house, without reasonable cause to be known before the mayor or alderman of the quarter, he shall forfeit the first time 12*d.*; the second, 2*s.*; the third, suffer imprisonment at the will of the mayor, or alderman of the ward: Also such keeper of the inn, tavern, or ale-house, for every time, shall forfeit 12*d.* and suffer imprisonment for fourteen days without favour; but strangers may have lawful pastime in their inns, but not go abroad without the good man of the house, or some of his servants, on pain of going to the ward, there to remain till examined by the mayor or justices: And if any innkeeper or other occupying the lodging of guests receive into their house any stranger after the said time, he shall report the names and dwelling-places of such guests on the morrow to the alderman of the ward, or his deputy, on pain of suffering imprisonment for fourteen days without favour. And that the said bell be rung, nightly, from Michaelmas till Lady-day in Lent; for which the twenty-four to pay 2*d.* and the forty-eight 1*d.* each.

At the same hall [ordered that proclamation be made], that no person dwelling in Leicester, or the suburbs, cut down or carry any wood out of the New Park, Abbey Park, Stocking and Ashe close, or any other wood of the Queen's or any other persons about the town, not being bought, on pain to be punished by the justices of the shire where he shall be taken, and sent to the town to be likewise punished at the mayor and justice's pleasure, and to be ordered as vagabonds, and banished the town for ever.

29 Nov. Mr. Smyth, for refusing to occupy the bailiwick, promised to pay 40*s.*

Queen Mary, in the 1st year of her reign, by charter, reciting the charter of Henry VIII. for two fairs to be held; the one at Midsummer day, and two days before and two days afrer; and the other at the Conception of our Lady, and two days before and two after; and the charter of Edw. VI. last mentioned, and the confirmation of the former charter therein recited; doth also confirm, ratify, and allow the same for her heirs and successors[2].

19 Jan. At a common hall, it was agreed that a levy be made, in the manner of a fifteenth, for the charge of the confirmation of the charter, with other things; i. e. each of the twenty-four to pay 5*s.*

---

[1] Dr. John Penny, bishop 1509—1520. See hereafter, under St. Margaret's parish.

[2] Pat. 1 Mariæ, p. 2. m. 10.

and of the forty eight 2*s.* 6*d.* and the rest to be gathered of the commoners of the town.

[In the title of this last act the Queen has the style of "Supreme head of the Church of England and Ireland;" which is afterwards left out.]

16 March, 1 Mary. At a common hall, there were chosen burgesses of the parliament, to be held at Oxford 2d April, Francis Fernam recorder, and Thomas Jenkinson mercer.

[Here ends this book. The next book begins with the year aforegoing, and ends 10 Elizabeth.]

22 July, 2 Mary. At an assembly of the twenty-four, agreed that, at the request of the earl of Huntingdon, Anthony Gay shall have the office of the mayor's serjeantship at the next avoydance.

Die S. Matth. 21 Sept. 1 & 2 Philip & Mary, John Berredge elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 12.

26 Oct. at a common hall were chosen burgesses of parliament, Francis Fernham recorder, and Mr. Hugh Aston.

9 Dec. At an assembly of the twenty-four, Mr. Jones, Mr. Hervy, and Mr. Welche, brought in an injunction for grinding at their mills; which was thought hurtful to the town, and to the King and Queen's mills of the Castle. Agreed to suppress it; and thereupon the mayor and his brethren remitted the said forfeiture: but this is to be no precedent to any that offend in like matter.

A letter sent from my lord Chancellor to Mr. Mayor and his brethren, for the wearing of their apparel, in the time of the mayoralty of Mr. John Berredge. "After com'endations; I understand, by advertisement from the town, that diverse of you, being rather desirous of new-fangledness, than contented to follow such ancient and laudable customs as have had time out of mind their continuance, you have of late sought means to breke and abolish such thereof whereby the com'onwealth is most countenanced and set forth; whereupon I thought meet to require so many of you as be thus fondly affected, that, leaving of such vain fancies, ye would henceforth remain quiet, and contented to follow and allow such laudable customs and rules as have alwaies been time out of mind used among you. Thus fare you well. At my house in London, this 8th of January, your loving friend."

8 March. At a common hall, agreed that every one chosen to the mayoralty shall, during his office, wear scarlet, on pain of forfeiting 5*s.* according as of old times it hath been accustomed.

Also, agreed that when any venison comes to the twenty-four and forty-eight by gift of any nobleman or gentleman, it shall be eaten at the only costs of the said twenty-four and forty-eight, and no part of the charge to be borne by the chamber of the town.

Die S. Matth. 21 Sept. 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, Robert Jonys, Johens, seu Jones, elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 20.

Ale, 3*d.* per gallon, 12 gallons to the dozen, with small drink and grains; and to make penny ale for the poor at ob. per gallon; and the typlers to sell after 3½*d.*; candles 2*d.* per pound, 12 to the dozen.

Die S. Matth. 21 Sept. 3 & 4 Philip & Mary, William Maube elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 6.

Ale, 4*d.* the gallon, and 12 gallons to the dozen; typlers to sell after 4½*d.* the gallon; candles 3*d.* per pound, 13 to the dozen.

This year, Sept. 21, Mr. Francis Fernham was recorder; but at a common hall, 7 May, it was agreed that Mr. Francis Gytton shall be recorder.

7 May. At a common hall, agreed that if any one cast into the Soar or river any weeds, or other filth, near any place where burne is taken up, he shall forfeit the first time 6*d.* the second 12*d.* and so double; and afterwards imprisonment, as the mayor and justices will.

Die S. Matth. 21 Sept. 4 & 5 Philip & Mary, John Heireke, Eyrycke, or Heyryke, elected mayor. Francis Gytton, recorder.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

Ale, 3*d.* per gallon, 13 to the dozen, and the typlers 3½*d.*; candles 3*d.* per pound, and no tallow-chandler to sell by wholesale.

20 Nov. At a common hall, candles of late years having been very scant and dear, which is supposed to be because much tallow hath been sold to strangers; it is enacted that no town butcher sell tallow to any stranger, from Michaelmas to Candlemas, on forfeiture of 12*d.* for every stone; except the stranger, with two tradesmen, will be bound to the mayor to bring to the town, for every stone of tallow, 12lb. of candles on the next market-day. [Here is first inserted the names of all the twenty-four and forty-eight.]

The ten wards of the town of Leicester:

The first ward from South gate to St. James's chapel.

Second, from South gate to the High Cross, with the Soar lane and Redcross street.

Third, from the High Cross to the North gate.

Fourth, from the North gate to North bridge and Senvy gate, with the Soar lane.

Fifth, St. Nicholas parish, and so without the West gate.

Sixth, the Swine's market; i. e. from High Cross to the East gate.

Seventh, from the High street beyond the Hels house, and so all the Church gate down to Mr. Nicholas Heyrick's and Parchment lane.

Eighth, all the Market-place, Cank-well, and to the East gate.

Ninth, Belgrave gate and St. Margaret's Church gate.

Tenth, from the bridge by the Antelope, the Roundell, and Gallowtre gate.

Jan. 11. At a common hall, there were chosen for burgesses of parliament Robert Breame recorder, and Mr. Maurice Tyrrell. [Robert Breame, alias Breham, alias Braham, being chosen recorder about this time, continued so till 16 Eliz. inclusive.]

At the same common hall, agreed that no one shall work wax in tapers or candles to be sold, but those that be wax-chandlers, or will become of their company; provided that none of the said occupation shall take, for the making other tapers or other candle, above 1*d.* per pound.

4 March. At a common hall, agreed that the charge of Wheston court shall not amount, nor be chargeable to the town, above 10*s.* at a day.

Ale, 2½*d.* per gallon, 12 to the dozen; candles, 2½*d.* per pound.

Festo S. Matth. 5 & 6 Philip & Mary, Robert Harby paid 20*l.* as a fine for the mayoralty. Robert Fletcher elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 23.

Ale, 3*d.* per gallon, 13 to the dozen; typlers to sell for 3½*d.*: And ordered, that none that brew head ale in their houses sell above 4*d.* per gallon; candles, 4*d.* per pound.

In some part of the reign of Queen Mary the following letter was written:

"Broughton to Con'ysby.

Grace and peace from God, &c. As I cannot but wish unto you all health and felicity in our Lord Jesus, most gentle Mr. Con'ysby; even so can I not but render unto you most hearty and Christian thanks for your most Christian and gentle benevolence which the Lord (when I cannot) render unto you in the day of his coming! Amen.—And now, Sir, you shall understand, that Master Mayer hath entreated me ungently, as this bringer shall more at large declare unto you, to whom I pray you give credit: for, immediately as we were come to Laycetter, he sent me forthwith to the most vile prison called Gaynsborrow, and then offered to put gyves and fetters upon my legs, and so to lye upon the hard planchers without bed or straw, and without company or comfort; and all for because that, when I could not entreat him to shew me his lawful favour, I bad him then to do his worst; with the which word he was brought into such a fury, or rather frensye, that he called me knave, villain, yea, vile and wrangling knave, and also roonagate. And all these words so multiplied at once upon me upon none other cause than is above mentioned, as I shall answer before the Judgment-seat of God in the last day. But you shall understand all by this bringer. And now I shall desire you, that for as much as I cannot, and, if I could, dare not, by myself or friends, in the most dangerous bands of good abering; and do therefore, not only to my great cost and charges, but also to my utter undoing, remain in prison; it would please you, for Christ his sake (the cause of my imprisonment considered to be utterly vain and false, as I before the Queen's Commissioners have offered, and do still offer, to prove; yea, and that upon the peril of life and death), to be so much my friend, as to speak to the right honourable and my special good master and yours sir Edward Hastynges, that he will speak to the Commissioners and Lords of the Counsel, that I may be released and restored to liberty: and so shall I have cause, as I am bound already, to pray unto God both for him and you. And thus, for this time, I bid you in Christ most heartily well to fare. Amen.

Yours at com'aundement, Robert Broughton[1]."

ELIZABETH.

Queen Elizabeth, in the first year of her reign, by her charter, reciting the last charter of Queen Mary of confirmation, and the former charters therein mentioned, doth, for her, her heirs and successors, ratify, approve, confirm, and allow the same[2].

Festo S. Matth. 1 Eliz. Thomas Stanforde elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 23.

28 April. At a common hall, agreed that Mr. Mayor and two or three of his brethren shall go to London, at the term following, to try the liberties of the town, and to do other business; and have appointed John Eyrycke to be lieutenant in his absence for that time being. [Here is, the second time, the names of all the twenty-four and forty-eight.]

29 October. Agreed, at a common hall, that a levy be made in the town, in manner of a fifteenth, for the charges of confirming the charter and other things; viz. every of the twenty-four to pay 3*s*. 4*d*. (of which three were lacking), and of the forty-eight 20*d*. each, and the residue to be gathered of the commonalty.

The twenty-one came to 3*l*. 10*s*. the forty-eight to 4*l*. the commonalty to 3*l*. 14*s*.; the total 11*l*. 4*s*.

Festo S. Matth. 2 Eliz. Richard Derker elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 22.

Ale, 3*d*. per gallon, 12 to the dozen; typlers to sell 3½*d*. and head ale 4½*d*. per gallon; candles, 3*d*. per pound.—Here, and so annually, for the future, are set down the names of the twenty-four and forty-eight.

Festo S. Matth. 3 Eliz. Thomas Hallam elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 15.

This year some made free paid 20*s*. others 10*s*. &c.; and for swearing, 2*d*.

20 Feb. 4 Eliz. At a common hall, ordered that no new matter be put into any ordinal, but it shall be first agreed upon at a common hall, or at least by the mayor and two justices of the peace.

Item, that there be of every house one at every sermon on Wednesday and Friday, on pain of every housholder making default to forfeit 4*d*.

Item, that no victualler keep open his door in service-time upon the Sabbath-day or holy days; to forfeit, for every default, 3*s*. 4*d*. common innkeepers only excepted; and that no one keep open their shop-windows nor door in service-time on like pain.

Item, that in every parish two be chosen to make collection for the poor.

Item, that every stranger that hath not been prentice in the town, nor born in the same, shall pay for his freedom 20*s*.; and otherwise not to be made free.

6 July, 4 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that each of the twenty-four pay 20*s*. and of the forty-eight 10*s*. to the chamberlain, on Friday next, towards repairing the town against the Queen's coming; and that every alderman bring in the names of every one of the commonalty in his ward able to be taxed on Wednesday next, to be taxed by the mayor and justices, according to his ability and their discretion; Also, that every one pave before his door and compass of his house immediately.

Here is inserted the oath of the Mayor, of the Mayor's Brethren, of them that enter into the Chapman's Gild, of the Chamberlains, of the Fish Sayers, of the Flesh Sayers, of the Constables, of the Third Borowes, of the Ale Tasters, of the Leather Sayers, of the Occupations, and of the Recorder.

Festo S. Matth. 4 Eliz. William Reynolds elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 37.

Jan. 16, 1562-3, a great tempest of wind and thunder happened in the town of Leicester; which uncovered 411 baies of houses, and overturned many[3].

20 Nov. 5 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that no one shall receive or keep in his house any stranger above three days, without giving notice to the mayor or to the alderman of the ward, unless he knows from whence he comes, and knows him to be honest, and will undertake for him, on pain of forfeiting for every day 6*s*. 8*d*.

21 Nov. At a common hall, agreed that no butcher sell any flesh on a Sunday after seven o'clock in the morning, till all divine service be done in the parish churches, on pain of 12*d*.

Item, that no milner nor loadsman carry any corn, malt, or meal, to or from their milns on Sundays till Evening prayer be done in all or most parish churches, on pain of 12*d*.

Item, that all good customs made, and in this book written, shall stand in force.

Item, that no one that hath appeared depart any common hall till the mayor depart, without licence of the mayor, on pain of 6*d*.

Item, that no person lay muck in any other place in the streets or lanes than such as is or shall be appointed, on pain of 4*d*.

2 Dec. Robert Breham recorder, and Robert Broxby, esq. were, at a common hall, chosen burgesses for the parliament.

5 May. At a common hall, agreed that the order for orphans' goods shall be entered, and take effect.

Festo S. Matth. 5 Eliz. Richard Davye elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 14.

The weight of the bells of St. Peter's: The great bell, 11 cwt. 16 lb.; the third bell, 8 cwt. 26 lb.; the second bell, 6 cwt. 18 lb.; the forebell, 5 cwt. 10lb. Summa totalis, 32 cwt. 13lb.

19 Nov. 6 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that no town-dwellers shall sit and tipple in any alehouse; but if any such will drink ale or beer, they shall send for the same to their own houses, on pain, for every default, to forfeit 3*s*. 4*d*. [3*s*. 4*d*. is struck out, and there is put in 12*d*.]

At a com'on hall, held Jan. 7, it was agreed, by the wholl consent of the same theire assembled, that there shold be gyven my lorde of Huntyngdon, for his welcome to the towne, one yoke of fat oxson of xli. p'ce; and a schore of fat wethers, p'ce . . . . . to be gyven to my lorde Hastyngs of Loughborowe, for theire frendship and good wyll towards this towne of Leic' shewed.

The last of June, 6 Eliz. At a common hall, enacted that if any one, dwelling within the liberties of Leicester, be visited with the plague, and presume to go among them that are clear within two months after that any one die in his house, he or she shall forfeit 5*l*. to the chamber; and if not able to pay, then he shall lose his freedom, and be banished for ever out of the town without any redemption.

Also enacted, that if any man being at a common hall disclose any secrets there spoken, he shall forfeit 5*l*. to the chamber.

Also agreed, that one of the bells of St. Peter's church should be sold to repair the school-house.

Festo S. Matth. 6 Eliz. Simon Nix elected mayor. —Gilda Mercatorum, 16.

Ballivi, William Reynolds and Thomas Fowler.

Ale under the sieve, 2*d*. the gallon, 13 to the dozen; typlers to sell 2½*d*. per gallon; candles, 3*d*. per pound, and 13 to the dozen, on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*.

The total sums of money gathered for the second moiety of the fifteenth and tenth, to be paid into the

---

[1] Harl. MSS. 416. 49. fol. 87.

[2] Pat. 1 Eliz. p. 2. n. 6.

[3] Stow's Chronicle, Abridgment by Edm. Howes, p. 284.

Exchequer before 10 Nov. 1564:

	£.	s.	d.
Of the twenty-four	6	0	0
Of the forty-eight	5	18	6
In the ward of Thomas Stanford	0	16	4
Robert Fletcher	0	16	0
John Tatam	0	16	10
Thomas Fowler	0	16	0
Robert Wylcocks	2	3	2
William Maubey	0	16	0
Thomas Hallam	2	2	8
Nicholas Englyshe	2	6	8
James Clarke	0	10	11
William Norys	0	16	1

Festo S. Matth. 7 Eliz. Thomas Fowler elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 28.

Ballivi, William Reynolds, John Tatam.

The total sums of money gathered for the first moiety of the one subsidy, to be paid into the Exchequer before 1 April, 1566:

	£.	s.	d.
Of the twenty-four	3	0	0
Of the forty-eight	3	0	0
Of the ward of William Beryge	2	4	0
James Clark	0	13	0
William Norris	2	4	0
Nicholas English	0	15	0
Thomas Fowler	2	11	0
William Manbye	2	19	8
Simon Nixe	1	14	0
Robert Fletcher	1	14	0
Thomas Hallam	3	10	8
Thomas Stanford	2	1	0

Festo S. Matth. 8 Eliz. John Tatam elected mayor. Gilda Mercatorum, 17.

Ballivi, William Norys and Thomas Newcombe.

Ale, 3*d*. per gallon, 12 to the dozen; typlers to sell after 3½*d*.; candles, 3*d*. per pound, 13 to the dozen.

The wayts collars weighed 21 ounces and a quarter, and half the half-quarter.

11 July. At a common hall, enacted that the ordinal of Tanners shall continue for ever in force; so there be nothing therein contained that shall be prejudicial to the Queen's laws.

Festo S. Matth. 9 Eliz. William Norris elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 29.

Ballivi, Jacob Clarke and Thomas Newcombe.

The total sums of money gathered for the first moiety of a fifteenth and tenth, to be paid into the Exchequer at or before Nov. 1, 1567:

	£.	s.	d.
Of the twenty-four	3	0	0
Of the forty-eight	3	0	0
Of the ward of William Manbie	0	8	0
Thomas Stanford	0	8	8
Thomas Hallam	0	11	4
Thomas Fowler	0	8	0
James Clarke	0	6	0
Robert Fletcher	0	8	0
Richard Darker	0	8	0
Simon Nixe	0	11	7
John Tatam	0	8	5
Nicholas English	0	13	4

[The very same sums were collected for the second moiety of the fifteenth and tenth.]

22 Nov. At a common hall, the town stock having been decayed by great gifts, in country as well as town, to noblemen and women and others, as also at the banquets of venison; of gifts and rewards given to players, musicians, jesters, noblemen's bearwards, and such like; it is enacted, that from the said day no such great allowance shall be paid out of the town stock; but that the spenders thereof, as at the banquets of venison, plays, bear-baitings, &c. every of the twenty-four and forty-eight being required by the commandment of Mr. Mayor to be there, shall bear every one his portion: Also, that no manner of gift be given to any noble person (out of the town stock), except by consent of the mayor and four or five of the antientest of his brethren, and as many of the antientest of the forty-eight, except 5*s*. or under the value thereof, which may be bestowed by order of the mayor, as oft as occasion shall move him. This act to be for ever.

Also, agreed that the lecture upon Wednesday and Friday in every week shall begin after seven o'clock in the forenoon, and end at eight o'clock, according to a decree made by the advice and consent of Henry earl of Huntingdon, in the mayoralty of Mr. Thomas Fowler.

21 Feb. At a common hall, agreed that no butcher of town or country shall stand on the East side of the gutter that lieth from the end of the Gainsborow towards the East gate; but to stand in the shambles appointed for Saturdays, and on the North side of the said gutter, and on the North side of the said Gainsborow towards the East end of the said shambles; and also along without and by the North side of the same shambles, toward the West end, and at the West end of the said shambles, on pain for every default of 3*s*. 4*d*.

Further agreed, that no person having lands or tenements in the town or suburbs of Leicester, shall take upon him to put into his houses or tenements any person to be his tenant before he have presented such foreign person before the mayor, and alderman of the ward where he shall inhabit, to be examined from whence he cometh, and what honest behaviour he is of, on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*. for every default, to be paid by the owner of the houses.

March 10. At a common hall, agreed that in every parish there be appointed a substantial person to collect the sums following, for relief of the poor and impotent, over and above the collection by virtue of the Queen's statute; viz. every of the twenty-four shall pay, at every time of his wedding, to the collector of the parish where he dwells, 2*s*. 8*d*.; and every of the forty-eight 16*d*. and the best of commoners 8*d*. and every second commoner 4*d*. Also, there shall be no feasts made at any churchings, save only one competent mess of meat provided for the gossips and midwives; and in consideration thereof every of the twenty-four shall pay, at every churching of his wife 2*s*. 8*d*. and the forty-eight 16*d*.; and commoners of the best sort 8*d*. and second commoners 4*d*.; and at every wedding and churching the parson, vicar, minister, or clerk, shall receive the said sums, and deliver them to the collector by a bill indented. And further it is agreed, that one poor man, which shall be apparelled with a black gown, and a badge upon his sleeve, shall be appointed to go, with a box locked, to every inn and other places where strangers resort, to ask alms towards the universal relief of the poor; of which box the mayor, or one of the chief of the twenty-four, shall keep the key: and the mayor or receiver, with consent of three or four of the most antient of the twenty-four, shall distribute to the poor as oft as occasion serves. Also it is agreed, that the several collectors shall make accompt quarterly, and openly in the church, or other convenient place, to Mr. Mayor, and as many of the twenty-four and forty-eight as will be there; and then the mayor, with consent of three or four of the chief of the twenty-four, shall distribute the same, and the surplus, if any, to be kept in the chamber to the use of the poor.

The sums gathered for the second moiety of a subsidy, to be paid into the Exchequer before April 1, 1568;

	£.	s.	d.
Of the twenty-four	3	0	0
Of the forty-eight	3	0	0
Of the ward of Richard Darker	2	3	2
William Manbey	2	15	2
Simon Nixe	1	9	4
Nicholas English	0	12	6
Thomas Stanford	7	12	2
John Tatam	1	15	0
James Clarke	0	10	11
Robert Fletcher	1	2	6
Thomas Hallam	2	18	0
Thomas Fowler	2	5	6

11 Aug. At a common hall, agreed that there shall be put into the general lottery ten lots; viz. 5*l*. out of the stock of the town; and if any of the said lots be returned with any gain, it shall be put into the stock of the town; and if any part of the said lottery be lost in the adventure, it shall be made up by the twenty-four and forty-eight, half by one, and half by the other company.

Festo S. Matth. 10 Eliz. William Manbie elected mayor a second time.—Gilda Mercatorum, 10.

Ballivi, Nicholas English and Thomas Newcombe.

[Here ends the foregoing Hall-book.
The next book is from anno 10 to 28 Elizabeth.]

In the beginning is written the oath of the Mayor, of the Mayor's Brethren, of them that enter into the Chapman's Gild, of Chamberlains, of the Constables, of the Freeboroughs, of the Recorder, of the Mayor's Officers, his Clerk and Serjeant, of the Occupations, of the Fish Sayers, Flesh Sayers, Leather Sayers, of the Mayor for Orphans.

5 Nov. 10 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that a perfect survey shall be taken of the lands belonging to the chamber of the town of Leicester by the mayor and auditors therefore appointed.

4 March, 11 Eliz. An act was made for keeping four post horses, for which allowed 26*s*. 8*d*. each; to be paid by the twenty-four and forty-eight and commoners.

Item, it was agreed that the mayor may appoint the Court of Wheston to be kept at any time of the year which he thinks best; and he may, at keeping of it, go himself with other of his brethren, or send one of his chamberlains and his steward to keep the same.

26 August. At a common hall, agreed that a general levy or collection be made through the whole liberties of Leicester, for buying ten morroys pycks and ten new corseletts, furnished, to remain in the Treasure-house of the town, to serve the Queen in her affairs of war, if cause require.

Festo S. Matth. 11 Eliz. Jacob Clarcke elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 19.

Ballivus, William Shingleton.

Brewers to sell ale for 2½*d*. per gallon; typlers to sell out of their houses for 3*d*.; within them 4*d*. per gallon; candles 2½*d*. per pound, 13 to the dozen.

Ale-tasters to enquire the defaults of tanners and typlers and common drunkards, &c.

Festo S. Matth. 12 Eliz. Nicholas Englysshe elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 18.

Ballivus, William Shingleton..

4 Jan. At a common hall, agreed that a general levy be made, to accomplish such extraordinary charges as the Corporation hath been at about the Queen's affairs in the late rebellion in the North; viz. the twenty-four to pay each 6*s*. 8*d*. and the forty-eight 3*s*. 4*d*.; and that every commoner, as well of good as mean ability, shall pay as they shall be assessed by discretion of the mayor and his brethren, to be collected by the chamberlains within a month: And that all tenants in Wheston that hold of the town of Leicester shall be contributors with the inhabitants of Leicester, according to the tenor of their leases, to be collected within forty days.

Item, agreed that every common victualler inhabiting within the liberties of the same town shall set forth an outward sign of his victualling, on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*. for every month's default.

18 Feb. At a common hall, enacted that every one holding lands, houses, or other hereditaments, shall sufficiently pave and repair the common streets and pavements, so far as the same extend before their lands, houses, and hereditaments, on pain of 3*s*. 4*d*. for every month's default. This act to continue for ever.

There being a collection made of such acts and orders as tended to the good government of the town, it was agreed, April 13, a' a common hall, that every mayor, once in his year, between Michaelmas and Lady-day, at a common hall, cause all and every act and acts, thing and things, therein specified, to be circumspectly perused and examined, in presence of the said assembly, that the better reformation may be had, if any thing amiss shall happen therein to be contained.

At the same common hall, agreed that six post-horses be kept; and that 33*s*. 4*d*. be allowed for each.

27 April, 13 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that 40*l*. be lent to a clothier, to set the poor on work; and towards that each of the twenty-four 16*s*. 8*d*. and of the forty-eight 8*s*. 4*d*.

Festo S. Matth. 13 Eliz. William Gyllot elected mayor.—Gilda Mercatorum, 13.

Ale under the sieve, 2*d*. the gallon; typlers out of doors, 2½*d*. per gallon; within doors, 1*d*. per quart.

16 Nov. At a common hall, agreed that the timber of St. Peter's church shall be taken down, and kept in safety, with the lead, till further order.

Item, that the serjeants shall have gowns one year, and the wayts another.

17 April, 14 Eliz. At a common hall, Robert Braham recorder, and John Stanford, were chosen burgesses for the parliament to be holden at Westminster 8 May next.

Item, agreed that six post-horses be kept for 12 months; the twenty-four to pay 2*s*. each, and the forty-eight 12*d*.; the residue to be gathered of the commons; 26*s*. 8*d*. to be allowed for each horse.

Item, that no tresses, hurdles, borders, nor blocks, used on the market-days by artificers, be left in the Market-place when market is done, on pain of 12*d*.

Item, that no one in the liberty of Leicester take an apprentice but by indenture made by the mayor's clerk, for which he shall have 16*d*. and no more, for every pair; and to be sealed and recorded before the mayor by his clerk, and he to have of the master 4*d*. upon pain of 6*s*. 8*d*.

Item, the mayor's serjeant to have, for every one committed to the mayor's hall, 6*d*.

At a common hall, before Mr. William Gyllot, mayor, the twenty-four, and forty-eight, it was agreed that the mayor shall have, yearly, for ever hereafter, 20 marks fee for the better maintenance of his house-keeping, to be paid by the chamberlains at the times that were used when there was but 10*l*. paid.

Festo S. Matth. 14 Eliz. John Eyricke elected mayor. Freemen, 8.

At this election of the mayor, it was agreed that the mayor's clerk should have four nobles a year more wages than ever hath been paid; and that same to be paid by the chamberlains.

This page is subscribed by William Dedyck, clericus. His hand-writing seems to begin at a common-hall held the year before, when William Gyllot was mayor, held the last of February, 14 Eliz. 1571-2. He presently after writes his name Deadyck, and after 17 Eliz. Deathyck, till 20 Eliz.; and then continued to write it Dethyck as long as he was town-clerk, which was till 1608.

Feb. 28. At a common-hall, agreed for payment for a salt of silver gilt, bought of Mr. James Clarke, one of the twenty-four, the price 10*l*. 0*s*. 6*d*.; to be paid of the town-stock. The salt to be lent to the mayor for his year, and so to his successors, &c.

Whereas Thomas Bradgate, of Gloucester, clothier, at the special request of Henry earl of Huntingdon, is minded to set up clothing within the town of Leicester; the twenty-four and forty-eight, at this present assembled, on desire of the said earl, have agreed to lend to the said Thomas Bradgate the sum of 100 marks for seven years, scil' to Michaelmas 1579; of which sum the twenty-four to advance 20*s*. apiece, and the forty-eight 10*s*. each, and the residue to be paid out of the town-stock; and for repayment sufficient bonds to be taken by the mayor or his successors.

17 April. At a common-hall, among other acts then made, it was appointed that the hall, or any part thereof, or impliments belonging to the same, shall not at any time be lent to the parators, nor no other person nor persons, neither by the mayor nor no other officer, and on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*. for every default.

Here follows the oath of the mayor for observing, in all points, the act made for orphans' goods.

At the same hall, April 17, agreed that the following act for ever stand in force: if any person dwelling within the liberties of the town, franchised or unfranchised, making a will, or dying intestate, bequeath or leave to his own or other children any legacy or goods, then the executor or administrator, warned by the mayor's serjeant, shall come before the mayor and chamberlains, within eight days after the said person's death, and give, in writing, his name, and how many children he left, with their names, legacies, or portions in their keeping, and bring in sufficient townsmen, to be sureties, to be bound to the mayor and chamberlains in a sum to be by them limited, to be forfeited to such child or children on the condition hereafter mentioned, on pain of 20*s.* to be forfeited to the town. And it is agreed, that the executor or administrator, or person that has the custody of such legacy, shall, within a month after the person's death, come and give good sureties of townsmen for payment of the said legacies to the children at such times as are appointed; and if the executor or administrator refuse the custody of the said legacy, then the mayor and chamberlains shall take to the next of blood, being franchised, and in the town dwelling, finding surety as aforesaid; and if they refuse it, then the mayor and chamberlains shall put it to such other franchised men as they think best, upon good sureties as aforesaid: And if the executor or administrator, or other person as aforesaid, having convenient warning by the mayor's serjeant, come not at the day appointed, he shall forfeit, for every day after, 6*s.* 8*d.*; And the party receiving the children's stocks shall, at sealing the bond, pay to the mayor 3*s.* 4*d.* if the stock be above 20*l.* and if under then but 20*d.*; and to the mayor's clerk, for making the bond, 2*s.* 6*d.* and to the mayor's serjeant 12*d.* be the stock much or little: And at payment of the stock to the orphans, they are to pay to the chamberlains, for the use of the chamber, 3*s.* 4*d.* if the stock be above 20*l.* and if under but 20*d.*; and the residue of the children, when they receive their portions, shall pay to the mayor a gallon of wine. If any surety die, those surviving shall bring to the mayor and chamberlains other sureties as aforesaid to be bound within twenty days after such person's death, or else surrender the legacies that they were sureties for to the mayor and chamberlains, on pain of 40*s.* for every day's default.

Item, that the party that will have the custody of the orphans' goods shall, of his own goods and chattels, find the orphans meat, drink, clothes, and all other things meet for them, as long as they remain in his custody; or else the said goods and legacies shall be ordered as the mayor, his brethren, and chamberlains, shall think best for the profit of the children. If any surety depart the town, the party that hath the custody of the child shall, within a month, put in new sureties of sufficient townsmen, on pain of 6*s.* 8*d.* for every day after the month past.

[In the mayor's oath, it is required that he should, once in his year, enquire if any of the sureties were dead, or departed the town, or decayed in his substance, and take such order as should seem best for assurance of the orphans; and that he should call before him and the chamberlains, on Thursday the first week of Lent, every person bound of surety, to see them to be sufficient to discharge their bonds, &c.]

Here are the names of those who lent money towards the sum of 100 marks lent to Thomas Bradgate, clothier, according to the act of the last of Feb. 14 Eliz. The twenty-four lent 23*l.* the forty-eight 24*l.* the chamber of Leicester 19*l.*: the total 66*l.*

Here are the names of twenty-four and forty-eight that lent money to the clothier; and have, 15 Eliz. received one-half of the said money from the chamberlains, and the other half been given to the use of the chamber of the said town of Leicester. They of the twenty-four received 10*l.* 10*s.* of the forty-eight 11*l.* 10*s.*; sum total, 22*l.*

An indenture, made 7 April, 15 Eliz. between the Queen and mayor and coburgesses of the town of Leicester; witnesseth, that the Queen, for 35*l.* to be paid to the general receiver of the duchy of Lancaster, and other causes, doth sell and grant to the mayor and coburgesses of Leicester all the lead, stone, and timber, that now is, or since 20th Jan. last was being, in and on the decayed church of St. Peter's in Leicester, being parcel of the possessions of the duchy of Lancaster, which lead, by commission, was certified to be four fowders and 500 pounds; and the Queen grants them to take and convert the same to their most commodity: And the said mayor and coburgesses covenant to erect a substantial school-house in the said town, within a year after the date hereof, covered with slate, and the same from time to time repair, and also to employ the said lead, stone, and timber, in edifying the same; and to employ the overplus, if any be, in bringing a conduit of fresh water into the said town.

Mem. this year, in the mayoralty of Mr. John Eyrick, was the school-house begun to be erected, &c.

8 May. At a common hall, agreed that William Moreton, a coburgess of Leicester, shall have to him, his heirs and assigns, a tenement called the Stocks house in the High street, between the land of the said William on the North and South, and doth extend itself from the common street there of the West to the land of the said William on the East; in consideration whereof the said William Moreton grants absolutely to the mayor and coburgesses, and their successors and assigns for ever, a piece of ground, in the High street, extending from Dead lane on the South to a piece of ground of the said town of Leicester on the North part, 61 feet, and butteth from the King's highway on the West unto a garden-place or orchard of the said William Moreton on the East, 22 feet by the standard: And the said William Moreton must pay, at the sealing of the assurance for the exchange, to the use of the town, 40*s.*

The act about election of chamberlains, made on St. Matthew's day, 6 Hen. VII. was repealed 21 Sept. 15 Eliz.; when it was ordained, that henceforth it shall be lawful for the mayor elected to nominate and choose his chamberlain, and for the commonalty to choose and elect for their chamberlain as well any such person as hath not before fined, as any such as have fined and dispensed for the same: nevertheless with this consideration, that such election be made of such as have fined for the same, in order as they be most antient in election: And if any of the aforesaid persons, inhabitants of the said town, so elected, do obstinately refuse, and will not serve in the office of chamberlain as aforesaid, that . . . . .

[The rest is wanting, and a blank leaf follows.]

Controversy having been between Thomas Hallam and others about a gutter or water-course from Dead lane into a piece of ground there, sold by the Corporation to the said Thomas Hallam, the matter was referred to Thomas Sampson, gent.; master and warden of Wigston's Hospital; and Samuel Culverwell, gent.; who, 14 May 1578, ordered, that the water in Dead lane shall have its issue into the said piece of ground in and through the old current or gutter which, by appointment of Mr. John Tatam now mayor, shall be opened, and made a perfect water-course, with a grate of iron to the same; and for ever so be kept by the chamberlains of the town.

Here is an account of writings of private houses deposited in the chamber of the town, &c.

Festo St. Matth. 15 Eliz. Thomas Stanford elected mayor. Freemen, 26.

20 Nov. 16 Eliz. At a common hall: Whereas evil persons have used to sell apparel, houshold stuff, &c. and have been called brogers or pledge-women, it is appointed that two certain persons are to exercise the trade of brokers, and no others; and they to have for their pains one penny in the shilling, and no more; and they to sell in their shops at their houses, or at their standings in the market and fairs; and to be bound yearly for their honest dealing.

7 May, 16 Eliz. Ad communem aulam. Agreed that four post-horses (there had used to be six) be kept, to serve on an hour's warning; for two of which there be allowed 26*s.* 8*d.* and for the other two 40*s.*; and the said sum of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to be levied, of the twenty-four 20*d.* and of the forty-eight 10*d.* apiece, and the residue of the commons, &c.; out of which sum the said five marks to be paid, and the 40*s.* remaining to be paid towards the charge of the coals, &c.

Also, that the twenty-four this year pay 12*d.* and the forty-eight 6*d.* towards carriage of the coals, &c.

Also, that the twenty-four pay 2*s.* and the forty-eight 12*d.* each, towards building a new house at the end of the school-house, and the repairing of the briggs.

In this year was the school-house built and finished, and a new house erected at the North end of the same school-house, which is appointed for the head schoolmaster to dwell in; and thereto is laid all the backside late in the occupation of Johnson, mason, paying therefore yearly to the chamber of the town 20*s.*

Festo S. Matth. 16 Eliz. Thomas Hallam elected mayor. Freemen, 10. Those admitted of the company of twenty-four paid 12*d.* and of the company of forty-eight 6*d.* apiece. Candles 3½*d.* per pound, 12 to the dozen; new ale, 3*d.* per gallon; tiplers, 3½*d.*; and a quart for one penny.

9 Nov. At a common hall, agreed that none using tipling shall brew of their own, but shall tun-in of the common brewers; and none to be common brewers but such as now use the same, or that shall be admitted by the mayor and the most antient coburgesses: And no common brewer to sell ale by retail, viz. pennyworth, or halfpennyworth; yet any may sell by the gallon; and common innkeepers and others may do as before they have done, but not sell, on pain of 40*s.*: Also that the common brewers shall become a fellowship, and have orders and decrees made among them, by consent of the mayor, before the 2d of March next; and among them appoint wardens and other officers, to be allowed by the mayor.

Also, that no persons living out of the town or suburbs (victuallers only excepted) shall, within the town and liberties, on the market or other days (the fairs only excepted), sell, exchange, or utter, any wares whatsoever but only to such persons as sell them again by retail, inhabiting within the town of Leicester, till they have agreed with the mayor and coburgesses for such liberty, and agree to pay such fine as by them shall be assessed.

In musters taken in 1574 and 1575, the number of able men in Leicestershire was 1260; armed men, 400; selected men, 400; artificers and pioneers, 800; demilances, 4; light horse, 66; the able men, at the same period, for the whole kingdom, being 182,929; armed men, 62,462; selected men, 11,882; artificers and pioneers, 12,563; demilances, 269; light horse, 2566[1].

25 Feb. 17 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that one townsman shall not sue another, but complain to the mayor, or alderman of the ward, who is to agree them without suit of law; or if he cannot, the party aggrieved is to demand licence to sue in the court of portmote; if any do contrary, he to pay 6*s.* 8*d.*

Also agreed, that no strangers be admitted freemen under 5*l.*

Also, for executing the act, made 21 Feb. 10 Eliz. against landlords taking strangers to be their tenants till presented to the mayor and alderman of the ward, and examined by them: And it is agreed, that yearly, in every ward the mayor shall appoint two discreet persons, who have no lands of their own, to search their ward every month, to find any doing contrary to the said act, and to see that there be not above one tenant in a house; the searchers to make monthly presentments to the mayor; and landlords offending to pay 6*s.* 8*d.*

Allowed to Mr. John Stanford, for the charges in suit between this town and Nottingham for paying toll, 18*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* over and besides 5*l.* which he recovered of the said town for charges by suit of law: in consideration whereof, he saith, this town shall there go toll-free.

Till this year the town-clerk used to have but 2*d.* for swearing freemen, but now he received 6*d.*; and the eldest sons of a freeman used only to pay the clerk 2*d.*, but this year they began to pay a pottle of wine, besides 6*d.* to the clerk. The payments for freedom are, this year, to the town, 33*s.* 4*d.*—20*s.*—15*s.*—13*s.* 4*d.* and 10*s.*

29 April, 17 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed, for four post-horses, to allow 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; that is, 33*s.* 4*d.* each; the twenty-four to pay 2*s.* and the forty-eight 12*d.* each, and the rest to be levied on the inhabitants.

Also, it being supposed that the Queen will come to Leicester, it is ordered, that, for a stock of money, the twenty-four pay 40*s.* and the forty-eight 20*s.* each to the chamberlains, upon a fortnight's warning; and that the mayor, and such as have been mayors, meet her in scarlet gowns; and that the rest of the twenty-four wear black gowns, made of a new comely fashion; also the forty-eight at that present to wear coats of fine black cloth, and to be guarded with velvet, and to meet her majesty on horseback.

And that every householder forthwith amend and beautify the fore front of their houses, and amend the pavement; and this to be done, at furthest, within a fortnight after Whitsuntide next.

Also, that henceforth the serjeants of this town shall, every third year, be allowed 20*s.* apiece towards buying them gowns.

Also, for better maintenance of the mayor's clerk, ordered, that every one chosen to be of the twenty-four shall give him 12*d.* for administering the oath, and recording their names; and every one chosen to be of the forty-eight to pay 6*d.* for recording his name; and every person made free 6*d.* over and besides for every one that is his father's eldest son to the mayor for the time being a pottle of wine: Also, every person made free of any occupation by force of their ordinal, to give likewise to the mayor's clerk 6*d.* for administering the oath, and recording his name.

James Ellis, draper, appointed to be one of the twenty-four in the court of portmote, took his oath, and paid the fees to the officers; scil', to the mayor's clerk 12*d.* and to mayor's serjeant 6*s.* 8*d.*

Mem. on Saturday, July 2, 1575, in the afternoon, a sudden great rain, with marvellous thundering and tempest, continued four or five hours in such sort that the streets stood full of water—the like never seen.

July 9, 1575, received 6*l.* given by the earl of Huntingdon to buy coals for the poor.

[Hitherto Robert Braham continued recorder; but] Monday, July 18, 1575, the oath was administered to Mr. Richard Parkins, then appointed to be recorder, who died July 3, 1603.

Festo S. Matth. 17 Eliz. Richard Davye elected mayor the second time. Freemen, 22.

18 Nov. 18 Eliz. At a common hall, ordered that no one suffer wood or timber to lie against their houses nor under their eves in any street, on pain of losing the wood towards paving the street.

Item, that one at least of every house in town and suburbs come to St. Martin's church to the sermon every Wednesday and Friday, on pain of 12*d.*

Freemen paid this year 3*l.*—20*s.*—10*s.* &c.

16 March. At a common hall, agreed to have 24 leather buckets; two of the twenty-four, and four of the forty-eight, to find a bucket; each of the twenty-four to pay 16*d.* and of the forty-eight 8*d.*

Also, that the inhabitants of the town and liberties by command of the mayor, shall find an able person, for one day's work, to gather and fetch stones, and dig and carry sand, for repairing such ways and pavements as the town-chamber is charged with: Also the master of the house to pay 12*d.*

Also, Mr. John Stanford, burgess of parliament, upon making his bill of charges, shall be allowed, out of the stock of the chamber, such consideration as by law he ought to have, and by his conscience is thought sufficient.

Here was an order made about reception of the Queen; but she came not.

Festo S. Matth. 18 Eliz. John Stanford elected mayor. Freemen, 16.

23 Nov. 19 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the mayor and such as have been mayors shall, for ever hereafter, wear scarlet gowns; and they that lack are to provide them against Whitsunday, and then to wear them, on pain of 10*l.*

---

[1] Peck, Desiderata Curiosa, Part II. Chap. 2.

Also, that the wayts have gowns provided them before Christmas next.

This year persons of the country, for their freedom, paid some 20*s*. and 2*s*. 6*d*. yearly at May-day; another 10*s*. and at May-day 4*s*. yearly, &c.

The wayts collars weighed 36 ounces, and cost the town 12*l*.

1 March, 19 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the twenty-four pay weekly 4*d*. and the forty-eight 2*d*. for relief of the poor and other inhabitants, to be assessed according to ability.

10 May, 19 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed for four post-horses, 26*s*. 8*d*. each, &c.

Agreed also, that there shall be in the High street a cross or market-house new erected this summer.

12 June, 19 Eliz. Whereas the Queen and council charge the town to have ten able persons in readiness for her service, with culivers, flasks, tuchboxes, morions, swords, and daggers, &c. to be trained three times in the year, four days together, and they to be allowed 8*d*. each every day; the twenty-four are to pay 5*s*. and the forty-eight 2*s*. 6*d*. each.

Festo S. Matth. 19 Eliz. John Tatam elected mayor the second time. Freemen, 27.

22 Nov. 20 Eliz. Agreed, that the twenty-four pay 4*d*. and the forty-eight 2*d*. weekly each, towards relief of the poor; and none to be suffered to go a begging.

It is agreed to have wayts as aforetime hath been used; and they to have this year coats of orange colour, and the cinquefoil on their sleeves, &c.

Also, that the serjeants have their gowns this year.

Also, William Shilton, his fine being 5*l*. for refusing the chamberlainship, and one-half remitted, and he to pay 50*s*.

14 March, 20 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the 78*l*. 4*s*. 4*d*. at the foot of the account of the year past, is allowed, over and besides the money gathered of the twenty-four and forty-eight, towards the charge of the cross then erected: Also, that the rest of the charge of the said cross paid by the said chamberlains, viz. 17*l*. 13*s*. 7*d*. shall be paid by the chamber of the town; in consideration whereof Mr. Stanford promises to finish the cross at his proper charges in all things before Michaelmas next, and the same to be covered with lead.

Also, agreed that the twenty-four pay 5*s*. and the forty-eight 2*s*. 6*d*. each to the present chamberlains, and the commons to be assessed reasonably, towards certain charges of the town.

And that such as lack scarlet gowns, who ought to wear them, provide them before May-day next, on pain of 5*l*.; and they to be worn, on pain of 10*s*. on Christmas-day, New-year's-day, Twelfth-day, Easter-day, Whitsunday, and at the fairs, such as shall be then appointed; and also on the days next after Christmas, Easter, and Whitsunday.

Four post-horses to be kept, for which allowed for each 26*s*. 8*d*.

[This order is repeated for many following years.]

For freedom there was paid this year, 33*s*. 4*d*.—20*s*.—13*s*. 4*d*.—10*s*. &c.

Festo S. Matth. 20 Eliz. John Middleton elected mayor. Freemen, 35.

29 Sept. At a common hall, agreed that the [old] chamberlains who buy the coals shall have the selling of them, and sell them for 5*d*. per hundred, and pay the money to the new chamberlains within a week when they are all sold, or so much as they have received, when required by the mayor.

Also, that the wayts have coats, and the serjeants gowns, for this year.

21 Nov. 21 Eliz. At a common hall, ordered that no person sit or resort to any inn on any Wednesday, Friday, Sunday, or other holiday, in time of sermon, divine service, or catechism, on pain of 12*d*.; and upon non-payment thereof, imprisonment; and that none on other days tarry there tipling, otherwise than about their lawful business, above an hour in a day, upon the like pain.

Also, that no miller of this town or the country buy malt or other corn on the market-day, on pain of 10*s*. otherwise than for their own provision to spend in their houses, and that upon licence of the mayor first obtained.

All wood lying in the common streets to be presently avoided, on pain of forfeiture of the wood, to be given to the poor by the alderman of the ward.

Mem. Dec. 22, the deputy of the queen's clerk of the market, examining our standards, found or made them fit. Note, that all yard wands are to be sealed at both ends; and that in all places out of London the ale quart and the wine quart (as he saith) ought to be all one; and he saith, that the City of London payeth 100 marks a year for the allowing and suffering of their wine measures.

13 March. At a common hall, appointed that, towards the charge of the four post-horses, the training the soldiers, and repairing the North bridge, a levy be made on all persons, burgesses, dwelling out of the Corporation, as well as within, and of the inhabitants, and of such houses as any keep in their hands to lie at their pleasure though not duly inhabited; the twenty-four to pay 10*s*. and the forty-eight 5*s*. apiece.

Item, it is enacted for ever, that if any freeman go to dwell out of the liberties of the town a whole year and a day, and afterwards shall come and dwell again here, and hath not during such time borne such charges as other freemen have done, he shall not be suffered to use any trade, or be reputed as a freeman, till he be sworn anew to the Corporation, and pay a fine, which shall be at least 10*s*.

Item, that none shall keep an apprentice above 40 days unbound, on pain of 10*s*. and then enroll him before the mayor within ten days; for which he shall pay the mayor's clerk, if he make the indenture, but 4*d*.; or else, for every pair enrolling by any other made, 8*d*. upon pain of 10*s*.

None shall wash cloaths or other things at the common wells, having once warning to the contrary, on pain of 12*d*.

Item, that every one that maketh honey in the summer shall bring one barrel at least, yearly, to sell in Lent time, on market-days, in the open market, on pain of 2*s*. 6*d*.

Item, that Mr. Mayor shall do his good will to take the town in fee-farm.

Item, that all chandlers of the town and others pay 40*d*. apiece, for breaking the assize.

22 July. At a town-hall, agreed that the twenty-four pay 12*d*. and the forty-eight 6*d*. apiece, towards keeping the visited of the plague, as oft as need requires, during its continuance; and all other inhabitants to be charged to the same.

Item, it is agreed to buy the bailiwick to the use of the town; and Mr. John Stanford, who bought Mr. John Danet's patent, hath now sold it to the town for 4*l*. besides his charges; and the town must enter upon it at Michaelmas next, so soon as the audit is finished.

Festo S. Matth. 21 Eliz. William Noryce elected mayor the second time. Freemen, 18.

At this said feast, agreed that Mr. Recorder shall have a scarlet gown at the charge of the town, towards which Mr. John Stanford promises to give 40*s*. and the rest of the company promise 5*s*. apiece.

Mem. At this election Mr. Noryce, then elected mayor, was absent at London; and on Michaelmas-day being absent, he was fined 5*l*.; [but it is said] Non sol'.

20 Nov. 22 Eliz. At a common hall, ordered that such as sell ale by retail provide quart and pint pots of pewter before Christmas next, on pain of 12*d*. and then provide them within three weeks, on pain of 2*s*. and then to provide them within three weeks, on pain of being dismissed of victualling for ever; And that none of them sell by other measure (but they may have little glasses or cruses to drink out of), nor sell less than a quart for 1*d*. how strong soever their ale or beer be; and any person that takes less than a quart for 1*d*. or in any other measure than abovesaid, he shall pay, if of the twenty-four 4*d*.; of the forty-eight, 2*d*.; other commoner, 1*d*.

30 March. William Bullbrocke being dead, Thomas Skeffington, esq. by letter to Mr. Mayor, recommended Thomas Wurshippe to be mace-bearer; who was appointed to that office, and sworn.

On Monday and Tuesday in Whitsun-week our ten trained soldiers were sent to Melton, and trained there two days. The charge was 40*s.* 5*d.*

Mem. This year a new commission was sent to the justices of the county of Leicester for general musters; whereupon the town of Leicester sued out one for the general musters to be taken within the town; or else the justices of the county would have intermeddled within our Corporation. Our commission, and sending for it, cost 40*s.*

T. Goddard of Ansty, for freedom at fairs and market-days, paid 20*s.*; and, yearly, 2*s.* 6*d.* on May-day.

Festo S. Matth. 22 Eliz. George Tatam elected mayor. Freemen, 17.

At this common hall, it was agreed that every child, eight years old and upwards, shall be taught the Lord's Prayer, the Articles of their Belief, and also to answer certain points of the Catechism, upon penalty to the parents: And musters of such as are not idiots, &c. as follows; viz. the twenty-four, 12*d.*; the forty-eight, 6*d.*; and other commoners, 3*d.* apiece, or three days imprisonment.

17 Feb. 23 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the act for orphans be amended.

Item, that the twenty-four give 12*d.* and the forty-eight 6*d.* apiece yearly to the mayor's serjeant.

Also, that such of the forty-eight as shall so offend as to deserve punishment shall be punished at the new hall, and not at the old hall; but it shall be at Mr. Mayor's pleasure, whether the door shall be locked upon any such offender or not.

This year two fifteenths and a subsidy were granted to the Queen.

Wednesday before Pentecost, at a common hall, agreed that, towards the first fifteenth, the twenty-four pay 5*s.* and the forty-eight 2*s.* 6*d.* apiece, and the inhabitants to be charged towards it; the fifteenth is 21*l.* and 10*s.* allowed for charge.

Item, agreed that Mr. Breham, and Mr. John Stanford, burgesses of the said parliament, shall be paid their charges allowed by statute.

Arthur Tatam was dismissed the company of forty-eight, for disorders and for libelling, &c.

Festo S. Matth. 23 Eliz. Philip Freake elected mayor. Freemen, 14.

At this hall, agreed that the chamberlains shall ever hereafter keep a dinner at the hall, according to the old custom, on pain of 5*l.*

17 Nov. 24 Eliz. At a common hall, Arthur Tatam was dismissed the company of forty-eight again, for his disorder committed against Mr. Hallam and Mr. Ellys, &c.

9 March. At a common hall, the chamberlains' accompts were read and allowed; saving, that some did mislike that Mr. Stanford hath been allowed his charge for the Parliament last past; for that they say he said, when he was chosen burgess, he would not crave his charge except he did good to the town; whereupon it is, by some part of the hall, agreed, that if the said Mr. Stanford do, at any time hereafter (by reason of his burgesssship), any good to the town, then his charge to be allowed; otherwise he to repay again that which he hath received for his charge for the two Parliaments past.

Also, Mr. Francis Hastings delivered to Mr. Mayor and certain of his brethren a letter from the Council, and another from the earl of Huntingdon, on behalf of Simon Crofts, touching the sheep-pens; which were read; and thereupon most part agreed, that Simon Crofts (and his wife after him, if she survives), during his and her life, and that lease the town holdeth the sheep-penns by in being, shall enjoy the sheep-penns in such manner as heretofore, upon the rent he now payeth, viz. 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* not letting them forth of his hands: provided that he shall not exact more for the penns than he usually did; and shall not set any penns on the Cornwall on market days, without licence of the mayor, otherwise than hath been used.

Also, granted that the brewers have an ordinal for orders among themselves, and tiplers and victuallers; so that the orders be seen and allowed first by the mayor, recorder, and justices, &c.

7 May, the twenty-four paid 5*s.* for the second fifteenth, and 20*d.* apiece for the post-horses. The forty-eight paid 2*s.* 6*d.* each towards the fifteenth, and 10*d.* towards the post-horses.

19 Sept. 1582, the second payment of the subsidy was assessed; the total sum whereof did amount to 20*l.* 5*s.*

Strangers, for their freedom, paid 20*s.* each.

Things bought this year towards furnishing the recorder's chamber at the hall; a truss bedstead, a cubbarde, and a trundle bed—26*s.* 8*d.*

Festo S. Matth. 24 Eliz. William Morton elected mayor. Freemen, 20.

16 Nov. At a common hall, agreed that the old gallons shall be used again, and made as big as they were before they were cut by Mr. William Norrice, in the second time of his mayoralty.

Item, that all inhabitants and others that have houses in their hands uninhabited shall cause the streets before their houses, and thereto belonging, to be weekly made clean, and the filth to be carried away, on pain for every default to pay 3*s.* 4*d.*

Item, that henceforth no fee or reward shall be given by the chamber of the town, nor any of the twenty-four or forty-eight be charged with any payment, towards any bear-wards, bear-baitings, players, plays, interludes, or games (except the queen, or lords of the privy council); nor any players be suffered to play at the town-hall (except before excepted), and then but only before the mayor and his brethren, on pain of 40*s.* to be lost by the mayor that suffer the contrary; to be levied by his successor, on pain of 5*l.* if he make default therein, &c.

Item, that the act, made in the second time of the mayoralty of Mr. Thomas Hallam, touching admitting strangers to the freedom of the town, shall stand in force, and no mitigation of the fine therein mentioned (which is 5*l.*) to be had or suffered.

Item, that every housekeeper (of reasonable ability) shall be taxed, at the discretion of the mayor, what they shall, quarterly, give to the wayts; in consideration whereof, the wayts shall play every night and morning orderly, both winter and summer, and not go forth of the town to play except to fairs or weddings, and then by licence of the mayor.

Item, that no strangers, viz. wayts, minstrels, or other musicians, be suffered to play within this town at weddings or fairs, or any other time whatsoever.

Item, that such as have, or shall have, any children taught of the free school, being strangers, shall give, yearly, some reasonable contribution towards the living of the under-usher, by consent of the mayor.

22 Feb. 25 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the chamberlains shall, before the next assize, at charge of the town, furnish the chamber at the town-hall with bedding and other furniture for the recorder to lie at when he comes to town.

Item, that henceforth there be no more allowance given to the collector of the fifteenth of the town, towards his charges for payment of the said fifteenth and tenth.

Item, that the twenty-four shall each give 12*d.* and the forty-eight 6*d.* a quarter to the wayts, and the other inhabitants shall be taxed by the mayor: And that no strangers or others, being musicians or players, though they dwell in the town, if not of the company of town-wayts, shall be suffered to play at or in any man's house, doors, windows, or at any wedding, the time of the general assizes only excepted, and then to play only to strangers, provided the town-wayts keep the town, and play about the town, both evening and morning, continually and orderly, at reasonable times.

Item, if a victualler be chosen to be mayor, then two of the company that be not victuallers, according to the statute (3 Hen. VIII.) in that case made and provided, shall be chosen, and sworn with the mayor, to assize the price of victual; and that the mayor shall not, without the consent of the said two persons, alter any assize of victual, or alter any measure.

Item, that the keeper of any alehouse that suffers any townsmen to remain in his house after the curfew bell hath rung (without lawful cause) shall forfeit 12*d.*, to be paid presently, or else to remain in ward that night.

May 3, 1583. At a meeting of the mayor and certain of the twenty-four, it was agreed that the twenty-four pay 12*d.* each, for three weeks, towards keeping the visited folk, and the forty-eight 6*d.* each; and the inhabitants to be taxed according to ability. This assessment is to continue from three weeks to three weeks, till it please God to cease the same.

Festo S. Mich. 25 Eliz. Thomas Clarke elected mayor. Freemen, 22—John Heyrick and William Morton appointed according to the statute for assizing of victuals.—From 25 Eliz. and so forward, the town-clerk takes notice of the swearing of the mayor on Sept. 29; which is scarcely mentioned before, and yet it is said to be done according to the custom of the town of Leicester.

22 Nov. 26 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the wayts and their boys shall have coats bought them; and two scutcheons or cinquefoils to be made for the boys, to wear with lace about their necks.

A letter to the mayor, charging the town with two demilances and four light horsemen, to be rated of the most wealthy men in town, to be ready at an hour's warning. Dated Michaelmas-day, 1583[1].

Letters relating to the clothiers[1].

Jan. 12, 1583. Blace Vyllers, merchant of the Staple of England, and free of London, was made free of this town, and paid for his freedom 10*s.*; and the same day he was made of the forty-eight, and then one of the twenty-four; and paid, for redemption of the chamberlainship, 50*s.*

Jan. 14. William earl of Worcester licensed certain persons, his servants, to go abroad to play, requiring all officers to permit them to pass, and give them such entertainment as other noblemen's players have.

Mr. Mayor gave the said players an angel towards their dinner: and willed them not to play at present, being Friday March 6. About two hours after, they desired the mayor to let them play in their inn; he said they should not—they said they would, and used contemptuous words, &c.: but at length they submitted, and begged pardon[1].

On Tuesday March 3, 1583, came certain players, the Queen's servants, who had licence from Mr. Edmund Tilney, master of the Rolls[1].

More stuff bought for the recorder's chamber.

A feathered tick, 14*s.* 6*d.*; five stone and one pound of feathers, 26*s.* 9*d.*; a wool mattress, 8*s.*; another covering, 8*s.*; two bolsters and one pillow, 8*s.* 8*d.*; 16 ells of silk wool for a coverlid, 24*s.*; another mattress, 5*s.* The tick, bolsters, and pillows, of themselves, without feathers, weigh 10 lbs.

Bought four yards of daringe for a carpet for the hall parlour, 7*s.* 8*d.*

Thomas Clarke the mayor's letter to sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state, sent with some printed books seized here, that were against the Common Prayer, &c.; and prescribing a form of reformation. Dated May 16, 1584[1].

Aug. 17. A letter of Thomas Clarke, mayor, to . . . . . . asserting the right of exemption from toll[1].

13 March, 26 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the twenty-four and forty-eight shall give some yearly portion or salary to Mr. Johnson the preacher, towards his better maintenance, together with other inhabitants of the town.

Item, it is ordered (and the rather for the repressing of strong ale) that the brewers proceed with an ordinal, according to the order in Mr. Freak's mayoralty.

Item, that the mayor, with six of the antientest brethren, and the chamberlains, shall set and order such town-lands within the town as are out of lease.

Item, that none dust, dress, or winnow any malt or other corn in the Cross, or hang any clothes or other things in or on it, on pain of 12*d.*

2 Jan. 26 Eliz. Mr. Hynde having been fined 5*l.* for disobedience to the mayor, it was upon his submission forgiven, save only 10*s.* which he paid; which 10*s.* was given towards repairing the well near St. Martin's church.

A great fire having been at Nantwich, it is agreed that the twenty-four give 12*d.* and the forty-eight 6*d.* each; and the inhabitants to be assessed under the rate for post-horses, &c.

Item, agreed that Mr. George Tatam shall have the dealing of the coals till May-day next, and then deliver to the mayor and chamberlains the whole stock, which is 57*l.* 14*s.* 4½*d.* and for the increase for the two years past which he hath had the dealing in, 40*s.*; and also he promises to give for the increase for the last year, ending at May-day, 4*l.* The whole 63*l.* 14*s.* 4½*d.*

Nota, that the earle of Leicester came to the towne of Leicester of Thursday the xviiith daie of June, anno supradicto, and then laye at therle of Huntingdon's housse; at wth tyme his sister the countys of Huntingdon dyd receyve him there.

At this his comynge to Leicester from the bathes oute of Derbyshier, he came into Leicester by the Abbye, upp the Abbye gate, the North gate, and Hie streete, to the Hie Crosse, where, ageynst the schoole-howsse, the mayor, his bretherene, and the eighte and fortye, mett his hono^{r}, but not in skarlett. The preysent gyven to hym was, a hoggesheade of clarett wyne, w^{ch} cost iiii*l.* x*s.*; and two verye fatt oxen, w^{ch} cost xx marks.

Also his honor gave twentie nobles, to be distributed amongest the poore. The number of the poor then was 118 persons; and it came to 1½*d.* apiece, and 18*d.* over, in every ward; and was distributed by Mr. Mayor, Mr. Sparks and Mr. Johnson preachers, and other of the aldermen. Also, out of the same, to the new hospital, 3*s.*; the old hospital, 5*s.*; and to the prisoners of the county and bridewell, 3*s.*

Also his honor did geve unto the twoe companyes, viz. the xxiiii^{ti} and eight and fortye, to be delyv'ed by his seid sister the countis of Huntingdon, vi bucks.

Also his honor staied but one night in Leicester; and was goun of the Fridaye morninge, by fyve of the clocke, &c.

22 Jan. At a common hall, towards the foregoing charges, it was agreed that the twenty-four give 6*s.* 8*d.* and the forty-eight 3*s.* 4*d.* each; and all the best inhabitants to be assessed, with the Bishop's fee, according to our composition.

Strangers this year paid for freedom 15*s.*; 13*s.* 4*d.*; 4*l.*

Festo S. Matth. 26 Eliz. Robert Heyrycke elected mayor. Freemen, 26.—Agreed, that Mr. William Worship be spared from being mayor four years; he giving bond, that, if he die or do not serve then being elected, he will pay to the town 10*l.*

Item, ordered that John Hitche shall be a brewer and victualler, but not an innkeeper; viz. not to set out any sign or sign-post.

Oct. 6, 1584. At a meeting of the mayor and certain of his bretheren, agreed that 100*l.* be taken up for the clothier, and the interest to be yearly levied on the companies and commonalty; and that the clothier shall have the 100*l.* two years; and longer, as his dealing shall be liked.

Oct. 20. At another like meeting, agreed that the rest of the twenty-four shall stand bounden to those two of the twenty-four that are bound for the 100*l.* if the party lending it will not take assurance of the land from the Corporation.

Oct. 28. At another like meeting, agreed that as much land shall be assured to the two bound for the 100*l.* lent to the clothier as comes to 6*l.* yearly rent; with a proviso, if they be saved harmless, to be void.

---

[1] These several articles were copied by Mr. Carte, from the Files in the Town-clerk's chamber.

Nov. 12, 26 Eliz. At a common hall, the sheriff's precept (which is in English) being read, and after that sir Ralph Sadler's letter for nomination of both our burgesses, and other letters; it is agreed, that sir Ralph Sadler, knt. chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaster, shall have the nomination of one of the burgesses; who thereupon nominated Henry Skipwith, esq.; and the other chosen was Thomas Johnson, one of her Majesty's serjeants at arms: and either of them promised to bear their own charges.

Item, agreed that the twenty-four pay 14*d.* and the forty-eight 7*d.* apiece, quarterly, towards payment of the 100*l.* lent to the clothier, and for making the writings.

Commissioners for disarming Recusants, 1584: Sir Edward Hastings, Francis Hastings, Thomas Cave, Henry Skipwith, Thomas Ashbye, Brian Cave, Thomas Skevington, and William Cave.

In this year, when the whole number of men appeared to be trained throughout the realm was 9670, the town of Leicester was to provide 20; and the rest of the county 130[1].

Justices of Peace, 1584. (Henry Turvile sheriff.)

Thomas Bromley miles, dominus camerarius.
Willielmus d'n's Burghley, dominus thesaurarius.
Edvardus comes Rutland.
Henricus comes Huntingdon, dominus præses.
Henricus dominus Cromwell.
Christoferus Hatton, miles, vicecamerarius.
Thomas Meade, unus justiciariorum.
Robertus Streat, secundus baro Scaccarii.
Georgius Hastinges miles.
Francisc' Hastinges miles.
Henricus Grey.
Franciscus Cave.
Adrianus Stockes.
Brianus Cave.
Nicholaus Beamonde.
Franciscus Smyth.
Edwardus Aston.
Henricus Poole.
Henricus Scipwith.
Thomas Ashbye.
Mauritius Barkley.
Johannes Harrington.
Franciscus Beaumont.
Thomas Cave.
Edwardus Leigh.
Leonardus Dannet.
Andreas Nowell.
Willielmus Cave.
Franciscus Brown.
Thomas Skevington.
Edwardus Turvill.
Henricus Turvill.
Anthonius Fant[2].

Nov. 20, 1584, 27 Eliz. At a common hall, ordered that the common wells henceforth be kept in repair by the inhabitants of that ward or quarter wherein they stand; and the aldermen to appoint, yearly, two in every ward, called Well-reeves, to oversee the same.

Item, that no more shops, stalls, lean-tos, be erected in the market-place, on pain of 5*l.* to be forfeited by the builder, and 10*l.* by the mayor that doth suffer the same.

Jan. 29. At a common hall, agreed that a survey be made of all the town-land, and what wood is upon it, and to value every tree, &c.

At this hall the new mace was shewn. Agreed, that neither the salt nor the old mace shall be sold for payment of the new mace, but it shall be paid as follows; viz. the twenty-four 3*s.* 4*d.*, the forty-eight 20*d.* apiece, and the residue out of the town-stock.

Item, agreed that John Marshall, tanner, shall be acquitted against the tanners for the 5*l.* which they claim of him for his freedom; and they to have the 20*s.* which they have received of him, and the town to have the 4*l.* which is already paid.

March 5. At a common hall, agreed that no kilns be new erected within the town or suburbs, without consent of the twenty-four, or major part of them, on pain of 5*l.*

April 23, 1585. At a common hall, five of the twenty-four and five of the forty-eight were impowered, till May 1, 1586, to sell or exchange any lands, tenements, woods, &c. of the Corporation's; and to buy or take on lease any other.

Christopher Bringys, a freeman, being gone to live forth of the town, continued his freedom, by paying 12*d.* yearly at Michaelmas.

Mem. that Anthony Dugdale, bellman of Leicester, being dead, his wife claimed the bell as hers, saying her husband bought it; but, that being proved untrue, she delivered the bell to to the mayor, who delivered it to Henry Bland the beadle, to be bellman during the pleasure of the magistrates.

Strangers made free paid 20*s.*; and one 15*s.*

Festo S. Matth. 1585, 27 Eliz. James Clarke elected mayor the second time. Freemen, 18.

Sept. 29. The town clerk and common serjeant were further sworn; viz. the clerk for the safe keeping of the records and evidences of the town, and the serjeant for his attendance.

Feb. 25, 28 Eliz. At a common hall, the draught of the assurance of the land in Ratcliffe, sold to George Burbadge, was read, and liked of.

March 18. At a common hall, agreed by the twenty-four and forty-eight to lend money till Christmas next, towards paying 300*l.* which the town is indebted for the Grange, &c.

April 22, 1586. At a common hall, agreed the twenty-four to pay 16*d.*, the forty-eight 8*d.* each, and the rest to be levied of the inhabitants, for the four post-horses; for which allowed 26*s.* 8*d.* each.

The second payment of the subsidy was assessed Sept. 19; the gross and total sum whereof is 20*l.*

Strangers made free for market-days paid 20*s.* fine, and for scot and lot, yearly, 2*s.*

[Here ends the Hall-book beginning 10 Eliz. There is an omission of one year, 28 Eliz. between this book and the next.—During several foregoing mayoralties, the chief acts of the common hall, designed to be lasting orders, were transcribed into a large red book, called "The Town Book of Acts," out of which several extracts have been made under their regular dates.]

The Council's letter, recommending those citizens and burgesses who were chose the last time. Dated at Windsor, Sept. 19, 1586. Directed to William Turpin, sheriff of Leicestershire[3].

James Ellis was elected mayor on St. Matthew's day 1586; and to him was directed the following letter from Roger Bromley, Oct. 4, 1586: "If the knights of the shire shall not be allowed in the next election; I desire to understand whether you mean in like sort to continue your burgesses accordingly, as the Council's letters do require."

Oct. 13. A return of Henry Skipwith and Thomas Johnson to be burgesses of parliament[3].

Oct. 20. A person charged with saying, that Babynton, which suffered, was an honest man, &c.[3]

Feb. 10. The letter of the Queen's Council, for keeping Lent; and articles to be observed by the justices for the same purpose[3].

March 9. Recognizances of several butchers and innkeepers not to kill or dress flesh, nor suffer it to be eaten during Lent[3].

March 13. Recognizances taken for abstinence from flesh during Lent of tiplers, brewers, &c.[3]

At a common hall, May 2, 1587, for obtaining 400*l.* which is by covenant to be paid to Mr. Francis Hastings the 12th of May next, for the reversion of one moiety of the Grange, which he hath procured from her Majesty, it was agreed as followeth; viz. Henry Byddel lent 50*l.*; Mr. Morton, 50*l.*; Mr. James Ellys, mayor, 30*l.*; Mr. William Noryce, 20*l.*; Mr. Thomas Clarke and Mr. Robert Heyrick, 160*l.*

July 13. William Stapleford gave a bond of 20*l.* for faithful discharge of his office of a broger for a year.

Ult' Martii. A note of implements in that moiety of the Grange belonging to the Corporation of Leicester, now in occupation of John Coye, and by him sold to the Corporation[3].

Accounts of discourse about Merlin's prophecies relating to the queen and kingdom, &c.[3]

Further extracts out of the next Book belonging to the common hall of the borough of Leicester.

29 Eliz. 1587, William Ludlam mayor.—Mr. John Tatam and Mr. James Clark chosen, according to the statute, for that he is a butcher and an innkeeper.—Candles, 3½*d. per* pound, and afterwards 4*d.* Ale at 4*d.* the gallon, and 1*d.* a quart as sold by tiplers.—

---

[1] Peck, Desiderata Curiosa, Book II. Ch. IV.
[2] Harl. MSS. 474.
[3] Carte, MS. from the Files in the Town-clerk's chamber.

No stranger to be made free (if he be of any trade) under 6*l.* fine.

Whereas it was agreed, at a common hall in the second mayoralty of Mr. John Tatam, March 14, 20 Eliz. that the mayor, and such as have been so, shall wear scarlet on Christmas day, New-year's-day, Twelfth-day, Easter-day, Whitsunday, and on the days next after Christmas, Easter, and Whitsunday; also at the fairs such as shall be then appointed; It is now ordered, that they shall wear it also on the Queen's day to the sermon, and at the assize to meet the judges, on pain of 10*s.*

Livery gowns ordered for the 4 serjeants next year.

Ordered, that woollen and linen cloth be sold not in the women's market, but only in the drapers', on pain of 6*s.* 8*d.*

March 1. John Underwood chosen mace-bearer, in room of Thomas Worshippe deceased.

May 8, 1588. Agreed to keep four post-horses as usual; and there is allowed for each horse 26*s.* 8*d.*; in the whole 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Towards which each of the twenty-four is to pay 16*d.*, and of the forty-eight 8*d.*, and the rest to be levied of the commoners of the town.—The like order for many years.

Agreed that the twenty-four pay each 10*s.* yearly towards the preacher's stipend, and the forty-eight 5*s.* besides the benevolence that each will give more; and also the commonalty.

May 17. "Mem, the town of Leicester was charged with 40 soldiers, footmen, which were prest & set forthe, readye funnyshed with arms and muny given, under the leading of George Villers, esq." Of these 40 soldiers, 8 were furnished with muskets, 18 with calyvers, and 14 with corslets and pikes.

Towards the furniture of these 40 soldiers, who were to be ready on five days' warning, the twenty-four to pay 13*s.* 4*d.* the forty-eight 6*s.* 8*d.* each, and the commoners to be taxed.

Queen Elizabeth, in the 30th year of her reign, by her charter under the great seal of England and the dutchy of Lancaster, did incorporate the said town; and to consist of a mayor, 24 aldermen, and 48 burgesses of the inhabitants of Leicester, and to be called by the name of "The mayor and burgesses of the town of Leicester;" and doth enable them to purchase and sell lands by that name, and to sue or be sued by that name in any court or place (non obstante the statute of mortmain); And that one of the 24 aldermen shall, yearly, be chosen mayor on St. Matthew's day, in the Guildhall, by the greater of the twenty-four and the forty-eight; Mr. William Ludlam then to continue mayor until St. Matthew's day: And granteth, that the mayor and burgesses, and their successors, shall have, hold, and enjoy all liberties, jurisdictions, concurrence of pleas, customs, and power to hold pleas and other things, in such manner and form as hath been heretofore used within the said town; and that the mayor and burgesses shall hold and enjoy all profits, commodities, and hereditaments whatsoever, in such manner as any former Corporation there have had and enjoyed; And if any mayor die in the time of his mayoralty, the two companies of the twenty-four and forty-eight, or the greater number, to meet within six days after, and make choice of one of the twenty-four to be mayor in his place: And by the same charter, hath given and granted to the said mayor and burgesses, and their successors, that the weekday shambles, and many other lands in fee-farm, at the yearly rent of 137*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.* ob. q. with a clause of distress, and nomine penæ of 10*l.* if it be unpaid 40 days; and nomine penæ of 20*l.* if it be unpaid 80 days; and another nomine penæ, if it be unpaid six months (with divers non obstantes); and a letter of attorney to Mr. Perkins and Mr. Archer to give possession.

Aug. 8, 1588. Mr. Sacheverel, the now preacher for this town, and confrater of Wigston's Hospital, shall have for this year 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* paid by the chamberlains, who are to receive of the twenty-four 5*s.* each, and of the forty-eight 2*s.* 6*d.* and tax the commoners; but presently, upon application of sir Edward Hastings, it was agreed that he should have 20*l.*

30 Eliz. 1588, George Noryce mayor. Freemen 20.

Candles at 3*d.* per pound; ale as before.

In this year, the memorable æra of the defeat of the Spanish Armada, Thomas Skeffington, esq. of Belgrave, then high sheriff for this county, summoned together all persons between the ages of 19 and 50 (to the number of 12,530) able to bear arms; 2000 of the prime of which were sent to Tilbury camp; the rest were sent home, furnished with various missile weapons, and directed to rendezvous on the first news of the Spaniards setting foot on English ground. After the defeat of that mighty armament, the Queen went to St. Paul's, to return thanks to Almighty God; and every where there were general rejoicings. George Noryce, mayor of Leicester, entertained in the most sumptuous manner all the first nobility and gentry of the county at his hall; among which were, Henry earl of Huntingdon, lord lieutenant of the county; Walter Hastings, his brother, of Kirby in this county, esq. who was a major-general, and commanded the chosen Leicestershire men who made a part of Tilbury camp; Thomas Skeffington, esq. high sheriff; and many others of note.

Feb. 21. The recorder declared, there was obtained of her Majesty the confirmation of a new charter and corporation; the fee-farm of all her Majesty's lands, sometime belonging to the four colleges in Leicester; and the lease in reversion of the whole Grange called the Newark Grange.

Towards paying for the lands purchased in the South Fields of Mr. Wightman, the twenty-four lend 40*s.* each, and the forty-eight 20*s.*, for six months.

A letter, dated at London, March 10, 1589, subscribed Francis Walsingham, directed to the mayor and his brethren, and the rest of the town of Leicester; wherein, highly commending Mr. Sacheverel, whom he had made confrater of Wigston's Hospital, he says, "The living being small, should be by yourselves supplied in such liberal sort, as you before relieved one Pelsant that was preacher among you; on whom you bestowed above 40*l.* by the year, besides such other maintenance as he had elsewhere, &c.[1]"

Mr. Sacheverel's stipend settled at 20*l.* per annum, March 13; and afterwards, April 14, it was, at request of the earl of Huntingdon, made 30*l.* per annum, so long as he should continue preacher of Leicester; which was confirmed to him by writing under the town seal.

31 Eliz. 1589, John Hynde mayor. Freemen, 26.

December. An account of debts owing by the town of Leicester, Total, 925*l.* 10*s.*[1]

21 Jan. The common hall desired of the mayor, Mr. John Hynde, that all the lands and tenements given by her Majesty's letters patent might remain to the use of the mayor and burgesses, according to the Queen's grant; that the town might be put in possession of them all; and that none of them be sold but by consent of a common hall: And say that they are grieved, in that Mr. Noryce, late mayor, set the town-seal without consent of a hall; and in that the commissioners had bought and sold parcel of the said lands and tenements among themselves without their consent[1].

Jan. 23. The twenty-four agreed, that every alderman of a ward shall have a deputy appointed by the mayor, with consent of the aldermen.

Feb. 6. Richard Parkyns, in a letter to the mayor, states Mr. Edmonds's demand for his lease 266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Feb. 11. At a common hall, concerning the buying of a lease from Mr. Edmonds, servant to sir Francis Walsingham, knight, chancellor of the dutchy; all parties assembled were satisfied with the bargain of the lands and tenements assured unto Mr. George Tatam by the commissioners, in lieu of his moiety of his lease, which he and Mr. Harvye held together of her Majesty.

On Tuesday, March 2, before the mayor, justices, and aldermen, the books of the four Jews were, according to the antient custom of this town, affaired.

---

[1] Carte, MS. from the Files in the Town-clerk's chamber.

May 31, the Queen's almoner sent to the mayor, for the fines and forfeitures of persons for killing and eating flesh in Lent, to be disposed of by him as the Queen's alms[1].

June 17. Notes taken touching the closes in the Frith, parcel of the Newark Grange of Leicester[1].

An indenture of lease demised to sir Richard Sacheverel, knight, and the lady Anne his wife, of the Grange and premisses, &c. in question; and, after the death of Sacheverel, in the occupation of his executors; and this recital is contained in an indenture made under the duchy seal, March 1, 3 Edw. VI. to one Layton, for 31 years from Easter last, paying 30*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.*; which William Layton assigned over his interest to Henry Pachet, son and heir of William Pachet lord Pachet of Beaudesert; the said Henry Pachet assigns his estate in the premisses to William Twynshed, of London, gent.; from him to one Robert Harvye. And the lease of Richard Sacheverel endured till Michaelmas, 1 Eliz.; which was made by the Dean and chapter of the Blessed Virgin Mary of the Newark, for term of 31 years; during which lease none of the lessees aforesaid intermeddled with the possession of the premisses.—Nota, that when King Henry VIII. disforested the Friths, the Dean and chapter of the Newark shewed forth their charter to the officers of the King for their common of pasture in the said Frith, to the value of 24 beasts and more, and six mares and a stone-horse; in consideration of which common, the King granted to the said college, to be taken in, a certain ground called Braunston pasture: And after the said pasture being purchased by the tenants of the said college, the other tenants thereof finding themselves grieved therewith, order was taken by the King, and Dean and chapter, that the said Dean and chapter should have to themselves the said closes; and the other tenants had allotted to them the residue of the said pasture, containing 120 acres; which close has been ever since occupied by the tenants thereof, by lease from the Prince, without claim of the closes belonging to the Grange[1].

A petition to the earl of Huntingdon, desiring him to qualify the charge which they sustained with 40 armed men; and now they were charged for four score, whereof their accustomed charge never exceeded 10, saving once 20. Shewing also, that certain inhabitants, to avoid the charge of the town, and the service of her Majesty, had procured themselves the livery of certain gentlemen; and that a saltpetre-maker threatened to throw down their mud-walls (being the common fencing of the town), which would be a thousand marks damage, &c.[1]

[N. B. In August, there used annually to be two named to be put in election for mayor.]

Sept. 21, 32 Eliz. 1590, John Tatam mayor. Candles, 4*d.* per pound. The absenters from common halls are to have no votes in any business; and the twenty-four to pay 12*d.* and the forty-eight 6*d.* each, without leave of the mayor.

Oct. 29, 32 Eliz. A note taken of writings touching the Granges, sent to the recorder at London; viz. the lease of the Grange made to Francis Hastings, esq. and William Worship, &c.; an assignment from Mr. Temple to Mr. Hastings of the same; a lease of the close in the forest from Mr. Temple to Cater and Somerfyld; an assignment of the lease from Mr. Hastings to the mayor and burgesses, &c. &c.[1]

Ordered, 20 Nov. 33 Eliz. that no kiln be used in this town, that standeth near any housing, on the pain of 40*s.*

March 26, 1591. Ordered, that no one decay or pull down the town-wall by getting stones, except by licence of common hall, on pain of 20*s.*

It was agreed, that the parish of St. Peter shall be united to All Saints [but those of St. Martin's parish were against it; whence arose some dispute.]

A letter of Henry earl of Huntingdon, complaining that 14*l.* of the moiety of the salary due to Mr. Sacheverel at Lady-day was not yet paid, &c. Aug. 3, 1591[1].

Several papers relating to a bargain of Mr. George Tatam and Mr. Thomas Clarke of 600*l.*; giving account of indentures about houses and lands sealed and delivered to several persons[1].

A dispute about the Castle-mills, between Richard Grey and Nicholas Walker[1].

Mention is made of an obligation of 1200*l.* made by the mayor and burgesses to Mr. George Tatam and Mr. Thomas Clarke, for the sealing such bargains as they shall pass at any time within four years of the 20*l.* land, for the payment of 600*l.* of the town's debt. Dated Sept. 4[1].

33 Eliz. 1591, Ralph Chettel mayor. Being a baker and common brewer, two persons were joined with him, according to the statute for assizing victuals.—Freemen, 10. Candles, 4½*d.*

A taxation for the fourth, fifteenth, and tenth, in the several wards, &c.; in which very few were taxed so much as 12*d.*; but Mr. John Thurdburne was taxed 2*s.*; Mr. Pottel, 2*s.* 6*d.*; Mr. Thomas Cotton, 5*s.*; Mr. Francis Belgrave, 2*s.*[1]

Oct. 16. A letter of Henry earl of Huntingdon to the mayor and his brethren, complaining of the unkindness of many in the town to their preacher; and desires the mayor, &c. to take care to pay him the stipend promised, &c.[1]

1592, June 2. The earl of Huntingdon ordered the mayor, that, on his receipt of the coal-money from Mr. Roe, he should deliver 70*l.* of it to John Clerk, to be employed by him in setting the poor at work about clothing, and to lease the looms of Henry Bradgate to John Clerk.

July 28. At a common hall, agreed that Archer shall have a lease [of the Bailiwick, I think] for twenty-one years from Michaelmas next; paying 4*l.* per annum for the first ten years, and 5*l.* for the other eleven years, over and above the Queen's rent; and that he shall, presently after the confirmation of the said lease, make a perfect rental of all his Bailiwick, and deliver the same to Mr. Mayor, &c. to be surveyed.

July 29. John Knight, tanner, said to Mr. Hynde [an alderman], "There is never a just man of the Bench amongst you all;" for which the said Knight was by the mayor committed to ward in the hall.

A petition was drawn up to the Queen, complaining of the abuse of her Majesty's late grant to the Corporation, to the oppression of the poor, and enriching of some private persons by indirect means. This seems to be drawn up by Tuster and Layton; and it is said, that one of the best of the twenty-four offered them 40*s.* to make it, and said that he would procure 500 hands to it. Hereupon, it was ordered, that whosoever should be found guilty of doing so should be dismissed the company, and disfranchised.

Sept. 4, the Corporation gave a bond of 400*l.* to Nicholas Elcock senior, of London, to pay him 200*l.* Sept. 6, 1593, and another bond to pay 36*l.* for interest of the 200*l.*; viz. 18*l.* Sept. 6, 1592, and the other 18*l.* Sept. 6, 1593. These were delivered Nov. 29, 33 Eliz. to William Ward, for the use of the said Nicholas Elcock; and then William Ward delivered the lease heretofore made to the said Nicholas of the Grange, &c.; and the same was cancelled[1].

34 Eliz. 1592, John Stanford mayor. Freemen, 22. Ale under the sieve at 2½*d.* the gallon; candles, 4*d.*

The mayor's fee, by this year's accompts, was 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; Richard Parkins, esq. the recorder, 4*l.*; the town-clerk's wages, 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; and Mr. James Clark's charges (one of the burgesses in parliament), 6*l.* 6*s.*

Oct. 20. At a meeting of the mayor and several aldermen, agreed that a bond shall be made to Mr. Ellcock, of London, from the mayor and burgesses, under the common seal, for payment of the 200*l.* owing to him, and the interest of the same, viz. 18*l.* per annum so long as the 200*l.* is unpaid; and thereupon the lease lately made to him of the Grange for ten years to be called in and cancelled, so as thereby the rent of the Grange may be employed for the use of the town, and paying of the preacher.

---

[1] Carte, MS. from the Files in the Town-clerk's chamber.

Oct. 22, 1592. Delivered to Mr. George Tatam, at his going to London, (among other writings) articles drawn by the recorder, of the Frith and Braunston pastures, and an order out of the Dutchy court, termino Michaelis, 32 & 33 Eliz. for possession of the closes, &c.

Nov. 19. It was agreed, that Robert Eyrycke, glover, being gone from Leicester to live at Mountsorell, shall not keep shop, buy or sell in the town, but only as a stranger, on Saturday market and fair-days.

Dec. 20. Letters of Richard Parkyns, about a difference between sir Edward Hastings, knight, and the town of Leicester. In one, he says "the customs of the Dutchy were confirmed by act of parliament."

Mr. Richard Parkyns, troubled at the factions in town, was inclined to resign his recordership, and the earl of Huntingdon recommended Mr. Humphrey Purefoy; but, peace and concord being restored, he was induced to continue recorder.

Thomas Heneage, chancellor of the Dutchy, wrote to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, Jan. 8, 1592, wherein he proposes; viz. that, "leaving the choice of both the burgesses to me, as heretofore it hath been to my predecessors, I shall make choice of two such burgesses as shall be without all exceptions," &c.

March 17. The serjeants to have gowns this year.

Agreed, that no one dwelling out of Leicester, though free of the said town, shall use his trade there on week-days, but only on Saturday markets and fair-days.

5 July, 1593. Agreed, that Mr. Thomas Clarke shall have for term of life St. John's, with the appurtenances, paying the Queen's rent, to make a woolhall thereof, at his own charge; and he promises to leave the same to the use of the Corporation.

28 July. Whereas Henry earl of Huntingdon ordered that the money employed by him formerly to buy coals for the poor in Leicester shall be for cloathing, and for coals also; and the mayor and burgesses being willing that it should be all for cloathing, they agree that the twenty-four shall give 5*s.* and the forty-eight 2*s.* 6*d.* a piece, for the chamberlains to provide coals, and sell them, in winter, at 5*d.* a hundred, to the working poor, and the poor indeed. The chamberlains are to give a just account; and the gain arising to remain to the stock for increase thereof.

Friday, July 28, 34 Eliz. At a hall, for agreement with Richard Archer for his travel for four years in obtaining their fee farm; and in consideration that, by his diligence and knowledge, the particular contained in the grant of the Queen to the town was found out, which no other person was then able to perform; being a bailey and collector, &c.; and that he shall endeavour to deliver possession of all the lands and tenements which the Corporation holds in fee-farm of the Queen, to his utmost knowledge of the particular, &c.; it is agreed, that the said Richard Archer shall have to him, his heirs and assigns for ever, all those lands and tenements which are already assured to him in fee-farm under the common seal of Leicester; and in consideration that he releases to the Corporation all the residue of the lands and tenements to him promised in fee-farm, he, his heirs, executors, and administrators, are discharged against the Corporation of and for 100*l.* by him received, with the interest and arrears of it, for evermore; also he shall have a lease of all the rest of the lands and tenements, parcel of his Bailiwick, to be made for 21 years from Michaelmas next, paying during the first ten years, over and above the Queen's rent 4*l.*; and during the residue of the term, 5*l.*: And whereas the said Archer hath, by grant of the Corporation, two yard land in the South Field of Leicester, the Corporation, at any time within six years, may exchange or buy the said two yard land, at a rate adjudged by four different men.

Sept. 18. At a meeting of the mayor and others, sealed to Thomas Cave, esq. an indenture of fee-farm of Sytheston miln, and a cottage, with a horse-miln, in the town of Sytheston, and a piece of meadow; rent, per annum, 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; and also of a messuage and tenement in Hungerton, rent, per annum, 30*s.* N. B. The fine of these parcels is 115*l.* 2*s.* parcel of the bargain of Mr. Tatam and Mr. Thomas Clarke of 20*l.* per annum, in paying of 600*l.* of the town's debt.

Sept. 21, 1593, 35 Eliz. Robert Heyrick mayor. Freemen, 41.—Agreed, that the twenty-four pay weekly 2*s.* and the forty-eight 12*d.* apiece, towards the charge of the visited; and so Oct. 19; and the commons to be taxed according to their abilities.

Jan. 24. The letter being read, and also one from Mr. Tamworth and Mr. Brockas in the common hall: Mr. Tamworth and Mr. Brockas were rejected; as also the proposal of the chancellor of the Duchy; and there were chosen, Mr. John Stanford mayor, who will bear his own charge; and Mr. James Clarke, who is to have his charge.

April 6, 1594. Agreed, that whosoever discloses any speeches, secrets, or matters, out of the common hall, or at any common hall, hereafter, to any person whatsoever, shall forfeit, to the use of the town, 5*l.*

Robert Heyrick. glover, now dwelling at Mountsorell, now continues his freedom by the yearly payment of 2*s.* payable half yearly.

Aug. 19. Agreed that the twenty-four shall pay 10*s.* and the forty-eight 5*s.* a piece, towards the first and second fifteenth and tenth; and the commons to be taxed according to their ability.

Sept. 21, 1594, 36 Eliz. Geo. Tatam chosen mayor.

Christopher Sutton, for his absence this day and other times, and disobedience to the mayor, fined 5*l.*

Ale under the sieve, 3½*d.*; pale ale, 4½*d.* the gallon; candles, 3*d.* per pound.

Nov. 9. Agreed, that every freeman using his trade else where, and doth not return home nightly to his house in Leicester, shall pay, weekly, double in every payment to all charges, watch and ward, &c.; and if they do not return home, and continue in the town as an inhabitant ought, before the Conception of our Lady next, they shall pay, for every week they so continue out afterwards, 40*s.* a-week, to the use of the visited and poor people.

Jan. 11. Agreed, that Mr. Mayor take up 100*l.* at interest, for redeeming the North mylns; the Corporation to be bound, and the interest to be paid by the twenty-four and forty-eight, after the rate of 2*s.*, and 12*d.* &c. Item, the mayor to buy the wind miln in the South Field (the purchase whereof is 20*l.*), upon the town's bond.

Jan. 24. Agreed between the mayor, his brethren, and John Willne bailiff of Leicester, that the four serjeants shall attend on the mayor, as of old times hath been used; and to have usual fees and allowances.

Certain persons petitioned to have certain indentures to be kept among the records of the town till the death of a person; and it was granted.

This year the plague raged in Leicester. The accompts say, "Paid charges in making ready at Hallows church for the judges to hold the assize in, because the other part of the town was infected with the sickness.

"Given to sir Edward Hastings, knight, as followeth; two loaves of refined sugar (19lb. 2oz.), 24*s.*; pepper (3oz.), 6*s.*; ginger (1oz.), 1*s.* 4*d.*; cinnamon (2oz.), 4*s.*; currants (12lb.), 5*s.*; raisins (12lb.), 3*s.* 8*d.*; pruens (12lb.), 5*s.*; 1lb. of biscuits, 1lb. of carraways, and 1lb. of comforts, 2*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*

"Given to the lord Anderson, chief justice of England; one bottle of white wine, 1*s.* 4*d.*; one bottle of claret, 1*s.* 4*d.*; one bottle of sack, 2*s.*; and 1lb. of sugar, 1*s.* 4*d.*—In toto, 6*s.*"

March 14. The interest of the 100*l.* which was 8*l.* now ageeed to be but half paid by the company; the rest out of the receipts of the town.

April 16, 1595. Agreed, that the mayor and burgesses shall appoint two of the four serjeants, who shall be kept at the charge of the town, and shall attend on the mayor and town business; and arrest people, and be attorneys in the town court, as has been used by the bailiff's serjeants; and the bailiff to choose the other two serjeants, to attend him, arrest people, and be attorneys, and kept at his charge, &c.: And the town, every fourth year, to give each of the bailiff's two serjeants a gown-cloth, for their attendance on the mayor; and the town and bailiff each to pay their serjeants' wages, &c.

July 10. Robert Roberts, of the twenty-four, being charged, before Mr. Mayor and his brethren, with having carnal knowledge of widow Dawson, was discharged from the company till he clear himself of the said crime.

Sept. 21, 1595, 37 Eliz. William Yates chosen mayor. Christopher Sutton was chosen chamberlain; but absented himself as living in the Bishop's fee, and was fined 5*l.* Freemen, 23.

The toll of horses was let for 20*s. per annum.*

March 5, 38 Eliz. Agreed, that all the common lanes and common places taken in within the remembrance of man shall be laid open again, and that all lanes that be straitened shall be enlarged again, before Michaelmas next; and they to be done by six of the antients of the twenty-four and forty-eight.

April 21, 1596. Ordered, that no mayor (after his mayoralty is expired) shall keep in his custody any record of the town's, or any letters which concern the Corporation; but to be among the records in the town-hall.

The close in the Frith, near the Forest of Leicester, let for 21 years for 20*l.* fine, and 10*l. per annum.*

May 19. Christopher Sutton put out of the company of forty-eight, and disfranchised, because not resident in the Liberty of this town, and refuses to pay such duties as a freeman and one of the company ought; likewise Robert Carter, for refusing to come to common halls, and pay the duties of a freeman, and one of the said company.

James Pawlmer was released from the company of forty-eight, because gone to live out of the town; yet he may continue his freedom, by the yearly payment of 12*d.* being demanded, or lose his freedom.

Agreed, that the twenty-four pay 2*s.* and the forty-eight 12*d.* a piece, towards mending the ways near the North bridge and Abbey-gate; and collection to be made among the inhabitants.

Ale under the sieve at 3½*d.*; stale ale at 4*d.* the gallon; candles, 3*d. per* pound.

Hugh Haroulde, a freeman, removing to Kibworth, is allowed to continue his freedom, to trade on market-days and fairs, for 2*s. per annum.*

Sept. 21, 1596, 38 Eliz. William Morton mayor. Freemen, 18.—Ale under the sieve, 5*d.*; stale ale, 6*d.* the gallon; candles, 3½*d. per* pound.

Jan. 21, 39 Eliz. John Clarke had a lease of the toll of horses for 21 years, from Michaelmas 1559; paying 8*l.* fine, and 20*s.* rent per annum.

Lent 20*l.* for a year to the wife of Thomas Clark, in respect that she keeps many poor children at work in knitting of jersey. The town bore the interest.

March 30, 1597. Agreed, that the lane near Cow-lane, leading into Burgess meadow, be inclosed.

June 19. It was agreed, that Mr. Thomas Chapman shall be made a free burgess, and afterwards one of the forty-eight, and then to fine for the chamberlainship, and then to be made a mayor's brother; so his fine be for his freedom 5*l.*: all which was done next day.

Sept. 21, 1597, 39 Eliz. Thomas Nixe mayor. Being a fishmonger, two persons were appointed with him for the assizing of victuals. Freemen, 12.

George Parkyns, eldest son of Mr. Parkyns the recorder, and John Stanford junior, eldest son of Mr. John Stanford senior, chosen burgesses of the parliament.

Oct. 21. Agreed, that no mayor hereafter shall receive any of the town's money, but the chamberlains only, who shall yearly make accompt thereof.

Every alderman in his ward shall appoint his constable to command that two, or one at least, of every houshold, shall come to the sermons weekly, on pain of 6*d.* for every default.

The stewards of the fair shall yearly make their accompt to the mayor, and pay the overplus to the chamberlains, for the use of the town.

The mayors shall, yearly, answer the overplus of the fifteenths' and post-horses' money to the town, if there be any.

This year, a poor unfortunate woman was hanged for being old. "Paid, for the charges of meat and drink of old Mother Cooke, being kept in the hall five days, at the suit of Mr. Edward Saunders, upon suspicion of witchcraft, who was afterwards removed to the county gaol, and was for the same arraigned, condemned, and hanged; 2*s.* 6*d.*" [Master Edward Saunders deserved hanging the most.]

Nov. 18, 40 Eliz. Ale under the sieve, 6*d.*; stale ale, 7*d. per* gallon; candles, 4*d. per* pound.

At the same time, agreed that the beast-market shall be kept in the lane called the Cow-lane, Cank-street, and Loseby-lane, and not in Saturday market.

The order renewed of Oct. 21, 39 Eliz. for attending sermons on the Fridays and other days of the week; the defaulter to pay 4*d.*

John Underwood the mace-bearer shall have, every third-year, a gown-cloth given him.

No stranger of any trade shall be made free under 5*l.* nor suffered to use his trade till he be free.

By a letter of the earl of Huntingdon's, dated April 29, 1598, it appears, that of 500 trained soldiers charged on the county, the town found 40, whereof there were 12 culivers, 4 muskets, 11 bows and arrows, 8 corslets and pikes, and 5 bills. The Queen ordered the bows and arrows and bills to be refused, and supplied with muskets.

May 3. The letter being read; towards the charge, agreed that the twenty-four pay 6*s.* 8*d.* and the forty-eight 3*s.* 4*d.* each, and the inhabitants to be taxed according to ability. The town-armour to be marked with a cinquefoil, and delivered from chamberlain to chamberlain, by inventory indented.

Sept. 21, 40 Eliz. Thomas Clarke mayor; and two persons were then nominated for choice of the mayor for the next year; and Mr. Edward Newcome being excused this year from being mayor, gave 40*l.* bond, to pay to the town 20*l.* if he should refuse to serve the next year.—Freemen, 22.

Nov. 24. Ale under the sieve, at 4*d. per* gallon for a fortnight; afterwards, 3*d.* Stale ale, 5*d. per* gallon for a fortnight; afterwards, 4*d.* Candles, 4*d. per* pound.

Agreed, that the companies attending the mayor at common halls, assize sessions, and fairs, shall wear gowns, on pain to the twenty-four of 12*d.* and forty-eight 6*d.* each.

It appears, that, in this year, the commonalty of Leicester were called upon to pay a portion of the town's debt incurred by the Corporation purchases, and law expences; towards which the aldermen paid 58*l.*; the forty-eight (common council), 39*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*; and the commonalty, 20*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*

Wheat was this year at 9*s.* a bushel.

May 6, 1599. Agreed, that Mr. John Wilne, the Queen's bailiff of this borough, should be made a mayor's brother.

Queen Elizabeth, by her charter, dated June 1, the 41st year of her reign, doth grant, that the borough of Leicester shall be a free borough of itself; and that the burgesses thereof, and their successors, shall be a body politic and corporate, consisting of a mayor, two bailiffs, and burgesses, of the borough of Leicester; and by that name shall purchase lands in fee and perpetuity, and goods, chattels, and other things; and to sell, lease, grant, and assign, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, goods and chattels; and to plead, and be impleaded, in any Court or Courts, in all actions, suits, and demands: And that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses aforesaid, shall have a common seal for the causes and businesses to be done; which seal they may alter and change at their pleasure: And that the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, shall have power, from time to time, to make, ordain, and constitute, such reasonable laws and orders as to them shall seem good, profitable, honest, and necessary, for the good government of the burgesses, artificers, and inhabitants, of the borough aforesaid; and to declare how and in what manner the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and burgesses, artificers, and inhabitants of the borough aforesaid, should behave themselves in their offices, trades, and businesses, within the borough and limits thereof; and also for the further benefit and government of the said borough, and of victualing thereof; and for the disposing and letting of their lands: And that the said mayor and aldermen, and their successors, shall ordain such penalties and punishments, by imprisonment or fine, or both of them, against the delinquents, as to the said mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, shall seem meet; and granteth power to levy the said fines, so that the said ordinances, imprisonments, and fines, be not contrary to the laws of the land; and maketh Thomas Clarke then present mayor till St. Matthew next, and 24 others, present aldermen; and they to continue aldermen during their lives, unless in the mean time they be removed for their ill government or ill behaviour; and maketh Thomas Chettle and James Andrew the first bailiffs, and so to continue until St. Matthew next, if they so long live; and nameth 48 others of the company of the forty-eight during their lives, unless they be removed by their ill government or ill behaviour: And that, yearly, at St. Matthew the Apostle, the mayor, aldermen, and forty-eight, or the greater part of them, shall assemble themselves together in the Guildhall, or any other convenient place within the said borough, to be appointed at their discretion, and there shall continue until they, or the greater part of them assembled, shall choose one of the said aldermen to be their mayor, and two of the burgesses to be their bailiffs, for the year following; and that the mayor and bailiffs elected, before they do execute their offices, must take their oaths, upon St. Martlemas day, before the last mayor, and, in his absence, before some of the aldermen which shall be there present, at the Guildhall, or other place, &c. to execute his office well and truly in all things; and that, if the mayor die, or be removed from his office, or not behave himself well in his office, that then they shall choose another in his place within fourteen days, and so toties quoties, &c.; and that the bailiffs are removeable by the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, if they behave not themselves well; and if the bailiffs, or either of them, do die or be removed, then a new one to be chosen within fourteen days, ut supra; and if any of the aldermen die or be removed (they being removeable, if they do not behave themselves well in their places, at the pleasures of the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them), that then the mayor and residue of the aldermen, or the greater part of them, within convenient time, shall choose another of the burgesses to be alderman in his place, who shall have the said office tam diu quam se bene gesserit, and he is to be sworn to perform his office; and if any of the forty-eight die, or misbehave themselves, that then the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, within convenient time, shall assemble themselves, and the greater part of them so assembled to choose another in his place, and to swear him to perform his place and office: And makes Mr. Parkins the present recorder for life; and, after his decease or renewal, the mayor and aldermen, or the greater number of them assembled, to choose another, expert in the law, to be recorder, and so toties quoties; and he to take an oath to perform his office: And that they shall have a steward, expert in the law: Mr. Thomas Ward to be present steward of the same borough; and, after his decease or removal, the mayor and alderman, or the greater number of them assembled, to choose another, expert in the law, to be steward of the same borough; and he to be sworn to execute his said office by himself or his deputy: And that they shall have an honest and discreet man to be town clerk, common clerk, and prothonotary of the said borough; William Dethicke to be present town clerk for life; and, after his decease, the mayor and aldermen, or the greater number of them assembled, to choose another, and he to hold it tam diu quam se bene gesserit; and he to be sworn before the mayor well and truly to execute his office: And that there shall be five serjeants at mace to execute all proclamations, precepts, processes, and other businesses to them appertaining, to be chosen by the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them assembled for that purpose, and shall be attendant upon the mayor and bailiffs, and shall be sworn before the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them; and that they shall carry maces of gold or silver, with the arms of the Kingdom engraven upon them: and that they shall carry them before the mayor within the said borough and precincts thereof: And that the mayor and burgesses, and their successors, may hold a court upon Monday every week, or oftener if need be, at the Guildhall, or any other convenient place within the said borough, before the mayor, recorder, bailiffs, and steward, or one of them; and gives them power to hold plea of all actions of trespass, quare vi & armis, otherwise actions of the case, debts, accompts, covenants, deceipts, detinue of charters and chattels, and other contracts whatsoever, happening within the said borough, in such manner as hath been there used; and if they will implead any man for any freehold, that then the plaintiff shall procure a writ of right patent, directed to the mayor and bailiffs, whereupon the court may proceed: and that the serjeants at mace shall execute all processes of the said court as shall be fit, and as hath been used in other the like places: And the mayor, recorder, and four aldermen which have been last mayors, shall be justices of the peace, and shall execute the places and offices of justices of the peace; and gives them, or any three of them, whereof the mayor and recorder to be two, power to enquire, hear and determine, of all offences, as hath been heretofore used within the said borough, or as any of the justices of any county may do, so that they do not proceed to the determination of any murder or felony, or any other matter concerning loss of life or member, without special command from the Queen, her heirs or successors; and grants to them view of frankpledge of all the inhabitants of, and resiants within, the said borough, to be holden twice by year, to be holden before the mayor, bailiffs, and steward of the said borough, or any of them: And that no foreigner shall buy or sell any wares or merchandize within the said borough in gross, but only in the times of fairs and markets, without special licences of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the said borough, for the time being.—The charter then proceeds to define the right of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, to a jurisdiction[1] over the Bishop's Fee, the parishes of St. Mary and St. Leonard, and the Newark, with a saving of all rights to those who may be interested. It appears also by this grant, that much damage had been done in the town by malt-kilns being erected within it; it therefore orders, that no granary of that sort should be erected hereafter to be used, but what was thirty yards from any building, under the penalty of 6*s*. 8*d*. for every time it was used. For the better relief of the poor of the said place, it grants a market for wool, yarn, and worsted, and other commodities, on certain days heretofore used and appointed; and all fines, amercements, tolls, &c. were to be used to the service and maintenance of the poor within the borough aforesaid. It concludes with reinstating them in all their lands, hereditaments, grants, charters, &c. But the original charter shall here be copied.

"Regina omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Cum burgus noster de Leycester, in comitatu nostro Leycestrie, sit burgus valdè antiquus et populosus, et ab antiquis temporibus fuit burgus incorporatus, inhabitantesque inde et predecessores sui diversas libertates, franchesia, privilegia, et immunitates hactenus habuerunt et tenuerunt, tam ratione diversarum prescriptionum et consuetudinum in eodem

---

[1] The Judges have lately given an opinion that the Corporation has only a concurrent power with the County Justices.

burgo à tempore cujus contrario memoria hominum non existit usitatarum, quam ex donationibus et concessionibus diversorum progenitorum nostrorum quondam regum Anglie; que quidem concessiones eisdem inhabitantibus non per unum nomen corporationis, sed per varia et diversa nomina facta fuerunt, prout in diversis cartis et literis patentibus diversorum progenitorum nostrorum inde preanteà factis et concessis pleniùs apparet: Cumque dilecti subditi nostri major et burgenses predicti burgi nostri de Leicester nobis humillimè supplicaverunt, quatenus nos eisdem majori et burgensibus gratiam et munificentiam nostram regiam in hâc parte graciosè exhibere et extendere velimus; quodque nos, pro meliori gubernatione, regimine, et melioratione ejusdem burgi, dictos majorem et burgenses ejusdem burgi in aliud corpus corporatum et politicum, per nomen "Majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leicester," per literas nostras patentes ratificare, confirmare, facere, constituere, redigere, seu creare de novo dignaremur, cum additione et augmentatione quarundam libertatum pro bono publico ejusdem burgi, prout nobis melius videbitur expedire. Nos igitur, meliorationem ejusdem burgi graciosè affectantes, ac volentes quod de cetero in perpetuum in eodem burgo continuò habeatur unus certus et indubitatus modus de et pro custodiâ pacis et bono regimine ac gubernatione populi ibidem, et quod burgus predictus de cetero in perpetuum sit et remaneat burgus pacis et quiet', ad formidinem et terrorem malorum, et in premium bonorum, et quod pax nostra ceteraque facta justicie ibidem absque ulteriori dilatione serventur; sperantesque quod si burgenses ejusdem burgi et successores sui ampliori ex concessione nostrâ gaudere poterunt honores, libertates, et privilegia, tunc ad servicia que poterint nobis ac heredibus et successoribus nostris impendend' et exhibend' specialius fortiusque sentiant se obligatos: De gratiâ nostrâ speciali, et ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, voluimus, ordinavimus, constituimus, et concessimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, volumus, ordinamus, constituimus, declaramus, et concedimus, quod dictus burgus de Leicester, in dicto comitatu nostro Leycestrie, de cetero sit et erit liber burgus de se, et quod burgenses burgi illius et successores sui de cetero in perpetuum sint et erunt, vigore presentium, unum corpus corporatum et politicum, in re, facto, et nomine, et communitas perpetua, de uno majore, duobus ballivis, et burgensibus, per nomen "Majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leycester," et eos, per nomen "Majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leicester," unum corpus corporatum et politicum, in re, facto, et nomine, realiter et ad plenum, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, erigimus, facimus, ordinamus, constituimus, confirmamus, et declaramus per presentes; et quod per idem nomen habeant successionem perpetuam; et quod ipsi per nomen "Majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leicester" sint et erunt, perpetuis futuris temporibus, persone habiles et in lege capaces ad habend', perquirend', recipiend', et possidend' terras, tenementa, libertates, privilegia, jurisdictiones, franchesia, et hereditamenta, cujuscumque generis, nature, vel speciei fuerint, sibi et successoribus suis, in feodo et perpetuitate; et etiam bona et catalla, et quascumque alias res, cujuscunque generis, nature, vel speciei fuerint; necnon ad dand', concedend', dimittend', et assignand' terras, tenementa, et hereditamenta, bona et catalla, ac omnia et singula alia facta et res faciend' et exequend', per nomen predictum; et quod per idem nomen "Majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leicester," placitare et implacitari, respondere et responderi, defendere et defendi, valeant et possint, in quibuscumque curiis, placeis, et locis, et coram quibuscumque judicibus et justiciariis, ac aliis personis et officiariis nostris, ac heredum et successorum nostrorum, in omnibus sectis, querelis, placitis, causis, materiis, et demandis quibuscumque, cujuscumque sint generis, nature, seu speciei, eisdem modo et formâ, prout alii ligei nostri hujus regni nostri Anglie, persone habiles et in lege capaces placitare et implacitari, respondere et responderi, defendere et defendi; ac habere, perquirere, recipere, possidere, dare, concedere, et dimittere, valeant et possint; et quod major, ballivi, et burgenses predicti burgi de Leicestrie, et successores sui, habeant in perpetuum commune sigillum, pro causis et negociis suis et successorum suorum quibuscumque agend' serviturum; et quod benè liceat et licebit eisdem majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, et successoribus suis, sigillum illum ad libitum suum, de tempore in tempus, frangere, mutare, et de novo facere, prout eis melius fieri et fore videbitur. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus et ordinamus, quod de cetero in perpetuum sit et erit infra burgum predictum unus de magis probiorum et discreciorum burgensium burgi predicti, in formâ inferius in hiis presentibus mencionatâ, eligendi, qui erit et nominabitur "Major" burgi predicti; quodque similiter sint et erunt infra eundem burgum duo probi et discreti burgenses mencionati eligendi, qui erunt et nominabuntur "Ballivi" burgi predicti. Ac eciam volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus et ordinamus, quod de cetero sint et erunt infra burgum predictum, de tempore in tempus, viginti quatuor probi et discreti viri, inhabitantes et commorantes infra eundem burgum, qui erunt et vocabuntur "Aldermanni" burgi predicti; et quod major burgi predicti pro tempore existens, et successores sui, de tempore in tempus, reputabitur fore et esse unus de predicto numero viginti quatuor aldermannorum ejusdem burgi; ac eciam quod de cetero sint et erint infra predictum burgum, de tempore in tempus, quadraginta et octo alii probi et discreti viri inhabitantes et commorantes infra eundem burgum, qui erunt et vulgariter nuncupabuntur "The Company of eighte and fortie." Et volumus, ac per presentes pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus, quod predicti quadraginta octo burgenses vulgariter vocati "The Company of eighte and fortie," erunt et vocabuntur "Commune Consilium Burgi" predicti, et erunt de tempore in tempus assistentes et auxiliantes majori et aldermannis dicti burgi de Leicestriâ predictis pro tempore existentibus, in omnibus causis et materiis burgum predictum tangentibus seu concernentibus. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod major et aldermanni ejusdem burgi, et successores sui pro tempore existentes, vel major pars eorundem, habeant et habebunt plenam potestatem et auctoritatem condendi, constituendi, ordinandi, et faciendi, de tempore in tempus, hujusmodi leges, statuta, et ordinaciones rationabilia quecumque, que eis bona, salubria, utilia, honesta, et necessaria, juxta eorum sanas discreciones fore videbuntur, pro bono regimine et gubernacione burgensium, artificum, et inhabitantium burgi predicti pro tempore existentium; ac pro declaracione quoquomodo et ordinacione predictorum majoris, aldermanni, ballivi, et burgensium, artifices, inhabitantes, et residentes burgi predicti in officio, ministris, et negociis suis, infra burgum illum ac limites ejusdem, pro tempore existentes, sese habebunt, ac gerent et utentur, ac aliter, pro ulteriori bono et publicâ utilitate et regimine burgi illius, ac victulacione ejusdem burgi; ac eciam pro meliori preservacione, gubernacione, disposicione, locacione, et dimissione terrarum, tenementorum, possessionum, revencionum, et hereditamentorum, prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, et successoribus suis, dat', concess', assignat', sive confirmat', aut in posterum dand', concedend', sive assignand', ac res et causas quascumque burgi predicti, aut statum, jus, et interesse ejusdem burgi tangentes, seu quoquomodo concernentes; et quod dicti major et aldermanni et successores sui vel major pars eorundem pro tempore existentium, quociescunque hujusmodi leges, statuta, et ordinaciones, condiderint, fecerint, et ordinaverint, et stabilierint in formâ predictâ, hujusmodi et tales racionabiles penas, penalitates, et puniciones, per imprisonamentum corporis, vel per fines et amerciamenta, vel per eorum utrumque, erga et super omnes delinquentes contra hujusmodi leges, statuta, et ordinaciones, sive eorum aliquod sive aliqua, imponere et assidere possint, quales et que eisdem majori et aldermannis ejusdem burgi, vel majori parti eorumdem pro tempore existentium, racionabilia et requisita fore videbuntur; ac eadem fines et amerciamenta levare ac habere possint et valeant, absque impedimento nostri, heredum et successorum nostrorum; que omnia et singula leges, statuta, et ordinaciones, sic ut prefertur faciend', observari volumus, sub penis in eisdem continendis; ita tamen quod leges, statuta, ordinaciones, imprisonamenta, fines, et amerciamenta hujusmodi, non sint repugnantes nec contraria legibus, statutis, consuetudinibus, sive juribus regni nostri Anglie. Et, pro meliori executione earumdem concessionum nostrarum in hâc parte, assignavimus, constituimus, nominavimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, dilectum nobis Thomam Clarke, modò majorem burgi predicti, fore et esse primum et modernum majorem burgi predicti; volentes quod idem Thomas Clarke in officio majoris ejusdem burgi erit et continuabit à confectione presencium usque ad diem festi Sancti Matthei Apostoli proximè futurum, et de eodem festo quousque alius aldermannus burgi predicti ad officium illud prefectus et juratus fuerit, juxta ordinaciones et constituciones in presentibus inferius expressas et declaratas, si idem Thomas Clarke tamdiu vixerit. Assignavimus etiam, nominavimus, constituimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, dilectos nobis Thomam Chettell, modò aldermannum burgi predicti, et Jacobum Andrewe, modò unum de quadraginta octo burgensibus ejusdem burgi, fore et esse duos primos et modernos ballivos burgi predicti, continuandos in eodem officio usque ad predictam diem festi Sancti Matthei Apostoli proximè futurum, et de eodem festo quousque duo alii de burgensibus burgi predicti prefecti et jurati erunt juxta ordinaciones et constituciones in presentibus expressas et declaratas, si idem Thomas Chettell et Jacobus Andrew tamdiu vixerint. Assignavimus eciam, nominavimus, constituimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, predictum Thomam Clarke, modò majorem burgi predicti, ac etiam dilectos nobis Willielmum Norrice, Jacobum Clarke, Johannem Stanford, Georgium Tatam, Robertum Heirick, Willielmum Morton, Jacobum Ellis, Willielmum Ludlam, Radulphum Chettell, Willielmum Yates, Thomam Nixe, Edwardum Newcome, Robertum Gillot, Willielmum Rowe, Hugonem Hunter, Johannem Mabbs, Franciscum Watts, predictum Thomam Chettell unum ballivorum burgi predicti, Thomam Manby, Lebbeum Chamberleyn, Willielmum Warde, Thomam Chapman, et Johannem Freake, modò aldermannos burgi predicti, fore et esse viginti et quatuor primos et modernos aldermannos burgi predicti, continuandos in eodem officio aldermanni ejusdem burgi durantibus vitis suis, nisi interim pro malâ gubernacione seu malè se gerend' in ea parte ab officio illo amoti fuerint. Assignavimus eciam, nominavimus, constituimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, dilectos nobis Georgium Brooke, Thomam Heirick, Richardum Archer, Willielmum Biggs, Valentinum Wells, Richardum Barstall, Thomam Hunt, Robertum Woolley, Johannem Bennett, Johannem Woodford, Robertum Atton, Michaelem Thornton, Richardum Stanford, predictum Jacobum Andrewe (unum ballivorum ejusdem burgi), Arthurum Tatam, Henricum Halpeny, Willielmum Stanley, Johannem Spencer, Reginaldum Fausit, Hugonem Marshall, Johannem Brighte, Antonium Webster, Thomam Pate, Johannem Lawnder, Cristoferum Nedam, Thomam Taylor, Cristoferum Hallifield, Johannem Eyrick, Bartholomeum Middleton, Henricum Penyngton, Willielmum Okes, Wiatum Fowler, Willielmum Vickars, Thomam Paynter, Johannem Pare, Robertum Crosby, Georgium Greene, Edmundum Abney, Radulphum Orton, Thomam Stanford, Robertum Johnson, Johannem Buggs, Nicholaum Gillott, Willielmum Jee, Richardum Normande, Thomam Yonge, Radulphum Chettell, et Johannem Hynde, fore et esse quadraginta octo primos et modernos burgenses, vulgaritèr vocatos "The Company of eighte and fortie," ejusdem burgi, continuandos in eodem officio durantibus vitis suis, nisi interim pro malâ gubernacione seu malè se gerend' in eâ parte, aut aliquâ aliâ causâ racionabili ab officio illo amoti fuerint. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod major et aldermanni et predicti quadraginta octo burgensium ejusdem burgi, et successores sui pro tempore existentes, sive major pars eorumdem, de tempore in tempus, perpetuis futuris temporibus, potestatem et auctoritatem habeant et habebunt annuatim, quolibet anno, in die festo Sancti Matthei Apostoli, semet vel eorum majorem partem assembland' in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum juxta eorum discreciones limitando et assignando, ac ibidem continuand' quousque ipsi vel eorum major pars ibidem adtunc assemblat' elegerunt vel nominaverunt unum aldermannorum burgi predicti esse major pro anno sequenti, in formâ sequenti eligend' et nominand'; et quod eligere et nominare ibidem valeant et possint antequam abinde recesserunt unum aldermannorum burgi predicti, qui erit major burgi predicti pro uno anno integro tunc proximè sequente; quodque ille, postquam sic ut prefertur electus et nominatus fuerit in majoratum burgi predicti, antequam ad officium illum exequend' admittatur, sacramentum corporale super sancta Dei Evangelia annuatim, in die festi Sancti Michaelis Archangeli tunc proximè sequente, coram majore ultimo predecessore suo, ac in ejus absenciâ coram hujusmodi predictis aldermannis et ceteris burgensibus burgi predicti qui tunc presentes fuerint in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, aut in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum juxta eorum discreciones limitand' et assignand', ad officium illum rectè, benè, et fideliter, in omnibus officiis illis tangentibus exequend' prestabit'; et, quod post hujusmodi sacramentum sic prestitum, officium majoris burgi predicti usque ad diem festum Sancti Matthei Apostoli tunc proximè sequente suscipiat, et ulterius quousque aliis de predictis aldermannis burgi predicti debitis modo et formâ in majoratum burgi predicti electus, prefectus, et juratus fuerit, exequi debeat, valeat, et possit. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod major et aldermanni burgi predicti, et successores sui, vel major pars eorumdem pro tempore existentium, de tempore in tempus, perpetuis futuris temporibus, potestatem et auctoritatem habeant et habebunt, annuatim, quolibet anno, in festo Sancti Matthei Apostoli, semet vel eorum majorem partem assembland' in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco conveniente infra predictum burgum juxta eorum discreciones limitand' et assignand', et ibidem continuand' quousque ipsi sicut prefertur assemblati elegerint vel nominaverint duos burgenses burgi predicti fore et esse ballivi pro anno sequente, in formâ sequente eligend' et nominand'; et quod eligere et nominare ibidem valeant et possint, antequam abinde recesserint, duos de burgensibus ejusdem burgi, qui extunc erunt ballivi burgi predicti pro uno anno integro tunc proximè sequente; quodque illi, postquam sic ut prefertur electi et nominati fuerint in ballivos burgi predicti, antequam ad officium illud exequend' admittantur, sacramenta corporalia super sancta Dei Evangelia annuatim, in die festi Sancti Michaelis Archangeli tunc proximè sequenti, coram majore burgi predicti, aut in absenciâ dicti majoris coram ballivis ultimis predecessoribus suis, aut uno eorumdem ballivorum, in presenciâ hujusmodi predictorum aldermannorum et predictorum quadraginta et octo burgensium burgi predicti pro tempore existentium, et ceterorum burgensium burgi predicti qui tunc presentes fuerint in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, aut in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum juxta eorum discreciones limitand' et assignand', ad officium illud rectè, benè, et fideliter, in omnibus officiis illis tangentibus exequend' prestabunt; et, quod post hujusmodi sacramentum sic prestitum, officium ballivi burgi predicti usque ad festum Sancti Matthei Apostoli tunc proximè sequentem suscipiat, et ulterius quousque alii de predictis burgensibus burgi predicti, debito modo et formâ, in ballivos burgi predicti, electi, prefecti, et jurati fuerunt, exequi debeant, valeant, et possint. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod si contigerit majorem burgi predicti aliquo tempore in posterum infra unum annum postquam ad officium majoris burgi predicti, ut prefertur, prefectus et juratus fuerit, obire, vel ab officio suo amoveri, vel si contigerit eundem majorem se non benè gerere in officio illo, quod tunc et toties benè liceat et licebit aldermannis et quadraginta octo burgensibus, vulgariter vocat' "The Company of eighte and fortie," burgi predicti, pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorumdem, infra quatuordecim dies proximè subsequentes ipsius majoris mortem sive amocionem, assemblare in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum; quodque superinde benè liceat et licebit predictis aldermannis et quadraginta octo burgensibus burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, et successoribus suis, vel majori parti eorumdem sic assemblatis, eligere, nominare, et preficere unum alium probum et idoneum virum de predictis aldermannis burgi predicti, in majoratum et pro majore burgi predicti, in loco ipsius sic mortui vel ab officio suo amoti; et quod ille in officio majoritatis sic electus et prefectus sacramentum corporale in formâ predictâ prius prestand' officium illud habeat et exerceat durante residuo ejusdem anni, et quousque alius aldermannus burgi predicti ad officium illud electus et juratus fuerit, et sic tociens quociens casus sic acciderit; et si contigerit ballivos burgi predicti, vel eorum aliquem, obire vel ab officio suo ballivi burgi predicti amoveri, quosquidem ballivos, et eorum alterum se non benè gerentem in officio suo predicto, amobiles et amobilari esse volumus ad beneplacitum majoris et aldermannorum burgi predicti pro tempore existentium, vel majorem partem eorumdem, quod tunc et totiens benè liceat et licebit majori et aldermannis burgi predicto pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem, infra quatuordecim dies proximè postquam predicti ballivi vel ballivus sic obierint vel obierit, aut ab officio suo predicto amoti fuerint vel fuerit, in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco convenienti infra burgum predictum, assemblare; quodque superinde benè liceat et licebit predictis majori et aldermannis, burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, et successoribus suis, vel majori parti eorundem pro tempore existen' sic assemblat', eligere, nominare, et preficere unum vel duos de burgensibus burgi predicti, in loco sive locis ipsius ballivi vel ballivorum sic mortui vel mortuorum, aut ab officio suo amoti vel amotorum, eligere et preficere; et quod ille sive illi sic ut prefertur electi et prefecti officium illum sive officia illa habeat et exerceat, habeant et exerceant, durante residuo ejusdem anni, et quousque alius sive alii de burgensibus burgi predicti ad officium illud ballivi vel ballivorum ejusdem burgi electus et juratus fuerit, electi et jurati fuerint, sacramento corporali in formâ predictâ prius prestando, et sic totiens quotiens casus sic acciderit. Et si aliquis vel aliqui de aldermannis burgi predicti obierit vel obierint, vel ab officio suo amotus fuerit vel fuerint, quos se non benè gerentes in officio suo amobiles esse volumus ad beneplacitum majoris et aldermannorum ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentium, vel majoris partis eorumdem pro tempore existentium, quod tunc et totiens benè liceat et licebit majori et residuis aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem, in tempore conveniente postquam predictus aldermannus vel aldermanni obierit vel obierint, aut ab officio suo predicto amoti fuerit vel fuerint, in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum assemblare; quodque superinde benè liceat et licebit predictis majori et residuis aldermannis ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem sic assemblat', eligere, nominare, et preficere unum vel plures de burgensibus burgi predicti in locum sive loco ipsius aldermanni vel ipsorum aldermannorum sic mortui vel mortuorum, aut ab officio suo amoti vel amotorum, eligere et preficere; et quod ille sive illi, sic ut prefertur elect et prefect', officium illud sive officia illa habeat et exerceat, habeant et exerceant, quamdiu se benè gesserit vel gesserint in eodem officio, sacramento corporali coram majore et residuis aldermannis burgi predicti, vel eorum majore parte, de officio illo in omnibus officium illud tangentibus exequend' prius prestando, et sic totiens quotiens casus sic acciderit. Et si contigerit aliquem vel aliquos de quadraginta octo burgensibus, vulgariter vocat' "The Company or eighte and fortie," obire vel ab officio suo amoveri, quos se non benè gerentes in officio suo amobiles esse volumus ad beneplacitum majoris et aldermannorum ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentium, vel majoris partis eorundem, pro tempore existentium, quod tunc totiens benè liceat et licebit majori et aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem in tempore conveniente postquam aliquis vel aliqui predictorum quadraginta octo burgensium obierit vel obierint, aut ab officio suo predicto amot' fuerit vel fuerint, in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, sive in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum assemblare; quodque superinde benè liceat et licebit prefatis majori et aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem sic assemblatis, eligere, nominare et preficere unum vel plurimos de burgensibus burgi predicti in locum sive loca ipsius burgensis vel ipsorum burgensium, vulgariter vocatorum "The Company of eighte and fortie," sic mortui vel mortuorum, aut ab officio suo amoti vel amotorum, eligere et preficere; et quod ille sive illi, sic ut prefertur electus et prefectus, electi et prefecti, officium illud sive officia illa habeat et exerceat, habeant et exerceant, quamdiu se benè gesserit vel gesserint in eodem officio, sacramento corporali coram majore et aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel eorum majore parte, de officio illo in omnibus officiis illud tangentibus exequend' prius prestand'. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui habeant in perpetuum unum virum probum et discretum, in legibus hujus regni nostri Anglie eruditum, in formâ inferius expressâ eligendum et nominandum, qui erit et vocabitur "Recordator" burgi predicti; et assignavimus, constituimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, dilectum nostrum Ricardum Parkyns armigerum, fore et esse primum et modernum recordatorem burgi predicti, continuandum in officio predicto durante vitâ sua naturali; et quod idem Ricardus Parkyns, antequam ad execucionem officii sui predicti processerit, sacramentum corporale super sancta Dei Evangelia, coram majore burgi predicti ad officium illud recordatoris burgi predicti fideliter in omnibus officium illud tangentibus exequend' prestabit; quodque post mortem sive amocionem predicti Ricardi Parkins, major et aldermanni ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentium, vel major pars eorumdem pro tempore existentium, in tempore conveniente, unum virum probum et discretum in legibus Anglie eruditum, de tempore in tempus, totiens quotiens eis necessarium fore videbitur, in recordatorem burgi predicti eligere, nominare, et preficere valeant et possint: quodque ille qui in officium recordatoris burgi predicti, sic ut prefertur, post mortem sive amocionem dicti Ricardi Parkyns electus, prefectus, et nominatus fuerit, officium illud recordatoris burgi predicti habere, exercere, et gaudere possit et valeat, sacramento corporali pro officio predicto fideliter exequend' priùs ut prefertur prestand', durante beneplacito majoris et aldermannorum burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel majoris partis eorumdem. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui habeant in burgo predicto in perpetuum unum virum probum et discretum, in legibus hujus regni Anglie eruditum, in formâ superius expressâ eligend' et nominand', qui erit et vocabitur "Senescallus" burgi predicti; et assignavimus, constituimus, et fecimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, et facimus, dilectum nostrum Thomam Warde, generosum, fore et esse primum et modernum senescallum burgi predicti, continuandum in eodem officio quamdiù se benè gesserit in eodem officio; quodque idem Thomas Warde officium illud senescalli burgi predicti, per se vel per sufficientem deputatum suum aut deputatos suos sufficientes, habere, exercere, et gaudere possit et valeat; et quod idem Thomas Warde et deputati sui, antequam ad execucionem officii sui predicti processerit sive processerint, sacramentum corporale super sancta Dei Evangelia, coram majore burgi predicti, ad officium illud fideliter in omnibus officiis illis tangentibus exequend' prestabit et prestabunt; quodque post mortem sive amotionem predicti Thome Warde, major et aldermanni ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentes, vel major pars eorumdem, in tempore convenienti unum virum probum et discretum in legibus Anglie eruditum, de tempore in tempus, totiens quotiens eis necessarium fore videbitur, in senescallum burgi predicti eligere, nominare, et preficere valeant et possint; quodque ille qui in officio senescalli burgi predicti, sic ut prefertur post mortem sive amotionem dicti Thome Warde electus, prefectus, et nominatus fuerit, officium illum senescalli burgi predicti habere, exercere, et gaudere possit et valeat, per seipsum, vel per sufficientem deputatum suum sacramento corporali pro officio predicto fideliter exequend' prius ut prefertur prestend', durante beneplacito majoris et aldermannorum burgi predicti pro tempore existentium. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod erit in burgo predicto unus probus homo et discretus, in formâ inferius expressâ eligendus et nominandus, qui erit & vocabitur "Communis Clericus et Prothonotarius" burgi predicti; quodque communis clericus sic ut prefertur electus et nominatus, antequam ad officium illud exequend' admittatur, sacramentum corporale coram majore burgi predicti pro tempore existente, ad officium illud communis clerici burgi predicti rectè, benè, et fideliter, in omnibus officium illud tangentibus exequend' prestabit; et quod post sacramentum predictum sic prestitum, officium communis clerici burgi predicti exerceat in burgo predicto; ac assignavimus, nominavimus, constituimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, assignamus, nominamus, constituimus, & facimus, dilectum nobis Willielmum Dethick, generosum, fore et esse primum et modernum communem clericum burgi predicti; volentes quod idem Willielmus Dethick in eodem officio erit et continuabit durante vitâ naturali ejusdem Willielmi Dethick; ac volumus quod idem Willielmus Dethick, antequam ad executionem officii predicti admittatur, sacramentum corporale coram majore burgi predicti ad officium illud rectè, benè, et fideliter exequend' prestabit; quodque major et aldermanni burgi predicti pro tempore existentes, vel major pars eorundem immediatè post mortem predicti Willielmi Dethick, unum probum hominem et discretum, de tempore in tempus, communem clericum sive prothonotarium burgi predicti eligere, preficere, & nominare possint et valeant; quodque ille qui in communem clericum sive prothonotarium burgi predicti, sic ut prefertur electus, nominatus, prefectus, & juratus fuerit, officium communis clerici burgi predicti habere, gaudere, et exercere possit et valeat, quamdiu se benè gesserit in eodem. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod de cetero in perpetuum sint et erint in burgo predicto quinque officiarios, qui erunt & vocabuntur "Servientes ad clavam" in curiâ burgi predicti deservituros, ac pro proclamatione, arrestatione, et executione processuum, mandatorum, & aliorum negotiorum ad officium servientis ad clavam in burgo predicto, et limitibus, bundis, et procinctis ejusdem pertinentibus, de tempore in tempus, exequend' et peragend'; qui quidem servientes ad clavas appunctuati, nominati, et electi erunt per predictos majorem et aldermannos burgi predicti, vel per majorem partem eorumdem, totiens quotiens predictis majori et aldermannis conveniens et necessarium videbitur, et erunt attendentes de tempore in tempus super majorem et ballivos burgi predicti pro tempore existentes; quodque predicti servientes ad clavas, sic ut prefertur eligendi et nominandi, ad officia sua predicta benè et fideliter exercend' debito modo jurati sint et erint coram majore et aldermannis burgi predicti, vel majore parte eorumdem pro tempore existentibus, quorum majorem pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus; et quod, post hujusmodi sacramentum sic prestitum, officium illud durante beneplacito majoris et aldermannorum burgi predicti, sive majoris partis eorumdem, quorum majorem pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus, exequi et exercere debeant, valeant, et possint. Et ulterius volumus et ordinamus, et per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod predicti servientes ad clavas in burgo predicto deputandi clavas deauratas vel argenteas et signo armorum hujus regni Anglie sculpatas et ornatas, ubique infra dictum burgum de Leicester, suburbia, libertates et procinctus ejusdem, coram majore burgi predicti pro tempore existente, portabunt et gerent. Et volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui de cetero in perpetuum habeant et teneant, ac habere et tenere valeant et possint, in Guihaldâ ejusdem burgi, sive in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum, unam curiam de recordo, in die Lune in quâlibet septimana, vel sepius ad eorum libitum, coram majore, recordatore, ballivis, et seneschallis ejusdem burgi, aut uno eorum pro tempore existente, tenend'; et quod in curiâ illâ tenere possint, per querelam in eadem curiâ levandam, omnia et omnimoda placita, querelas, et actiones, de quibuscumque transgressionibus, vi et armis seu aliter, in contemptum nostri, heredum et successorum nostrorum, factis sive faciendis, ac de omnibus et omnimodis placitis super casum, debitis, compotis, conventionibus, deceptionibus, detentionibus cartarum, scriptorum, munimentorum, et catallorum, captionibus et detentionibus averiarum et catallorum, et aliis contractibus ex quibuscumque causis sive rebus, infra burgum predictum, limites ac procinctos ejusdem, emergentibus sive contingentibus, in talibus hujusmodi et consimilibus, ac in tam amplis modo et formâ, prout perantea in eodem burgo consuetum et usitatum fuit; et quod quoties aliqua persona, sive alique persone quecumque, aliquam aliam personam, sive alias personas quascumque, terras, tenementa, redditus, sive hereditamenta, infra burgum predictum, limites et procinctus ejusdem, possidend' sive tenend', possident' sive tenent', de eisdem terris, tenementis, redditibus, et hereditamentis, implacitare voluerit seu voluerint, toties ipse vel ipsi sic implacitare volens sive volentes breve nostrum de recto patent' in curiâ nostra cancellarie Anglie emanentem prefatis majori et ballivis burgi predicti dirigendum prosequetur, super quo quidem brevi in curiâ predictâ, coram majore, recordatore, et ballivis burgi predicti, et senescallo ejusdem burgi, aut uno eorumdem pro tempore existentium, ipse vel ipsi, sic ut prefertur implacitare volens sive volentes, faciet sive facient portestationem suam ad sequend' querelam suam super brevi predicto factam, in naturâ brevis assise, nove disseisine, mortis antecessoris, attincture, aut in naturâ alicujus alterius actionis sive brevis cujuscumque ad communem legem, prout materia et casus exigit; et quod hujusmodi placita, querele, et actiones, tam reales quam personales et mixte, ibidem audientur et determinabuntur, coram majore, recordatore, ballivis, et senescallo burgi predicti, aut uno eorum pro tempore existentium, in Guihaldâ burgi predicti, vel in alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum, per tales et consimiles processus et modus, secundùm legem et consuetudinem regni nostri Anglie, pro qual' et prout legi nostre consonum fuerit, ac in tam amplis modo et formâ, prout in aliquâ aliâ curiâ de recordo in aliquo alio burgo aut villâ incorporatâ infra hoc regnum Anglie usitatum et consuetum est, aut fieri potest aut debet, ac in eisdem consimilibus ac in tam amplis modo et formâ prout antehâc in eodem burgo usitatum et consuetum fuit. Et volumus, ac pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, per presentes concedimus et ordinamus, quod servientes ad clavas burgi predicti pro tempore existentes omnia jurata, pannellas, inquisitiones, attachiamenta, precepta, mandata, warrantas, judicia, processus, et alia quecumque necessaria faciend', causas predictas, aut alias causas quascumque burgum predictum tangentes sive concernentes infra burgum predictum et libertates ejusdem, faciant et exequantur, prout eis consonum fuerit, juxta legis exigentiam, ac prout in consimili casu usitatum est, aut fieri debeat, in aliquâ aliâ curiâ de recordo in aliquo alio burgo aut villâ incorporatâ infra hoc regnum Anglie. Concessimus insuper, et pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, per presentes concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod major, recordator, et quatuor aldermannorum ejusdem burgi qui ultimò fuerunt majores ejusdem burgi, durante tempore quo ipsi in officio illo fore contigerint, sint justiciarii nostri, ac quilibet eorum sit justiciarius nostri, et heredum et successorum nostrorum, tam ad pacem in eodem burgo ac libertate et procinctibus ejusdem conservandum, quam ad statuta de vagabundis, artificium, et laboratorum, ponderum et mensurarum, infra burgum predictum, ac libertates et procinctus ejusdem, conservand', corrigend', et custodiri seu corrigi faciend' et exequend'; ac quod iidem major, recordator, et quatuor aldermanni predicti burgi, vel aliqui tres eorum, quorum majorem et recordatorem burgi predicti pro tempore existentes duos esse volumus, omnia et singula transgressiones, offensas, defecta, res, materias, et articulos, que ad officium justiciarii pacis infra burgum predictum, libertates et procinctus ejusdem pertinentes faciend', inquirere, audire, peragere, et terminare possint et valeant in perpetuum, in tam amplis et consimilibus modo et formâ prout preantea in eodem burgo usitatum et consuetum fuit, adeo plenè et integrè, ac in tam amplis modo et formâ, sicut aliqui alii justiciariorum pacis nostrorum, ac heredum et successorum nostrorum, in aliquo comitatu infra regnum nostrum Anglie, per leges, et statuta ejusdem regni nostri Anglie, inquirere, audire, seu determinare possint seu poterint; ita tamen quod predicti major, recordator, et aldermanni ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentes, vel successores sui, ad determinationem alicujus murdredi sive felonie, aut alicujus alie materie tangent' amissionem vite vel membrorum, infra burgum predictum, aut libertates vel procinctus ejusdem, absque speciali mandato nostri, heredum vel successorum nostrorum, quoquomodo in posterum non procedant. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus dicti burgi de Leicestriâ, et successoribus suis, quod habeant, teneant, et gaudeant, ac habere, tenere, et gaudere possint et valeant, infra dictum burgum de Leicestriâ, visum francplegii de omnibus et singulis inhabitantibus et residentibus infra eundem burgum de Leicestriâ, ac infra limites, procinctus, et jurisdictiones ejusdem burgi, ac omnia que ad visum francplegii pertinent seu spectare possint vel debent, bis per annum tenendum, videlicet, unâ vice infra mensem Pasche, et aliâ vice infra mensem Sancti Michaelis, coram majore burgi predicti pro tempore existente, vel recordatore sive senescallo ejusdem burgi pro tempore existente, singulis annis tenendum in eisdem, hujusmodi et consimilibus modo et formâ prout preantea in eodem burgo legitimè usitatum et consuetum fuit. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, de uberiori gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi de Leicestriâ predicti, et successoribus suis, quod nullus mercator, aut aliquis alius qui non sit liber homo ac burgensis ejusdem burgi, aliquod commercium habeat, vel eodem utatur, cum aliquo mercatore, aut aliquâ aliâ personâ, aut emat, aut vendat, committet, sive distrahat, aut emptioni vel venditioni exponat, aliter quam in grosso, aliquas merchandizas, merces, aut mercimonia quecunque, infra dictum burgum de Leicestriâ, suburbia, limites, sive procinctus ejusdem, cuiquam mercatori, aut alicui persone cuicunque, nisi tantummodo in tempore nundini et ferie ibidem in eodem burgo de tempore in tempus tenend', absque speciali licenciâ majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium ejusdem burgi pro tempore existentium in eâ parte prius habitâ et obtentâ. Et ulterius, pro meliore regimine et gubernatione predicti burgi nostri de Leicestriâ, ac omnium et singulorum burgensium, inhabitantium, commorantium, et residentium infra eundem burgum, volumus et concedimus, quod omnia et singula domus, edificia, messuagia, terre, tenementa, et hereditamenta quecunque, scituat', jacent', vel existent', tam infra parochiam Sancte Margarete, vulgariter vocatam The Bishop's Fee, in predicto burgo de Leicestriâ, quam infra parochias Sancte Marie, Sancti Leonardi, et Le Newark, in eodem burgo de Leicestriâ, per quodcunque aliud nomen vel alia nomina vocantur sive nominantur, necnon omnes burgenses, inhabitantes, commorantes, et residentes in eisdem parochiis et locis, sive in eorum aliquâ, pro tempore et de tempore in tempus existentes, de cetero in perpetuum sint, erunt, et reputabuntur fore sub regimine, potestate, gubernatione, jurisdictione, correctione, et coercione majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium burgi de Leicestriâ predicti et successorum suorum; et quod major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi de Leicestriâ predicti, et successores sui, deinceps in perpetuum habeant, gaudeant, et utantur omnibus et singulis eisdem et consimilibus juribus, libertatibus, preheminenciis, et jurisdictionibus, in omnibus et singulis eisdem parochiis Sancte Margarete, Sancte Marie, Sancti Leonardi, et Le Newark, qualia et que ac in tam amplis modo et formâ prout iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses, virtute harum literarum nostrarum patentium, aut aliorum progenitorum nostrorum, habere, uti, et gaudere possint aut debent in predicto burgo de Leicestriâ, aut in aliquo membro, parte, vel parcellâ ejusdem burgi; ita tamen quod hec presens concessio nostra non sit ad prejudicium nostri, heredum aut successorum nostrorum; salvis etiam omnibus et singulis corporibus corporatis et politicis, ac aliis personis quibuscunque, ac alii persone cuicunque, omnibus juribus, libertatibus, preheminenciis, et jurisdictionibus quibuscunque, al' quam predictis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus ut prefertur concessis, que ipsi aut eorum aliquis jure et legitimè habuerunt et gavisi fuerunt ante confectionem et tempore confectionis harum literarum nostrarum patentium, in tam amplis modo et formâ prout si he litere nostre patentes nunquam habite vel facte fuissent. Cumque nos informamur quod quamplurimum detrimentum et magna pericula et inconvenientia infra predictum burgum nostrum de Leicester quotidie existunt, ad terrorem burgensium et inhabitantium ibidem, ratione quod quedam persone, reipublice et status burgi predicti penitùs immemores, ac commodum suum proprium avidè respicientes et molientes, edificaverunt et construxerunt quasdam fornaces granorum, Anglicè vocat' Mault killnes, pro hordeo et alio grano ibidem operando, et exarando, in diversis partibus ejusdem burgi ubi eedem fornaces valdè incommodè et periculosè situantur, ad magnum periculum incendii, et combustionis domorum, edificiorum, bonorum, et catallorum, infra eundem burgum situatorum et existentium: Nos igitur, valdè cupientes remedium tempestivum in hâc parte providere, volumus, concessimus, et ordinavimus, et per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, volumus, concedimus, et ordinamus, quod nulla fornax granarum, Anglicè Mault kilne, de cetero edificetur aut construatur, aut in aliquâ parte predicti burgi de Leicester utatur, nisi eadem fornax granorum distet et situatur triginta ulnas ad minus ab omnibus structuris et edificiis vicinorum ibidem inhabitantium et commorantium, sub penâ forisfacture sex solidorum octo denariorum, forisfaciend' prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, per quemlibet personam offendentem in premissis, toties quoties aliqua talia offensa fieri contigerit. Et ulterius, pro majore relevamine, sustentatione, et manutentione pauperum et infirmorum hominum et mulierum infra eundem burgum de Leicester inhabitantium et commorantium, volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi de Leicester predicti, et successoribus suis, quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses, et successores sui, habeant et teneant, ac habere et tenere valeant et possint in perpetuum, unum mercatum lanarum in dicto burgo de Leicester, Anglicè vocatum A Wool Market, pro vendicione et emptione lane, fili lanei, et foraginis, simul cum omnibus proficuis, commoditatibus, emolumentis, et liberis consuetudinibus ad hujusmodi mercatum accidentibus, emergentibus, contingentibus, pertinentibus, et spectantibus, nisi mercatum illud sit ad nocumentum vicinorum mercatorum vel alicujus eorum; et quod bene licuerit et licitum erit unicuique subdito nostro, heredum vel successorum nostrorum, ad libitum et voluntatem suam, emere infra dictum burgum de Leicester quaslibet lanas, fila lanea, et foragines, adductas vel adducendas in dicto burgo de Leicester, diebus et temporibus constitutis et assuetis, quibus ferie, nundine, et mercata, sive eorum aliquod, ibidem tenebitur vel custodietur; et postea dictas lanas, fila lanea, sive foragines, sive earumdem aliquas, in dicto burgo Leicester, sive alibi infra regnum nostrum Anglie, vel infra aliqua alia dominia nostra, iterum vendere, vel aliter et aliquem alium usum convertere in proprium suum commodum et emolumentum, statuto de anno domini Edwardi nuper regis Anglie Sexti quinto, aut aliquo alio statuto, actu, ordinatione, prescriptione, consuetudine, sive aliquâ aliâ re, materiâ vel causâ quacumque, in contrarium inde non obstante. Et insuper volumus et precipimus, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, quod omnia et singula eadem tolneta, stallagia, piccagia, fines, amerciamenta, et omnia et singula alia proficua, commoditates, libere consuetudines, et emolumenta, provenientia, accidentia, emergentia, contingentia, pertinentia, sive spectantia dicto mercato lanario, capiantur, disponentur, et convertentur, ad opus, usum, commodum, et proficuum pauperum et infirmorum virorum et mulierum infra burgum de Leicester predictum. Et ulterius, de uberiori gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, dedimus, concessimus, et confirmavimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, damus, concedimus, et confirmamus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi de Leicester predicti, et successoribus suis, omnia et singula maneria, messuagia, terras, tenementa, et hereditamenta, libertates, liberas consuetudines, privilegia, franchesias, immunitates, exemptiones, quietantias, et jurisdictiones quecunque, que predicti major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi de Leicester predicti, aut que major et burgenses ejusdem burgi de Leicester, aut burgenses ejusdem burgi, per quecunque nomina sive per quodcunque nomen incorporationis, vel per quamcunque incorporationem, vel pretextu cujuscunque incorporationis, antehac jure et legitimè habuerunt, tenuerunt, usi vel gavisi fuerunt, aut habere, tenere, uti vel gaudere debuerunt, aut que infra burgum predictum, suburbia, limites, aut procinctus ejusdem, antehac legitimè habita, tent', usitat', vel gavis' fuerunt, ratione sive pretextu aliquarum chartarum aut literarum patentium per nos aut per aliquem progenitorum nostrorum, quoquo modo antehac factarum, confirmatarum, vel concessarum, seu quocunque alio legali modo, jure, consuetudine, usu, prescriptione, sive titulo, antehac legitimè usitato, habito, et consueto; habendum et gaudendum eisdem majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, et successoribus suis in perpetuum; reddendo inde annuatim nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, talia, hujusmodi, et consimilia redditus, servicia, denariorum summas, et demandas, que proinde nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, perantea debita, soluta, et de jure consueta fuerunt. Volumus etiam et concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod habeant, teneant, utantur, et gaudeant, ac plenè habere, tenere, uti, et gaudere possint et valeant in perpetuum, omnes libertates, liberas consuetudines, privilegia, authoritates, et quietantias predictas, secundùm tenorem et effectum harum literarum nostrarum patentium, sine occasione vel impedimento nostri, heredum vel successorum nostrorum quorumcunque; nolentes quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, vel eorum aliquis, sive aliqui burgenses burgi predicti, ratione premissorum, sive eorum alicujus, per nos, vel per heredes nostros, justiciarios, vicecomites, escaetores, aut alios ballivos sive ministros nostros, heredum seu successorum nostrorum quorumcunque, inde occasionentur, molestentur, vexentur, seu graventur, molestetur, occasionetur, vexetur, aut gravetur in aliquo, seu perturbetur. Volumus etiam, &c. absque fine in Hanaperio, &c. eo quod expressa mentio, &c. In cujus rei, &c. Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium, primo die Junii. Per Breve de privato sigillo, &c."[1]

June 21, 1599. Three soldiers (viz. two with muskets and one pike, having swords, daggers, blue coats lined with yellow cotton, and blue and yellow ribbon) were sent to Ashby de la Zouch, to the earl of Huntingdon, to join the country soldiers (being 100 in all) to go into Ireland.

Sept. 24. Thomas Warde, steward of the court, made free for a pottle of wine.

The Queen's clerk of the market, coming and examining the measures and weights, had 20*s.* reward.

41 Eliz. Edward Newcome mayor. Freemen, 49.

Quarter Sessions to be held, without dinner kept by the mayor; only he shall dine the recorder.

Sept. 29. Agreed that the glovers of the town shall weigh no wool at their houses, but only in the wool-hall, on pain of 6*s.* 8*d.*; and there sell it.

Oct. 24. Agreed, that all wool brought to this borough to be sold shall be weighed at the wool-hall, on pain of 3*s.* 4*d.* for every stone, &c.

Oct. 26. Agreed that all freemen (being tradesmen) shall, before St. Thomas's next, come and dwell within the liberties of the borough, or be disfranchised for ever.

Item, that no butcher of the county shall bring flesh to sell, without the hide, fell, skin, and tallow, of the same, on pain of 6*s.* 8*d.* to the chamber of Leicester.

---

[1] Rot. Pat. 41 Eliz. 1599, pars 1.

Ale under the sieve, 3*d.*; stale ale, 4*d.* the gallon. Candles, 4½*d. per* pound.

The fine for not wearing scarlet gowns on days appointed, altered from 10*s.* to 2*s.* 6*d.* for each default; and agreed, that they who ought to wear scarlet shall then wear caps (if then it rain not), upon the like pain of 2*s.* 6*d.* for each default.

The two companies, at every meeting at common halls, assize, sessions, and fairs, shall wear gowns and caps; the twenty-four on pain of 12*d.*, the forty-eight 6*d.* each.

Dec. 17. John Underwood, mace-bearer, being dead, there was chosen in his room Clement Charde.

Ordained, that no one shall set up to be a common brewer but by licence from the mayor and aldermen, on pain of 40*s.*

Jan. 2, 42 Eliz. At a common hall, agreed that the commissioners for sale of lands shall meet, within eight days, at the town-hall, and confer how to raise 200*l.* for setting the poor at work, and pay the town debts, on pain of 20*s.* for each making default.

Jan. 6. On Sunday, at a meeting of the twenty-four, agreed that the mayor proceed in suit (for maintenance of our charter) in restraint of foreign glovers from traffick in this borough.

Jan. 9. Agreed to sue forth process against the glovers of the country, which had been discharged from traffick in our market.

Jan. 15. At a meeting of the mayor, recorder, and twenty-four, agreed that John Wilne, gent. bailiff of Leicester, and Thomas Ward, the now steward, shall have their several offices assured to them for their lives by grants under the common seal.

Feb. 15. A letter from George earl of Huntingdon being read, wherein signifying that 100 footmen were charged on Leicestershire, he requires the town to furnish six; Mr. Mayor and others rode to the earl, and obtained a release of three: so as thereby the said burgh and the new liberties thereof were charged only with three soldiers; viz. a pike, a musket, a calyver.

Feb. 22. At a meeting of the mayor's brethren, a bond of 200*l.* was sealed, and delivered to John Wilne, gent. bailiff of the burgh, and alderman, under the town-seal, for the quiet enjoyment of his office for life; and also a patent to Thomas Warde, gent. steward of the court, and one of the aldermen, in consideration of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for the enjoyment of his office for life.

Mem. that the said Thomas Warde doth promise not to sell or assign over the said office to any person but whom the mayor and aldermen agree to.

March 19. At a common hall, agreed that John Woodford, baker, be high constable of this borough for the year following, according to statute 35 Eliz.

Also to continue keeping four post-horses; and allowed for each horse 26*s.* 8*d.*; whereof the twenty-four to pay 16*d.* each, and the forty-eight 8*d.*; and the commons to be taxed.

Thomas Wallis, gent. deputy to the Queen's clerk of the market, April 3, examined the standards of the town, and finding them just, had 10*s.* reward.

At a common hall, agreed that foreign tradesmen shall be restrained from traffick within our town; yet foreign tanners and fellmongers, upon consideration for their income and yearly pension, and the tanner bringing half as much tanned leather to be sold in our leather-hall, and the fellmonger half as much wool to our wool-hall, weekly, to be sold there as they buy in our market, may buy of our freemen butchers on Saturday market only, and not of any stranger, (fair-days only excepted) on pain for every offence of 6*s.* 8*d.*

N. B. Lands mentioned in Markham's lease are said to be parcel of the town-wall and ditch of the town of Leicester.

Item, agreed that the two last fifteenths and tenths be taxed as they have been; viz. the twenty-four 10*s.* and forty-eight 5*s.* apiece; and the commoners to be taxed and assessed.

May 1. Mr. Gyllot and Mr. Rowe put in election for the choice of mayor for the year to come.

Here are many orders about foreign glovers.

At a common hall, July 25, agreed that the whole stock of money for coals be bestowed in coals for the poor; and that the coals be laid at the town-hall; and if any remain unsold at the year's end, the succeeding chamberlains shall receive them, by weight, at 6*d.* the hundred; and this on forfeiture of 5*l.*

Certain persons were appointed to compound with country tradesmen for liberty of our market, so as none be compounded with under 10*s.* fine, and, quarterly, 5*s.* at least.

Aug. 14. It was agreed, by Mr. Mayor and some others, that Christopher Alisander and Henry Watts shall have the keeping of the wool-hall; and each to be bound with sureties to the Corporation in 2*l.* apiece for their honest behaviour; taking for every draught upon sale, one halfpenny, so as it be not above a todd; and for every draught of wool left with them, on trust, before sale, one farthing.

Francis Belgrave gave two swans to the borough, going at the Newark milnes, in lieu of a fine due from him.

Number of freemen this year, 34.

Sept. 21, there was chosen mayor Robert Gillot.

It is agreed, that hereafter, fifteenths shall be taxed by the parishes, every man according to his abilities; and so all other taxations hereafter to be taxed according to men's abilities.

Sept. 20. Mr. W. Rowe and Mr. James Ellyce in election for choice of the mayor for the year to come.

At a common hall, Oct. 7, agreed that the act made in the mayoralty of Mr. William Ludlam, for coming to sermons in the week-day, be put in execution; and such as make default, forfeit 12*d.*; and those that haunt ale-houses in sermon-time forfeit, for every default, 12*d.* apiece, and the alehouse-keeper 3*s.* 4*d.*: strangers in their travail only excepted.

Also, agreed that there shall be a cage presently made, and to be set up in the place called the Barrel Cross, or near thereabouts.

Ale under the sieve at 4*d.* the gallon; and stale ale, a wine quart at 1*d.* how strong soever it be: and so in 1601.

Certain persons took the fines of the forfeitures of butchers of the country that do not bring their hides, tallow, skins, and fells, of such bowlks as they bring to our market to sell for the year ensuing, paying 40*s.*: the payment to be quarterly.

The earl of Huntingdon, by letter, charged six persons named by him to furnish a soldier.

Jan. 16, 43 Eliz. At a common hall, it was agreed that the town shall be at half the charge of the said soldier, to be sent into Ireland; to be paid by the chamberlains, notwithstanding the said letter.

[It appears that the town, about this time, had a suit with Mr. Lister, about the closes in the Frith near the Forest of Leicester, parcel of the Grange called Newark Grange.]

March 6. At a common hall, Thomas Cotton, gent. shall be accepted a free burgess of Leicester; and granted, that he shall not bear any office in this borough without his own consent.

John Heyrick is released 40*s.* of his fine of 5*l.* for redemption of the chamberlainship, and shall pay only 3*l.*

Freemen 26.

Sept. 21, 1601, William Rowe chosen mayor.

Sept. 29. Agreed that Edmund Hunt shall dress the town armour, and have 20*s. per annum*; and have leather found by the town for the same.

Oct. 20, 44 Eliz. At a common hall, for the parliament to be held Oct. 27, there were chosen burgesses George Belgrave, esq. and William Heyrick, esq.

Also it is agreed that every alderman keep in his house two leather buckets, and the forty-eight one apiece, at their own charge, and the able commoners one apiece; and every alderman look to his ward for performance hereof.

For choice of the mayor for the year to come, Mr. James Ellyce and Mr. Hunter.

Nov. 20. Agreed, that the owner or landlord of any tenement repair the pavement against the same, on pain of 6*s*. 8*d*. [This is one of the earliest instances of any charges respecting the pavement.]

Agreed, that every landlord taking a stranger to be his tenant shall give bond to the Corporation, that they shall not be chargeable to the town, or else to discharge them, on pain of 40*s*.

Item, at every of the common gates there shall be a ladder and a hook remaining, for danger of fire; to be made ready by the chamberlains.

Item, the Cow Pasture let from this day till a fortnight before Lady-day, for 40*s*.

Item, every alderman to cause search to be made in his ward in the ale-houses for tippling in sermon and service time, and present the offenders to the mayor.

Dec. 16. At a common hall, a letter read from Hugh Atwell, parson of St. Tew, in Cornwall; by which it appears that he gave 3*l*. to Leicester, to set the poor at work.

Mr. Ralph Chettel, one of the aldermen, deceased, gave 5*l*. to be yearly bestowed in coals for the use of the poor, which is ordered to be so employed for ever.

Dec. 18. At a common hall, a composition being proposed with Mr. Lister, about the closes, it was agreed to give him 60*l*. or more; but not above 100 marks.

May 28. At a common hall, agreed that the coal money (which is 17*l*. 10*s*.) be made up 20*l*.; and that John Clarke, one of the serjeants at mace, lay at the town hall 63 quarters before Michaelmas next, and to serve the poor for 6*d*. the hundred; and on Low Sunday shall pay back the coal-money to the chamberlains, and 40*s*. for use of the hall, balance, and weights.

Aug. 26. Mr. Pilkington was made free, paid 10*s*., and was chosen of the forty-eight, and fined for the redemption of the chamberlainship 40*s*.; and then was presently made a mayor's brother.

Sept. 21, chosen mayor Jacob Ellice. Freemen, 27.

The wayts, because they cannot agree together, are now dismissed from being the town wayts.

Candles assized at 4½*d*. per pound.

Nov. 26, 45 Eliz. There was delivered to Mr. Mayor twelve silver spoons, which Mr. William Heyrick, of London, gave to the town in lieu of 10*s*. for his freedom.

Jan. 28. At a common hall, agreed that George Ridgeley, and his company (being five in all) be, upon his good behaviour, admitted the town wayts, and have their wages, quarterly, of the twenty-four 6*d*. apiece; and of the forty-eight, quarterly, 3*d*. apiece; and of the other inhabitants what they of their kindness will give.

Mem. On Saturday, March 26, 1603, was proclaimed, in open market in Leicester, by the mayor and his brethren, the death of the Queen's Majesty (who died on Wednesday night, March 24), and the King of Scots proclaimed.

Mem. that at the request of Mr. Mayor, Henry Hastings, esq. son and heir apparent of sir Edward Hastings, knt. did read the proclamation to the publisher thereof, both in the open market at Gainsborough chamber, at the High Cross, in the presence of Mr. Mayor, and divers of his brethren, and many gentlemen of the county of Leicester.

Another proclamation, sent by the lords, from London, was published on Saturday, April 2, by the mayor, lord Hastings, and high sheriff, &c.; and was read by the lord Hastings.

JAMES I.

May 9, 1 Jac. Mr. William Stanley, in open court, took the oaths of a mayor's brother, &c.; and thereupon, according to ancient custom, was called by Mr. Mayor to the bench, and for that present was set next to Mr. Mayor during the said court.

Mem. Mr. Thomas Cotton, gent. deceased, gave 5*l*. for coals; so that the sum of the stock for coals now is 27*l*. The chamberlains are to serve the poor with coals, on Wednesdays and Fridays, at 6*d*. the hundred; and on the 4th of May are to pay 40*s*. over and above the said 27*l*. for use of the coal-house, scales and weights: so the whole sum they are to pay is 29*l*.

Item, agreed that the twenty-four shall give 4*d*. apiece, and the forty-eight 2*d*. apiece, to repair the North bridge.

Agreed, that every householder repair the pavement belonging to their houses, and paint the street-side of their houses: if they have not ability to do it, they are to be relieved by their landlords.

June 10. [It being expected that the Queen and Prince would come to Leicester in their way to London;] at a common hall, it was thought fit to give a present to her Majesty, and another to the Prince: and it was agreed to take up 40*l*. to that use, without any taxation.

Sunday, June 19. At a meeting of the aldermen, it was agreed that the mayor, and six of the antient brethren which have been mayors, shall meet the Queen on horseback; and the chief mace-bearer to ride, and the rest of the twenty-four to go on foot, and the other serjeants.

The present appointed; first, one standing cup with a cover of silver double gilt, to be given the Queen's Majesty; and one other like cup, with a cover of silver double gilt, to be given to the Prince.

Mem. On Thursday, June 23, Queen Anne and Prince Henry came from Ashby de la Zouch (from the earl of Huntingdon's) to Leicester, and lay that night at sir William Skipwith's house; and the Princess, the king's daughter, came to Leicester on Wednesday night next before, and lay at Mr. Pilkington's house: and the Queen, Prince, and Princess, went from Leicester on Friday, June 24, to Dingley, sir Thomas Griffin's house.

Mem. That Mr. Mayor and his company received the Queen beyond the West bridge, viz. between the said bridge and the corner as far as the old liberties go, standing along by the Freer wall side, where Mr. Mayor presented to her the bigger and fairer of the said cups, and to the Prince the other cup; and did present the Princess at her lodging with wine and sugar, whom, upon Wednesday night, he met, and conducted to her lodging.

Mem. That there was no oration made to the Queen; for that the recorder, who for that purpose came that Thursday morning from Boney, fell sick at Leicester, where he remained sick till Sunday next after, and then went home sick.

Fees paid to the King's officers attending her Majesty.

To the gentleman usher, 40*s*.; yeoman usher 20*s*.; litterman, 20*s*.; porter, 10*s*.; trumpeters, 40*s*.; the groom of the chamber, 20*s*.; yeoman of the stirrup, 20*s*.; footman, 20*s*.; herbengers, 20*s*.; the Queen's whey maker, 13*s*. 4*d*. Summa totalis, 11*l*. 3*s*. 4*d*.

Mem. That Richard Parkyns, esq. died at Boney, July 3.

July 4. At a meeting of the twenty-four, it was agreed to make an assessment towards the relief of the people commanded to keep their houses on suspicion of the sickness, and towards relief of persons in the town gaol: viz. that the twenty-four pay each 4*d*. per week, and the forty-eight 2*d*., and the best commoners 1*d*.; and to be weekly collected by the alderman and constable of every ward, and paid to the mayor every Friday; and they that refuse to pay to be committed till they pay.

Mr. Ellis, mayor, released Henry Palmer from the company of forty-eight; for that his master Mr. Francis Presgrave (notary and register for the archdeaconry of Leicester) told Mr. Mayor, if he would not release him from being of that company, then he must discharge him of his service and office he holdeth under the said Francis, and would retain some other to supply his place; and said, that the Bishop of Lincoln (at his being at Leicester to meet the Queen and Prince) was greatly offended with him, for that the said Henry did not then attend in the Bishop's livery.

At a meeting of the aldermen, July 8, John Stanford, of Barkby, esq. was chosen recorder, and admitted July 11.

Aug. 4. At a meeting of the aldermen, Mr. Christopher Tamworth exhibited a patent of the stewardship of the court of Leicester, granted to him by sir John Fortescue, knt. chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster; and requested the mayor not to seal or allow any writs except they come from him.

The controversy about this matter is by Mr. Tamworth left for a time to Mr. Recorder, to be advised whether the title of the said Mr. Tamworth under the Dutchy seal, or the title of the town under the great seal of England, be best.

Freemen, 27.

Michaelmas day, 1603, Mr. Hugh Hunter mayor.

Agreed, that George Ridgley, and his company (being the town wayts) shall have, for their wages, of the twenty-four 8*d.* and of the forty-eight 4*d.* apiece, quarterly, and of the commonalty as hath been used.

Ale under the sieve 3*d.* and stale ale at 4*d.* the gallon; candles 3*d.* the pound.

Nov. 25. At a common hall, agreed to give Mr. John Stanford, our recorder, 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* yearly, for his fee of recordership. He died Dec. 1, 1603.

On Monday, Dec. 12, a privy seal was served on Mr. Mayor, by Mr. Tamworth, about the stewardship.

Dec. 14. At a meeting of the aldermen, Mr. Serjeant Nicolls was chosen recorder.

Agreed to give William Dethicke, their clerk, a gown, at the town's charge.

Dec. 28. At a common hall: Whereas Mr. Tamworth hath served a privy seal, or injunction on Mr. Mayor, to suffer the said Mr. Tamworth to enjoy the office of stewardship, or else to appear in the Dutchy chamber this next term to answer the same; it is now agreed, that Mr. Mayor shall answer the same according to our counsel, and the direction of our recorder.

[N. B. Some were appointed touching the inclosure of the South Fields, &c.]

Feb. 20. Henry Palmer made one of the forty-eight.

Feb. 28. Mr Augustine Nicolls, serjeant at law, was sworn recorder.

March 1. At a common hall, there were chosen, for burgesses of the parliament to be held March 19, sir Henry Beaumont, de Gracedieu, knight, and sir William Skipwith, knt.

Mem. that, before these two were chosen burgesses for the town, they were made freemen; sir Henry in Mr. Ellis's mayoralty, and sir William this year; and paid 6*l.* apiece for their freedom.

May 2, 2 Jac. At a common hall, agreed that the 20 nobles heretofore allowed to Mr. Ellis, late mayor (over and besides the old fee,) shall not be allowed neither to him, nor any other mayor hereafter.

Also, it is agreed to allow Mr. Morton 13*s.* 4*d.* of the 26*s.* 8*d.* he bestowed in repairing of the High Cross against her Majesty's coming to Leicester with the Prince.

[The chamberlains' order to receive the stock of money for coals of the late chamberlains, 29*l.*; and of the executors of Mr. Rowe, 5*l.*; and of the executors of Mr. Thomas Clarke 5*l.*; given to that use: so the whole stock is 39*l.* And they are to provide Cole Overton coals, and sell to the poor at 6*d.* per hundred; and must pay, for the use of the coal-house, &c. 40*s.*, May 4; and to buy no coals in the town, or coming to the town.]

June 15. At a common hall, agreed that, upon default of coming to the town-hall, or not coming at the hour appointed, they shall forfeit, the twenty-four 6*d.* and the forty-eight 3*d.* apiece, although they come afterwards; and none to come in their cloaks, upon the pains aforesaid.

Freemen, 29.

Sept. 29, 1604, Mr. Thomas Chettle mayor.

Oct. 12. Commissioners being appointed for settling and letting lands, &c.; ordered that none of the said commissioners shall be takers of any thing to be let, neither for themselves or others, but by the consent of a common hall.

Jan. 18. Agreed, at a common hall, that what townsman soever or other shall put into the Cow Pasture or South Fields any more beasts or sheep than they ought, either by their freedom or otherwise, shall forfeit to the chamber of the town, for every beast, 2*s.*; and the farmers of the Grange, for every sheep, 6*d.*; and that none that keep teams (except the farmers) shall put their draught horses into the meadows or South Fields of Leicester, at any time in the year, upon pain of 2*s.* for every horse, &c.

In this year the Corporation of Leicester had a renewal and confirmation of their charter[1]; which cost them 376*l.* 10*s.*

March 17. At a meeting of aldermen, agreed to give Henry now earl of Huntingdon, against the funeral of George late earl of Huntingdon, a present; viz. six fat wethers, and to be presently sent to his lordship at Ashby de la Zouch.

King James, by his letters patent, dated April 17, 1605, reciting that Queen Elizabeth, by her letters patent, dated the 1st of June, in the 41st year of her reign, did give power to the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, to make reasonable laws for the preservation, government, disposing, setting, and letting, of the lands of the said Corporation; doth, by these letters patent, grant to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, that the mayor and aldermen, and 24 of the antientest of the company of the forty-eight, or the greater part of them, shall have power and authority to make laws for the better preservation, government, disposing, setting, and letting, of the lands or tenements; and that all and every act and order for the making of any writing, instrument, or deed, containing any grant, demise, conveyance, or assurance of any of the lands or tenements, or for or concerning the disposing of any of the rents, revenues, or annuities, whereupon the common seal is to be put; that all such grants, leases, or assurances, unless they be in the presence, or with the consent, of the said mayor and aldermen, and 24 of the antientest of the said forty-eight, shall be void; and that the common seal of the borough aforesaid shall not be put to any deed, grant, or assurance, but by the consent, and in the presence of the said mayor and aldermen, and 24 of the antientest of the company of the forty-eight, or of the major part of them; with a strict command of the performance of this his Majesty's last ordinance, upon pain that every offender contrary to the said order shall undergo such pains, forfeitures, and imprisonments, as by the laws or statutes of the land may be inflicted upon contemners of his Majesty's royal command: And further granted to the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, to hold in the Guildhall, or in any other convenient place in the said borough a court of record, upon Monday weekly, or oftener, before the mayor, recorder and aldermen, or any three of them, whereof the mayor to be one; and giveth them power to hold plea of all actions of trespass vi & armis or otherwise, and all manner of actions of the case, debt, account, covenant, detinue, of charters, writings, minnuments, or chattels, taking and detaining of cattle, and other contracts, of what causes whatsoever arising within the said borough, in such and in as large and ample manner and form as hath been used in the said borough; and giveth them power, upon a writ of right patent, to hold plea of any real action within the said court, and to award such process upon every such action, as well real as personal, as is awardable by the common law, or is used in any other borough or town corporate (non obstante the former or any other letters patent, or any use, custom, prescription, or other thing to the contrary); saving to the King all and singular perquisites, profits, issues, fines, amerciaments, pains, and forfeitures (after Edmond's lease), arising or to be set in the said court of record; of which said perquisites, profits, &c. the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, are to yield account before the auditor, and to pay all which belongeth to the King to the particular receiver of the Duchy of Lancaster, reserving to themselves the accustomed fees; and further reciting a former patent made to John Wilne of the bailiwick of the said borough, to hold at the King's pleasure; and another patent, made to Christopher Tanworth, of the stewardship, to hold also at the King's pleasure; determineth his will and grant to the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors; and ordaineth, that the mayor and aldermen of the said borough, and their successors, or the major part of them, whereof the mayor to be one, shall have power and authority in full court to name, chuse, appoint, admit, and swear, one sufficient and fit person, to be steward or clerk of the said borough, and such or so many sufficient and fit persons to be bailiff or bailiffs of the said borough, and keeper of the gaol there; and also such or so many attorneys and bailiffs, and other inferior officers and ministers of the court aforesaid; and the clerk of the peace within the said borough to be attendant, as well within the court aforesaid, as elsewhere within the said borough, as often as need shall be requisite, as the mayor and aldermen, or the major part of them, shall think necessary, and hath been used within the said borough or court; and that the said steward, bailiff, and other officers, shall take such fees for the executing of their offices as of antient time hath been lawfully taken; with proviso, that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, or their deputies, shall yearly make account, to the auditor of the premisses, of all the fines, amerciaments, pains, forfeitures, profits, and revenues, of the town and borough aforesaid, and shall pay all that belongeth to the King to the particular receiver thereof, saving and reserving to themselves the accustomed fees: And further, for the better maintaining of the privileges of the Duchy within the said borough and honour of Leicester, the mayor for the time being, upon Monday next after Martlemas day in winter, take his oath, before the steward of Leicester, at the Castle of Leicester, betwixt the hours of ten and eleven of the clock in the forenoon; and he shall well and truly observe, keep, and perform, all and singular antient customs, jurisdictions, privileges, and pre-eminences, of the Duchy of Lancaster, within the said borough of Leicester, for and during the time of his mayoralty, to his knowledge and skill; And reciting, that whereas the said late Queen Elizabeth, by her said letters patent, hath, for the better relief of the poor of the said town, granted unto the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, that they shall, for ever hereafter, hold one wool-market, for the buying and selling of wool, thread, and yarn, with all profits and commodities to the said market belonging, but no certain day therein limited for the holding of the said market; it is granted, that the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, shall hold the said wool-market within the said borough every Wednesday and Saturday, at their pleasures: It is granted to the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, that the mayor and aldermen, and justices of the peace, or the major part of them, whereof the mayor to be one, shall and may punish whores, bawds, harlots, and common scolds, there dwelling, as well by presentment of twelve men, as by other means which to them shall seem most fit, as heretofore hath been used within the said borough: And further grants and confirms unto them all the same liberties, immunities, exemptions, jurisdictions, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, or the mayor and burgesses of the borough and town of Leicester, by whatsoever name incorporate, did ever lawfully hold and enjoy, or might have held and enjoyed, as well within the liberties as without, through the whole realm, of an estate of inheritance, any non-use, or abuser or misuser, notwithstanding; rendering to the King, his heirs and successors, all such rents as have been usually paid, or ought to be paid, for the same: And therefore wills and ordains that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, and their successors, shall hold the said liberties, authorities, jurisdictions, and privileges, without let or hindrance of the said King, his heirs or successors, or of the justices, sheriffs, bailiffs, or other ministers of the King, his heirs or successors; forbidding that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, or any of them, by reason of the premisses, be hindered or disturbed by us, our heirs or successors, or by our justices, &c.; and also granting that neither the said mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, or their successors, or any of them, for the not using, abusing, or misusing, of any of the liberties, franchises, or jurisdictions, of the said borough, at any time before the date hereof, shall be molested, troubled, or caused to answer, by any of the justices or officers aforesaid. [See the charter of 7 Jac. I.]

---

[1] Records in the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's office. 7 Pars Original. 3 Jac. I. Rot. 46.

Sept. 4, 1605, 3 Jac. [The yard lands were set at 6l. 13*s.* 4*d.* apiece, with a fine.]

Ralph Chettel's licence for drawing wine in Leicester was confirmed, and his fine taxed 20*s.*; and his rent, 4*l.* per annum. The like licence was granted to William Ive and George Rowe, on the same terms.

Sept. 29, Mr. Robert Heyrick, mayor, sworn. Freemen, 32.

Sir Henry Hastings, being tenant to the Castle mills, would not have the North mills nor Newark mills to have any grinding of malt or other corn, but to his sufferance: [hereupon the said sir Henry commenced a suit.]

Oct. ult. At a common hall, in room of sir Henry Beaumont, of Gracedieu, deceased, there was chosen for a burgess sir William Heyrick, knt.

Dec. 11. At a common hall; ordered, that every country butcher that brings flesh to this market to sell, and doth not bring his hides, skins, fells, and tallow, shall forfeit each time 6*s.* 8*d.*

Dec. 13. At a meeting of the aldermen, upon the death of Clement Charde, mace-bearer, there was chosen in his room Richard Beswicke, gent.; and Henry Palmer, notary publick, promised to give bond that the said mace-bearer should truly pay to the chamberlains all such sums as he, by reason of his office, shall receive for the use of the Corporation.

Mr. Robert Heyrick, mayor, Jan. 22, bought, for the use of the parlour at the town-hall, a pair of tongues, 14*d.*; a pair of bellows, 16*d.*

25 June, 4 Jac. At a common hall, it is agreed that the mayor for the time being shall have to his own use the docket-money.

Item, agreed that the mace-bearer shall now have a gown given him, and so every third year (a livery gown), at the town's charge.

In this year the expences of the toll-charter were 109*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.*

Aug. 13. It is agreed that Mr. Jesson Clarke, stipendiary minister of the parish church of St. Mary in Leicester, shall be tenant to the town of the Easter book, or dues, of St. Mary's parish, and of the tithe-pigs and chrisoms, as Richard Normond had them; and shall also have the mortuaries, from Michaelmas next, from year to year, upon his honest behaviour, during the town's pleasure, not exacting any tithes in other sort than heretofore they have been paid at Easter; paying yearly to the town, upon Tuesday in Easter week, 40*s.*; and shall also pay, from henceforth, the 2*s.* per annum which is due of the vicarage of St. Nicholas in Leicester.

Sept. 29, 1606, 4 Jac. Lebbeus Chamberlin mayor. Freemen, 17.

Jan. 30, 4 Jac. At a common hall, it is agreed that none of either of the two companies shall be compelled to pay towards any plays, but such of them as shall be then present at the said plays (the players of the King, Queen, Prince, or of any lord of the privy council, excepted): to these they are to pay according to the antient custom, having warning by the mace-bearer to be at every such play.

March 20. At a common hall, agreed that no land, from henceforth, be let in fee-farm, but only by lease for 21 years.

Also, agreed that the chamberlains that hereafter shall be, shall collect all the town's rents whatsoever, and shall have, yearly, for their pains, 20 nobles a-year, with their old fee; and all arreirage or . . . . rents any of them shall upon their accompts bring in . . . . to be stopt upon their said fee.

Also, agreed that if at any time any of the twenty-four come to a common hall in their cloaks, they shall forfeit 12*d.* apiece; and any of the forty-eight, for like offence, 6*d.* apiece.

Aug. 14, 5 Jac. At a common hall, agreed that no person shall winnow any corn within any of the streets within this borough, on pain of 5*s.* for every default, to be paid by the owner of the corn or grain, to the use of the chamber of the town; and for default of payment thereof to the chamberlains, the offender to be committed to ward, there to remain till he pay the same.

Item, agreed to give to the earl of Huntingdon and his countess, and the countess of Derby, a tierce of claret wine, and four gallons of sack, and two sugar-loaves of six or seven pounds apiece.

In 1607, 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* of charges were incurred in suppressing of unruly people who assembled to lay open inclosed grounds[1]; and a further charge of 10*l.* 10*s.* was paid for two barrels of gunpowder for the use of the town, by the command of the lord lieutenant the earl of Huntingdon, to compel the people of Leicester to desist from such practices. But this was no way effectual; for another charge occurs of 15*l.* 15*s.* expended by the mayor and Mr. Gilliot, and others, who went to Cottesbach to quell an unlawful assembly there and in the neighbourhood, who were destroying the fences of inclosed grounds. By the command of the lord lieutenant, a gibbet was set upon the Corn-wall in Leicester, to deter the people from assembling on those accounts; which was torn down by the mob. This brought down on Mr. Mayor and Mr. Robert Erick the anger of the earl of Huntingdon, who caused them to be confined in their own houses, for not preventing or suffering the gibbet to be taken down without his warrant.

A charge of 3*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* occurs also this year, being the expences of Chamberlain Walker, who was sent to London with letters to Mr. Recorder, concerning the imprisoning Mr. Mayor and Mr. Erick. What the issue of this was does not appear; but the Corporation was desirous to appease the earl's wrath; for a Mr. Hunter was sent, by the appointment of the mayor and his brethren, to Ashby de la Zouch, to present a gelding to the younger countess of Huntingdon for her use, as a token of their contrition. The gelding was not received by the countess; for we find that it was kept there twelve weeks at the Corporation's expence, in hopes that time would have favoured their offer.

Sept. 29, 1607, 5 Jac. Thomas Jackson mayor. Freemen, 25.

Ale under the sieve at 3½*d.* the gallon, and candles at 3*d.* the pound.

Agreed, that the mace-bearer shall have a gown this year, and henceforth a gown-cloth every third year, at the town's charge; and the other serjeants to have gown cloths given them, according to the order heretofore made in Mr. George Tatam's mayoralty. [Which is every fourth year.]

It is further agreed, that henceforth no stranger shall be made a freeman under the sum of 10*l.* upon pain of the chamberlains that do admit any under that sum to forfeit so much out of their own purses as they abate of the same sum of 10*l.*

[N. B. Here ends the writing of William Dethick, town-clerk; but he still continued being mentioned among the officers, Sept. 21, 1608.]

Sept. 29, 1608, 6 Jac. Jacob Andrewe mayor. Freemen, 31.

At a meeting of the aldermen (not dated), it is ordered that Roger Halfeilde shall be the clerk to the mayor of this borough, and clerk of the peace of the said borough, during the pleasure of the said mayor and aldermen, so long as the said Roger shall well demean and carry himself in the said office; and that the said Roger shall give such a sum of money to the said town for the said office, as Mr. James Andrew, now mayor, Mr. Robert Heyrick, &c. shall think meet, and assess; and, upon the conditions aforesaid, the said Roger Halfield is at this meeting chosen to the said office, and sworn to execute it.

An expence of 107*l.* 6*s.* was occasioned in a suit about the tolls taken in Leicester; and 96*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* was paid in Hilary Term concerning the charter, which in March 1609 was ready for the great seal of England; but the lord chancellor would not suffer the great seal to pass, because he discovered a clause which empowered the mayors to choose a deputy. Great interest was made to obtain the lord chancellor's consent; which proved ineffectual: it was therefore drawn anew, leaving out that clause. The expence then 109*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*

"Paid, for mulberry trees[2] commanded to be bought and set in divers counties in the realm, by letters from the lords of his Majesty's privy council, 1*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*"

Sept. 29, 1609, 7 Jac. Thomas Parker mayor. Freemen, 32.—The recorder was not present at the election of this mayor.—This year the Plague raged in Leicester.—Sir Thomas White's arms were ordered and put up in the town-hall this year.

Feb. 19, 7 Jac. At a meeting of the twenty-four, and 24 of the eldest of the forty-eight. Whereas Henry earl of Huntingdon hath offered the master or wardenship of the Hospital in the Newark of Leicester to the town of Leicester, paying the same sum to his Honour as his lordship did give and pay to William Fowkes, late master of the said Hospital; it is at this meeting agreed, that the town of Leicester shall have and take the said master and wardenship, and give that sum of money to the said earl as he paid to the said William Fowkes; and to have the patent made in the name of the mayor of Leicester for the time being, and so successively.

March 28, 1610. At a common hall, agreed that the fee of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* due to the master of the Hospital in the Newark of Leicester, shall yearly come and be to the use of the chamber of the town of Leicester; and as the poor in the house shall die, one other poor person of the town shall be chosen to supply that room, which person shall be chosen by the mayor and twenty-four, or greater part of them; and the poor of every parish to be placed one parish after another; and special regard be had of the parishes where most poor are.

In this year the following renewal of the charter[3] was obtained from King James.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Cum precharissima soror nostra domina Elizabetha, nuper regina Anglie, per quasdam literas suas patentes sub magno sigillo suo Anglie confectas, gerentes datum apud Westmonasterium, primo die Junii, anno regni sui quadragesimo primo, inter alia, voluerit & concesserit majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi de Leicestrie & successoribus suis, quod major & aldermanni ejusdem burgi, & successores sui pro tempore existentes, vel major pars eorundem, haberent plenam potestatem & auctoritatem condendi, constituendi, ordinandi, & faciendi, de tempore in tempus, hujusmodi leges, statuta, & ordinationes rationabilia quecumque, que eis bona, salubria, utilia, honesta, & necessaria, juxta eorum sanas discretiones, fore viderentur, pro meliori preservatione, gubernatione, dispositione, locatione, & dimissione terrarum, tenementorum, possessionum, revencionum, & hereditamentorum, prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus, & successoribus suis, antetunc dat', concess', assignat', sive confirmat', aut adtunc in posterum dand', concedend', sive assignand', prout per easdem literas patentes inter alia plenius liquet & apparet. Sciatis tamen quod nos, publicum bonum & emolumentum burgi predicti gra-

---

[1] "Insurrection in Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, &c. in 1607." See Wharton's Almanack for 1667, in Chronological Events.

[2] "In my time there have not been less than ten or twelve large mulberry-trees cut down in Leicester: probably some of those set at that time." Throsby.

[3] See p. 418.

tiose

tiosè affectantes, & humilem petitionem nunc majoris, ballivi, & burgensium burgi predicti; de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ & mero motu nostris, volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi de Leicestriâ predicti, & successoribus suis; ac etiam, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, ordinamus perpetuis futuris temporibus, quod major, aldermanni, & viginti quatuor de senioribus de quadraginta octo burgensibus burgi predicti, vocati "The Company of eighte and fortie," & successores sui, aut major pars eorundem majoris, aldermannorum, & viginti quatuor de senioribus de quadraginta octo burgensibus ejusdem burgi vocatis "The Company of eighte and fortie," de tempore in tempus in perpetuum habeant & habebunt plenam, potestatem & auctoritatem condendi, constituendi, ordinandi, & faciendi, de tempore in tempus, hujusmodi leges, statuta, & ordinationes rationabilia quecunque, que eis aut eorum majori parti bona, salubria, utilia, honesta, & necessaria, juxta eorum sanas discretiones, fore videbuntur, pro meliore preservatione, dispositione, gubernatione, locatione, & dimissione, terrarum, tenementorum, possessionum, revencionum, & hereditamentorum, prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi predicti, & successoribus suis, antehac dat', concess', assignat', seu confirmat', aut in posterum dand', concedend', sive assignand', predictis literis patentibus, aut aliquibus aliis literis patentibus, aut aliquo usu, prescriptione, aut aliquâ aliâ re, causâ, vel materiâ quâcunque, in contrarium inde in aliquo non obstante. Et ulterius volumus, ac pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ & mero motu nostris, per presentes statuimus, ordinamus, & concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus, & successoribus suis, quod quelibet actus, ordinatio, sive constitutio in posterum facienda vel agreanda per predictos majorem, aldermannos, & viginti quatuor de senioribus de quadraginta octo burgensibus burgi predicti, vocatis "The Company of eighte and forty," aut majorem partem eorundem, ut supradictum est, pro & concernens confectionem aliquorum scriptorum, instrumentorum, sive factorum, continentium aliquam concessionem, dimissionem, locationem, conveianciam, assuranciam, aut dispositionem, aliquarum terrarum, tenementorum, sive hereditamentorum, parcellarum possessionum ejusdem burgi, aut pro sive concernens dispositionem reddituum, revencionum, & annuitatum quarumcunque, eisdem majori, ballivis, & burgensibus, spectantium sive pertinentium, quibus quidem scriptis, factis, sive instrumentis concessionum, dimissionum, locationum, conveianciarum, conventionum, assuranciarum, sive dispositionum, commune sigillum dicti burgi appendi aut effigi necessarium fuerit per leges hujus regni nostri Anglie, quod tunc & toties, ac in omnibus hujusmodi casibus, omnes & singuli hujusmodi actus, concessiones, dimissiones, locationes, conveiancie, & assurancie, nisi sint per assensum & consensum & in presentiâ predictorum majoris, aldermannorum, & viginti quatuor de senioribus quadraginta octo burgensium vocat' "The Companie of the eighte and forty," burgi predicti pro tempore existentium, vel majoris partis eorundem, ut supradictum est, vacuè & nullius effectûs erunt ad onerandum vel ligandum dictos majorem, ballivos, & burgenses ejusdem burgi, vel successores suos; & quod commune sigillum burgi predicti dictis actis, concessionibus, dimissionibus, locationibus, conveianceis, assuranceis, dispositionibus, scriptis, instrumentis, ac factis, vel eorum aliquibus vel alicui, non erit appensum aut affixum, nisi per assensum & consensum & in presenciâ predictorum majoris, aldermannorum, & viginti quatuor de senioribus de predictis quadraginta & octo burgensibus burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, aut majoris partis eorundem, ut supradictum est. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, firmiter precipimus & mandamus prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi predicti, & successoribus suis, quod ipsi & eorum quilibet, de tempore in tempus in perpetuum, benè, firmiter, & inviolabiliter observabunt & perimplebunt hanc nostram ultimam ordinationem & concessionem in omnibus, secundùm veram intentionem ejusdem; & quod omnes persone offendentes & delinquentes contra formam & effectum ejusdem ordinationum & concessionum incurrent & subibunt tales penas, penalitates, forisfacturas, & imprisonamenta, qualia per aliquas leges & statuta hujus regni nostri Anglie infligi & imponi possint versus contemptores & neglectores mandati nostri regalis in eâ parte. Et ulterius volumus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, & burgensibus burgi predicti, & successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui de cetero in perpetuum habeant & teneant, ac habere & tenere valeant & possint, in Guildhall ejusdem burgi, sive in aliquo alio loco conveniente infra burgum predictum, unam curiam de recordo, in die Lune in quâlibet septimanâ, vel sepius ad eorum libitum, coram majore, recordatore, & aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel aliquibus tribus eorum, quorum majorem burgi predicti pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus; & quod in curiâ illâ tenere possint, per querelam in eâdem curiâ levandam, omnia & omnimoda placita, querelas, & actiones, de quibuscunque transgressionibus vi & armis, seu aliter, in contemptu nostri, heredum vel successorum nostrorum, facta seu facienda, ac de omnibus & omnimodis placitis super casum, debitis, compotibus, conventionibus, detentionibus cartarum, scriptorum, munimentorum, & catallorum, captionibus & detentionibus aver' & catallorum, & aliorum contractuum, ex quibuscumque causis sive rebus, infra burgum predictum, limites & precinctus ejusdem, emergentibus sive contingentibus, in talibus, hujusmodi, & consimilibus, ac in tam amplis modo & formâ, prout perantea in eodem burgo consuetum & usitatum fuit; & quod quoties aliqua persona sive alique persone quecunque aliquam aliam personam sive personas quascumque, terras, tenementa, redditus, sive hereditamenta, infra burgum predictum, limites & precinctus ejusdem, possidentes sive tenentes, de eisdem terris, tenementis, redditibus, & hereditamentis, implacitare voluerit seu voluerint, toties ipse vel ipsi sic implacitare volens seu volentes breve nostrum de recto patentem è curiâ nostrâ Cancellarie Anglie emanentem, prefatis majori, recordatori, & aldermannis burgi predicti dirigendum prosequantur; super quo quidem brevi, in curiâ predictâ, coram majore, recordatore, & aldermannis burgi predicti, aut aliquibus tribus eorum, quorum majorem burgi predicti pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus, ipse vel ipsi, sic ut prefertur implacitare volens sive volentes, faciet sive facient protestationem suam ad sequendum querelam suam super breve predictum factam, in naturâ brevis assise, nove disseisine, mortis antecessoris, attincture, aut in naturâ alicujus alterius actionis sive brevis cujuscunque ad communem legem, prout materia & casus exigit; & quod hujusmodi placita, querele, & actiones, tam reales quam personales & mixte, ibidem audientur & determinabantur, coram majore, recordatore, & aldermannis burgi predicti, aut aliquibus tribus eorum, quorum majorem burgi predicti pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus, in predictâ curiâ tenendâ in Guildhall burgi predicti, vel in aliquo alio loco convenienti infra burgum predictum, per tales & consimiles processus & modos, secundùm legem & consuetudinem regni nostri Anglie, pro qual' & prout legi nostre consonan' fuerit, ac in tam amplis modo & formâ, prout in aliquâ aliâ curiâ de recordo in aliquo alio burgo aut villâ incorporatâ infra hoc regnum Anglie usitatum aut consuetum est, aut fieri potest aut debet, predictis literis patentibus dicte nuper regine Elizabethe hic prerecitatis, aut aliquibus aliis literis patentibus, aut aliquo usu, consuetudine, prescriptione, aut aliquâ aliâ re, causâ, vel materiâ, in contrarium inde factâ in aliquo non obstante; salvis semper nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris in perpetuum, ut in jure ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, omnibus & singulis perquisitionibus, proficuis, exitibus, finibus, amerciamentis, penis, & forisfacturis, de tempore in tempus, annuatim in perpetuum, post finem dimissionis antehac inde inter alia factam cuidam Thome Edmonds, generoso, emergentibus, crescentibus, sive provenientibus, in curiâ predictâ de recordo, vel portimoto curie burgi predicti & aliis curiis nostris, ut in jure ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, infra burgum predictum tent' vel tenend', solvend' annuatim nobis, heredibus & successoribus nostris, ut in jure ducatûs nostri Lancastrie; de quibus perquisitionibus, proficuis, exitibus, finibus, amerciamentis, penis, & forisfacturis predictis, major, ballivi, & burgenses, & eorum successores, annuatim coram auditoribus premissorum pro tempore existentibus, justum & fidelem compotum reddent, & de omni eo quod ad nos, heredes vel successores nostros, inde pertinet, in jure ducatûs nostri Lancastrie predicti, benè & fideliter solvent & satisfacient ad manus particularis receptoris nostri, heredum vel successorum nostrorum, dicti ducatûs nostri Lancastrie pro tempore existentis, omnibus & singulis vadiis, feodis, & allocationibus, per nos aut progenitores nostros inde antehac allocatis, aut de jure consuetis, predictorum majoris, ballivorum, & burgensium, & eorum successorum, in custodiâ suâ semper reservatis & deductis, per auditorem nostrum, heredum & successorum nostrorum, inde ibidem annuatim allocandis in perpetuum visu presencium. Ac ulterius, cum nos, per literas nostras patentes sub sigillo ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, gerentes datum apud palacium nostram Westmonasterii, sexto die Junii, anno regni nostri Anglie, Francie, & Hibernie primo, & Scotie tricesimo sexto, per advisamentum & consensum consilii nostri ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, dederimus & concesserimus dilecto subdito nostro Johanni Willne, alias Willis, officium ballivi dominii sive manerii nostri Leicestrie, ac ville nostre Leicestrie, in comitatu nostro Leicestrie, ac ipsum Johannem Wilne, alias Willis, ballivum dominii sive manerii nostri predicti, ac ville predicte, fecimus, ordinavimus, & constituimus, per easdem literas nostras patentes, habendum, occupandum, exercendum, & gaudendum officium predictum, prefato Johanni Wilne, alias Willis, per se vel per sufficientem deputatum suum, sive deputatos suos sufficientes, durante beneplacito nostro, cum vadiis & feodo quatuor librarum per annum, una cum omnibus aliis feodis, vadiis, commoditatibus, & advantagiis dicto officio ab antiquo debitis & consuetis, percipiendis annuatim, de exitibus, proficuis, & reventionibus dicti dominii sive manerii nostri, ac dicte ville Leicestrie, provenientibus sive crescendis, tam per manus suas proprias, quam per manus receptoris particularis ibidem pro tempore existentis, ad festa ibidem usualia, per equales porciones, in tam amplis modo & formâ prout predictus Johannes Wilne, alias Willis, aut aliquis alius sive aliqui alii officiarii predicti, habens sive exercens, habentes sive exercentes, unquam legitimè habuit vel percepit, habuerunt vel perceperunt, in & pro exercitio ejusdem, prout per easdem literas patentes pleniùs liquet, quod quidem beneplacitum nostrum per presentes determinamus & determinari volumus in perpetuum: Ac cum nos etiam, per literas nostras patentes sub sigillo ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, gerentes datum apud palacium nostrum Westmonasterii, undecimo die Julii, anno regni nostri Anglie, Francie, & Hibernie primo, & Scotie tricesimo sexto, per advisamentum & consensum consilii nostri ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, dederimus & concesserimus dilecto subdito nostro Christofero Tamworthe, armigero, officium senescalli ville nostre Leicestrie, in comitatu nostro Leicestrie, alias dictum officium clerici vocati "The Towne Clerke" ejusdem ville nostre, ac ipsum Christoferum Tamworthe senescallum nostrum ville nostre Leicestrie predicte ac clericum ejusdem ville ordinavimus, fecimus, & constituimus per easdem literas nostras patentes, habendum, tenendum, gaudendum, occupandum, et exercendum officium predictum prefato Christofero Tamworthe, per se vel per sufficientem deputatum suum, sive deputatos suos sufficientes, durante beneplacito nostro, una cum omnibus et singulis vadiis, feodis, proficuis, commoditatibus, advantagiis, et emolumentis dicto officio pertinentibus sive spectantibus, habendum et percipiendum annuatim eadem feodia et vadia eidem Christofero Tamworth, durante beneplacito nostro, de exitibus, proficuis, et reventionibus Honoris nostri Leicestrie, prout per easdem literas patentes pleniùs liquet et apparet; quod quidem beneplacitum nostrum per presentes determinamus et determinari volumus in perpetuum: Sciatis quod nos, de uberiori gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ ct mero motu nostris, volumus, et per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, ac etiam ordinamus, quod major et aldermanni burgi predicti, et successores sui pro tempore existentes, vel major pars eorum, quorum majorem pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus, habeant et habebunt de tempore in tempus in posterum in perpetuum, potestatem et auctoritatem, in plenâ curiâ burgi predicti, nominare, eligere, appunctuare, admittere, et jurare, unum sufficientem it idoneum personam fore et esse senescallum sive clericum burgi predicti, ac tot et tantos sufficientes et idoneos personas fore et esse ballivum et ballivos ville nostre Leicestrie predicte, et custodem et custodes gaole nostre pro burgo predicto; necnon tot et tantos attornatos, subballivos, et alios inferiores officiarios et ministros curie predicte, ac clericum pacis nostre infra burgum predictum, fore et esse attendentes, tam in curiâ predictâ, quam alibi infra burgum predictum, limites et precinctus predictos, tocies quocies eorum presencia, ministeria, et servitia requisita fuerint, quot prefatis majori et aldermannis burgi predicti pro tempore existentibus, vel majori parti eorundem, quorum majorem burgi predicti pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus, eligendos, nominandos, appunctuandos, et jurandos videbuntur necessarios, ac quot et quantos in eodem burgo aut curiâ predictâ antehac usitati et consueti fuerunt; et quod predicti senescallus sive clericus burgi predicti, ballivus et ballivi, custos gaole, attornati, subballivi, clericus pacis, et omnes alii predicti officiarii et ministri, sic ut prefertur eligendi, nominandi, et jurandi, exequentes et fungentes aliquo officio aut ministerio in vel ratione curie predicte, sive occasione aliquorum premissorum, circa administrationem vel executionem justitie infra burgum predictum, libertates et precinctus ejusdem, habeant et percipiant, et eorum quilibet habeat & percipiat deinceps in perpetuum, talia et hujusmodi rationabilia et legalia vadia, feoda, et regarda, de et pro executione ministerii sive officii predicti, que ab antiquo legitimè habuerunt et perceperunt, vel percipi debuerunt: Proviso semper, quod predicti major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, et successores sui pro tempore existentes, sive deputati sui, deexitibus, finibus, amerciamentis, penis, forisfacturis, proficuis, et reventionibus ville sive burgi nostri Leicestrie predicti, provenientibus, emergentibus, sive crescentibus, annuatim, nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, justum et fidele computum redderint sive reddant, coram auditore premissorum pro tempore existente, et de omni eo quod ad nos, heredes et successores nostros, inde pertinet seu pertinere poterit et debetur, nobis, heredibus vel successoribus nostris, annuatim, benè et fideliter respondeant et satisfaciant, ad manus particularis receptoris nostri, heredum vel successorum nostrorum, eorundem premissorum pro tempore existentium, prout fieri solebat, et ut justum est, omnibus et singulis vadiis, feodis, proficuis, advantagiis, et allocationibus, per nos aut aliquem progenitorum nostrorum, annuatim antehac legitimè allocatis, pro exercitio dicti officii ballivi domini et ville Leicestrie predicte, predictis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, et eorum successoribus, in custodiâ suâ semper reservatis et deductis, allocandis per auditorem nostrum, heredum et successorum nostrorum, inde ibidem pro tempore existentium annuatim, visu presentium. Et ulterius, pro preservatione et manutentione aliquarum consuetudinum, privilegiorum, jurisdictionum, et preheminenciarum ducatûs nostri Lancastrie infra burgum nostrum Leicestrie, ad Honorem nostram Leicestrie, parcellam antiqui ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, in comitatu nostro Leicestrie, performand', concedimus, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, ordinamus, quod major burgi nostri Leicestrie trie predicti, de tempore in tempus in perpetuum, super diem Lune proximè post festum Sancti Martini in hieme, Anglicè communiter vocatam "The Monday after Martilmas daye," annuatim pro tempore existente, venerit in aulam castri nostri Leicestrie in comitatu nostro Leicestrie, propè dictum burgum nostrum Leicestrie; et adtunc et ibidem, inter horas nonam et undecimam ante meridiem cujuslibet eorum dierum Lune proximè post quodlibet festum Sancti Martini in hieme, sacramentum corporale super Evangelia coram senescallo nostro Honoris nostri Leicestrie predicti pro tempore existente prestabit, benè et fideliter ad observandum et performandum omnes et singulas antiquas consuetudines, jurisdictiones, privilegia, et preheminentia ducatûs nostri Lancastrie infra burgum nostrum Leicestrie predictum, pro et durante tempore tunc majoratûs sue, secundum optimam notitiam et scientiam suam. Et cum dicta domina Elizabetha, nuper regina Anglie, per easdem literas suas patentes prementionatas, pro majore relevamine et sustentatione pauperum et infirmorum hominum et mulierum infra eundem burgum de Leicestriâ inhabitantium et commorantium, voluerit et concesserit prefatis majori, ballivis et burgensibus, predicti burgi de Leicestriâ et successoribus suis, quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses, et successores sui, haberent et tenerent, ac habere et tenere valerent et possent in perpetuum, infra burgum predictum, unum mercatum lanarum in dicto burgo de Leicestriâ, Anglicè vocatum A Wool Market, pro venditione et emptione lane, fili, et foraginis, simul cum omnibus proficuis, commoditatibus, emolumentis, et liberis consuetudinibus, ad hujusmodi mercatum accidentibus, emergentibus, pertinentibus, et spectantibus; et cum in eisdem literis patentibus, nullum certum tempus sive dies pro custodiâ mercati lanarum predicti appunctuabatur, limitabatur, et specificabatur; sciatis quod nos, tam pro pleno supplemento defectûs illius in mercatu predictâ in eâ parte, quam pro meliore relevamine et sustentatione pauperum inhabitantium ejusdem burgi, et limitum et precinctuum ejusdem, de gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, volumus, et eisdem majori, ballivis, et burgensibus, et successoribus suis, per presentes concedimus, quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses, et successores sui, liberè, benè, et quietè habeant et teneant, ac habere et tenere valeant et possint, in dicto burgo Leicestrie, predictum mercatum lanarum, Anglicè vocatam The Wool Market, pro emptione et venditione lane, fili, et foraginis, quibuslibet diebus Mercurii et Sabbati in quâlibet septimanâ per annum, perpetuis futuris temporibus, ad beneplacitum eorundem majoris, ballivorum, et burgensium, et successorum suorum in perpetuum. Et ulterius, de uberiori gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, ordinamus, ac pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, per presentes damus et concedimus, prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi Leicestrie predicti, et successoribus suis, plenam potestatem, auctoritatem, et jurisdictionem, quod iidem major et aldermanni, justiciarii pacis burgi predicti, et major pars eorundem (quorum majorem pro tempore existentem unum esse volumus) habeant et exerceant, habere et exercere valeant et possint, infra burgum predictum, ac libertates et precinctus ejusdem in perpetuum, punitionem et correctionem omnium et singulorum scortorum, meretricium, lenonum, et communium rixatorum, Anglicè vocat' Scolds, ibidem commorantium et inhabitantium sive delinquentium, tam per veredictum et presentationem duodecim proborum et legalium hominum burgi predicti pro tempore existentium, quam aliis viis, mediis, et modis, quibus eis magis expediens fore videbitur, prout antehac in eodem burgo usitatum et consuetum fuit. Et ulterius, de ampliori gratiâ nostrâ speciali, ac ex certâ scientiâ et mero motu nostris, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus, et per presentes confirmamus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi de Leicestriâ predicti, et successoribus suis, omnes et omnimodas easdem hujusmodi et consimiles libertates et franches', immunitates, exemptiones, quietant', consuetudines, jurisdictiones, terras, tenementa, et hereditamenta, que major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi de Leicestriâ predicti, aut que major et burgenses burgi vel ville de Leicestriâ predicti, aut eorum aliquis vel aliqui, per quecumque nomina, sive per quodcumque nomen, vel per quamcunque incorporationem, vel pretextu cujuscunque incorporationis, unquam antehac legitimè habuerunt, tenuerunt, usi vel gavisi fuerunt, aut habere, tenere, uti vel gaudere potuerunt aut debuerunt, habuit, tenuit, usus vel gavisus fuit, aut habere, tenere, uti vel gaudere potuit vel debuit, tam infra burgum Leicestrie predictum, limites vel precinctus ejusdem, quam alibi infra totum regnum nostrum Anglie, eis et successoribus suis in perpetuum, de statu hereditario, ratione vel pretextu aliquarum cartarum aut literarum patentium aliquorum progenitorum sive antecessorum nostrorum, quoquomodo antehac fact', confirmat' vel concess', sive quocunque alio legali modo, jure, titulo, consuetudine, sive prescriptione antehac habit', usitat', seu confirmat', aliquo nonusu, abusu, sive misusu, concernente premissa, aliquo tempore antehac commisso, facto, premisso, sive perpetrato, in aliquo non obstante; reddend' tamen et solvend' inde nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, talia, eadem, et hujusmodi annuales redditus et denariorum summas, qualia et que, et taliter et tali modo, ut pro eisdem antehac reddiderunt et solvere consueverunt, seu de jure debuerunt: Quare volumus, et per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, firmiter injungendo precipimus, quod predicti major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, et successores sui, habeant, teneant, utantur et gaudeant, ac habere, tenere, uti, et gaudere valeant et possint in perpetuum, omnes libertates, auctoritates, jurisdictiones, franches' et quietanc' predict', secundùm tenorem et effectum harum literarum nostrarum patentium, ac in tam amplis modo et formâ prout antehac ratione alicujus doni, carte, sive concessionis aliquorum progenitorum sive antecessorum nostrorum, aut alicujus usus, consuetudinis, sive prescriptionis, usi seu gavisi fuerunt, aut uti et gaudere debent seu possint, sine occasione sive impedimento nostro, heredum sive successorum nostrorum, justiciariorum, vicecomitum, sive aliorum ballivorum sive ministrorum nostrorum, heredum et successorum nostrorum quorumcunque; nolentes quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, vel eorum aliquis vel aliqui, ratione premissorum, sive eorum alicujus, per nos vel per heredes vel successores nostros, justiciarios, vicecomites, aut alios ballivos sive ministros nostros, heredum vel successorum nostrorum quorumcunque, inde occasionentur, molestentur, vexentur, seu graventur, seu in aliquo perturbentur; volentes, ac per presentes firmiter mandantes et precipientes, tam thesaurario, cancellario, et baronibus Scaccarii nostri Westmonasterii, ac aliis justiciariis et officiariis nostris, ac heredum et successorum nostrorum, et attornato et solicitario nostro generali pro tempore existentibus, quam cancellario et attornato nostro ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, et auditoribus, receptoribus, et supervisoribus nostris generalibus pro tempore existentibus, ac omnibus aliis officiariis et ministris nostris ejusdem ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, et eorum cuilibet, et omnibus aliis officiariis et ministris nostris quibuscunque, de tempore in tempus in perpetuum in futuro, quod nec ipsi, nec eorum aliquis sive aliqui, aliquod aliud breve sive summonitionem de Quo warranto, seu aliquod aliud breve, brevia, vel processus nostros quoscunque, versus majorem, ballivos, et burgenses burgi predicti, vel eorum aliquem vel aliquos, pro aliquibus causis, rebus, materiis, offensis, clameis, aut usurpationibus, aut eorum aliquo, per ipsos sive eorum aliquos debitis, clamatis, attemptatis, usitatis, habitis, seu usurpatis, ante diem confectionis presentium, prosequatur vel continuatur, prosequantur aut continuantur, aut prosequi aut continuari facient aut causabunt, seu eorum aliquis faciet vel causabit; volentes etiam quod iidem major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, vel eorum aliquis vel aliqui, per aliquos vel aliquem justiciarios, officiarios, vel ministros predictos, in aut pro debito, usu, clameo, nonusu, vel abusu aliquarum libertatum, franchesiarum, aut jurisdictionum burgi predicti, suburbiorum et precinctuum ejusdem, ante diem confectionis harum literarum nostrarum patentium, minimè molestentur aut impediantur, aut ad ea vel eorum aliquod respondere quovismodo compellantur. Volumus etiam, ac per presentes, pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris, concedimus prefatis majori, ballivis, et burgensibus burgi de Leicestriâ predicti et successoribus suis, quod ipsi prefati major, ballivi, et burgenses burgi predicti, et successores sui, habeant et habebunt has literas nostras patentes tam sub magno sigillo nostro Anglie, quam sub sigillo ducatûs nostri Lancastrie, debito modo factas et sigillatas, absque fine seu feodo magno vel parvo nobis, Hanaperio nostro seu alibi, ad usum nostrum proinde quoquomodo reddend', solvend', seu faciend'; eo quod, &c. In cujus rei, &c. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 17° die Aprilis.

Per breve de privato sigillo, &c.[1]"

May 19, 1610, 8 Jac. at a common hall, Henry Riche, esq. second son of the lord Riche, was chosen burgess of parliament, instead of sir William Skipworth, deceased.

Mem. That Aug. 24 was received the first 40*l.* of the gift of sir Thomas White, knt. from the city of Coventry; and on the 24th of September next after let forth to several persons, to hold the said sums of 10*l.* apiece for nine years, beginning the 10th of March last; and they to set the poor on work in knitting and spinning of jersey, and weaving bonelace, and such like work fit for young children.

Aug. ult. At a common hall, agreed that the chamberlains for the time being shall pay, yearly, to Mr. Thomas Hunt, under-usher of the free-school, 20*s.* towards his better maintenance, during the pleasure of the companies of twenty-four and forty-eight, or the greater part of them.

Freemen, 21.

Sept. 29, 1610, 8 Jac. John Mabbes, mayor.

Paid the charges about such persons as have been visited by the plague[2], besides divers taxations to the charges of the mayor and the twenty-four and the forty-eight, 23*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.*

Freemen, 14.

Sept. 29, 1611, 9 Jac. John Freake mayor.

"At Lent Assizes at Leicester, 10 Jac. I. the case was, one William Haynes had in the night-time digged up the several graves of three men and one woman, and took the winding-sheets from the dead bodies, and buried the bodies again[3]. And for the rareness and strangeness of the fact, being furtum inauditum, all the Judges of Serjeants Inn in Fleet Street met to advise about it. And they all resolved, that the property of the sheets must be in somebody, viz. the executor or administrator of the dead party, or they who had property in them when the dead body was first wrapped therewith; for the dead body is not capable of any property. But, if apparel be put on a boy, it is esteemed a gift in law, for the boy hath capacity to take it; but a dead body, being but a lifeless lump, or cadaver, hath no capacity; but it is bestowed on the body for the reverence towards it, and to express the hope of resurrection. And then, when a man hath property in any thing (as the executor or administrator, or some other once had in the sheets), he cannot be divested of that property till it be legally vested in another who hath capacity to take it. And according to this resolution, Haynes was indicted at the next assizes for the several takings of these sheets. And the first indictment was for petty larceny, for which he was whipped: and, after he was indicted for the felonious taking the other three sheets, and found guilty, and had clergy allowed him; and, being burned in the hand, escaped the sentence of death for that notorious and uncouth felony[4]."

July 17, 10 Jac. At a common hall, agreed to send to London, to provide a fair standing cup, with a cover of silver and gilt, worth 30*l.* or thereabouts, to give to King James, at his coming to Leicester the 27th of August next; and also to have the town's great mace mended and gilded, and to have the King's arms of new set upon the top of the said base.

Item, also agreed that Mr. Mayor, Mr. Robert Heyrick, and the three Justices, shall assess the twenty-four at 24*l.*, and the commoners in town according to their abilities, towards buying the plate and mending the mace, and for fees which are to be given to the King's officers, and other charges then to be laid forth. The forty-eight (among themselves) have agreed to give 24*l.*

July 27. At a common hall, it is now agreed to provide two standing cups, with covers of silver gilt, one for the King, and the other for the Prince, worth 30*l.*

Ordered, that every householder, upon notice given by the alderman and constable of the ward, forthwith cause the street before his door to be paved, on pain of 40*s.*

It is agreed, that the twenty-four, such as have been mayors, provide themselves to ride in scarlet, with horse and foot-cloth, to meet and attend the King, on pain of 10*l.*; and the rest of the twenty-four to provide themselves with gowns, citizen-fashion, garded with square backs, to be likewise ready to attend the King on foot, on pain of 10*l.*

Item, agreed that every of the forty-eight shall, for like attendance, provide a fair black suit of apparel, black gowns, and ruff bands, on pain of 5*l.* against the King's coming on the 28th of August next.

Mem. On Tuesday, Aug. 28th, both companies met accordingly at the town hall, and thence went, two and two, together to St. Sunday's Bridge foot, something on the side Southward; and between the said bridge, and the little bridge called Frogmire Bridge, did Mr. Mayor and the said companies receive the King and Prince; where Mr. Mayor, upon his knee, delivered the mace to the King, and he presently delivered to Mr. Mayor again. Thereupon Mr. John Wincoll, the town's counsellor, made an oration in Latin, which was pleasing both to the King and Prince. Then Mr. Mayor presented one standing cup to the King, and the other to the Prince. This done, the mayor took his horse, and, bare-headed, carried the town-mace before the King; viz. Henry earl of Huntingdon, lord lieutenant of this county, carried the sword next before the King; Mr. Mayor next, before the said earl, accompanied with the gentlemen ushers, with the King's two great maces; and so before them our mayor's brethren, in scarlet, such as had been mayors, and the rest; and also the forty-eight attended the King and Prince to the court-gates; viz. to the said earl's house in Leicester.

Among the charges of this year, is one for repairing the streets against the coming of the King and Prince, in their progress to Leicester, 26*l.* 3*s.* 7½*d.* Another was for a silver cup and cover, presented to the King Aug. 18, 1612, 20*l.* 5*s.* 1*d.*; another for the value of a silver and gilt cup, presented to the Prince by the mayor, 13*l.* 4*s.* Fees to the King's officers, 34*l.* 6*s.*

Freemen, 49.

Sept. 29, 1612, 10 Jac. William Morton mayor.

Nov. 20. At a common hall, agreed to grant licence to Thomas Buckston to draw wine, during the pleasure of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, paying for the same 4*l.* till Michaelmas next. The like to Mr. John Mabbes.

Dec. 1, 1612, 10 Jac. Sir Augustine Nicolls, knt. being made one of the Justices of Common Pleas, the twenty-four met, and chose Mr. Francis Harvey, of Northampton, a Bencher of the Middle Temple, to be recorder; and it is agreed, that he shall have for his fee, yearly, 5*l.*; and at every assizes towards his charge, 20*s.*; and the town to bear and pay his charge at his coming to Leicester at all times about the town's business. Agreed to write to Mr. Justice Nicolls, to desire him to acquaint Mr. Recorder elected with this our order for his fee and other charges, in regard to the town is now poor, and indebted, and that our recorders in time past have only had 4*l.* fee per annum, and less.

---

[1] Vicesima Pars Patent' de anno regni Regis Jacobi, Anglie, &c. septimo.

[2] In the Parish Registers of St. Nicholas and St. Martin are several particulars relative to this plague; which will be printed hereafter under those respective parishes.

[3] Coke, 3 Instit. 10 Jac. I.

[4] Staveley's History of Churches, p. 272.

Among the charges this year, one is for the carrying a letter to Kibworth to the county justices, to forbid them to call any of the Bishop's-fee men thither, 1*s.*

Dec. 14, 10 Jac. In full court, Mr. Francis Harvey was sworn recorder.

Freemen, 31.

Sept. 29, 1613, 11 Jac. Thomas Manbye mayor.

In this year, John Stamford and his deputies were authorized to issue his Majesty's Farthing Tokens for the counties of Leicester and Rutland.

At this period also it was noticed, "that the hosiers of Leicester are constreyned by some officers of Blackwell-hall to paie 2*d.* in every score of stockens for ballage, unlesse they will bringe theire stockens to the hall, there to be solde. They are alsoe at composition with the duke of Linox for ulnage, and paie yearely to the duke's collectors for the same. That there may be a restreynt for erectinge of new cottages and takinge of inmates, as well in Leicester, as in other villages that are not market-towns.—The burgesses of Derby or Nottingham are about the like for their towns."

April 2, 1614, 12 Jac. At a common hall, there were chosen sir Henry Rich, knight, and sir Francis Leigh, knight, one of the masters of request, to be burgesses for the parliament to be holden April 5 next.

Aug. 18. The King, in his progress, came this night to Leicester, to the earl of Huntingdon's house, and there lay.

Mr. Mayor and his brethren, and the forty-eight, attended the King at the said earl's house, and there received him, where Mr. John Wincoll made a speech in Latin unto his Majesty at the court-gates, where the King sat in his coach, and heard the same very pleasingly; and his Highness did much commend the said speech, and gave Mr. Wincoll his hand to kiss; and from the court-gates Mr. Mayor carried the mace, before the King, up into the presence chamber.

Freemen, 28.

Sept. 29, 1614, 12 Jac. John Bennet mayor.

Freemen, 22.

Sept. 29, 1615, 13 Jac. William Ive mayor. Candles 5*d. per* pound.

Nov. 1, 1615. Whereas the lord Cavendish hath given to the Corporation of Leicester 100*l.* in consideration that the town pay yearly 6*l.* to such charitable uses as shall be set down at the discretion of the mayor and his brethren; it is agreed, that a yard land shall be assured to his Honour, for sure payment of the same. Hereupon 20 poor freemen were nominated to receive 6*s.* apiece, to buy them coals.

If it were not well attested, posterity would scarcely believe that nine poor women were executed as witches[1] at Leicester, July 18, 1616.

Sept. 29, Thomas Ericke mayor. Freemen, 26.

Aug. 8, 1617. At a meeting of the twenty-four and 24 of the forty-eight, agreed to give to the earl of Huntingdon, against the King's coming to Ashby, one yoke of fat oxen, worth 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* or 14*l.*

Sept. 29, Roland Pewsey mayor. Freemen, 13.

Paid lord Spencer, by Mr. Woodland, the first payment for the land in the South-Fields, which was purchased of him this year for 40*l.*

By letters patent, dated March 25, 1617, King James made the borough of Leicester a staple town for the buying and selling of wool and wool fells; and hath, by the same charter, given them power to take consusance of statutes.

Sept. 29, 1618, 16 Jac. Nicholas Gilliott mayor. Candles at 4½*d. per* pound. Ale under the sieve, 3*d.* the gallon.—Freemen, 27.

The Corporation recovered this year, of the bailiff of North Allerton in the county of York, charge in a suit of law in the Dutchy chamber, for taking toll of a freeman of the borough of Leicester.

The heir of the good sir Thomas White was treated by Mr. Mayor with sugar and wine, at the expence of 3*s.* 4*d.* And in the same account, "Paid for a broad arrow given to Mr. Auditor Fanshaw, at the audit holden at the Castle of Leicester, for the rent of the Butt Close, 6*d.*"

On the 23d of September, 1619, the Borough of Leicester was visited, in due form, by Sampson Leonard, and Augustine Vincent, heralds.

Sept. 29, John Heyrick mayor. Freemen, 14.

Sept. 29, 1620, 18 Jac. John Pare mayor.

Jan. 8. At a common hall, there were chosen sir Richard Morison and sir William Heyrick, knights, to be burgesses for parliament.

Feb. 12, 1620. At a meeting of the twenty-four, Mr. Nicholas Bolyvant was chosen town-clerk and clerk of the peace for this borough, during the pleasure of the mayor and his brethren, and for so long as he shall demean himself well in their judgment; and upon condition that he perform such other covenants as they, or the greater part of them, shall think fit. The said Nicholas Bolyvant was admitted and sworn a freeman Feb. 19; and also to the said office.

Freemen, 14.

Sept. 29, 1621, 19 Jac. Jacob Andrew mayor. Ale 3*d.* a gallon. Candles 3½*d. per* pound.

Mem. Presently after the death of Mr. Wylne, late bailiff of the borough, a letter was sent to acquaint the earl of Huntingdon, it being his turn to nominate the next to that office; whereupon he nominated Robert Wright, gent.; and thereupon, at a meeting of the twenty-four, March 7, 1621, Mr. Robert Wright was chosen, admitted, and sworn to be bailiff, and keeper of the gaol of the said borough; to enjoy the same offices, with all fees and profits thereto belonging, for the term of his life: this being the first turn of his Honour's nomination of the said bailiff, and keeper of the gaol of the said borough.

"I. A. B. shall and will, from henceforth, well and truly exercise the office and offices of the bailiff of this borough and town of Leicester, and of the keeper of the gaol of the said borough; and shall not, nor will not, deal corruptly or unjustly in the said offices, or either of them; nor shall or will receive or take, directly or indirectly, by any colour, means, or device whatsoever, any manner of fee or reward of any person or persons for the impanneling or returning of any inquest, jury, or tales, in his Majesty's Court of Record of this borough of Leicester, more than the due fees as are allowed and appointed for the same by the law and statutes of this realm; nor shall, for any money or other reward, nor for any hatred or malice, or for any love or affection, or otherwise, make any partial return of any jury or inquest; or shall refuse or neglect to execute any writ or process that shall be duly directed to me by the mayor or justices of this town, or by any others that have or shall have authority to direct any process to me; nor shall, directly or indirectly, by any colour, means, or device whatsoever, take any fees, or any other reward or recompence, for executing any writ or process, or for doing of any execution, more than the due fees that shall be allowed unto me by the laws and statutes of this realm for doing and executing the same; but shall, truly and indifferently, and with all convenient speed, impannel all juries, and execute and return all such writs, process, and executions, as shall be directed unto me, and shall appertain to me to do, by virtue of the said office or offices of bailiff of this borough, or keeper of the said gaol; and the said office and offices, in all things appertaining thereunto, to the uttermost of my power shall and will faithfully and uprightly execute, [1] Six others were imprisoned as witches, of whom one died in the gaol, and the other five were set at liberty. See under Husbands Bosworth, vol. II. p. *471.

---

cute, during the time that I shall remain in the said office or offices: So help me God."

Freemen, 20.

Sept. 29, 1622, 20 Jac. John Hynde mayor.

King James, by charter, dated June 26, hath given and granted to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, of the said borough, licence for the purchasing of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to the yearly value of 200*l.*; so as the same be not holden of the King, his heirs and successors, in capite, or of the King or any other in knight's service, the statute of mortmain notwithstanding.

Freemen, 13.

Sept. 29, 1623, 21 Jac. Jacob Ellis mayor. Ale 3*d. per* gallon. Candles, 3½*d. per* pound.

A petition was signed by a number of inhabitants to the Corporation, to have the Cow Pasture enlarged for their benefit; but it was rejected.

Nov. 28, 1623. At a common hall, agreed that all that have been stewards of the fair shall account to the mayor before Candlemas; and that the like be done hereafter, on pain of 40*s.* for every offence.

Jan. 16. At a common hall, sir Humphrey Maye, knt. chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and William Ive, of Leicester, gent. were chosen burgesses.

Freemen, 38.

Sept. 29, 1624, 22 Jac. William Ludlam mayor.

In this year, 14*s.* 10*d.* was charged for watching to keep Londoners out of the town during the plague there.

Oct. 24, 1624. At a meeting of the twenty-four, Francis Harvey, late recorder, certifying that he was made a Judge of the Common Pleas, Thomas Chapman, esq. was chosen recorder; who in open court, Oct. 25, was sworn. [See here the form of the oath[1].]

Mem. By virtue of a warrant from Henry earl of Huntingdon, lord lieutenant of this county, 20 men of this borough were impressed, and sent to Ashby Nov. 24, 1624; and on Dec. 7, ten men more were sent to Loughborough, and ten more to the Castle in Leicester; and 10*l.* in money, for coats and conductors' allowance, soldiers' pay, &c.

Mem. Wednesday, March 30, 1625, Henry lord Grey of Groby came, and acquainted the mayor, &c. that King James was dead, March 28, &c. Whereupon Prince Charles was proclaimed; Mr. Thomas Chapman, recorder, reading it to the publisher, Mr. Robert Wright, gent. bailiff of the borough, at the door of the Guildhall, the High Cross, at the Gainsborow chamber, and at Barril Cross, in the presence of the mayor, divers of his brethren, the lord Grey, and other gentlemen.

CHARLES I.

April 3, 1625. Sir Henry Shirley, knight and baronet, high-sheriff, desired Mr. Mayor's company the day following, to proclaim King Charles; at which time they proclaimed him at the High Cross, and then at the Gainsborough chamber; at which time the high sheriff himself read the proclamation.

May 3. At a common hall, sir Humphrey May, knight, chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and sir George Hastings, knight, were chosen to be burgesses of Parliament.

A meeting of Mr. Mayor, and divers of his brethren, with the preachers and ministers of God's word, here undernamed, July 15, 1625; Mr. William Ludlam mayor, Mr. James Andrew, Nicholas Gilliot, James Ellis. The preachers, Mr. Sacheverell, Mr. William Rudyard, Mr. Edward Blount, Mr. Thomas Holmes, Mr. John Bonnet, Mr. Francis Higinson. It is thought fit that there shall be a collection made in every several parish church upon every Wednesday during the time of the public fast; and a note to be delivered every week to Mr. Mayor of the same collections: the money to remain in the churchwardens' hands till it be called for.

It is also agreed, that there shall be public prayers and divine service at every church in the town, to begin betwixt eight and nine of the clock in the forenoon, and at two in the afternoon; and that there shall be one sermon at one church only every Wednesday, according to his Majesty's late proclamation, and book of orders. And that for that day all trading be foreborne, and no frequenting of taverns or ale-houses be used; and that there be two, at the least, appointed in every parish to look to such disorders.

July 22, 1625. At a common hall, sir Humphrey May being returned as a burgess for Lancaster, as well as this place, and choosing to serve for Lancaster; at his request, his kinsman, Mr. Thomas Fermin, was first chose a freeman of this borough, and afterwards burgess of Parliament, in sir Humphrey May's stead.

July 25, 1625. At a meeting of Mr. Mayor, Mr. Recorder, and twenty-four, it is agreed, that the Wednesday exercise of fasting, praying, and preaching, be held at every several parish church; and that no bell shall be rung for sermon at any church, in regard of the heat of the weather, and the danger of the time.

And it is agreed, that the pest-houses shall be cleared of the tenants presently, and repaired, and made fit for the present use by the chamberlains.

Item, it is agreed that no inhabitant shall lodge any person coming from London, or other place infected with the plague, without consent of Mr. Mayor, or the alderman of the ward; neither shall receive or send for any wares from London, or other place infected, without the like consent: and that this order be proclaimed through the town, and continued till other order be taken therein.

Mem. That divers disobedient persons, which received wares from London contrary to this order, were bounden with sureties to the next sessions, and to be of good behaviour in the mean time.

The watchmen (with Mr. Mayor's allowance) authorised to relieve poor travellers with necessary food; and that to be paid by the chamberlains.

Freemen this year, 19.

Sept. 29, 1625, William Ive mayor. Freemen 12.

June 13. Sir Humphrey May, knight, chancellor of the Dutchy, and sir George Hastings, were at a common hall chosen burgesses of Parliament for this borough.

Freemen, 16.

Sept. 21, 1626, 2 Car. elected Gilbert Fawsit mayor.

Daniel Murefin, for that he cannot write, is by most voices discharged from being chamberlain hereafter, paying 10*l.* for a fine. Thomas Chapman, upon the like reasons, is also discharged from being chamberlain hereafter, paying for his fine 5*l.*

A petition of the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Leicester, against inclosure of the Forest.

A commission to several persons for a loan; viz. to Henry earl of Huntingdon, William earl of Exeter, Henry earl of Holland, Henry lord Grey, sir John Coke, knight, a secretary of state, sir John Savile, knight, the mayor of Leicester for the time being, sir Thomas Haysilrigge, sir Henry Skipwith, knights and baronets, sir Henry Hastings and sir William Faunt, knights; enjoining them, or any two or more of them, to call before them such persons within the borough of Leicester as their instructions should direct, &c. Dated Oct. 11, 2 Car. I.

A letter from the council, directing the commissioners to accept the sums demanded of persons, without pressing them to subscribe their names; but to bind such persons as, being appointed, refuse to be collectors of the loan, to answer their contempt at the council board.

Sept. 21, 1627, Francis Churchman elected mayor. Freemen, 24.

Sept. 21, 1628, William Biller mayor. Freemen, 18. Bollivan clerk there.

1629, Roger Coates mayor. Freemen, 22.

1630, Thomas Smith mayor. Freemen, 20.

The following letter, dated "Leicester, 16th of November 1630," was addressed "To the right honourable Henry lord Loughborowe, lord leiuftent of the county of Leicester. Theis humbly present.

---

[1] See this oath before, in p. 278.

"Right Honorable; We had well hoped that those messingers which weere sent to wayte upon your Honour would have given your Honour a satisfyinge answear; but, perceaving the contrarie, both by theire relation, and your Honour's second letter of the 13th of this present November (according to your Honour's desire and direction therein), we have summoned both the Companies, and all the other Subsidie-men within this Borough; upon whose appearance, both your Honour's letters were openly read unto them; and theire generall answeare is, that they will be redie to give your Honour theire answears therein when it shall please your Honour to call them thereunto. So that wee cannot satisfye your Honour's expectation with any generall or grosse some of money; but humbly desire your honourable favour to this poore Corporation in this beehalfe. And so, gevinge your Honour all humble thanks for your good care of us herein, with our humble service remembred, wee take our leaves.

Your Honour's to be commanded,
Thomas Smith, mayor. John Parr.
Nicholas Gilliott. John Hynde.
John Heyricke. Francis Churchman[1]."

1631, John Norrice mayor. Freemen, 11.—By a payment this year, it appears that the plague was at Loughborough; for there is a charge of 13*l.* 10*s.* "to keep Loughborough people forth of the town."

1632, Nicholas Gilliott mayor. Freemen, 22.

1633, Hugh Watts mayor. Freemen, 27.

"Charges of gifts presented to the King and Queen at their coming to Leicester, with the fees and gratuities given to their Highnesses officers and servants, &c. 201*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*"[2]

1634, William Ive mayor. Freemen, 28.

Agreed to give the earl of Huntingdon and his countess, and the countess of Derby, a tierce of claret wine, and 4 gallons of sack, and 2 sugar loaves of 6 or 7lb apiece.

By a letter from the lords of the council to the sheriff of Leicestershire, Aug. 12, 1635, this county was directed to provide 4500*l.* for the fitting out of a ship of 450 tons burthen, and 180 men[3].

1635, Ralph Tompson mayor. Freemen, 28.

N. B. The last mention of Bollivan's being common clerk was in 1628; and this year, viz. 1635, Richard Martin subscribes himself common clerk.

Dec. 23, 1635. At a meeting of Mr. Mayor and his brethren, Richard Martin, esq. counsellor at law, was elected to be the town-clerk and clerk of the peace of this borough; and was then sworn a freeman, and took the oath, &c.

Henry Harold, a stranger, was made free at a common hall; and, 9th of March, was chosen serjeant at mace, and one of the attorneys of the court; and paid for his freedom 5*l.*

Aug. 6, 1636. Ludovicus Prince Palsgrave of the Rhine dined at the Angel in Leicester, coming from King Charles, who was then at Tutbury, to go to Honebye[4], where the Queen then lay; and the mayor, recorder, and most of the twenty-four, went thither, and presented to him a banquet, presently after the meat was taken from his table, which cost 23*l.* and something more; and three gallons of canary, three gallons of claret, and three gallons of white wine; which was very kindly accepted of by the Prince.

Agreed to take the mastership of the Hospital, and give to the earl of Huntingdon that sum of money as he paid to Mr. Fowkes, late master thereof.

September 21, 1636, Richard Inge mayor. Freemen, 28.

In his year is a charge of 6*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.* for the making up 200*l.* for the ship-money.

Sept. 29. At the common hall, ordered that the old chamberlains for the year past shall pay and lay out all charges and fees which are due for the town to pay till this Michaelmas day be ended; and from and after this day the new chamberlains are to pay and disburse all payments, and not for any payments which are payable upon this Michaelmas day, or before: and so the same order to be continued in this Corporation for ever hereafter.

This year the parlour belonging to the Guildhall, with the chamber gallery, evidence house, and other rooms adjoining unto the same, were newly erected, at the charge of the common chamber.

September 1637, Daniel Murfyn mayor. Freemen, 22.

September 1638, John Hinde mayor second time. Freemen, 19.

April 6, 1639. Eleven men were impressed out of this borough for the King's service against the Scots; and went, April 8, to Loughborough, &c.

June 14. The Corporation gave a bond of 400*l.* to Ralph Holme and Mary his wife, and Edward Goodridge her son, for payment of 200*l.* to them on June 19, 1653, in the South porch of St. Martin's church in Leicester, in consideration of 100*l.* at the time of sealing the bond, paid to the use of the Corporation.

September 1639, John Norrice mayor. Richard Martin, common clerk.

"Paid the sufferers by fire at Glen, 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*"[5]

March 23. At a meeting of Mr. Mayor and his brethren, Edward Palmer, gent. was chosen town-clerk and clerk of the peace for the same borough, by general consent; and took the oaths.

March 27, 1640, 16 Car. I. At a common hall, Symon Every, of Egginton in the county of Derby, esq. and Thomas Cooke, of Gray's Inn, London, esq. were chosen freemen, and burgesses of Parliament for this borough.

By virtue of a warrant of the deputy lieutenants for this county of Leicester, May 28, 1640, 24 of the trained bands for this borough were sent to Loughborough, for his Majesty's service against the Scots; and others going with them to Loughborough were there impressed.

Aug. 12, 1640. At a meeting of Mr. Mayor and his brethren, William Palmer was elected to be of the forty-eight; but, refusing the oath of the forty-eight, time was given him till the next meeting to consider thereof; at which meeting he refusing to take the said oath, was confined to the hall, where he continued two days and two nights; but afterwards, viz. 21st of that month, he took the accustomed oath.

By warrant from Henry earl of Huntingdon, Sept. 1, 1640, all the trained bands of this borough went to Loughborough with their complete arms; and continued there till the 11th of that month, when they were discharged by his Majesty's proclamation.

Freemen in mayoralty of Mr. J. Norrice, 18.

Sept. 1640, William Stanley mayor. Freemen, 25.

Edwardus Johnson, electus in officio camerarii pro communitate, recusans officium illud, ponetur in misericordiâ 20*l.*—& solvebat.

Oct. 23, 1640. At a common hall, Thomas lord Grey, son and heir of Henry earl of Stamford, was chosen freeman; and the said Thomas lord Grey, and Thomas Cooke, of Gray's Inn, esq. were chosen burgesses of Parliament.

May 21, 1641, 17 Car. I. At a common hall, it was agreed that Mr. John Angel, the town lecturer, shall have 10*l.* per annum given out of the town-stock, so long as by the two companies of twenty-four and forty-eight shall be thought fit, for his pains-taking in the Wednesday lecture, to be paid at Midsummer and St. Thomas.

September 1641, Thomas Rudiarde mayor.—Freemen, 26.

Oct. 18, 1641, John Beeby was chosen bailiff of this borough, at a meeting of the mayor and his brethren; and on the 25th of the said month was sworn.

"Paid the sufferers by fire at Hinckley, 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and 8*l.* to the inhabitants of Thurmaston and Burstale, being visited by sickness." The charges for the year, in watching to keep the sickness from Leicester which prevailed at Thurmaston, Birstal, Whetstone, and Oakham, were 46*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.* There is in these accounts an article with no sum set down: "Paid for locks and chains at the gates and bridges;" (probably to prevent contagion.)

---

[1] Carte's MSS. in the Bodleian Library, F F F. No. 13, &c.

[2] Corporation accounts.

[3] Harl. MSS. 1842.

[4] Holmby.

[5] Corporation accounts.

About this time began the important struggles in the seventeenth century; but what more particularly relates to Leicester and its vicinity has been detailed at large in the Appendix to vol. III. pp. 17, & seqq.

By Bishop Sancroft, we learn that the King was at Leicester the 22d, 23d, 24th, and 25th of July, 1642; and, by the payments of Mr. Robert Heyrick, church-warden of St. Martin's for the year 1642, it appears, by the following items, that the King attended divine service at that church when at Leicester.

"Item, given to Mr. White, the countess of Devon's gentleman, for setting up the King's throne in our church, 5*s*.

"Item, paid to Norman, for flowers and herbs to straw the church at the King's coming, 1*s*. 8*d*.

"Item, paid to Knowles, for six burdens of rushes for the church at the King's coming, 2*s*."

The Countess then lived at Leicester Abbey, which had been in a great measure re-built; and probably there was no person in or about Leicester at that time so proper to fix the throne for the reception of the royal guest in the church as the countess's gentleman. Against these articles there is no month, or day of the month, entered in the parish book.

In the accounts for this year, there are an unusual number of payments for days' work done in the church. They include payments from April 1642 to April 1643. Mr. Rudyard the mayor was chosen in September 1641, and served till September 1642; so that, in this particular, Bishop Sancroft's account of the King being at Leicester in July for four days, the payment of the Corporation to Prince Charles, &c. in Mr. Rudyard's mayoralty, and the parish books, all perfectly agree.

Prince Charles was presented by the Corporation with 50*l*.; but it does not appear why this money was given.

There is also a charge of 29*l*. 15*s*. "Paid to his Majesty's officers, at his first coming to town, as fees."

"This day came letters from Nottingham, Ashby, and Leicester, intimating that many troopers and cavaliers have done and do much hurt in those towns; that in Leicester they have searched all the town, both box and chest, but have taken nothing but arms and ammunition, leaving them not so much as a fork or staff to defend themselves; desiring speedy forces might be sent for the relief and assistance of those towns and counties; which was ordered accordingly[1]."

Two letters, the one from King Charles, the other from Prince Rupert[2], on September 6 and 7, 1642, have been already printed in vol. III. p. 31.

Sept. 1642, Richard Ludlam mayor. Freemen, 13.

Lord Cavendish gave to the Corporation 100*l*. to buy 6*l*. a-year to charitable uses.

Sept. 1643, William Ward mayor. Freemen, 9.

In this year's accounts an article occurs, which is rather extraordinary;

"Paid, for wine and sugar given to the Receiver of the King, Queen, and Prince's revenue, 5*s*. 1*d*."

William Billers mayor. Freemen, 16.

Nov. 22, 1644. At a meeting of the mayor and his brethren, it is ordered that the Bishop's Fee be annexed to Mr. Thompson's ward; and that Mr. Thompson shall be alderman thereof also.

Mem. Upon Saturday morning in Whitsun week, being the last day of May 1645, the King's Majesty, with his army, did enter Leicester, and took it by storm, having laid siege before it three days before; at which time the town was much plundered, and Mr. Mayor's mace, and divers of the town seals, taken away by the unruly soldiers.

Mem. On the 18th of June next following, the town of Leicester was regained by the Parliament army under sir Thomas Fairfax, general of the said forces.

Aug. 22, 1645, 21 Car. I. At a common hall, agreed that a new mace be bought, about the size of the old mace, and as near to the price as conveniently may be; the charge of the mace to be defrayed out of the chamber of the town; and that two chamberlains' staves be provided, with silver and gilt bosses, engraven with the town's arms, according or near the fashion of the former staves, at the discretion of the chamberlains.

It is also agreed, that a common seal for the Corporation, a seal of office, and the mayor's seal, according to the former seals lately used for the town, and taken away also at the taking the town, be provided at the town charge.

In the payments this year are some things curious; which prove that the Corporation was plundered of all their regalia and valuable moveables. Even their charter they were stripped of by the conquerors; who, it could not be expected, would shew them much favour, their leading men being exceedingly active partizans against the King, the mayor Mr. Billers, and some of the leading aldermen, being upon the committee who sat in Leicester to sequester property, send out scouring parties for intelligence, and give information to Parliament of the transactions of the armies, &c. in these parts.

"Paid to .... to redeem the town charters, being seized when the King's forces took the town, ...

Paid, for the statute seal, to a soldier, 5*s*.

Paid for two seals; the common seal brass, the mayor's seal silver, 1*l*. 9*s*.

Paid for the new mace, being silver and gilt, 24*l*. 6*s*. 6*d*.

Paid to sundry workmen, for taking down divers houses near the South gate, 3*l*. 3*s*.

Paid to .... poor people .... apiece to buy the wood, being the rent of 40 acres in the Forest of Leicester, 10*l*."

Sept. 1645, Edmund Cradock mayor. Freemen, 19.

Oct. 24. At a common hall, Mr. John Beeby is chosen clerk of the statutes for this borough till May 1 next.

Nov. 17. At a common hall, Peter Temple, esq. was chosen a freeman; and, by virtue of the King's writ to the high sheriff of Leicestershire, and the high sheriff's precept (instead of Thomas Cook, esq. lately elected one of the burgesses for the said borough, and sythence, by judgment of the House of Commons, is adjudged incapable to sit any longer there as a member of the same during this present Parliament), Peter Temple, of Temple Hall, co. Leic. esq. was chosen burgess of the said Parliament.

March 13. At a meeting of the mayor and his brethren, Edward Palmer, town-clerk, in regard of offences by him committed both to the governor and the committee for this garrison, and for the same having been by them confined, whereby the business of this Corporation suffers great detriment; and to make his peace appearing unfeasible, the company discharge him of his said office, and declare the place void.

Hugh Aston, gent. was elected town-clerk the day and year abovesaid; and took the oaths April 24.

July 28. "The humble petition of the well-affected tradesmen of Leicester was this day read. Ordered, that an ordinance be brought in, for granting a public benevolence for relief of Leicester, by taking the voluntary contributions of the well-affected people in all the counties, except the Western Association. That 500 muskets and furniture be furnished, out of the public stores, for the service of the town of Leicester. And that 1500*l*. be charged upon the ordinance for sale of delinquent's estates, to be paid in its course, after all other assignments already passed upon that ordinance, and employed towards the providing of horse, saddles, and pistols, for the service of the town of Leicester[3]."

Aug. 25, 1646. At a meeting of the mayor and his brethren, Thomas Welden, mace-bearer, having given offence to the governor and committee for this garrison, and by them being restrained from executing the said office, &c. the company discharge him of the said office, &c.

Mr. William Mawson was elected to be mace-bearer, during the pleasure of the company.

Sept. 1646, Daniel Abney, gent. mayor. Freemen, 30.—Southgate ward; the whole street was demolished, in these times of war, Oct. 2, 1646.

---

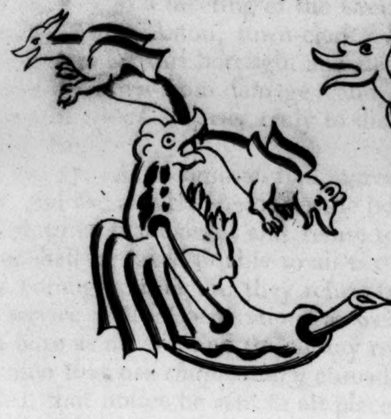
[1] A true and perfect Diurnal of the Messages in Parliament from Nottingham, Ashby, and Leicester, Sept. 6, 1642.

[2] Their signatures are here given in Plate XXXIII.

[3] Journals of the House of Commons, vol. IV. p. 221.

I
Vol. IV. Pl. XXXIII. p. 428.

Juriers Oath, p. 377.



Chamberlain's Oath, p. 377.

e shall m kepe to the C emprowe of leycettur we shall no
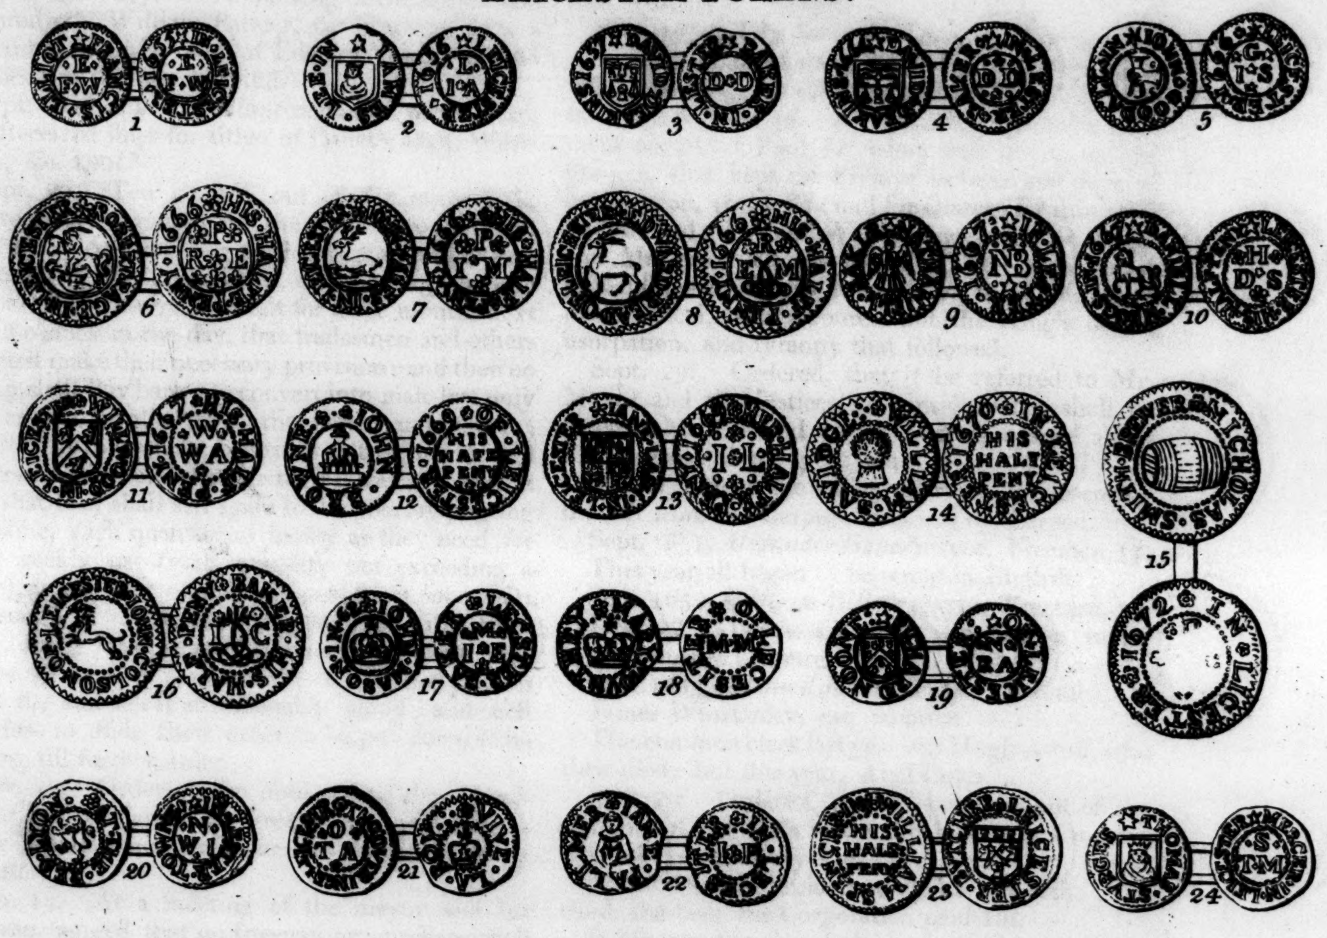
we also for

Charles R.

Rupert

LEICESTER TOKENS.



1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
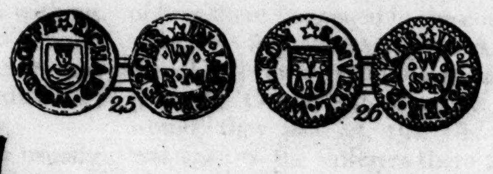
21
22
23
24



28
R Leycester

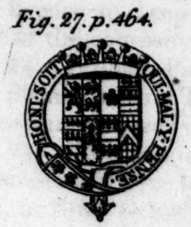


Fig. 27. p. 464.

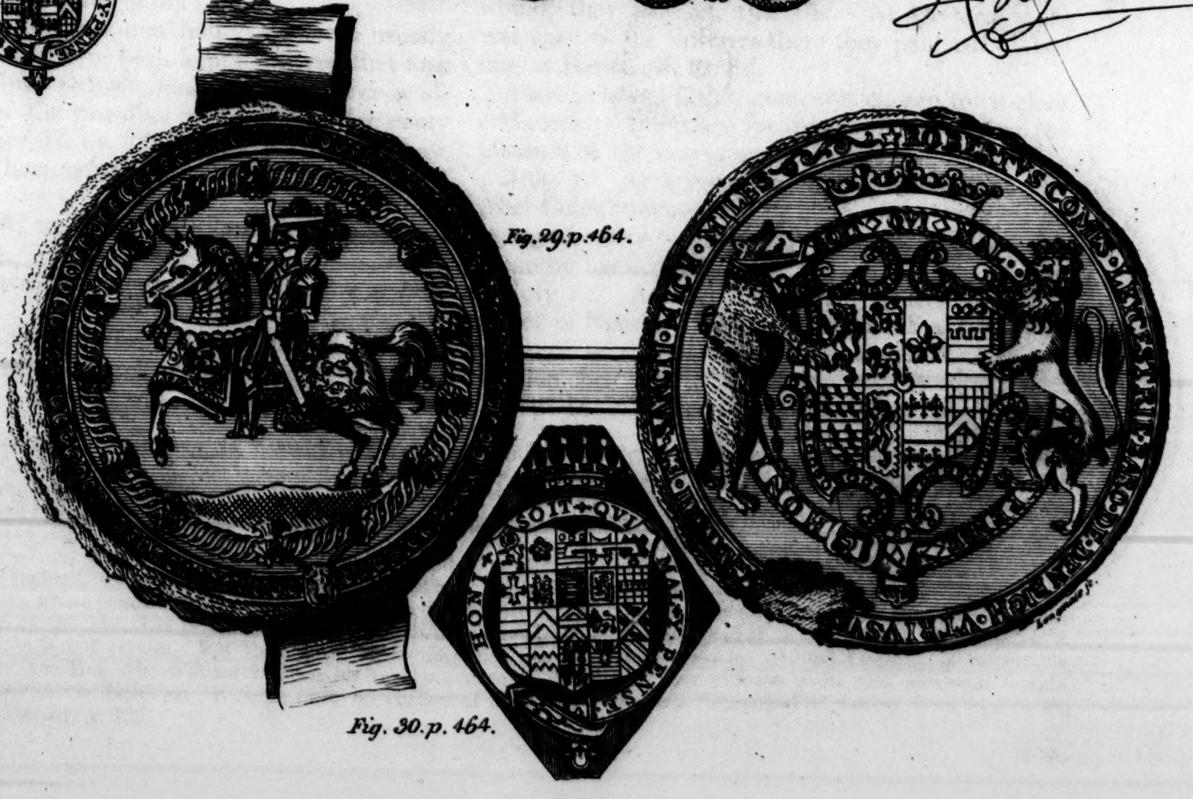

Fig. 29. p. 464.

Fig. 30. p. 464.

BRITISH
12 JN 1923
MUSEUM

Best beer and ale assized at 3½*d.* the gallon, and candles 4½*d. per* pound.

Dec. 2. At a meeting of the twenty-four, agreed that Mr. Hugh Aston, town-clerk, shall be clerk of the statutes for this borough, and shall give security to save the town from damage; and, 27 July 1647, he put in 1000*l.* security truly to discharge the said office, &c.

Dec. 17. At a common hall, agreed that all who live, and use any trade, within the borough, and be called to be made free, and refuse to become freemen, shall be taxed double to all taxes made within this borough, in regard they refuse to bear office or do service in the Corporation, as well those that be free-born as others; and that if any refuse to become freemen that use chapmandry abroad, being thereto called, that notice be sent to all places of their dealing, that they are not to have any benefit as freemen of this Corporation.

April 23, 1647. At a meeting of the mayor and his brethren, William Palmer, cordwainer, chose a serjeant at mace, in room of Edward Newcome, who is placed in the new hospital.

Sept. 1647, Thomas Blunt mayor. Freemen, 29.

"Received fines for tithes of Danet's Hall, Westcotes, &c. 120*l.*"

Sept. 29. Ten pounds, out of the town-stock, sent to Loughborough, for the visited people there.

Oct. 8. At a meeting of the mayor and justices, it is ordered that no maltster, or other person, buy any barley to convert into malt for three months next till 12 o'clock in the day, that tradesmen and others may first make their necessary provision; and then no person shall buy barley to convert into malt but only such as shall be allowed by the mayor and justices; and they to buy such quantities as the mayor and justices appoint, and that for themselves, not others: And that they shall sell again to the poor, requesting the same, such quantity of barley as they need for their weekly use (each quantity not exceeding a strike), at the same rate as they paid for it bona fide: And each maltster so buying barley shall, till further order, bring into the market some reasonable proportion of malt or corn, as the mayor and justices think fit, and sell it at reasonable prices; and such as refuse to abide their order to be put down from malting till further order.

Nov. 22. Orders to be observed by the schoolmaster and scholars of the Free-school. [Of this valuable foundation a particular account will be given hereafter.]

Jan. 14. At a meeting of the mayor and his brethren, agreed that no freeman by purchase shall have a licence to keep a victualing-house without consent of the company of twenty-four.

Feb. 14. William Palmer, for misdemeanors and abuses, dismissed; and Thomas Godeby, cordwainer, chose serjeant at mace in his stead.

Feb. 25. At a common hall. Whereas usually two sessions only have been kept; ordered that four be kept, or three at least; and that the mayor be allowed, out of the chamber of the town, for every sessions dinner, 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* if he keep three sessions; but he is to have no allowance at all if he keep but two.

Sept. 1648, 24 Car. I. William Stanley mayor. Freemen, 24.

"6*l.* 12*s.* was given to the sufferers by fire at Lutterworth."

About the time of the King's death, the enemies to the Established Church made a practice of taking jack-asses into the churches of Leicester; and led them to the fonts, in ridicule of the Church baptism. This audacious practice created much wrath in the town; several battles were fought at the church-doors in consequence; but the liberty-men in general prevailed. No wonder, in times like those we are noticing, that such indecencies should be practised. The multitude have often struggled to effect a change; but they have not always bettered their condition by it.

Sept. 1649, William Speechley mayor. Freemen, 8.

"Received of Mr. Churchman, by Alexander Baker, being money given for the use of the poor of this Corporation by divers well-affected (disaffected to the King), after the storming of the town, 200*l.*

"Paid, for taking down the King's Arms, . . . (No sum mentioned. There would probably be help enough to take them down, without pay, after the King was dead.)

"Paid the clerk to the commissioners that came down to survey and enquire after the King's revenue, 10*s.*"

Sept. 1650, John Somerfield mayor. Freemen, 12.

In his time there was a fire at Burton Overy. Towards the losses the sufferers sustained, the Corporation paid 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* But a more remarkable payment occurs: "Paid for wine, and the ministers' dinners, that kept the Fridays' lectures and days of humiliation, 4*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*; and for charges for ministers on the Lord's days and Wednesdays, since Mr. Angel and Mr. Price left the town." These were, most probably, the King's friends, or those, amongst many others, who favoured not the King's death, usurpation, and tyranny that followed.

Sept. 29. Ordered, that it be referred to Mr. Mayor and the justices, to consider what shall be given to Mr. Garland for his great assistance about the purchase of the great house.

Mr. Ing, one of the senior aldermen, for absenting himself from the Corporation, was discharged.

Sept. 1651, Alexander Baker mayor. Freemen, 17.

This year all began to be wrote in English.

Sept. 1652, William Billers mayor. Freemen, 24.

Dec. 22, Thomas Goadbye was chosen mace-bearer, during pleasure.

Sept. 1653, Edmund Johnson mayor. Freemen, 14.

James Winstanley, esq. recorder.

The common clerk last year was Hugh Aston, who then died; but this year, Abel Coles.

Sept. 29. Ordered, that 5*l.* be given out of the chamber of the town to the inhabitants of Cropson, who had great loss by fire.

A terrible fire broke out at Lutterworth. Towards the loss, the Corporation paid 10*l.*

It is somewhat singular to remark what a number of fires there happened in the county about this time.

In the four succeeding years, there was a fire at Hinckley; towards the losses sustained thereby they paid 5*l.* One at Asfordby, 5*l.* Another at Wimeswould, they paid 3*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* At Desford there was one; to the sufferers there they paid 10*l.* And one at Ratby, 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

June 2. Abel Coles, gent. was chosen town-clerk and clerk of the peace for this borough, during the pleasure of the mayor and aldermen.

July 7. At a common hall, ordered that Mr. Abel Coles, town-clerk, be clerk of the statutes, he giving security to discharge the town from any damage by his neglect, &c.

July 12. At a common hall, sir Arthur Haslerigge, of Noseley, bart. and William Stanley, gent. alderman of this borough, were chosen burgesses of Parliament.

Sept. 1654, Richard Ludlam[1] mayor. Freemen, 29.

---

[1] "This gentleman served during the troubles in a civil and military capacity, and has been noticed by every writer who particularized the transactions of the times in this district; a man whom we must imagine had abilities superior to his brethren in office, which the times called forth into action. By Captain Symonds's account of the siege, he lived near the West Bridge; and by the accounts which I have of the various professions of the mayors of Leicester, he was a chandler, as I have noticed above; and, I rather think, a slater and plasterer also. The first of this name that occurs in the list of mayors was a William Ludlam, who served the office in 1587. Another William, probably his son, served in 1624; whose son, most likely, was this Richard, who served in 1642 and 1654. There was a Thomas Ludlam about this time in Leicester, in the building line also, whose name I have to an instrument in the year 1633; who was appointed, with some others, to make an estimate of part of the materials of the Castle, and of the necessary repairs of another part of that building; but, whether a brother or not, it is not certain. But thus much is certain; that the late Mr. Alderman Edmund Ludlam, of respectable memory, and the late Rev. Mr. William Ludlam his relation, were of this family, and probably from this quondam captain and leading magistrate of Leicester. It seems that no portion of his abilities has been diminished in passing from him to his descendants." Throsby, p. 127.

Jan. 5. At a meeting of the mayor and aldermen, it is agreed that John Beeby, gent. (for several misdemeanours, offences, and miscarriages, by him lately committed against the Corporation) shall no longer continue the ministerial office in the court of record of this borough, in returning the process of the same court; and it is ordered, that all process of the same court henceforth be directed to the chief serjeant at mace, or his deputy, till further order.

1655. At a meeting of the mayor and aldermen, ordered, that if any freeman of this borough shall carry wares to any country town within the county of Leicester (except market-towns, on fair or market-days), and expose them to sale, he shall forfeit, to the use of the poor of the said borough, 20*s.* for every offence, to be levied by distress, by warrant of the mayor.

In this year there was collected in the town of Leicester, for the relief of the poor Protestants in Piedmont, at St. Martin's, 12*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*; at St. Margaret's, 4*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*; at St. Mary's, 2*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*; at All Saints, 3*l.* 18*s.*; at St. Nicholas's, 1*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*; and at St. Leonard's, 10*s.*

Sept. 1655, George Martin mayor. Freemen, 13. Bailiff, Mr. John Beeby, gent. &c.; and so again in 1656.

Money was so scarce about this time, that principal traders of towns passed tokens for the use of themselves and neighbours. The date of the earliest known to have been issued at Leicester is 1655, and the latest in 1672; under which later year a description will be given of those which are engraved in Plate XXXIII.

April 18, 1656. An account is entered, of Mr. Haynes's gift or exhibition to two scholars in Lincoln college in Oxford.

Sept. 1656, Edward Billers mayor. Freemen, 31.

May 11. Orders made at a visitation of the free-school by Edward Billers, mayor; Mr. Richard Lee, master of Wigston's Hospital; and Mr. William Syms, brother of the said Hospital. [Of this see hereafter.]

Jan. 21. Philip Mann the elder chosen master of the house of correction.

April 8, 1657. Agreed, that the three Bibles given by Mr. Haynes's will, and the sermon appointed to be preached at the time of the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588, be speedily put in execution according to the will.

Sept. 1657, Edmund Cradock mayor. Freemen, 26. Bailiffs, Mr. Thomas Henshaw and Anthony Curtis.

Oct. 16. At a meeting of the mayor and aldermen, William Major, gent. is chosen and admitted bailiff and keeper of the gaol, for term of life, according to the nomination of Theophilus earl of Huntingdon, being his second turn of nomination. He was sworn Oct. 19. But the said company protest against these things mentioned in the nomination of the aid earl and countess; viz. his liberty "to execute the said office by his sufficient deputy," and the word "appurtenances."

April 16, 1658. At a court of aldermen. In obedience of a writ of his Highness the Lord Protector, issuing out of his Highness's Court of Upper Bench at Westminster, dated Feb. 12 last past, to the mayor, recorder, and aldermen, of the borough of Leicester, directed: It is now ordered, that Edward Palmer, gent. some time clerk of the peace of the said borough, shall be restored to the said place and office, with all things thereto belonging.

Sept. 14. Jacob Bauthumley admitted serjeant at mace, during pleasure.

Sept. 1658, Samuel Wanley mayor; who died Nov. 17, 1658. Bailiffs, William Franke and William Callis.

Nov. 18. Such as had been mayors agreed that Mr. Richard Ludlam, the senior justice, should be as a deputy mayor till the election of a new one; and should have the mace carried after him, lying upon the mace-bearer's arm.

Friday, Nov. 19. Both companies appearing at the funeral, according to invitation, the funeral proceeded thus:

The two serjeants at mace, having their maces covered with black tiffany, went before the corpse; Mrs. Wanley being led by her son, and attended by the town-clerk. And divers mourners followed the corpse; and after them the aldermen, gentry, and forty-eight.

The body being interred, Mrs. Wanley attended as before, returned to the mayoress's seat, it being hung with mournings; and the great mace was carried into and laid down in the mayor's seat, it being likewise hung in mourning, Mr. Ludlam sitting alone in the next seat to it; and, sermon being ended, was carried after Mr. Ludlam to his house, and lodged there; and Mrs. Wanley returned to her own house, attended as before.

The Lord's day, Nov. 21, Mr. Ludlam went to church, attended by the mace-bearer, where he sat as on Friday before, the mace lying as before. Mrs. Wanley, attended by the town-clerk and mourners, went to church, and sat in the mayoress's seat, it still continuing covered with black.

Monday, Nov. 22. After a short speech made by Mr. Ludlam, the companies went to election by ticket; and the two great numbers happening to be even, they broke up till one o'clock in the afternoon, at which time they chose Mr. William Franke to be mayor, and swore him immediately; who invited them to his house, and gave them a very free welcome.

At the common hall, Nov. 22, 1658, it was agreed that Mrs. Wanley, late mayoress, shall have the fourth part of one year's allowance, formerly paid and allowed to the mayor yearly, in regard of the great trouble and charge she hath been already put to.

Freemen made in the year of Mr. Wanley and Mr. Franke, 30.

Jan. 3. At a common hall, sir Arthur Hesilrigge, bart. and William Stanley, gent. an alderman of this borough, were chosen burgesses to serve in the Parliament, Jan. 27.

Feb. 18. Richard Parsons was chosen master of the house of correction, in room of Philip Mann, deceased, during pleasure; and shall have the usual wages of 20 nobles per annum, paid quarterly.

Richard Noon, John Birkhead, and Matthew Coultman, of the forty-eight, have failed in their estates and credits, and compounded for inconsiderable sums, and yet kept their places in the said company, without desiring to be dismissed; which this company judges to be not only a miscarriage and misbehaviour, but a dishonour to the rest of the members. It is ordered, that they be dismissed.

Sept. 1659, John Clay mayor. Freemen, 30. Bailiffs, Mr. Robert Ericke and George Abney.

March 15. At a common hall, John Grey, esq. and Thomas Armeston, of Burbage, esq. were chosen freemen; and, by virtue of a writ of the keepers of the liberty of England, by authority of Parliament, to the sheriff of the county of Leicester, and a precept of the said sheriff to the bailiff of this borough directed, they were also chosen burgesses for the parliament ensuing.

In a former portion of these extracts (see p. 377.) Mr. Carte has transcribed several oaths of office. He has here added some others.

The Oath of the COMMON COUNCIL, or FORTY-EIGHT MEN.

"You shall be obedient to the mayor in all his lawful commands and summons touching the business and state of this borough of Leicester. The secrets and council of the body politick of this borough you shall not reveal to the hurt or prejudice, to your knowledge. You shall give your attendance on the mayor for the time being of this borough of Leicester, at the fairs, common halls, and other meetings, upon lawful summons. You shall decently and conveniently apparel yourself, according to your place and calling. You shall not utter nor disclose any speeches or secrets that shall be had or made at any common hall, or other meeting, to the hurt of any man, or of the said borough. But shall justly and truly counsel, do, and execute, all things appertaining unto your office, as one of the burgesses of the common council of the said borough, during the time thereof. So help you God."

The

The Oath of the Justices of Peace.

"You shall swear that, as a Justice of the Peace within the Borough of Leicester, in articles concerning the same, you do equal right to the poor and to the rich, after your best cunning, learning, and power, and after the laws and customs of this realm and statutes thereof made; and you shall not be of counsel with any quarrel hanging before you. And that you hold your sessions as usual, after the form of the statutes thereof made. And the issues, fines, and amerciaments, that shall happen to be made, and forfeitures which shall fall before you, you shall cause to be entered, without concealing or embezzling, and truly send them to the King's Exchequer. You shall not let gift or other cause, but well and truly you shall do your office of justice of the peace in that behalf; and you shall take nothing for your office of justice of the peace to be done, but of the King, and fees accustomed and limited by the statutes. And you shall not direct, or cause to be directed, any warrant by you to be made, but you shall direct them to the ordinary officers of the said Borough, or other indifferent persons in that behalf, to do execution there. So help you God."

The Steward's Oath.

"You, A. B. shall be true and faithful to our Sovereign Lord the King, his heirs and lawful successors; and shall, faithfully, justly, and uprightly, execute the office of Steward of the Court of Record of our Sovereign Lord the King within the Borough of Leicester aforesaid, in all things belonging to the same. You shall do equally and indifferently to all men, without favour, affection, or partiality; and all the lawful customs, privileges, liberties, and jurisdiction, of this Borough, you shall, by your best skill, learning, knowledge, and advice, in all things maintain, defend, and preserve. The lawful counsel and secrets of this Borough you shall not disclose nor reveal, to the hurt or prejudice thereof. So help you God."

The Coroner's Oath.

"You shall swear that you will well and truly serve our Sovereign Lord the King's Majesty and all his liege people, in the offices of Coroners of this Borough of Leicester; and herein you shall diligently do and accomplish all and every thing and things appertaining to your offices, after the best of your power, wit, skill, and ability, both for the King's profit, and good of the inhabitants within the said Borough, taking only such fees as are allowed you by the laws and statutes of this realm, and no otherwise. So help you God."

The Oath of the Common Clerk of the Borough of Leicester.

"You, A. B. shall a true and faithful Common Clerk of the Peace be unto the Corporation of this Borough of Leicester, and the said office shall faithfully serve and execute. The charters, deeds, evidences, and records, of the said Borough, which be or shall be committed to your keeping, you shall safely keep for the behoof of the same Borough. The secrets and lawful counsels of the body politick of the said Borough you shall not disclose nor reveal to the hurt or prejudice thereof, to your knowledge. You shall be obedient and ready, at the commandment of the Mayor and his successors, for the Town business, and in all other things. The said office of a Common Clerk of the said Borough you shall faithfully, uprightly, and honestly execute, in all duties appertaining thereto, to the best of your skill and knowledge. So help you God."

The Oath of the Five Serjeants at Mace for the Borough of Leicester.

"I, A. B. shall not use nor execute the office of Serjeant at Mace of this Borough of Leicester, and Attorney of the Court of Record within the said Borough, corruptly, during the time I shall remain therein. I shall truly serve and execute all such process and warrants as shall come to my hands by reason of my office (if possibly I can or may), and true return thereof shall make, or cause to be made; and the said offices shall execute uprightly, truly, and faithfully, in all things appertaining thereto, during the time thereof, to the best of my power and skill. So help me God."

The Oath of every Freeman of Leicester, being of any Trade or Occupation.

"You shall swear, that to our Sovereign Lord the King, and his heirs and successors, you shall bear faith and true allegiance. You shall also be obedient and faithful to the Mayor and ministers of this Borough of Leicester. The franchises, liberties, and lawful customs thereof, you shall maintain, and this Borough keep harmless, so far forth as in you lieth. You shall be contributary to all manner of charges within this Borough; as summons, watches, contributions, taxes, tallages, lot and scot, and all other charges, bearing the part as a Freeman ought to do, whether you dwell within this Borough or in any other place, so long as you shall claim the freedom of the said Borough. You shall not take any apprentice but according to the law in that case provided; the indenture of which apprentice you shall cause to be made by the Common Clerk of the same Borough, and shall them enroll before the mayor for the time being, according to the custom of the said Borough. You shall also keep the King's Majesty's peace in your own person so far forth as in you is. (You shall know no gathering conventicles, nor conspiracies made against the peace of our Sovereign Lord the King, but you shall warn the mayor or other officers thereof, or else let it to your power.) And also the lawful customs, liberties, and franchises of this Borough, you shall, to your power, keep and maintain, so far forth as in you lieth; and the lawful secrets and counsels of the body politick of this Borough you shall not disclose nor reveal to the hurt or prejudice thereof. All these points and articles you shall well and truly keep, according to the laws and lawful customs of this borough. So help you God."

The Oath of the Stewards and Wardens of the Occupations.

